102
3
233
919
Navy
N.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

VOL. LXXXVI.

JANUARY TO JUNE,

1885.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY INGRAM BROTHERS,
198, STRAND, LONDON.

RECEIVED FEB 17 1886 LIBRARY

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO LIBRARY

AP2 .I29

MAY 1 1913

403296
Eng

INDEX TO ENGRAVINGS IN VOL. LXXXVI.

FROM JANUARY 3 TO JUNE 27, 1885.

FRONTISPIECE.

Prince Albert Edward of Wales, Jan. 10

A

Academy (The Royal), Sketches of Pictures, 494-495
Adrian Vidal (Story, by W. E. Norris), 17, 41, 65, 89, 119, 151, 183, 207, 231, 255, 267, 307, 331, 355, 379, 390, 443, 467, 491, 503, 539, 550, 575, 598, 623, 659
Afghan Boundary Commission—
Ameer (The) with the Viceroy of India and the Duke of Connaught and Staff, 526
Ak Tapa, on the Murghab, 251
Arg or Citadel of Maruchak, on the Murghab, 319
Bala Murghab, the late Head-Quarters of the Commission, 287
Fort at, 602
Gateway at, 655
Bazaar at Shahrud, 76
Breakfast on the March, 282
British Expedition Fording the Murghab at Maruchak, 303
Bund, or Dam, of the Heri-Rud, at Kizil Koi, 286
Bund-i-Nadri, or Irrigation Dam, of the Murghab River, 319
Bungra, or Khattuk Dance, performed by the 20th Punjaub Infantry at Bala Murghab, 285
Central Asia, The Great Highway of, 359
Chunar-Tree at Shahrud, 211
Circassian Soldiers of the Russian Army, 486
Firing-Drill, 507
Cossack Dance before General Komaroff, at Old Sarakhs, 219
Damghan, with the Home of the "Old Man of the Mountain," 211
Dance performed by the 20th Punjaub Infantry at Bala Murghab, 285
Dilaur Khan, Paymaster of the Afghan Army, with Attendants, 526
Durbar at Kuhsan, 219
Gate of Maiamai, 76
Gholan Haidar Khan, Commandr of the Afghan Army, with Attendants, 526
Ghous-ud-Din Khan, Commander of the Afghan Troops at Penjdeh, with Afghan Soldiers, 499
Gorge in the Tirband-i-Turkestan, 339
Herat, the Capital of Western Afghanistan, 284
Kala-i-Maur, 250
Kara Tapa, on the Kushk River, 250
Khan's (The) Kibitka: The Khan Starting for a Raid, 318
Khorassan, Looking East from Shahrud, 211
Kona Penjdeh, on the Murghab River, 250
Kushk Valley, from Pul-i-Khisti, 251, 403
Lumsden (Sir Peter), with his Staff, at the Afghan Fort of Ak Tapa, 282
Reception at Meshed, the Capital of Khorassan, 8
Maps—
Afghanistan and the Adjacent Territories of Russian Turkestan, Persia, and India, 399
Disputed Frontier between Russian Turkestan and Afghanistan, 248
Heri-Rud Valley, from Pul-i-Khatun to Zulfagar, 281
Maruchak, on the Murghab River, 279
Meshed, the Holy City of, 211
Mile-Measuring Machine, 478
Murghab River, with Ak Tapa, 250
Murghab and Kushk Rivers, Junction of, 251, 403
Nialsheni Pass, on the Heri-Rud, 502
Oxus (The) at Khami-i-Ab, Looking East, 346
Looking West, 347
Pheasant-Shooting at Maruchak, 486
Prisoner from Central Asia on board the Grand Duke Constantine, in the Caspian Sea, 478
Pul-i-Khatun, with Russian Picket Camp, on the Heri-Rud, 283
Afghan Boundary Commission (continued)—
Pul-i-Khisti, on the Kushk River, 251, 406-407
Rawul-Pindi, Meeting-place of the Viceroy of India and the Ameer of Afghanistan, 346-347
Grand Durbar at, 471
Sketches at, 470, 511
Russian Soldiery, Types of, 475
Russian Troops at Baku on their Way to Central Asia, 482-483
Sacrifice of a Sheep on Sir Peter Lumsden's Arrival at Miandasht, 8
Sarakhs (New), View from the North-west, 283
Meshed Gate, 286
Sarakhs, Old, 286
Shahrud, from the East, 211
Surgical Operation in the Murghab Valley, 602
Tekke Turkoman Russian Soldier from Akhal, 286
Tomb of Omar Khayyoum, the Persian Poet, at Nishapore, 76
Turkoman Tents in the Camp of the Commission at Bala Murghab, 279
Turkomans Erecting a Kibitka in the Camp, 366
Zulfagar Pass, on the Heri-Rud, 478
Albert Victor Edward, Prince of Wales, Coming-of-Age Festivities at Sandringham—
Ball, Jan. 17
Ball-room, 53
Royal Party at Sanger's Circus, 53
Sandringham, 53
Sanger's Procession Entering the Park, 53
Tea-Party of Labourers' Wives, 53
King John's Cup, Presented to H.R.H. by the Mayor and Corporation of King's Lynn, 34
Naval Training of, with his Brother, Prince George, 33
Anchors, Fishing up Lost, 647
Arms—
Avonmore, Viscount, 200
Aylesford, Earl of, 82
Aylmer, Sir A. P., 509
Aylmer, Sir J. G., 300
Bazley, Sir Thomas, 325
Brisco, Sir Robert, 43
Cairns, Earl, 372
Dudley, Earl of, 509
Dundonald, Earl of, 82
Freeling, Sir A. H., 349
Gethin, Sir Richard, 661
Hay, Sir Robert, 604
Huntingdon, Earl of, 557
Knighton, Sir W. W., 325
Lampson, Sir C. M., 300
Levinge, Sir V. H., 349
Milman, Sir William, 661
Morton, Earl of, 10
O'Hagan, Lord, 144
Phillimore, Sir Robert, 177
Reid, Sir J. R., 509
Ricketts, Sir Cornwallis, 144
Selkirk, Earl of, 397
Stonhouse, Sir H. V., 10
Stronge, Sir J. M., 300
St. Vincent, Viscount, 144
Sullivan, Sir E., 397
Williams-Wynn, Sir Watkin, 509
Wilton, Earl of, 82
Artists' Costume Ball at Prince's Hall, 554-555
Costumes in the Groups, 530
"As You Like It" (Scene from) at Coombe House, 571
Australian Contingent for the Soudan leaving Sydney, 430
Avalanche (An) in Northern Italy, 122-123

B

Ball (Artists' Costume) at Prince's Hall, 554-555
Costumes in the Groups, 530
Ball (The Lord Mayor's Juvenile Fancy-Dress) on Twelfth Night, 61
Batoum, on the Black Sea, 551
Bechuanaland, The Troubles in—
Ballooning, 619
Boers of Goshen Sending their Families into the Transvaal for Safety, 84
Drink, 274
Engineers' (Royal) Telegraph Section on the March, 334
En Route to: Sketches on Board the Pembroke Castle, 210
Bechuanaland (continued)—
Grub, 334
Mankoroane, Chief of the Batlapins, 563
Staff and Suite, 563
Methuen's Horse: Arrival of First Detachment at Barkly Camp, 274
Officer of, 274
Taungs, the Capital of Mankoroane's Tribe, 563
Meeting at, 563
Telegraph Wire (Laying) over the Side of a Rocky Gorge, 334
Tent d'Abri of Carrington's Horse, at Barkly Camp, 274
Tent of Friendly Boer on the Road to Barkly, 334
Traders' Waggons Stopped to Take Toll in Goshen, 84
Vryburg, Capital of Stellaland, 563
Warren's (Sir Charles) Travelling Carriage, 334
Belfast new Liberal Club, 583
Bengal Lancer, 654
Ben Nevis Observatory, Sketches at, 638
Blenheim Raphael (The), Purchased from the Duke of Marlborough for the National Gallery, 266
Bolan Pass to Afghanistan: Taking Guns across the Bolan River, 363
Road-making in: Blasting Rocks, 370
Bout with the Gloves, 663
British Protectorate (Proclaiming the) of South-east New Guinea at Port Moresby, 56-57
Burnaby (The late Colonel) in his "Ride to Khiva," 107

C

Canada, The Rebellion in—
Fish Creek, The Battle of, 578-579
French (Captain) taking Three Indian Spies Prisoners, 523
General (The) Himself Captures a Prisoner, 643
Half-Breed (Wounded) Trying to Shoot a Scout, is Shot by One of the 90th, 643
Indian Prisoners, 559
Militia at Clark's Crossing, on the South Saskatchewan, 547
Qu'Appelle, Fort at, 527
Rifle-Pit (Enemy's) at Batoche, 643
Saskatchewan, Crossing the South, 527
Scouts Bringing Louis Riel as Prisoner, 643
Scouts Capture, by mistake, two Officers while Duck-shooting, 527
Teamster, 527
Train Waiting at Nepigon, 527
Troops (Colonial) Marching over the Ice of Nepigon Bay, Lake Superior, 542-543
Carpet-Weaving in Jail at Peshawur, 374
Central Asia, The Great Highway of, 359
Charade, Dressing for the, 9
Chess Games—
Arnold v. Tschigorin, 272
Blackburne v. Fisher, 589
Blackburne v. Fleming, 257
Blackburne v. Hamel, 333
Blackburne v. Loughran, 309
Chamier v. Esling, 209
Delta v. Amateur, 153
Fisher v. Blackburne, 413
Gunsberg v. Amateur, 83
Hamburger v. Heppell, 568
MacDonnell v. Amateur, 469, 541
Mackenzie v. Amateur, 19
Mainwaring v. Pierce, 67
Morphy v. Maurian, 233
Mortimer v. MacDonnell, 43
Nielsen v. Dahl, 517
Ormond v. Haarbleicher and Heckscher, 445
Simonson v. Peters, 357
Warner v. Hirsch, 121
Woolley v. Durrant, 493
Woon v. Vyse, 613
Chess Problems—
Abbott, 413
Allingham, 652
Bayer, 541
Bristow, 272, 517
C. W., 257
Fiala, 233
Frau, 357
Grimshaw, 469
Chess Problems (continued)—
Hanusch, 613
Herman, 381
Hoffman, 309, 628
Kent, 589
Laws, 445
Makovsky, 67
Meisling, 121
Müller, 83
Sargeaunt, 568
Sherrard, 333
Studd, 153
Tinney, 19
Toz, 49
Tucket, 209
Waring, 493
Wood, 185
Circassian Soldiers of the Russian Army, 486
Firing Drill, 507
Clothing (Making) at Pimlico for Troops Going to Souakim, 202
Colossus (H.M.S.) at Portsmouth: Sketch on Board, 387
Commons (House of) Division Lobby, June 27
Sketches in the House of, during Debate on Vote of Censure, 239
Cordova, 25
Cossack Artillery on the March, 419

D

"Daily News," New Offices of the, 294
Dangerous Hug (A): An Incident in the Hindoo Koosh, March 28
Deer-Shooting on a New York Lake, 614
Derby (The Race for the) in 1791, 606
Division Lobby in the House of Commons, June 27
Dredger (Sunken) Blocking the Suez Canal, 646
Dressing for the Charade, 9
Dynamite Outrages—
Admiralty, Effects of the Explosion at the, 451
Bar of the House of Commons before the Explosion, 134
After the Explosion, 134
Division Lobby of the House of Commons, where the Dynamite was Placed, 127
Effects of the Explosion in the, 127
House of Commons (Effects of the Explosion in the): Our Artist Sketching from Mr. Gladstone's Seat, 130
Tower of London (Scene of the Explosion in the), 131
Trial of Burton and Cunningham at the Old Bailey, 502
Westminster Hall (The spot in) where the First Parcel of Dynamite Exploded, 127

E

Earthquake in Spain—
Calle de Aquas, Alhama, 80
Chapel of the High Church, Alhama, 80
Cordova, 25
Estipona, from the Sea, 25
Malaga, Cathedral and Port of, 25
From the Sea, 25
People of Granada taking Shelter in Wooden Huts and Tents, 73
Procession of the Rose Garland at Granada, 80
Ruins of Albunuelas, 115
Alhama, General View of the, 80
Street (A) in Alhama, 80
Tajo (The) at Alhama, 80
English Homes: Windsor Castle, Fifteen Illustrations, 97 to 102
Estipona, from the Sea, 25
Exhibitions—
Academy, Royal, 449-495
Inventions, 479
Water Colours, Royal Society of Painters in, 60, 454

F

Fire at the Indian Museum, South Kensington, 631
Frozen Meat Trade of the River Plate, 85

G

German Annexation on the Coast of South Africa—
Angra Pequena, 37
Walvisch Bay, the most Northerly British Possession, 37
Gloves, A Bout with the, 663
Great Catch on the Nile, 595
Grenadier Guards (Inspection of the) by the Queen at Windsor Castle, 234-235

H

Haysman's New International College, West Hampstead, 606
Herat, the Capital of Western Afghanistan, 284
Bird's-eye View of the Country Round, May 2
Hillmen Travelling through the Bolan Pass, 410
Holloway Sanatorium, Virginia Water, 622
House of Commons (Sketches in) during Debate on Vote of Censure, 239
Hugo (Victor), Funeral: Bier at the Arc de Triomphe, 574
Panthéon, 583
Hunt Cup (Royal) at Ascot Races, 621

I

In the Row, Hyde Park, June 13
India, the North-west Frontier of—
Bolan Pass: Taking Guns across the Bolan River, 363
Road-making in: Blasting Rocks, 370
Quetta, 363
Indians (North American) Attack-a Mail Coach, June 6
Inventions Exhibition at South Kensington: Opening by the Prince of Wales, 479
Ireland, The Prince and Princess of Wales' Visit to. (See Royal Visit to Ireland.)

J

Japanese Village at Kensington, 203
Burning of the, 487
Side Entrance after the Roof Fell in, 487

K

Kalmuck Dwellings, 591
Tartars, 591
Khan's (The) Kibitka: the Khan Starting for a Raid, 318
Kilif, on the Oxus, 410
Killarney, The Lakes of, 515, 518-519, 522
King John's Cup, 34
Krasnovodsk, on the Caspian Sea, 531

L

Last Shot (The) in the Soudan, Coloured Picture, June 20
Little Goods, Little Care, 611
Lord Mayor's (The) Juvenile Fancy-Dress Ball on Twelfth Night, 61
Lost Anchors, Fishing up, 647
Lucerne and its Neighbourhood, 626-627

M

"Magistrate, The," at the Court Theatre, 422
Malaga, Cathedral and Port of, 25
From the Sea, 25
"Manon," The New Opera, at Drury-Lane Theatre, 535
Maps—
Afghanistan and the Adjacent Territories, 399
Disputed Frontier between Russian Turkestan and Afghanistan, 248
Eastern Soudan, 169
Heri-Rud Valley, from Pul-i-Khatun to Zulfagar, 281
Nile, The Great Bend of the, 112
Wolseley's (Lord) Intended Route from Korti to Shendy, 13
World (The), Four pages, Coloured, May 9
Melton, Winner of the Derby, 607
Menagerie Race in Camp at Cairo, 566-567
Merv, in the Oasis of the Tekke Turkomans, 551
"Mikado" (The) at the Savoy Theatre, 343
Ministry, The New, 650-651
Muntjac (Hairy-fronted) at the Zoological Society's Gardens, 351
Mussulman Pilgrims from Persia on the Way to the Holy City of Meshed, 322-323

N

New Guinea (Proclaiming the British Protectorate of South-east) at Port Moresby, 56-57
Nile Expedition. See War in the Soudan.
Nile, Views on the, 179
Gerendid Cataract, At the Head of the, 327
North American Indians Attacking a Mail Coach, June 6

O

Old Song, An, 371
"Only that Rose," 81
Ophelia, 335
Otford, a Kentish Village, 635
Out of his Depth, 615
Outposts, An Affair with, 20-21

P

Pacific Islands (West), Sketches in, 662
Palmer (Mr. W. J.), Testimonial presented to, 321
Panthéon, Paris, 583
Pantomimes—
Drury-Lane, 5
Sanger's, 5
Standard, 5
Surrey, 5
Pastoral Play at Coombe House, 571
Peshawur, Carpet-Weaving in Jail at, 374
Petersburg (St.) and Cronstadt Maritime Canal, 582
Pilgrims (Mussulman) from Persia on the Way to the Holy City of Meshed, 322-323
Portraits—
Abdurrahman Khan, Ameer of Cabul, 339
Abdullah, a Sarok, at Penjdeh, 250
About (The late Edmond), French Novelist and Journalist, 115
Ali Redhah Effendi (Major) Commander of the Steamer Tell-el-Hawin, 351
Amir Ali Mardan Khan, Persian Governor of New Sarakhs, 286
Asbjörnsen (The late P. C.), Norwegian Tale-Writer and Naturalist, 115
Atherton, The late Major W. H., 106
Avonmore, The late Viscount, 431
Ayres (Alice), Heroine of the Fatal Fire in the Borough, 487
Baba Karir, a Sarok Turkoman, 250
Battenberg, Prince Henry of, 29
Bazley, The late Sir Thomas, 351
Beatrice, H.R.H. Princess, 29
Beg Morad Bey, a Sarok Turkoman, 478
Benbow (Mr. Henry), R.N., 294
Benedict, The late Sir Julius, 607
Beverhoudt, The late Major J. M. W. Von, 510
Bickersteth (The Right Rev. E. H.), Bishop of Exeter, 318
Brophy, The late Major, 52
Buller, Major-General Sir Redvers, 215
Burnaby, The late Colonel F, 103
Cairns, The late Earl, 431
Cameron (The late Mr. J. A.), Special Correspondent of the "Standard," 146
Campbell, The late Mr. John, 294
Carmichael, The late Major L. M., 194
Carnarvon, The Earl of, 651
Churchill, Lord Randolph, 650
Cole (Police-Constable), who Carried the Dynamite out of the Crypt, Westminster Hall, 147
Coveny, The late Lieut.-Colonel R.C., 191
Cranbrook, Viscount, 650
Cross, Sir R. A., 650
Cross, The late Lieut.-Colonel A. E. A., 431
Cunningham (J. G.), Charged with being Concerned in the Dynamite Explosions, 147
Currie (The late Dr.), Master of Charterhouse, 583
Dalison, The late Captain D. D., 342
Darley, The late Captain J. W. W., 171
Denison, Captain Egerton A., 510
Dufferin (Earl of), Viceroy of India, 370
Earle, The late Major-General William, Feb. 21
Eastmead, The late Quartermaster C., 366
Edwards, The late Lieut. A. F. T., 431
Emma, late Queen of the Sandwich Islands, 603

356897

Portraits (continued)—
Eyre, The late Colonel P. H., 191
Fargus, The late Mr. F. ("Hugh Conway"), 559
Ghous-ud-Din Khan, Afghan General, Commanding Troops at Ak Tape, 251
Gibson, The Right Hon. Edward, 651
Giffard, Sir Hardinge, 650
Goold-Adams, The late Captain F. M., 303
Gordon (General), the Heroic Defender of Khartoum, Feb. 14
Graham, Lieutenant-General Sir Gerald, 194
Guinness, Sir Edward Cecil, 655
Guthrie, The late Lieutenant J. D., 146
Haghe, The late Mr. Louis, 327
Hamilton, Lord George, 651
Harrowby, The Earl of, 650
Harte, Bret, 631
Hassan (Prince), Brother of the Khedive, 275
Herbert (The late Mr. St. Leger Algernon, Special Correspondent of the "Morning Post," 171
Hicks-Beach, Sir Michael, 651
Hugo, Victor, May 30
Iddesleigh, Earl of, 650
Ismail Pasha, Ex-Khedive of Egypt, 227
Jackson (The late Right Rev. Dr., Lord Bishop of London, 37
Jeffreys, The late Mr. Gwyn, 147
Jenkins, The late Mr. J. J., 327
Jewell, The late A. C., 178
King (The Right Rev. E.), Bishop of Lincoln, 318
Komaroff, General Alexander, 287
Kurban Ali, Chief Huntsmen to the Governor of Herat, 319
Labalmondière (Lieut.-Colonel), late Assistant Commissioner of Metropolitan Police, 8

Portraits (continued)—
Lepage (The late M. Bastien), French Artist, 8
Lisle, The late Lieutenant R. De, 106
Lyon, The late Colonel Francis, 303
Mahmoud Tarlhat (Colonel), Commander of the Steamer Sofia, 351
Manners, Lord John, 650
Martin, Sir Richard, 655
Masrullah Khan, a Jami, 283
McBlain, The late Major, 534
Middleton, Major-General F. D., Commander-in-Chief of the Colonial Militia of Canada, 595
Mohammed Nusshi (General), Commander of Gordon's Steamers at Khartoum, 351
Mohammed Sarwar Khan, Afghan Governor of Herat, 283
Neuville, The late M. Alphonse De, 559
Newman, The late Lieutenant E. M. B., 342
Northcote, Sir Stafford, 650
Pain, Olivier, 294
Phillimore, The late Sir R. J., 178
Pigott, The late Commander A., 106
Plunket (The Most Rev. Lord), the New Archbishop of Dublin, 8
Richardson, The late Lieutenant J. B., 510
Richmond and Gordon, The Duke of, 650
Ridgeway, Lieutenant-Colonel R. K., 534
Riel, Louis, 643
Romilly, The late Captain F. J., 366
Sala, Mr. G. A., 4
Salisbury, The Marquis of, 650
Sandwich Islands, Emma, late Queen of the, 603
Sartorius, The late Sir G. R., 431
Seymour, The late Lieutenant Montagu, 342

Portraits (continued)—
Smith, The Right Hon. W. H., 651
Squire, The late Mr. Peter (Medallion), 549
Stanhope, The Right Hon. Edward, 651
Stanley, Colonel F. A., 651
Stephen, Mr. A. Condie, 510
Stewart, Major-General Sir Herbert, 135
Stewart, Lieutenant-Colonel C. E., 534
St. Vincent, The late Viscount, 171
Taj Nazer, Eshan of Penjdeh, 250
Taylor, The late Lieutenant-Colonel A. M., 351
Temple (The Right Rev. F.), Bishop of London, 318
Turner, The late Surgeon C. P., 294
Wadeson, The late Colonel R., 178
Wales, H.R.H. Prince Edward of, Jan. 10
Wali Khan, a Sarok, of Penjdeh, 250
Wali Mohammed Khan, a Jamsheedie, 283
Waller, The late Colonel W. F. F., 294
Wardrop, Major F. M., 366
Welldon (Rev. J. E. C.), Head Master of Harrow School, 583
Wilson, Colonel Sir Charles W., 171
Wolfe, The late Lieutenant Richard, 146
Wordsworth (The late Right Rev. Christopher), Bishop of Lincoln, 326
Yate, Captain, 510
Prayer Procession for Rain in Germany, 618
Presbyterian Church at Dunedin, Otago, New Zealand, 326
Private and Confidential, 639
Pul-i-Khisti, the Bridge of Brick, where the Russians Attacked the Afghans, 406-407

Q
Queen (Her Majesty the) Inspecting the Grenadier Guards at Windsor Castle, 234-235
Quetta, 363

R
Rambling Sketches: Otford, 635
Rawul Pindi, Meeting-place of the Viceroy of India and the Ameer of Afghanistan, 346-347
Grand Durbar at: Arrival of the Viceroy of India, 470-471
Sketches at, 470, 511
Roses, The Time of, 587
Row (In the), Hyde Park, June 13
Royal Academy, Sketches of Pictures, 494-495
Royal Visit to Ireland, April 11—
Arches and Decorations at Belfast, 459
Bandon (Lord) Proposing the Queen's Health at Queenstown, 442
Belleisle, The Flag-ship, 415
Drawingroom at Dublin Castle, 411
Killarney, the Lakes of, 515, 518-519, 522
Kingstown, General View of, 414-415
Landing-Pier, 415
Lord Lieutenant Receiving the Royal Visitors, 414
Procession Passing along Castle-place, Belfast, 462
Royal Party at Cork Going on Board the Steamer for Queenstown, 435
Passing over Parnell Bridge, 438
Royal Yacht Entering Kingstown Harbour, 414
State Ball at St. Patrick's Hall, Dublin Castle, 439
Street in Belfast, 466
Wales (The Prince of) Laying Foundation-stone of Museum, Dublin, 435

Royal Visit to Ireland (continued)—
Wales (The Prince of) Presenting New Colours to the 32nd Regiment in the Castle Gardens, Dublin, 442
Wales (The Princess of) Naming the Alexandra Basin, Dublin, 435
Wales (The Prince and Princess of) at the Lakes of Killarney, 462
On the Lake, 466
Russian Soldiery, Types of, 475
War Preparations: Cossack Artillery on the March, 419

S
Sandwich Islands, Mourning for the late Queen of the, 603
Scandinavian Church (New) at Liverpool, 351 Ships—
Agamemnon, H.M.S., 44
Collingwood, H.M.S., 391
Colossus, H.M.S., 358
Etruria, Cunard Steamer, 375
Impérieuse, H.M.S., 310
Shortened Leave: "I've Pledged my Heart to Poll," 45
Skating Parties, 77
Song, An Old, 371
Soudan Sketches. See War in the Soudan.
Squire, Medallion of the late Mr. Peter, 549
St. Bernard Puppy, 430
St. Petersburg and Cronstadt Maritime Canal, 582
Strange Story, A., 12
Swanage and Wareham Railway, Views in Neighbourhood, 599

T
Tel-el-Kebir, Revisiting the Trenches, May 23
Tent-Pegging Extraordinary at Souakim, 646
Testimonial presented to Mr. W. I. Palmer, of Reading, 321

"Those Laugh Who Win," 311
Torpedo-Boats on the deck of H.M.S. Hecla, 387
Tower of Refuge: A Turkoman Raid on the Persian Border, 446-447
Trinity Church, Bermuda, 326
Troubles of an Artist Sketching from Nature, 590
Turkoman Raid: the Tower of Refuge, 446-447

W
Wales (The Prince and Princess of) in Ireland. See Royal Visit to Ireland.
Albert Victor Edward, Prince of, Naval Training, with his Brother, Prince George, 73
Coming-of-Age Festivities at Sandringham, 53, Jan. 17
War in the Desert: A Running Fight, 154-155
Wareham and Swanage Railway: Views in the Neighbourhood, 599
Water Colours (Royal Society of Painters in). Pictures in Summer Exhibition, 454
Winter Exhibition, 60
West Pacific Islands, Sketches in, 602
Windsor Castle, Fifteen Illustrations, 97 to 102
Winter, Jan. 3
World (Map of the). Four Pages, Coloured, May 9
Wynn (Sir Watkin William), Funeral, 534

SUMMER NUMBER.

Coaxing is Better than Scratching. Coloured Picture.
Lock-Gate (The)—Pleasure and Toil, 36, 37
"Maruja," Tale by Bret Harte, with Fifteen Full-page Illustrations by R. C. Woodville.

THE WAR IN THE SOUDAN.

Abou Dom, Fort at, 227
Abou Klea, Battle of: Repulse of the Arab Charge, 222-223
Eve of the Battle: Guards Building a Stone Wall, as a Defence, 242
First View of the Enemy, 242
Square (Our) Advancing to the Attack, 243
Tending the Wounded, 350
Abou Kru, Battle of, Four-page Engraving, March 7
Alarm in the Desert: Advanced Guard called back to the Main Body, 92-93
Amusements in Camp: Menagerie Race, 566-567
Australian Artillery Landing their Horses, 426
Contingent Departing from Sydney, 430
Infantry Marching into Camp at Souakim, 423
Balloon Inflating on the March to Tamai, 455
Barber-Surgeon, 558
Batn-el-Hajar, The, 28
Bengal Lancer, 654
Beresford's (Lord Charles) Steamer fighting the Enemy, Coloured Picture, March 21
Bivouac in the Desert, 187
Black Watch, Fatigue Party of the, 139
Boats Unloading, 114
British Square (A) on the Road to Metammeh, Four-page Engraving, Feb. 28
Buller's (Sir Redvers) Retreat from Metammeh to Korti: Enemy Pursuing and Attacking at Abou Klea Wells, 295
Column on the March between Gakdul and El Howeiyat, 302
Burnaby (Colonel) on Camel, 350
Camel Corps forming Square to Receive Enemy's Attack, 163
Saddles (Trying) at Wady Halfa, 36
Camels (Sending) Across the Nile at Dongola, 1

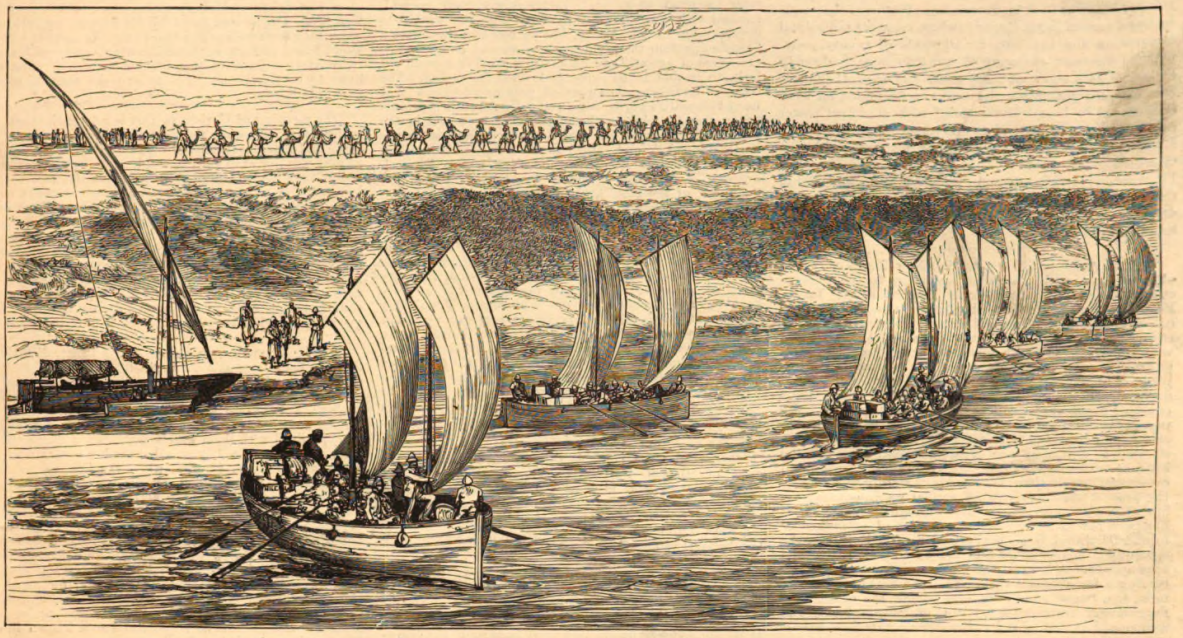
Camels (Testing the Steadiness of): the 19th Hussars Charging by a Corner of the Camel Square, 159
Cameron (Mr.), Death of, 218
Burial of, 218
Capturing the Enemy's Supplies, 110-111
Christmas Eve at Korti—
Boiling the Christmas Pudding for the "Heavies," 138
Clearing the Ground and Preparing for the Bonfire, 138
"What a Time the Pudding Takes to Boil!" 138
Clothing (Making) at Pimlico for Troops going to Souakim, 202
Column of Troops Starting Across the Desert, 68-69
Concert at Korti: A Sailor at Sea in the Desert of the Soudan, 166
Convoy of Wounded, 143
Coolies on the Souakim Railway Works, 426
Cutting the "Times'" Correspondent's Hair, 558
Dangers of the Road: Messengers with Despatches Defending Themselves, 350
Debbeh (Fort at), on the Nile, 117
Desert March (The)—
Mid-day Halt: 1st Life Guards at Ease, 170
Two o'Clock in the Morning, 195
Wells of Abou Halfa, Scene at the, 198-199
Turn and Turn About, at the, 170
Destruction of Transport near Souakim, 427
Dongolese Nurserymaid, 558
Earle's (General) Camp at Handab, Feb. 21
Landing-place at Handab, on the Nile, 275
Engineer-Boats, Arrival of at Dongola, 36
Engineers (The Royal) Building a Fort at Korti, 106
Engineers (Royal) and Guards' Camel Corps leaving Dongola for the Front, 1

Facsimile of a Sketch by the late Lieutenant De Lisle, 140
Friendlies Bringing in Prisoners and Captured Sheep and Goats, 595
Friendly Runners of the Amara Tribe, 487
Gakdul, Arrival of the First Column at the Wells of, 142
Gakdul Wells, 167
Lower Well, 175
Passing Water Down to the Troops from the Upper Well, 174
Gordon's (General) Despatch from Khartoum, Facsimile, 141
Native Soldiers Carrying the Wounded to Korti, 315
Notes for Money (One of) Issued during the Siege of Khartoum, 227
Steamers (Cheering the Arrival of) at Metammeh, on Jan. 21, 215
Guards' Camel Corps—
Buying Milk at Magrekah, 52
Halt at Akasheh, 4
Inspection of the Second Detachment at Dongola, 29
Leaving Dongola for the Front, 1
Wolseley (Lord) Inspecting at Dongola, 36
Gubat, Battle of, Four-page Engraving, March 7
Halt on the March, 328
Handoub (Wells at): Lancers Watering Horses, 630
Building the First Railway Station on the road to, 630
Hannek, the Reputed Birth-place of the Mahdi, 147
Hannek Cataract, Dangerous Part of the, 28
Entrance to the, 28
Exit of the, 28
Repairing a Whale-Boat in the, 28
Hasheen, Battle of, 451
Fight at: Inside the Square, 367
Lancers (The 5th) Charging on the Flank of Osman Digna's Attack, 382-383
Royal Horse Artillery Shelling the Village, 367

Hussars Charging by a Corner of the Camel Square to Test Steadiness of Camels, 159
Interior of the First Zereba on the Handoub Route, with Heliograph Stand, 487
Kerbekan, Battle of: General Earle's Troops Attacking the Enemy, 298-299
Khartoum (Advance on): Capturing the Enemy's Supplies, 110-111
Khartoum, from the Nile, 171
Fort, 186
Looking Down the Nile, 186
Up the Nile, 186
Palace, 186
Reconnaissance of by Sir Charles Wilson: Conflict with the Enemy opposite Omdurman, 270-271
Spot from which Sir C. Wilson Reconnoitred the Town, 191
Kitchener (Major) with his Guides, at Korti, just Before the Start Across the Desert, 139
Korti, Arrival of First Batch of Wounded at, 350
Gordon's Soudanese Playing Tom-Toms in Camp, 350
Head-Quarters Camp from the Opposite Side of the Nile, 4
Start Across the Desert to Metammeh, 162-163
Ladies of the Medical Nursing Staff in our Artist's Mess-Tent, 426
Last Shot, The (Coloured Picture), June 20
Life Guards (The 1st) Building their Summer Huts on the Nile, 431
Maps—
Eastern Soudan, showing Route from Souakim to Berber, 169
Great Bend of the Nile, with the Desert between Korti and Sir Herbert Stewart's Position above Metammeh, 112
Wolseley's (Lord) Intended Route Across the Desert from Korti to Shendy, 13
McNeill's Zereba (Fight at) on Sunday, March 22, 394-395
After the Fight, 398

Merawi, opposite Abou Dom, on the Route of General Earle's Column up the Nile, Feb. 21
Metammeh (On the Road to): A British Square, Four-page Engraving, Feb. 28
First Attempt to take the Town of, 258-259
Mimic Charge of Arabs before Lord Wolseley at Dongola, 36
Monck's Redoubt, held by Coldstream Guards, on the Route to Otao, 506
Mounted Infantry Capturing the first Prisoners near Gakdul, 178
Muezzin, The, 558
Night Attack on the Camp at Souakim, April 4
Nile, Views on the, 179
Gerendid Cataract, at the Head of the, 327
Nubian Soldiers, under Ahmed Effendi, with General Earle's Force, 226
Outposts, An Affair with, 20-21
Picket Duty, 350
"Please, Sir, How about that there Beer," 558
Prisoners of War (Young), 451
Railway Station (Building the First) on the Handoub road, 630
Running Fight, A, 154-155
Scots Guards Building a Redoubt at Otao, 506
Sheikh Mahmoud Ali's Harper Amusing some of the Guards, 630
Shoeing Forge of New South Wales Artillery at Souakim, 487
Sikhs (Disembarkation of the 15th) at Souakim, 342
Souakim, Night Attack on the Camp at, April 4
South Staffordshire Regiment (The 1st Battalion) pushing forward at the Hannek Cataract, 32
Special Correspondents' Camp at Korti, 146
Start (The) Across the Desert, from Korti, 162-163
Stewart's (Sir Herbert) Grave at Gakdul, 315

Stewart's (Colonel J. D.) Wrecked Steamer on the Rocks at Suleimanieh, 315
Tamai, March to: Inflating the Balloon, 455
Mounted Infantry Burning, 474
Tent-Pegging Extraordinary at Souakim, 646
Terminus of the Souakim and Berber Railway at Quarantine Island, 654
Towing a Nuggur, 558
Train (The First) at Handoub Station, Laden with Water-Tanks, 506
Transport, Difficulties of, 398
New and Old, at Handoub, 654
Troops (A Column of) Starting Across the Desert, 68-69
Tuti (The Island of), from Khartoum, looking over the Blue Nile, 194
Wells of Abou Halfa, Scene at the, on the Desert March, 198-199
Turn and Turn About, at the, 170
Wilson (Sir Charles) and his Party on the Island of Meruat, after the Wreck of their Steamer, 263
Conflict with the Enemy Opposite Omdurman, 270-271
Embarking at Gubat to go up the Nile, 246-247
Rescue of: Lord C. Beresford's Steamer Fighting the Enemy, Coloured Picture, March 21
Wolseley, Lord—
Departure from Ambukol: the Mudir of Dongola Bidding Good-bye, 49
Head-Quarters at Korti, 114
Inspecting the Guards' Camel Corps at Dongola, 36
Inspecting the Indian Contingent at Souakim, 654
Talking with his Generals by Telegraph, 49
Zereba (Inside the) with General Earle's Force at Kobniat, 226
Handoub Route (On the), with Heliograph Stand, 487
Souakim, Near, 291



TO THE BINDER.

Frontispiece: Prince Albert Edward of Wales, Jan. 10. The Two-page Engravings should be folded in the ordinary manner and mounted on guards or pasted in at a little distance from the fold of the middle, so that they may be neither stitched through nor gathered in at the back when the volume is bound.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 2385.—VOL. LXXXVI. SATURDAY, JANUARY 3, 1885. WITH EXTRA SUPPLEMENT SIXPENCE. By Post, 6½d.

THE HEAD OF THE RIVER COLUMN: ROYAL ENGINEERS AND GUARDS' CAMEL CORPS LEAVING DONGOLA FOR THE FRONT.

SENDING CAMELS ACROSS THE NILE AT DONGOLA.

THE NILE EXPEDITION: SKETCHES BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, MR. MELTON PRIOR.

OUR NOTE-BOOK

The New-Year's joy-bells may well have seemed to some happy listeners to ring out a jubilant wedding-peal in honour of the betrothal of her Majesty's youngest daughter and Prince Henry of Battenberg. Nothing but hearty congratulations have followed the official announcement of this auspicious engagement, which on Monday night received the Queen's sanction at Osborne, the affianced couple agreeing to comply with her Majesty's wish that they should reside in England after their marriage. In the forthcoming Royal union all classes of the Queen's subjects will evince that interest which is invariably felt in all that concerns the welfare of the Royal family. Princess Beatrice has won the affection of the people by her devotion to her Majesty, whose constant and helpful companion she has been for upwards of twenty years. One of the most charming of our Princesses, and richly endowed with every womanly grace and accomplishment, her Royal Highness may be cordially felicitated on what is believed to be a "love-match" with a gallant young soldier-Prince. Prince Henry is the younger brother of Prince Louis of Battenberg, whose marriage with the Queen's grand-daughter, Princess Victoria of Hesse, at Darmstadt, her Majesty and Princess Beatrice attended in the spring of last year. We are sure that all our readers will join us in wishing the Prince and Princess the happiest of New Years.

The popular practice of making New-Year's gifts is as old as Rome, and originated, according to the "Encyclopœdia of Antiquities," with Romulus and Tatius. Eatables were the principal offerings, though, in honour of the season, the figs and dates presented were ornamented with gold-leaf. One fig with the decoration was considered to be a handsome gift from a client to his patron, though in some cases it was accompanied by a piece of money to be expended in the purchase of statues of deities. In the early ages of the Church, ecclesiastical councils condemned New-Years' gifts on account of the pagan ceremonies accompanying their presentation. Later on, during the reign of Edward VI., an orange stuck with cloves was a popular New-Year's offering, but not to the king or his successors, who insisted on presentations from every member of their households as sternly as a cook of the present time insists on an annual remembrance from her master's trades-people. But throughout all ages food has been fashionable; and the progress of extravagance might be traced from the gilded fig of Rome to the sumptuous bonbonnières that are now so expensive and appropriate. A few years ago, a box of French chocolates costing a few shillings was accepted as a neat compliment; now, ten, twenty, and even fifty pounds are charged for magnificent satin edifices full of sugar-plums, and announced as "suitable for New-Year's gifts."

A centenary, interesting to the world generally and journalism specially, was reached on Wednesday, Dec. 31. It was the hundredth birthday of the Times. This newspaper was started in 1785, under the title of the "Daily Universal Register," but changed its name three years later. It is curious to read the leading article in which the new name was excused, as a study of the changes which have taken place in the editorial method of the past and present. Here is an extract:—"The Times! What a monstrous name! Granted—for the Times is a many-headed monster that speaks with an hundred tongues, and displays a thousand characters; and, in the course of its transitions in life, assumes innumerable shapes and humours."

This does not sound like the leading journal of to-day. Of course, advancement of thought and education have brought formidable rivals into the field of daily newspapers; but, according to Mr. Joseph Hatton's little work on "Journalistic London," the Times was the first to use machine presses, the first to drive them by steam, the first to introduce type-setters, and the first to adopt the telephone and electric light. This is progress, indeed; and we wish our contemporary many happy returns of its birthday.

Amongst the curious fancies that seize rich and charitable persons, surely Mr. Leopold De Rothschild's is not the least eccentric; and it is all the more graciously conceived because the generous donor can have no possible connection with the recipients of his goodness. Every omnibus-driver on the Bayswater and Hammersmith line has been presented with a brace of pheasants and a bottle of wine at the expense of the wealthy Hebrew banker. They will have no opportunity of reciprocating his kindness even by civility, for it is not likely that Mr. De Rothschild will require accommodation on the box-seat, or ask some passenger to get outside to oblige a lady.

New York is to become the seat of a great Catholic University, and the sum of £75,000 for its foundation has been given by Miss Caldwell, a young lady who has just attained her majority, with the full consent of her guardians. She and her sister are orphans, who have been well educated, and have spent two or three years travelling in Europe; they are not 'verts, but Catholics by birth and breeding. No doubt other funds will come in rapidly, and the establishment of such an university will obviate the necessity felt by young American priests to go to Rome and there attend the lectures of the Propaganda after their theological studies are finished at home. It is said that the Pope has some very special favour in store for this generous daughter of her Church.

What the German language owes to the Brothers Grimm may be compared with the debt that Rome owed to the Neros (according to Horace): it was but right, then, that Jan. 4, "the centenary of the birth of Jacob Grimm," should be recommended to the attention of "all the Prussian schools" as a day worthy of remembrance and celebration.

Among the observed of observers during the New Year will be Mr. Brodrick-Cloete, whose singular fortune it is to own the "first favourite" for the Derby of 1885, though the gentleman has not yet been known on the turf for so long as a single year. This beats even the celebrated Mr. John Bowes, of Streatlam, who came to the front pretty early in his day, and won the Derby with Mundig (in the Noachian year, 1835), Cotherstone, Daniel O'Rourke, and West Australian, oftener by once than any other owner has ever won the great race, since the time of Lord Egremont, the famous Lord of Petworth. Mr. Brodrick-Cloete, who is known to be a keen sportsman, at one time following "big game" in America, and at another "wielding the willow" for the Orleans Club, or other cricket clubs at home, a good rider, a good shot, and pretty good "all round," has not only Paradox (five thousand guineas' worth) to depend upon for the Derby, but he has also the "dark" Louisbourg (four thousand guineas' worth), bought when two years of age at Lord Falmouth's sale last season, but hitherto unable to be properly trained for racing. The name of Louisbourg has puzzled persons who know that Lord Falmouth's horses were generally named with significance; and a clue to the puzzle may be found in the fact that Chevisaunce (dam of the "dark" animal) means "achievement," and that Lord Falmouth's gallant ancestor, Admiral Boscawen (himself a racing Admiral, setting the example followed by Admiral Rous, the "dictator of the turf"), performed a notable "achievement" at Louisbourg, North Carolina, in the American War.

Between the desire of feeding poor little starving children with penny dinners and the fear of pauperising their parents, charity and prudence have been of late very much at variance. The happy medium seems to have been reached, however, at the Westminster Jews' Free School, where parents who cannot pay the necessary pennies are employed in plain coarse needlework as an equivalent, taking the materials on one Monday and bringing back the finished articles on the following Monday. At the end of the winter, the clothing will be sold at cost price, either to the parents or to any persons who desire to purchase them for charitable purposes. This plan, it is to be hoped, may solve the difficulty.

Commander the Hon. A. Curzon Howe gave to the crew of H.M.S. Sultan, on Christmas Day, a big Christmas-tree, with at least twenty pound's worth of presents. This was true consideration, for a ship cannot be left on Christmas Day, more than on any other day in the year, without hands to manage her, and Jack Tar is peculiarly fond of a little fun and jollity.

It is perhaps not very widely known that the Dispensary established by Mrs. Garrett-Anderson in 1865, when she entered on the life of a duly qualified medical practitioner, has developed into a small but unique Hospital for Women. It occupies two large old-fashioned houses in the Marylebone-road, and contains twenty-six beds. The visiting physicians are all ladies, the dispenser is also a lady, and of course the nurses and servants are feminine. In fact, there is not a man about the place, with the exception of one occasionally called in to carry heavy weights up and down stairs. Some of our best known doctors and surgeons are on the consulting staff, and the students of the London School of Medicine for Women are admitted to the wards to watch cases, and follow up the practice of Mrs. Anderson and her colleagues.

Some men have bad luck—or would have it, if there were such a thing. Here is gallant Captain Sandilands, of H.M.S. Asia, Portsmouth Harbour. He jumped overboard, plunging through 25 ft. of darkness into a cold and troubled sea, to grope after a poor sailor who had fallen into the water accidentally. The Captain found and saved his man—but only for the time; the poor fellow ultimately died from the shock and inflammation of the lungs. It was by no means the first occasion on which Captain Sandilands had performed a similar feat, and received the medal and clasps awarded for such bravery: but on every occasion he has been unfortunate in the results of his efforts, as the life he has saved has always been lost eventually within a few days from the effects of the shock or of disease. This is truly "hard lines," if not bad luck.

There was great rejoicing at Portsmouth on Christmas Eve when news arrived that the considerably overdue Tyne was safely anchored off Spithead, and would come into harbour the next morning. She had been hospital-ship and head-quarters for the Marines at Souakim for eight months, during which time a small coral reef had formed on her bottom, and considerably impeded her progress through the water. Added to this, she met with terribly rough weather off Cape Finisterre, and her machinery broke down, so that her homeward voyage was accomplished under many difficulties.

As soon as a country has taken kindly to horse-racing, and arrived at a certain pitch of excellence, so that the sport becomes popular and is greatly developed, the question of "two-year-old racing" is sure to arise. A time inevitably comes when two-year-olds are raced: it has been so in England, in France, in America, in Germany, in Austria-Hungary, in Australia, in all the world—that is, of any account in horse-racing. Then, quite as surely, comes an outcry: the breed of horses is deteriorating in consequence of the practice of racing immature animals. It was so last season in France. The Société des Agriculteurs de France appealed to the French Jockey Club to put down two-year-old racing in France. The French Jockey Club declined to do anything of the sort, replying that, briefly, it is far the best course to train the thorough-bred as early as possible (within limits shown by experience to be reasonable); that the possibility dates from the latter part of the second year: and that the races are a natural consequence of the training, and (if there be no abuse) do far more good than harm. Indeed, the French Jockey Club evidently holds with the view of the old English trainer, who used to say of his animals in training, when they needed "sweating," as it is called: "If they must sweat, let 'em sweat for the brass"—that is, "let them run for public money or sweepstakes." People argue that, because Flying Childers and Eclipse, and the earliest "cracks," did not run till they were five years old, it must be wrong to depart from that practice. But it is by no means certain that Flying Childers and Eclipse were even equal to some of their successors, let alone superior: and, if you must not run a horse until he is really a horse, at five years of age, of course it would be wrong to run him at three: which is absurd. The great Potsoes ran just once when he was technically two years old, "rising" three; Waxy (the "ace of trumps" of the whole pack of sires) won the Derby when he was only a three-year-old of a fortnight's standing, technically; the celebrated "stayers," Dr. Syntax and Irish Harkaway, ran just once when they were technically two years old; and the famous Touchstone, though a "valetudinarian," was pulled out twice at two years of age, became the sire of sires, and lived to be thirty-one. The great point seems to be not to overdo it.

The morning of Christmas Day is a favourite time for getting married among the very poor, and at many of the East-End churches the clergy begin uniting happy couples at nine a.m., or even earlier, and it is half-past eleven or a quarter to twelve before the regular morning service can begin. It is almost necessary sometimes to marry them in batches, and leave them to sort themselves afterwards, for between the nervousness natural to the occasion, and the mistiness of mind peculiar to thoughtless young men and maidens, the bride does not always make it clear to the official mind which is the groom and which is the groomsman. There is often a promiscuous exchange of hats after the register has been signed, and, unless the churchwardens come to the rescue, the confusion is frequently somewhat appalling.

A little Japanese boy, Prince Alexis Saigo, died about the middle of December, of typhoid fever, at Washington, in the house of Baron de Struve, the Russian Ambassador to the United States, who formerly filled the same position at the Mikado's Court, where Prince Alexis formed a strong affection for the Baron's young family, and had lived with them ever since. When they went to St. Petersburg, the boy was baptised according to the forms of the Greek Church, when the Czarina and the Grand Duke Alexis stood as his sponsors. He next accompanied his friends to America, and at the time of his death Colonel Oyama, the Japanese Minister of War, his uncle, was on a visit there, and will take the little fellow's embalmed remains back to his native land. His father, General Saigo, was one of the greatest soldiers and truest patriots of Japan, and took a leading part in the struggle against the Tycoon's tyranny, for which he endured repeated imprisonment and exile, though after that dignitary's abdication he held office under the Mikado. His name is as popular and well known in the Flowery Land as that of Garibaldi in Italy.

A very curious letter, bearing the date of 1761, has recently been found, with other papers, between the backboard of an old frame and an engraving, which by their means was pressed close against the glass. It had been bought at the sale of an old Hampshire lady's effects, and the letter was a long one, written from Rowner, and containing many details of the smuggling then carried on in that neighbourhood; the story of a man who, to his cost, knew some of the secrets of the Black Art; an anecdote of Admiral Smith, known among his contemporaries as "Tom of Ten Thousand"; and various details marking the writer as a man of culture. The only comical sentences are near the end. "Dr. Rowe is gone, five mackerel and a turbot carried him off; he ate them all at one dinner, beside game and pastry in proportion. He was a man of great parts and capacity, and made a good end." The account of the dinner leaves no doubt about the deceased doctor's capacity for eating.

It is supposed that the most powerful tug-boat in the world is being built by a Philadelphia firm for the Panama Railway Company. She will be of iron, 130 feet long by 23 wide and 10 deep, and, being for service in the shallow water of Panama Bay, will be on the twin-screw system. She will have two compound condensing engines supplied with steam by two steel boilers, and will be of 650-horse power. The order for her construction was given early in December, and she will be ready in four months from that date; the cost being about £13,700.

At the end of the Old Year the French Turf sustained a heavy loss by the death of Comte Hocquart de Turtot, at the age of sixty-one. He became a member of the French Jockey Club in 1856, an "additional member" of the Race Committee in 1871, in the place of Baron Rivière (so well known in this country), and for many years discharged the onerous duties of "judge" at races under the patronage of the French Jockey Club, who do not employ a paid judge, as we do. He was called "King of Deauville."

A correspondent at Prague, referring to a note on "internal troubles in Austria" in our last issue, states that in Bohemia the Tchek population forms about two thirds of the whole, the rest being Austro-Germans; and that, in spite of this majority of the Tchek element, officials are not compelled to acquire the Tchek tongue, certainly a crying injustice. In all other Austrian provinces the idiom spoken by the majority is also the official language. It is not surprising, continues our correspondent, that a nation six millions strong should try to get the same rights as the others.

THE GROSVENOR GALLERY.

On more than one occasion, and especially last year, Sir Coutts Lindsay has laid the English Art-loving public under a load of obligation which they can never hope to repay; and this year he has gone a step farther by extending the debt to all lovers of Nature. After Reynolds, the high priest of Art, it was only fitting that Gainsborough, the diviner of Nature and her secrets, should be called upon to show his powers. Most faithfully has Sir Coutts Lindsay discharged his self-imposed, and not always grateful task. He has brought together from every quarter of the kingdom a collection of Gainsborough's works such as has probably never before been seen. Similar efforts have been more than once made—by the artist's widow shortly after his death, when fifty-six of his pictures and nearly 150 drawings were brought together; by the British Institution, first in 1814, when seventy-three works were exhibited; and again in 1859, when forty-two were brought together; and lastly, at two out of the three National Portrait Exhibitions held at South Kensington 1867-8, when fifty-two and twenty-seven portraits were respectively collected. Sir Coutts Lindsay has, however, left all competitors far behind; and it may be said that, perhaps for the first time, it is possible, by the aid of the 216 pictures exhibited at the Grosvenor Gallery this winter, to form a fair appreciation of the genius of the "Father of English Landscape," as well as of the most original of English portrait-painters.

It may be that Gainsborough's work gains more by juxtaposition than Reynolds', or that the specimens group themselves better; but certainly the coup-d'œil on entering the gallery this year is more striking than last year. There is, moreover, a suggestion of uniformity of purpose about Gainsborough's work which is wanting in Reynolds'—the difference between the divination of instinct and the outcome of a brilliant intelligence. Whilst Reynolds was labouring to reproduce, by turns, Rubens and Veronese, Titian and Rembrandt, Velasquez and Vandyke, Gainsborough went direct to Nature for his inspirations; and the result is that, although he is often careless in his work, his colouring is always exquisite; and in his portraits he not only gives the face of his model, but what is passing through his model's mind.

On the present occasion it is impossible to do more than glance at a few of the principal masterpieces which have been brought together. The Duke of Westminster's "Blue Boy" (62), although so well known, can never be seen too often, and Messrs. Carr and Hallé have shown their accustomed taste in assigning to it the place of honour in the centre of the West Gallery. It is a pity that on this occasion the other "Blue Boy," whether the Prince of Wales or not, could not have been exhibited. Mr. Stevens, to whom the compilation of the catalogue is due, admits the possible existence of several "Blue Boys" (which is in itself a concession); but he still insists that this is a portrait of Master Jonathan Buttall (probably more correctly spelt Buttell), whereas so many competent authorities see in it a Molyneux—a member of Lord Sefton's family. The controversy which has so often raged round the origin of this work, and its history after leaving the painter's studio, will doubtless break out again with renewed vigour; it is enough to repeat here that this is what is now known as the "Dark Blue Boy," in contradistinction to two lighter renderings of the same or a similar figure. The full-length portrait of David Garrick (7) is another of the historic pictures by Gainsborough, who has represented his friend on this occasion leaning on a pedestal, surmounted by a bust of Shakspeare. It was painted for the actor himself, by whom it was presented to the Corporation of Stratford-on-Avon. Of portraits of the beautiful Duchess of Devonshire there are three examples: the sketch lent by Lord Clifden (40), a full-length figure, but of small size, in a walking dress, and wearing a large plumed hat—her portrait as a child; Miss (Lady?) Georgiana Spencer (184), painted when she was six years old, in a white dress and pink ribbons, with her hands demurely folded; and the magnificent work, lent by Earl Spencer (145), showing the Duchess in her acknowledged supremacy as the Queen of Grace and Beauty. Of the numerous portraits of Mrs. Gainsborough or Margaret Burr, there are two specimens to be seen in the exhibition, both of them comparatively small canvases, and scarcely giving the idea of that great beauty which tradition has attributed to the lady, whose mysterious origin has never been satisfactorily cleared up. Some pretended that she was a daughter of the Duke of Berwick, others of either the third or fourth Dukes of Bedford; at any rate, the income she brought to her husband was an important aid to him in his career, for it enabled him to try his fortune first at Bath and afterwards to settle in London. Of the male portraits, those of "Lord Chancellor Camden" (61) and "Philip Stanhope, Earl of Chesterfield" (84), are among the best known; but they scarcely show Gainsborough's special powers to the same extent as the less ambitious portrait of his own nephew, "Mr. Gainsborough Dupont" (146), a minute work of the very highest finish, or in "Parson Bate" (171), the sobriquet under which the Rev. Sir H. Bate Dudley was known among his contemporaries. He was the author of several dramatic pieces, and one of the original proprietors of the Morning Post. From his portrait, he was evidently a man of powerful will with no little sense of humour.

Amongst the landscapes, "The Harvest Waggon" (33) stands almost unrivalled, its companion-picture, "The Return from Harvest," not being exhibited. "The Cottage Door" (98), lent by the Duke of Westminster, is one of the best renderings of this popular subject, of which there is another almost exact reproduction (192) in the adjoining room; and at least two others have been recently seen at Burlington House. The composition is very simple, and the picture tells its own quiet story. The landscape is here shut out by the high trees and shade subordinate to the children, who are grouped round their mother at the door of the cottage. The larger picture of "The Cottage Girl" (173), or as it is better known as "The Girl Going to the Well," is the picture of a barefooted child, but obviously one of gentle birth, making her way to the well, carrying a pitcher in one hand, and her dog under the other arm. A charming group, and only surpassed by the companion-picture of "The Girl with Pigs," which is now at Castle Howard.

Here we must break off for the present, purposing to return again to notice the other attractions of the Gainsborough collection. We must also reserve for the same occasion any attempts to describe the two hundred sketches by the late Richard Doyle in pen and pencil, black and white, and water colours. To all he is known as the most fanciful and humorous of modern caricaturists, possessed of as much delicacy of sentiment as of touch. A number of these sketches, still belonging to his family, are for sale, and will, we may safely prophesy, meet with ready appreciation by the public.

It having been determined to appoint three additional members of the High Court at Calcutta, the Queen has approved the appointment of Mr. William Macpherson (Bengal Civil Service), Mr. Ernest John Trevelyan (barrister-at-law), and Baboo Chunder Madhub Ghose (Pleader of the High Court, Calcutta) to be Puisne Judges of that Court.

CHRISTMAS AT THE THEATRES.

Although we are all disinclined to own it, there is no entertainment that has changed so much in the course of a few years as pantomime. Because managers are positively afraid to do away with the harlequinade, and because they retain clown, columbine, pantaloon, and harlequin by an antiquated and obsolete custom, the children of to-day seriously believe that they are witnessing the same kind of fun that their fathers and grandfathers did before them. Never was there a greater mistake. The Christmas amusement at the theatres within an easy memory, consisted of these things:—A dark mysterious opening; a fairy interlude, with a ballet; a comic procession, with plenty of masks; a downright comic scene, well thought out and considered; a transformation, with all the scenic art of the establishment devoted to it; and a harlequinade that did not come on too late for the children to enjoy it. The modern manager, whose duty it is to study the modern parent and the modern child, sees that this kind of thing will not do. It is not attractive enough, and, presumably, it does not pay.

DRURY LANE.

Mr. Augustus Harris has studied the art of pantomime as well, if not better, than the rest of them; and he has discovered that the man who spends the most money on a costly show meets with the best reward. "Dick Whittington and his Cat" is the result, at a theatre esteemed by common consent the head-quarters of pantomime. We must not blame Mr. E. L. Blanchard if his text is made subordinate to the costliness of the spectacle. Time was when he was the suggester of the humour, nowadays he is merely the assistant of the stage-manager and the procession maker. But the author is not the only person who has to stand aside. If we had a hundred Flexmores or a dozen Paynes, Grimaldis by the score, and so on, they would be mere stop-gaps during the intervals of setting and arranging some eye-dazzling spectacle. The pantomime at Old Drury this year consists of two marvellous processional scenes, relieved by a minimum of humour, song, and dance. The money spent upon this tableau must amount to an enormous figure. There is no scamping or pinching anywhere. The material is of the richest; the properties are of the rarest; the armour is of the brightest. Wonder and astonishment are supposed to be the impressions gained, not laughter or fun. The two scenes occur in this wise. One is at the supposed nuptials of Dick Whittington and the Emperor of Morocco's daughter—a scene of Eastern splendour and magnificence; the other is even more superb in character, and represents a Lord Mayor's Show in the Middle Ages, with every detail studied from chronicles of the period. Here comicality and luxury are happily blended. The Old City Companies are drolly illustrated with banners, attendants, and supporters; and a circus character is imported into the show by the appearance on the stage of Liliputian ponies and cream-coloured chargers. When every company, squadron, cohort, and army of trained girls has advanced, retired, filed, and disappeared into a mass of indescribable colour; when the properties and the ponies have been massed to the satisfaction of Mr. Charles Harris, the final outburst comes with trumpets, bells, cheering, and the advance of Sir Richard Whittington and his bride upon horses brave with magnificent trappings. It is then felt that the force of expenditure cannot further go, and that the triumph of the modern manager as exhibited by his banking account is complete. Now, if these things are done, other things must be undone. We cannot have so much of the humour of Harry Nicholls and Herbert Campbell; or of the grace and singing of Miss Fannie Leslie or Miss Kate Munroe, or of the assistant sparkle of Miss M. A. Victor and Mr. Harker, or indeed of the eccentricity of the comic cat, if so much time is necessarily employed in massing supernumeraries and in dazzling audiences. In their way, all these artists are well worth seeing, but we don't get quite enough of them as matters stand. They are not the mainspring of the entertainment; they are simply a clever adjunct. By-and-by, when the shows have got into working order, then, perhaps, it will be different. Then Miss Fanny Leslie, sweetest of singers and neatest of dancers, will become more and more the hero of the play; then the fun of Mr. Harry Nicholls and of Mr. Herbert Campbell will be unfettered; and then the comic scenes will be advanced to the same position of importance as the spectacle. Meanwhile, it must be placed on record that the Drury pantomime is the most gorgeous and expensive entertainment of the kind ever attempted. Later on, we shall, no doubt, learn the statistics of the expenditure, signed by an authorised accountant; and it will be interesting to very many to learn that they are gazing upon what has cost more money than any show of the kind before. It is just possible that the modern child will be as much impressed with this fact as some of the elders undoubtedly are.

THE SAVOY.

A charming entertainment, of quite another kind, will be found at the Savoy Theatre every morning during the holiday season. A company of very clever children has been trained to present with accuracy and very special taste "The Pirates of Penzance," the well-known opera by Sir Arthur Sullivan and Mr. W. S. Gilbert. I am told that the result—and a very wonderful result it is—is due to the untiring patience of Mr. R. Barker, the stage manager, and of Mr. F. Cellier, the musical conductor. We wondered enough at the children's "Pinafore," some years ago; but this performance is infinitely better all round. The singing is more accurate, and the acting far more spontaneous. The lad who with a charming soprano voice sings the music of Frederic with so much expression and feeling; the remarkably clever boys who take the parts of the Pirate King and the Policeman—a born humourist the last boy—and both the girls engaged in the principal characters, are all in their way as good as children could be expected to be, and vastly better than many grown up people could possibly be in the same characters. In the first place, these youngsters have been taught to pronounce their words distinctly, and to express them intelligently. They know how to read, which ten out of a dozen actors don't know, and never will care to learn. They have been to school—dramatic school, I mean—which very few of the modern race of actors have ever entered. I must say that I disagree with the critics who maintain that the girls are better than the boys. As a rule, this is so with trained children on the stage. But surely the Pirates are infinitely better than the Kate Greenaway daughters of the Major-General—who is the least offensive prodigy I have ever seen. Phenomena are, as a rule, disagreeable sights. But these children are altogether charming. Nothing prettier or better of its kind has ever been seen.

THE GAIETY.

Turning to the Gaiety Theatre, we find a Christmas fare of a totally different kind. Comedy has not been wholly lost sight of in all this concentrated dazzle and brilliancy. Fun insists upon jingling his cap and bells, and demands a hearing though stage after stage is devoted to red-fire, Brummagem armour, and tin-foil. Mr. Edward Terry is the born impersonator of comic despair. His face, on the stage, is lined with the traces of an abiding sorrow that is harrowing in its intensity. An innocent man who gets into a hideous pickle is a favourite theme with a dramatist, and, with such a comedian as Edward Terry to write for, the subject is endless in its permutations and combinations. Each comedian has his speciality. Charles Wyndham is the gay, reckless, dare-devil of a fellow. He is, in stage parlance, "such a dog." Mr. Toole is the nervous, electric, spasmodic, good-hearted fellow, who is always being put upon, and is for ever wriggling, like an eel, out of his outrageous dilemmas. He is fiery, peppery, instantaneous and convincing. But Edward Terry is a comedian of a different complexion. He is guilelessness and innocence itself, but it is his destiny to be a ruin and a scourge of matter-of-fact domesticity. No one can have forgotten his Chevalier Walkinshaw in "The Rocket," whose pathetic "Oh! what a mess I'm in!" rings in the ears even at this distant date. Mr. A. W. Pinero, who has studied, and evidently appreciates the fun of his favourite comedian, has fitted his style even better in the new play called "In Chancery." Conceive this position. An innocent commercial traveller meets with a severe accident, is taken to a small local inn, and, when he recovers from the first shock, is brought face to face with the formidable fact that he has forgotten everything. His memory is a perfect blank. He is not only "not myself at all," but he has no means whatever of recollecting who he ever was. A card found in a pocket of the coat in which he has been escorted to the inn complicates the mental disorder of Montague Jolliffe, and, being entirely ignorant whether he is married or single, this ill-starred wretch is on the eve of committing bigamy, and is liable to be shot by the indignant parent of the Irish maiden he leaves in despair on his wedding day. Such a character Mr. Terry approaches with all the intensity of his comic nature, and there are few things more amusing than to see him, thin and haggard with despair, and whining in his accent, endeavouring to extricate himself from a dilemma that an unkindly fate has thrust upon him. He keeps the house in roars of laughter; and in elaborating this story Mr. Pinero has shown that in the modern comic play there may be as much fun in elaboration of character as in horse-play and practical joking. We are getting a little tired of "door and window farces" and comedies that depend merely on noise, pully-hauly, and pantomime. For this relief much thanks. Though of course "In Chancery" is in intention a "one-part play," there is some excellent character acting shown by Alfred Bishop, a capital irate stage Irishman of an old-fashioned type, and by Miss Phyllis Broughton, Miss Gladys Homfrey, and that smart little soubrette, Clara Jecks—clever child of a clever mother. Mr. W. Yardley's burlesque on "Hamlet" has been revised and rewritten up to date. New songs and business have filled up awkward pauses; Miss Farren is as good as ever; and the fact that Mr. Edward Terry plays in all her best scenes as "The Ghost," materially increases the fun of the entertainment. Playgoers are constant to their old loves, and they are naturally delighted when they get Miss Farren, Mr. Terry, and Mr. Royce back again in a Gaiety burlesque.

C. S.

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS.

In the centre of our page of Engravings, which represent a few scenes of the Christmas Pantomimes, appears the London Prentice hero of the Drury Lane performance, young Dick Whittington, accompanied by his very large Cat, pausing on the summit of Highgate Hill to hear the bells of Bow Church calling him back to Cheapside. The figures of Mr. H. Nicholls, as Tom the Idle Apprentice, and Mr. Herbert Campbell as the cook, are delineated at the side. Above these is a scene from "Aladdin," at the Surrey Theatre, where the "Lad with the Lamp" pairs off with the "Precious Princess"; and, in the opposite corner, the scene from "Cinderella," at the Standard, when one of the cross and ugly sisters fails to put the elegant glass slipper on her not very pretty foot. Messrs. J. and R. Douglass, at this theatre, have made a brilliant effort with "Cinderella," and the scenery, costumes, and carriages drawn by real horses, with Francesco's miniature ballet troupe of children, are much admired. At the Surrey, also, Mr. G. Conquest's pantomime, which was produced on Christmas Eve, is splendidly got up, with an amazing Cave of Jewels and a Fountain of Liquid Gems, and a Wedding Feast of Lanterns; while the performers, especially Mr. H. Edmunds as Abanazar the Great Scamp, a knavish professor of magic, are very amusing in their way. The zoological exhibition at Sanger's Amphitheatre, so far as regards the Egyptian pelicans, calmly surveyed by the Sphinx, is the subject of our last Illustration. But it is the old English legend of Lady Godiva which has been selected for dramatic treatment at Sanger's, where, for the first time possibly, St. George and the contemporary champions take part in the proceedings. The pantomime is handsomely mounted; the Pavilion of Pageantry, with its glittering procession, and with the various assembly of birds and beasts, from cockatoos to camels, being one of the finest displays ever witnessed on the Surrey side. Miss Stoyle is a dashing St. George, Miss Lizzie Relsey a graceful Godiva, Mr. Fred. Shepherd a terrible Leofric, and Little Sandy an amusing demon.

The Wesleyans of Wolverhampton have resolved to expend £12,000 in chapel extensions in the district. Of this sum £9000 has been promised.

Pending the further determination of her Majesty's pleasure, the Home Secretary has granted a respite to Mrs. Gibbons, who was condemned to death for the murder of her husband at Hayes.

Mr. N. R. H. Humphreys presided on Monday night at the annual dinner of the Commercial Traveller's Benevolent Institution, held at the Freemasons' Tavern. Subscriptions to the amount of £2169 were announced.

Sir James Paget has given notice that at the next meeting of the Royal College of Surgeons he will move that the council take measures for placing in the college an appropriate memorial of Sir Erasmus Wilson, who, it will be remembered, bequeathed about £280,000 to the college.

The announcement of the issue to the volunteers of the Martini-Henry rifle is officially confirmed, though it is understood that it will not commence until the orders sent to Birmingham and Enfield for the manufacture of at least 150,000 similar weapons are executed.

In London last week 1832 births and 1430 deaths were registered. Allowing for increase of population, the births were 500, and the deaths 557, below the average numbers in the corresponding weeks of the last ten years. The mortality included 32 from smallpox, 20 from measles, 16 from scarlet fever, 20 from diphtheria, 22 from whooping cough, and 7 from dysentery.

Mr. Thomas Skinner's "Stock Exchange Year-Book" (Cassell and Company, Limited) has now reached its eleventh year. The work has again increased in bulk, but still maintains its position as the most handy, and at the same time complete authority on matters relating to public securities and joint-stock enterprise, while the moderate price at which it is published is another recommendation. The volume for 1885 contains particulars up to the most recent dates, and a careful examination shows that the reputation already gained for conciseness and accuracy is well maintained.

OUR NOTE-BOOK

The New-Year's joy-bells may well have seemed to some happy listeners to ring out a jubilant wedding-peal in honour of the betrothal of her Majesty's youngest daughter and Prince Henry of Battenberg. Nothing but hearty congratulations have followed the official announcement of this auspicious engagement, which on Monday night received the Queen's sanction at Osborne, the affianced couple agreeing to comply with her Majesty's wish that they should reside in England after their marriage. In the forthcoming Royal union all classes of the Queen's subjects will evince that interest which is invariably felt in all that concerns the welfare of the Royal family. Princess Beatrice has won the affection of the people by her devotion to her Majesty, whose constant and helpful companion she has been for upwards of twenty years. One of the most charming of our Princesses, and richly endowed with every womanly grace and accomplishment, her Royal Highness may be cordially felicitated on what is believed to be a "love-match" with a gallant young soldier-Prince. Prince Henry is the younger brother of Prince Louis of Battenberg, whose marriage with the Queen's grand-daughter, Princess Victoria of Hesse, at Darmstadt, her Majesty and Princess Beatrice attended in the spring of last year. We are sure that all our readers will join us in wishing the Prince and Princess the happiest of New Years.

The popular practice of making New-Year's gifts is as old as Rome, and originated, according to the "Encyclopædia of Antiquities," with Romulus and Tatius. Eatables were the principal offerings, though, in honour of the season, the figs and dates presented were ornamented with gold-leaf. One fig with the decoration was considered to be a handsome gift from a client to his patron, though in some cases it was accompanied by a piece of money to be expended in the purchase of statues of deities. In the early ages of the Church, ecclesiastical councils condemned New-Years' gifts on account of the pagan ceremonies accompanying their presentation. Later on, during the reign of Edward VI., an orange stuck with cloves was a popular New-Year's offering, but not to the king or his successors, who insisted on presentations from every member of their households as sternly as a cook of the present time insists on an annual remembrance from her master's trades-people. But throughout all ages food has been fashionable; and the progress of extravagance might be traced from the gilded fig of Rome to the sumptuous bonbonnières that are now so expensive and appropriate. A few years ago, a box of French chocolates costing a few shillings was accepted as a neat compliment; now, ten, twenty, and even fifty pounds are charged for magnificent satin edifices full of sugar-plums, and announced as "suitable for New-Year's gifts."

A centenary, interesting to the world generally and journalism specially, was reached on Wednesday, Dec. 31. It was the hundredth birthday of the Times. This newspaper was started in 1785, under the title of the "Daily Universal Register," but changed its name three years later. It is curious to read the leading article in which the new name was excused, as a study of the changes which have taken place in the editorial method of the past and present. Here is an extract:—"The Times! What a monstrous name! Granted—for the Times is a many-headed monster that speaks with an hundred tongues, and displays a thousand characters; and, in the course of its transitions in life, assumes innumerable shapes and humours."

This does not sound like the leading journal of to-day. Of course, advancement of thought and education have brought formidable rivals into the field of daily newspapers; but, according to Mr. Joseph Hatton's little work on "Journalistic London," the Times was the first to use machine presses, the first to drive them by steam, the first to introduce type-setters, and the first to adopt the telephone and electric light. This is progress, indeed; and we wish our contemporary many happy returns of its birthday.

Amongst the curious fancies that seize rich and charitable persons, surely Mr. Leopold De Rothschild's is not the least eccentric; and it is all the more graciously conceived because the generous donor can have no possible connection with the recipients of his goodness. Every omnibus-driver on the Bayswater and Hammersmith line has been presented with a brace of pheasants and a bottle of wine at the expense of the wealthy Hebrew banker. They will have no opportunity of reciprocating his kindness even by civility, for it is not likely that Mr. De Rothschild will require accommodation on the box-seat, or ask some passenger to get outside to oblige a lady.

New York is to become the seat of a great Catholic University, and the sum of £75,000 for its foundation has been given by Miss Caldwell, a young lady who has just attained her majority, with the full consent of her guardians. She and her sister are orphans, who have been well educated, and have spent two or three years travelling in Europe; they are not 'verts, but Catholics by birth and breeding. No doubt other funds will come in rapidly, and the establishment of such an university will obviate the necessity felt by young American priests to go to Rome and there attend the lectures of the Propaganda after their theological studies are finished at home. It is said that the Pope has some very special favour in store for this generous daughter of her Church.

What the German language owes to the Brothers Grimm may be compared with the debt that Rome owed to the Neros (according to Horace): it was but right, then, that Jan. 4, "the centenary of the birth of Jacob Grimm," should be recommended to the attention of "all the Prussian schools" as a day worthy of remembrance and celebration.

Among the observed of observers during the New Year will be Mr. Brodrick-Cloete, whose singular fortune it is to own the "first favourite" for the Derby of 1885, though the gentleman has not yet been known on the turf for so long as a single year. This beats even the celebrated Mr. John Bowes, of Streatlam, who came to the front pretty early in his day, and won the Derby with Mundig (in the Noachian year, 1835), Cotherstone, Daniel O'Rourke, and West Australian, oftener by once than any other owner has ever won the great race, since the time of Lord Egremont, the famous Lord of Petworth. Mr. Brodrick-Cloete, who is known to be a keen sportsman, at one time following "big game" in America, and at another "wielding the willow" for the Orleans Club, or other cricket clubs at home, a good rider, a good shot, and pretty good "all round," has not only Paradox (five thousand guineas' worth) to depend upon for the Derby, but he has also the "dark" Louisbourg (four thousand guineas' worth), bought when two years of age at Lord Falmouth's sale last season, but hitherto unable to be properly trained for racing. The name of Louisbourg has puzzled persons who know that Lord Falmouth's horses were generally named with significance; and a clue to the puzzle may be found in the fact that Chevisaunce (dam of the "dark" animal) means "achievement," and that Lord Falmouth's gallant ancestor, Admiral Boscawen (himself a racing Admiral, setting the example followed by Admiral Rous, the "dictator of the turf"), performed a notable "achievement" at Louisbourg, North Carolina, in the American War.

Between the desire of feeding poor little starving children with penny dinners and the fear of pauperising their parents, charity and prudence have been of late very much at variance. The happy medium seems to have been reached, however, at the Westminster Jews' Free School, where parents who cannot pay the necessary pennies are employed in plain coarse needlework as an equivalent, taking the materials on one Monday and bringing back the finished articles on the following Monday. At the end of the winter, the clothing will be sold at cost price, either to the parents or to any persons who desire to purchase them for charitable purposes. This plan, it is to be hoped, may solve the difficulty.

Commander the Hon. A. Curzon Howe gave to the crew of H.M.S. Sultan, on Christmas Day, a big Christmas-tree, with at least twenty pound's worth of presents. This was true consideration, for a ship cannot be left on Christmas Day, more than on any other day in the year, without hands to manage her, and Jack Tar is peculiarly fond of a little fun and jollity.

It is perhaps not very widely known that the Dispensary established by Mrs. Garrett-Anderson in 1865, when she entered on the life of a duly qualified medical practitioner, has developed into a small but unique Hospital for Women. It occupies two large old-fashioned houses in the Marylebone-road, and contains twenty-six beds. The visiting physicians are all ladies, the dispenser is also a lady, and of course the nurses and servants are feminine. In fact, there is not a man about the place, with the exception of one occasionally called in to carry heavy weights up and down stairs. Some of our best known doctors and surgeons are on the consulting staff, and the students of the London School of Medicine for Women are admitted to the wards to watch cases, and follow up the practice of Mrs. Anderson and her colleagues.

Some men have bad luck—or would have it, if there were such a thing. Here is gallant Captain Sandilands, of H.M.S. Asia, Portsmouth Harbour. He jumped overboard, plunging through 25 ft. of darkness into a cold and troubled sea, to grope after a poor sailor who had fallen into the water accidentally. The Captain found and saved his man—but only for the time: the poor fellow ultimately died from the shock and inflammation of the lungs. It was by no means the first occasion on which Captain Sandilands had performed a similar feat, and received the medal and clasps awarded for such bravery: but on every occasion he has been unfortunate in the results of his efforts, as the life he has saved has always been lost eventually within a few days from the effects of the shock or of disease. This is truly "hard lines," if not bad luck.

There was great rejoicing at Portsmouth on Christmas Eve when news arrived that the considerably overdue Tyne was safely anchored off Spithead, and would come into harbour the next morning. She had been hospital-ship and head-quarters for the Marines at Souakim for eight months, during which time a small coral reef had formed on her bottom, and considerably impeded her progress through the water. Added to this, she met with terribly rough weather off Cape Finisterre, and her machinery broke down, so that her homeward voyage was accomplished under many difficulties.

As soon as a country has taken kindly to horse-racing, and arrived at a certain pitch of excellence, so that the sport becomes popular and is greatly developed, the question of "two-year-old racing" is sure to arise. A time inevitably comes when two-year-olds are raced: it has been so in England, in France, in America, in Germany, in Austria-Hungary, in Australia, in all the world—that is, of any account in horse-racing. Then, quite as surely, comes an outcry: the breed of horses is deteriorating in consequence of the practice of racing immature animals. It was so last season in France. The Société des Agriculteurs de France appealed to the French Jockey Club to put down two-year-old racing in France. The French Jockey Club declined to do anything of the sort, replying that, briefly, it is far the best course to train the thorough-bred as early as possible (within limits shown by experience to be reasonable); that the possibility dates from the latter part of the second year: and that the races are a natural consequence of the training, and (if there be no abuse) do far more good than harm. Indeed, the French Jockey Club evidently holds with the view of the old English trainer, who used to say of his animals in training, when they needed "sweating," as it is called: "If they must sweat, let 'em sweat for the brass"—that is, "let them run for public money or sweepstakes." People argue that, because Flying Childers and Eclipse, and the earliest "cracks," did not run till they were five years old, it must be wrong to depart from that practice. But it is by no means certain that Flying Childers and Eclipse were even equal to some of their successors, let alone superior: and, if you must not run a horse until he is really a horse, at five years of age, of course it would be wrong to run him at three: which is absurd. The great Potsoes ran just once when he was technically two years old, "rising" three; Waxy (the "ace of trumps" of the whole pack of sires) won the Derby when he was only a three-year-old of a fortnight's standing, technically; the celebrated "stayers," Dr. Syntax and Irish Harkaway, ran just once when they were technically two years old; and the famous Touchstone, though a "valetudinarian," was pulled out twice at two years of age, became the sire of sires, and lived to be thirty-one. The great point seems to be not to overdo it.

The morning of Christmas Day is a favourite time for getting married among the very poor, and at many of the East-End churches the clergy begin uniting happy couples at nine a.m., or even earlier, and it is half-past eleven or a quarter to twelve before the regular morning service can begin. It is almost necessary sometimes to marry them in batches, and leave them to sort themselves afterwards, for between the nervousness natural to the occasion, and the mistiness of mind peculiar to thoughtless young men and maidens, the bride does not always make it clear to the official mind which is the groom and which is the groomsman. There is often a promiscuous exchange of hats after the register has been signed, and, unless the churchwardens come to the rescue, the confusion is frequently somewhat appalling.

A little Japanese boy, Prince Alexis Saigo, died about the middle of December, of typhoid fever, at Washington, in the house of Baron de Struve, the Russian Ambassador to the United States, who formerly filled the same position at the Mikado's Court, where Prince Alexis formed a strong affection for the Baron's young family, and had lived with them ever since. When they went to St. Petersburg, the boy was baptised according to the forms of the Greek Church, when the Czarina and the Grand Duke Alexis stood as his sponsors. He next accompanied his friends to America, and at the time of his death Colonel Oyama, the Japanese Minister of War, his uncle, was on a visit there, and will take the little fellow's embalmed remains back to his native land. His father, General Saigo, was one of the greatest soldiers and truest patriots of Japan, and took a leading part in the struggle against the Tycoon's tyranny, for which he endured repeated imprisonment and exile, though after that dignitary's abdication he held office under the Mikado. His name is as popular and well known in the Flowery Land as that of Garibaldi in Italy.

A very curious letter, bearing the date of 1761, has recently been found, with other papers, between the backboard of an old frame and an engraving, which by their means was pressed close against the glass. It had been bought at the sale of an old Hampshire lady's effects, and the letter was a long one, written from Rowner, and containing many details of the smuggling then carried on in that neighbourhood; the story of a man who, to his cost, knew some of the secrets of the Black Art; an anecdote of Admiral Smith, known among his contemporaries as "Tom of Ten Thousand"; and various details marking the writer as a man of culture. The only comical sentences are near the end. "Dr. Rowe is gone, five mackerel and a turbot carried him off; he ate them all at one dinner, beside game and pastry in proportion. He was a man of great parts and capacity, and made a good end." The account of the dinner leaves no doubt about the deceased doctor's capacity for eating.

It is supposed that the most powerful tug-boat in the world is being built by a Philadelphia firm for the Panama Railway Company. She will be of iron, 130 feet long by 23 wide and 10 deep, and, being for service in the shallow water of Panama Bay, will be on the twin-screw system. She will have two compound condensing engines supplied with steam by two steel boilers, and will be of 650-horse power. The order for her construction was given early in December, and she will be ready in four months from that date; the cost being about £13,700.

At the end of the Old Year the French Turf sustained a heavy loss by the death of Comte Hocquart de Turtot, at the age of sixty-one. He became a member of the French Jockey Club in 1856, an "additional member" of the Race Committee in 1871, in the place of Baron Rivière (so well known in this country), and for many years discharged the onerous duties of "judge" at races under the patronage of the French Jockey Club, who do not employ a paid judge, as we do. He was called "King of Deauville."

A correspondent at Prague, referring to a note on "internal troubles in Austria" in our last issue, states that in Bohemia the Tchek population forms about two thirds of the whole, the rest being Austro-Germans; and that, in spite of this majority of the Tchek element, officials are not compelled to acquire the Tchek tongue, certainly a crying injustice. In all other Austrian provinces the idiom spoken by the majority is also the official language. It is not surprising, continues our correspondent, that a nation six millions strong should try to get the same rights as the others.

THE GROSVENOR GALLERY.

On more than one occasion, and especially last year, Sir Coutts Lindsay has laid the English Art-loving public under a load of obligation which they can never hope to repay; and this year he has gone a step farther by extending the debt to all lovers of Nature. After Reynolds, the high priest of Art, it was only fitting that Gainsborough, the diviner of Nature and her secrets, should be called upon to show his powers. Most faithfully has Sir Coutts Lindsay discharged his self-imposed, and not always grateful task. He has brought together from every quarter of the kingdom a collection of Gainsborough's works such as has probably never before been seen. Similar efforts have been more than once made—by the artist's widow shortly after his death, when fifty-six of his pictures and nearly 150 drawings were brought together; by the British Institution, first in 1814, when seventy-three works were exhibited; and again in 1859, when forty-two were brought together; and lastly, at two out of the three National Portrait Exhibitions held at South Kensington 1867-8, when fifty-two and twenty-seven portraits were respectively collected. Sir Coutts Lindsay has, however, left all competitors far behind; and it may be said that, perhaps for the first time, it is possible, by the aid of the 216 pictures exhibited at the Grosvenor Gallery this winter, to form a fair appreciation of the genius of the "Father of English Landscape," as well as of the most original of English portrait-painters.

It may be that Gainsborough's work gains more by juxtaposition than Reynolds', or that the specimens group themselves better; but certainly the coup-d'œil on entering the gallery this year is more striking than last year. There is, moreover, a suggestion of uniformity of purpose about Gainsborough's work which is wanting in Reynolds'—the difference between the divination of instinct and the outcome of a brilliant intelligence. Whilst Reynolds was labouring to reproduce, by turns, Rubens and Veronese, Titian and Rembrandt, Velasquez and Vandyke, Gainsborough went direct to Nature for his inspirations; and the result is that, although he is often careless in his work, his colouring is always exquisite; and in his portraits he not only gives the face of his model, but what is passing through his model's mind.

On the present occasion it is impossible to do more than glance at a few of the principal masterpieces which have been brought together. The Duke of Westminster's "Blue Boy" (62), although so well known, can never be seen too often, and Messrs. Carr and Hallé have shown their accustomed taste in assigning to it the place of honour in the centre of the West Gallery. It is a pity that on this occasion the other "Blue Boy," whether the Prince of Wales or not, could not have been exhibited. Mr. Stevens, to whom the compilation of the catalogue is due, admits the possible existence of several "Blue Boys" (which is in itself a concession); but he still insists that this is a portrait of Master Jonathan Buttall (probably more correctly spelt Buttell), whereas so many competent authorities see in it a Molyneux—a member of Lord Sefton's family. The controversy which has so often raged round the origin of this work, and its history after leaving the painter's studio, will doubtless break out again with renewed vigour; it is enough to repeat here that this is what is now known as the "Dark Blue Boy," in contradistinction to two lighter renderings of the same or a similar figure. The full-length portrait of David Garrick (7) is another of the historic pictures by Gainsborough, who has represented his friend on this occasion leaning on a pedestal, surmounted by a bust of Shakspeare. It was painted for the actor himself, by whom it was presented to the Corporation of Stratford-on-Avon. Of portraits of the beautiful Duchess of Devonshire there are three examples: the sketch lent by Lord Clifden (40), a full-length figure, but of small size, in a walking dress, and wearing a large plumed hat—her portrait as a child; Miss (Lady?) Georgiana Spencer (184), painted when she was six years old, in a white dress and pink ribbons, with her hands demurely folded; and the magnificent work, lent by Earl Spencer (145), showing the Duchess in her acknowledged supremacy as the Queen of Grace and Beauty. Of the numerous portraits of Mrs. Gainsborough or Margaret Burr, there are two specimens to be seen in the exhibition, both of them comparatively small canvases, and scarcely giving the idea of that great beauty which tradition has attributed to the lady, whose mysterious origin has never been satisfactorily cleared up. Some pretended that she was a daughter of the Duke of Berwick, others of either the third or fourth Dukes of Bedford; at any rate, the income she brought to her husband was an important aid to him in his career, for it enabled him to try his fortune first at Bath and afterwards to settle in London. Of the male portraits, those of "Lord Chancellor Camden" (61) and "Philip Stanhope, Earl of Chesterfield" (84), are among the best known; but they scarcely show Gainsborough's special powers to the same extent as the less ambitious portrait of his own nephew, "Mr. Gainsborough Dupont" (146), a minute work of the very highest finish, or in "Parson Bate" (171), the sobriquet under which the Rev. Sir H. Bate Dudley was known among his contemporaries. He was the author of several dramatic pieces, and one of the original proprietors of the Morning Post. From his portrait, he was evidently a man of powerful will with no little sense of humour.

Amongst the landscapes, "The Harvest Waggon" (33) stands almost unrivalled, its companion-picture, "The Return from Harvest," not being exhibited. "The Cottage Door" (98), lent by the Duke of Westminster, is one of the best renderings of this popular subject, of which there is another almost exact reproduction (192) in the adjoining room; and at least two others have been recently seen at Burlington House. The composition is very simple, and the picture tells its own quiet story. The landscape is here shut out by the high trees and shade subordinate to the children, who are grouped round their mother at the door of the cottage. The larger picture of "The Cottage Girl" (173), or as it is better known as "The Girl Going to the Well," is the picture of a barefooted child, but obviously one of gentle birth, making her way to the well, carrying a pitcher in one hand, and her dog under the other arm. A charming group, and only surpassed by the companion-picture of "The Girl with Pigs," which is now at Castle Howard.

Here we must break off for the present, purposing to return again to notice the other attractions of the Gainsborough collection. We must also reserve for the same occasion any attempts to describe the two hundred sketches by the late Richard Doyle in pen and pencil, black and white, and water colours. To all he is known as the most fanciful and humorous of modern caricaturists, possessed of as much delicacy of sentiment as of touch. A number of these sketches, still belonging to his family, are for sale, and will, we may safely prophesy, meet with ready appreciation by the public.

It having been determined to appoint three additional members of the High Court at Calcutta, the Queen has approved the appointment of Mr. William Macpherson (Bengal Civil Service), Mr. Ernest John Trevelyan (barrister-at-law), and Baboo Chunder Madhub Ghose (Pleader of the High Court, Calcutta) to be Puisne Judges of that Court.

CHRISTMAS AT THE THEATRES.

Although we are all disinclined to own it, there is no entertainment that has changed so much in the course of a few years as pantomime. Because managers are positively afraid to do away with the harlequinade, and because they retain clown, columbine, pantaloon, and harlequin by an antiquated and obsolete custom, the children of to-day seriously believe that they are witnessing the same kind of fun that their fathers and grandfathers did before them. Never was there a greater mistake. The Christmas amusement at the theatres within an easy memory, consisted of these things:—A dark mysterious opening; a fairy interlude, with a ballet; a comic procession, with plenty of masks; a downright comic scene, well thought out and considered; a transformation, with all the scenic art of the establishment devoted to it; and a harlequinade that did not come on too late for the children to enjoy it. The modern manager, whose duty it is to study the modern parent and the modern child, sees that this kind of thing will not do. It is not attractive enough, and, presumably, it does not pay.

DRURY LANE.

Mr. Augustus Harris has studied the art of pantomime as well, if not better, than the rest of them; and he has discovered that the man who spends the most money on a costly show meets with the best reward. "Dick Whittington and his Cat" is the result, at a theatre esteemed by common consent the head-quarters of pantomime. We must not blame Mr. E. L. Blanchard if his text is made subordinate to the costliness of the spectacle. Time was when he was the suggester of the humour, nowadays he is merely the assistant of the stage-manager and the procession maker. But the author is not the only person who has to stand aside. If we had a hundred Flexmores or a dozen Paynes, Grimaldis by the score, and so on, they would be mere stop-gaps during the intervals of setting and arranging some eye-dazzling spectacle. The pantomime at Old Drury this year consists of two marvellous processional scenes, relieved by a minimum of humour, song, and dance. The money spent upon this tableau must amount to an enormous figure. There is no scamping or pinching anywhere. The material is of the richest; the properties are of the rarest; the armour is of the brightest. Wonder and astonishment are supposed to be the impressions gained, not laughter or fun. The two scenes occur in this wise. One is at the supposed nuptials of Dick Whittington and the Emperor of Morocco's daughter—a scene of Eastern splendour and magnificence; the other is even more superb in character, and represents a Lord Mayor's Show in the Middle Ages, with every detail studied from chronicles of the period. Here comicality and luxury are happily blended. The Old City Companies are drolly illustrated with banners, attendants, and supporters; and a circus character is imported into the show by the appearance on the stage of Liliputian ponies and cream-coloured chargers. When every company, squadron, cohort, and army of trained girls has advanced, retired, filed, and disappeared into a mass of indescribable colour; when the properties and the ponies have been massed to the satisfaction of Mr. Charles Harris, the final outburst comes with trumpets, bells, cheering, and the advance of Sir Richard Whittington and his bride upon horses brave with magnificent trappings. It is then felt that the force of expenditure cannot further go, and that the triumph of the modern manager as exhibited by his banking account is complete. Now, if these things are done, other things must be undone. We cannot have so much of the humour of Harry Nicholls and Herbert Campbell; or of the grace and singing of Miss Fannie Leslie or Miss Kate Munroe, or of the assistant sparkle of Miss M. A. Victor and Mr. Harker, or indeed of the eccentricity of the comic cat, if so much time is necessarily employed in massing supernumeraries and in dazzling audiences. In their way, all these artists are well worth seeing, but we don't get quite enough of them as matters stand. They are not the mainspring of the entertainment; they are simply a clever adjunct. By-and-by, when the shows have got into working order, then, perhaps, it will be different. Then Miss Fanny Leslie, sweetest of singers and neatest of dancers, will become more and more the hero of the play; then the fun of Mr. Harry Nicholls and of Mr. Herbert Campbell will be unfettered; and then the comic scenes will be advanced to the same position of importance as the spectacle. Meanwhile, it must be placed on record that the Drury pantomime is the most gorgeous and expensive entertainment of the kind ever attempted. Later on, we shall, no doubt, learn the statistics of the expenditure, signed by an authorised accountant; and it will be interesting to very many to learn that they are gazing upon what has cost more money than any show of the kind before. It is just possible that the modern child will be as much impressed with this fact as some of the elders undoubtedly are.

THE SAVOY.

A charming entertainment, of quite another kind, will be found at the Savoy Theatre every morning during the holiday season. A company of very clever children has been trained to present with accuracy and very special taste "The Pirates of Penzance," the well-known opera by Sir Arthur Sullivan and Mr. W. S. Gilbert. I am told that the result—and a very wonderful result it is—is due to the untiring patience of Mr. R. Barker, the stage manager, and of Mr. F. Cellier, the musical conductor. We wondered enough at the children's "Pinafore," some years ago; but this performance is infinitely better all round. The singing is more accurate, and the acting far more spontaneous. The lad who with a charming soprano voice sings the music of Frederic with so much expression and feeling; the remarkably clever boys who take the parts of the Pirate King and the Policeman—a born humourist the last boy—and both the girls engaged in the principal characters, are all in their way as good as children could be expected to be, and vastly better than many grown up people could possibly be in the same characters. In the first place, these youngsters have been taught to pronounce their words distinctly, and to express them intelligently. They know how to read, which ten out of a dozen actors don't know, and never will care to learn. They have been to school—dramatic school, I mean—which very few of the modern race of actors have ever entered. I must say that I disagree with the critics who maintain that the girls are better than the boys. As a rule, this is so with trained children on the stage. But surely the Pirates are infinitely better than the Kate Greenaway daughters of the Major-General—who is the least offensive prodigy I have ever seen. Phenomena are, as a rule, disagreeable sights. But these children are altogether charming. Nothing prettier or better of its kind has ever been seen.

THE GAIETY.

Turning to the Gaiety Theatre, we find a Christmas fare of a totally different kind. Comedy has not been wholly lost sight of in all this concentrated dazzle and brilliancy. Fun insists upon jingling his cap and bells, and demands a hearing though stage after stage is devoted to red-fire, Brummagem armour, and tin-foil. Mr. Edward Terry is the born impersonator of comic despair. His face, on the stage, is lined with the traces of an abiding sorrow that is harrowing in its intensity. An innocent man who gets into a hideous pickle is a favourite theme with a dramatist, and, with such a comedian as Edward Terry to write for, the subject is endless in its permutations and combinations. Each comedian has his speciality. Charles Wyndham is the gay, reckless, dare-devil of a fellow. He is, in stage parlance, "such a dog." Mr. Toole is the nervous, electric, spasmodic, good-hearted fellow, who is always being put upon, and is for ever wriggling, like an eel, out of his outrageous dilemmas. He is fiery, peppery, instantaneous and convincing. But Edward Terry is a comedian of a different complexion. He is guilelessness and innocence itself, but it is his destiny to be a ruin and a scourge of matter-of-fact domesticity. No one can have forgotten his Chevalier Walkinshaw in "The Rocket," whose pathetic "Oh! what a mess I'm in!" rings in the ears even at this distant date. Mr. A. W. Pinero, who has studied, and evidently appreciates the fun of his favourite comedian, has fitted his style even better in the new play called "In Chancery." Conceive this position. An innocent commercial traveller meets with a severe accident, is taken to a small local inn, and, when he recovers from the first shock, is brought face to face with the formidable fact that he has forgotten everything. His memory is a perfect blank. He is not only "not myself at all," but he has no means whatever of recollecting who he ever was. A card found in a pocket of the coat in which he has been escorted to the inn complicates the mental disorder of Montague Jolliffe, and, being entirely ignorant whether he is married or single, this ill-starred wretch is on the eve of committing bigamy, and is liable to be shot by the indignant parent of the Irish maiden he leaves in despair on his wedding day. Such a character Mr. Terry approaches with all the intensity of his comic nature, and there are few things more amusing than to see him, thin and haggard with despair, and whining in his accent, endeavouring to extricate himself from a dilemma that an unkindly fate has thrust upon him. He keeps the house in roars of laughter; and in elaborating this story Mr. Pinero has shown that in the modern comic play there may be as much fun in elaboration of character as in horse-play and practical joking. We are getting a little tired of "door and window farces" and comedies that depend merely on noise, pully-hauly, and pantomime. For this relief much thanks. Though of course "In Chancery" is in intention a "one-part play," there is some excellent character acting shown by Alfred Bishop, a capital irate stage Irishman of an old-fashioned type, and by Miss Phyllis Broughton, Miss Gladys Homfrey, and that smart little soubrette, Clara Jecks—clever child of a clever mother. Mr. W. Yardley's burlesque on "Hamlet" has been revised and rewritten up to date. New songs and business have filled up awkward pauses; Miss Farren is as good as ever; and the fact that Mr. Edward Terry plays in all her best scenes as "The Ghost," materially increases the fun of the entertainment. Playgoers are constant to their old loves, and they are naturally delighted when they get Miss Farren, Mr. Terry, and Mr. Royce back again in a Gaiety burlesque.

C. S.

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS.

In the centre of our page of Engravings, which represent a few scenes of the Christmas Pantomimes, appears the London Prentice hero of the Drury Lane performance, young Dick Whittington, accompanied by his very large Cat, pausing on the summit of Highgate Hill to hear the bells of Bow Church calling him back to Cheapside. The figures of Mr. H. Nicholls, as Tom the Idle Apprentice, and Mr. Herbert Campbell as the cook, are delineated at the side. Above these is a scene from "Aladdin," at the Surrey Theatre, where the "Lad with the Lamp" pairs off with the "Precious Princess"; and, in the opposite corner, the scene from "Cinderella," at the Standard, when one of the cross and ugly sisters fails to put the elegant glass slipper on her not very pretty foot. Messrs. J. and R. Douglass, at this theatre, have made a brilliant effort with "Cinderella," and the scenery, costumes, and carriages drawn by real horses, with Francesco's miniature ballet troupe of children, are much admired. At the Surrey, also, Mr. G. Conquest's pantomime, which was produced on Christmas Eve, is splendidly got up, with an amazing Cave of Jewels and a Fountain of Liquid Gems, and a Wedding Feast of Lanterns; while the performers, especially Mr. H. Edmunds as Abanazar the Great Scamp, a knavish professor of magic, are very amusing in their way. The zoological exhibition at Sanger's Amphitheatre, so far as regards the Egyptian pelicans, calmly surveyed by the Sphinx, is the subject of our last Illustration. But it is the old English legend of Lady Godiva which has been selected for dramatic treatment at Sanger's, where, for the first time possibly, St. George and the contemporary champions take part in the proceedings. The pantomime is handsomely mounted; the Pavilion of Pageantry, with its glittering procession, and with the various assembly of birds and beasts, from cockatoos to camels, being one of the finest displays ever witnessed on the Surrey side. Miss Stoyle is a dashing St. George, Miss Lizzie Relsey a graceful Godiva, Mr. Fred. Shepherd a terrible Leofric, and Little Sandy an amusing demon.

The Wesleyans of Wolverhampton have resolved to expend £12,000 in chapel extensions in the district. Of this sum £9000 has been promised.

Pending the further determination of her Majesty's pleasure, the Home Secretary has granted a respite to Mrs. Gibbons, who was condemned to death for the murder of her husband at Hayes.

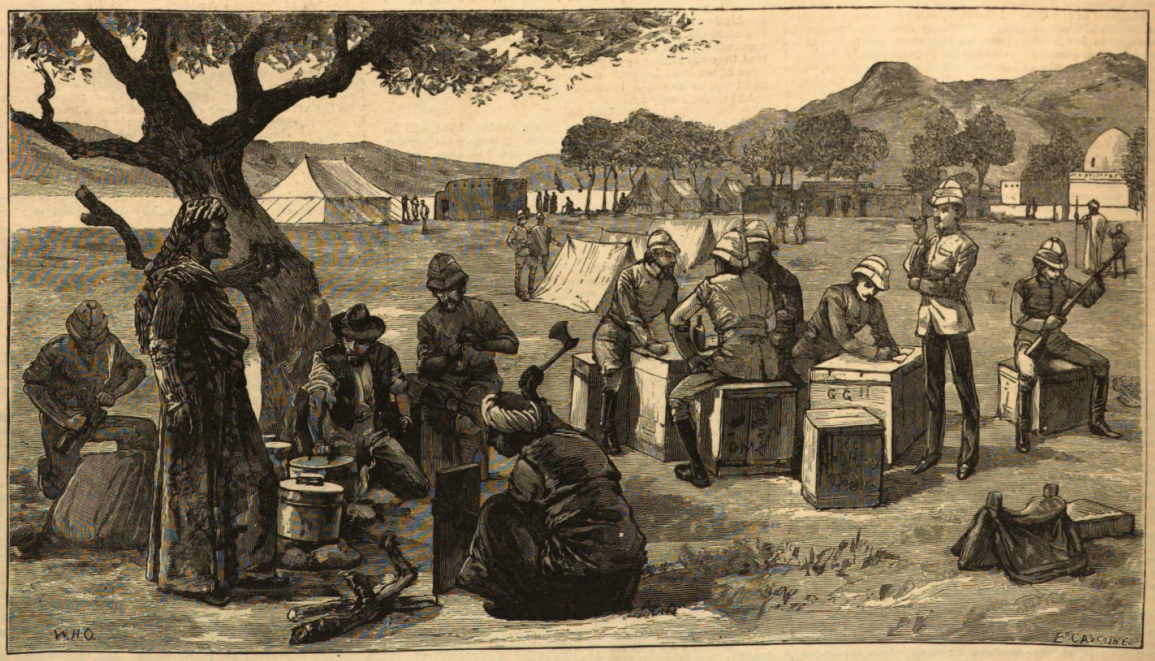
Mr. N. R. H. Humphreys presided on Monday night at the annual dinner of the Commercial Traveller's Benevolent Institution, held at the Freemasons' Tavern. Subscriptions to the amount of £2169 were announced.

Sir James Paget has given notice that at the next meeting of the Royal College of Surgeons he will move that the council take measures for placing in the college an appropriate memorial of Sir Erasmus Wilson, who, it will be remembered, bequeathed about £280,000 to the college.

The announcement of the issue to the volunteers of the Martini-Henry rifle is officially confirmed, though it is understood that it will not commence until the orders sent to Birmingham and Enfield for the manufacture of at least 150,000 similar weapons are executed.

In London last week 1832 births and 1430 deaths were registered. Allowing for increase of population, the births were 500, and the deaths 557, below the average numbers in the corresponding weeks of the last ten years. The mortality included 32 from smallpox, 20 from measles, 16 from scarlet fever, 20 from diphtheria, 22 from whooping cough, and 7 from dysentery.

Mr. Thomas Skinner's "Stock Exchange Year-Book" (Cassell and Company, Limited) has now reached its eleventh year. The work has again increased in bulk, but still maintains its position as the most handy, and at the same time complete authority on matters relating to public securities and joint-stock enterprise, while the moderate price at which it is published is another recommendation. The volume for 1885 contains particulars up to the most recent dates, and a careful examination shows that the reputation already gained for conciseness and accuracy is well maintained.



MR. G. A. SALA.

MR. G. A. SALA.

The clever, humorous, and widely popular writer of our "Echoes of the Week," one of the ablest and most experienced contributors of special correspondence and leading articles to a London daily newspaper, a competent dramatic critic, and author of a great variety of lively essays, tales, and sketches, published in magazines and other journals during more than thirty years past, is pleasantly known to hundreds of thousands of English readers. Thousands of readers in America and in the Colonies, being equally of the English race and language, are nearly as familiar with Mr. Sala's writings as the people of his own country; in the United States, which he has twice visited, he has won much personal regard and goodwill; and he is now on his third voyage across the Atlantic, being engaged to deliver public lectures in the chief cities of the Great Republic, and thence to proceed, from San Francisco, to Australia and New Zealand, where he will find colonial audiences not less eager to see and hear one who has made his mark, by force of original talent and supreme vivacity, on a broad surface of contemporary literature, and has gained a high place in general esteem. This seems a fitting opportunity for us to present the Portrait of Mr. Sala, and to invite our own readers, whom he has so long helped to entertain from week to week, to join with us in wishing him a prosperous expedition, accompanied by his wife, to the Far West and to the Antipodes, hoping that he will return in good health to England, in the spring of 1886, and will long afterwards continue here to pursue those occupations in which we have always found him a most efficient and agreeable colleague. We expect, in the meantime, frequently to receive from him special communications which will be acceptable in our Journal, not only as sure to be pervaded with his characteristic wit and pleasantry, rich in anecdote and allusion, but also as representing the impressions freshly made on the mind of a keen and practised observer by the social peculiarities of colonial life.

Mr. George Augustus Sala was born in London in 1828, his father being an Italian, but his mother an English West Indian lady, who practised the profession of music, and who had some repute both as a singer and as a teacher of singing. He was educated chiefly in Paris, and became an art-student, but soon turned his efforts to literature, writing first, we believe, for the Welcome Guest, also for Household Words, upon its establishment by Charles Dickens, in 1850 or 1851, and All the Year Round, the second title chosen by Dickens for his weekly publication. He wrote the papers on Hogarth in the Cornhill Magazine, under Thackeray's editorship, and he became the first editor of the Temple Bar Magazine, for which he wrote a novel, "The Seven Sons of Mammon," and a romance called "Strange Adventures of Captain Dangerous," afterwards reprinted as separate works. His story called "Quite Alone," written for All the Year Round, was likewise reprinted in 1864; and he has also produced a novel entitled "The Baddington Peerage," and several other stories. But Mr. Sala's chief strength does not lie in sustained fiction, or in the full development of an elaborate plot, and the dramatic evolution of characters. As an observer of manners and an incidental anecdotist, he is scarcely excelled by any writer of the day in perception of the quaint, the eccentric, and grotesque; but the oddities which he detects and exhibits with exquisite relish are not embodied in substantial imaginative forms. Indeed, his constant employment in journalism, in the close inspection and description of actual scenes and public proceedings, has not left him any leisure for effective attempts in novel-writing. He went to Russia in 1859; to the United States for the Daily Telegraph in the latter part of the War of Secession, and further to Mexico; on his return, he accompanied the late Emperor Napoleon's visit to Algeria; in 1870, he was at Metz and at Paris during the crisis of the war between France and Germany, and at Rome when the Italian Army entered that city; in 1875, he was in Spain at the accession of King Alfonso XII., and at the meeting of the King of Italy and Emperor of Austria at Venice. Mr. Sala again visited Russia in 1876, and travelled southward to Odessa and to Constantinople, to witness the opening of the European Conference; and in 1881, he went again to the United States, acting as special correspondent for the Daily Telegraph on each of those occasions. He was also at the Moscow coronation of the Emperor Alexander III. He has thus seen much of Royal and Imperial Court pageantries, and something of the turmoil of warfare, but is not, like Mr. W. H. Russell, Mr. Archibald Forbes, Mr. Hilary Skinner, and other special war correspondents, minutely conversant with military operations. At one time, indeed, he was with Garibaldi in the Italian Tyrol, during the brief campaign of 1866. Other travels and visits to different cities of Europe have been undertaken by Mr. Sala for the purpose of describing their social every-day condition and habits, in which he is particularly happy; the aspects of city streets and markets, popular festivities, theatres, railway and steam-boat travelling, hotel life and club life, are depicted by him in the liveliest style, and enlivened with a rich vein of humour. Among the volumes in which his writings of this class are collected, we may instance "America in the Midst of War," 1864; "A Journey Due North, or Residence in Russia"; "Dutch and Flemish Pictures"; "From Waterloo to the Peninsula"; "A Trip to Barbary"; "Notes and Sketches of the Paris Exhibition, 1867"; "Under the Sun, Essays in Hot Countries"; "Paris Herself Again," and "America Revisited." Some of Mr. Sala's minor essays and sketches of home subjects were collected in "Twice Round the Clock," "Gaslight and Daylight," "Breakfast in Bed," "After Breakfast," and other volumes, as well as the more recent of his contributions to the Illustrated London News, which began at a very early period. He has written several pieces for the stage, one being the burlesque of "Wat Tyler, M.P.," performed at the Gaiety Theatre in 1869. Mr. Sala is one of the most active and industrious of literary men; though a cosmopolitan man of the world in experience, he cultivates a taste for literary, historical, and antiquarian studies; and his stores of curious learning, accurate but not academical, seem greater than might have been expected in the case of a busy newspaper writer. He has much technical as well as critical knowledge of art, and his acquaintance with dramatic performances is proved by the value of his judgments upon them in our own Journal. We do not here speak of the merits of his personal character, except with reference to those qualities, frank honesty, candour, good-humour, and universal kindliness of spirit, which are equally shown in all his writings. Nothing spiteful or malicious, no unfair or unworthy insinuation, nothing wantonly injurious or recklessly offensive to any human being, can be found in any sentence from his pen, though he may probably have received as much provocation as any other successful public man. This is no slight praise, in a scandal-loving age, for a clever professional journalist with uncommon power of satire; and it may also be said of his miscellaneous productions, as happily of those of most of our best writers of the present day, that they nowhere contain the slightest hint of a suggestion injurious to moral purity, or to the delicacy which modern English literature is wont to respect and preserve.

THE NILE EXPEDITION: EN ROUTE TO DONGOLA WITH THE GUARDS' CAMEL CORPS—A HALT AT AKASHEH.
SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, MR. MELTON PRIOR.

THE PANTOMIMES.

The Portrait that we have engraved is from a photograph by Mr. Van der Weyde's Electric Light Process, Regent-street.

BIRTH.

On Oct. 26, at Chajari Entre Rios, the wife of Edward Dutton Turner, of a daughter.

DEATHS.

On the 19th ult., at 18, Granville-place, Portman-square, Edith Mary Codrington, wife of Matthew Clark, Esq., and eldest daughter of the late Richard Davies, Esq., of the "Virgin," Madeira, aged 37.

On the 27th ult., at her residence, 9, Lansdowne-crescent, Nottinghill, W., Mary Ann, widow of the late Samuel Page, Esq., of Duiwich, Surrey, aged 77.

On the 26th ult., at Whitwell, Norwich, Margaret Elizabeth, the beloved wife of Stephen Leeds, aged 44 years.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, is Five Shillings for each announcement.

THE VALE OF TEARS.—DORÉ'S Last Great PICTURE, completed a few days before he died, NOW on VIEW at the DORÉ GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street, with his other great pictures. Ten to Six. Daily. 1s.

ANNO DOMINI, by EDWIN LONG, R.A.—This great Work is NOW ON VIEW, together with other important works, at the GALLERIES, 168, New Bond-street. Ten to Six. Admission, 1s.

MONTE CARLO.—MUSICAL SEASON (CONCERTS, REPRESENTATIONS).
In addition to the usual Concerts, directed by Monsieur Romeo Accursi, the Société des Bains de Mer de Monaco has authorised M. Pasdeloup to arrange a Series of Extraordinary Grand Musical Entertainments (Concerts, Representations) this Winter.
The services of the following distinguished Artistes have been already retained:—

Mesdames Krauss,	Messieurs Faure,
" Devries,	" Vergnet,
" Salla,	" Capoul,
" Donadio,	" Biorkstein,
" Frank-Duvernoy,	" Conturier,
" Belloca,	" Villaret,
" Simonnet.	&c.

Added to which the celebrated Instrumentalists will appear:
VIOLINISTS:
Mons. Sivori, Mons. Marsik, Miss N. Carpenter, American artiste, 1st Conservatoire Prize, 1883.
PIANISTS: Mons. Planté, Mons. Th. Ritter, Madame Essipoff.
HARPIST: Mons. Hasselmans.
These Extraordinary Representations will be given each Wednesday and Saturday, commencing the end of January and terminating the middle of March.
The Classical Concerts every Thursday.

TIR AUX PIGEONS DE MONACO.
The opening of the Tir aux Pigeons of Monaco took place Dec. 16. The following is the Programme:—
Saturday, Jan. 3: Prix de Janvier. | Tuesday, Jan. 6: Prix Joe.
The GRAND INTERNATIONAL CONCOURS will take place in the following order:—
Saturday, Jan. 10: Grande Poule d'Essai. A Purse of 2000f. added to a Poule of 100f. each.
Tuesday, Jan. 13: Prix d'Ouverture. A Purse of 300f. added to 100f. entrance.
Friday, Jan. 16, and Saturday, Jan 17: Grand Prix du Casino. An object of Art and 2,000f. added to 200f. entrance.
Monday, Jan. 19: Prix de Monte Carlo. Grand Free Handicap. A Purse of 500f. added to 100f. entrance.
Thursday, Jan. 22: Prix de Consolation. An object of Art and 1000f.
BI-WEEKLY MATCHES FOR PRIZES.
Jan. 24: Prix de Saint-Quentin. An object of Art, added to a Poule of 50f.
Jan. 27: Prix Yeo. A Purse of 300f., added to a Poule of 30f.
Jan. 31: Prix Saint Trivier. An object of Art, with Poule of 50f.
Feb. 3: Prix Robert. A Purse of 300f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 7: Prix Hopwood. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 10: Prix Ladon. A Purse of 300f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 12: Prix Echrhoy. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 16: Prix du Comité. A Purse of 300f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 21: Prix Canaver. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 24: Prix Devon. A Purse of 300f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 28: Prix Dori. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Mar. 3: Prix de Mars. A Purse of 300f. and a Poule of 50f.
Mar. 7: Prix Patton. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Mar. 10: Prix W. Cali. A Purse of 300f., added to a Poule of 50f.
GRAND CLOSING PRIZES.
March 12 and 13: Grand Prix de Clôture. A Purse of 4000f. added to 100f. entrance
Second Prize, 1000f.; Third Prize, 700f.; Fourth, 200f.
A. BLONDIN, Secretary.

NEWS FROM NICE.—The weather is really splendid, the temperature ranging from 60 deg. to 65 deg. in the shade. The sun shines almost perpetually, and the influence of warm rays makes life enjoyable to all, and more especially to those who have by illness or otherwise sought its influence.
There has been an almost entire absence of rain for several months, but this has not interfered with the sanitary arrangements of the city, as its streets and roads are daily watered from the mountain stream of the Vesubie, which is also used for flushing the drains, which are, in addition, cleansed or disinfected by purifying chemical compounds.
The streets, now brushed daily, were never so clean and tidy, which fact, perhaps, accounts for the total absence of epidemics; and the average mortality of the city is less than many fashionable towns in England.
Four resident English medical men are in practice here, and would, I am sure, be willing to communicate with any intending visitors desirous of satisfying their nervous fears as to the healthfulness of the town by addressing Doctors West, Sturge, or Wakefield, or Mr. Nicholls, the English qualified chemist here. In future, there will be an authorised tribunal for this purpose, as a hygienic society of medical men, French, English, and others, is now in course of formation, so that untruthful scandals as to the sanitary condition of Nice may be avoided or exposed.
The Prolongation of the Promenade des Anglais is complete, and forms one of the finest drives in the Riviera. The police force has been reorganised, and its members are now entitled to a pension after faithful service, which fact will doubtless give them more moral force in the execution of their functions.
The Italian Theatre, a very handsome building, has been reconstructed and enlarged, and a grand ball of inauguration will be given in February.
The Casino Theatre is giving its entertainments; and the Théâtre des Français, of which Mr. Corbeiaux is the able Director, has an excellent Troupe de Comédie, as also some star artistes for the Opéra Comique.
The Jetty Promenade, grace to an arrangement at last effected between the Fire Insurance Company and the Directors of the Pier, is, they say, to be immediately rebuilt. The races will take place in February. The renowned carnival will surpass all others, and the Regattas will form an important part of the festivities, particulars of which anon.
The visitors are daily arriving in increased numbers, and those English who were too timid to pass through Paris, have nevertheless found the means of coming on here by way of Amiens, Rouen, and Dijon; while several will return from our Riviera into Switzerland during the panic are now en route to this bright and sunny land.
Nice, Dec. 8, 1884.

BANK OF NEW ZEALAND
(Incorporated by Act of General Assembly, July 29, 1861).
Bankers to the New Zealand Government.
Capital subscribed and paid up, £1,000,000.
Reserve Fund, £625,000.
Head Office—Auckland.
BRANCHES AND AGENCIES.
In Australia—Melbourne, Sidney, Newcastle, and Adelaide.
In Fiji—Levuka, Suva.
In New Zealand—Auckland, Blenheim, Christchurch, Dunedin, Invercargill, Napier, Nelson, New Plymouth, Picton, Wellington, and at ninety-five other towns and places throughout the Colony.
This Bank grants Drafts on all its Branches and Agencies, and transacts every description of banking business connected with New Zealand, Australia, and Fiji on the most favourable terms.
The London Office RECEIVES FIXED DEPOSITS of £50 and upwards, rates and particulars of which can be ascertained on application.
F. LARKWORTHY, Managing Director.
No. 1, Queen Victoria-street, Mansion House, E.C.

WHAT IS YOUR CREST and WHAT IS YOUR MOTTO? Send name and county to CULLETON'S Heraldic Office. Plain Sketch, 2s. 6d. Coloured, 7s. The arms of man and wife blended. Crest engraved on seals, rings, books, and steel dies, 8s. 6d. Gold seal, with crest, 20s. Solid Gold Ring, 18-carat, Hall-marked, with crest, £3. Manual of Heraldry, 400 engravings, 3s. 9d.
T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX of STATIONERY contains a Ream of the very best Paper and 500 Envelopes, all stamped in the most elegant way with Crest and Motto, Monogram, or Address, and the engraving of Steel Die included. Sent to any part for P.O. order.
T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

VISITING CARDS by CULLETON.—Fifty best quality, 2s. 6d., post-free, including the Engraving of Copper Plate. Wedding Cards, 50 each, 50 Embossed Envelopes, with Maiden Name, 12s. 6d.
T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

ILKLEY WELLS HYDROPATHIC ESTABLISHMENT and HOTEL, renovated and refurnished, offers a delightful winter residence. A conservatory, covering 300 square yards, connected with the house, and commanding magnificent views of Wharfedale, has recently been added. Reduced winter terms.
Address, Manager, Wells House, Ilkley, via Leeds.

REPRINT OF
OUR CHRISTMAS NUMBER
Now Ready.
PRICE ONE SHILLING.
POSTAGE: PARCELS POST, 3D.; BOOK POST, 3D.
Office: 198, Strand, London, W.C.

TITLEPAGE AND INDEX.

The Titlepage and Index to Engravings of Volume Eighty-five (from July 5 to Dec. 27, 1884) of THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS can be had Gratis through any Newsagent, or direct from the Publishing Office, 198, Strand, W.C. London.

PRINCESS'S THEATRE.—MR. WILSON BARRETT, Lessee and Manager.—EVERY EVENING, at 7.45, HAMLET. Messrs. Wilson Barrett, Speakman, Lewkenor, Willard, Clifford Cooper, Frank Cooper, Cranford, Hudson, Doone, De Solla, Evans, Fulton, Foss, &c., and George Barrett; Mesdames Eastlake, Dickens, &c., and M. Leighton. Doors open at 7.15. Box-office, 9.30 to Five. No Fees. Matinees, this day (Saturday), Jan. 3, and Saturday next, Jan. 10. Business Manager, J. H. Cobbe.

NATIONAL STANDARD THEATRE, BISHOPSGATE.
CINDERELLA. Grand Christmas Pantomime. EVERY EVENING at Seven. Morning Performances every day at One, to which children under ten half-price. Pantomime produced by John Douglass.

EVERY AFTERNOON at THREE. EVERY NIGHT at EIGHT.
ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.
Newly Decorated.
THE MOORE AND BURGESS MINSTRELS'
TWENTIETH ANNUAL CARNIVAL of MUSIC and FUN.
EVERY DAY at THREE. EVERY NIGHT at EIGHT.
Fauteuils, 5s.; Sofa Stalls, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. No fees of any kind. Children Half-price to Area and Stalls. Tickets and Places can be secured at Austin's Office, St. James's Hall, One Month in advance.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.
Newly Decorated.
THE MOORE AND BURGESS MINSTRELS'
MAMMOTH CHRISTMAS PROGRAMME
has received the most enthusiastic approval of the Enormous Audiences which have literally packed St. James's Hall from floor to gallery since Boxing Day.
TWO PERFORMANCES WILL BE GIVEN EVERY DAY,
AFTERNOON at THREE; NIGHT at EIGHT.

MASKELYNE and COOKE, EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, give their performance twice daily during the holidays. Afternoon at Three. Evening at Eight. Mr. Maskelyne's Christmas Novelties, entitled THE FAKIRS OF BENARES AND THEIR BRAZEN ORACLE, introducing many Novel Effects and startling Illusions, differing entirely in character from any previously witnessed. Stalls, 5s.; Reserved Seats, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Balcony, 1s.

WANTED, Respectable Young Women, as DOMESTIC SERVANTS, to proceed to NEW SOUTH WALES. Passages, including Provisions, Bedding, &c., will be granted by the Agent-General in first-class steamers to approved applicants, upon payment of £2 each. An experienced Surgeon and Matron accompany each ship. The Colonial Government provide a free accommodation for the Single Women during ten days after their arrival in Sydney. The next steamer will be dispatched on or about Jan. 16. Further information may be obtained at the EMIGRATION DEPARTMENT, New South Wales Government Offices, 5, Westminster-chambers, Victoria-street, Westminster, S.W.

THE JAPANESE VILLAGE,
Erected and peopled exclusively by NATIVES of JAPAN,
will OPEN in ALBERT-GATE, Hyde Park, on SATURDAY, JAN. 10, 1885, under the distinguished Patronage of her Royal Highness PRINCESS CHRISTIAN, her Royal Highness PRINCESS LOUISE, MARCHIONESS of LORNE, &c.
SKILFUL JAPANESE ARTIFICERS and WORKERS—Male and Female—will illustrate the MANNERS, CUSTOMS, and ART-INDUSTRIES of their Country, attired in their National and Picturesque Costumes.
Magnificently Decorated and Illuminated BUDDHIST TEMPLE.
FIVE O'CLOCK TEA in the Japanese Tea-House.
JAPANESE MUSICAL and other ENTERTAINMENTS.
EVERY-DAY LIFE as in JAPAN. MILITARY BAND.
Daily from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. ONE SHILLING.
WEDNESDAYS, Half-a-Crown. Children under Twelve, Sixpence.
Promoter and Managing Director, T. BURCHETT.
The ENTIRE PROCEEDS of the OPENING DAY, SATURDAY, JAN. 10, will be devoted to several Charitable Institutions, on which occasion the Charge for Admission will be Half-a-Crown.

THE POLITICAL ENTR'ACTE.

The New Year has opened without any interruption of the harmony prevailing between the two great Parties in the State. The gentlest of tunes continue to be played by the Parliamentary musicians, who are good enough to relieve the tedium of the entr'acte with a little mild orchestration. If the lion is not exactly to be found consorting with the lamb, the Marquis of Salisbury is pacifically holding holiday revel at Hatfield, and Mr. Gladstone has been celebrating his seventy-fifth birthday like the "Grand Old Man" he really is at Hawarden Castle.

December the Twenty-Ninth was, indeed, a red-letter day at Hawarden. Not only did the Prime Minister receive a hundred and fifty congratulatory birthday messages from all classes of the community on Monday, but he had the pleasure of welcoming to the castle Miss Wilson, the fiancée of his son, the Rev. Stephen Gladstone, with whom and Mrs. Gladstone the young lady arrived on a visit to Hawarden. Miss Wilson is a daughter of Dr. Wilson, of Liverpool. It was observed that Mr. Gladstone looked as hale and hearty as ever when he walked from the castle to attend the early morning service at Hawarden church, the bells of which blithely rang out in celebration of the Minister's birthday.

The Earl of Rosebery, it is to be feared, has not met with much encouragement in his attempt to persuade the House of Lords to reform itself. The published answers to his Lordship's circular would undeniably have had the effect of damping his reforming ardour, if he had not been blessed with a native cheeriness worthy of Mark Tapley himself. To Time may the noble Earl leave it to effect the changes needful in the Upper House.

No member has a profounder knowledge of the deplorable way in which public time is wasted in the House of Commons than the first Ministerial "whip." Lord Richard Grosvenor's pregnant remarks at Dorchester on Tuesday were, accordingly, well worth notice. Not without reason did his Lordship jocosely lament the absence of a Factory Act for regulating the hours of attendance in the House; for, as he said, seventy hours' work a week is nothing to members who do their duty. It is nothing less than a scandal that, notwithstanding the amount of time thus consumed, there should be such a beggarly array of measures of moment at the end of the Session. As Lord Richard Grosvenor pointed out, the present year must be devoted mainly to the passing of the Redistribution Bill. But the energy and spirit displayed by the youngest members of the House hold forth every promise that the next Parliament will promptly effect that rational alteration in its rules which will put a stop to obstruction, and enable the House to transact the business of the nation with adequate dispatch and efficiency.

The readers of Mr. Mason Jackson's "History of the Pictorial Press" have learnt that the business of preparing blocks of boxwood for the engravers is of essential importance to the production of such a Journal as the Illustrated London News. A manufacturer of boxwood blocks and other engraving materials and implements, Mr. E. Badoureau, in St. Bride-street, Ludgate-circus, has issued a calendar for the year 1885, accompanied by a view of the interior of his own workshop, very cleverly drawn, with a portrait of Mr. Badoureau himself. This is not only interesting to his customers, but gives a lively idea of the manner in which the work is carried on.

MUSIC.

The Christmas performance of "The Messiah" given at St. James's Hall by Mr. W. G. Cusins, last week, was generally of high efficiency. Miss Griswold, the accomplished young American soprano, sang with great effect in the bravura song "Rejoice greatly," and in the pathetic airs "Come unto Him" and "How beautiful," and in the several incidental recitatives. Mr. Sims Reeves gave the tenor solo music of the first part with fine effect, although suffering from a cold which disabled him from singing in the second part, in which he was ably replaced by Mr. Piercy. Madame Patey in the contralto music, and Mr. Santley in the bass solos, were at their best. Mr. Cusin's corrections of some misconceptions of Handel's notation and other points (as embodied in an interesting pamphlet) rendered this performance, as it did that of last year, of special interest.

Sir Arthur Sullivan's and Mr. W. S. Gilbert's "Pirates of Penzance" has been reproduced at the Savoy Theatre, the characters sustained by children with an efficiency, dramatic and musical, that is truly surprising. Among those who particularly distinguished themselves may be specified:—Miss E. Joel (as Mabel), Master Tebbutt (as Frederic), Master E. Percy (as Major-General Stanley), and the two Adesons (as the Pirate King and the Policeman)—all the others indeed being good in their respective degrees.

"Pocahontas"—the comic opera produced on Boxing night at the Empire Theatre—is founded on the well-known story of the Indian Princess who preserved the life of the captive captain, John Smith, by taking him as her husband. The book (by Mr. Sidney Grundy) deals but slightly with the history, and introduces some rather incongruous comic matter. The music, by Mr. E. Solomon, is lively and tunable, without any marked originality or individuality of style. The characters of the heroine and the hero are well sustained, respectively, by Miss Lillian Russell and Mr. F. Celli; Miss A. Barnett, Mr. J. L. Shine, Mr. H. Ashley, and Mr. R. Brough being included in the cast.

The secular music of the closing days of last year included Mr. Ambrose Austin's National Holiday Festival Concert at the Royal Albert Hall, on Boxing Day (when a selection of popular music was given by eminent artists), and the opening of her Majesty's Theatre for a series of concerts à la Jullien. A good orchestra—headed by Mr. Viotti Collins as leading and solo violinist—gave effect to the instrumental selection; and vocal pieces were well rendered by Mdlle. Marita, Miss A. Romayne, and Signor Foli. Mr. Odoardo Barri is the conductor, assisted by Herr Volkmer.

The earliest musical performance of 1885 was the concert of the Royal Albert Hall Choral Society on the evening of New Year's Day, when "The Messiah" was given. A new series of Mr. John Boosey's Ballad Concerts begins this (Saturday) afternoon at St. James's Hall; where, on Monday, Jan. 5, the Popular Concerts will be resumed; as will be the afternoon performances associated with them on the following Saturday. On Jan. 23 the Sacred Harmonic Society will resume its performances, also at St. James's Hall. The twenty-ninth series of Saturday Concerts at the Crystal Palace will be continued on Feb. 14. The seventy-third season of the Philharmonic Society will open on Feb. 26 with the first of six concerts, all of which will be conducted by Sir Arthur Sullivan.

On March 21, the Bach Choir (directed by Mr. Otto Goldschmidt) will celebrate the 200th anniversary of the composer's birth by a grand performance of his Mass in B minor at the Royal Albert Hall; and on the 25th of the same month the London Musical Society will give the first of two concerts at St. James's Hall. Mr. Carl Rosa will open a new London season of eight weeks at Drury Lane Theatre on Easter Monday—his scheme including the production of a new opera, composed for him by Mr. A. Goring Thomas, and of the English version of M. Massenet's "Manon."

The Richter concerts will open a new series of nine performances at St. James's Hall, on April 20; and Mr. H. Leslie's choir will begin a new season on June 4; again conducted by him. The choir, it will be remembered, was disbanded after its twenty-fifth season, and was then reorganised, with Mr. Randegger as conductor; Mr. Leslie resuming that office in the forthcoming series.

There will be celebrations of the bicentenary of the birth of Bach and Handel, who were both born in 1685; but the most important will be the Handel Festival at the Crystal Palace, on June 19, 22, 24, and 26. This will be held in anticipation of its regular triennial recurrence, which would properly be in 1886; a deviation which is appropriate under the circumstances.

Mr. W. Carter's National Festival Concerts at the Royal Albert Hall—on Jan. 26, Feb. 14 and 28, March 17, and April 23—will be among the specialties of the year.

It would be premature as yet to speak of Italian opera performances, as no reliable specific information will be available for some weeks. There can be but little doubt, however, that London will not be without such an invariable important feature of the season. As to German opera, any renewed scheme seems to be more than doubtful.

The production at the Savoy Theatre of the new comic opera by Sir Arthur Sullivan and Mr. W. S. Gilbert will be looked for with great interest. The date of the event cannot yet be given, but it is to be hoped that it is not far off.

There will be three great provincial festivals this year—at Birmingham at the latter end of August, at Hereford in September, and at Bristol at a subsequent period. The first-named occasion will derive especial importance from the production of Gounod's new oratorio, "Mors et Vita," and new works by Herr Anton Dvorák, Mr. A. C. Mackenzie, Mr. C. V. Stanford, Mr. F. H. Cowen, Mr. T. Anderton, and Mr. E. Prout.

The above will be among the most important musical events of 1885—many other performances of more or less interest being doubtless forthcoming.

The Marquis of Ripon has been elected president of the Ripon, Harrogate, and Claro Agricultural Society for 1885.

The Queen has presented £20 to the funds of the Booksellers' Provident Institution, through Sir Henry Ponsonby. Her Majesty has been the patron of the society since 1868.

In answer to the Lord Mayor's appeal in aid of the Rowland Hill Benevolent Fund, the following sums, among others, have been received:—Messrs. N. M. Rothschild and Sons, £250; Messrs. Baring Brothers, £250; Messrs. Glyn, Mills, and Co., £105; the Clothworkers' Company, £105; Messrs. Smith, Payne, and Smith's, £105; Messrs. J. and R. Morley, £105; the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, £105; Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, and Co., £100.

The Christmas number of the St. Stephen's Review, entitled "St. Stephen's Saturnalia," presents a handsome appearance, while a judgment as to its literary contents may be formed from the fact that Lord Lytton, Lord Carnarvon, and Sir Wilfrid Lawson are among the literary contributors. There are clever pencil sketches by Wallis Mackay, Tom Merry, George Cruikshank, Phil May, and other skilled artists; and there is a coloured group, "The Stores—their Votaries and their Victims," by Harry Furniss.

THE NEW ARCHBISHOP OF DUBLIN.

The Disestablishment of the Protestant Irish Church has enabled its members, clergy and laity, to enjoy the free exercise of their suffrages in the choice of a new Archbishop to fill the place of Dr. F. C. Trench. The joint Synods of Dublin, Glendalough, and Kildare, consisting of 262 clergymen and 480 laymen, are empowered, voting together, by a two-thirds majority, to elect an Archbishop who is to be Bishop of the three Episcopal Sees. If no person obtained the requisite two-thirds majority of each order, three candidates were to be nominated, of whom one would be selected by the Bench of Bishops. At the first polling, the votes were divided between five or six leading candidates, and a second poll was taken, in which the Right Rev. Lord Plunket, Bishop of Meath, obtained a decisive majority; and the result is generally approved. The new Archbishop is eldest son of the third Lord Plunket, by marriage with Charlotte, daughter of the Right Hon. Charles Kendal Bushe, and was born in 1828. He graduated at Trinity College, Dublin, in 1853. He was ordained in 1857 by the Bishop of Tuam. From 1858 till 1864 he was Rector of Kilmoylan and Cummer, and he was afterwards successively chaplain and private secretary to the Bishop of Tuam, treasurer of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, and precentor of St. Patrick's. Dr. Plunket succeeded to the Peerage in 1871, and was consecrated Bishop of Meath in 1876. The first Lord Plunket was so created in 1827, on being appointed Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, and was afterwards Lord Chancellor of Ireland. His eldest son, the second Peer, who died in 1866, was consecrated Bishop of Tuam in 1839. The new Archbishop married, in 1863, Anne, only daughter of the late Sir Benjamin Lee Guinness, M.P.

The Portrait is from a photograph by Messrs. Chancellor and Son, of Dublin.

THE CHURCH.

Both Houses of Convocation will meet on Tuesday, Feb. 10, for the despatch of business.

A new organ, costing £1200, has been presented to Welshpool parish church by Lord Powis.

Colonel Brooksbank, J.P., has provided a peal of bells for St. Andrew's Church, Middleton, Yorkshire.

A carved oak pulpit has been erected in St. Andrew's Church, Redruth, to the memory of the late Dr. R. S. Hudson.

The Rev. E. H. Bickersteth, Vicar of Christ Church, Hampstead, has been appointed to the vacant deanery of Gloucester.

The Durham Diocesan Church Building Society's fund amounts to £34,000. It is intended to erect twenty-five new churches, and four have already been built.

The Temple Church is open to visitors daily (Saturdays excepted) from ten to one and from two to four o'clock. No fees are to be paid for viewing the church.

The Church of St. Matthew, Campfield, erected in 1824 from designs by Sir Charles Barry, was reopened last week, after renovation and enlargement at a cost of £1400.

At the annual general meeting of the Hospital Sunday Fund it was resolved that June 14 should be the Hospital Sunday in 1885. The total amount of the fund for 1884 was £35,329, and the working expenses had been £1236.

A new mission church has been opened at St. Mawes, near Falmouth, by the Bishop of Truro. The building is Early English in character, and has been erected, at a cost of £1500, from designs by the Rev. C. W. Carlyon, the Rector.

The controversy between the Chapter and the Restoration Committee of Peterborough Cathedral has been terminated by the former agreeing to the tower being raised a single stage of the Norman arcading, provided funds are forthcoming.

The golden wedding of the Bishop of Salisbury was celebrated on Monday and Tuesday, last week. The members of the prelate's family presented him with a gold cross. His Lordship, who is in his eighty-first year, is in excellent health.

The chancel of St. Andrew's Church, Ashley-place, Westminster, which has been closed now for some weeks, is to be reopened on Sunday (to-morrow). The new work includes a beautiful oak reredos, richly decorated. The pictures in the reredos were given by friends in memory of the late Mrs. William Paget, of Ashley-place.

The Bishop of Newcastle yesterday week consecrated a church dedicated to St. George, at Cullercoats, Newcastle, erected, at a cost of £21,000, "to the glory of God, and in memory of his beloved father, George, the fifth Duke of Northumberland, by Algernon George, sixth Duke of Northumberland," as stated in a tablet in the church.

The monument erected in St. John's Church, Westminster, to the memory of its late Rector was unveiled last week by Mrs. Wylie, in the presence of the committee, members of the clergy, and friends. The inscription is as follows:—"In memory of the Ven. John Jennings, M.A., Archdeacon of Westminster, for fifty-one years Rector of this parish. Died March 26, 1883, in the eighty-fifth year of his age."

The Sunday morning services in Westminster Abbey will be conducted as follows:—On the 4th, by the Rev. E. Price; on the 11th, by the Rev. J. Ll. Davies; on the 18th, by the Rev. Dr. Watson; and on the 25th, by the Rev. F. K. Harford. In the afternoons, the Rev. Canon Wescott will be the preacher. On Monday, the 12th, a Preparation Service for the West London Mission will be held. Holy communion at 7.30 a.m. Special service and address by the Rev. J. H. Lester at 7.30 p.m., in the Choir.

A beautiful window, by Meyer, of Munich, has been placed in the Cathedral of Cape Town in memory of the Right Rev. Henry Alexander Douglas, Bishop of Bombay, formerly Dean of Cape Town, by Miss Mary Aitken, the foundress of the St. George's Orphanage.—The fine old Norman church of Shoreham has received an addition to its painted glass of a window, from the studio of Mr. Taylor, of Berners-street, the gift of Dr. Harris Smith, the Vicar.—A handsome stained-glass window, representing the Angelic Host Adoring the Agnus Dei, has been placed in the Church of St. Michael, Louth. The funds were provided by the congregation as a memorial to a former parishioner and earnest church worker, and the design has been successfully carried out by Messrs. Mayer and Co.—Captain M. H. H. Bird, of East Somerton Hall, Norfolk, has presented a three-light stained-glass window, depicting the Ascension, to the church of Little Waltham, Chelmsford.

Baroness Willoughby has directed that £100 shall be distributed in blankets and coal amongst the poor on her Denbighshire and Carnarvonshire estates.

A "treat," consisting of a magic lantern entertainment, a concert, and other amusements, was provided on Monday night for the patients at the University College Hospital, by the Sisters and medical officers of the institution. Within the past year 26,894 patients have been relieved by the hospital, at a cost of £190,000, of which only £6000 was a trustworthy income from dividends and annual subscriptions. Stock has already had to be sold.

THE AFGHAN BOUNDARY COMMISSION.

A telegram of Dec. 19 from Major-General Sir Peter Lumsden, the British Commissioner for the survey and local definition of the north-west boundary of Afghanistan, now sojourning at Bala Murghab, between Herat and Maimene, reports that the party are all in good health, and that "the climate is perfect." They will have to wait about two months for the arrival of the Russian Commissioner, General Zelenny, before commencing the task, which is likely to occupy the whole of next year. The Ameer of Afghanistan has strongly protested against the Russian occupation of Puli Khatoun. We present two more Sketches by our Special Artist, Mr. William Simpson, who accompanies the British Commissioner in this interesting expedition. The journey from Teheran to Meshed, performed entirely on horseback, occupied twenty-nine days, from Oct. 2 to Oct. 31, the distance being, we suppose, about seven hundred miles. At Miandasht, on the boundary of the province of Khorassan, special tokens of consideration for the European travellers, who reached this place on Oct. 19, were provided by the Governor-General's orders. The scene of the "Korbanieh," represented in one of our Artist's Sketches given this week, is described by him as follows:—

"The word korbanieh means the act of sacrificing, and it seems to be a common ceremony practised in Persia. When any one is ill, a sheep is sacrificed to ensure recovery. On this occasion, when Sir Peter Lumsden was arriving at Miandasht, a number of people belonging to the place stood in a row on the left; and we saw three men in the middle of the road with a sheep. As we neared them, one of the men, who had a knife, cut the animal's throat, and severed the head, which he lifted, and throwing it high in the air, it fell at the side of the way. The right thing to do is to ride past between the body of the sheep and the head, which Sir Peter did, the people to the left bowing their heads and salaaming as he passed. We understand that, if the person in whose honour the sacrifice was performed had been a Persian, he would have stopped his horse close to the sheep, when it would have been killed close to the horse's feet, and some of the blood would have been sprinkled on the hoofs. The people understanding that this part of the operation might not have been agreeable on the present occasion, it was dispensed with. The ceremony was repeated next day on Sir Peter's arrival at Abbasabad. At none of the towns on our coming from Teheran was this done till the arrival at Miandasht. It may be assumed that the rite is a survival from the pre-Mohammedan period, for it does not seem to belong to the simplicity which characterises the worship of Islam."

The gentleman on the right of Sir Peter Lumsden in our Engraving is the Nawab Mirza Hassan Ali Khan, C.I.E.; and the rider on the left is the Special Artist of the Illustrated London News. The other Sketch now presented is that of the Reception of General Lumsden at Meshed on Oct. 31. Mr. Simpson writes of this:—"Sir Peter Lumsden arrived with his party, which consisted of Mr. Alexander Condie Stephen, Assistant Commissioner Captain Barrow, A.D.C., the Nawab Mirza-Hassan Ali Khan, and Mr. A. Finn, Consul of Resht. As they neared the Holy City of Meshed, officials of various ranks, accompanied by numerous attendants, rode out to meet the party. About two miles from the city, a carriage came up, with horsemen, foot-runners, and a numerous retinue. In the carriage were the Governor of Tabbas and Sertip (Colonel) Abdullah Khan. These officials came out, shook hands with Sir Peter, and invited him to ride in the vehicle, as it had been sent for him by the Governor-General. There were carriages for the rest of the party, and they all moved towards the city, accompanied by the large mass of people who had come out. The Governor-General had arranged a very handsome set of his own tents in a garden for Sir Peter Lumsden and the others of the party, a matter in which your Artist was not forgotten. A magnificent breakfast was ready, prepared by the Governor-General's cook; a military band was in attendance; the whole arrangement was quite princely in its character, and shows that the Governor-General of Khorassan wishes to be a friend. I had the pleasure of an interview with him, when he gave me a sitting for his portrait; Mr. Consul Finn went with me to interpret for me, and I found the Governor-General all that he is credited with for shrewdness and sagacity." The portraits of Abdul Wahab Khan, Governor-General of Khorassan, and those of other high official personages, appeared in our last.

We shall give further Illustrations of what our Artist saw in Khorassan, which is a country of much importance in the politics of Central Asia.

LIEUT.-COLONEL LABALMONDIERE, C.B.

The retirement of Colonel Labalmondière from the office of Assistant Commissioner of Police has caused a general feeling of regret among the members of the force, and this feeling is shared by the public. For more than a generation Colonel Labalmondière has been connected with Scotland-yard; and throughout his official career he has been distinguished for courage, energy, and sound judgment which have done good service, and have won him the esteem of all.

Colonel Labalmondière was educated first at Eton, and afterwards at Sandhurst, where he passed out first, with honours in three extra subjects. He joined the 83rd Foot in 1833, served in the Canadian Rebellion, and as a young ensign was thrice selected to carry despatches. Employed in 1848-9 in Ireland on special duty under the Poor Law Commissioners during the famine, he gave valuable evidence before committees of both Houses of Parliament on the subject; and it was on testimonials received from these services that, whilst serving with the 83rd in India, he was in 1850 appointed by Sir George Grey as Inspecting Superintendent of the Metropolitan Police, an office then just created. In 1856, when the staff of the police was reorganised, he was appointed Assistant Commissioner under Sir Richard Mayne, a post he has held ever since. During many years of this time, his responsibilities and duties were necessarily very arduous, and his frequent employment on special work brought him prominently before the London public, and earned for him the reputation of fearlessness of character and single-minded devotion to duty. His services, which in Army and Police amounted to upwards of fifty-one years, have been rewarded by the fullest admissible pension, and being created a Companion of the Bath.

The Portrait is from a photograph by Messrs. Maull and Fox, Piccadilly.

Miss Ormerod, the entomologist of the Royal Agricultural Society, has written a letter expressing her approval of the wholesale destruction of sparrows.

Boxing Day in London was observed in a manner which custom has prescribed for this celebration. The weather was dry, but cold. Outdoor recreation, as contrasted with other Bank holidays, gave way to indoor amusements. There were 25,780 visitors to the Crystal Palace, 9826 to the South Kensington Museum, about 4000 to the Tower, and large contingents to other national institutions open to the public.

THE COURT.

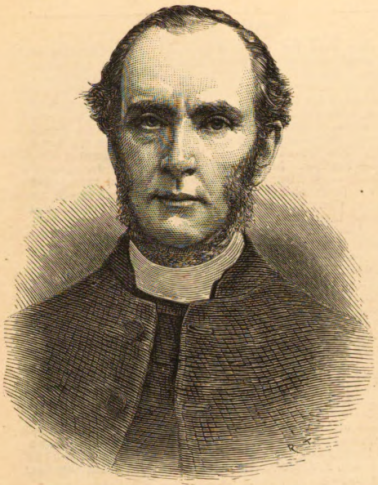
Yesterday week her Royal Highness Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, attended by Miss Emily Loch, arrived at Osborne. Major-General Du Plat met her Royal Highness at Portsmouth, in her Majesty's yacht Alberta, Captain Fullerton, and attended her to Osborne. The Queen and the Duchess of Albany drove out in the afternoon, attended by the Dowager Marchioness of Ely. Prince and Princess Louis and Prince Henry of Battenberg dined with her Majesty and the Royal family. The Queen went out on Saturday morning with Princess Beatrice. In the afternoon the Queen drove out with the Duchess of Albany, and afterwards visited Prince and Princess Louis of Battenberg, where they were joined by Princess Christian and Princess Beatrice. Prince and Princess Louis and Prince Henry of Battenberg, the Hon. Mrs. R. Moreton, Miss Emily Loch, and Sir William Jenner, K.C.B., were included in her Majesty's dinner party. On Sunday morning the Queen and the Duchess of Albany, Princess Christian and Princess Beatrice, and Prince and Princess Louis and Prince Henry of Battenberg, and the members of the Royal household attended Divine service. The Rev. Canon Duckworth officiated. The Queen drove out on Monday afternoon with Princess Christian and Princess Beatrice. Prince and Princess Louis and Prince Henry of Battenberg dined with her Majesty and the Royal family in the evening. Mr. W. A. White, C.B., her Majesty's Minister at Bucharest, arrived at Osborne, and, with Vice-Admiral De Horsey, had the honour of being invited to dine with her Majesty. On Tuesday morning the Queen went out with Princess Beatrice and Prince Henry of Battenberg. The Duchess of Albany walked out, attended by Mrs. R. Moreton. The Queen held a Council at Osborne, at which were present Lord Carlingford, the Right Hon. Sir Richard Couch, and the Right Hon. A. J. Mundella. Lord Carlingford had an audience of her Majesty.

It is officially announced that her Majesty has given her consent to the engagement of Princess Beatrice with Prince Henry of Battenberg, third son of Prince Alexander of Hesse, who is at present on a visit at Osborne. He is the younger brother of Prince Louis of Battenberg, who is married to the Queen's grand-daughter, Princess Victoria of Hesse, and also of the Prince of Bulgaria. Princess Beatrice, the fifth and youngest daughter of her Majesty, was born at Buckingham Palace on April 14, 1857, and was baptised on June 16 in the same year. Her Royal Highness received the Order of St. Catherine from the Emperor of Russia in May, 1874, and is a member of the Royal Order of Victoria and Albert, and a Lady of the Imperial Order of the Crown of India. Prince Henry Maurice of Battenberg was born on Oct. 5, 1858, and is a Lieutenant in the 1st Regiment of Prussian Guards.

The Prince and Princess of Wales, accompanied by Prince Albert Victor and Prince George and Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud, and attended by the ladies and gentlemen of the household, were present at Divine service at Sandringham parish church on Sunday morning. The Rev. F. Harvey, M.A., Chaplain to the Queen and Domestic Chaplain to the Prince and Princess of Wales, Rector of Sandringham, officiated, assisted by the Rev. J. Shephard, M.A., Sub-Dean of the Chapel Royal (St. James's), who also preached the sermon. In the evening the Prince and Princess, accompanied by Prince Albert Victor and Prince George, and by Princesses Louise, Victoria and Maud, were present at Divine service at Dersingham church, when the new organ, which has just been erected, was used for the first time. The service was performed by the Rev. E. W. Penny, the Vicar, assisted by the Rev. C. N. Kelly, Minor Canon of St. Paul's Cathedral, who likewise preached the sermon. An amateur dramatic performance which took place on Tuesday night in the new Sandringham Club-Room, in aid of the fund for the restoration of Wolferton church, was attended by the Prince and Princess and their family, and by a large number of the aristocracy of the county.

FASHIONABLE MARRIAGES.

On Tuesday, at Castle Ashby, near Northampton, Mr. Henry Graham was married to Lady Margaret Compton, second daughter of the Marquis of Northampton. The bridegroom was accompanied by Mr. R. Grenfell, Coldstream Guards, as best man. The Marquis gave his daughter away. The bridesmaids were Lady Mabel Compton, her sister, Miss Dallas Yorke, Miss Katie and Miss Mary Drummond, Miss Grenfell, and Miss Fane. The Dean of Worcester, uncle of the bride, officiated, assisted by the Rev. A. H. Cole-Hamilton, M.A., Rector of the parish. The service was choral.



The marriage of the Rev. Walter A. Moberly, younger son of the Bishop of Salisbury, to Miss Mary A. Ellacombe, daughter of the Rev. Canon Ellacombe, Vicar of Bitton, near Bristol, was celebrated on Tuesday at the Bitton parish church. There was a choral service, the officiating clergyman being the Rev. Robert Moberly, brother of the bridegroom. The bridesmaids were Miss Annie Moberly, daughter of the Bishop of Salisbury, and four sisters of the bride. The Bishop was unable to be present.

THE LATE M. BASTIEN LEPAGE.

A portrait, sketched by himself, of this clever and successful French artist, who has died at the early age of thirty-six, has been placed at our disposal by one of his friends, and is reproduced on another page. The pictures of M. Bastien Lepage were much noticed at the Paris exhibitions; and their merits, in the forcible realistic treatment of historical and romantic subjects, were appreciated by public taste in its present mood. One of his most famous works, and that which gained him a popular celebrity, was the picture of Joan of Arc, the devout and patriotic heroine of the French war of liberation in the fifteenth century, a solitary peasant girl meditating in an orchard, absorbed in the vision of her miraculous call to achieve the deliverance of her native land. The last important work of M. Lepage was of a kindred inspiration, representing the Hebrew woman Judith, who killed Holofernes, the commander of an invading enemy's army, visiting him in his tent and murdering him in his sleep, as is related in one of the Apocryphal books; she is depicted by the artist coming out of a fortress and descending a ladder, to walk alone to the besieging enemy's camp. These highly dramatic themes, conceived with an ideal exaggeration of the power of intense purpose in the female mind, seem congenial to French sentiment; and the minute exactness of detail in the paintings of M. Lepage produced a strong effect of reality, which was much admired.

The Pope has appointed Monsignor Butt Bishop Auxiliary of Portsmouth.

The City Wardmotes were held on Monday, but in most cases the retiring Councilmen were re-elected without opposition. At every meeting the proposal to deprive the City of two of its representatives in Parliament was condemned.

THE MOST REV LORD PLUNKET,
THE NEW ARCHBISHOP OF DUBLIN.

THE LATE M. BASTIEN LEPAGE, FRENCH ARTIST,
SKETCHED BY HIMSELF.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL LABALMONDIÈRE, C.B.,
LATE ASSISTANT COMMISSIONER OF THE METROPOLITAN POLICE.

RECEPTION OF SIR PETER LUMSDEN AT MESHED, THE CAPITAL OF KHORASSAN.

THE KORBANIEH OR SACRIFICE OF A SHEEP, ON SIR PETER LUMSDEN'S ARRIVAL AT MIANDASHT.

THE AFGHAN BOUNDARY COMMISSION: SKETCHES BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, MR. W. SIMPSON.

DRESSING FOR THE CHARADE. DRAWN BY E. J. WALKER.

PARISIAN SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Tuesday, Dec. 30.

The Parisians pride themselves on their artists, and in the modern Athens, which it is now becoming fashionable to call the modern Byzantium, a new book by a great writer, a new statue by a great sculptor, a new picture by a great painter, or a new play, becomes at once the event of the week and the absorbing centre of all public curiosity. In the press, everything is sacrificed to long preparatory articles, and everybody would wish to be amongst the privileged mortals who have the first sight or hearing of the new work. Never has this laudable curiosity been roused to a higher pitch than by the announcement of a new play by the most versatile and popular of the dramatists of the day, M. Sardou. In "Theodora," which was produced with great success at the Porte Saint-Martin on Friday last M. Sardou has attempted a reconstruction of Byzantium in the sixth century, with its artistic splendour, composed of Greek elegance combined with Asiatic richness and profusion of colour and ornament, with its turbulent populace, its chariot-races, its circus factions, its luxury and corruption, its Emperor Justinian and its courtezan Empress Theodora. In a series of tableaux, which might be called a dramatic panorama rather than an ordinary drama, M. Sardou has introduced us successively to the audience chamber of the Palace, where the Empress, reclining voluptuously on a divan-throne, receives ambassadors and dignitaries of State; to the labyrinths of the vast hippodrome, where we see a motley crowd of lion-tamers, gladiators, dancing-girls, and "swells" of the period, and where the Empress herself comes incognita to get a whiff of that odour of wild beasts and tights which reminds her of her old triumphs when she was Zoe, the circus-rider, the delight of Alexandria; to the house of Andreas, the Greek who dreams of liberating the Byzantines from empire and establishing a republic after the manner of Plato; to the garden of Styrax, with its laurel roses and distant view of the blue sea and the coast of Asia; to the imperial tribune at the hippodrome, where we see the Emperor and the Empress enthroned with unparalleled splendour; to the crypt of the palace; to the view of Constantinople in flames; and, finally, back to the belluarium of the hippodrome, where the Empress dies in the atmosphere in which she was born. Never before has such a splendid panorama been seen on the Parisian stage; the scenery, the costumes, the grouping of the characters, the general effects, as well as all the details, are of dazzling magnificence, and at the same time in perfect taste and most harmoniously composed. No one better than M. Sardou knows how to take advantage of all the resources of the arts accessory to scenic effect; and in "Theodora" he has carried all these arts to their highest pitch, and made them serve to the utmost extent the expression of the dramatist's idea. The framework may, perhaps, be found even too grandiose and too vast for the dramatic action which it surrounds and often eclipses, and for that reason I have spoken of "Theodora" as a "dramatic panorama," and referred to the splendour of the spectacle before analysing the plot.

The action of Theodora is dissipated over eight tableaux, and, from the old point of view of dramatic composition, it is rather lost in these tails, many of the tableaux, interesting enough in themselves, serve only to explain the manners and customs of the epoch, and to contribute towards the panoramic reconstruction of Old Byzantium. In a word, the plot is this. The Empress Theodora, while wandering about the streets of her capital one night, falls into the arms of a young Greek, Andreas, and is smitten with a violent and exclusive love for him. For her lover she is, of course, not the Empress; she is simply Myrta, a virtuous widow, and Andreas tells his friends that he is about to marry her. During a love scene, Myrta discovers that Andreas is plotting to deprive her husband, Justinian, and herself of empire and liberty, and that he is full of hatred and contempt for that infamous Theodora whom he has never seen. At the Hippodrome Andreas recognises Myrta in the Empress, insults her publicly, is arrested, and about to be executed; but the Empress intervenes, and he escapes, and puts himself at the head of the revolt. The battle is furious, half Constantinople is burnt, but the empire is victorious, and the rebellion drowned in a sea of blood. Andreas is wounded, and lies hidden in the belluarium of the hippodrome; Theodora goes to see him; he spurns and insults her; Theodora, thinking to give him a love potion, gives him poison, and while she is rolling in despair on the corpse of her lover, the executioner arrives with orders from Justinian to strangle her. The Emperor has discovered the treachery of his wife. In this hasty analysis I have only touched upon the main points of the plot, but were I to relate the piece in detail I should want two or three columns; for, as I have already intimated, it is overcharged with detail, and with scenes and situations needing minute explanation. Let it suffice to say that certain scenes are very striking and novel, notably the love scene interrupted by the singing of the lampoon against the Empress, and the scene in the imperial tribune. The rôle of Theodora is admirably suited for Sarah Bernhardt, who is by turns a saint, a Semiramis, a Delilah, a Valerie, and a Lucrezia Borgia.

As if to make room for the absorbing topic of the new play, politics this week have been uninteresting, and few have paid attention to the discussion of the Budget of 1885. As has been the case during the past six or seven years, the financial situation remains irregular, and the Session has closed with a vote authorising the Government to take, provisionally, a milliard out of the receipts. The reckoning will come later. And now the politicians will have to devote all their attention to the forthcoming Senatorial elections, which are destined to show, in a striking manner, which way the public opinion is inclining. On Sunday, at a Revolutionary meeting held at the Salle Levis, a curious phenomenon occurred: the audience divided into two camps, elected two presidents and two bureaux, and then proceeded to blackguard each other and fight. The two camps consisted of Anarchists and Blanquists—that is to say, followers of Blanqui; and the latter were qualified by their adversaries as "Reactionaries"!

The Boulevards and all the great thoroughfares are at present occupied by booths, and sellers of all kinds of objects—toys, penny whistles, sewing-machines, old iron, and everything that can be imagined. This is the "Foire aux étrennes," or New-Year's fair, where the Parisians of modest purses buy their little presents for children and parents, presents which are accompanied by the traditional good wishes of "Bonne année, bonne santé!" T. C.

An earthquake in Spain on Thursday night, last week, caused great loss of life. Some small towns and villages in Andalusia were almost destroyed; and the panic in Granada, Malaga, and Seville was so great that the inhabitants, apprehending further shocks, encamped in the open air. Further shocks of earthquakes are reported, and the town of Alhama, in Granada, has been destroyed, 300 persons having been killed. It is believed that 900 persons are buried beneath the ruins of the town of Albunuelas. A landslip on a mountain near Periana, Malaga, has destroyed a number of houses, whence thirty dead bodies and eighteen injured persons have been taken. The details received of the mischief done by the earthquake show that more than 1000 lives have been lost, and that two towns have been destroyed, besides numbers of buildings in towns and in the country. The Madrid Mercantile Association has opened a national fund for the relief of the sufferers from the earthquake. The King has subscribed 10,000f. Subscriptions have also been opened in Malaga and Granada, and tents have been dispatched for the use of the houseless. The King has telegraphed to the governors of Malaga and Granada, placing £400 at the disposal of each of them for the relief of the distress.

The Portuguese Prime Minister has submitted to the Chamber of Deputies the draught of certain proposed reforms in the Constitution of that kingdom. The chief proposal is that the Chamber of Peers shall in future be composed of one hundred life Peers appointed by the King and fifty elected by an indirect process.

The Standard correspondent at New York says that Governor Cleveland has promised when he assumes the Presidency to make no political removals from the Civil Service, except those who have abused their offices for partisan purposes.

The annual winter carnival at Montreal, this month, seems likely to eclipse any previous fête in America. The ice palace, which is always one of the great attractions of the week, will be this winter of striking dimensions. It is to be 160 ft. long and 120 ft. broad, and the towers of solid ice will rise to the height of 100 ft. It is also proposed to utilise the St. Lawrence extensively in the forthcoming carnival, by laying out drives, trotting tracks, and skating and curling rinks on the ice. The citizens hope to secure the presence of Prince Albert Victor of Wales during the carnival.

The Ontario Legislature will meet for the dispatch of business on Jan. 28 next.

The Standard correspondent at Durban telegraphs that the 4th Hussars, the Welsh Regiment, and the Highlanders, with a force of Artillery, are to be stationed at Newcastle, in view of possible troubles in Bechuanaland and the Transvaal. The principal burghers of Stellaland have met Mr. Rhodes, the Deputy-Commissioner for Bechuanaland, and promised him not to offer him any opposition to the passage of British troops through their territory.

An official announcement has been published at Berlin confirming the report that the German flag has been hoisted at several points of New Guinea and the New Britain Archipelago.—We learn from Melbourne that the Hon. James Service, the Premier of Victoria, has invited the Governments of the other Australian Colonies to unite in protesting against the German annexations in the Pacific.

The Agent-General for Queensland received on Tuesday the following telegram:—"McNeil Williams commuted sentence to penal servitude for life; five years in irons. Parliament prorogued. Governor yesterday. Loan, Defence, and seventh Minister Bills passed." Hugh McNeil and Bernard Williams were respectively second mate and boatswain of the labour-schooner Hopeful, and were convicted of shooting natives who were attempting to escape a kidnapping crew.

DRESSING FOR THE CHARADE.

Human nature, in spite of prohibitory and repressive notions of a mistaken preciseness in morality, which confounds innocent illusion with deceit, will never cease to delight in the mimetic representation of imaginary characters and actions. The pleasure of such attempts is closely akin to that artistic impulse which inspires the creations of poetry and romance and the works of the painter and the sculptor; and one of its most wholesome exercises is the representation of domestic and social comedy. This cheerful entertainment is particularly agreeable to children, whose lively sense of humour, and quick observation and imitation of the manners of their elders, may often find harmless indulgence in performing simple little plays, turning upon an accidental mistake or embarrassing situation, without any suggestion of evil. Those who are never taken to the theatres, as is the case with many respectable families bred in strict religious opinions, are not the least willing and able to join in diversions of this kind; and the institution of Acted Charades has brought out a high degree of native talent among young ladies who would not think of disregarding parental scruples by desiring leave to accept an invitation to a box at the Court Theatre or at the Savoy. It is surprising how naturally the art of acting comes to intelligent young persons, more especially to girls, without any opportunity of witnessing its formal public performances, or any knowledge of critical rules and standards; even small children, if they are not shy and timid, will in an extemporised drawing-room or nursery performance show a wonderful vivacity and truth of expression. The merry little company whom our Artist has delineated in their nursery, putting on a variety of queer disguises, hats, big coats, shawls, collars, and neckerchiefs, one marking his upper lip with a moustache, others handling an umbrella or a walking-cane, to make an effective appearance before the Christmas party of relations and friends, seem perfectly happy. There is a word of two syllables to be guessed, one syllable at a time, from the scenes which are to be enacted; the first syllable, for aught we can see, may require that a lady and gentleman walking out together, should be caught in the "Rain," and it is well that she takes her umbrella, but they will affect the greatest discomfort and alarm when the shower is supposed to fall as they pass through the street to their shopping. It may further be conjectured that the intended second syllable is "Bow"; and that the pretty boy with the Cavalier locks, who is just now decorating his face by the aid of a hand-mirror, will then present himself as a "Beau" of the Court of Charles II., exhibiting some feats of high-flown gallantry more or less in the polite fashion of that time. They will amuse themselves, at any rate, and some of the elder folk will be pleased.

Mr. Wallis has had the honour of submitting for the inspection of the Prince and Princess of Wales, the paintings by Professor L. Müller and Carl Heffner, now on exhibition at the French Gallery, 120, Pall-mall; and Princess Louise (Marchioness of Lorne) has honoured Mr. Thomson by visiting his studio, Grosvenor-street, and inspecting his photographs, portraits, and copies of the Old Masters.

At a public meeting on Monday the Mayor of Newcastle (Alderman Stephenson), on behalf of the Shipwrecked Fishermen and Mariners' Royal Benevolent Society, presented a regulation aneroid barometer and a purse containing £16 to Captain Aird, a silver medal and a purse containing £4 to Mr. Munro, chief mate; and £2 10s. each to four of the crew of the English barque Marlborough, for rescuing the crew of a Norwegian vessel in the Atlantic on Nov. 4 last. The Norwegian ship had lain waterlogged for four days when the men of the Marlborough, in a rough sea and at great peril to their own lives, put off to them and rescued all on board.

OBITUARY.

THE EARL OF MORTON.

The Right Hon. Sholto John Douglas, twentieth Earl of Morton, Lord Dalkeith, Aberdour, and Douglas, of Lochleven, in the Peerage of Scotland, a Scottish Representative Peer, who died on the 24th ult., was born April 13, 1818, the eldest son of the nineteenth Lord, by Frances Theodora, sister of the present Lord Strathnairn. He was formerly a Lieutenant in the 11th Hussars and Colonel of the Midlothian Yeomanry. He married, first, January, 1844, Helen, daughter of the late Mr. James Watson, of Saughton; and secondly, 1853, Alice Aline Caroline, daughter of the first Earl of Durham. By the former, who died 1850, he leaves one son, Sholto George Lord Aberdour, now twenty-first Earl of Morton, born Nov. 5, 1844, who is married to the Hon. Helen Gertrude Ponsonby, and has issue. The deceased Peer succeeded his father July 12, 1879, and represented a distinguished branch of the illustrous house of Douglas.

SIR H. V. STONHOUSE, BART.

Sir Henry Vansittart Stonhouse, fifteenth Baronet, of Radley, Berks, died at Trial, U.S.A., on Nov. 13, aged fifty-seven. He was only son of Sir Timothy Vansittart Stonhouse, fourteenth Baronet, and succeeded his father Jan. 30, 1866. He was formerly Lieutenant 94th Regiment, and A.D.C. to Sir Henry Pottinger, Governor of Madras. He married, June 18, 1851, Charlotte, fourth daughter of Mr. John Beatty West, M.P. for the county of Dublin, and by her (who died Aug. 21, 1857) leaves one surviving son, now Sir Ernest Hay Stonhouse, sixteenth Baronet.

DR. LENTAIGNE.

The Rev. Joseph Lentaigne, S.J., M.A., Trinity College, Dublin, died on the 23rd ult. This estimable and accomplished divine, distinguished for his brilliant classical attainments, was born July 27, 1805, the second son of Dr. Benjamin Lentaigne, a scion of the ancient noblesse of France, who emigrated to England during the French Revolution (in which his two eldest brothers, staunch Royalists, were guillotined), and he settled in Dublin, where his eldest son, Sir John Lentaigne, C.B., a Commissioner of National Education, and for many years Inspector-General of Prisons, still resides, universally respected and beloved for his many good works, more especially for his admirable management of the Reformatory and Industrial Schools. Dr. Lentaigne was educated at Clongowes and at Trinity College, Dublin. His University career was most successful. He won many honours, and, several times, the Chancellor's prize. He was called to the Bar in 1827, and joined the North-East Circuit; but in a few years became a Jesuit, being afterwards appointed Rector of Clongowes College, and, in 1858, Principal of the Order in Ireland. Some time after, he visited Australia to found the Mission there.

SIR G. RODNEY MUNDY.

Admiral of the Fleet Sir George Rodney Mundy, G.C.B., who died recently, was the second son of General Godfrey Basil Mundy (of the Mundys of Shipley), by the Hon. Sarah Brydges, his wife, youngest daughter of the celebrated Admiral, Lord Rodney. He served at the siege of Antwerp, in the Baltic, during Russian War; subsequently on the Mediterranean, North American, and West Indian Stations; and at Portsmouth, as Commander-in-Chief, 1872-5.

MR. CONINGHAM.

Mr. William Coningham, for many years M.P. for Brighton, died on the 20th ult., at Kemptown, aged seventy. He was son of the Rev. Robert Coningham, of the county of Londonderry, and was, in early life, in the 1st Light Dragoons. In 1847 he unsuccessfully contested Brighton, and in 1852 the city of Westminster; but in 1857 he secured his first election for the former, always supporting Liberal measures. He married, in 1840, Elizabeth, daughter of the Rev. William Meyrick.

We have also to record the deaths of—

The Rev. W. Lindsay Alexander, D.D., F.R.S., Edinburgh, the author of several theological works, aged seventy-six.

Mr. John Samuel Bowles, of Milton Hill, Berks, J.P. and D.L., High Sheriff 1852, on Christmas Day, aged sixty-nine.

Mr. James Balfour (the father of Mr. Spencer Balfour, M.P.), an old and stanch Liberal, recently, at the age of eighty-eight years.

The Rev. William Parker, M.A., one of the oldest beneficed clergymen in England, in his ninety-second year, having held Comberford Rectory, near Pershore, for fifty-eight years.

The Right Rev. Dr. Fuller, recently, in Canada, at the age of seventy-five. He was Archdeacon of Toronto from 1867-75, in which latter year he was appointed first Bishop of Niagara.

The Marquis de Fortunato, on the 28th ult., at his lodgings in Pall-mall. The Marquis was well known in diplomatic circles from his residence in London as the accredited servant and friend of the ex-King and Queen of the Two Sicilies.

Dr. William Marshall, who was for several years the medical attendant of the Queen and Court, on the 29th ult. At his funeral, near Crieff, Perthshire, on Tuesday, Dr. Profeit attended, by command of the Queen, and laid on the coffin wreaths of immortelles sent by her Majesty and Princess Beatrice.

Mr. Rothery concluded an inquiry at Aberdeen last Saturday into the cause of the foundering of the steamer Thames, on a voyage from Aberdeen to Drontheim, and the loss of thirteen lives. The judgment of the Court was to the effect that the loss of the ship was due to her having been overladen, unseaworthy, and scantily manned.

The Postmaster-General has issued the following notification:—On and after Jan. 1, 1885, forms of certificate will lie on the Post Office counters, and anyone bringing a parcel to post, if he desire a certificate, may fill up one of these forms with the name and address of the person to whom the parcel is directed, when it will be the duty of the officer in attendance to stamp the form with the office stamp. This certificate, it must be clearly understood, does not indicate that any liability attaches to the Postmaster-General in the event of loss or damage. A list of parcels, where more than one parcel is brought by the same person, may be similarly prepared beforehand, or at the counter by the person posting the parcels, and presented to be stamped with the office stamp. This will obviate the necessity in such cases of filling up a separate form in respect to each parcel.

NEW BOOKS.

A few delicate illustrations give additional charm to A Lady's Ride Across Spanish Honduras: by Maria Soltera (William Blackwood and Sons), a volume sufficiently charming as a narrative merely, though it would have been all the better for a little map, if not a little index also, and though the last few extracts from the lady's journal are naught. The great charm of the narrative is its perfect ingenuousness; it is a simple story of a perilous journey (perilous, that is, for a "lone woman") courageously undertaken and accomplished, of a bitter disappointment after all, of faith misplaced, and, nevertheless, of the spirit of suspicion exorcised by the kindness met with in quarters where the recipient had no reason to expect more than conventional expressions of sympathy, a smooth stone instead of bread. The lady, an English gentlewoman of good connections, a governess by profession, with a very small amount of capital, was tempted to make the long and costly, as well as the adventurous and even dangerous pilgrimage from Sydney, New South Wales, to San Pedro Sula, Honduras, and found that she had been lured on by false pretences to take the principal part in what may, without offensive allusion, be called a wild-goose chase. It really turned out that a reverend gentleman, who was "given to liquor," and who may or may not have had a right to the style and title he had adopted, had thought it worth his while to bring the lady all that long distance in order to make a good thing out of her, as he hoped, and out of the little money she evidently possessed. She was to have the superintendence of a school which was "being erected for the colonists' children at San Pedro Sula," a guaranteed salary, and a "plantation": what she got was a very hard and by no means safe ride over hundreds of miles, a severe blow in the face (figuratively), a taste of semi-starvation, a touch of fever, a heavy pecuniary loss, and a hint that the best thing she could do was to return to the spot whence she came. Readers will sympathise heartily with her; but, from one point of view, will not be sorry for the chance thus given her of telling a pitiful story; and they will learn something that may or may not astonish them about British enterprise and honesty (or the contrary) in the matter of the Honduras Railway. Spanish Honduras, of course, is meant; British Honduras is "another pair of shoes" altogether.

Whenever a book—especially a book of travel—has an index, the fact should be conspicuously and gratefully recorded; and so much may be predicated of All Round Spain: by F. H. Deverell (Sampson Low and Co.), which is a very pleasant and interesting volume written by a gentleman who, luckily for his readers, "wanted" to do a great many things and see a great many places, and insisted upon satisfying his many wants, or not a few of them. He "wanted" to make up for what he had missed on former trips to Spain; he "wanted" to be "present at the 'Tribunal of waters,' at Valencia," to "see Elche, the City of Palms," to visit "our wonderful possession, Gibraltar," as well as "several places in Spain lying in that direction," such as Tarifa, with its women covered, as to the face, "in the Arab style," to "prospect" Estremadura, and "to inquire about the locusts said to swarm there," and about other more or less interesting matters, to go to Astorga and inspect "that curious race of people called Maragatos," and, further, to examine "the celebrated pass of Roncesvalles, and the curious little republic of Andorra." There were, moreover, many other things that he "wanted" to do; and he seems to have done them all. Thus, he journeyed by anything but the straightest and shortest road into Spain, turning away from the direct route, because he "wanted to see" a French place or so, such as Avignon. As regards Spain itself, his course took him north, south, east, and west, so that there is not much exaggeration about the title he has chosen, a title which will be amply justified in the eyes of any reader who takes the pleasure rather than the trouble of consulting the auxiliary map. For so complete is the volume, that there is stowed away in a pocket (let into one of the covers) a most elaborate map with a conspicuous red line to mark the circuitous nature of the author's travels. The tour, as it is most appropriately termed, was a very interesting one, a fact which the hints already given will suffice to make clear to the most exacting and suspicious of readers; and it is very probable that the author's manner of relating his experience will meet with general and cordial approbation. He concludes with a statement of the apprehensions which appear to have been continually occurring to him and spoiling his enjoyment; apprehensions concerning the friends he had left behind him, with whom he found it impossible to keep up communication, and who, when he returned home, might have been sleeping their last sleep for a comparatively long, long while without a word of information to keep him from cherishing vain hopes. Such apprehensions, no doubt, are felt by all travellers occasionally; though they are seldom expressed in books of travel. In these days of universal newspapers, however, it is pretty certain that, if "anything should happen" to any friend or acquaintance, you will have had at least the opportunity of becoming enlightened before you reach home again. This, of course, is but cold comfort; for we must, many of us, have known what it is to see some sad announcement in the columns of a newspaper read in solitude—or worse, among a throng of people who "knew not Joseph"—at a foreign inn, without a soul to understand or sympathise.

More seasonable fare than Mr. A. H. Bullen has provided in A Christmas Garland (Nimmo) it will be difficult to find. The beautiful volume—for beautiful it assuredly is, in form as well as substance—consists of carols and poems, from the fifteenth century to the present time, with seven illustrations, quaint as the songs themselves, designed by Mr. Henry Wells. Mr. Bullen writes modestly of his book as the work of idle moments, and as laying little claim to research. It does, however, exhibit the fruits of considerable reading and of scholarly taste. The editor is a master of his subject, and writes of it with the poetical feeling that is even a rarer gift than antiquarian knowledge. In the earliest carols there is a homeliness and simplicity which may offend readers who can tolerate Ouida and, perhaps, Zola. Yet the atmosphere of these plain-speaking songs is of the rarest purity. They come from the heart, and appeal to it, when the way is not choked up by the thorns and briers of conventional propriety. The reader accustomed to more artificial strains may not see the beauty of these songs at first, but it will grow upon him by degrees; and possibly he will look with something like regret to the old-world days when verses so pure and quaint were household words in England. No doubt it is a dream to imagine that the England of the fifteenth century was a happier or a better country than the much-troubled and overworked land we know so well; but there was in those days an appearance, to say the least, of simplicity and jollity, that has vanished with the complex civilisation of which we are all so proud. Mr. Bullen's selection is divided into three parts—Christmas Chants and Carols, Carmina Sacra, and Christmas Customs and Christmas Cheer. The first part is the least familiar and the most interesting. Here are dainty lines, indeed, for readers who have ears tuned for them. If they look, for instance, at the "perfect little poem" on page 4; at the piece beginning "The moon shines bright," on page 58; or at the lovely carol, justly praised by the editor, "As Joseph was a-walking," page 31, they will catch what one may call the key-note of these old carols. The editor inserts also, under this section, several poems of modern birth, the best of which, to our thinking, is Miss Christina Rossetti's "In the bleak mid-winter." We scarcely know why, under Part II., Mr. Bullen seems to think it necessary to apologise for inserting Milton's great "Ode on the Nativity," which contains some of the noblest stanzas to be found in this volume. His remarks upon Henry Vaughan, one of the best of our sacred poets, are eminently just. Vaughan's little volume, Silex Scintillans, of which a beautiful edition was published by Pickering nearly forty years ago, contains poetry of a finer order than the Temple of Herbert; yet the one poet is still popular, while the other is comparatively unknown. Two poems by Jeremy Taylor suffice to show how the genius of this splendid writer deserted him when he chose to cripple his free hand by composing verse. Ben Jonson, and Herrick who belonged to the tribe of Ben, are both represented here; and, under the heading Christmas Customs and Christmas Cheer, George Wither, one of the most fluent of poets, is seen to great advantage; but we must not dwell on the varied contents of a book which suggests not a few topics for criticism and comment. It is not a book to borrow, but one to buy; not a book for the drawing-room only, but one which merits a permanent place on the shelves of the library.

Railways nowadays sometimes bring civilisation and barbarism into close contact. An illustration of this fact may be seen in a remarkable volume, by Captain John G. Bourke, entitled The Snake-Dance of the Moquis of Arizona (Sampson Low). The country inhabited by this strange tribe of Indians lies west of the boundary line between New Mexico and Arizona, and between sixty and seventy miles south of the Grand Colorado. The Moquis occupy seven villages, and are known to have held their present position from the middle of the sixteenth century. If we cannot agree with Captain Bourke that they are "one of the most interesting peoples in the world," we must admit that they are one of the strangest. Every chapter in this volume is deserving of attention; but we must be content to strike at once into the heart of the narrative. There can be no doubt that the snake-dance of the Moquis has a religious signification, and is associated with the early traditions of the tribe. Captain Bourke was present at the great festival, and was told that he had seen what no stranger had ever seen before. The snake-charmers belong to a secret order, and the art they practise has never been explained. They have, it is said, medicines which they use either to tame the snakes or to render their bites innocuous, and they quiet them with rods tipped with eagles' feathers. The writer's statements with regard to drugging the snakes are a little contradictory. In one place he hints that something may be administered prior to the dance, while in another he affirms that no steps had been taken to make them harmless, and that when on the ground they often frightened the crowd of spectators by coiling themselves up to spring. Very dangerous serpents could only be managed by old and well-practised charmers, but most of the reptiles were grasped by little boys behind the head, and fearlessly carried in this way. In some of the dances several hundred venomous snakes are used, the men holding them in their hands or between their teeth, and performing the wildest antics while in this perilous position. Before the festival, Captain Bourke entered the "Estufa," where the reptiles were herded, and there he watched the men, who were "dressed" in paint, lifting the snakes, stepping upon them with their naked feet, or carrying them suspended from between their teeth. While writing down what he witnessed on the spot, the American traveller turned round, and to his horror saw a man leaning over him, and "holding in his hand the biggest snake in the whole collection, a rattler, not less than five feet. The assurance that no harm would come to me down among those Indians so long as I remained perfectly quiet and did just as they did was strongly fixed in my mind, but hardly strong enough to keep me from running up the ladder in a panic." The picture given of the naked, painted men, with heads crowned with scarlet feathers, and faces coloured black, while the neck is of a ghastly white, rattles clanking at the knees, and, to crown all, the deadly snakes held in hand and mouth, and "squirming to free themselves from restraint," is as strange as it is vivid. Verily we live in a strange world! The Moquis reside within the boundaries of the United States, and practise their horrid art at a distance of less than seventy miles from the Atlantic and Pacific railroad.

The Crown Prince of Austria is well known as a great lover of travel and of sport. A beautiful looking and brightly written volume just published, entitled Travels in the East, including a Visit to Egypt and the Holy Land (Bentley and Son), does credit to the ability and indomitable energy of his Imperial and Royal Highness. He was accompanied by his uncle, the Grand Duke of Tuscany, and, which is a fact more important to his readers, by the artist Pausinger, who contributes more than ninety illustrations to the work. Possibly, many persons who take it up will find these drawings more attractive than the letterpress. The Prince writes with ease and vivacity. He shows much acuteness of observation and faculty of description. Occasionally there is a vein of sentiment in the narrative appropriate to the scenes he witnessed, but the writer's chief enjoyment is in sport; and wherever he goes the most prominent portion of the story is devoted to his achievements as a sportsman. When in Egypt, no opportunity was lost of following his favourite pursuit; and he records how, in the province of Fayum, in a hunting excursion of four days and a half, his party shot two lynx, seven wolves, two ichneumon, two desert hares, four pelicans, two river eagles, one carrion vulture, one African eagle buzzard, and one hundred and seventy-two head of small game. On one occasion the Prince carried a wolf upon his back; on another, in order to allure vultures, he led a sheep out into the wilderness, stabbed and disembowelled it. When his steamer stopped at Luxor, the Prince, with his companions, rode on donkeys to Karnak. "I had taken a live hen with me," he writes, "and seated myself beside one of the ancient ponds enjoying the beauty of the evening. I pinched the hen perpetually, in order that its cry might attract the wild beasts. Unfortunately, instead of jackals, some Englishmen came, who looked at me with astonishment." Which, we may add, was not surprising under the circumstances. In the Holy Land, too, Prince Rudolph indulges his ruling passion; and one evening, when the setting sun was lighting up Bethlehem, the sportsman was occupied in putting strychnine on a dead donkey in the hope of poisoning a hyæna. Sad to relate, on returning the next morning the donkey had disappeared, having been carried off, it is conjectured, by a Syrian bear. The neighbourhood of Bethlehem does not seem to have been a good sporting ground; but the Prince, thanks to his strychnine, succeeded in securing a hyæna, and also shot a jackal and a stork. It is scarcely necessary to add that several of the drawings illustrate this feature of the volume.

Dr. Johnson never made a greater critical blunder than in his estimate of the poet Gray; yet there was doubtless a grain of truth in one of his perverse statements. Gray, he said, was a "barren rascal"; and assuredly, if this poet's work is precious, it is but slight in quantity. In The Works of Thomas Gray in Prose and Verse, edited by Edmund Gosse, in four volumes (Macmillan), we have, for the first time, a complete issue of his writings. Mr. Gosse's competence for the task will be questioned by no one familiar with his monograph of Gray—one of the most masterly biographies in the series of "English Men of Letters." Gray once confessed he did not write more because he could not. His vein was soon exhausted, and the account of the poems he produced shows how little there was of spontaneity in his work. The "Elegy," for example, which is perhaps the most popular poem in the language, was begun in the autumn of 1742, taken in hand again six years later, and finished in 1750. "The Bard" was begun in 1754, worked upon fitfully until the autumn of 1755, and completed in 1757. There is, we believe, no instance of his composing any important poem on the inspiration of the moment, as Burns wrote his "Tam o' Shanter" or Byron his "Prisoners of Chillon." Extreme labour and toilsome elaboration are Gray's method; which, if it does not become the critic to grumble at, since the result is so attractive, shows at least that he did not possess the fecundity of genius which surprises and delights us in the greatest poets. As a prose writer, Gray has many claims on attention. He is a masterly critic, he may be almost said to have discovered for his countrymen the picturesque in nature—to Johnson, mountains were but protuberances—and as a letter writer he ranks with the best in our language, with his friend Horace Walpole, with Cowper, and with Byron. The recluse scholar of Pembroke was probably the most learned man of his day; in ours he lives as a great classic, secure in the "fit audience" a poet loves. Mr. Gosse has done all that knowledge and diligence can do in building up this monument to Gray's genius, and every lover of English literature should place these volumes on his shelves. Of matter actually unprinted before, this edition contains comparatively little, but it is no small boon to have Gray's complete works, edited with the utmost care, and in a form which will gladden the eye of the book-lover.

Mrs. Emma Marshall is an adept at the art of story-telling, and her latest tale, In the East Country with Sir Thomas Browne, Knt. (Seeley and Co.), will delight all readers whom her writings please. It needs a delicate and skilful hand to blend fact and fiction as the writer has done here, and how far she has correctly depicted the family life of the eloquent author of the "Religio Medici" we cannot pretend to say. Some trouble Mrs. Marshall seems to have taken to be true to the time and to the man. She has read much, but she has imagined more. The heroine, Amphyllis, is a purely fictitious character; and of the heroes, for there are two, Tom Browne, the younger, belongs in this narrative more to the author than to history; while the Puritan, Andrew Whitelock, like his kinswoman the beautiful Amphyllis, is a creation of the novelist. The story is well told. Some critics and writers of fiction have lately discovered that a plot does not signify, and that the delineation of character is the one thing necessary for success. The notion receives a practical contradiction from works of almost every distinguished novelist, and he must be either a very powerful or a very bold writer who prefers analysis to action. Mrs. Marshall's rôle is a modest one. She tries to make her characters distinct, and her plot interesting; and if no special art is displayed, her aim is successful. The pathos is unaffected, and for some of the personages who play their part on the little stage the reader's whole sympathy is awakened. Hardened though a reviewer needs must be to the sorrows of a novelist's puppets, we confess that this simple tale has touched our feelings far more than many a work of more pretension and ability. In the East Country is not a book for children, but no youth or maiden in the happy spring-time of life will read it without interest, and some, perhaps, not wholly with dry eyes.

"Books," said Kingsley, "are precious heirlooms from one generation to another," and his own books, poetical in feeling, wise in thought, and full of the writer's vitality, will not readily be forgotten. Daily Thoughts Selected from the Writings of Charles Kingsley: by his Wife (Macmillan and Co.), contains passages from MS. note-books and private letters, as well as from his published works. The volume is choicely printed, and there is a thought for every day in the year. Blank spaces are left for the reader's memoranda, which is, we think, a blunder. The book is too good to be used as a diary, and the bulk of the volume is doubled by this unfortunate arrangement. However, readers will doubtless be found in abundance who will find no difficulty in jotting down their fancies, purposes, and engagements, face to face with the genial and suggestive thoughts of the author of "The Saint's Tragedy."

A small volume of simple and graceful poems, bearing the title Listen! Poems for the Children's Hour, by J. E. Panton, author of "Country Sketches in Black and White," &c., has been published by Messrs. Wells Gardner, Darton, and Co. The author takes as her themes mostly natural objects and domestic joys and sorrows, many pleasant glimpses of pleasant home life being given. Besides a charming frontispiece by Mr. Frith, R.A., there are dainty outline illustrations by Messrs. Miles and Pym.

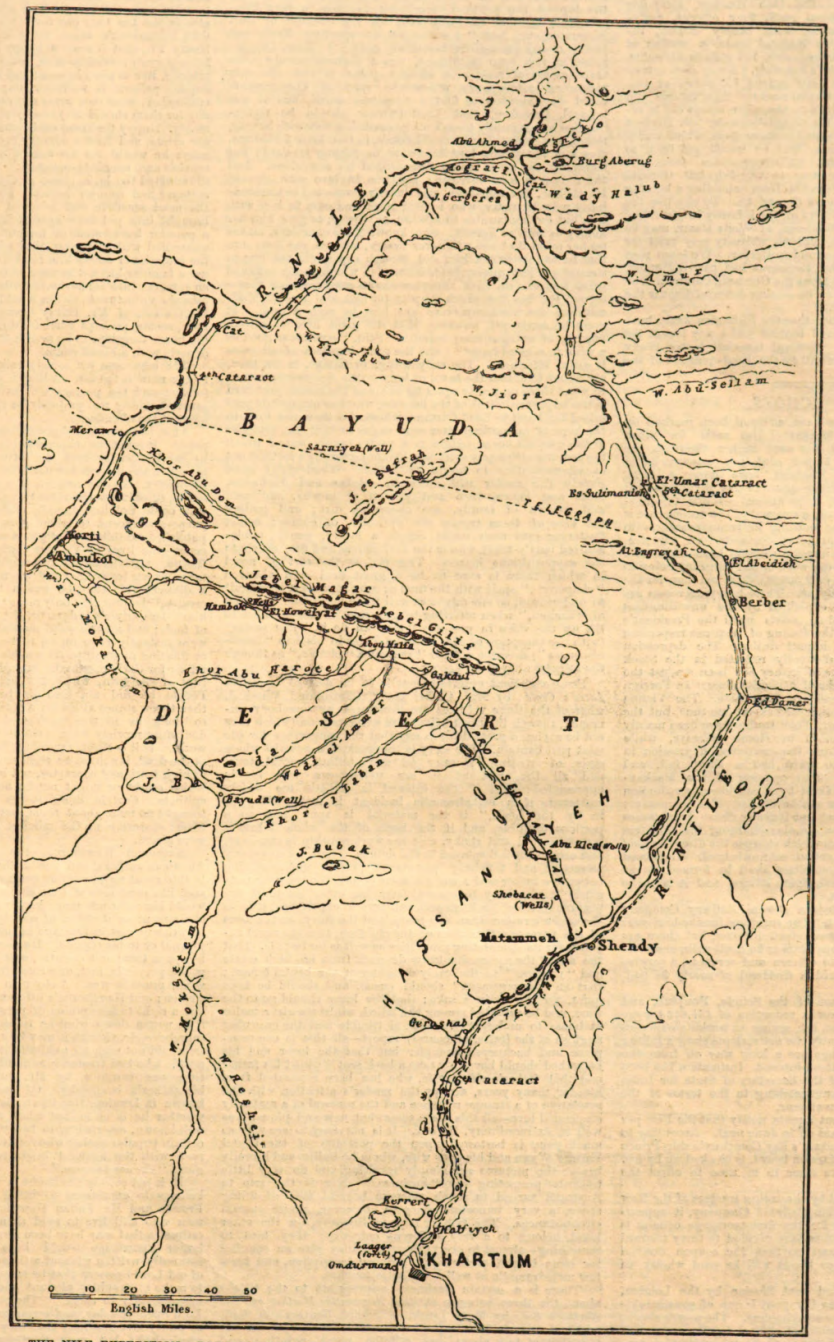
PORTRAIT ALBUMS.

Messrs. Marcus Ward and Co., of Oriel House, Farringdon-street, have published a tastefully illuminated volume for photographic portraits, bearing the title "The Album of the Thames." It contains views, in natural colours, of Hampton Court Palace, Chiswick, Kew Bridge, Richmond Park, Windsor, Clieveden, Medmenham Abbey, Henley, Sonning Island, Pangbourne, and Iffley Mill. Verse, selected from Spenser, Mallet, Thomson, Pope, Byron, Drayton, and Denham, accompany the well-known scenes, which are supplemented by smaller pictures of objects familiar to the river and its banks. The album is handsomely bound in various leathers and ornamented with gilt clasps and other embellishments.

Messrs. Stafford and Guy, of Milk-street, have issued, very handsomely bound, a massive volume, of which the objects and the ornamental features are sufficiently indicated by its title, the "Turner Album." The selection of pictures is confined to the views of rivers and ports, twelve in number. "Scarborough," the "Mouth of the Humber," "Kirkstall Abbey," and "Dartmouth Castle" are among the chief successes of this publication. The album is issued in different styles, all handsomely bound.

The "Breanski Album," published by T. J. Smith and Co., of Queen-street, Cheapside, contains twelve pages of facsimile water-colour drawings of picturesque scenery in England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales, from original sketches by Mr. Alfred De Breanski. The photographs can be inserted so as not to detract from the beauty of the drawings, while to face the latter are printed in gold the rose, shamrock, thistle, and other national flowers. The mounting and binding of the volume leave nothing to be desired.

Messrs. Turnbull publish the "Beaumont Album," which, though not illustrated by drawings as the three mentioned above are, may, on that very account, be more acceptable to the lovers of a chaste simplicity. The volume is strongly and handsomely bound, in various styles, and has a spring lock.



A STRANGE STORY.

THE NILE EXPEDITION.

Our Map of the country, mostly desert, included in the great bend of the Nile from the Sixth Cataract, below Khartoum, to Korti, the advanced head-quarters of Lord Wolseley's army, shows the route which must be taken by such part of the British force—namely, the Camel Corps and the Mounted Infantry, as is prepared to rely on land transport, and to push across the Bayuda Desert from Korti to Matammeh, opposite Shendy, which is about halfway between Berber and Khartoum. On Tuesday last, Brigadier-General Sir Herbert Stewart, with a portion of this advanced force, started from Korti on this route, which passes by the oases of Hambok, El Koweiyat, Abou Halfa, and Gakdul, at the foot of the mountain ranges called Jebel Magar and Jebel Gilif, and further along the line where the Egyptian Government once proposed to construct a railway, to reach the Nile opposite Shendy, and there to meet General Gordon descending with his steamboats from Khartoum. The distance from Korti to Shendy is estimated at rather more than a hundred and eighty miles. The favourable indications of water presented by the marks of streams, ponds, and wells, are not entirely to be relied upon, as they are often found dry even at this season of the year. At Gakdul, which is ninety miles from Korti, and is about midway of the entire route, there are good wells; and Sir Herbert Stewart will there establish a military post, for which he has taken with him a quantity of stores carried by camels. The Mounted Infantry will bring back the convoy of camels from Gakdul to Korti, after they have been unloaded, and then the Head-quarters, the rest of the Camel Corps, the Artillery, and the 19th Hussars will move forward, by way of Gakdul and Shendy, to Khartoum. A garrison will be left at Korti, which will constitute the advanced base.

In the meantime, Lord Wolseley has sent this week a large detachment of troops, led by General Earle, up from Korti to Merawi, which is intended first to inflict preliminary chastisement on the Monassir tribe, between the Fourth and Fifth Cataracts, for their treacherous murder of Colonel J. D. Stewart and Mr. Frank Power. After thus dealing with the Monassir tribe, General Earle will proceed northward to Abu Ahmed, at the top of the great bend of the river, where he will cross the Nile and reopen the direct north road across the Nubian Desert to Korosko. This operation is evidently designed to prepare the line which will be taken hereafter for withdrawing our troops from the Soudan, and for the removal of the Khartoum Egyptian garrison. Korosko, as our readers will recollect, is situated in Nubia, halfway between Assouan and Wady Halfa; and the desert road between Korosko and Abu Ahmed, 270 miles in length, avoiding all the most difficult cataracts of the Nile and saving an immense circuit of river navigation, was usually preferred by ordinary travellers. It would appear, from this direction of General Earle's movement, that no attempt will at present be made to capture Berber, though it will be necessary to secure that place after effecting the relief of Khartoum, in order that the Khartoum garrison may be safely brought down the river to Abu Ahmed.

Lord Wolseley expects next Wednesday to advance from Korti, with the remainder of the Camel Corps, the artillery, and other troops, joining those under Sir Herbert Stewart at Gakdul, where two or three days' halt may be needful to complete the final arrangements. The most difficult part of the route for marching is from Gakdul to Abu Klea, there being no water for a space of forty-five miles, so that the camels will have to carry enough water for the horses and the men. Much will depend on the friendly assistance of the Kabbabish tribes, who inhabit the centre and south of the Bayuda Desert. The tribes of the Hassaniyeh, towards Matammeh, have been hitherto most hostile to General Gordon.

THE NILE EXPEDITION: LORD WOLSELEY'S INTENDED ROUTE ACROSS THE DESERT FROM KORTI TO SHENDY.

The Mahdi has taken up a defensive position north-west of Khartoum, having pitched his camp near Margait, either in the plain at the foot of Jebel Fereid or on the reverse slope of that mountain. His reasons for selecting this particular spot are obvious. Hence he can command the wells of El Goz, and to a certain extent the western route between Debbeh and Khartoum, which he doubtless supposed would first be threatened by a British advance. He can keep a watchful eye on the doubtful Hassanyeh, Sowarab, and Hau-hau-hin tribes, whose adhesion to his cause or desertion to our side depends very much on the weakness or strength of the force we may be able to concentrate quickly about the neighbourhood of Merawi. He can, if need be, stretch out a hand to the Monassir Arabs, one of whose sheikhs was responsible for the recent massacre of Europeans and natives coming down from Khartoum. He has a firm grip of heights where the Nile runs through a narrow ravine with precipitous cliffs on each side, and he is in the best position for harassing by frequent attacks the defenders of Omderman, a stronghold to which Gordon clings tenaciously, because it at present covers and would in an enemy's hands dominate the most exposed face of Khartoum. By all these reasons the Mahdi has evidently been influenced, and there cannot be a doubt that he has shown considerable strategical skill in electing to make Margait his head-quarters. But native reports state this week that the Mahdi's followers are suffering much from famine, and that the dead bodies of several of their number are to be seen unburied in the surrounding country; also that the Mahdi's people are greatly discouraged by the repeated attacks of the Egyptian troops, and that many have dispersed on the news of the approach of the British; a large number of them, it is said, have entered Khartoum and have submitted to General Gordon.

The detachment to be commanded by General Earle, which started up the river from Korti on Sunday last, the 19th Hussars following on Monday along the bank of the river, and part of the Engineers riding on camels, altogether numbers 2400 men—namely, 900 infantry, including the South Staffordshire regiment, and 1500 of the Mounted Brigade, with six screw guns. The means of transport are as under:—Camels, 1800; horses, 400; steamers, two; pinnaces, two; and whalers, sixty-four. The 19th Hussars will act as scouts to the Expedition. A camp will be formed at Handab, near the Fourth Cataract, thirty-five miles above Merawi, and a hundred miles from Korti. The river movements are directed by Colonel Brackenbury, in the pinnace of H.M.S. Monarch. The South Staffordshire regiment, nearly 600 strong, is towed in fifty-two whaleboats. A large quantity of intrenching tools is taken, to be used in fortifying defensive positions.

It is expected that the whole of Lord Wolseley's force will be collected at Korti by the middle of January. The last of the Camel Corps will be there next Monday, and the Essex and Cornwall regiments of infantry by the end of next week.

Our Special Artist, Mr. Melton Prior, sends us from Dongola several Sketches of the movements going on there when the head of the river column, including five boats with the Pioneers, under Major Doward, of the Royal Engineers, and two hundred men of the Guards' Camel Corps, marching on the river-bank, left that place for the front; and of the ferrying of camels over the Nile. Much time was inevitably spent in crossing the river, whether the crossing was made at Dongola or below Dongola, at a place named Kerma, close to Abu Fatma, at the head of the Hannek Cataract. It is not easy so exactly to time a march that boats are always ready at the crossing places for the arrival of the troops on the river bank. As a rule, not more than four camels, and sometimes less, can be placed on one boat; and before entering the boats the camels must be unloaded and unsaddled, both to save damage to their saddles and burdens, and to avoid the risk of strain to the beasts themselves. A party arriving on the river bank opposite Dongola has to signal to Dongola for boats, which may not always be unemployed and ready for the ferry work. Attempts to provide a larger ferry-boat by lashing two boats together have not succeeded, such a craft becoming unmanageable in the swift stream; and the wood of the country, very hard mimosa wood, which barely floats, has not sufficient buoyancy for rafts.

The start of Sir Herbert Stewart's advanced force, on Tuesday afternoon, from Korti, is described in the telegraphic news published on Wednesday. This force consists of 1150 men, of whom the Guards and Marines number 381, the Mounted Infantry thirty-one, the heavy dragoons ninety men, with 239 camels; the light cavalry ninety men, with 250 camels; the Royal Engineers twenty-nine men, with forty camels; the artillery, without guns, twenty men, with sixteen camels; the commissariat twenty men, and 200 natives, with 500 camels; the 19th Hussars, forty-five men and horses; the medical staff, four officers, forty-five men, and thirty natives, with ninety camels, including a section of movable hospital tents, a section of bearers, and a company of litters, with 750 gallons of water. There are nearly 2000 camels altogether. Every man carries seven gallons of water, seven days' rations, 150 rounds of ammunition, the reserve being 40,000 rounds. The Guards and Marines are to remain at Gakdul, the other troops are to return at once, bringing back the Guards' camels. Sir Herbert Stewart expected to reach Gakdul in three days, which would be yesterday (Friday) evening; and he would get back to Korti on Wednesday next. No opposition from the enemy is expected on the way to Gakdul, but General Earle's orders may not preclude him from extending a helping hand to Sir H. Stewart's column if need be. To chastise the Monassir tribe is the main object of the infantry brigade, but it is possible that Sheikh Suleiman, of Wady Gamr, may be given up by his own people, and no necessity may exist for General Earle's boats to go round to Berber. We learn that on Tuesday the Staffordshire Regiment had passed Merawi, and encamped thirteen miles from the Gerendid Cataract. The Monassir tribe are reported to be coming down to dispute the narrow pass above Dargayat.

News has reached Souakim that the Bisharcen Arabs have attacked Rowayat, but suffered repulse and heavy loss at the hands of the inhabitants. General Grenfell leaves Wady Halfa for Abu Fatma, where will be the head-quarters of the Egyptian troops.

CITY ECHOES.

The closing days of the year have, as usual, been marked by firmness in the Money Market. The rates for Stock Exchange advances were ½ per cent higher than on the previous occasion, 5½ to 6 per cent per annum being charged. The Bank of England have done a large business, and in all probability the January dividends will have been anticipated to a large extent. When this customary pressure has passed off, a renewal of the recent ease is to be expected, there being nothing in trade prospects to warrant any improvement in home demands. In America, affairs are even worse. The imports recently have exhibited a serious falling off, those for the week ended Saturday being to the value of 4,907,000 dols., or 2,500,000 dols. less than for the corresponding period of last year. These heavy decreases are no doubt to some extent explained by the unwillingness to import goods above actual needs until the President's Address, which will relieve the feeling of suspense respecting the probable reduction of import duties. The depression in trade has been most distinctly reflected in the Stock Exchange. The higher value of money has been against the Home funds and other stocks of a similar class. In Foreign bonds, however, the changes are favourable. The Vienna financial troubles caused some weakness at one time, but the tone is now more confident. Poor traffics have been mainly the cause of the depreciation in Home railways, while Americans have suffered from the continued depression in New York. Canadian also have had a sharp fall, and Mexican stocks are lower. The opening of the Mackay-Bennett cables has been followed by a considerable reduction in the market value of the stocks of the older companies; and Railway Debenture Trust and Railway Share Trust issues have been heavily sold on a circular charging the directors with serious mismanagement, which charges the directors may be said to have to a large extent acknowledged. The board ask that an independent committee shall be formed at the meeting next month to investigate affairs, and it is to be hoped that this will be done.

The directors of the Eastern Bengal Railway Company have issued their final report. The earnings for the half-year have been less than the guaranteed interest, but there are certain amounts from previous years to be dealt with, and after the payment of gratuities to officers and servants, a surplus will remain sufficient to yield a dividend of nearly 9s. 6½d. per cent.

While the gross earnings of the Scinde, Punjaub, and Delhi Railway Company show a reduction of £51,642 for the six months ended June last, the saving in working expenses was only £6788; consequently the net receipts show a falling off of £44,854. The earnings are a long way off from the amount required for guaranteed interest. Intimation has been received of the intention of the Secretary of State for India in Council to purchase the undertaking in the terms of the contract at the end of the next year.

The Canadian Government agents notify that the Five per Cent Loan of 1860 will be paid off in June next. According to the Canadian Gazette, the Hudson's Bay Company's ship Prince of Wales, with £40,000 of furs on board, is blocked up by ice. This cargo cannot therefore come in in time to affect the next dividend.

From a statement issued by the voting trustees of the New York, Pennsylvania, and Ohio Railroad Company, it appears that the amount available for the first mortgage coupon is 160,000 dols., but the directors have decided to carry forward this sum for current expenses, so that the coupon due on Jan. 1 on the first mortgage bonds will be paid wholly in deferred warrants.

The bill to be promoted next Session by the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company is one of considerable importance to the preference stockholders. The power sought by the bill is to raise additional capital to the amount of £800,000, and of this £600,000 is to be in arbitration preference stock, the remaining £200,000 to be raised by mortgage. The objects of the issue are to give the holders of the Sheerness Rent-Charge Four-and-a-Half per Cent Stock a like amount of Arbitration Debenture Stock—viz., £155,556; and further, to enable the company to discharge their liability for expenditure incurred and to be incurred upon works now in progress.

During the current year, fifteen American railways have been sold under foreclosure, and, as forty-three receiverships have been appointed, the number of foreclosures in 1885 is likely to be even greater. Some four thousand miles of railway have been laid, and it is believed that the mileage next year will be added to to a larger extent.

Notice has been given by the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Company of the passing of their quarterly dividend. The last payment was in August. T. S.

NOVELS.

Sibthorpe Manor, Fallowlands, and Carlsfort Castle, as anybody may learn from the three volumes entitled Loyal, Brave, and True: by Alice O'Connell (John and Robert Maxwell), were "three ancestral residences of no mean antiquity" in Thorpeshire, a Radical county which would probably be sought for in vain upon any map whatever of the United Kingdom. Sibthorpe "alone of the three was a rich inheritance," with a lovely girl, Geraldine Sibthorpe, to inherit it; Fallowlands, a poor estate, was in the possession of a noble young man, one Donald Hartholme, a barrister; Carlsfort Castle was likely to come to Lord Cartane, of whom, being the son of the Earl of Carlsfort, "it was said in the clubs and drawing-rooms of London that, had he but money at his back, he would be at the top of the political tree," for he was (a very Conservative) member of Parliament for the borough of East Wemmington; but "a succession of sporting Earls had pretty nearly drained the hereditary coffers." Now, Thorpeshire, as has been mentioned, was a Radical county; the three ancestral residences already spoken of were the only places of consequence where the spirit of Conservatism could be expected to find a congenial home, and it was natural, therefore, that Lord Cartane should be recommended by his family to seek all he needed, a wife with beauty, riches, and everything he could desire, in Geraldine Sibthorpe. Nor was the young lord backward in coming forward; but Geraldine for some reason discouraged his attentions. And the reason is soon revealed: she was in love with Donald Hartholme, the well-born and ducally connected but exceedingly poor barrister, who is over head and ears in love with her, but too honourable to ask her, as it were, to give him her money as well as herself. She, knowing his character, makes up her mind that she will never marry, because she feels sure that he will never ask her, and, though she might ask him in the oblique but unmistakable manner in which young ladies of great tact can do such things without compromising themselves, she has too much respect for him and too much admiration for his scruples to put him to such a trial. It must be confessed, however, that she gives him more than one hint of extraordinary breadth. Still, "a nod is as good as a wink to a blind horse"; and the most hopeless of all cases is wilful blindness. The only thing, or things, to do, then, are either to enrich the hero, or impoverish the heroine, so as to place them on pretty equal terms; and the course preferred is the impoverishment of the heroine, who has meanwhile promised her hand to Lord Cartane, whom she does not love, in the hope of promoting, after some vague fashion, the interests of the man she loves. Here is a pretty tangle, out of which the novelist ultimately extricates his characters by a method not at all unfamiliar to lovers of fiction. Wonderfully good society the reader will move in; dukes and duchesses, lords and ladies, men and women of money, and men and women of family, are cheap as dirt; and galling the kibe of them treads the swindler, of course; whilst fluttering into their midst comes a lovely, gentle, noble-hearted lady's-maid, who is the real heiress and first cousin to the supposititious heiress. This is just the sort of novel in which there is sure to be a great deal said about a "chaperone," spelt with the final e: why so spelt it is difficult to understand, as one might as well write "dragone" instead of "dragon," when referring to a duenna. But it is no use to lift up the voice in protest: "they all do it," just as they (with the exception of Mr. Edmund Yates in his late "Reminiscences") describe a "fair" man as a "blonde," as though the fairness altered his gender.

Some excellent entertainment is to be derived from The Lover's Creed: by Mrs. Cashel Hoey (Chatto and Windus), wherein the three volumes are illustrated by somebody unnamed, though the illustrations are quite as good (which may not be saying a great deal) as any that the magazines for the most part contain. The story is the work of a novelist whose style of writing, manner of story-telling, moral tone, and all the rest of it are well-known and highly appreciated; and if the interest is a little too widely scattered, if a melodramatic incident is rather "lugged in by the heels," if the material is spun out to a perilous thinness, and if the basis of the whole fabric is somewhat old and shaky, still the workmanship is excellent, and originality is displayed in the details. There is a singularly attractive and touching picture of perfect understanding between a father and a son on most points, though each considers it necessary to conceal from the other the most important secret of his life; and, contrary to experience, it is on the senior's rather than the junior's of the story, on the loves of the parents rather than of the children, that the novel depends for its stimulating properties as well as for its title. That the son of the squire should condescend from his high estate and "propose" to the lovely daughter of the brutal tenant; that an "engagement" should ensue, and should be kept quiet, for the squire's sake; that the lover should go to the wars, and be reported among the killed, whilst the girl remains at home to undergo all kinds of trouble and the crowning anguish of the (false, of course) report—all this is commonplace and hackneyed enough; but that the lover and his betrothed should have to "take a back seat" whilst his father and that father's gifted wife, who has been separated from him for many years, occupy the reader's attention with the revelation of a strange romance and the renewal of a mutually suspended love—all this has a somewhat new and piquant, as well as extraordinary, flavour. It is not easy to see why so much pains is bestowed upon the portraits of the brutal Farmer Wynn and his poor wife, whom he bullies and literally beats; the pictures are simply revolting, and do very little towards promoting the "business." Nor is the trip to Australia turned to much purpose beyond that of filling space, a very important purpose, however, under certain circumstances. The trip or trips to Brittany, on the other hand, belong to a very different category; they lead to something—almost to everything, and they give an opening for some bright, picturesque, striking description, and for a few melodramatic as well as pathetic touches.

There is a certain freshness—appropriate to the title—about the three volumes entitled Between the Heather and the Northern Sea: by Mary Linskill (Richard Bentley and Son), which is a novel of the æsthetico-romantic order, with all but a surfeit of talk about love, religion, poesy, painting, and genius neglected in life, but appraised at an almost ridiculously high value after death. A shipwreck, described with considerable power and not a little pathos, is the main, if not the only, piece of "action" in the story; for the rescue of the heroine, when she was wellnigh drowned, is but a sort of natural tail to the shipwreck. That rescue, however, has important consequences; for of course the rescuer and the rescued, the stalwart commanding man, and the graceful, yielding young woman (of whom, in point of age, he might have been the father), fall, then and there into reciprocal love. But, some years before she had been "engaged" to a sort of Juno, as regards externals, but the meanest of her sex, as regards the inner woman, who has refused to return his passionate letters, and, though she meditates no "breach of promise" action, holds them in terrorem over his head. She is not in love with him, but deeply, almost shamelessly, with the father of the girl to whom the rescuer of drowning maidens is "engaged"; and so she "sloshes about," as it were, or "runs amuck," under the influence of rejected beauty and revengeful spite. The novel may be said to resolve itself into certain studies of character; all are very good in their way, but the most original and interesting, though not the most edifying or the most likely to extort either admiration or assent, so far as verisimilitude is concerned, is the study of the impassioned, spiteful beauty.

AN EVIL OF THE DAY.

It is inevitable that a fierce light should beat upon a throne, and Kings and Queens must take the discomforts of their position with the glory. The glory may be great, but great also is the tax they pay for it; and many a monarch, vexed with innumerable cares, must have felt, with Shakspeare's Henry VI., that it were a happy life to be no better than a homely swain. Public men, statesmen, judges, church dignitaries, live in glass houses; and for them, as for travellers in Japan, privacy is wellnigh impossible. What they do is chronicled; what they say is repeated; and it is an unfortunate day for them should they chance to act unadvisedly or to speak rashly. Happy the man, said Horace, who is born to a moderate estate, and lives a country life; but if Horace lived nowadays he would see his Sabine farm invaded by inquisitive tourists and anecdote-mongers. The blaze of light that once illuminated the high places of the earth only, now shines on cottages and country homes. The man whose disposition is the most sensitive and reserved may suddenly find himself brought into publicity against his will. If he have written a popular book, made a fortune by a discovery in science, quarrelled with a stepson, shot a burglar, or married his cook, the interviewer marks him for his own. By hook or crook, to use a familiar but not unexpressive phrase, the inquisitor gains an entrance into his house, describes his furniture and features, asks the unfortunate victim what he thinks of the weather, of vaccination, of Mr. Henry George, or of mad-doctors, and then, seeing perhaps some faint indications that his exit from the house threatens to be more precipitate than he could wish, departs with a bland smile.

The eagerness for society talk sometimes leads the manufacturers of it too far. A libel is perpetrated; heavy damages follow; and the persons who have read the scandal with the greatest avidity will probably be the first to justify the punishment of the offender.

This, however, is rather a digression from the purpose of this paper. It is not the criminal publicity given to false statements by the libeller, or even the intrusive, though not malicious, gossip of the interviewer that claims just now the attention of the reader. In one respect, it is a more serious offence than either, since it is perpetrated by writers of the highest character, who could not intentionally malign any one, and would not purposely descend to trivial gossip. Two biographies lately published exhibit in no slight measure the lack of decent reticence—the lives of Thomas Carlyle and of Nathaniel Hawthorne. Carlyle, as all the world knows, was in the habit of using strong language; and when he told one of the guests at a dinner table that he was a "puir wratched meeserable creatur," he probably only meant to say that he disagreed with him. In Carlyle's judgment, the world was chiefly composed of fools; and men who did not think with him or please him were instantly pronounced to be contemptible, conventional, or wanting in veracity. It was his way, and probably signified little: for Carlyle, who denounced cant so vehemently, had a cant of his own, which he cherished without knowing it. People he did not like he turned into scarecrows, and then threw stones at them: a pardonable amusement perhaps, so long as it was performed in private, but of very doubtful propriety when exhibited for the amusement of the world. If it is right, reversing the old maxim, to speak evil of the dead, it cannot be right to hold up to scorn living men of high mark and character, not by stating facts against them which might or might not be answered, but by vituperative epithets. Carlyle flung stones at random, and probably thought no more about them, but Mr. Froude must bear the blame of storing up the missiles and showing at whom they were aimed.

Nathaniel Hawthorne, the most original perhaps of American authors, and one of the most remarkable novelists in this great novel-writing century, was a shy reserved man, and, like most men of that character, he was proud. No one would have shrunk more keenly from being held up to the amusement or derision of society. Of the men and women Hawthorne met in England he gave his opinion freely in his journal or to his friends. He accepted invitations to English homes in town and country, and in several instances laughed at the people he met, or wrote with contempt of the gentleman whose guest he was. A shy man is sometimes curiously outspoken; and Hawthorne's utterances are free enough. A man has a right to his opinion of persons as well as of things, and if he writes down what he thinks for private uses, it is not reprehensible, though it may be a little unamiable. Certainly he would not wish his unkindly judgment to be transmitted to people who had treated him kindly; yet this is done in more than one instance by Mr. Julian Hawthorne in writing his father's biography. Of one man still living and well known in London, Hawthorne is allowed to express a doubt whether he is or is not what another living man, equally well known, asserts him to be—"an arrant humbug"; and a certain popular author who received Hawthorne under his own roof with the warmest kindness is styled by his quondam guest "the ass of-asses."

It is not seemly; it shows a want of the gentleness which belongs to gentlemen to bring before the public, as Mr. Froude and Mr. Julian Hawthorne have done, estimates of men who still live to read them and to suffer from them—estimates that may have been formed from prejudice which a larger knowledge would have removed, and that were assuredly written without a thought of publicity. It was said of old Lord Spencer that he thought it "a crying modern sin to make biographies piquant and interesting by personalities not necessary to them." The evil has greatly increased since Lord Spencer's day, and seems to be still growing. Some men so dearly love notoriety that they would rather be abused than overlooked; but most Englishmen, let us hope, are still modest and self-respecting; and the few men worthy of a biography must dread the peril of their hasty, unwise, or uncharitable words rising up against them in print. In the instances we have mentioned, two illustrious men have been injured by those who were most anxious to do them honour. The age is very tolerant, but it has some sense of propriety still; and more than one generation must pass away before this disregard of the courtesies of life is likely to be forgotten.

J. D.

The special service for children annually held in Westminster Abbey took place last Saturday afternoon, which was Holy Innocents' Eve. Many children, and still more adults, were present. Archdeacon Farrar read the lesson, and Dean Bradley preached, after which a collection was made on behalf of the Destitute Children's Dinner Society

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

"MRS. HENRY WOOD'S ARGOSY is le literally laden with golden grain."—Daily Telegrah.

THE MYSTERY OF ALLAN GRALE, a new Illustrated Serial Story, commences in the January Number of "The Argosy." [Now ready.

CARAMEL COTTAGE, by JOHNNY LUDLOW; and "Among the Welsh," by CHARLES W. WOOD, F.R.G.S., commence in the January Number of "The Argosy." [Now ready.

Now ready,
MRS. HENRY WOOD'S MAGAZINE,
THE ARGOSY, for JANUARY.

CONTENTS.
1. THE MYSTERY OF ALLAN GRALE. A New Serial Story.
Chap. I.—The Farm by the Loch.
" II.—The knock at the door.
" III.—What could it mean?
" IV.—The Black Pool.
Illustrated by M. Ellen Edwards.
2. CARAMEL COTTAGE. By Johnny Ludlow.
3. AMONG THE WELSH. By Charles W. Wood, F.R.G.S. With Nine Illustrations.
4. THE CONVERSION OF PROFESSOR NABS.
5. No. 1 OF THE FIRST BOOK.
6. LITTLE MAID OF ARCADIE.
7. A REQUIEM. By G. B. Stuart.

Sixpence, Monthly.

"The best and cheapest magazine we have."—Standard.
"There is no better magazine than 'The Argosy.'"—Bell's Life.
"Delightful stories."—Brighton Examiner.
"This brilliant monthly."—St. James's Gazette.
"Ever welcome."—Western Daily Mercury.
"There is no monthly magazine gives greater pleasure."—Oxford University Herald.
"As a light magazine 'The Argosy' is not excelled."—Liverpool Albion.
"First among the magazines stands 'The Argosy.'"—Daily Chronicle.
Excellent as usual, and no reader can wish for better.
The JANUARY NUMBER now ready.
RICHARD BENTLEY AND SON, 8, New Burlington-street, W.

"Ladies who desire to be well dressed find a most valuable guide and counsellor in MYRA'S JOURNAL, which is always early in the field with novelties."—Daily Chronicle.

NOVELTIES FOR JANUARY.
A COLOURED FASHION PLATE.
FULL-SIZED PAPER PATTERN of a Low Bodice for Evening Toilette.
DIAGRAM SHEET, containing Patterns of—(1) The Pasca Redingote; (2) School Dress for a Girl of fifteen; (3) Dauphin Collar; and a variety of Models of Chapeaux, and Walking and Indoor Costumes.

NEW PARIS MODELS of Costumes, Toilettes, Mantles, Chapeaux, Coiffures, and Lingerie for Ladies; Costumes and Chapeaux for Children. Mantles and Costumes for Ladies and Children.	MODES FOR CHILDREN. SPINNINGS IN TOWN, by the silkworm. MYRA'S ANSWERS. Latest from Paris. ANSWERS on Dress, Health, and Personal Attention. Etiquette, Miscellaneous, &c.
MODELS from Les Grands Magasins du Louvre. SHEET of Needlework Designs for Children. DRESS AND FASHION in Paris.	NEEDLEWORK: Designs for an Embroidered Round Cushion, Blotting-pad, Baby's Boot in Tricoter, Valance for Bookshelves, &c.

Price Sixpence; by post, 8d.
MYRA AND SON (late Gout and Son), 39 and 40, Bedford-street, Covent-garden.

NOW PUBLISHING.

LONDON JOURNAL. (New Series.) Christmas Double Part (12 and 13), containing Extra Holiday and Christmas Numbers and Two Pictures,—"Four Generations of Royalty," from a Photograph, and "Christmas Eve," in colours, after a Water-colour Drawing by Keeley Halswelle, R.S.A. Price 1s. 6d.; by post, 1s. 8d.
London Office, 12 and 13, Fetter-lane; and all Booksellers.

LONDON JOURNAL. NEW VOLUME. Vol. 2, New Series. (Illustrated.) With Chronicle of the Events of the Year 1884—June to December Price 4s. 6d.; by post, 5s.

LONDON JOURNAL. NEW VOLUME. Vol. 2. SERIALS by CELEBRATED AUTHORS.

A Trusty Lord.	Sweet is True Love.
A Y-ar and a Day.	Terribly Tempted.
Her Fatal Gift.	Through the Shadows.
Lost, Stolen, or Strayed.

LONDON JOURNAL. NEW VOLUME. Vol. 2. NOVELETTES.
The Blue Mantilla. Eve Devereux's Dream. The Ghos of Chesapeake. Marked for Life, she Would be an Actress, True Love's Crown. Won by a Spirit.

LONDON JOURNAL. NEW VOLUME. Vol. 2. SHORT STORIES.
Grave and Gay, Romantic and Pathetic.
The Acrobat's Dream. At Last. A Fit of the Blues. An Innocent Elopement. Ethel Foster's Wedding Eve. Fetters that Gall. Feeding Doors. A Shilling Fortune. In the Nick of Time. Jennie's Whim. My Offer of Marriage. May's Christmas. A Wandering Minstrel. A Fortunate Mistake. Madge's Mistake. A Modern Cinderella. A Seaside Monster. My Young Friend. Not for Her. An Old Fogey. A Little Plot. Fairy's Punishment. The Artist's Romance. A Little Sea Scrape. Sir Anthony's Heir. Even as Strangers. Tailboys at the Healtheries. Thorns and Brambles. Out with a Tiger. Too Clever by Half. My Husband's Uncle. Under Apple-Blossoms. His Own Valet. Mabel's Widower. The Wrong Man. You and I Together.

LONDON JOURNAL. NEW VOLUME. Vol. 2. CHRISTMAS NUMBER.
An Old Cheshire Hall, Broadhall Hall (Illustrated), Christmas Charity. The Ghost of Batten Hall. His Christmas Rose. The Principal Fairy. Christmas Cheer. Christmas Trees. Why Christmas is on December the Twenty-fifth.
HOLIDAY NUMBER.
In Bitterness Dark. The Summer of a Wave. The Way Through the Wood.

LONDON JOURNAL. Quarterly, Half-Yearly, and Yearly Subscriptions received at the Office, 12 and 13, Fetter-lane, Fleet-street, E.C., for Weekly Numbers—1s. 6d. quarterly; 3s. 3d. half-yearly; and 6s. 6d. annually.
Monthly Parts, post-free, 1s4., or 10s. 10d. per annum; Half Yearly Volumes, 4s. 6d.; free by parcels-post, 5s. 3d.
Advertisements received for the Monthly Parts and Supplements by MATHER and SON, 71, Fleet-street, E.C. Established 1850.

Now ready, Eighty-eight pages, 6d.; by post, 7d.
Old-fashioned Paper and Print, with Quaint Woodcuts.
YE EARLIE ENGLYSHE ALMANACK for 1885: Thynges Olde and Newe. Contains Old Notes on ye Kalendar, Weather Folk-Lore and Folk-Lore of ye Rainie Birdis and Flowers. Olde Poems, the Occult Science of Chyromancy or ye Readynge of Handes, Ye Health Notes for each month, Olde Englyshe Remedies and Recipes, Ye Way to Wealth, A Diary of Events for a Yeare Past in ye Mannere of Sam Pepys his Diary, Meteorological and Astronomic Notes, Merrie Jokes and Riddles, and manie other thynges of very greate interest.
Imprynted and solde by Masters T. Pettitt and Compy., of 23, Frith-street, Soho, London; Messrs. Simpkin and Co.; and of all B-ke-shoppes.
"This Almanack is an interesting, amusing, and useful novelty, worth getting, and worth keeping."—Western Morning News.

GOUNOD'S SPLENDID NEW SONG, THE KING OF LOVE MY SHEPHERD IS, cannot be too highly praised. It has been said that beautiful words inspire beautiful music; it would certainly appear to be so in this case, for these charming words have been most gracefully set by Ch. Gounod. The song is equally suitable for the home and the concert-room. It is so well laid out for the voice that the most ordinary singer can give quite an effective rendering. Four keys. 2s. net.—PHILLIPS and PAGE, 43, Kilburn High-road, N.W.

Now ready, post 8vo, cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.,
THEOSOPHY. The Idyll of the White Lotus. By M. C., Fellow of the Theosophical Society.
London: REEVES and TURNER, 196, Strand, W.C.

Post-free, 6d.
BEFORE I BEGAN TO SPEAK. By a BABY. BEFORE I BEGAN TO SPEAK. By a BABY.
14, Whitefriars-street, London, E.C.; and all Booksellers.

Enlarged Edition, pp. 360, bound, 1s., or 14 stamps,
HOMŒOPATHIC FAMILY INSTRUCTOR. By Drs. R. and W. EPPS.
Describes fully and prescribes for general diseases.
JAMES EPPS and Co., 48, Threadneedle-street.

By Dr. BARR MEADOWS, Physician (30 years) to the National Institution for Diseases of the Skin. Ninth Edition. 2s. 6d.
ERUPTIONS; Their Rational Treatment.
London: G. HILL, 156, Westminster Bridge-road.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

CHARLES DICKENS AS I KNEW HIM. The Story of the Reading Tours in Great Britain and America (1866–1870). By GEORGE DOLBY. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.
"He has told his story in the most effective manner, accompanying a plain and clear narrative with abundant touches of the peculiar humour which no friend of Dickens should be without."—Daily News.

MISS BLIND'S NOVEL.
TARANTELLA: a Romance. By MATHILDE BLIND, Author of "Life of George Eliot," &c. 2 vols., 21s.
"The name of Mathilde Blind affixed as author to anything is a guarantee of the writing being of the first order. Her present book is extremely clever, and the treatment of the weird subject she has chosen picturesque in the extreme. . . . The author's local colouring is especially fine, and her character studies extremely strong. . . . Thrice welcome in its two-volume form, 'Tarantella' is a book which is bound to make its mark."—Whitehall Review.
London: T. FISHER UNWIN, 26, Paternoster-square, E.C.

NEW WORK BY AUGUSTUS J. C. HARE.
On Jan. 8, crown 8vo, with Illustrations, 5s.,
SKETCHES IN HOLLAND AND SCANDINAVIA. By AUGUSTUS J. C. HARE, Author of "Cities of Italy," "Wanderings in Spain," &c.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

NEW NOVEL BY JAMES PAYN.
On Jan. 6, 2 vols., post 8vo, with numerous Illustrations,
THE TALK OF THE TOWN. By JAMES PAYN. Author of "By Proxy," &c.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

MAGAZINES for the NEW YEAR.
NEW VOLUMES NOW COMMENCING.
The "Spectator," Dec. 20, 1884, says:—"So much trouble is taken with these periodicals, so much ability is at the disposal of their conductors, that it is difficult to bestow the praise which is really deserved without seeming extravagant."

1.
Monthly, 6d.
THE QUIVER, for SUNDAY and GENERAL READING.
"A safer and more interesting magazine we do not know than 'The Quiver.'"—Standard.
"A volume of 'The Quiver' is a library in itself."—Nonconformist.
"'The Quiver' is best of all the Magazines devoted to Sunday reading."—Saturday Review.

2.
Monthly, 7d.
CASSELL'S FAMILY MAGAZINE, for Every Household.
"In 'Cassell's Magazine' we find articles to suit all members of the household with a strong infusion of the useful and instructive. The stories are good, the pictures clever, and the contents unusually attractive."—Times.
"'Cassell's Magazine' is a treasure-house of bright letterpress and pleasing illustrations."—World.

3.
Monthly, 6d.
LITTLE FOLKS MAGAZINE, for all Girls and Boys.
"'Little Folks' begins charmingly for the New Year. It more than ever merits the distinction of being the best of all the juvenile publications brought out in this country."—Daily Chronicle, Dec. 30, 1884.
"Everyone ought to know by this time that 'Little Folks' is the best Magazine for Children."—Graphic.

The First Parts of the New Volumes for 1885 of the above Magazines are now on sale at all Books I ers.
CASSELL and COMPANY, Limited, Ludgate-hill, London.

Now ready, price 2d.; post-free, Three Penny Stamps.
FAMILY HERALD SUPPLEMENT
NEW YEAR'S DOUBLE NUMBER, containing
A COMPLETE NOVEL
More than double the length of the ordinary Supplement, Entitled
QUEEN OF HIS LIFE.
By New Author.
Price Twopence; post-free, Three Penny Stamps.
London: W. STEVENS, 421, Strand; and all Newsvendors.

ETCHINGS OF OLD LONDON. By ERNEST GEORGE. With Descriptive Letterpress. TWENTY ETCHINGS. Depicting PICTURESQUE SCENES IN LONDON; many of which have already disappeared. Now ready, in two Editions, namely, 100 SETS OF SIGNED JAPANESE PROOFS, mounted in Portfolio, £3 8s. A Limited Edition, bound in a specially designed cover, Small folio, £2 2s.
"These twenty plates are more than interesting memorials of places either already gone or doomed to disappear. . . . They are excellent as etchings."—Times.
"The intrinsic interest of the collection is very high."—Pall Mall Gazette.
"Richness of texture, tones, light and shadow, vivacity of representation, and vigour of touch. . . . Will long preserve delightful memoranda of London as it once was."—Athenæum.
"A sumptuous series of etchings."—Illustrated London News (G. A. Sa.).
The FINE-ART SOCIETY, 148, New Bond-street, London; and all Booksellers.

TO ARTISTS.
WANTED, — ORIGINAL SUBJECTS Suitable for Almanacks.
Address, R. H. and J. SHARP, Altrincham-street, Manchester

BINDING the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.—Half-yearly Volumes bound in the new appropriate Covers, with gilt edges, at 5s. 6d. each, if sent carriage free to LEIGHTON, SON, and HODGE, 16, Newcastle-street-square, Fleet-street. The only Binders authorised by the Proprietors.

IMPROVED POSTAGE-STAMP ALBUM FOR 1885. Systematically arranged, and all the most modern improvements. Superior, 224 pages, post-free, 3s. 6d. Circulars Free.—STANLEY GIBBONS and Co., 8, Gower-st., London.

MODELLING in Clay and Wax.—A Guide, by MORTON EDWARDS. Post-free, 1s. 1d. Clay, wax, stands, &c., at LECHERTIER, BARBE, and CO., 60, Regent-street, W.

TO MANITOBA.
The Completion of
THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY
(which is the ONLY DIRECT ROUTE to the Canadian North-West) to the summit of the Rocky Mountains has thrown open to settlement some of the finest Agricultural Lands in Manitoba and the North-West, of which the Dominion Government offer ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES FREE.
For further information apply to any Steam-ship Agent; and for new maps, pamphlets, and the latest particulars about the country (free of charge), as well as the new tourist guide, "From Quebec to the Rocky Mountains," when published, apply either personally or by letter to
ALEXANDER BEGG,
Canadian Pacific Railway Offices,
88, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

DRIVING BY NIGHT. The LIGHT from a PAIR of WESTAWAY'S PATENT LAMPS is equal to that from TWO ORDINARY CARRIAGE LAMPS. These LAMPS are STRONGLY MADE and PERFECTLY VENTILATED.
A pair will be SENT on APPROVAL, CARRIAGE PAID, and a FAIR TRIAL ALLOWED, on receipt of a remittance.
SOLD by all CARRIAGE-BUILDERS,
PARSONS and CHAPMAN, TAVISTOCK.

TO FAT PERSONS.—How to remove superfluous fat, cure obesity, and improve the health without dieting, starving, or fatiguing exercise, by F. C. RUSSELL (late of 15, Gower-street). Pipe and other particulars will be sent free on receipt of stamped envelope to F. C. RUSSELL, Woburn House, Store-st., Bedford-sq., London, W.C.

DR. LIEB'S EDIBLE FRUIT PILLS.

NO MORE NAUSEOUS MEDICINE.	A delicious Bon-Bon, the most effectual cure for Constipation, Headache, Bile, Indigestion, Liver Complaints, and all ailments of the human stomach, especially suited for Women, Children, and the delicate. The best Family Medicine. Taken eagerly by children. Highly recommended by the Faculty. Through any Chemist, at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s. per Box.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT. The Pills purify the blood, correct all disorders of the liver, stomach, kidneys, and bowels. The Ointment is unrivalled in the cure of bad legs, old wounds, gout, and rheumatism.

GREAT SALE at REDUCED PRICES at PETER ROBINSON'S MOURNING WAREHOUSE, REGENT-STREET.

THE ANNUAL JANUARY SALE will COMMENCE on MONDAY, JAN. 5, and continue for One Month.

GENUINE BARGAINS will be offered in each Department.
Amongst them may be mentioned Silk Costumes, reduced from 6½ to 4½ guineas, from 8½ to 6, from 10 to 7½, from 14 to 10 gs.

BALL, DINNER, and EVENING DRESSES. Reduced from 3 to 2 guineas, from 4 to 3, from 5 to 3½, from 8 to 6 guineas.

MATERIAL COSTUMES in Black and Greys, beautifully fashioned and designed, in various New Textures and Combinations. Reduced from 3 to 2 guineas, from 4 to 3, from 6 to 4, from 8 to 6 guineas.

THE MAGNIFICENT STOCK of CLOAKS, MANTLES, JACKETS, and OPERAS are all very considerably reduced.

BLACK SILKS and VELVETS.—Very handsome Brocaded Velvets, Plain Black Silks, Ottomans, Merveilleux, and Satins, are all marked down to very low prices.

FANCY SILKS and REMNANTS. Many reduced to One Half.

ALSO SHAWLS, Operas, Evening Fichus, Furs, Hosiery, Gloves, Collars.
The beautiful Stock of French Millinery Materials, by the yard. Crapes, &c., have all undergone the same reduction.

MOURNING ORDERS during the SALE will be supplied at the same cheap rates, best care and prompt attention will be given to all orders, large or small. Travelling assistants fully competent to take measures and instructions will be sent at once to any part of the country, free of any extra expense whatever to the customer, immediately on receipt of letter or telegram addressed to

PETER ROBINSON, MOURNING WAREHOUSE, REGENT-STREET, LONDON.

PLATT'S SPECIALITIES.
CAMBRIC POCKET-HANDKERCHIEFS, Linen Cambric, hemmed and washed, ready for use.
The So-called Five-eighths (18-inch).
4s., 4s. 9d., 5s. 6d., 6s. 6d., 7s. 9d., 9s., 10s. 6d., 12s. 6d. per dozen.
The So-called Three-quarter (21-inch).
5s. 3d., 6s., 6s. 10d., 7s. 9d., 8s. 9d., 10s., 12s., 14s. 9d. per dozen.
The So-called Seven-eighths (25-inch).
6s. 4d., 7s. 3d., 8s., 8s. 9d., 10s., 11s. 6d., 13s. 9d., 16s. 9d. per dozen.
PLATT and CO., 77, St. Martin's-le-lane, London, W.C., will send free to any part of England, Ireland, or Scotland, on receipt of cash with order, not less than 1 doz. at the doz. prices.
N.B.—If not satisfactory, the handkerchiefs can be sent back, and others had or money returned.

DRESS SHIRTS.—FORD'S EUREKA DRESS SHIRTS.—A large stock ready made in eight different sizes and three different qualities, of the very finest Linen, as well as the fashionable Ribbed Pique, to wear with one stud or three, 5s. 3d., 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., 9s. 6d. each. In single boxes, ready for use, by parcels post free.
R. FORD and CO., 41, Poultry, London.

ÆGIDIUS.—The only Flannel Shirts that Never Shrink in Washing.
Three for 29s. 6d.
R. FORD and CO., 41, Poultry, London.

ÆGIDIUS.—Three for 39s. 6d.
Soft as Silk, and very Elastic.
Free by parcels post.
R. FORD and CO., 41, Poultry, London.

ANNUAL SALE.—ALLISON and CO. beg respectfully to announce that on MONDAY, JAN. 5, they will be prepared to offer, at GREATLY REDUCED PRICES, their SURPLUS STOCK of FANCY GOODS, each Department having been carefully revised, and all made-up goods subject to change of fashion will be offered at very low prices. In addition to their regular stock, they invite attention to a large purchase of Satin Merveilleux, in all colours, at 2s. 11½d., and Black Satin Duchesse, at 3s. 11d., much under the usual price; coloured Vigogne Cloth at 10½d.; well-assorted Satin Sash-Ribbons, 9in. wide, at 2½d.; and rich Cashmere Sash-Ribbons at 3s. 6d.—REGENT HOUSE, 238, 240, and 242, Regent-street.

JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

FRENCH MODEL COSTUMES.—DRAP FRANCAISE, black, all wool, fully trimmed, mixed with striped velvet, and including sufficient material, with velvet, for bodice unmade. 2½ guineas.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

CRAPE.
MESSRS. JAY guarantee their Special Crapes for trimming will wear as long as the dress material, and that they will neither crockle nor shrink if saturated with water.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

3s. per Yard.
SATIN DUCHESSE (all silk), very bright, and makes a handsome Costume.
JAY'S,
THE LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE,
REGENT-STREET, W.

WALKER'S CRYSTAL CASE WATCHES are superseding all others. Prize Medals—London, 1862; Paris, 1867. Silver Watches, from £2 2s.; Gold, from £6 6s. Price-Lists sent free.—77, Cornhill; and 220, Regent-street.

ELKINGTON and CO.
ELECTRO-PLATE.
SILVER PLATE.
CLOCKS and BRONZES.

ELKINGTON and CO.
TESTIMONIAL PLATE.
CUTLERY &c.
Illustrated Catalogues post-free.
ELKINGTON and CO., 22, Regent-st.; or 42, Moorgate-st., City.

MR. and Mrs. PHILLIPS, the Old-Established Buyers, will be glad to PURCHASE CLOTHES. Parcels sent, appointments made, will receive prompt attention.—Old Curiosity Shop, 31, Thayer-st., Manchester-sq.

INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION,
South Kensington.—London, 1884.
GOLD MEDAL AWARDED for EXCELLENCE of QUALITY to
SALT and CO.,
EAST INDIA PALE and BURTON ALE BREWERS.
Stores and Offices—21 to 31, Pancras-road, London.

LIST of Prices to be obtained of all the principal Dealers.

HOOPING COUGH.
ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION.
The celebrated effectual cure without internal medicine. Sole Wholesale Agents, W. EDWARDS and SON, 157, Queen Victoria-street (formerly of 67, St. Paul's-churchyard), London, whose names are engraved on the Government stamp.
Sold by most Chemists. Price 4s. per Bottle.

NUDA VERITAS.—GREY HAIR restored by this specific; after which it grows the natural colour, not grey. Unequalled as a dressing. It causes growth, arrests falling, and PUTS out defies detection. The most harmless and effectual restorer extant. One trial will convince it has no equal. Price 1s., 2s., of all Chemists and Hairdressers. Testimonials free. Agents, R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

GOLDEN HAIR.—Robare's AUREOLINE produces the beautiful golden colour so much admired. Warranted perfectly harmless. Price 5s. 6d. and 10s. 6d., of all principal Perfumers and Chemists throughout the world.
Agents, R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

AIX-LES-BAINS, SAVOY. — Most important of Continental Sulphurous Spas. Eleven hours from Paris. Rheumatism, sciatica, gout, and catarrh of the pharynx, larynx, and nasal passages efficaciously treated.

BÂLE.—Hôtel National, opposite Central Railway. Modern comforts moderate prices. Rest in Bâle. Dinners, Breakfasts, and Refreshments at Buffet prices. Break your journey here. English spoken.—Proprietor, E. MEURICE.

CASTELLAMARE - STABIA, ITALY. Grand Hôtel Quisisana. Central, elevated, and near Pompeii, on the road to Sorrento, Amalfi, and Capri. One hour from Naples. Healthy, comfortable hotel.—N. SOLDINI, Proprietor.

CANNES.—Hôtel Beau Site. Adjoining Lord Brougham's property. Beautiful and sheltered situation. Large gardens; lawn-tennis. Baths, lifts, 200 chambers. Moderate charges.—GEORGES GONCOLLE, Proprietor.

GENOA.—Grand Hôtel de Gênes. First-class House for Families and Tourists; away from railway noise and odours of the port. Moderate charges. Highly recommended. BONERA FRERES, Proprietors.

LUCERNE.—Hôtels Schweitzerhof and Lucernerhof. Maintain high reputation, and worthily recommended. Open all the year. Facing steam-boat pier. Close to Station, Gothard Railway.—HAUSER FRERES, Proprietors.

MILAN.—Hôtel Grande Bretagne, and Reichmann. First-class Hotel; most central of the town. Entirely renovated, very comfortable house. The English Consul is resident here. ROSSI and AMBROSETTI, Proprietors.

NAPLES.—Grand Hôtel, Naples. Opened January, 1882. Managed by A. HAUSER (a member of the Hauser family of the Schweitzerhof and Lucernerhof, Hôtel Giessbach, &c., in Switzerland).

NAPLES.—Royal Hotel maintains its reputation as a superior first-class house, under the personal supervision of its founder and owner, Mr. Caprani, an English resident for several years.

NAPLES.—Hôtel Tramontano, on the Corso V. Emanuele. Highest and healthiest pa t; magnificent view of the bay and islands. Desirable homely family hotel. Kept by an English lady.

NICE.—COSMOPOLITAN HOTEL.
HOTEL DE LA GRANDE BRETAGNE.
These two very superior grand hotels excel any on the Riviera. South aspect. Calorifère and Ascenseur at each.
J. LAVIT, Director.

NICE.—TERMINUS HOTEL. facing the station.
Splendid south position.
Hydraulic Ascenseur and Baths.
180 Chambers and Salons.

OUCHY, Lausanne.—Hôtel Beau Rivage. First-class extra. Grand view of Lake and Alps. Soirees dansantes. Concerts. Satisfactory arrangements. Winter pension. Apply for Tariff to MARTIN RUFENACHT, Director.

PEGLI.—Grand Hôtel Pegli (formerly De la Méditerranée). Facing the sea. South a-pect, surrounded by gardens and mountains. Climate unsurpassed. Sanitary arrangements; satisfactory charges. BECHERAZZI FRERES, Prop.

POZZUOLI, near Naples.—Hôtel Grande Bretagne. Warm winter residence, near the Solfatara, and renowned ruins of Pozzuoli, Baiæ, &c. Mrs. DAWES, the Proprietress, is English. Moderate terms; tariff free

ROME.—Grand Hôtel de Russie. First class, beautiful; near English and American churches; spa-timents facing south. Hotel warmed by calorifère arrangements; moderate prices. Lift.—G. MARIONI, Proprietor.

ROME.
HOTEL DU QUIRINAL.
B. GROSSKURTH and Co.

TURIN.—Grand Hôtel Europe, opposite King's Palace, Grand-square, Castello. Reputation for modern comforts. 150 rooms. Baths, lift, omnibus. Moderate charges. Concessionaires Grand Restaurant at Exhibition.

VENICE.—Grand Hôtel d'Italie.—On the Grand Canal, close to the Square of St. Marc. Renowned restaurant and brasserie adjoining the hotel. Substantial and generous fare. BAUER GRUNWALD, Proprietor.

ZURICH.—Hôtel Habis, First Class, opposite Railway Station. Modern comfort with moderate charges. Recommended to English and American travellers; arrangements for a stay. Address, HABIS-REUTIGER, Proprietor.

PENSIONNAT de Mdlle. SCHOLLMEYER, Avenue Brugmann, 1, Bruxelles.—Higher Education in Scientific Branches. Foreign Languages, Music, Painting, &c. Resident certificated French and English Governesses. Pleasant family life; home comforts. Large garden, in a healthy situation. References—Gebeimrath Dr. Mayer, Aachen (Aix-la-Chapelle); O. Günther, Esq., Antwerp.

PULLNA BITTERWATER, BOHEMIA. THE OLDEST AND MOST VALUABLE SPRING. THE BEST STOMACHIC. APERIENT. ANTON ULBRICH, Son of the Founder.

VERMOUTH.—Francesco Cinzano and Co. Vermouth, combination Anti Wine and Algone herbs, with quinine. Refreshing tonic and digestive. O Wine Merchants, and F. CINZANO and CO., Corso Re Umberto, 10, Turin.

CHOCOLAT MENIER.
AMSTERDAM EXHIBITION, 1883. Awarded the GRAND DIPLOMA OF HONOUR.

CHOCOLAT MENIER, in ¼ lb. and ½ lb. PACKETS.
For BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, and SUPPER.

CHOCOLAT MENIER.—Awarded Twenty-Eight PRIZE MEDALS.
Consumption annually exceeds 25,000,000 lb.

CHOCOLAT MENIER. Paris, London, New York.
Sold Everywhere.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA.
Anti Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder.
Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa, with excess of Fat extracted. Four times the strength of Cocoas Thickened yet Weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c., and in reality cheaper.
The faculty pronounce it the most nutritious, perfectly digestive Beverage for "BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, or SUPPER." Keeps for years in all Climates. Requires no Cooking. A teaspoonful to Breakfast-cup costing less than a halfpenny.
In Air-Tight Tins. ¼ lb., 6d.; ½ lb., 1s.; ¾ lb., 1s. 6d.; 1 lb., 2s. 6d.; &c. by Chemists and Grocers.
H. SCHWEITZER and CO., 10, Adam-street, Strand, W.C.

FRY'S COCOA. GOLD MEDAL, Calcutta Exhibition, 1884.
FRY'S CARACAS COCOA. "A most delicious and valuable article."—Standard.
PURE COCOA ONLY.
FRY'S COCOA EXTRACT. Strictly pure, easily assimilated."—W. W. STODART, Analyst for Bristol.
NINETEEN PRIZE MEDALS.

DR. G. H. JONES, No. 57, Great Russell-street, opposite the British Museum, will forward a Sixty-four Page ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET, GRATIS and post-free, with list of medals, diplomas, and awards at the great International Exhibitions.
S. G. Hutchins, Esq., Surgeon-Dentist to the Queen, says in letter to Dr. G. H. Jones, said:—"Your system is the perfection of painless dentistry, and your teeth are the best, safest, and most life-like."
See also Opinions of the Press. "Christian Union" says:—"Dr. G. H. Jones supplies prize-medal teeth and workmanship at a less cost than ordinary dentists charge for inferior and worthless imitations of his patented perfectly painless and safe system."

NEW MUSIC.

THE CHRISTMAS NUMBER of CHAPPELL'S MUSICAL MAGAZINE, No. 128.
Containing the following popular Dance Music:—
Fontainebleau Waltz .. .. .. H.R.H. Duke of Albany.
Mon Amour Waltz .. .. .. P. Bucalossi.
Mother Hubbard Polka .. .. .. Caroline Lowthian.
Rip Van Winkle Galop .. .. .. Charles D'Albert.
Rip Van Winkle Polka .. .. .. Charles D'Albert.
Old London Lancers .. .. .. C. Coote.
Daisy Valse .. .. Luke Wheeler.
La Princesse des Canaries Quadrilles.. C. Coote.
Kiss Valse .. .. Johann Strauss.
La Pergola Polka .. .. .. E. Marie.
Price 1s. ; post-free, 1s. 2d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

TRIAL BY JURY. By W. S. Gilbert and ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Now performing at the Savoy Theatre. Complete words and music, 3s. net; pianoforte solo, 2s. 6d. net.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S NEW SONGS.

BID ME GOOD-BYE (Just Published). Words by F. E. Weatherly; Music by P. TOSTI. For Soprano, Tenor, Contralto, Baritone, or Bass. Price 2s. net. "Bid me Good-bye" will rival in popularity all previous songs by this favourite composer." "An enormous success."
MOTHER. Words by F. Weatherly. Music by P. TOSTI. Sung by all the principal Vocalists.
AT VESPERS. P. TOSTI.
WHERE MEMORY DWELLS. ISIDORE DE LARA.
GATES OF THE WEST. CAROLINE LOWTHIAN
GATES OF THE WEST. As a Vocal Duet.
O RIPPLING TIDE. Mrs. MONCRIEFF. Mrs. Moncrieff's greatest success.
MY TRUST. I. DE LARA.
SO SWEET A STORY. COTSFORD DICK.
FAREWELL, YET NOT FAREWELL. CAROLINE LOWTHIAN.
Price 2s. each net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street, W.; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

NEW DANCE MUSIC.

BID ME GOOD-BYE VALSE. On the melody of Signor Tosti's newest and most successful song. By HENRY W. DE CAMORS. Price 2s. net.
PHYLLIS WALTZ. P. BUCALOSSI.
CLAIRE WALTZ. LEONARD GAUTIER. Illustrated with a photograph of Mrs. Kendal, by Elliott and Fry.
MERRY FOOTSTEPS POLKA. P. BUCALOSSI.
FAHRWOHL WALTZ. CAROLINE LOWTHIAN.
BLACK AND TAN POLKA. CAROLINE LOWTHIAN.
TOI SEULE VALSE. LUKE WHEELER.
SEA BREEZE POLKA.
"The Sea Breeze Polka is one of the best and most spirited polkas which has been published for some time."—Morning Post. 2s. each.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO. have on view every description of PIANOFORTES by the best makers, returned from hire, to be SOLD at greatly reduced prices for cash, or may be purchased on the Three-Years' System.
CHAPPELL PIANOFORTES, from 15 guineas.
COLLARD PIANOFORTES, from 35 guineas.
ERARD PIANOFORTES, from 35 guineas.
BROADWOOD PIANOFORTES, from 35 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO'S STUDENT'S PIANOFORTES, from 16 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S PIANINOS, with Check Action, from 20 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S IRON-FRAMED OBLIQUE and COTTAGE PIANOFORTES for Ocean Steamers and Extreme Climates, from 35 to 65 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO. have on View Grand Pianofortes from 50 to 250 guineas.
50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry.

EDWIN ASHDOWN, Hanover-square, forwards Catalogues of his 20,000 MUSICAL WORKS post-free to all parts of the world.

ASHDOWN EDITION of STANDARD PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

	Net, s. d.
1. Chopin's Twenty-seven Studies	2 6
2. Stephen Heller's Album. Op. 138	1 6
3. Henri Rouhier's 20 Melodies of Franz Schubert	2 0
4. Stephen Heller's Twenty-four Preludes. Op. 81 ..	1 6
5. Chopin's Eighteen Nocturnes	2 0
6. Czerny's One Hundred and One Exercises	1 0
7. Czerny's Etude de la Velocité	2 0
8. Schumann's Phantasiestücke. Op. 12	1 6
9. Schubert's Eight Impromptus	1 6
10. Liszt's Soirée de Vienne	2 6
11. Clementi's Six Sonatinas. Op. 36	1 6
12. Stephen Heller's Thirty-two Preludes. Op. 119 ..	1 6
13. Rubinstein's Soirées à St. Pétersbourg, 6 Morceaux	1 0
14. Chopin's Forty-three Mazurkas	3 0
15. Schmann's Album für die Jugend. Op. 68	1 6
16. Dussek's Six Sonatinas. Op. 20	1 6
17. Gottschalk Selection No. 1 (Pamplonade and five others)	1 0
18. Kuhlau's Six Sonatinas. Op. 55	1 0
19. Chopin's Eight Waltzes	1 6
20. Kullak's Youthful Days. 24 Characteristic Pieces ..	1 6
21. Kessler's Twenty-four Studies	2 6
22. Clementi's Six Sonatinas. Op. 37 and 38	1 6

ASHDOWN EDITION of STANDARD VOCAL MUSIC.

	Net, s. d.
1. Concone. 50 Singing Lessons (pour le médium de la voix)	1 6
2. Constantino Perugini. Six Lessons in Solfeggio for Two Voices	1 0
3. Niels W. Gade. Eight Vocal Duets (English and German Words)	1 0
4. Franz Abt. 10 Vocal Duets (English and German Words)	2 0
5. Romanini and Nava. 12 Solfeggios for Contralto Voice	1 0
6. Keller. Eight Vocal Duets (English and German Words)	1 0
7. Panseron. The Elements of Singing	1 0
8. W. S. Bennett. Six Songs. Op. 23 (English and German Words)	1 0

All the above Works sent, post-free, at prices quoted.

ANY 2s. SONG or PIECE OF MUSIC sent post-free, 10d.; any 3s. ditto, 1s. 2d.; any 4s. ditto, 1s. 8d.; any 2s. net, 1s. 8d.; all publishers, except bound works. Many Songs, Pieces, much cheaper. Catalogues sent post-free.
J. W. MOFFATT, 3, Barnsbury-street, London, N.
Established 1827.

BROADWOOD'S PIANOFORTES. CRAMER'S SUPPLY every size of these INSTRUMENTS on their Three-Years' System of Hire. 207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

ERARD'S PIANOFORTES.—CRAMER'S SUPPLY every size of these INSTRUMENTS on their Three-Years' System of Hire.—207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

COLLARD'S PIANOFORTES. CRAMER'S SUPPLY every size of these INSTRUMENTS on their Three-Years' System of Hire. 207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

GRAND PIANOFORTES. — CRAMER'S SUPPLY GRAND PIANOFORTES by all the great makers, from £7 7s. to £31 10s. per quarter. Full Price-Lists post-free.—207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

NEW MUSIC.

J. B. CRAMER and CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

J. B. CRAMER and CO.'S DANCE ALBUM (No. 3) for Christmas, 1884, Contains Nine Original and Popular DANCE PIECES, including a Children's Singing Quadrille, by RUDOLPH HERZEN. In Illustrated paper cover. Price 1s. net.

CAROLINE LOWTHIAN'S CELEBRATED DANCE MUSIC.
MYOSOTIS. WALTZ.
OLD LOVE AND THE NEW. WALTZ.
MARGUERITE. WALTZ.
SWALLOWS. WALTZ.
VANITY FAIR. POLKA.
QUEEN OF HEARTS. POLKA.
Published as solos and duets. Each 2s. net.

CHARMING NEW WALTZES.
CERISE. CHARLES DEACON.
ETHEL. EDGAR DE VALMENCY.
FENELLA. LOUISE MORRISON.
ELISSA. EDGAR DE VALMENCY.
LA SALUTATION. LOUIS H. D'EGVILLE
SON ALTESSE. EDGAR DE VALMENCY.
CORYPHÉE. C. R. DUGGAN.
MAIDEN DREAMS WALTZ. E. BUCALOSSI.
Each 2s. net.

THE FORTY THIEVES. Comic Cantata, composed by EDMUND ROGERS, for Soprano, Contralto, Tenor, and Baritone; the words taken by permission from Dean's Pinch-mime Toy-Tale Book. Price 3s. net.
J. B. CRAMER and Co., 201, Regent-street, London, W.

SECOND EDITION.
NEW SONG. OH! WHO TO DULL ROSES WOULD LIKEN HIS LOVE? By R. WHITE. "Light and piquant." "No difficulties." By post, 2s.
J. B. CRAMER and Co., 201, Regent-street, London; Wood and Co., George-street, Edinburgh.

CHARMING NEW SONGS. 24 stamps each.
HEART TO HEART. By BEHREND. "The prettiest and most charming song issued this season." "
A, B flat (C to E), C, and D.
SURELY. New Song. By A. H. BEHREND. 15,620 copies sold first month of issue. 15,620 copies sold first month of issue. 15,620 copies so d first month of issue. E flat, F, G (compass D to E), A flat, B flat, and C.
GOING HOME. New Song. By COTSFORD DICK. "This new song will take high rank." G, A flat, A (compass F to F), and B flat.
TILL THE BREAKING OF THE DAY. By CIRO PINSUTI. "A splendid song, one of uncommon merit; the music is rich and full, and contains a most charming melody. Certainly Signor Pinsuti's prettiest and most beautiful song." F, G, A flat, A (E to F), and B flat. "The success of the season." 2s stamps each.
W. MORLEY and CO., 269, Regent-street, W.; and 70, Upper-street, N.

POPULAR SONGS.
I MEAN TO WAIT FOR JACK. COTSFORD DICK. In E flat and F. Words by F. Langbridge.
GRANDMOTHER'S SWEETHEART. M. WILSON. In C and D.
THE SONG OF A BOAT. A. BORTON.
WAIT, DARLING, WAIT. F. L. MOIR. C and E flat.
PLEASE YOURSELF. G. ADELMANN. Each 2s. net.
ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street, London, W.

SEE-SAW WALTZ. By A. G. CROWE.

The following Editions are now ready:—	s. d.
Pianoforte Solo, with Vocal Obbligato ..	2 0
Pianoforte Duet, with Vocal Obbligato ..	2 0
As a Song, complete	2 0
Violin Solo	0 6
Flute Solo	0 6
Cornet Solo	0 6
Full Orchestra	2 0
Small Orchestra	1 4
Vocal Part, separately	0 2
Vocal Part, Tonic Sol-fa	0 2

Very suitable for children's fancy-dress balls, and may now be performed anywhere, free of charge or permission.
METZLER and Co., 42, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

Now ready.
THE SORCERER. Comic Opera. By W. S. GILBERT and ARTHUR SULLIVAN. New Edition, revised and partly rewritten. Vocal Scores, complete, 5s.; Piano Score, 3s.; Waltz, Quadrille, and Lancers, Solos, and Duets, 4s. each.
METZLER and Co., 42, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

Now ready.
METZLER and CO.'S SHILLING ALBUM of DANCE MUSIC for CHRISTMAS.
CONTENTS.

1. Valse Vénétienne	Emile Waldteufel.
2. Nell Gwynne Quadrille	Charles Coote.
3. Tip-Tip Polka	Phillipe Fahrbach, jun.
4. Valse D'Amour	Hermann Koenig.
5. Holly Galop (with bell accompaniment; Bells, 1s. 6d. the pair)	P. Bucalossi.
6. Nell Gwynne Lancers	Liddell.
7. Page D'Amour Valse (just published)	Georges Lamothe.
8. Fan-Fan La Tulipe Quadrille .. and ..	Arban.
9. Sweet Violets Waltz	P. Bucalossi.

In handsomely illuminated cover, new design, specially prepared. Price 1s. Suitable for Christmas Presents.
METZLER and Co., 42, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

THE AMERICAN ORGAN JOURNAL. Sacred and Secular. Edited by J. M. COWARD. No. 12, now ready, containing Les Remeaux (Faure), Marche Funèbre (Chopin), David Singing before Saul (Reeves), Miriam at her Harp (Sir Michael Costa), Morning Prayer (Joseph Barnby), Bourrée (Scotson Clark), &c. All easily and effectively arranged, with the stops clearly indicated. Price 6d. net.
METZLER and Co., 42, Great Marlborough-street, London.

CHARLES HALLÉ'S PRACTICAL PIANOFORTE SCHOOL.
New Edition. The two first sections enlarged.
Charles Hallé's New Pianoforte Tutor.
The best and most modern work ever published.
FORSYTH BROTHERS, London and Manchester.

CHARLES HALLÉ'S MUSICAL LIBRARY.
Forsyth Brothers beg to call attention to their New Edition of Charles Hallé's Musical Library, which has been enlarged and entirely remodelled on the plan of his celebrated Pianoforte School.
Catalogues post-free on application.
FORSYTH BROTHERS, London and Manchester.

DOMINION ORGANS.
A Large Stock of these celebrated Organs always on view. Considered the finest-toned American Organs yet produced.
A New two-manual pedal Organ just introduced, style 93.
Catalogues post-free.
FORSYTH BROTHERS, 272A, Regent-circus, Oxford-street, London; and 122 and 124, Deansgate, Manchester.

D'ALMAINE'S PIANOS Half Price, from £10. D'ALMAINE'S AMERICAN ORGANS from £5. All full compass, warranted for ten years; carriage free, and all risk taken. Easiest terms arranged. Established 100 years.
91, Finsbury-pavement, City, E.C.

NEW YEAR'S PRESENTS at RODRIGUES', 42, PICCADILLY.
SETS FOR THE WRITING-TABLE AND BOUDOIR, IN POLISHED BRASS, OXIDIZED SILVER, and CHINA.

DRESSING CASES	from 21s. to £50.
JEWEL CASES	15s. to £10
CASES OF IVORY BRUSHES	63s. to £10
DESPATCH BOXES	21s. to £10
WRITING CASES	12s. to £5
ENVELOPE CASES AND BLOTTERS	10s. 6d. to £5
STATIONERY CASES AND CABINETS	21s. to £5
INKSTANDS	7s. 6d. to £5
CANDLESTICKS (per pair)	7s. 6d. to £5
HALL LETTER BOXES	21s. to £10
BOXES OF GAMES	84s. to £12
CASES OF CARPENTERS' TOOLS (In Leather)	21s. to £2
CIGAR AND CIGARETTE CABINETS	42s. to £10
LIQUEUR CASES	50s. to £10

CLOCKS, SCENT BOTTLES, OPERA GLASSES, FANS.
And a large and choice assortment of ENGLISH, VIENNESE, and PARISIAN NOVELTIES, from 5s. to £5.

TRAVELLING DRESSING BAGS, Morocco, with Hall-marked Silver Fittings, £5 5s., £10 10s., £15, £20, £30 to £50.
EMPTY TRAVELLING BAGS, SOUFFLET BAGS, HAND BAGS, AND CARRIAGE BAGS, IN MOROCCO, RUSSIA, AND CROCODILE.

PORTRAIT ALBUMS at RODRIGUES' for Cartes-de-Visite and Cabinet Portraits, 10s. 6d. to £5.
REGIMENTAL AND PRESENTATION ALBUMS.
PHOTOGRAPH FRAMES, for Panel, Promenade, Cabinets, and Cartes-de-Visite sizes, in Ormolu, Leather, Velvet, and Plush.
PHOTOGRAPH SCREENS, Leather and Plush, all sizes, to hold from Two to Twenty-Four Portraits.
THE NEW REVERSIBLE PHOTOGRAPH SCREEN, with gilt reversible hinges.

RODRIGUES' MONOGRAMS, ARMS, CORONET, CREST, and ADDRESS DIES Engraved as Gems from Original and Artistic Designs.
NOTE-PAPER and ENVELOPES, brilliantly Illuminated by hand in Gold, Silver, Bronze, and Colours.
BEST RELIEF STAMPING, any colour, 1s. per 100.
HERALDIC ENGRAVING, PAINTING, and ILLUMINATING. All the New and Fashionable Note-Papers.
BALL PROGRAMMES, MENU CARDS, GUEST CARDS, WEDDING CARDS, INVITATIONS, and BOOK PLATES.

A VISITING CARD PLATE elegantly engraved, and 100 CARDS Printed, for 4s. 6d.
RODRIGUES, 42, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

MOORE and MOORE'S Iron Pianofortes, 80 guineas, on Three-Years' System, carriage free. Liberal discount for cash. Illustrated Price-List post-free. Pianofortes from 14 guineas.—104 and 105, Bishopsgate Within.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE or for SALE, from 25 guineas upwards.—JOHN BROADWOOD and SONS, 33, Great Pulteney-street, Golden-square, W. Manufactory, 46, Horseferry-road, Westminster.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—Messrs. ERARD, of 18, Great Marlborough-street, London, and 13, Rue de Mail, Paris, Makers to her Majesty and the Prince and Princess of Wales, CAUTION the Public that Pianofortes are being sold bearing the name of "Erard" which are not of their manufacture. For information as to authenticity apply at 18, Great Marlborough-st., where new Pianos can be obtained from 30 guineas.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—COTTAGES, from 50 guineas.
OBLIQUES, from 85 guineas.
GRANDS, from 125 guineas.

TRELOAR'S
BRUSSELS CARPETS.

3s. 3d. per yard.	4s. 3d. per yard.
3s. 6d. " "	4s. 6d. " "
3s. 9d. " "	4s. 9d. " "
4s. 0d. " "	5s. 0d. " "

Exclusive in design. Special in quality.
TRELOAR and SONS, LUDGATE-HILL.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
EPPS'S (BREAKFAST) COCOA.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.
Made simply with boiling water or milk.
Sold in Packets, labelled
JAMES EPPS and CO., HOMŒOPATHIC CHEMISTS.
Also Makers of EPPS'S CHOCOLATE ESSENCE.

CHUBB'S PATENT LOCKS.
CASH AND DEED BOXES.
TWENTY MEDALS awarded at the various International Exhibitions.
68, ST. JAMES'S-STREET, PALL-MALL.
128, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, E.C.
Price-Lists Post-free.

CHURCH AND TURRET CLOCKS.
J. W. BENSON, maker of many of the best known CHURCH and TURRET CLOCKS. Now making the GREAT ILLUMINATED CLOCK for the HUSAINABAD TOWER, LUCKNOW, to show time on four dials 12ft. in diameter and quarter on bells of 2½ tons. Also the Clock for NEW COLLEGE, OXFORD, &c. Estimates and specifications for all kinds of Church, Turret, Stable, and Factory Clocks, on application to the Steam Factory (the only one in the City of London where Turret Clocks can be seen in process of manufacture).—J. W. BENSON, the Steam Factory, Ludgate-hill and Belle Sauvage-yard, E.C. London.

JOHN BROGDEN, deceased.
The VALUABLE STOCK of ART-JEWELLERY is NOW FOR SALE, at a REASONABLE REDUCTION, for a LIMITED TIME, by order of the Executors.
6, GRAND HOTEL-BUILDINGS, CHARING-CROSS.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR LIVER.
COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR BILE.
COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR INDIGESTION.
COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR HEARTBURN.

ANY DOCTOR WILL TELL YOU there is no better Cough Medicine than KEATING'S LOZENGES. One gives relief; if you suffer from Cough try them but once; they will cure, and they will not injure your health. Sold everywhere, in 1s½d. Tins.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS.

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
With the Patent-string Adjustment produces a greater volume and finer quality of tone, the strings being carried through the solid metal frame, so that it is almost impossible for them to pull round or slip, and thus get out of tune.

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
With the Patent Cone-Edged Metal Framing, cast in a single solid piece, is capable of bearing an amount of strain far in excess of any that has yet been brought to bear in the most modern development of the instrument.

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
With the Patent Perfect Check Repeater Action replaces intricacy by simplicity, affording perfect leverage to the finger of the performer.

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
The Patent String Compressor preserves the instrument. Now, both in the violin and the pianoforte, the immense pressure caused by the tension of the strings has the natural effect of depressing the sounding board, and thus causing depreciation of the tone, but in the Brinsmead Piano any or every note can in a moment be readjusted by means of a leverage bar, which raises or depresses the strings as in the case of the bridge of the violin.

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
The Patent Sostenente Sounding Board covers the entire area of the back of the instrument, and its method of attachment is such as to secure the greatest amount of elasticity; in addition, it is adjusted to a definite curve in accordance with true acoustic principles, the effect of which on the reverberating agency is of vital importance.

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
The Patent String Adjustment supersedes the wooden wrest plank, and its clumsy old pegs, and the consequent grave defect of quickly getting out of tune, ease, perfection, and durability of tuning being thus attained.

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
The "Times" says:—"The Cross of the Legion of Honour has been conferred on Mr. John Brinsmead."

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
The "Daily Telegraph" says:—"The King of Portugal has appointed Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons makers of pianofortes to his Majesty."

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
The "Standard" says:—"The King of Portugal has conferred the Knighthood of the Royal Portuguese Order of our Lady of Conceiçao of Villa Vigosa on Mr. John Brinsmead, the founder of the firm of John Brinsmead and Sons, London."

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
The "Daily News" says:—"The appointment of Pianoforte Manufacturers to the King of Bavaria has been conferred on Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons, of London."

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
The "Echo" says:—"The nearest approach to perfection with which we are acquainted. Unless the whole plan is radically changed, it would seem impossible to make any further advances."

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
The "Illustrated London News" says:—"The principle of the Brinsmead firm is to give the best Piano of its kind, the best of materials, the best of care, the best of taste, and the best of finish; and this is why the manufactory in Kentish Town sends down to Wigmore-street so many pianos perfect in scale, sustained in tone, exactly in bulk, with equal and responsive touch, and, in fact, as near as possible to that ideal that all musicians must require—a thing of beauty that is 'a joy for ever.'"

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
The "Graphic" says:—"This splendid instrument has the unusual compass of seven octaves and a half, and has a greatly increased length and weight of string between the bridge, while the tenebrante sounding board is so constructed as to respond to the vibration of the strings with extreme readiness."

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
Sims Reeves says:—"It is everything that could be desired."

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
Ch. Gounod says:—"Tone full and sustained; touch of perfect evenness throughout."

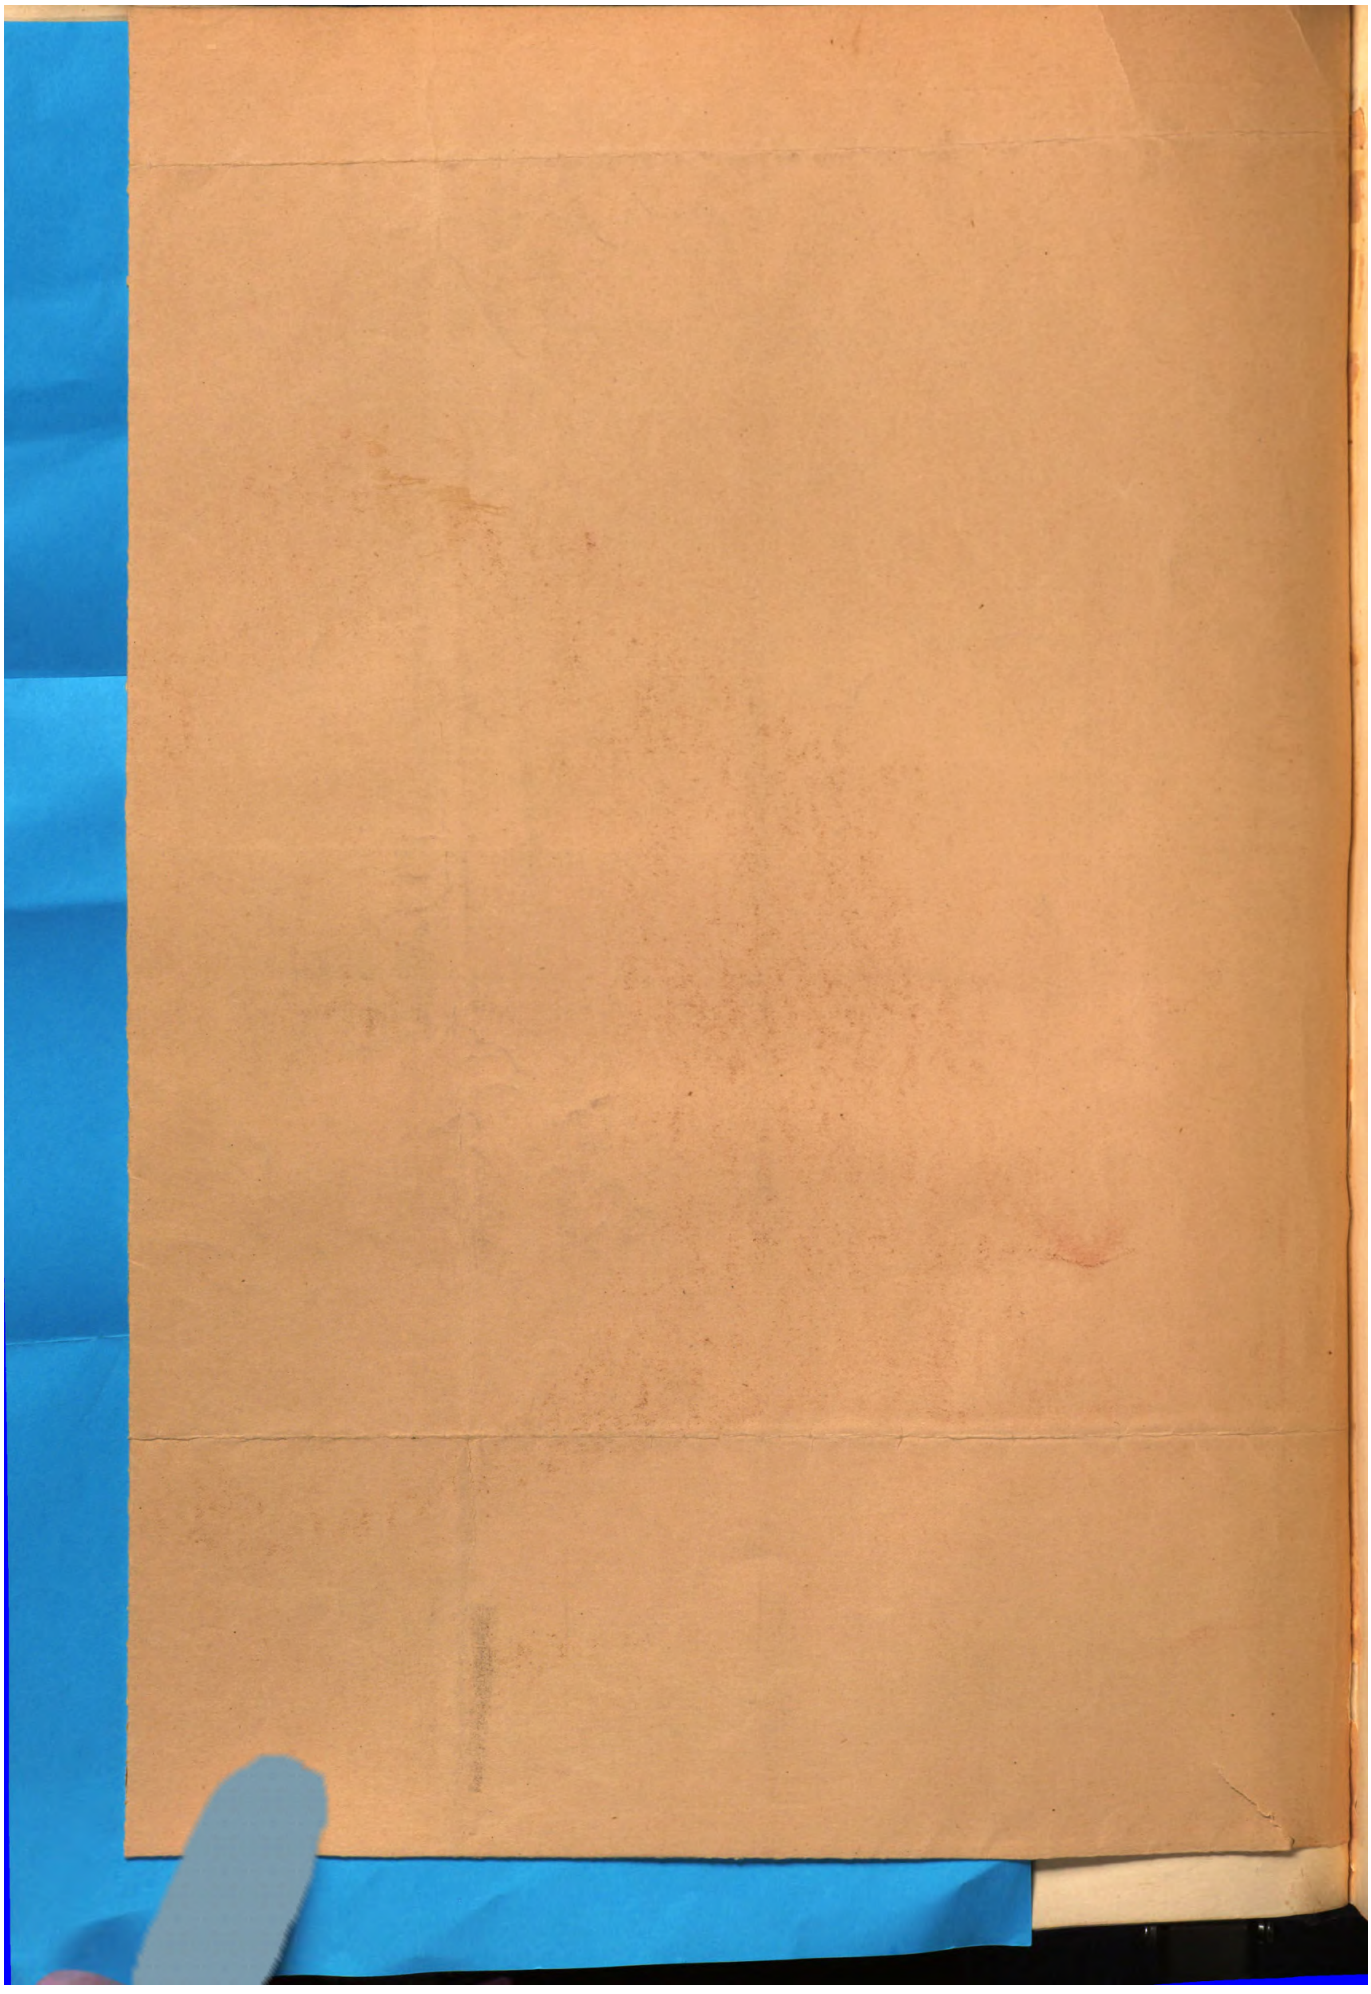
THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
Nicholas Rubinstein, D. Magnus, and the Chevalier Antoine de Kontski say:—"We, the undersigned, after having attentively examined the pianos exhibited, declare that the palm belongs to the house of Brinsmead."

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
Vladimir de Pachmann says:—"Truly matchless pianos."

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
F. A. Gevaert says:—"The magnificent piano is only equalled in its beauty and finish by its admirable purity of sound."

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
Dr. Steiner says:—"The purity of tone and the excellent mechanism called forth warm eulogies from all competent critics."

THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
These improvements have gained Gold Medals and Highest Awards at all the recent Industrial Exhibitions at which they have been exhibited.



THE BRINSMEAD PIANO.
ENTIRELY NEW CONSTRUCTION THROUGHOUT.
Secured by numerous patents throughout the world.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS.
PIANOS may be Hired for Three Years, after which time they become the property of the hirer without further payment. From £3½ per quarter, or for sale from 35 guineas upwards.

JOHN BRINSMEAD and SONS, PIANOFORTE MANUFACTURERS,
18, 20, and 22, WIGMORE-STREET, LONDON, W.
Manufactory:
THE BRINSMEAD WORKS, GRAFTON-ROAD, KENTISH-TOWN, N.W.
Descriptive Pamphlets and Illustrated Priced Catalogues post-free.

THE ILLU

DRAWN BY F. BARNARD.

"You couldn't oblige me by telling me the number of my room, could you?"

ADRIAN VIDAL.

BY W. E. NORRIS,

AUTHOR OF "MDLLE. DE MERSAC," "MATRIMONY," "THIRLBY HALL," &C

CHAPTER I.

A CHANCE ENCOUNTER.

A young man was sitting before a writing-table in his bedroom at that overgrown caravanserai the Schweizerhof at Lucerne. By his elbow lay a burnt-out pipe; a few books of reference and various scribbled notes surrounded the blotting-book over which he was bending; while beneath his hand a blank half-sheet of foolscap was waiting—and had, indeed, been waiting some little time—to receive the first strokes of the hovering pen. But the pen continued to hover dubiously; the hand that held the pen shook; the brain which should have been conveying directions to the hand was worried and unmanageable, as well it might be. For of all positions in which an author can choose to place his writing-table, that beside an open window overlooking a glaring lake is probably the least advantageous; and, of all buildings, an hotel is about the most unsuitable for the work of composition. Again, of all hotels the Schweizerhof is one of the busiest; finally, of all towns in Christendom Lucerne is quite the most distractingly noisy. Church bells jangle and boom there perpetually; steamers shriek, carts rattle over the stones, porters, for ever loading and unloading omnibuses, yell at one another, and the proprietors of the hotel—fearing, no doubt, that these cheerful sounds may not suffice to keep up the spirits of their guests—have not shrunk from adding to them a full private band, which scrapes and tootles indefatigably beneath the windows. From early morning to midnight, or near it, the hubbub rages, until one ceases to wonder that the poor clerk, feverishly totting up accounts in the bureau, should look so like an escaped lunatic.

The author on the second floor was already beginning to display points of resemblance to that over-worked official. His face was haggard, his sighs were piteous to hear, and his fair hair would have been dishevelled if it had been long enough. As it was, he had only succeeded in rubbing all trace of a parting out of it, and causing it to stand up in abrupt tufts here and there, so that anyone who had not known what he was about might have supposed him to have just tumbled out of bed. For the rest, he was a good-looking young fellow enough, his forehead being broad and square, his nose straight, and the grey eyes beneath his somewhat arched brows large and expressive. A slight moustache hardly concealed his mouth, which a physiognomist would at once have pronounced to be the mouth of an artist or an imaginative writer. A practised physiognomist might, even at this early period of Adrian Vidal's career, have seen reason to place him in the latter category, for he bore certain outward signs of the nervous literary temperament, and already upon his forehead were faintly traced those horizontal lines which the plough of Time so soon deepens into furrows. The lines were rather more perceptible than usual just now, owing to the causes above alluded to.

"Why, one might as well be in London, you know," he exclaimed aloud, addressing himself in a tone of gentle remonstrance to space. "In all my born days I never heard such an infernal din. And this in the month of May, too! What can it be like in summer, when the tourists are loose?"

Adrian Vidal had never been at Lucerne before, or he certainly would not have fallen into the error of supposing that it is a quiet retreat at any time, unless it be in the dead of the winter—and even then, most likely, the church bells do not cease from troubling. In the month of May travellers alight there from all quarters. Some, like our misguided author, come from the north; not a few invade it from over the German frontier; but it is the south, whence the great army of invalids is then wending its way homewards, that supplies the little town with the bulk of its fugitive guests. From Egypt, from Algeria, from Italy, from the Riviera they pour over the mountains, or burrow under them, and alighting, with querulous buzzings and murmurings, for a night, pass on, to be succeeded on the following day by a crowd as large and as uproarious. Just now—for the afternoon was on the wane and two trains and a steamer had come in—a strong contingent of them had arrived at the Schweizerhof. Vidal could hear them stamping up and down the corridors, calling to their servants, scolding the waiters, ringing their bells and slamming their doors.

Presently there came a knock at his own door, one of those irresolute deprecating taps which are so much more irritating to the nerves than a loud bang.

"Oh, come in!" said the young man, resignedly.

However, nobody took advantage of the permission, so he sighed and began to cudgel his brains once more. After about a minute the timid signal was repeated.

"Entrez! Herein! Favorisca! Come in!" shouted Vidal, savagely. "Stay out, then," he concluded in a more philosophical tone, and returned to his work.

Then the door was slowly and creakingly opened about a foot, and through the aperture appeared the head and shoulders of a mild-looking old gentleman with long grey hair and spectacles. "Oh," said the intruder in accents of disappointment, "then this is not my room after all. I was afraid it couldn't be."

"It isn't," answered Vidal, more curtly than courteously. His manners and his temper were both fairly good in a general way; but it was rather too provoking that anyone should have entertained a doubt as to the ownership of the apartment after having been bawled at in four languages.

"I beg your pardon, I'm sure," said the old gentleman, retreating at once. Nevertheless he did not quite shut the door, and as Vidal, with an imprecation, was starting up to rectify this omission, the grey head of his tormentor was thrust in again. "I suppose," began the latter, hesitatingly, "you couldn't oblige me by telling me the number of my room, could you?"

"Well, really," returned Vidal, half-laughing, half-annoyed, "I'm afraid not. How could I, you know?—considering that I never set eyes on you before."

"No, no,—to be sure," agreed the other. "It's very awkward," he continued, rubbing his chin in perplexity. "You see, I can't even remember which storey it was on. And yet I did make a point of noticing it, too, before I went out."

"Hadn't you better apply to the hall porter?" said the young man.

"Dear me; yes—of course! So I will. A very good idea! I am much obliged to you, Sir, for suggesting it," cried the other, brightening up amazingly. And without more ado he trotted off to put it into execution.

"What an original old person!" muttered Vidal, as he seated himself at his table again. Then he laughed a little, and so fell into a good humour, which was always an easy process with him. "Writing be hanged!" said he, shutting up his blotting-book and beginning to whistle. "There's no greater mistake than writing when one is not in tune for it. It's a waste of time and a waste of vital power; and, besides that, it's apt to get one into the fatal habit of being satisfied with something less than one's best."

This last reflection will sufficiently show that Mr. Vidal had as yet had but small experience of his craft. A man who can't complacently put up with work which falls below the utmost limit of his powers must either be a genius or a tyro, and it is certain that Vidal was not a genius. His was the happier lot of possessing talents slightly above the average, keen faculties of observation, and a mind quick to receive impressions. It has already been said that he was physically favoured above his fellows; so that it should seem as if nothing had been lacking to make this young author a thoroughly contented man, unless it were money—of which, indeed, he had not quite so much as he could have desired. Yet even this deficiency could hardly be counted a drawback to happiness, since he had enough for present needs and looked forward to making his fortune in the pleasantest of all possible ways—namely, by his own exertions. When it is added that the proposed exertions were to be employed in the composition of novels it will be more than ever apparent how young Mr. Vidal was.

He pushed aside his writing-table and, resting his elbows upon the window-sill, looked out upon the blue lake, with its wooded promontories, and the snowy mountains of Uri rising cloud-capped in the distance. "It's all very lovely," he murmured; "only one can't enjoy it, unfortunately. Good Heavens! what a paradise one might make of this place if one could but sweep away the hotels and the steamers and the tourists at a blow! 'Every prospect pleases, and only man is vile,' as the hymn says."

He lowered his gaze to the strip of garden directly beneath him and the shady promenade on the quay, where assorted specimens of humanity were congregated in large numbers, happily unconscious of their vileness. The band, with preliminary squeaks and grunts, was tuning up for a fresh outburst; about the low wall which bordered the lake hung a crew of those loungers—touts, guides, boatmen and others—who batten upon the modern wanderer; the modern wanderer himself was exhaustively represented in every variety of garb.

"That's uncommonly like Heriot's back," mused Vidal, his eye falling upon a rather shabby shooting-coat among a host of others. And then, with more animation—"By Jove! it is Heriot's back. What an odd chance!"

He seized his hat, ran quickly down stairs, and was presently in a position to deal a resounding slap upon the back which he had identified and which was a somewhat round one.

The owner of the back started and said mildly, but with a little pardonable irritation, "Don't do that, whoever you are; I don't like it."

He was a man of something under middle age, although his head and his short pointed beard had nearly as many grey hairs as black. His face was one of those which are only qualified as ugly by reason of the poverty of language and which would have to be called beautiful if it were permissible to define beauty as that which is pleasant to look upon. Heriot's face, in spite of its snub nose, high cheek-bones and greyish-brown complexion, was very pleasant to look upon. Its habitual expression was one of mingled humorousness and pathos, which was attractive and also a little puzzling, until you looked more closely and saw that the pathos arose out of evident signs of physical suffering cheerfully borne. His soft brown eyes had an unnatural brilliancy at times which would of itself have sufficed to exclude him from any chance of doing business with a life insurance office. They lightened up now when he turned round and recognised his assailant.

"Adrian, of all people!" he exclaimed. "My dear boy, what on earth are you doing at Lucerne?"

"Cursing myself for having been such a fool as to come here," replied the other, with a laugh. "I don't know what made me fancy it a sequestered nook in which one might work all day without fear of interruption; but that was the extraordinary notion that I formed. Something in the sound of the name, I suppose. It doesn't much matter, after all. I can run up into the mountains in a day or two, and meanwhile I have the satisfaction of seeing you a good month earlier than I expected. And, by-the-way, what brings you here?"

"Oh, I am here for the excellent reason that I can't travel from Marseilles to London without a break—several breaks, in fact. I am creeping slowly towards my native land with the other cripples."

"And how are you, Heriot?" asked the younger man, scrutinising his friend with a shade of anxiety. "Not any worse, I should say, by the look of you."

"Well, no; I am pretty much where I was. I am not dead yet, as you see, and that is about all that I can say for myself."

"It seems to me that you are looking better," said Vidal, for he shared the general belief that such speeches are comforting, whether sincere or not.

Heriot laughed; he did not seem disposed to dwell upon the subject. "What about the great work?" he asked. "Has it been given to an expectant world yet?"

"Not yet; but it is upon the point of appearing, and to tell you the truth, I have left England as much to escape from the condolences of my friends as for anything else. I feel that it will be a ghastly failure."

"Why should you be so despondent?" asked Heriot, smiling.

"Because, when I read it over, I couldn't help seeing what a deadly dull book it was. It has good points—or at least I think so—but then they are not the sort of good points that will be at all likely to strike the general public; and I am afraid there isn't nearly enough of plot. Ah, those confounded plots!—the publishers ought to provide them for us. Why are we to be bothered and badgered into imagining involved combinations of circumstances? It isn't about that kind of thing that we want to write, nor in that kind of thing that we hope to interest our readers. Where is the plot in 'Tristram Shandy,' I should like to know? For my part, if a novel pleases me, I care no more about the plot than I do about the binding; do you?"

"Well, if you ask me, I must confess that I do," answered Heriot, not caring to point out to his friend that the possession of Sterne's genius is a necessary condition to the employment of Sterne's methods.

"I don't believe you do, all the same," said the young man; "but of course, theoretically, a story ought to be a story, and it is awkward to have no answer ready to such an obvious criticism. I feel very much as I used to do at school after I had sent in a copy of verses about which I had misgivings, and I seem to see the stern critic standing over me with sublime rod. 'Now, Vidal, where's your plot?'—'Oh, please, Sir, I haven't got one; but I thought if I made the writing very pretty'——. And then the birch-twigs whistle through the air, and I have to assume an ignoble posture. Let us talk about something else."

"It is nearly time to talk about dinner," remarked Heriot, looking at his watch. "I suppose you dine at the table-d'hôte?"

"Oh, I suppose so."

"Then you might as well tell them to put us together. By-the-way, I must introduce you to some very old friends of mine, the Irvines, whom I fell in with yesterday. They are on their way back from Rome. Perhaps," added Heriot, with a smile, "you might find them—two of them, at least—good subjects to introduce into a work of fiction, though I fancy that poor old Irvine, if you depicted him truthfully, would be pronounced too broad a caricature. He is a great collector of antiquities of all kinds, especially coins, and most likely he could tell you the name of every Emperor, King, and Consul whose image and superscription have ever been struck; but his powers of memory end absolutely there. I believe that, if you were to stop him suddenly in the street and ask him what his name was, where he lived, where he was at that moment, and whither he was bound, he wouldn't be able, for the life of him, to answer a single one of your questions."

"I fancy I have seen the old gentleman already," said Vidal. "Has he long grey hair and spectacles, and does he look as if he had forgotten, amongst other things, to shave for three days?"

Heriot nodded.

"Ah, then, that is my friend. He marched into my room about an hour ago, and seemed quite hurt when I told him that it was my room and that I couldn't assist him towards discovering his own. Does Mrs. Irvine share his peculiarities?"

"No; but she has some of her own. However, you will soon be able to judge of her for yourself. I don't want you to laugh at them too much, though; because, for all their little oddities, they are dear good people, and they have shown me a great deal of kindness at one time and another. A man like myself, without kith or kin, learns to value his friends, you know."

"I know that you stick to your friends, Heriot," said the other, laying his hand upon his companion's shoulder, as they re-entered the hotel together.

CHAPTER II.

HERIOT'S FRIENDS.

Vidal spoke with some warmth, and had, indeed, good reason for so doing. The friendship which had subsisted for some years between the two men, and which, in the first instance, had been rather of the elder's than of the younger's seeking, was now equally strong on both sides. It was Heriot who had discovered Vidal's literary capabilities, and had put him in the way of contributing those short articles to magazines, by means of which he had first tried his wings; it was to Heriot that he invariably turned in the moments of despondency and self-distrust to which his temperament made him liable; and, finally, it was Heriot who had once got him out of a scrape which, absurd as it seemed when looked back upon from the heights of mature experience, might easily have had a lamentable conclusion.

That a boy of eighteen should fall in love with his mother's maid is a circumstance not, perhaps, highly creditable to the boy's taste or intelligence, yet one which can hardly be called unprecedented. If, in Adrian's case, the maid had escaped without a slur upon her character, this happy result was probably due less to Susan's rigid virtue than to her vaulting ambition. For, being a young woman endowed not only with beauty of person but with exceptional strength of purpose, she had made up her mind to nothing less than that her mistress's son should marry her, and had actually extorted from him something like a promise to that effect. And so, when he got the better of his fancy and sought safety in flight, she left Mrs. Vidal's service at a moment's notice and followed her faithless swain to London, where there is every reason to believe that she would have achieved her end, had not Heriot been informed of the state of affairs and hastened to the rescue. By what means he contrived to shake off the tenacious Susan, Vidal never knew precisely. His own view was that he was bound in honour, if not to ruin his whole life, at least to provide as handsomely as his means would allow for the girl whom he had deceived. But Heriot, foreseeing the perils to which payment of black-mail must inevitably lead, had refused to hear of any such thing; and this, perhaps, was not the least of the services which he had rendered to his young friend. The woman had gone away at last, uttering threats of vengeance which had never been carried into execution, and the episode had long ceased to be referred to between the two men; but Vidal had not forgotten it, nor was he the less grateful to his preserver because of the easy and matter-of-course way in which his preservation had been effected.

Heriot, old for his years, disenchanted with life so far as he himself was concerned, and suffering from a disease which at times gave him horrible pain, and might at any moment kill him, had learnt, as many people do under such circumstances, to find his share of the excitement of existence in the joys and hopes and ambitions of others. It was not unnatural that he should have felt specially drawn towards a young fellow who, like Adrian Vidal, possessed exactly the blessings which had been denied to himself—strength, beauty, enthusiasm, and just a touch of that harmless vanity which a worn-out man so readily pardons, and almost loves, in his juniors. Vidal, on his side, had an affection for Heriot which was half filial, half fraternal. He knew that his friend was intellectually and morally his superior; but he knew also that in any perplexity or trouble he could turn to him with absolute confidence, not only in his judgment but in his sympathy; and he well understood that a friend of that stamp is not met with twice in a lifetime. Therefore, as he had an instinctive abhorrence of pain, he pretty generally contrived to put away from him the thought that Heriot's days were numbered, and it was only when, as now, a separation of some months made the slow change for the worse perceptible, that he felt that sudden tightening of the heart-strings with which most of us have reason to be familiar.

While he was washing his hands and brushing his hair before dinner, he did not whistle, as was his wont, and his glass reflected a grave countenance. "Egypt hasn't done him a bit of good, poor old chap!" he muttered. "I suppose nothing will ever do him good any more. And yet, so long as he doesn't get worse. . . . . How many years is it since those solemn asses of doctors condemned him to death? Two, or more, I think. After all, pluck is the best doctor, and he has plenty of that."

Fastening upon this ground for hope, in the absence of a better one, Vidal soon gained the comfort from it which he desired and went cheerfully down stairs to dinner. He was a little late. The great table-d'hôte room was already full to overflowing; the assembled company of all nations was devouring its food, and growling over it after the manner of all carnivora when freed from social restrictions; waiters in an unpleasant state of warmth were hurrying to and fro, bearing pyramids of plates; and through the open windows were wafted the strains of the untiring band. Presently Vidal made out Heriot beckoning to him from the far end of one of the long tables, at the head of which sat the old gentleman of defective memory who had so irritated him an hour before.

"We have kept a place for you," Heriot said. "Let me introduce you to Mrs. Irvine—and Mr. Irvine, who know you very well by name."

The old gentleman started out of a placid dream, and bowed pleasantly to the new-comer, without, apparently, the smallest recollection of their previous meeting; but Mrs. Irvine held out her hand, and said, with frank heartiness, "How do you do? So glad to meet you. We have very often heard of you from Mr. Heriot."

Mrs. Irvine's appearance suggested the idea that she had just arrived from the railway-station and that she had sat beside the window during her journey. She wore a bonnet and a long dust-cloak, which last was flung back from her shoulders, and her grey hair looked as though she had omitted to brush it after having been out in a gale of wind. There was no ostensible reason for her being in a hurry; yet she both spoke and ate as if there were no time to be lost. "And where have you come from, Mr. Vidal? From London? I thought everybody was going to London, not coming away from it, at this time of year. We have been spending the winter in Rome, and have enjoyed ourselves beyond everything—at least, my daughter and I have. I am not quite so sure about Mr. Irvine, who dislikes travelling. Still he really was interested—I was saying that you were interested in Rome, John."

"Eh? Oh, immensely interested," answered Mr. Irvine. "I don't know whether you are familiar with Rome, Mr.—er—. I beg your pardon; but I didn't quite catch your name"——. Vidal was spared the disagreeable duty of re-introducing himself by Mrs. Irvine, whose volubility drowned her husband's half-finished sentence. "He liked it very much when he got there, as I always told him he would: and he spent a great deal of his time at Castellani's; besides which, there are all sorts of collections, you know, in Rome, for those who like collections. What I myself enjoy most of all is seeing the people—not, of course, that one doesn't fully appreciate the scenery and the pictures and the ruins; but I must say I am fond of society, especially of the sort of society that one gets abroad—such a complete change, you know. One makes some really delightful acquaintances, and others which, perhaps, one wouldn't care to keep up at home; but that only renders them the more entertaining for the time being. I like to see all kinds of people and things; don't you, Mr. Vidal? But I am sure you must, because you would naturally be always seeking for material for those charming books of yours."

A momentary pause, occasioned by the speaker's having hastily swallowed a glass of wine the wrong way, enabled Vidal to observe that his books would doubtless be charming if he had published any, but that he hadn't.

Mrs. Irvine was not disconcerted. "You write, though," she persisted. "I am certain that Mr. Heriot told me you wrote. And after all, I often think it must be a great deal more difficult to compose clever essays and articles and—and all that sort of thing than novels, which can't require any very vast amount of talent, since such numbers of people produce them. Once I began a novel myself, but I have never found time to go on with it. Oh, and by-the-by, I wonder whether you could help me to find a situation as governess for a very charming Italian lady who is at present just keeping body and soul together by writing for the newspapers, and who was, at one time, on the stage, and is altogether most accomplished and agreeable. Embroiders quite exquisitely, too, and makes all her own dresses, which I think is so creditable to her, poor thing! I feel sure that she would be a delightful addition to any household—not, of course, to your own; only you might just mention her to your friends, and I should be too happy to answer any inquiries. Mrs. Irvine, Cardrew, near Polruth, Cornwall; telegrams to Polruth station. Mr. Heriot, do you know of anyone who wants a thorough finishing governess?"

"Who has been on the stage, embroiders beautifully, writes for the newspapers, and makes her own frocks? No," answered Heriot, thoughtfully, "I can't call to mind anyone at the present moment; but with such qualifications there ought to be no difficulty at all about placing her. What of your last protégée, Mrs. Irvine?—the lady's-maid who had been a nun and was compelled to leave her convent through conviction of the errors of Romanism."

Mrs. Irvine made a gesture of despair, "Don't speak of her!" She bent across the table and continued in an impressive whisper: "It was the most unfortunate thing! Do you know, I did get her a situation, and an excellent one—with an old lady—and though, naturally, she was a little inexperienced, all went well for three or four months, when she began to fail in health, and—well I can't finish; but I daresay you can guess what happened. Anything more shocking I never heard of; and the old lady was so very angry with me, and said I ought to have known. But, as I told her, how could I know? And I am afraid she can never have been a nun at all."

"Let us hope not," said Heriot. "And how have things been going on at Polruth during your absence?"

"Pretty well, on the whole. But there have been some unfortunate occurrences; and only this morning Mr. Irvine had a letter telling him of a positive disaster. It seems that the Mevagissey men have been fishing in Polruth Bay, which of course they have no sort of business to do. So the Polruth men went out in the middle of the night and cut all the nets adrift, and it wasn't until the morning that they found they had cut away their own nets by mistake. You may imagine what distress this has caused in the place; and what is to be done I can't think, unless I can induce Lord St. Austell to subscribe liberally, which, as you know, will not be an easy matter. However, I must do my best as soon as I get home."

In this way Vidal was relieved of the functions of a listener, which, to be sure, he had been fulfilling but indifferently from the outset. For he had not been two minutes in the room before the best part of his attention had become concentrated upon a girl of remarkable beauty who was seated opposite to him, and on Heriot's right hand. He had not at first supposed her to be in any way connected with his new acquaintances, but his neighbour's casual reference to her daughter and Heriot's evident intimacy with the young lady had seemed to point pretty conclusively to the inference that she must be Miss Irvine, though how such parents had come to possess such a child was one of those mysteries with which Nature delights to baffle the evolutionist.

Miss Irvine personified the type of beauty claimed by our island as peculiarly its own. Tall, graceful, with a flawless complexion, and a small head, well set on her shoulders, she had the look of breeding which characterises that type in its highest stage of development. Her hair had in it, besides a touch of gold, several shades of brown, the darkest of these gradations being reproduced in her eyebrows and eyelashes, which last were long and curved. Her eyes also were of uncertain colour, varying from dark blue to light grey, according as the lights fell or her mood influenced her. In a physical sense, therefore, she had been more than generously treated by Fortune: it remained to be seen what inner charms might correspond with or contradict this outer perfection; and that was not to be determined by a cursory survey. So, at least, Vidal concluded, after studying the girl carefully for a matter of ten minutes. At the end of that time he had discovered that she was of a somewhat dreamy and romantic temperament, that she was totally free from self-consciousness, and that she had a sweet temper, together with rather more pride than was desirable for her own happiness or for those nearest to her.

This, to be sure, was a good deal to have found out by merely watching the play of a person's features during so brief a space; but Vidal prided himself upon his ability to read character, and only wondered that his investigations should have led him to no more definite judgment than the above. One other discovery he had made—namely, that he was beginning to fall a little in love with the fair subject of his analysis; but this did not disturb him so much as it might be supposed to do by persons who attach a more serious meaning to the phrase than he did. In fact, it did not disturb him at all. His was a susceptible nature, and he was in the habit of falling a little in love with most of the pretty faces that came within his ken. No one was any the worse for these passing fancies, which he was rather disposed to cultivate, having an impression that they exercised a refining and elevating influence upon him.

During the progress of dinner it happened that his eyes more than once met those of his opposite neighbour, and he could not help perceiving that she regarded him with a certain degree of interest and curiosity. That being so, it became a matter of imperative necessity that he should exchange a few observations with her; only he hesitated to break the ice without that preliminary formula which is so essential to the comfort of Englishmen. "I wonder why Heriot didn't introduce me?" he mused. "I'll get him to do it directly afterwards."

(To be continued.)

A FAMILY BIBLE.

A new quarto edition of the Authorised Version of the Bible, beautifully printed and handsomely bound, has been issued by Mr. Henry Frowde from the Oxford University Press. The incidents, the natural scenery, and the localities mentioned in the sacred text are illustrated by pictures, some of them from well-known works by Raphael and Leonardo da Vinci, and far above the level of the illustrations ordinarily found in a pictorial Bible. The special merit of the volume lies in the 300 pages which follow the book of Revelation. Here we have helps to the study of the book—a general index, a complete concordance, a dictionary of proper names, and a series of maps. The title, the canon, the Hebrew, Greek, and English versions are all noticed, and a treatise is given on the genuineness and integrity of the two Testaments. Each book is in turn discussed, with its date, its authorship, and evidence, external and internal, of its authenticity. Though the text of the Apocrypha is omitted from the body of the work, a summary of each book is found in the appendix. Copious notes are added on matters ethnographical and geographical.

The supplementary matter is published in a smaller form, under the title "Helps to the Study of the Bible."

The National Society has received 100 guineas from the Mercers' Company and 10 guineas from the Skinners' Company.

A distinguished company last week attended the six-hundredth anniversary of the foundation of St. Peter's College, Cambridge, the oldest in the University. Among the speakers at a banquet were Prince Albert Victor and Lord Hartington.

Messrs. Rock Brothers, of Walbrook, have invented a new description of paper and envelopes for epistolary purposes, which they call Romanesque, and which have the two good recommendations of beauty and cheapness.

Sir Horace Rumbold, who has been nominated to succeed Mr. Ford as her Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the King of Greece, is the fifth, but elder surviving son of the late Sir William Rumbold, third Baronet (who died in 1833), by his marriage with the Hon. Henrietta Elizabeth, second daughter of Thomas Boothby, late Lord Rancliffe. He was born in 1829, and succeeded his brother as eighth Baronet in 1877. Sir Horace Rumbold entered the diplomatic service in 1849, and was employed on special service at Ragusa in 1858. In the same year he was appointed Secretary of Legation in China, and he brought home in 1859 despatches with the particulars of the Peiho affair, and of the attack on the Taku Forts. He was Secretary of Legation at Athens from 1862 to 1864, when he was transferred in the same capacity to Berne. In 1868 he was appointed Secretary of Embassy at St. Petersburg, and in 1871 he accepted a similar post at Constantinople, where he remained about a twelvemonth, when he was nominated Minister-Resident and Consul-General in Chili. He was British Minister to the Swiss Confederation in 1878-9, and Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Argentine Republic in 1879-80, when he was transferred to Stockholm, where he has since continued. Sir Horace Rumbold has been twice married—first, in 1867, to Caroline Barney, daughter of Mr. George Harrington, of Washington, U.S.A., formerly United States Minister at Berne. Being left a widower in 1872, he married secondly, in 1881, Louisa Anne, daughter of Mr. Thomas Russell Crampton, and widow of Captain St. George F. R. Caulfeild, a relative of the Earl of Charlemont.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications relating to this department of the Paper should be addressed to the Editor, and have the word "Chess" written on the envelope.

J A B (Lynn).—If your other proposed solutions were as incorrect as that noted of No. 2121 there was good reason for no acknowledgment appearing. Only correct solutions are acknowledged.

T.—Mr. Campbell's problem to which you refer appeared in our issue of Dec. 22, 1883. The author's amendment of the other problem described was noted in this column some weeks ago.

E A W (West Point, U.S.A.).—Look again at No. 2123; it is much better than you have supposed.

F H N (Bow).—No. 2121 cannot be solved in the way you propose.

JUMBO (Dundee).—Why not address your letters in accordance with the request at the head of this column? By ignoring it, you give us unnecessary trouble.

J S L (Blackburn, Natal).—We agree with you in thinking highly of No. 2121.

C P (Toronto, Canada).—Thanks. If found correct, it shall soon appear.

Z I (Paramaribo).—What is your idea of "good time"? We have more than once notified our readers that this column is prepared for press a week in advance of publication. All correct solutions are acknowledged in due course.

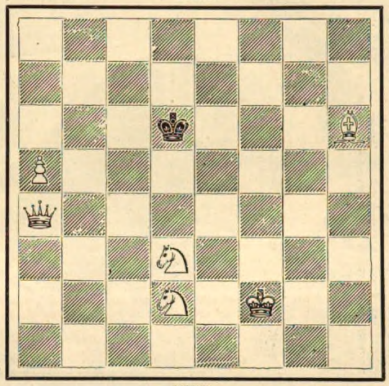
W E T (Philadelphia, U.S.A.).—Very good, and very acceptable. One of the batch appears below.

L S, E S, and many other Correspondents, are cordially thanked for cards and season-able good wishes.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF M. MAKOVSKY'S PROBLEM received from J A B (Lynn); of M. SERRA'S PROBLEM, from T and Le Pion; of the Problem from Chess Strategy, from F M (Edinburgh), Fred Forspott, J T W, Emmo (Darlington), Jumbo, Plevna, R Worters (Canterbury), Rev. W Anderson (Old Romney), William Davis; of Nos. 2115, 2116, 2117, from J S Logan (Blackburn, Natal); of No. 2123, from T, Oskar Hartmann (Malaga), Jumbo, Plevna, C B N (H.M.S. Asia), Le Pion; of No. 2124, from E J Posno (Haarlem), E L G, Oskar Hartmann (Malaga), D W (Aberdeenshire), Emile Frau, J P Owen, H Risbridger, G J Veale; of No. 2125, from Rughenden, Clement Fawcett, F M (Edinburgh), Fred Forspott, E J Posno (Haarlem), J H Tamisier, Z Ingold, Emile Frau, Emmo (Darlington), New Forest, Alpha, B H C (Salisbury), Shelton, R Worters (Canterbury), E Kirwan, C B N (H.M.S. Asia), Hermit, William Davis, E L G, F Marshall, and Dominican (Newcastle).

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM NO. 2126 received from Rev. W. Anderson (Old Romney), F Ferris, A M Colborne, G W Law, A M Porter, R I, Southwell, S Lowndes, E Casella (Paris), T Greenbank, C S Cox, Kitten, H Blacklock, Otto Fulder (Ghent), C Darragh, Ben Nevis, A W Scrutton, Aaron Harper, L, L Greenaway, F G Parslow, G A, A Walker, J T W, Clement Fawcett, L Sharwood, Ernest Sharwood, C Oswald, Joseph Ainsworth, W J Rudman, E Elsbury, H Wardell, Thomas Waters, R H Brooks, F Pott, Dominican, and W Hillier.

NOTE.—Owing to the Christmas holidays, only communications received up to Dec. 23 are acknowledged in this Number.



SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 2124.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Kt to Q B 8th	Kt to K 3rd *
2. R to B 5th (double ch)	K takes R
3. Kt to K 7th. Mate.

* If Black play 1. Kt to R 4th, White continues with 2. R to K 6th (double ch), then follows 2. K takes R and 3. Kt to Kt 5th, mate. If 1. K to Q 5th, the continuation is 2. R to Q B 6th (ch), K moves; 3. R to B 3rd, mate; and if 1. Kt takes P, then 2. R takes Kt (ch), &c.

PROBLEM No. 2128.
By W. E. TINNEY (Philadelphia).

BLACK.

WHITE.
White to play, and mate in three moves.

Played in 1863 at Simpson's Divan, between CAPTAIN MACKENZIE and another Amateur.
(Evans' Gambit.)

WHITE (Capt. M.)	BLACK (Mr. A.)	WHITE (Capt. M.)	BLACK (Mr. A.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	12. B to Q 3rd	Kt to Kt 3rd
2. Kt to K B 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd	13. Kt to Q R 4th	B to Kt 5th
3. B to B 4th	B to B 4th	14. Kt takes B	R P takes Kt
4. P to Q Kt 4th	B takes P	15. Q to Q 2nd
5. P to B 3rd	B to B 4th	The foundation of an artful trap.
6. P to Q 4th	P takes P	15.	B takes Kt
7. Castles	P to Q 3rd	16. P takes B	Kt to R 5th
8. P takes P	B to Kt 3rd	Of course; just what White hoped for.
9. B to Kt 2nd	K Kt to K 2nd	17. K to B sq
10. Kt to Q B 3rd		The trap is now baited.
10. Kt to R 3th is sometimes played here; but Black gets an even game by 10. P to Q 4th.		17.	Kt takes P
10.	Castles	18. R to K Kt sq	Kt takes Q
11. P to Q 5th	Kt to R 4th	Whether he takes the Q or R, or neither, matters not, White wins easily.

On the 18th ult. a match was played between the Athenæum and Brixton Chess Clubs, eight competitors a side. It resulted in the Athenæum winning by 4½ points to 3½. One game on the victorious side was scored against an absentee.

It is settled that the match between the St. George's and City Clubs shall be played on Monday, Jan. 19, and Dr. Zukertort has accepted the office of umpire. As he is a honorary member of both clubs, he is specially fitted for this delicate post. There will be twenty players a side, and both clubs will, of course, put in their strongest members—barring honorary members, who are not admissible. The place of meeting will be the City Club-Rooms, No. 47, Newgate-street, and the hour will be six p.m., punctually. As the accommodation is limited, admission to see the contest will be confined to members of the two clubs and representatives of the press. The time limit for the players will be twenty moves an hour. Only one game will be played by each pair, and play will stop at eleven o'clock. There is every prospect that there will be an interesting contest, as the two clubs are believed to be very strong and about equally matched.

Professor Tyndall gave, last Saturday, at the Royal Institution, the first of a series of lectures on electricity, which he explained would trace the progress of the science from its origin to its present remarkable development.

SUBSCRIPTION TO THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

AT HOME.

Twelve months (including Christmas Number), £1 9s. 3d.
Six months, 14s. Christmas Half-Year, 15s. 3d.
Three months, 7s. Christmas Quarter, 8s. 0d.

Copies will be supplied direct from the Office to any part of the United Kingdom and the Channel Islands, for any period, at the rate of 6½d. for each Number, paid in advance.

ABROAD.

The yearly subscription abroad, including the Christmas Number, is 30s. 4d. (on thin paper, 32s.), with the following exceptions:—

To Abyssinia, Aden, Borneo, Ceylon, India, Java, Labuan, Penang, Philippine Islands, Sarawak, Singapore, and Zanzibar, 41s. (thin paper, 34s.)

To Madagascar (except St. Mary and Tamatave) and the Transvaal, 45s. (on thin paper, 36s. 4d.)

Subscribers are specially advised to order the thick paper edition, the appearance of the engravings on the thin paper copies being greatly injured by the print at the back showing through.

Newspapers for foreign parts must be posted within eight days of the date of publication, irrespective of the departure of the mails.

Subscriptions must be paid in advance, direct to the Publishing Office, 198, Strand, in English money; by cheque crossed the Union Bank of London; or by Post-Office Order, payable at the East Strand Post Office, to Ingram Brothers, of 198, Strand, London.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will (dated July 29, 1874), with a codicil (dated Dec. 1, 1880), of the Most Noble Arthur Richard, Duke of Wellington, K.G., P.C., late of Apsley House, 149, Piccadilly; and of Strathfieldsaye, Hants, who died on Aug. 13 last, at Brighton, was proved on the 18th ult. by Henry, Duke of Wellington, the nephew, and William James Farrer, the surviving executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to upwards of £168,000. The testator leaves to his wife, Elizabeth, Duchess of Wellington, £1500, any two of his carriages, and six of his horses, with the harness, equipage and furniture belonging thereto, as she may select, and £1500 per annum, for life, in addition to the jointure secured to her by her marriage settlement; and he appoints to her £10,000 out of certain trust funds. All his jewels, not already added to or set with the jewels settled to go as heirlooms with the mansion houses and estates by Act of Parliament so long as the dignity of Duke of Wellington shall endure, he also leaves to his wife, for life, and then to pass with the said heirlooms. He bequeaths £500 to his executor Mr. Farrer; £500 to his groom, John Fenn; and an annuity of £50 to Walter Thomas Hutchison. The residue of his property he gives to his said nephew, the present Duke.

The will (dated June 14, 1883) of his Excellency the Right Hon. William Odo Leopold, Baron Ampthill, G.C.B., P.C., who died on Aug. 25 last, at Potsdam, Germany, was proved on the 17th ult. by the Duke of Bedford, K.G., the brother, and the Earl of Lathom, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to upwards of £45,000. The testator appoints a sum of over £75,000 Consols, in settlement, to all his children, in equal shares. All his estate and effects, real and personal, he gives to his wife, for her own absolute use and benefit; and he appoints her guardian of his infant children.

The will (dated April 13, 1878) of the Right Hon. Etheldred Anne, Countess of Hopetoun, late of No. 4, Ennismore-gardens, Kensington, and of Longcross, Chertsey, Surrey, who died on Nov. 15 last, was proved on the 11th ult. by Lieutenant-Colonel Charles Birch Reynardson, the brother, Miss Mary Caroline Birch Reynardson, the sister, and Charles Stewart, the executors, the value of the personal estate in the United Kingdom amounting to over £14,000. The testatrix bequeaths numerous legacies, both pecuniary and specific, to her children, brother, sister, maid, and others; including the bequest of a bracelet with a large opal, believed to be the largest in the world, and known as the "Hope opal," to her son, the Hon. Charles Archibald Hope. As to the residue of her property, she leaves one third to her said son; and two thirds between her daughters, Lady Estella Mary Hope and Lady Dorothea Louisa Hope, and her said brother and sister.

The will (dated July 11, 1878) of Colonel the Hon. Charles James Fox Stanley, J.P., late of Halecote, Grange-over-Sands, Lancashire, who died on Oct. 13 last, was proved on the 3rd ult. by the Right Hon. Frederick Arthur Stanley, the nephew, the sole executor, the value of the personal estate exceeding £25,000. The testator bequeaths £200 to his executor as a mark of his thanks for accepting the office; £100 to his cousin, Admiral William Windham Hornby; and legacies to servants. The residue of his property he gives to his three sons and four daughters, in equal shares.

The will (dated April 21, 1880) of the Right Hon. Henry Fawcett, P.C., M.P., late of No. 51, The Lawn, South Lambeth, and of No. 18, Brookside, Cambridge, who died on Nov. 6 last, was proved on the 13th ult. by Mrs. Millicent Garrett Fawcett, the widow, Miss Sarah Maria Fawcett, the sister, and Samuel Garrett, the executors, the value of the personal estate exceeding £9500. The testator gives £100, the copyright of all his books and literary works, and all his furniture, plate, pictures, books, and effects, to his wife; £1000 between his children; £50 to his said sister; and the residue of his property, upon trust, for his wife, for life, and then for his children.

The will (dated March 2, 1878), with three codicils (dated Feb. 27, 1880; March 18, 1881; and July 31, 1883), of Mrs. Elizabeth Collin, late of Oakwood, Atkins-road, Clapham Park, who died on Oct. 31 last, was proved on the 4th ult. by Frederick Bunter, Alfred Thomas Rees, the nephew, and Miss Mary Anne Wright, the sister, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £52,000. The testatrix gives £3000, and all her jewellery, plate, furniture and effects, to her said sister; and numerous legacies to relatives, executors, servants, and others. The residue of her property is to be held, upon trust, for her said sister, for life; and then, among some further legacies, she bequeaths £50 each to the British and Foreign Bible Society, the Church Missionary Society, the British Orphan Asylum, formerly of Clapham, the Irish Church Missions, and the London City Mission. As to the ultimate residue, she leaves one fourth, upon trust, for her nephew Frederick Wright, and his children; two fourths, upon trust, for her niece Ellen Rees, and her children; and one fourth, upon trust, for her niece Margaret Frankel, for life, and then for Ellen Rees and Sarah Emily Rees.

The will (dated March 8, 1877), with three codicils (dated March 28, 1878; May 28, 1880; and April 16, 1881), of Mrs. Anne Earle, late of Wokingham, Berks, who died on Oct. 16 last, was proved on the 3rd ult. by the Rev. Edward Fiennes Trotman, the nephew, and George Thomas Tyndale, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £28,000. The testatrix leaves legacies to nephews, nieces, executors, and servants; one moiety of the residue of her property, upon trust, for her sister Mrs. Margaret Hony, and her children; and the other moiety, upon trust, for her sister-in-law, Mrs. Henrietta Earle, for life, and then for the daughters of her sister Mrs. Trotman.

The Duke and Duchess of Westminster opened a children's ward in connection with Macclesfield Infirmary last week.

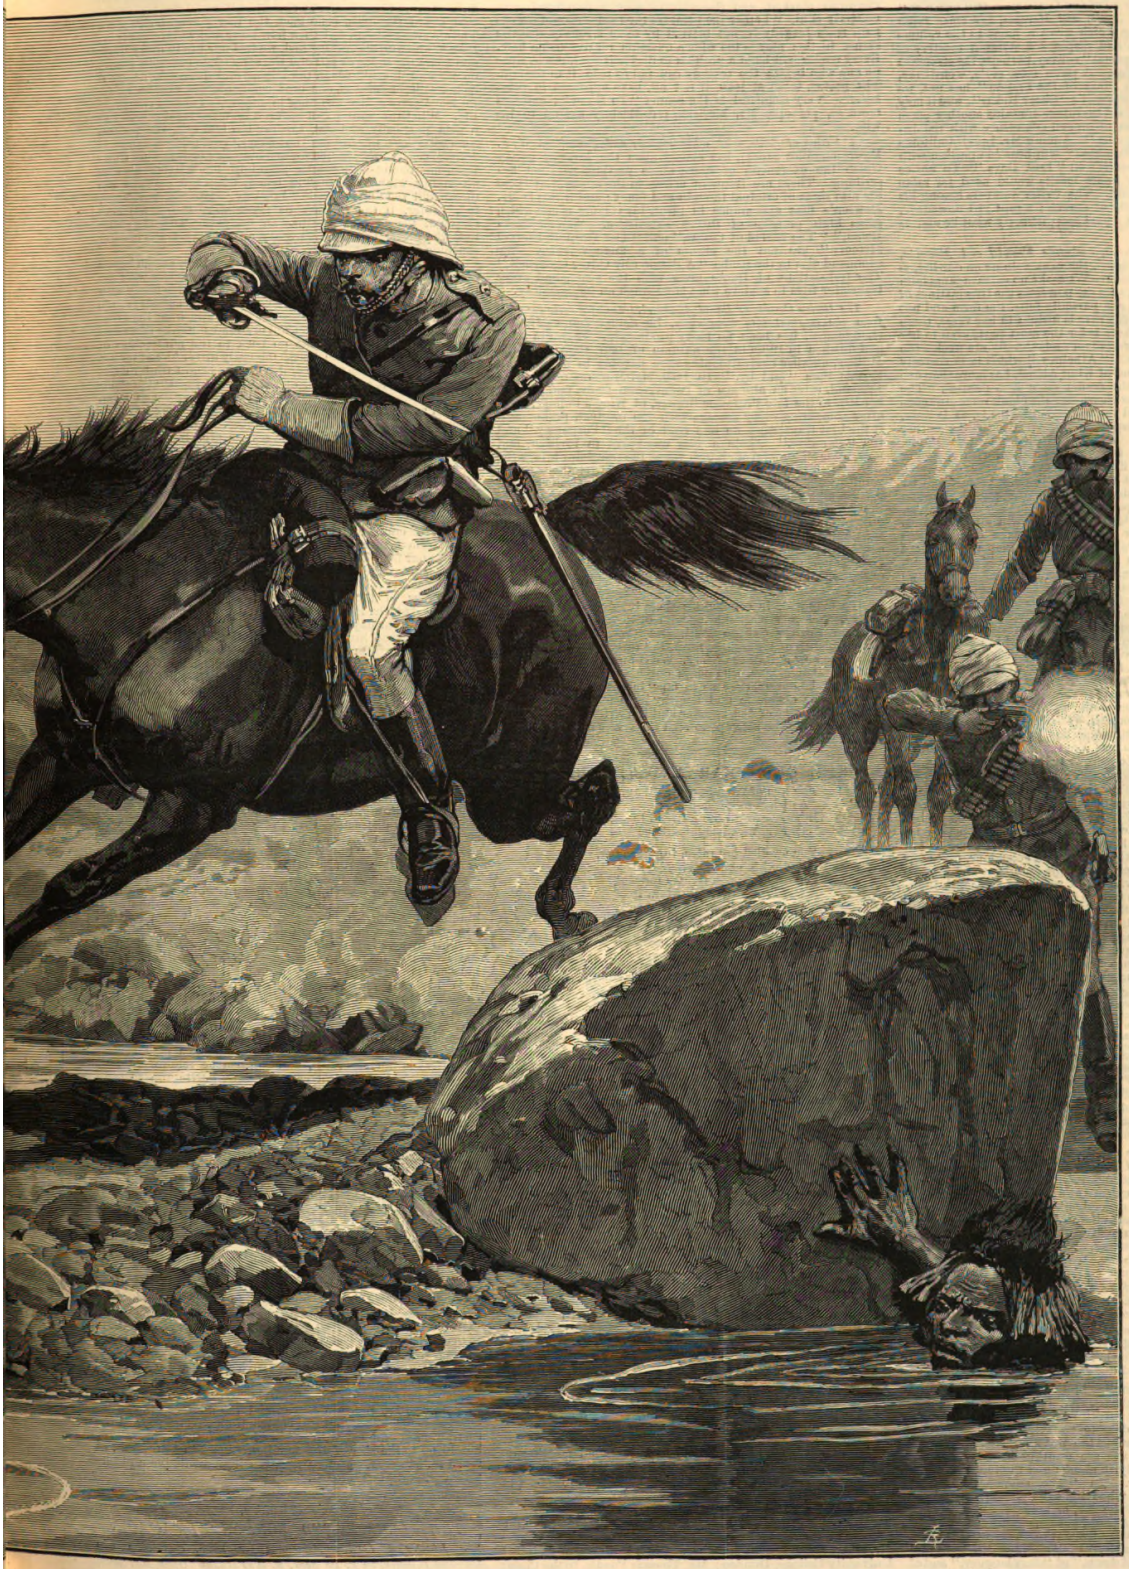
Her Majesty has appointed Mr. Horace Seymour Commissioner of Customs, in the room of Lord Arran, who retires.

Several fatal accidents by the breaking of ice are reported from the provinces.

Encke's comet, which completes its circuit of the sun in about three years and a half, has been observed by an astronomer at Florence.

Mr. Gladstone attained his seventy-fifth birthday on Monday: and it is reported from Hawarden that the right hon. gentleman is in the enjoyment of excellent health.

Sir Saul Samuel, Agent-General for New South Wales, has been informed by telegram of the arrival in Sydney of the steamer Abergeldie, which sailed from Plymouth with emigrants in November last.



The past week's imports of live-stock and fresh meat landed at Liverpool from American and Canadian ports amounted to 517 cattle, 276 sheep, 9515 quarters of beef, 1315 carcases of mutton, and 50 hogs.

The missing crew of the Norwegian barque Holmstrand, which sank after collision with the steamer Chelydra off the Eddystone on Christmas morning, were picked up about four hours after the disaster, and landed at Newport last Saturday. The crew speak in warm terms of the kindness with which they were treated by their rescuer, Captain Mills.

THE WAR IN THE SOUDAN: IN

DRAWN BY R. C[W]

AFFAIR WITH OUTPOSTS.

ODVILLE.

BOOKS OF POETRY.

The difference between the poet and the verse-maker is as great as that between the beauties of Nature and the illusions of the scene-painter. Not always, however, is it incumbent on the critic to point this difference out; and, just as in common parlance we call every man a gentleman who keeps a carriage, so we may be permitted, for convenience sake, to call everyone a poet who writes verses. That Mr. Eugene Lee-Hamilton is a poet of a true and even powerful order will be evident to readers of Apollo and Marsyas, and other Poems (Elliot Stock). The poem which gives a name to the volume is full of vivid pictures, and displays a striking mastery of language; but the "other poems" convey, perhaps, the strongest sense of the writer's genius. A piece more eerie, weird-like, and forcible than "Sister Mary of the Plague" has not, we think, been written since Rossetti's "Sister Helen"; and it may be questioned whether recent literature contains another poem which describes the terrors of an evil conscience with the incisive strength of "Ipsissimus." Among Mr. Lee-Hamilton's sonnets, one entitled "Strangled" will bear comparison with the most striking of Rossetti's on "Lost Days." To notice this volume in proportion to its merits would need far more space than we can command. The writer numbers among his other virtues perfect clarity of speech; a rare gift nowadays, and one which shows that a poet sees distinctly what he undertakes to describe.

Athelney and other Poems, including Kenwill and Messeria, by Eliza Down (Bell and Sons), the next volume on our list, is also one of the most significant. We make no extravagant claim for this writer in asserting that she possesses the true instinct of the poet, and that where she partially fails, the form and not the conception is at fault. There is insight in her verse, there is an ear for music, and there is for the most part, even in her weakest lyrics—and a few of them undoubtedly are weak—the absence of common-place. "Athelney," which it is scarcely necessary to say is a legend of King Alfred, has more than one merit which will strike the reader on a first perusal. The story is told with the utmost clearness; the blank verse is at once graceful and sinewy; and the whole landscape is, as it were, bathed in a poetical atmosphere. It seems as if the author saw what she describes. What are called "beauties," too, are by no means absent, though Miss Down, with a proper sense of art, never says fine things for the sake of saying them. Our space will not allow us to illustrate this poem by quotations, but let the reader turn to page 31 for the description of a sunset, or read the parting, at the opening of the poem, between the King and Queen, and he will allow that in some measure the writer possesses the poet's best gift—imagination. "Easter Day" is not a new theme for a sacred poet, but the writer treats it with a firm and yet gentle hand. "The Cup of Tears," simple in language and original, we think, in thought, is another suggestive lyric. It brings to remembrance Mrs. Browning's "Isobel's Child." In that poem, a dying babe pleads with a mother not to keep it longer in this cold world by the power of her prayers; in the short lyric by Miss Down, a baby dies, and the mother weeps for her night and day. Then a visionary child appears to her, bearing in its hand a cup, full to the brim, of the tears the mother has shed. If the cup should overflow the little one will taste of sorrow, even in heaven; so the mother, for her darling's sake, weeps no more. This is the bald prose of a little poem which is in every line poetical. Gladly would we refer to other poems in this unpretending but by no means insignificant volume; but enough has been said, perhaps, to draw attention to the work. We expect to hear from Miss Down again.

Mr. J. W. Gilbart-Smith may be already known to some of our readers as a clever versifier and satirist. He has great faculty for rhyming, and has some faculty for poetry: but The Log o' the Norseman (Kegan Paul), in which he poses as a kind of modern "Childe Harold," without the passion and imagination that light up that poem with splendour, gives few indications of poetical progress. The mannerisms and phrases are often Byronic; and where the writer is the most independent of his master, the failure is most conspicuous. A poet may rise with effect from the ludicrous to the beautiful; but in sinking from the beautiful to the burlesque, even Byron, the wittiest poet of his age, generally failed. Mr. Gilbart-Smith should beware of passing from grave to gay. Some fairly good stanzas on Dante are followed by rubbish like the following, which the author probably mistakes for humour—

> China and chintz and chairs of Chippendale,
> And shapes of women more burlesqued than decked,
> And youths with visages divinely pale
> Pose representative of intellect;
> Mind illustrates its strength in Matter wrecked;
> Urged by high art, our very waists ascend,
> Like love more lengthy when it 's incorrect!
> "There 's nothing new," as Solomon hath penned,
> Save pedigrees and poets (Hope I don't offend).

Mr. Gilbart-Smith does offend. But he is capable of something better, and a few of the lyrics scattered through the volume have a musical ring, notably one commencing with the line "Little maiden blossom laden."

In dissonance of rhyme and irregular leaps of metre Ella Sharpe Youngs, author of A Heart's Life, Sarpedon, and other Poems (Kegan Paul), reminds us frequently of Mrs. Browning. The writer is not without culture and imaginative power; but great energy seems to be expended with comparatively small results. She takes all the license which, for the sake of her splendid genius, we pardon in Mrs. Browning; and the license is more evident than the poetry. When good English stands in the author's way, she shows a royal contempt for it; and when English words are not forthcoming, has the bad taste and pedantry to introduce Greek.

> Will heart-reticence be thanker is a couplet which it will suffice to quote without criticising. Ella Sharpe Youngs wants simplicity and moderation. It will be well for her, and for her readers, if she avoids for the future feminine rhymes and difficult metres.
> For love-sweetness we neglect?

Mr. Evelyn Douglas implies in the preface to his Poems, Lyrical and Dramatic (Trübner), that he is still very young; and the statement does not surprise us. He employs too often the meaningless imagery dear to youthful versifiers, and if his lines have always a meaning the prosaic reader will be apt to miss it. Syntax and sense are wanting in a lyric called "Hopes," and not in that lyric alone; and the imagery of the writer is often surprising. In "The Golden City," for example, we read of the "hot light" that shivers, of the throbbing and pulsation of the sky, of > bronzèd youths carousing

> With maids of snowy flank, of "burning waves a-tremble," of "silken-sailèd galleys" which "keep soaring up and down," of "fiery languor," and of much else that is as passing strange. Yet there are indications in that diffuse poem of poetical enthusiasm, though of enthusiasm untempered with discretion. Héloise and Abelard would be a perilous subject to touch even if Pope had not made it his own. The versification of this poem has, however, greater merit than the lyrical pieces, and here and there in the volume are indications that Mr. Douglas may yet live to write poetry. Many of the faults that strike us may be due to immaturity, and this can at least be truly said—they are not the faults of a dull writer.

Mr. Herman Charles Merivale is known to fame, and Florien, a Tragedy in Five Acts, and other Poems (Remington and Co.), will enhance his reputation. We do not suppose that Mr. Merivale designed "Florien" for the stage, but many of the scenes are strongly dramatic, the characters are distinctly marked, and the painful plot is developed with masterly skill. Whether the pleasure the reader should always gain from tragedy is not marred by some strongly realistic scenes in this play is too wide a question for discussion here. Every reader will be in a position to decide it for himself, since no one who begins the tragedy can fail to read it to the end. The poems, some at least if not all, have appeared in print before. Very beautiful is the sonnet "To Maud"; and still more so, perhaps, Mr. Merivale's dedicatory sonnet to his wife.

A Vision of Souls, with other Ballads and Poems, by W. J. Dawson (Elliot Stock), has claims upon the lover of poetry which the exigencies of space alone prevent us from describing. There are frequent echoes in the poems, but there are also signs of original thought and fancy; and if this is Mr. Dawson's first appearance in print, his volume is one which gives high promise of future excellence. "In a Sick-Room," "The Ballad of Carew," and "The Town of Eternal Memory" are not the efforts of a mere versifier. We commend also to the reader "A Sermon by Oliver Cromwell." The translations of Dante grow with the years, and every translator tries to achieve what is wellnigh an impossibility.

The Divine Comedy of Dante Alighieri, translated verse for verse from the original into terza rima, by James Innes Minchin (Longmans), has been no hasty production. Begun in 1856, and finished in India in the autumn of 1857, the year of the Mutiny, another twelve months were devoted to its revision. It was then "laid by." In 1866, Mr. Minchin returned to England, after an absence of twenty-two years, and showed his MS. to the late Professor Brewer, of King's College, who, after comparing every passage with the original, pronounced it the best translation he had read of the "Purgatory" and the "Paradise." Again a year was spent in revision, and now, after an interval of sixteen years, the translator brings the work "before the general judgment of Dante students as the result of the honest labour of many years of a studious life." To attempt the terza rima form in a stubborn language like the English shows no little boldness on the part of Mr. Minchin. He says, indeed, that it is a metre perfectly suited for English poetry; but why then, it may be asked, has it been avoided by every great poet, and how is it that not a single English poem of high merit has been produced in it? Students of Dante will find this carefully exact translation of no common value.

We may add, in concluding these brief notices of recent poetry, that a remarkable poem called Midas, by the late William Forster (Kegan Paul, and Co.), contains, under the semblance of an antique form, the discussion of problems which are now agitating society. We cannot agree with Midas that the Demagogue, who pours out his wrongs and those of his fellow-labourers, does so in an "incisive style"; on the contrary, the elaborate and lengthy lines too often seem to exhaust the point of the speaker and the writer. The reader, too, especially if he attempt to read the verses aloud, will soon be exhausted also.

THE OLD YEAR AND THE NEW.

The loss of friends, you will agree,
Is what we all deplore;
But have you been a friend to me,
Old Eighteen-eighty-four?

You swelled my rates, to put it pat,
Quite high enough before:
I hardly owe you thanks for that,
Old Eighteen-eighty-four!

You gave me twinges in the knees,
Ask portly Doctor Gore:
Can I feel gratitude for these,
Old Eighteen-eighty-four?

With gouty twitches I 've been curst,
Since you came through my door:
My heart with gratitude won't burst,
Old Eighteen-eighty-four!

Another "Cherub" 'twas your whim
To add unto my store:
Do you expect my thanks for him,
Old Eighteen-eighty-four?

A burglar scare—a broken nose—
A friend who proved a bore:
Oh! blessings on your head for those,
Old Eighteen-eighty-four!

Dyspepsia now has swelled the ranks
Of foes who plague me sore:
You brought him—twenty-thousand thanks,
Dear Eighteen-eighty-four!

Bad debts galore—long Doctor's bills—
And countless "mercies" more!
Deep gratitude my bosom thrills,
Good Eighteen-eighty-four!

And now we are about to part—
To part for ever more:
Good-bye! Good-bye! with all my heart,
Old Eighteen-eighty four!

* * * * *

He 's gone! I somehow feel more bright—
The gayest man alive!
Good morning! You will put all right!
Young Eighteen-eighty-five!

F. B. DOVETON.

Sir Joseph Bazalgette presided at the annual meeting of the Institution of Civil Engineers. The institution consists of 3782 persons, being an increase of 194 during the year. Sir Frederick Bramwell was elected president for 1885.

Mr. Joseph John Thomson, M.A., F.R.S., Fellow of Trinity College, has been elected Professor of Experimental Physics at Cambridge, in room of Lord Rayleigh, resigned. Mr. D'Arcy Wentworth Thompson, B.A., Professor of Biology, University College, Dundee; Mr. Thomas Purdie, to the Chair of Chemistry in the University of St. Andrew's, rendered vacant by the retirement of Professor Heddle; and Dr. Gilbert, F.R.S., Professor of Rural Economy at the University of Oxford, and the associate of Sir J. B. Lawes in the Rothamsted experimental work, to the post of Honorary Professor of Agricultural Chemistry at the Royal Agricultural College, Cirencester, vacant by the death of Dr. Voelcker.

LONDON IN WINTER.

That Winter has its charms in the country everyone will allow. No man who has lived among the mountains in that season will ever forget the crisp freshness of the air, the effects of light and shade, the snow-covered heights steeped in rose colour by the setting sun, the gloomy shadows, the fitful breeze making solemn music in the pine woods, the smooth, firm ice upon the tarns, covered, perchance, with skaters who have "given their bodies to the wind," while the mountains that guard the lakes echo back the merry laughter of girls. The air may be keen, but then how clear and wholesome it is! Like Wordsworth's cottage girl, we feel our life in every limb, and when the shadows fall and the stars come out, how gladly do we walk homewards in the silence and darkness, happy if alone, still happier if one dear companion is with us whose presence gives a new meaning to nature, a twofold energy to life. What the winter can be even in tame rural scenery to a man poetically inclined, Cowper has told us. His poetry, somewhat out of fashion nowadays, contains sketches of winter scenery unsurpassed for accuracy and beauty; and while picturing out-of-door scenes minutely he delights also in describing winter evenings at home, when the curtains are drawn and the fire is burning brightly. For the sportsman, too, winter, if the weather be favourable, is the happiest season of the year, and he has no sympathy with the chilly folk who prefer to the misty damp of November the blazing sunshine of July.

In London, it must be admitted that the winter season has its drawbacks. For the most part, we Londoners shiver with the cold instead of being braced by it. The air is too often heavy with fog and smoke; sooty showers descend from the chimneys; the pavement is greasy with mud and slush; and what the great thoroughfares are after a heavy fall of snow cannot be described in refined language: we must go back to the phraseology of our school days, and call them "beastly dirty." Let us not forget, however, that even London has its bright winter days, when walking is a pleasure, and when the great metropolis has a beauty of its own which no southern city can rival. "Earth has not anything to show more fair" may be sometimes said of it with truth in December, as well as in May. The chief pleasures of London in winter are, however, to be found within doors. When the rain, or that dirty composition we call snow, is falling, how delightful it is to sit by a roaring fire in a good library. Then our old companions, who were neglected—perhaps forgotten—in the summer, come into favour once more. We take up Shakspeare or Molière, Cervantes or Goethe; we resolve, perhaps, to do as Nathaniel Hawthorne once did, and read the Waverley Novels through again from beginning to end; we make acquaintance or increase our familiarity with the Queen Anne men. Or, if we eschew what is impertinently styled light literature—under which term the solemn moralist includes some of the greatest productions of the human mind—there is the "heavy literature" of Mr. Herbert Spencer and Dr. Bain to be studied; we may give our days and nights to the "Constitutional History" of Bishop Stubbs; while for after-dinner pastime are there not Dr. Ihne's History of Rome, and Professor Freeman's entertaining story of the Norman Conquest? To lovers of literature, books are among the chief blessings of the winter season; and yet the attraction of books to Londoners is but one among many. It is a time for the meeting of friends and old acquaintances; the migratory instinct is appeased, and people are content with the pleasures offered to them by society. A large dinner party is a vast expense and affords little enjoyment, but a select party—say, of six or eight congenial spirits, with a feast of good things in the first place and a feast of reason afterwards—is a kind of hospitality which few men and women of culture fail to relish. There is something, too, very cosy about the afternoon tea in winter, less of distraction than in summer, and more of agreeable chat. Then there are the theatres. On a lovely evening in spring, when "the young May moon is gleaming," a crowded theatre is not altogether an attraction; but in winter, especially if a good friend gives you a dinner first, and then fills your cup to overflowing by the presentation of a stall ticket, the pleasure will be without a drawback. Do the same kindness for him another night, and add to it by inviting his wife or daughter, and you will find the pleasure doubled.

This suggestion reminds us that winter in London is the season dedicated to charity. The man who lives to himself is never a happy man. If he is engrossed with his own pleasures, he is equally burdened with his cares. Thinking of himself, he is miserable; but let him once resolve to work for others, and his personal anxieties will grow smaller day by day. This is a familiar recipe for happiness which people know but forget to make use of. Perhaps a vast city like London tends to make a man selfish. Its misery is immeasurable, and how can he relieve it? Is it not almost as vain as the effort of Mrs. Partington to push back the Atlantic Ocean with her mop? So it may seem to the superficial observer, but in reality it is quite otherwise. Dame Partington was fighting against Nature; the man who strives to do good and to lessen human misery is fighting with the laws of Nature on his side. It may seem that he can do little, but to move at all in the right direction is to have with him a number of beneficent and victorious forces.

We must pause; for the last two or three sentences look almost like preaching, and their gravity alarms the writer. It will not do to forget that London has its cakes and ale as well as its dry bread, its songs as well as its sermons, and that in this it resembles human life, with its "mingled yarn good and ill together."

J. D.

A Winter Art-Exhibition was opened in the Bradford Museum last week by the Mayor of the borough.

In Yorkshire there is a Needlework Guild, which has a membership of nearly 500, who make clothing and distribute it to charities in the county.

The usual dinner, consisting of hot roast beef, potatoes, and plum-pudding, was given on Christmas Day at the Field-Lane Ragged School and Refuges. The dinner consisted of 480 lb. of beef, 580 lb. of plum-pudding, seven sacks of potatoes, 150 quartern loaves, and 700 oranges—the entire expense being met by special contributions. The poor in the district were supplied with joints of meat (varying in weight, according to the size of the families, from 2 to 4 lb.), ½ lb. of tea, 1 lb. of sugar, quartern loaf, the ingredients for a plum-pudding, and ¼ cwt. of coal.

Now Publishing,

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK.

The Illustrated London Almanack for 1885, containing Six Coloured Pictures, by F. De Neck, F. H. Pavy, and G. O. Harrison, inclosed in a Beautifully Coloured Wrapper, printed by Leighton Brothers' Chromatic Process; Twenty-four Fine-Art Engravings; Astronomical Occurrences, with Explanatory Notes; and a great variety of Useful Information for reference throughout the Year, is published at the Office of the "Illustrated London News."

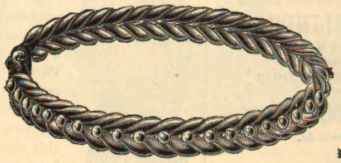
Price One Shilling; Postage, Twopence-Halfpenny.

THE MANUFACTURING

GOLDSMITHS' AND SILVERSMITHS' COMPANY.

Show-Rooms: 112, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, W.

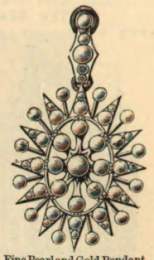
Supply Purchasers direct at Manufacturers' Wholesale Cash Prices, saving from 25 to 50 per cent.



Fine Pearl Star Pendant, to form Brooch, £10.

Diamond Half-Hoop Rings, from £10 to £100.

Fine Pearl and Gold Initial Brooch, in Best Morocco Case, any letter, Price £2.



Fine Gold Double Twist and Bead Bracelet, in Best Morocco Case, Lined Silk Velvet, Price £3.

Diamond Gipsy Rings, from £5 to £50.

Fine Pearl and Gold Horse-Shoe Brooch, in Best Morocco Case, £1 15s.

Fine Pearl and Gold Pendant, to form Brooch, £8 15s.

The STOCK of RINGS, BROOCHES, BRACELETS, EARRINGS, SPRAYS, STARS, &c., is the Largest and Choicest in London, and contains New and Artistic Designs not to be obtained elsewhere, an inspection of which is politely invited. Plain Figures, Cash Prices.

GOODS FORWARDED FOR SELECTION AND COMPETITION.

AWARDED SIX FIRST-CLASS MEDALS and the CROSS OF THE LEGION OF HONOUR, the Highest Award conferred on any Firm.

MANUFACTORY: CLERKENWELL. ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE POST-FREE.

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, and NEURALGIA.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the inventor of Chlorodyne; that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See the "Times," July 13, 1864.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in cholera was Chlorodyne.—See "Lancet," Dec. 31, 1853.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Extract from the "Medical Times," Jan. 12, 1866:—Is prescribed by scores of orthodox practitioners. Of course, it would not be thus singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the best and most certain remedy in Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a certain cure in Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—CAUTION.—None genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each Bottle. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London. Sold in Bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s.

THE "LOUIS" VELVETEEN.

"Le Follet" says:—The Louis Velveteen has already rejoiced in a longer reign in the world of fashion than that of any material within our recollection; and when we take into consideration that it is equally suitable for all occasions—an advantage no other fabric possesses—and that, whether employed as a complete dress, portions of toilettes, or trimmings, it is as effective as it is serviceable, its favour is not surprising.

The Louis Velveteen, from its wonderful resemblance to the richest Silk Velvet, is essentially a lady's material; the lights and shadows so thoroughly like those of Genoa and Lyons Velvet, the rich folds and graceful drapery, so soft and silky to the touch, all account easily for its great and permanent vogue among the aristocracy, both here and abroad.

Though very strong, it is so light in wear that even in elaborately made dresses, with long trains, it has no inconvenient weight; while from some peculiar and special arrangement of the pile, no amount of creasing will flatten or rub it; neither rain nor dust alter its rich colourings or dim the silky bloom for which it is so celebrated—advantages that cannot be too highly appreciated.

EVERY YARD OF THE GENUINE BEARS THE NAME "LOUIS."

THE WEAR OF EVERY YARD GUARANTEED.

NICHOLSON'S NEW COSTUMES

RICH PARIS and BERLIN PALETOTS and MANTLES, from 1 to 20 guineas. ENGRAVINGS FREE.

HUSSAR JACKET 2 guineas. Stockinette, trimmed Astrachan. Tudor Hat, from 19s. 9d., velvet, any colour.

Nicholson's Autumn and Winter Dress Fabrics at the Lowest City Prices.

Cheviot Tweeds, 6½d. and 8½d. per yard.

Scotch Velour Cloths, 8½d. per yard.

Serges in every variety, 6½d. to 1s. 6½d. per yard.

All-Wool Velour Cloths, 1s. 4½d. per yard.

Velvet Broché Serges and Cashmerettes in choice tints.

Snow Flake Beige, a new and choice fabric, 1s. 11½d. per yard.

A New Costume Cloth, in beautiful colourings, 1s. 4½d. per yard.

New Ottoman Stripe, 1s. 6½d. per yard.

Figured Ottomans and Checks, 1s. 11½d. per yard.

Exhibition Cloth, Cashmerettes and Winter Nun's Cloth in a variety of fancy designs.

French Merinos and Cashmeres in the new and fashionable colourings, from 1s. 11½d. per yard.

MOURNING GOODS in every variety. Patterns free.

D. NICHOLSON & CO., Silk Mercers to the Queen, 50, 51, 52, and 53, St. Paul's Churchyard, London; and Costume Court, Crystal Palace.

GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE

(LIMITED),

WATCH AND CLOCK MAKERS,

11 and 12, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.

THE

BEST KEYLESS WATCHES.

A

WRITTEN WARRANTY

IS GIVEN

WITH

EACH

WATCH.

Highly-finished Horizontal Watch, in plain gold half-hunting cases (as drawing), with gold or enamel dial .. £10 0 0
Ditto, ditto, in silver cases 3 10 0

Highly-finished Lever Watch, our own make, in plain gold hunting or half-hunting cases, jewelled in ten holes £21 0 0
Ditto, ditto, in silver cases 9 19 0

Illustrated Pamphlet, with Prices of Watches, Chains, Seals, Jewellery, and Clocks, of all the Newest Patterns, forwarded gratis and post-free, on application.

PURE CALICO!!!

In Lengths of 12, 24, 36, or 48 yards AT MILL PRICES.
The Best and Cheapest in the World.
Entirely Free from Adulteration!
Only the Purest and Best Class of Cotton used in the Manufacture! A perfectly Pure Bleach.
A PLEASURE TO SEW! A LUXURY TO WEAR!
EASY TO WASH!
Copy of Analysis of the Cloths by the eminent Analytical Chemists, Crace-Calvert and Thomson, Royal Institution, Manchester, printed on each Pattern Book.
Qualities to suit every use for Ladies' or Gentlemen's Wear.
Prices from 4½d. to 10½d. per yard of 36 inches wide.
Patterns and Price-List sent post-free to any address.

Write at once to the

BRADFORD MANUFACTURING COMPANY,

BRADFORD,

YORKSHIRE.

Please mention this Paper.

REGISTERED TRADE MARK.

"VERY DIGESTIBLE—NUTRITIOUS—MADE IN A MINUTE—NO BOILING OR STRAINING REQUIRED."

Allen & Hanbury's

MALTED FARINACEOUS Food FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS.

A highly concentrated and self-digesting nutriment for young children, supplying all that is required for the formation of firm flesh and bone in a partially soluble and easily assimilable form. It also affords a sustaining and healthful diet for Invalids, and those of a dyspeptic tendency.

"My child, after being at death's door for weeks from exhaustion, consequent upon severe diarrhœa and inability to retain any form of 'Infants Food' or Milk, began to improve immediately he took your malted preparation, and I have never seen an infant increase in weight so rapidly as he has done. H. E. TRESTRAIL, F.R.C.S., M.R.C.P."

Further Testimony and Full Directions accompany each Tin.

TINS, 6d., 1s., 2s., 5s., and 10s., RETAIL EVERYWHERE.

HEAL·AND·SON.

BEDSTEADS.
3 ft. IRON FRENCH, from 10s. 6d.
3 ft. BRASS FRENCH, from 48s.

BEDDING.
MATTRESSES, 3 ft., from 11s.
A NEW SPRING MATTRESS, warranted good and serviceable, at a very moderate price. 3 ft., 28s.
THIS, WITH A TOP MATTRESS—3 ft., 20s.—makes a most comfortable Bed, and cannot be surpassed at the price.
GOOSE DOWN QUILTS, 1 yard by 1¼ yard, 10s.
BEDDING CLEANED AND RE-MADE.

BED-ROOM FURNITURE.
PLAIN SUITES, from £3.
DECORATED SUITES, from £8 10s.
ASH AND WALNUT Ditto, from £12 12s.
SUITES OF WHITE ENAMEL, similar to that in the Health Exhibition, from £14.

EASY-CHAIRS, from 35s.
COUCHES from 75s.
WRITING-TABLES, from 25s.
OCCASIONAL TABLES, from 10s. 6d.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, WITH PRICE-LIST OF BEDDING, FREE BY POST.

195 TO 198, TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

DR. DE JONGH'S

(Knight of the Order of Leopold of Belgium and of the Legion of Honour)

LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL.

Incontestably proved by thirty years' medical experience to be

THE PUREST, THE MOST PALATABLE, THE MOST DIGESTIBLE, AND THE MOST EFFICACIOUS

IN CONSUMPTION, THROAT AFFECTIONS, AND DEBILITY OF ADULTS AND CHILDREN.

SELECT MEDICAL OPINIONS.

SIR HENRY MARSH, BART., M.D., Physician in Ordinary to the Queen in Ireland.

"I consider Dr. De Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil to be a very pure Oil, not likely to create disgust, and a therapeutic agent of great value."

DR. GRANVILLE, F.R.S., Author of "The Spas of Germany."

"Dr. De Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil does not cause the nausea and indigestion too often consequent on the administration of the Pale Oils."

DR. EDGAR SHEPPARD, Professor of Psychological Medicine, King's College.

"Dr. De Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil has the rare excellence of being well borne and assimilated by stomachs which reject the ordinary Oils."

SIR G. DUNCAN GIBB, BART., M.D., Physician to the Westminster Hospital.

"The value of Dr. De Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil as a therapeutic agent in a number of diseases, chiefly of an exhaustive character, has been admitted by the world of medicine."

DR. SINCLAIR COGHILL, Physician to the Hospital for Consumption, Ventnor.

"In Tubercular and the various forms of Strumous Disease, Dr. De Jongh's Oil possesses greater therapeutic efficacy than any other Cod-Liver Oil with which I am acquainted."

DR. HUNTER SEMPLE, Physician to the Hospital for Diseases of the Throat.

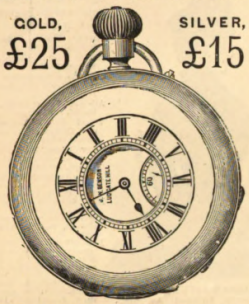
"I have found Dr. De Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil very useful in cases of Chronic Cough, and especially in Laryngeal Disease complicated with Consumption."

Sold ONLY in Capsuled Imperial Half-Pints, 2s. 6d.; Pints, 4s. 9d.; Quarts, 9s.; by all Chemists and Druggists.

Sole Consignees—ANSAR, HARFORD, and CO., 210, High Holborn, London.



CAUTION.—Resist mercenary attempts to recommend or substitute inferior kinds.

JUST PUBLISHED,
A MAGNIFICENT
ILLUSTRATED ALBUM CATALOGUE
Of FASHIONS and NOVELTIES for the WINTER SEASON.
SENT GRATIS ON APPLICATION.

GRANDS MAGASINS DE NOUVEAUTÉS
AU PRINTEMPS,
JULES JALUZOT, PARIS.
Purchases carriage free all over the World.

FOR INDIA AND THE COLONIES OR FOR HUNTING AND ROUGH WEAR.
BENSON'S SPECIALLY-MADE
GOLD, £25 SILVER, £15

GOLD ENGLISH KEYLESS
"FIELD" HALF-CHRONOMETER.

CONSTRUCTED WITH PATENT BREGUET SPRING, WHICH ENTIRELY COUNTERACTS THE SUDDEN VARIATION CAUSED IN ORDINARY LEVER WATCHES BY HUNTING, &c. JEWELLED AND ALL LATEST IMPROVEMENTS. GUARANTEED ENTIRELY OF MY BEST ENGLISH MAKE, TO KEEP PERFECT TIME UNDER THE MOST TRYING CIRCUMSTANCES, AND TO LAST A LIFETIME. EXACT SIZE OF SKETCH. HALF-HUNTER, HUNTER, OR CRYSTAL GLASS. SENT FREE AND SAFE TO ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD FOR £5 DRAFT WITH ORDER. SILVER, SAME QUALITY. £15. PAMPHLETS FREE, GIVING FULL PARTICULARS OF THIS WATCH AND ALL OTHERS MADE AT BENSON'S, LUDGATE-HILL, AND OLD BOND-STREET, LONDON.

ESTABLISHED 1749.

The Hunting Editor of "The Field," after a trial of one of these watches, extending over four months, says:—

"I have used the watch for four months, and have carried it hunting sometimes five days a week, and never less than three. * * * I can confidently recommend Messrs. Benson's hunting watch as one that can be depended on."—Field, March 22, 1884.

ROWLANDS'

ODONTO

Is the best TOOTH POWDER. Whitens the Teeth, prevents decay, and gives a pleasing fragrance to the breath; contains no acid or gritty substances. Ask anywhere for ROWLANDS' ODONTO.

COLDS CURED BY
DR. DUNBAR'S ALKARAM, or Anti-Catarrh Smelling-Bottle.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.

IF inhaled on the first symptoms, ALKARAM will at once arrest them, and cure severe cases in half an hour. Sold by all Chemists, 2s. 9d. a Bottle. Address, Dr. Dunbar, care of Messrs. F. Newbery and Sons, 1, King Edward st., E.C.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY for the HAIR. If your hair is turning grey, or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White Hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. "The Mexican Hair Renewer" is sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 3s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE. For the Teeth and Breath. Is the best Liquid Dentifrice in the world; it thoroughly cleanses partially-decayed teeth from all parasites or living "animalculæ," leaving them pearly white, imparting a delightful fragrance to the breath. The Fragrant Floriline removes instantly all odours arising from a foul stomach or tobacco smoke; being partly composed of honey, soda, and extracts of sweet herbs and plants, it is perfectly delicious to the taste, and as harmless as sherry. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 2s. 6d. per Bottle.

TOWLE'S PENNYROYAL and STEEL PILLS for FEMALES. Sold in Boxes, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d., of all Chemists. Sent anywhere on receipt of 15 or 34 stamps by the maker, E. T. TOWLE, Chemist, Nottingham.

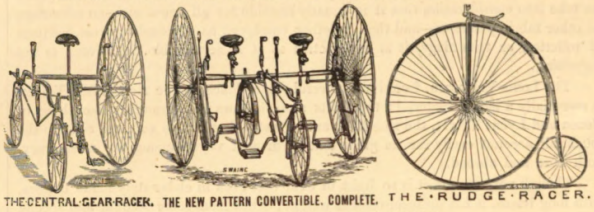
AVERY & CO.
ARTISTIC WINDOW-BLINDS.
SHOW-ROOMS:
18, GREAT PORTLAND-STREET, W.
Where may be seen a splendid assortment of Blinds of every description, including the much admired
NEW EMPIRE BLINDS,
As supplied to Her Majesty.
Plain or Decorated,
NEW AND BEAUTIFUL DESIGNS.

FESTOON BLINDS,
In Silk and Sateen, &c.

ART PRINT BLINDS,
LEADED GLASS BLINDS,
NIPON DWARF BLINDS,
OUTSIDE SUN-BLINDS,
BALCONY AWNINGS, &c.

LARGEST SHOW IN LONDON.
SAMPLES AND PRICE-LISTS POST-FREE.

SAMUEL BROTHERS



"ETON" SUIT.

respectfully invite applications for PATTERNS of their NEW MATERIALS for the Present Season. These are forwarded post-free, together with the ILLUSTRATED PRICE-LIST, containing 250 Engravings, illustrating the most becoming and fashionable styles of Costume for the wear of Gentlemen, Youths, Boys, and Ladies.

SAMUEL BROTHERS,
Merchant Tailors, Outfitters, &c.,
65 & 67, Ludgate-hill, London, E.C.

IMPORTANT TO INTENDING "CYCLE" PURCHASERS.
D. RUDGE & CO., Show-Rooms and Works, COVENTRY.
THE OLDEST TRICYCLE AND LARGEST CYCLE MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD.

THE CENTRAL GEAR RACER. THE NEW PATTERN CONVERTIBLE. COMPLETE. THE RUDGE RACER.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE-LISTS FREE ON APPLICATION.

DEPOTS:—London, 12, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.; 443, Oxford-street, W.; Manchester, 100-4, Deansgate; Birmingham, 4, Livery-street; Liverpool, 101, Bold-street; Glasgow, 211, Sauchiehall-street; Edinburgh, 29, Hanover-street; Belfast, 49, Royal Avenue.

ST. MILDRED'S HOTEL,
WESTGATE-ON-SEA.
FIRST-CLASS HOTEL, REPLETE WITH EVERY CONVENIENCE FOR VISITORS. SEA VIEWS FROM EVERY WINDOW.

Domestic Water Supply.
RIDER'S Patent HOT-AIR Pumping Engine.
HAYWARD TYLER & Co

AT WORK DAILY AT 39, QUEEN VICTORIA ST LONDON, E.C.

Will raise 1000 Gallns 80 ft. High FOR ONE PENNY

Bird's Custard Powder
Richest Custard! Without Eggs!! Half the Cost and Trouble!!! Choice—Delicious—a Great Luxury. See that you get BIRD'S.

1s. BOXES. 6d. BOXES.
POST-FREE.
"PASTRY & SWEETS," Containing Practical Hints and Recipes for Tasty Dishes for the Dinner and Supper Table.
Address—ALFRED BIRD & SONS, DEVONSHIRE WORKS, BIRMINGHAM.

£10.
In return for a £10 Note, free and safe by post, one of BENNETT'S
LADIES' GOLD WATCHES,
perfect for time, beauty, and workmanship. With Keyless Action. Air-tight, damp-tight, and dust-tight.

Bennett's WATCHES 65, Cheapside

£15.
In return for Post-office Order, free and safe by post, one of BENNETT'S
GENTLEMEN'S GOLD KEYLESS WATCHES,
perfect for time, beauty, and workmanship. With Keyless Action. Air-tight, damp-tight, and dust-tight.

SIR JOHN BENNETT'S WATCHES and CLOCKS.
£10 LADY'S GOLD KEYLESS. Elegant and accurate.
£15 GENTLEMAN'S STRONG GOLD KEYLESS.
20 GUINEA GOLD HALF CHRONOMETER for all Climates.
£25 MEDICAL and SCIENTIFIC CENTRE SECONDS.
£20, £30, £40 PRESENTATION WATCHES, Arms, and Inscription emblazoned for Noblemen, Gentlemen, and others.
£25 HALL CLOCK to CHIME on 8 Bells, in oak or mahogany; with bracket and shield 3 Guineas extra.
18 Carat GOLD CHAINS and JEWELLERY.
65 and 64, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

The GOLD MEDAL of the INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION HAS BEEN AWARDED FOR
Benger's SELF-DIGESTIVE Food
FOR INFANTS & INVALIDS.
"Assimilated with great ease."—Lancet.
"Invaluable."—London Medical Record.
Benger's Food may be obtained through all Chemists, at 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., and 5s. per Tin.

THE
"JAPANESE" CHAMBER SET.

Pompeian Brown on Ivory ground, 7s. 6d. the set.
Other excellent patterns, at 3s. 9d. and 5s. 6d. the set.

ALFRED B. PEARCE,
39, LUDGATE-HILL, E.C. (Established 1760.)
Catalogue (with Nine Furnishing Estimates) on application.

THIN BUSTS PERFECTED.

No CORSET
In the World has ever equalled
THE "IDEAL"
For Beautifying Thin Busts.

None other can be regulated to any desired fulness to suit different dresses.

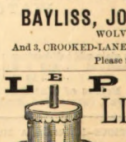
None other ever stood the test of years, with ever increasing popularity, or merited so many thousands of genuine unsolicited testimonials. Drapers and Outfitters can procure it from LONDON WHOLESALE HOUSES. If difficulty occur, or doubt of its matchless effect, sample sent on approval, plain parcel carriage paid, after remittance only.

J. EVANS and CO.,
52, Aldermanbury, London.

TRADE IDEAL CORSET MARK PATENTED

White; or Black, stitched gold, 8s. 3d., 10s. 9d., 14s. 9d., to 18s. Length, 13 inches. Beware of persuasion to take substitute when "IDEAL" not in stock. Also beware of Corsets called "Beau Ideal," or similar sounding names, which are quite different. See words "IDEAL CORSET, PATENTED," stamped on breast reinforcers. Waist measure required of ordinary corset unstretched.

"A Perfect Frizette in Ten Minutes."
HINDE'S Hair Curling Pins
Produce charming Ringlets, &c.
USED COLD.



Surer and much more effective than curl papers. Comfortable—Invisible—simplicity itself.

This is a Patented Article. Every Pin and label bears the stamp—"HINDE'S Curveless Patent."

BEWARE of knavish imitations, which are absolutely useless frauds. Vendors will be rigorously prosecuted.

Sold in 6d. and 1s. Boxes, sample Box, 7 stamps, of Retail Agent, J. CASELESS, Harborne, Birmingham. Wholesale, Messrs. HINDE, Birmingham and London.

CHAIN HARROWS,
WITH STEEL EXPANDERS AND TUBULAR WHIPPLETREES,

For Pony, 6 ft. by 5 ft. £2 1 6
For 1 Horse, 7 ft. by 5 ft. £2 4 6
For 1 Horse, 7½ ft. by 6 ft. £2 9 6
For 2 Horses, 7 ft. by 7 ft. £3 14 6
For 2 Horses, 8 ft. by 7½ ft. £3 1 6

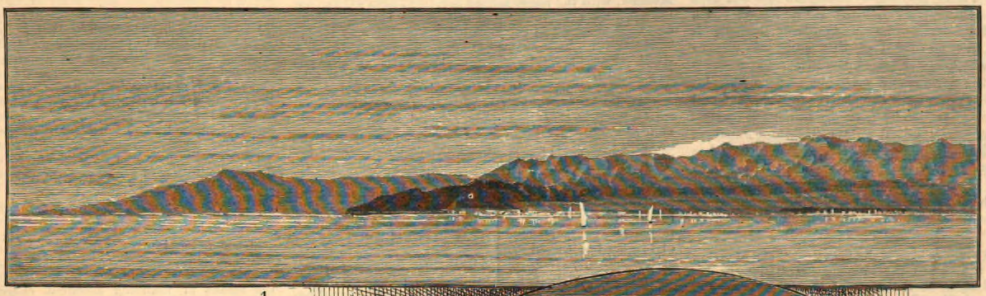
Delivered free at any Railway Station, less 5 per cent for prompt cash.

BAYLISS, JONES, & BAYLISS,
WOLVERHAMPTON.
And 3, CROOKED-LANE, KING WILLIAM-STREET, E.C.
Please name this Paper.

LE PAGE'S
LIQUID GLUE

MENDS EVERYTHING.
WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, LEATHER, FURNITURE, METALS, &c.
Strongest and Most Elastic Glue on Earth. Absolutely Unbreakable and Inseparable!! — No Heating! — No Preparation! — Always Ready! — Always Liquid!!! — Mends China, Glass, Wood, Leather, Patches on Shoes, Rubber, Crockery, Billiard Cue Tips and Cloth, Ornaments, Stone, Furniture, Jewellery, and Book Backs, with Everlasting Tenacity!!—Sold Everywhere. Trio Bottles, 6d. and 1s. RICHARDS, TERRY, and Co., 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C., Sole Agents.

THE OXYGEN-GIVING DISINFECTANT,
HARTIN'S CRIMSON SALT
In addition to this well-known and highly-valued Preparation, a Shilling Bottle of which makes 30 Gallons of Crimson Fluid, the public can now obtain
HARTIN'S CRIMSON SALT DISINFECTING POWDER, a perfectly soluble, non-poisonous, non-corrosive, ODOURLESS, and most powerful Disinfectant, Deodoriser, and Antiseptic, ready for instant use, by sprinkling upon all that is offensive or dangerous.
Geo. R. Tweedie, Esq., F.C.S., says:—"The results of an extended and elaborate series of carefully conducted experiments convince me that Hartin's Patent Crimson Salt Disinfecting Powder is a most reliable, economical, thorough, and safe disinfectant."
Sold by Chemists everywhere in Tins.
Prices, 1s. and 2s.
Wholesale by HARTIN'S CRIMSON SALT Co., Ltd., Worcester.



LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by INGRAM BROTHERS, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JANUARY 3, 1885.

NAVY DEPARTMENT
RECEIVED
JAN 24 1885
LIBRARY.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 2386.—VOL. LXXXVI. SATURDAY, JANUARY 10, 1885. WITH EXTRA SUPPLEMENT | SIXPENCE. By Post, 6½d.

1

2 3 4

1. Estipona, from the sea. 2. Cathedral and Port of Malaga. 3. Cordova. 4. Malaga, from the sea.

THE EARTHQUAKE IN SPAIN: VIEWS OF PLACES WHERE IT WAS FELT.

OUR NOTE-BOOK

Rejoicing with the Queen and the Royal family in their joys, the English people all the world over may be fairly said to have united in a hearty Birthday greeting to her Majesty's grandson, Prince Albert Victor, whose Majority was celebrated with characteristic geniality by the Prince and Princess of Wales at Sandringham on Thursday. So charmingly youthful is her Royal Highness in appearance that it is difficult to realise that twenty-one years have elapsed since that memorable Friday when the "blissful bride of a blissful heir," after spending the afternoon in sledging round the frozen lake of Virginia Water and watching the Prince playing at hockey on the ice, gave birth to a son at Frogmore Lodge. Prince Albert Victor (or Prince Edward, as he is familiarly called), is credited with the possession of that admirable quality of bonhomie which has endeared the Prince and Princess of Wales to the nation, and probably made during his prolonged sea voyages with Prince George hosts of good friends, who will have joined cordially in the felicitations his Royal Highness received on the Eighth of January. Modest, frank, and unaffected, the young Prince has deservedly won golden opinions from all sorts of men; and his Royal Highness enters manhood strengthened for the battle of life with the best wishes of the realm for his welfare and happiness.

Twelfth Night was kept right merrily at the Mansion House on the 6th, when the rising generation were decidedly looked upon as the stars of the future, and the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs were the Magi, who vied with one another in doing them honour. Dissolving views, and a glorious Punch and Judy show, were provided; the band played most inspiriting music, and the fun was thoroughly gleeful, innocent, and hearty. It really was a sight for gods and men to see the proud happy young mothers and fathers as they stood by with glistening eyes while their little ones, in all sorts of comical costumes, marched round the Egyptian Hall that the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress might duly appreciate their apparel and bestow the kindly word and smile that each juvenile looked for, and the numerous grand-parents among the City Fathers were not one whit less delighted. The rooms were not too hot, the lights were brilliant, the flowers fresh, and the atmosphere redolent of enjoyment.

Some of the little fancy dresses were remarkably effective, perhaps the most striking being Master Cecil Palmer, the grandchild of the Lord Mayor, who was dressed as a little white rabbit, and called himself Baby Bunting. There were "Bunnie's" tail and his ears very prominent, in white fur, as well as his warm coat; but the bright dark eyes that looked out of the intelligent little face were the familiar ones of Young England. Master Ralph Truscott, the grandson of Sir Francis Truscott, personated Prince Eugène, in the full costume of a courtier of the days of good Queen Anne; little Stella Phillips, the popular Sheriff's daughter, was dressed as a canary, in yellow plush, with a pair of wings, and a smooth, yellow head, finished off in front by a prominent beak. Her costume, down to her little yellow shoes, was perfect. The Masters Wheeler were dressed as the two young Princes in the Tower, exactly after Millais' famous picture. Miss Maud Thompson was the only Ophelia present, she looked neither mad nor melancholy. Miss Hollingsworth made a good Sophie Western, and Miss Da Costa Audrade was wonderfully got-up as the postman, or rather the postwoman, of the future. Of youthful Marquises there were many, and of patched and powdered Marchionesses not a few; while the peasant girls, flower maidens, &c., were not so numerous as on previous similar occasions.

When women are very rich they are usually supposed to indulge in every sort of luxury; but in our day there are women whose riches spur them on to activity, and they conduct their own business in a manner that compels admiration. Such a one is Miss Maud St. Pierre, a strong-minded single lady, about five-and-thirty, who has made large investments in land in the State of Tennessee. So rich is her property in minerals that she is having a line of railway constructed which will run through its very heart, and she rides about with money in her saddle-bags, paying her work-people, and looking after her affairs diligently.

The Paris Figaro has sustained a great loss during the last week in the death of M. Arnold Mortier, known to the world as "Un Monsieur de l'Orchestre." It will be extremely difficult to fill his place, for he was wise and witty, full of resource, and keen-eyed for everything that happened before or behind the footlights. No episode was too trivial for him to record, and in that lay the whole difference between his lively chronicles of things theatrical and the sober ones of other writers and reporters. No such blank has occurred in the personnel of the Figaro since the death of its founder, M. De Villemessant, le grand rédacteur, over whose tomb his staff, to quote their own expression, shed "tears of ink."

We learn with much pleasure that the Queen has been pleased to confer the Companionship of the Bath on Mr. George Scharf, F.S.A., the Director of the National Portrait Gallery, a collection which may be said to owe its importance to his good taste and critical judgment. Mr. Scharf has had, throughout his long public service, to contend against two difficulties, the one that of obtaining first-rate portraits of well-known persons, and the other that of declining second-rate portraits of uninteresting nonentities

The young Prince of Naples, heir to the throne of Italy, had a tolerably difficult military examination to pass just before Christmas, and acquitted himself completely to the satisfaction of the Minister of War, the King's first Aide-de-Camp, and the Commander-in-Chief of the Army. The boy is an ardent collector of coins and medals, so his Royal father rewarded him by a Christmas present after his own heart, and gave him all sorts of old foreign moneys and the rarest medals that could be procured.

Sir R. Loyd-Lindsay, M.P., has lent to the present Burlington House collection a magnificent Murillo, representing the Virgin and Child in Glory, and near it hangs the well-known portrait of a lady, supposed to be Titian's daughter, by Paris Bordone. On the same wall is the portrait of the Duchess of Modena and her family, by Bernardino Licinio; and the first and last of these beautiful pictures strongly illustrate the fact that the greatest painters did not merely paint the women of their own country or generation, but those who would be recognised to all time as typical beauties. Fra Bartolommeo's Virgin, in Gallery IV., and Murillo's, and the Duchess of Modena, with the nurse behind her, like Titian's Catharine Cornaro, are ever young and ever fair. One may have met such a woman in the Park last season, or may see her next week at a ball. Time has not touched even to mellow them, their bloom is unfaded, and their eyes serene. Compared with the portraits painted by smaller men, they will be seen to possess the secret of perpetual youth.

An incident that took place a fortnight ago at Portsmouth might, in skilful hands, be worked up into an effective Christmas story. The Commander of one of her Majesty's big ships found himself in a position to give leave of absence to a large number of bluejackets, who trooped ashore merrily enough. One of them, however, hoping to escape notice, slipped aside, undressed, and turned into his berth. He was speedily discovered, and, when questioned, reluctantly acknowledged that as he had sent every penny of his pay to his aged mother, he had no money to spend, and should thankfully eat his Christmas dinner on board. He was ordered to rise, dress, and report himself to his commanding officer, which he did with fear and trembling, rapidly changed into joy when that gentleman warmly shook hands with and congratulated him, leaving in his horny palm four golden sovereigns. How happily Jack went ashore and boarded the next train for his native village may be better imagined than described.

The "spotless" tournament just concluded at the Aquarium, Westminster, gave lovers of billiards a great treat; but at least one of the players received hard measure. On Tuesday last, for instance, Mr. Joseph Bennett, ex-Champion, was twice denied a "cannon" when, as Osric would have said, it was "a hit, a most palpable hit," so palpable indeed in one case that some of the spectators cried aloud at the decision given against him. It must be very disheartening to play against both luck and unintentional injustice.

What constitutes a witch? There is the Lancashire witch, whose beauty procures her the title; and, of old, there was the poor old woman whose ugliness and perfectly hypothetical habit of riding upon a broomstick in the small hours caused her to be so called. The other day, however, there died of cold, starvation, and exposure, at the age of seventy-five, a poor woman, whose "correct name was Hatch." She is said to have been of "somewhat wild appearance," to have had from the parish three shillings a week to live or die upon, to have paid one of those shillings for the rent of "a wretched hovel," where she had no fire and nothing but one sheet to cover her as she lay upon a paillasse on the ground through the bitter winter's night. So they called her "the witch of Okehampton": poor old soul! It is to be feared that witches of that sort are by no means so rare as they ought to be in a civilised and Christian country.

Æsthetic dress is very much on the wane, if one may judge by the style of apparel that prevailed last week at the Grosvenor and Burlington House private views. Sage-green and weather-beaten orange were in the minority, or were only seen in the morning, when genuine scribblers, in spectacles and big hats, came to look at the pictures and take notes. In the afternoon, when artist-princes and their wives and the queens of comedy and song flocked to the rendezvous, they were attired in pretty black confections, and rich golden browns, blues, and clarets, with the daintiest little bonnets imaginable. Costly furs and rich velvets were very much the order of the day, and the former, within certain limits, were patronised by gentlemen as well as ladies.

Still harping on New-Year's gifts, to the antiquity and advance of which we referred last week, a curious passage occurs in the Lansdowne MSS. In the year 1611, Sir Francis Bacon tells Sir M. Hicks, "he has sent to his Lady and Daughters a new year's gift of carnation stockings to wear for his sake." Nowadays these articles, if not always of such a brilliant colour as carnation, are worn for their own sakes.

On the first day of this New Year appeared a notice which shows that the Master of the Horse (the Duke of Westminster) has turned over a new leaf and at the same time taken, as it were, a step backwards. He has reduced the number of Queen's Plates or Royal Plates (dating, no doubt, from Charles II. or an earlier reign, but with no sort of consecutive record earlier than Queen Anne) to be run for in England from fifteen to ten (one fewer than they were in 1727); but of course the value of each has been increased, so that, till further notice, the Plate at Newmarket will be worth £500; at York, Richmond (Yorks), Liverpool, Lichfield, Bath, Stockbridge, Ascot, Lewes, and Winchester or Salisbury (in alternate years), £300. The next step will probably be to abolish them altogether (for they are not much needed), or to lump the guineas still further together into no more than one or two Plates (say, one at Newmarket and one at York, as the representatives of the Southern and Northern Turf respectively). The competitors, moreover, are for the future to be "horses or mares bred in Great Britain or Ireland"; which is a very reasonable measure, since, whatever may be said of our Royal Plates, they were certainly not meant to encourage horses "bred abroad," like the celebrated Dutch Skater and others. On the other hand, it seems a little hard that "no horse" is "to be allowed to win more than two of the Plates in any one year." Shades of Fisherman and Caller Ou! The more likely the Plates are made to bring out good horses, the less possible it is to be for any one horse to establish an indisputable superiority! Why, it might as well be enacted that no horse that has won the Two Thousand and the Derby be allowed to win the Grand Prix and the St. Leger. No doubt the word "win" leaves it open to any high-minded gentleman or lady, who boasts the possession of "the best horse over a distance" in all England, to prove the boast to be good by "running" and "beating" without "winning"; but black swans are multitudinous compared with gentlemen or ladies so high-minded.

That Arabi was a persuasive Oriental we found out when he collected his large army of followers in Egypt. But when this pugnacious Pasha was relegated to Ceylon, no one would have suspected that his eloquence would have been devoted to peace-making. And yet, at a public meeting in connection with the promotion of a Mohammedan boys' school, he was the means of reconciling the three factions into which the religious community in Ceylon had for a long time been divided. Arabi had taken great interest in the school—probably he had not much to amuse him on the island—and he was selected to make the inauguration speech. So successful was the very touching discourse that, immediately after he sat down, the leaders of the rival factions rose in the presence of the company, and could not refrain from embracing each other. Arabi might be a useful lecturer at many a metropolitan vestry meeting.

Good-fellowship is the primary cause of the success of many a club, society, and institution. Several associations formed for social or technical purposes have been the means of founding excellent charities and useful communities. Now, although the Volunteers, our city soldiers, as they have been called, have in many ways proved their capacity and efficiency, they have up to the present been forgetful of other advantages that such a vast and widespread body could effect. To the credit, then, of Colonel Defries, of the Honourable Artillery Company, and Captain Williams, of Kent, be it said that they propose to establish an Orphanage for the Children of Volunteers. Happily, the majority of our amateur Army have remunerative occupations or private means; but it will be an additional inducement to the mechanic or clerk to join the force if he knows that by so doing he is making some sort of provision for his young progeny. His Grace the Duke of Portland, Lord Ranelagh, Colonel Loyd-Lindsay, Lord Headly, and many other influential noblemen and gentlemen have promised to support the scheme.

Nearly every large European city has a special quarter if not set aside for, at least inhabited of their own choice by, Jews. Berlin has its Juden quartier, Frankfort its Judengasse, London its Whitechapel, and Rome its Ghetto. This last, the most ancient of all, will soon have disappeared. Its occupiers are descended in a direct line from the Hebrew captives who were brought from Jerusalem by Titus, and bound to his chariot. Although the Ghetto was reduced to a rubbish heap in 1848, the Jews have lingered amongst its ruins, and made themselves contented in the dilapidated tenements ever since, and even now cling, to the very moment of demolition, to the spot where their ancestors found shelter. But before the site is covered with the proposed new Italian villas, a strange ceremony has taken place. It is proverbially difficult to convert a Jew; but the Rev. O. Ben Oliel, under the auspices of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel amongst the Jews, has baptised two Hebrews, and admitted them into the English Church. The ceremony took place at Rome, in the presence of many of the Protestant clergy, at the very moment, maybe, when co-religionists of the converts were being forced from the place to which they had become so deeply attached from the ancient traditions of their race.

The Derby at Epsom is no longer the most valuable prize for which English race-horses are in the habit of competing: the Grand Prix de Paris (notwithstanding the absence of the "objet d'art" which Napoleon III. used to give) nearly always beats every English prize in pecuniary value (except, of course, the newly established and never yet decided Eclipse Stakes of 10,000 sovs., to be run for in 1886). It is satisfactory, therefore, to know that the Municipality of Paris, in spite of strenuous opposition, have by a majority of 48 to 22 voted for this year the subsidy of 50,000f. (besides 16,000f. given to other races), without which, according to the conditions, there would be no race. As the increase of the octroi alone more than covers the outlay, it would be almost suicidal to cut off the subsidy. Still, it is not pleasant to be at the mercy of a municipality's whims and fancies; and the old English fashion, observed in the Derby, the St. Leger, and other great races, of "running for one another's money" seems to be the more satisfactory, and certainly the more sportsman-like; though there is apparently a growing inclination even in this country to run for "public money."

"English as she is spoke" by foreigners is always amusing; and also "as she is wrote." Here is a Japanese specimen, borrowed from Mr. Faulds' "Nine Years in Nipon," lately published: "Notice. Shoe manufacturer. Design at any choice. The undersigned being engaged long and succeeded with their capacity at shoe factory of Isekats, in Tokio; it is now established in my liability at undermentioned lot all furnishment will be attended in moderate term with good quality. An order is acceptable, in receive a post, being called upon the measure, and it will be forwarded in furnish. U. Inoya." This is worthy of notice from examiners in public competitions: "parse and explain."

THE MAGAZINES.

The commencement of the New Year is distinguished among other things by a great increase of interest in Mr. Payn's novel in the Cornhill Magazine. "Vortigern and Rowena" is performed and condemned, and the hitherto rather languid interest of the plot is quickened by the introduction of pretty actresses, and a very lively demonstration of jealousy on the part of the affianced bride of the unlucky fabricator. Mr. Furniss's illustrations are excellent. "Rainbow Gold," the new serial, by D. Christie Murray, is very clever, but somehow fails to interest us deeply, notwithstanding the strength of the situations. A delightful paper, "Charles Dickens at Home," by one of his daughters, confirms, without materially modifying, the impression hitherto generally entertained of his geniality in his own circle, notwithstanding a somewhat despotic will and an insistance on method and order not often found in writers of imaginative genius. "Reminiscences of Foo-Chow" lets us into the interiors of the dwellings of wealthy Chinese merchants, with their luxury and politeness, and their cuisine of ducks' tongues, skins of pig's mouth, and dragons' whiskers.

Macmillan gives a very favourable account of the success which has attended the removal of some of the unfortunate Highland crofters to the north-west of Canada, and commences a new novel, "A Millionaire's Cousin," remarkable for a vivid sketch of persons and things at Algiers. Mr. J. Cotter Morison comes down with tremendous vigour upon the Jacobin reign of terror in France, without seeking to make a fair distribution of the responsibility between the Terrorists and those whose misdoings had made them possible, Mr. Morison will not let us say inevitable. Mr. Traill's "Great Backstairs Scandal" is a humorous little story much in the manner of Thackeray, but with an individuality of its own.

"Calvados" and "Shakspeare's County" are the subjects of pleasant papers by Miss Mather and Miss Rose Kingsley, yielding many pretty illustrations to the English Illustrated Magazine. "That Terrible Man" is concluded with due impressiveness, and Mr. Wilkie Collins' "Girl at the Gate" gives symptoms of the revival of his old power. The "Dramatic Outlook," by Mr. H. Jones, is illustrated with admirable sketches of the leading performers of the day in their favourite parts. Mr. Jones thinks that at present "the success or failure of any piece at any theatre is to all human judgment a complete lottery," and that no good will be done until the public have been brought to accept some recognised standard of taste.

Longman's Magazine commences a new fiction by Mr. William Black, "White Heather," which promises very well, and concludes the excellent story of "Sir Jocelyn's Cap."

A very good number of Blackwood opens with another specimen of the peculiar class of supernatural fiction which Mrs. Oliphant has made her own, a style only at the command of a writer who believes in at least the possibility of her own story. The idea of "The Portrait" is the inspiration of a person possessed by a supernatural influence driving him on to remedy a wrong of which he himself is wholly unaware. It is scarcely so successful as previous performances of the same nature: the old man is too inconsistent, and the young man too weak to greatly interest us; the supernatural element is not sufficiently impressive; and too much is left obscure in the story. It is nevertheless charmingly written, and may be read with much pleasure. Another very good but widely different tale is from the Chinese, skilfully adapted by an eminent scholar in that language. "Within his Danger," the story in question, is remarkable, not only from the vivid local colouring and the interest of the plot, but also from the successful manner in which very serious incidents are blended with a constant under-current of humour. It is highly probable that little of this is perceptible in the original, and that the drollery arises in large measure from the quaintness with which the frankest recognition of our common humanity cannot prevent our investing Celestials. "A Quartette of Italian Novelists" sets forth the characteristics of modern Italian fiction in a very agreeable style by examples judiciously selected from Farina, Verga, the Marchesa Colombi, and Matilda Serao. "The Waters of Hercules" grows more entertaining with every successive instalment; and a genial memoir of Sir Alexander Grant puts his high claims to respectful remembrance in the most advantageous light possible.

The tendency of democracies to intrust absolute power to a strong man is indisputable, and affords some justification for the apprehensions of "Cæsarism" which Earl Cowper expresses in the Nineteenth Century. It may be urged, however, that precedents from ancient commonwealths are of doubtful application to communities possessed of the modern institution of a free press, by which the people have hitherto unknown facilities for controlling their leader, or, in case of need, removing him. Herr Arminius Vambéry discusses the probability of Russia's ultimately conquering India with an evident leaning to the affirmative; he takes, however, no account of the political, financial, and other internal difficulties which might easily paralyse Russia's action, let the military situation be ever so favourable. Mr. Rae's history of the Times on occasion of its centenary is a very interesting story, but not a very novel one. Some manuscript notes by Charles Lamb in his copy of Wither's poems gives Mr. Swinburne an opportunity for a commentary out of all proportion to the text. Mr. Salt, an Eton master, confesses, on behalf of self and fellows, that, while working very hard themselves, they teach the boys under them next to nothing, and that there is no prospect of any thorough reform unless public opinion take up the question very seriously. Sir Spencer Robinson, discussing the Navy and the Admiralty, makes the excellent suggestion that the naval Lords should be obliged to at least in writing their belief in the adequacy of the estimates proposed by them.

The Fortnightly Review is more varied than usual, but less interesting. The anonymous writer on "The revolution of 1884" merely expresses a truism when he says that the legislation of the future will have a Socialistic tinge; he might have added that this will be equally the case whichever political party is in power. Mr. Courtney continues to damage the excellent cause of minority representation by linking it with a scheme of voting which the British elector will never be persuaded to adopt. The "candid Conservative," whose style is remarkably like Mr. Traill's, overlooks one strong element in the Conservative calculations, the probability of moderate Liberals in one-member constituencies, unable to get their principles and preferences attended to by their own party, drifting into the Conservative ranks. Mr. Stephen Williamson writes cheerfully of the prospects of British commerce and agriculture; but we hope nobody will agree with him when he treats the contingency of an interruption of the food supply of the country by a foreign war too remote for practical politics. Baron Rothschild is also sanguine on the "expansion of art"; while, on the other hand, Persia and the turf would seem to be in an equally unsatisfactory condition, according to the respective testimony of M. Valentine Chirol and Earl Cadogan. M. E. B. De Foublanque makes short work of the pretensions of Mdlle. Caroline Baner to be regarded as an injured victim of the late King of the Belgians. Mr. Burnand's view of the stage as a profession cannot be considered encouraging.

Sir Arthur Hobhouse's exposition of the affairs of the City Companies in the Contemporary Review is valuable, but dry. The gist of it is that less can be fairly extracted from the Companies than ardent municipal reformers hoped, but that they are still squeezable, and worth squeezing. In treating of the German colonial movement, Baron Von der Brüggen, though professedly the founder of the "German Colonial Union," confines himself to safe generalities. There are, besides, a very sensible article on the doubtful prospects but obvious policy of the Evangelical party in the Church; an exciting narrative of a Nihilist's escape from Siberia; and an agreeable essay on Dr. Johnson by the successful author of "Obiter Dicta."

The National Review has an unusual number of articles, but for the most part of a very amateurish description, as though the editor had signalised the commencement of the New Year by a general jail-delivery. "Della Crusca and Anna Matilda" is the most interesting contribution.

It is pleasing to remark for how large a portion of their contents the American magazines are indebted to the old country. Harper for this month is almost half English, with its admirably written and illustrated account of Wickliffe, by Professor A. W. Ward; and a no less excellent description of the Isle of Purbeck, intimately connected with Mr. Seymour Haden's paper on the revival of mezzotint engraving, the illustrations being taken from this picturesque corner of Dorsetshire. An illustrated paper on Florida is equally good, and more novel to English readers; and Mrs. Gustafson's pretty poem is accompanied by very pretty designs. The Century, not altogether so good a number as usual, has two very interesting articles connected more or less with the Civil War. Mr. G. W. Cable, already distinguished as the first Southern writer to admit the justice of the cause of the North, pleads logically and eloquently for perfect justice in dealings between White and Black; and Admiral Walke contributes a graphic and well-illustrated narrative of the very gallant naval operations by which the Mississippi was cleared down as far as Memphis. Mr. Howell's "Silas Lapham" continues a good story, and Ewart Ingersoll's "Making of a Museum" is rich in instruction and illustration. The best contributions to the Atlantic Monthly are Mr. Craddock's Tennesseean story, "The Prophet of the Great Smoky Mountains," and Miss O'Meara's reminiscences of Madame Mohl's salon.

The Magazine of Art begins the new year with a tinted portrait of Lady Maria Waldegrave, after the drawing by John Downman, A.R.A., in the British Museum; an illustrated article describing the home of Mr. Pettie, R.A., at Hampstead; a paper on the French stage, with two good woodcuts of Coquelin in character; "Pompeii in Black and White"; "Romance of Art"; a paper on "Oriental Brasswork"; "A Round in France"; an article on the American artist, Elihu Vedder; a review of Mr. W. J. Linton's works on wood engraving; and the usual art notes for the month. The illustrations—over thirty in number—are all well done, and make this New-Year's number an excellent shilling's-worth. We think, however—apropos of the article on Mr. Pettie's home—that these dry descriptions of the houses and furniture of eminent artists are getting just a little tiresome.

The Art Journal for January is the first number of a new series. The price is now reduced to eightpence, and we trust this time-honoured journal is starting on a new and prosperous lease of continued usefulness. It must now be getting on for fifty years since this earliest organ of the artistic profession commenced its career, under the name of "The Art Union." It was then, we think, published at a shilling; and the proprietors have now done wisely in reducing the price from half-a-crown, which was too much in these days of cheap literature. The present number has for frontispiece a capital etching, by C. O. Murray, of "The Wedding Morning," after the picture by Henry Mosler; an illustrated article, "The Mask of Silence," descriptive of landscape in winter; "Some late additions to the National Gallery," illustrated; a cleverly illustrated paper on the Russian painter, Vereschagin; a description of Niagara, with a view by H.R.H. the Princess Louise; "The Early Madonnas of Raphael," by Mr. Henry Wallis; other short articles, reviews, and art notes, the whole making up a number of great interest and variety.

It is no doubt a token of the success of Girton College that "A Girton Girl" should be taken as the subject of Mrs. Edwardes' novel in Temple Bar. The scene, however, is so far laid not at Girton but in Guernsey. The introduction is lively, and the novel promises well, as does another new serial, Mrs. Riddell's "Mitre Court." There are also several good short stories, and Charles Reade's "Perilous Secret" grows most interesting. But the gem of the number is the memorial of Mark Pattison, by a late undergraduate of Lincoln College, bringing out by vivid touches the essential goodness of heart of one regarded by many as a mere incarnation of intellect.

Belgravia continues "Miss Cadogna," and commences "A Strange Voyage," by W. Clark Russell, which promises to be as exciting as any of his former nautical masterpieces. Cecil Power's "Babylon" manifests humour, but is almost a philological exercise, with its dialect of American and English clowns in alternate chapters. The ubiquitous Miss Gordon Cumming has got to Pekin, and describes the Summer Palace and its environs very graphically.

The scene of Miss O'Hanlon's "Unforeseen," the new leading serial fiction in the Gentleman's Magazine, is laid in Canada, an unwonted locality for English fiction. The best of the other contributions are Miss E. M. Clerke's excellent account of Giusti, the Burns of Italy, and Mr. Swiny's memoir of Jouffroy, by the admission of his rival Fulton, the real inventor of the steam-boat, but whose name is seldom associated with his invention, from which he derived no pecuniary benefit.

London Society has so far altered its plan as to discard serial stories for short tales. It has also a short memoir of Mr. G. F. Watts, R.A.; and a paper on the Gipsies, by their friend and benefactor, Mr. George Smith, of Coalville.

The principal serials of the enterprising firm of Messrs. Cassell, Petter, Galpin, and Co., besides The Magazine of Art, noticed above, are—Cassell's Magazine, The Quiver (the Golden Centre being The Quiver Annual), Cassell's Saturday Journal, Greater London, Royal Shakspere, Familiar Wild Flowers, Book of Health, Old and New London, Illustrated Universal History, Popular Gardening, Picturesque Europe, Picturesque America, the Life and Words of Christ, by the Rev. Cunningham Geikie; Little Folks' Magazine, and the first part of their revised edition of Cassell's Popular Educator.

Among Fashion Books received are—The Season, Le Follet, Ladies' Treasury, Ladies' Gazette of Fashion, World of Fashion, Moniteur de la Mode, and Myra's Journal of Dress.

We have also to acknowledge London Society, The Argosy, the Month, Good Words, the Army and Navy Magazine, Household Words, St. Nicholas, the Red Dragon, Eastward Ho! the Antiquarian, Chambers's Journal, All the Year Round, Merry England, Irish Monthly, Leisure Hour, Book Lore, United Service Magazine, Force's Sporting Notes and Sketches, Harper's Young People, the Illustrated Science Monthly, Theatre, Aunt Judy's Magazine, and the Rosebud.

THE CHURCH.

Dr. Jackson, Bishop of London, died suddenly on Tuesday morning from heart disease, at Fulham Palace, in his seventy-fourth year. A Portrait of the Bishop is given in this Number.

At the Chapel Royal, Savoy, the Rev. C. H. Middleton Wake will preach at the morning service to-morrow (the 11th inst.), and the Rev. W. M. Sinclair in the evening.

The living of Shifnal, Shropshire, valued at £420 a year, has been bestowed upon the Rev. George Wingate, Chaplain to the Bishop of Lichfield.

Lord Plunket was installed in Christ Church Cathedral, Dublin, on the 1st inst., as Archbishop of Dublin, and subsequently was installed as Dean of the Cathedral.

The Rev. Canon Westcott, during the month of residence at Westminster, will continue his lectures on the Revised Version of the New Testament in the choir of the Abbey on Wednesdays, at 3.45 p.m.

Mr. Francis H. Jeune, of the Inner Temple, barrister-at-law, has been appointed to the post of Chancellor of the diocese of Gloucester and Bristol by the Bishop, in the room of Mr. Monk, M.P., who has resigned.

The Rev. F. B. Proctor, one of the assistant masters in King's College School, has been appointed by the Rector of Chipping Barnet to the charge of the new temporary Church of St. Mark, in the same district, which is to be opened by the Bishop of St. Albans on the 13th inst.

At a meeting of clergy and laity at Winchester on Monday—the Bishop presiding, and being supported, among others, by the Earl of Northbrook and Viscount Baring—it was decided to provide a memorial of the late Archdeacon Jacob in the shape of a restoration of the Cathedral reredos, at an estimated cost of £400.

The Prince of Wales and Prince Albert Victor have headed the subscription to provide a permanent memorial to Dr. Paget, F.R.S., Regius Professor of Physic in the University of Cambridge. The committee have decided that the memorial shall take the form of a marble bust of the Professor, to be placed in the interior of Addenbrooke's Hospital, Cambridge. Mr. H. Wiles, sculptor, of Cambridge, has been intrusted with the work.

Two handsome mural tablets (carried out under the direction of Mr. Sinclair, of King-street, Soho) have been placed in the old parish Church of St. Marylebone, to the memory of several members of the Portland family who lie buried in the family vault beneath the church. Amongst the names inscribed are the third Duke of Portland, who was Prime Minister of England in the beginning of the century; the Marquis of Titchfield; Lord William Charles Cavendish Bentinck, Governor-General of India from 1827 to 1835; the last Duchess of Portland; and Lord George Frederick Cavendish Bentinck, well known in racing circles. This church is now called, by Act of Parliament, "The Parish Chapel," and the Rev. Grant E. Thomas is the Incumbent.

THE EARTHQUAKE IN SPAIN.

The series of earthquakes that began on Christmas Day in some parts of Southern Spain, from the south-eastern coast, at Malaga, extending northward to Cordova and westward to Cadiz, eighty or ninety miles in each direction, north-west to Seville, and north-east to Granada, continued at intervals with lessening violence during the next week. The principal towns and cities, except Malaga, have not suffered much damage, but in the villages and country places many hundred lives have been lost, and there is great destruction of property. It seems to have been worst in the mountainous districts near the borders of the provinces of Granada and Malaga, where the shocks of earthquake were repeated on the nights of Dec. 25, 26, and 27, and so late as New-Year's Day. The sky old houses and churches which fell are reported by the local authorities to have buried hundreds of bodies under the ruins at Alhama, Albunuela, Arenas, Periana, and Torrox; and from ten to sixty bodies were buried in many villages. The surviving inhabitants were driven to encamp in the fields, and have suffered greatly from cold and hunger. Alhama, situated on the north slope of the Sierra Tejada, halfway between Malaga and Granada, is the town which has been visited most severely. On Dec. 24 it contained about 12,000 inhabitants, but the number has shrunk to 8000, from deaths and flight. Of the 1757 houses, not 200 can be repaired. All the rest have either fallen or are in so shattered a condition that they must be pulled down. All the five churches, the fine casino or club, and the Townhall are destroyed, and it may be said that the town is reduced to one great heap of ruins, from which rises an intolerable stench from the number of bodies still lying beneath it. Several thousand people are bivouacked in the open air, and are homeless and shelterless; the rest of the inhabitants who escaped with their lives have fled. Nearly all who remain are short of food, and without any of the necessaries of life, and their only hope of getting a supply even of bread rests upon the efforts of Government or the charity of the neighbouring towns. More than three hundred dead have been drawn from beneath the ruins, but it is believed that a much larger number are still lying beneath the masses of fallen masonry. Among the farmhouses lying around the town the loss amounts to eighty killed and two hundred wounded. Alhama is the place most in need of immediate aid to relieve the distress of the people; and Albunuela, a town of two thousand inhabitants, has also suffered extremely. The King and Government of Spain, supported by the vote of the Chamber of Deputies, have taken prompt action for this purpose, and public subscriptions have been opened both in that country and in various cities of Europe, where Spanish Ambassadors or Consuls reside.

The large commercial seaport city of Malaga, which has a hundred thousand inhabitants, was terrified on the night of Christmas Day by three alarming shocks, the first at nine in the evening, the second at eleven o'clock, and the third at half-past two in the morning. Many thousands of people fled from their houses, and ran into the streets, endeavouring to find shelter and safety for the night. All the cabs, omnibuses, private carriages, railway carriages, vans, and covered carts were put into requisition, and whole families passed the night in them; while other people encamped on the Alameda, the public squares, the bed of the Guadalmedina river, fortunately dry at this season, and other open spaces. The actual loss of life in the town of Malaga is fortunately confined to four persons—one lady, who was killed by a falling tile; another, who died from fright; one man and a boy, who were killed by a falling wall. The wounded, however, are numerous. The damage to houses, churches, and other buildings has been estimated at £120,000. A View of Malaga from the sea, and another View showing the port and the Cathedral, are presented in this Number of our Journal. We also give one of Estepona, a place on the south coast, thirty-eight miles east of Gibraltar, which felt the earthquake in a less degree; and one of the city of Cordova, where great panic was occasioned by this terrific visitation. It was felt likewise in the city of Grenada, and one of the towers of the Alhambra is somewhat injured.

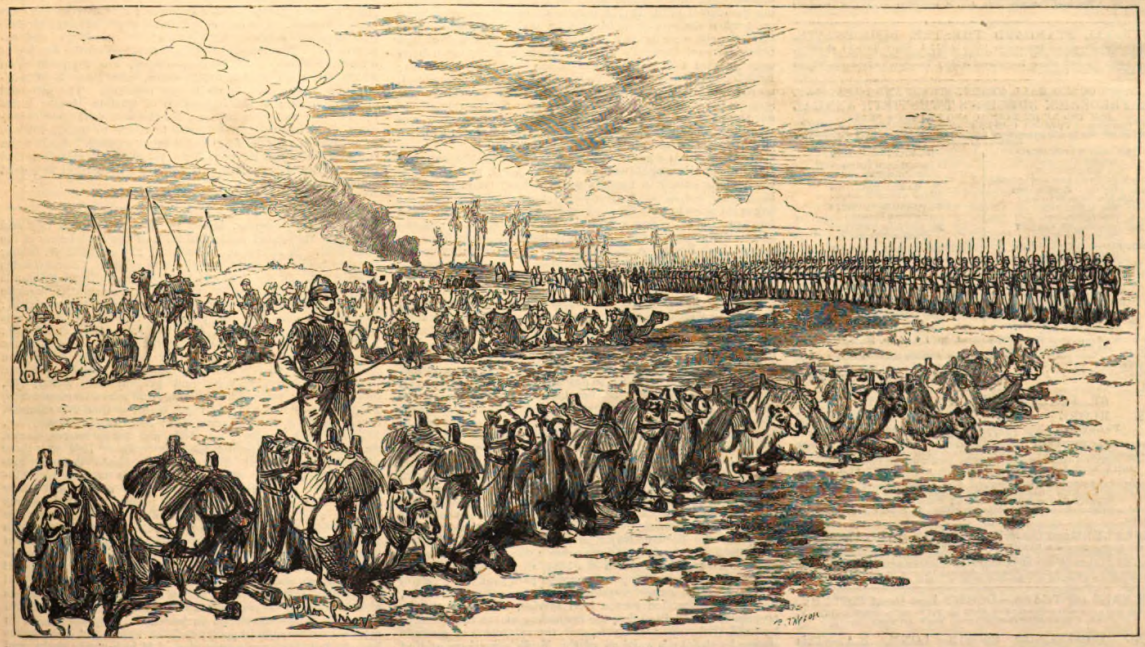
1. Entrance to the Hannek Cataract: View from Koboddy. 2. The Batn-el-Hajar: View from the Rock of Abou Scir. 3. Exit of the Hannek Cataract: View from Abou Fatmeh.
4. Repairing a Whale-Boat in the Hannek Cataract. 5. A Dangerous Part of the Hannek Cataract.

THE NILE EXPEDITION: SKETCHES BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, MR. MELTON PRIOR.

PRINCE HENRY OF BATTENBERG.

HER ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCESS BEATRICE.

APPROACHING MARRIAGE OF PRINCESS BEATRICE.



The domestic happiness of all the members of our Royal family is felt by all classes of the English people to be even more intimately a matter of personal concern, such as we cherish for esteemed friends, than an important national affair. The youngest daughter of our beloved Queen has set an example, remaining hitherto unmarried and devoting herself with affectionate constancy to the assistance and comfort of her widowed mother, while her brothers and sisters, one after another, happily formed new family connections, and two of them, the lamented Princess Alice, Grand Duchess of Hesse, and Prince Leopold, Duke of Albany, have been removed by death from the Royal circle, to the grief of her Majesty and of all the Queen's subjects. Princess Beatrice has for some years past been the close companion of her Majesty at Windsor, Osborne, and Balmoral; she has, nevertheless, occasionally appeared in public to take part in gracious works of charity and benevolence; and her taste and talents as an amateur artist, more especially in painting floral designs, have been shown in a Birthday Album and other illustrated publications. It was announced last week, after the meeting of the Privy Council at Osborne, that the Queen gave a conditional sanction to the betrothal of Princess Beatrice to Prince Henry of Battenberg, the condition being that the Prince and Princess reside in England after their marriage, and in close proximity to her Majesty.

Prince Henry of Battenberg, third son of Prince Alexander of Hesse, is the younger brother of Prince Louis of Battenberg, an officer in the British Navy, who is married to the Queen's grand-daughter, Princess Victoria of Hesse; and another of his brothers is Prince Alexander, who has been appointed ruler of Bulgaria. Prince Henry is cousin to the reigning Grand Duke of Hesse. He was born on Oct. 5, 1858, and is thus a year and a half younger than Princess Beatrice, who was born on April 14, 1857. The Princes of Battenberg take their title from a town of that name, containing about a thousand population, in the Grand Duchy of Hesse-Darmstadt. Prince Henry is a favourite member of Berlin Court society, and has been for the last two years Lieutenant in the Guards Corps, the crack Prussian cavalry regiment, to which his elder brother, the Prince of Bulgaria, is still attached as Major-General.

A fortnight ago, Prince Henry arrived on a visit to his brother, Prince Louis, at Kent House, Cowes. Since that time he has taken drives almost daily with the Queen and Princess Beatrice in the vicinity of Osborne, and has also dined with her Majesty and her Royal Highness on several occasions. On Sunday week Prince Henry attended Divine service with the Queen and Princess at Whippingham church. It is also worth noting that the Dean of Windsor paid a visit to her Majesty at Osborne.

Our Portrait of her Royal Highness Princess Beatrice is from a photograph by Mr. A. Bassano; and that of her future husband from one by Theodor Prümm, of Berlin.

Mr. W. L. Jackson, M.P., some time ago offered £100 in prizes for essays on two subjects relating to friendly societies. One subject was How to Remedy the Inequalities of the Levies, and the other The Defects of Friendly Societies and How to Remedy Them. The first prizes have been awarded by the adjudicators to Mr. James Borthwick, Portobello, and Mr. Charles Cowell, of Leeds. There were sixty-four competitors, amongst whom were several clergymen.

THE NILE EXPEDITION: INSPECTION OF THE SECOND DETACHMENT OF THE GUARDS' CAMEL CORPS AT DONGOLA.
SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, MR. MELTON PRIOR.

BIRTH.

On the 1st inst., at Folkestone, Lady Alice Newton, of a son.

MARRIAGE.

On Sept. 15, 1884, at St. Phillip's Church, Sydney, N.S.W., by the Rev. W. A. Charlton, Arthur, eldest son of R. S. G. Macdonald, Balnagowan, Rockhampton, Queensland, to Edith, fifth daughter of the late Lieutenant-Colonel F. B. Russell, formerly of H.M. 28th Regiment.

DEATH.

On the 3rd inst., at Eltham Park, Kent, Thomas Jackson, Esq., aged 76 years.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, is Five Shillings for each announcement.

MONTE CARLO.—MUSICAL SEASON (CONCERTS, REPRESENTATIONS).

In addition to the usual Concerts, directed by Monsieur Romeo Accursi, the Société des Bains de Mer de Monaco has authorised M. Pasdeloup to arrange a Series of Extraordinary Grand Musical Entertainments (Concerts, Representations) this Winter.

The services of the following distinguished Artistes have been already retained:—

Mesdames Kreuss,	Messieurs, Faure,
,, Devries,	,, Vergnet,
,, Salla,	,, Capoul,
,, Donadio,	,, Bjorkstein,
,, Frank-Duvernoy,	,, Couturier,
,, Bellocca,	,, Villaret,
,, Simonnet,	&c.

Added to which the celebrated Instrumentalists will appear:

VIOLINISTS:

Mons. Sivori, Mons. Marsik, Miss N. Carpenter, American artiste, 1st Conservatoire Prize, 1884.

PIANISTS: Mons. Planté, Mons. Th. Ritter, Madame Essipoff.

HARPIST: Mons. Hasselmans.

These Extraordinary Representations will be given each Wednesday and Saturday, commencing the end of January and terminating the middle of March.

The Classical Concerts every Thursday.

The GRAND INTERNATIONAL CONCOURS will take place in the following order:—

Saturday, Jan. 10: Grande Poule d'Essai. A Purse of 2000f. added to a Poule of 100f. each.

Tuesday, Jan. 13: Prix d'Ouverture. A Purse of 3000f. added to 100f. entrance.

Friday, Jan. 16, and Saturday, Jan 17: Grand Prix du Casino. An object of Art and 6,000f. added to 200f. entrance.

Monday, Jan. 19: Prix de Monte Carlo. Grand Free Handicap. A Purse of 3000f. added to 100f. entrance.

Thursday, Jan. 22: Prix de Consolation. An object of Art and 1000f.

BI-WEEKLY MATCHES FOR PRIZES.

Jan. 24: Prix de Saint-Quentin. An object of Art, added to a Poule of 50f.
Jan. 27: Prix Yeo. A Purse of 200f., added to a Poule of 30f.
Jan. 31: Prix Saint Trivier. An object of Art, with Poule of 50f.
Feb. 3: Prix Robert. A Purse of 400f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 7: Prix Hopwood. An object of Art and a Poule of 30f.
Feb. 10: Prix Lafond. A Purse of 300f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 12: Prix Ederlinay. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 16: Prix du Comité. A Purse of 500f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 21: Prix Camanor. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 24: Prix Devon. A Purse of 300f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 28: Prix Dori. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Mar. 3: Prix de Mars. A Purse of 500f. and a Poule of 50f.
Mar. 7: Prix Patton. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Mar. 10: Prix W. Cail. A Purse of 400f., added to a Poule of 50f.

GRAND CLOSING PRIZES.

March 12 and 13: Grand Prix de Clôture. A Purse of 4000f. added to 100f. entrance; Second Prize, 1000f.; Third Prize, 700f.; Fourth, 300f.

A. BLONDIN, Secretary.

NEWS FROM NICE.—The weather is really splendid, the temperature ranging from 60 deg. to 65 deg. in the shade. The sun shines almost perpetually, and its warm rays makes life enjoyable to all, and more especially to those who have by illness or otherwise sought its influence.

There has been an almost entire absence of rain for several months, but this has not interfered with the sanitary arrangements of the city, as the streets and roads are daily watered from the mountain stream of the Vesubie, which is also used for flushing the drains, which are, in addition, cleaned or disinfected by purifying chemical compounds.

The streets were never so clean and tidy, and the average mortality of the city is less than many fashionable towns in England.

Four resident English medical men are in practice here, and would be willing to communicate with any intending visitors desirous of satisfying their nervous fears as to the healthfulness of the town by addressing Doctors West, Sturge, Wakefield, or Watkyn, or Mr. Nicholls, the English chemist here. In future, there will be an authorised tribunal for this purpose, as a hygienic society of medical men French, English, and others, is now in course of formation.

The Prolongation of the Promenade des Anglais is complete, and forms one of the finest drives in the Riviera. The police force has been reorganised.

The Italien Theatre, a very handsome building, has been reconstructed and enlarged, and a grand ball of inauguration will be given in February.

The Casino Theatre is giving its entertainments; and the Théâtre des Français, of which Mr. Cortelazzo is the able Director, has an excellent Troupe de Comédie, as also some star artistes for the Opera Comique.

The Jetty Promenade is, they say, to be immediately rebuilt. The Races will take place shortly. The renowned Carnival will surpass all others, and the Regattas will form an important part of the attractions, particulars of which anon.

The visitors are daily arriving in increased numbers to this bright and sunny land.

THE JAPANESE VILLAGE,

Erected and peopled exclusively by NATIVES of JAPAN,

ALBERT-GATE, HYDE PARK, OPEN DAILY from Eleven a.m. to Ten p.m. under the distinguished Patronage of her Royal Highness PRINCESS CHRISTIAN, her Royal Highness PRINCESS LOUISE, MARCHIONESS of LORNE, &c.

SKILLED JAPANESE ARTIFICERS and WORKERS (Male and Female) will illustrate the MANNERS, CUSTOMS, and ART-INDUSTRY of their Country, attired in their National and Picturesque Costumes.

Magnificently Decorated and Illuminated BUDDHIST TEMPLE.

FIVE O'CLOCK TEA in the Japanese Tea-House.

JAPANESE MUSICAL and other ENTERTAINMENTS.

EVERY-DAY LIFE as in JAPAN. MILITARY BAND.

ONE SHILLING.

WEDNESDAYS, Half-a-Crown. Children under Twelve, Sixpence.

Promoter and Managing Director, T. BUHRIGSAN.

PRINCESS'S THEATRE.—MR. WILSON BARRETT, Lessee and Manager.—EVERY EVENING, at 7.45, HAMLET. Messrs. Wilson Barrett, Speakman, Dewhurst, Willard, Clifford Cooper, Frank Cooper, Cranford, Hudson, Doone, De Solla, Evans, Fulton, Foss, &c., and George Barrett; Mesdames Eastlake, Dickens, &c., and M. Leighton. Doors open at 7.15. Box-office, 9.30 to Five. No fees. Matinées, Saturday next, Jan. 10, and Saturday, Jan. 24. Business Manager, J. H. Cobbe.

NATIONAL STANDARD THEATRE, BISHOPSGATE. Mr. John Douglass's Pantomime CINDERELLA, Every Evening at Seven. MORNING PERFORMANCES every Monday, Tuesday, and Saturday at One. Children under ten half price. Magnificent Scenery, Francisco's Juvenile Ballet and Stud of Thirty Midget Ponies.

ST. JAMES'S GRAND HALL, REGENT-STREET AND PICCADILLY.

MR. FREDERICK BURGESS'S TWENTIETH ANNUAL DAY AND NIGHT MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC FETE

Will take place on TUESDAY AFTERNOON and EVENING, Jan. 27, 1885. Upon which occasion he will be honoured with the valuable assistance of the following Eminent Artistes:

Miss ALICE LINGARD (Prince's Theatre),	Mr. WALTER JOYCE,
Mrs. BILLINGTON (Theatres Royal Drury Lane and Lyceum),	Monsieur MARIUS (Criterion Theatre),
Mrs. FREDERICK BURGESS (née Miss Ellen Meyrick),	Mr. HARRY PAULTON (Royal Avenue Theatre),
Miss E. FARREN (Gaiety Theatre),	Mr. ARTHUR ROBERTS (Comedy Theatre),
Miss CONSTANCE LOSEBY (Gaiety Theatre),	Mr. GEORGE BARRETT (Princess's Theatre),
Miss FLORENCE ST. JOHN (Comedy Theatre),	Mr. LIONEL BROUGH (Toole's Theatre),
Mr. JAMES FERNANDEZ (Theatre Royal Drury Lane),	Mr. J. M. DALAS (Gaiety Theatre),
Mr. CHARLES WARNER (Theatre Royal Adelphi),	Mr. W. J. HILL (Globe Theatre),
Mr. FRED LESLIE (Comedy Theatre),	and
Mr. HARRY WALSHAM (Comedy Theatre),	Mr. EDWARD TERRY (Gaiety Theatre).

With the kind consent of Mr. J. Hollingshead, Mr. J. L. Shine, Mr. A. Henderson, Mr. Hawtrey, and Mr. Wilson Barrett.

Tickets and Places can be secured at Ambrose Austin's Universal Ticket Office, St. James's Hall. Visitors from the country can secure places by post, upon forwarding P.O.O. or Cheque payable A. Austin, and inclosing a stamped and directed envelope.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.

THE MOORE AND BURGESS MINSTRELS' TWENTIETH ANNUAL CARNIVAL of MUSIC and FUN, at the ST. JAMES'S HALL, in addition to an ENTIRELY NEW REPERTOIRE OF BEAUTIFUL SONGS. The following special features have achieved the most signal and stirring success

THE CHRISTMAS TELEPHONE. THE TWO AWFULS.

JOHN WISE'S Remarkably Clever Scene, called QUIET FUN.

MOORE'S NEW SONGS.

THE PLUM-PUDDING, and TOTTIE, KISS YOUR GEORGY, DEAR.

EDWIN FRENCH'S NEW BUDGET OF AMERICAN HUMOUR. THE DUDES, &c.

EVERY-DAY at THREE. EVERY NIGHT at EIGHT.

Tickets and Places can be secured at Austin's Office, St. James's Hall, One Month in advance.

MASKELYNE and COOKE, EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, give their performance EVERY AFTERNOON at Three; and on the Evenings, at Eight, of Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Mr. Maskelyne's Christmas Novelties, entitled THE FAKIRS OF BENARES AND THEIR BRAZEN ORACLE, introducing many Novel Effects and Startling Illusions, differing entirely in character from any previously witnessed. Stalls, 5s.; Reserved Seats, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Balcony, 1s.

THE VALE OF TEARS.—DORÉ'S Last Great PICTURE, completed a few days before he died, NOW on VIEW at the DORÉ GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street, with his other great pictures. Ten to Six Daily. 1s.

ANNO DOMINI, by EDWIN LONG, R.A.—This great Work is NOW ON VIEW, together with other important works, at the GALLERIES, 168, New Bond-street. Ten to Six. Admission, 1s.

REPRINT OF

OUR CHRISTMAS NUMBER

Now Ready.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

POSTAGE: PARCELS 10ST, 3D.; BOOK POST, 3D.

Office: 198, Strand, London, W.C.

TITLEPAGE AND INDEX.

The Titlepage and Index to Engravings of Volume Eighty-five (from July 5 to Dec. 27, 1884) of THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS can be had Gratis through any Newsagent, or direct from the Publishing Office, 198, Strand, W.C. London.

THE NILE EXPEDITION.

The forward march of Brigadier-General Sir Herbert Stewart, with the advanced column of troops mounted on camels and a detachment of cavalry, across the Desert from Korti to Gakdul, nearly a hundred miles, was most successfully performed last week; and our readers may do well again to look at the Map which appeared in our last publication, showing the whole Desert route from Korti to Matammeh, on the Nile opposite Shendy, halfway between Khartoum and Berber. Gakdul, where a strong military post has now been established, is the place to which Lord Wolseley will now advance with the Head-quarters Staff, the remainder of the Camel Corps, the cavalry, and a portion of the artillery; and will thence move onward to the banks of the Nile at Matammeh, where it is not unlikely that he may have to fight a battle with the Mahdi's army, or possibly nearer to Khartoum, in which case he may have the active co-operation of General Gordon with the armed steam-boats on the river, and with the Egyptian troops of the beleaguered garrison.

Sir Herbert Stewart's force, consisting of 1150 men, Guards, Marines, and Cavalry mounted on camels, Engineers, Artillery (without guns), Commissariat, and Medical Staff, with an escort of the 19th Hussars on horseback and with five or six hundred baggage camels, with field hospital and stores, started from Korti on Tuesday week, at three o'clock in the afternoon, and reached Gakdul wells at seven o'clock on the Friday morning. The marching distance of ninety-seven miles was accomplished in sixty-five hours, and during that time the camels were not once watered. The road led over many rough places, where marching was very difficult. The troops marched all night, and did not bivouac till eight o'clock on Wednesday morning, when Abu Nafki was reached. Here there was some excitement owing to the uncertainty as to the whereabouts and disposition of the inhabitants. The troops reached the first wells, called Hasheen, on Wednesday evening; but the water supply being scarce, they moved on almost immediately. On Thursday morning, at daybreak, the New Year was ushered in with great cheering from the men, which rang far and wide over the plains, and echoed through the hills. Hardly had the cheering ceased when there was again a cry of "Wells ahead!" This instantly brought the 26th Company of the Royal Engineers to the front, and under the direction of Major Doward the tripod pumps soon supplied the men's wants. At eight o'clock, the men again mounted to continue their march to the Gakdul wells, capturing on their way a quantity of spoil, and making all the natives they met prisoners. Captain Fanshawe, with a troop of the 19th Hussars, succeeded in capturing a prominent sheikh, named Abu Loola, with his family. On Thursday night Major Kitchener, with an escort, captured from a hut five natives who are said to have been the Mahdi's meat contractors. Gakdul wells was secured on Friday morning at seven o'clock. The natives had all disappeared. The water was found to be good. Five more natives were captured and brought in by Captain Walsh's division of the Mounted Infantry. Two of them wore the Mahdi's uniform, and all attempted to evade capture, being well armed and disposed to fight. The force, marching in extended order, covered a frontage of forty yards, with scouts as the advance and rear guards, and presented a most formidable appearance. The natives state that the Mahdi's force is terrified at the approach of the British troops. It is stated, on the other hand, that the Mahdi has withdrawn his forces from before Omdurman since the recent attacks on that stronghold, and is now concentrated near Matammeh, with the intention of waiting the arrival of the British column there and swooping down on it when the men are exhausted by their long march. The Gakdul wells were in the hands of a hostile band a few days before General Stewart's dash on them, and the main body only deserted the post hurriedly when they heard that the British column had been seen advancing. They then dispersed, mostly southward and westward. The Arab spearmen were seen on the hills watching from a distance the movements of our troops about sunset on Friday. No attempt, however, was made to molest the force now holding Gakdul, from which a despatch has arrived reporting all well.

Leaving the troops and stores in garrison at the camp of Gakdul, Sir Herbert Stewart returned to Korti, bringing back the baggage camels to Lord Wolseley's head-quarters, where he arrived last Monday afternoon. Lord Wolseley rode out five or six miles to meet Sir Herbert Stewart, and to compliment him upon his really fine achievement. It is expected that the camels will require several days' rest before the main force can set out from Korti. A detachment of mounted infantry has been placed at the Hambok wells, and at other places along the route, to protect the water, and to enlarge the holes by which it is supplied.

A letter has been received from General Gordon, dated Dec. 14, in which he simply says "All right at Khartoum"; it was written on a scrap of paper the size of a postage-stamp.

The detached force under General Earle, sent up the Nile from Korti to Merawi, which is intended to chastise the Monassir tribe for the murder of Colonel J. D. Stewart and Mr. Frank Power, and then to proceed to Abu Ahmed, the end of the Korosko Desert road, has been struggling against the stream of the river. The telegraph is destroyed above Merawi. The Staffordshire Regiment arrived at Hamdab on the 3rd, in fifty boats, and ascended the Gerendid rapids in five hours. The Monassir tribe are reported to be collected twenty-five miles ahead.

Our Special Artist, Mr. Melton Prior, has arrived at Lord Wolseley's head-quarters at Korti, and expects to be able to accompany the final advance of the Expedition. His Sketches engraved for this week's publication mostly represent different views of the Hannek Cataracts (the Third Cataract of the Nile) and the Batn-el-Hajar, or "Belly of Rocks," with the operations of unloading and repairing a damaged whale-boat; and one shows the steersmen of a boat, on the rocks, watching an officer who is crossing a dangerous part under the skilful guidance of the expert Canadian boatmen. Other Sketches, however, are devoted to the land service, and represent the trying-on of camel saddles, the inspecting of the Camel Corps by Lord Wolseley at Dongola, and the exhibition of a mimic charge by the Arab warriors of the Mudir's garrison at that place.

CITY ECHOES.

With the commencement of January came an easier tendency in the money market, due to the liberation of the dividends upon foreign bonds and many other securities, while yesterday the payment of the dividends on the home funds further added to the supply of cash, and led to a reduction from 4 and 4½ to 3½ and 3½ per cent in deposit rates. In the next few days, however, repayments of advances, had in anticipation of the dividends, will cause a marked diminution in the amount of available capital, which, with the revenue collections, will enable the Bank to make the 5 per cent rate more effective in attracting gold from abroad should the directors maintain that figure. In the Stock Exchange the new year commenced under somewhat more favourable auspices. Advices from New York were encouraging, the New York Central and West Shore undertakings being reported as in the act of arranging their differences, while the coal companies had come to an arrangement. Later news, however, is to the effect that these rumours were groundless, and the better feeling engendered has given way to a depressed tone, much of the rise at first established having been lost. General surroundings, indeed, are not such as to encourage any sustained advance in Stock Exchange securities. Trade reports are slightly better, and an advance in some of the produce markets has taken place; but a much more decided improvement in the general state of business must be exhibited, and more support must be forthcoming from the outside public, before matters in the "House" can be expected to mend.

Next week, or perhaps sooner, the English Railway companies will be announcing the results of the half-year's working, so far as the dividends are concerned. It is scarcely necessary to remark that in several cases the rates of distribution will be lower than for the second half of 1883, only three, out of the fifteen principal railways, having earned increased receipts; these are the Great Eastern, £824; the Lancashire and Yorkshire, £9994; and the Metropolitan District, £10,784. A substantial saving in passenger duty will be shown probably, as the reduction only partially came into effect during the period with which the comparison is made. Against this, however, must be set the increase in preference charges, and also an addition of £3,565,000 in ordinary capital, divided as follows:—Great Eastern, £715,000; London and Brighton, £645,000; Great Western, £502,000; London and North-Western, £963,600; and Metropolitan, £750,000. As some guide to the probable dates at which to expect the dividend announcements, it may be stated that last year the Metropolitan rate was made known on Jan. 9; the South-Eastern on the 10th; the London and Brighton, and Manchester and Sheffield on the 11th; the Great Eastern on the 17th; the London and Chatham, and London and South-Western on the 23rd; the North-Eastern on the 24th; the Lancashire and Yorkshire on the 28th; the Midland on Feb. 1; the Great Western, and London and North-Western on the 5th; the Great Northern on the 6th; the Metropolitan District on the 7th; the Caledonian on March 4; and the North British on the 6th.

Tramway companies are believed to have experienced a very satisfactory half-year, the cheapness of fodder and the mildness of the weather having been favourable influences. The report of the London Tramways Company has been issued, and tends to confirm this impression, the receipts being sufficient to enable the recommendation of a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent per annum. For the first half of last year, the rate was 6½; and for the year 1883, 5 and 9½ per cent per annum, respectively, were the dividends.

The London and Westminster and City Banks both announced their dividends on the 1st inst. The directors of the former propose paying 8 per cent for the half-year as against 9 per cent for the same period last year; while the distribution recommended by the City Bank is 10 per cent per annum, being at the same rate as paid for the six months to December, 1883. As compared with 15 per cent per annum for several previous half-years, the Union Bank of London recommend a dividend at the rate of 12½ per cent per annum, while the distribution proposed by the Imperial Bank is 7 per cent per annum, compared with 8 for the corresponding period. For the twenty-third half-year the Consolidated Bank is to pay 10 per cent per annum.

Further information respecting the relations between the Rio de Janeiro Gas Company and the Government is given in a circular issued by the directors of the gas company. The deposit made with the tender at the end of the year 1883 has been returned. The new edital, dated Sept. 30 last, contains, the directors remark, some important alterations and inaccuracies. The deposit previously required on the signing of a contract which, it will be remembered, was the point upon which the rival tender broke down, and thus is of considerable importance, is no longer required. The principal other alteration is the imposition of Custom House duties upon all the materials required for the new works and extensions. The inaccuracies referred to relate to the quantity of gas supplied, and the length of mains required. Apart from the new edital and its conditions, the directors complain that the Brazilian Government have cancelled their right to import materials duty free.

T. S.

THE BOOKS PUBLISHED IN 1884.

The Publishers' Circular, issued by Messrs. Sampson Low and Co., gives its annual analytical table of the book issues of the year 1884. It shows an increase of 228 on 1883, or, taking the new books and excluding the new editions, the increase is exactly 100. Of the total issues of new books theology stands at the head with 724 volumes, more than one sixth; juvenile works and tales stand second with 603, about one eighth; educational, classical, and philological books 543, about one ninth; history, biography, &c., 490, more than one tenth; books on the arts and sciences and illustrated works, 432, one eleventh; novels, tales, and other fiction, 408, more than one eleventh; year-books and volumes of serials, 323, one fifteenth; voyages, travels, and geographical works, 236, one twentieth; pamphlets, sermons, and miscellaneous works, 208, one twenty-third; and then, with less than 200 volumes, come poetry and the drama, 179; law, jurisprudence, &c., 163; medicine, surgery, &c., 160; and belles lettres, essays, &c., also 160. Comparing the new works of 1884 with those of 1883, the greatest increase is in books on the arts and sciences—a rise of 78; next stands history and biography with a rise of 76; then come novels, and other fiction with an increase of 59; poetry and the drama with a growth of 34; voyages and travels with a rise of 26. The increase, on the whole, is counterbalanced by a falling off of 138 in the issues of juvenile works and tales, and of 96 in belles lettres; the only other classes in which there is a reduction being the educational, classical, and philological works, which show a small reduction of 13, and the medical works with a diminution of 3. In the new editions the issues of 1884 show an increase of 128 on those of 1883, including a rise of 60 in the novels, 32 in law and jurisprudence, 22 in arts and sciences, 35 in poetry and the drama, and 31 in belles lettres; but there was a reduction of 44 in juvenile works, and several other slight alterations.

THE PLAYHOUSES.

Is there, after all, any institution that can be quoted in the world of public amusements so defiantly conservative as the circus? Here we have a spick and span fine new one at Covent Garden. The temple of lyric art has for the moment been converted into a stable; the stalls from which we have seen "Faunhauser" and "Lohengrin" are arranged into a semicircle to allow of the clattering of "'oofs of the 'osses"; an orchestra, brilliantly lighted with electric lamps, is suspended over the stage where Faust loved and Mephisto tempted; but the humours of the ring remain the same as when Widdicomb ruled in the arena and the authors of the Bon Gualtier Ballads told us of the triumph of Donna Inez Woolfordinez:—

> Round she flew as Flora flying
> Spans the circle of the year,
> And the youth of London, sighing,
> Half forgot their ginger-beer.

The enterprising Mr. William Holland has scoured half Europe for attractions; the circuses and hippodromes of Paris, Berlin, and Vienna have been ransacked; America has been called into requisition—and yet what do we see? The same hoops, flags, and streamers, the same species of juggling with cups, balls, and spinning plates, the same bare-backed riders, the same schooled horses, ridden by ladies in irreproachable habits, and gentlemen in the most unexceptionable breeches, and a clever elephant or monkey or so, to amuse the children; but as regards grooms, porters, carpet-bearers, clowning and wheezing and gagging, precisely the same kind of circus that has existed since the days of Bartholomew Fair. With one exception, if you please, Mr. Holland. We have the master of the ring, with his proud and stately walk—too stately and proud, alas! to rub the soles of the lovely Océana with any amount of "virgin chalk," but not too dignified to knock the clown down on the sawdust—we beg pardon, on the newly introduced cocoa-nut mat. But where is Gomersalez, the interpreter of a hundred characters on horseback? Where is the intrepid rider who, in the old days, appeared overburdened with clothing, and who, by rapid changes, appeared as a brigand; as Shaw, the Life-Guardsman; as T. P. Cooke, the conventional sailor; as a John Bull Farmer; and, finally, in the full glory of spangled tunic, the proud possessor of the silver-skirted maiden he has erstwhile been pursuing round the ring? Of the representatives of Donna Inez Woolfordinez there is a sufficient number; but Gomersalez is at a discount. Not, indeed, that barebacked riding has deteriorated since his day. The latest youthful descendant of the time-honoured circus name of Batty appears in the person of Mr. George Batty, whose "unrivalled Newmarket-jockey act" gains the strongest applause of the evening; and the handsome horseman, active, athletic, and intelligent, is evidently a favourite with the fair sex. To balance the account, we have the beautiful Océana, who is so popular in Paris—a very comely lady, with pleasant face and expression, who, swinging on a slack wire, picks up a lace pocket-handkerchief, and goes through the stereotyped formula of throwing up balls and bottles and spinning plates at the top of a stick. No high effort of imagination is required for these exercises, but they interest when they do not depress the spectator. A word, of course, in praise of the trained animals. The children enjoy the comic seriousness of one of the best monkeys ever seen outside the cage at the Zoo; and the elephants, who trumpet out their pleasure whether they ring bells or consume tarts and biscuits, are placed very high in the public estimation. In order to make a very special Christmas feature, Mr. Holland has arranged a pantomimic sketch for the children, and the story of "St. George and the Dragon" is illustrated with considerable skill and prettiness. The concluding tableau, when the miniature players, on their ponies, with shields, banners, armour, and panoply, are massed in the ring, is as pretty a sight as can be seen, even when contrasted with far more expensive and sumptuous shows.

The Alhambra has settled down under its new magisterial license into a "theatre of varieties"—that is to say, the Lord Chamberlain's power over the vast hall has disappeared, and civilised people are actually permitted, as they are in every other capital in the world, to enjoy a mixed and miscellaneous entertainment without putting out their after-dinner cigars or dispensing with the post-prandial cup of coffee. So the Alhambra, as reconstituted, depends upon ballets and comic songs. In the first department the Alhambra has literally no rival. The much-vaunted Eden Théâtre in Paris, even the show-houses of Brussels, Berlin, and Vienna, "cannot hold a candle" to the tasteful, artistic, and decorous spectacles that follow one another, year after year, at the great theatre in Leicester-square. With M. Jacobi to lead and compose, and the spirited directors to find the money, we may expect many more ballets as they are wanted as graceful and fantastic as the "Swans," and as luridly magnificent as the weird and phantasmagorian "Melusine." Here we have deliberate contrast; it is the comedy and tragedy of terpsichorean art. Apparently, the force of beauty can no further go—until next time. Would, indeed, that the Alhambra directors could infuse as much life, sense, and promise into the modern music-hall song! Music-hall minstrelsy has degenerated until it has become the most depressing and ghastly entertainment that is presented in the metropolis. There are no really good songs to sing, and very few really good singers to sing them. Here the "force of folly" can no further go; and Mr. Charles Morton, the honoured father of all the music-halls, would be doing the State much service if he would infuse a little life and create some much-desired reform in a department now almost wholly given over to tedious vulgarity or unblushing inanity. If the people liked the modern music-hall minstrel, it would be a different matter. But they don't. They sit and stare or yawn, and not one honest laugh is heard, while the poor singer is labouring with his jokes or lumbering with his dancing.

There can be no question of the success of Mr. Paulton's burlesque, "The Babes," at Toole's Theatre; and the merry mice are playing there to their hearts' content, whilst the popular managerial cat is away in the provinces, making money as fast as he can and delighting every town he enters. The early predictions have been in every way fulfilled, and, thanks to Mr. Lionel Brough, Mr. Willie Edouin, and the captivating Miss Alice Atherton, another "Blue Beard" has been secured on the same field of action. The revised Christmas edition of the burlesque brings out new songs, new dances, fresh fun; and the visitors on arriving receive a Christmas-box with "Jessie's compliments." This turns out to be the heading of a very pretty album, containing an excellent photograph of Miss Alice Atherton, which is presented to everyone who books a stall or circle seat for one of the popular matinées.

That critics are not infallible—whatever Lord Lytton or Mrs. Kendal may think of them—is sufficiently proved by the extraordinary success achieved by Mr. H. C. Hawtrey's "Private Secretary," now running to overcrowded houses at the Globe. The prospects of the play were so doubtful at the Prince's Theatre that it would have been withdrawn had there been anything to put up in its place. Suddenly and unexpectedly it went up with a rush. It bore bravely the danger of transplanting to a theatre not wholly connected with comic pieces, and now it is one of the most popular plays in London, the photographs of Mr. W. J. Hill and of Mr. Penley selling as well in the shops as those of any "professional beauty." There is no reason why such a play should not run until the end of the year. If the actors do not weary of their work all will be well.

And now for the future. The true theatrical season of the year will be started by Mr. M. L. Mayer at the French Plays. On this last Thursday will have been welcomed to the little Royalty the famous Jane Hading and the notorious M. Damala in the characters they "created" in George Ohnet's—to me very interesting and dramatic—romance, "Le Maître de Forges." Jane Hading having been discussed, and the various readings and business duly contrasted with those of the Kendals and other performers at the St. James's, we are to be summoned to the Prince's Theatre to see Mrs. Langtry, on her return from America and the provinces, fortified by experience, and as earnest as ever in the art she has so warmly espoused.

On or about Jan. 17—I should say Thursday, Jan. 22—Mrs. Langtry will appear in a new and almost literal version of "La Princesse Georges," by Alexandre Dumas fils, a play never before acted in England, either in French or English, but well known to all who have studied and admired the consummate art of Aimée Desclée. The play is strong, and will give Mrs. Langtry a fine opportunity. She will be supported by Mr. Charles Coghlan as the Prince, an actor who will be welcomed back to London with great delight, and by an excellent company, containing the names of Ada Ward, Kate Pattison, Helen Matthews, Annie Rose, F. Everill, and F. Smedley. The next production at the Haymarket will be Boucicault's "Old Heads and Young Hearts," touched up by the author for modern production, and enabling Mrs. Bancroft to appear in Madame Vestris' original character, the Lady Alice Hawthorne. Mr. Brookfield will play old Farren's character, Jesse Rural, and Mr. Bancroft in that identified with Charles Mathews—Littleton Coke. The play was originally produced at the Haymarket in 1844; it was revived at the Vaudeville in 1874.

Shakspeare's "As You Like It" is underlined at the St. James's, and promised this month. The next production at the Court is likely to be an English version of "Les Rantzau," by MM. Erckmann-Chatrian, called "The Peacemaker." C. S.

Mr. John L. Child gave, on Thursday, the 8th, at St. George's Hall, the first of four dramatic and miscellaneous recitals, assisted by vocal and instrumental music. The other recitals are announced to take place, at the same hall, on the 29th inst., Feb. 19, and March 14.

Late on Tuesday night there was a gathering of ladies and gentlemen interested in the drama who had accepted the invitation of Mr. Augustus Harris to assist in the consumption of the cake and wine provided by Baddeley, the Drury Lane performer, who in 1794 left, by will, £100 invested in Three per Cents, the annual interest on which was to supply cake and wine for the members of the Drury Lane company, to be partaken of on Twelfth Night. The original bequest this year, as on many others, received a handsome addition, but the proceedings in connection with the cutting of the cake and its distribution were duly observed. The cake was cut by Mr. James Fernandez.

FASHIONABLE MARRIAGES.

In the parish church of Kirk Sandall, near Doncaster, on the 1st inst., Mr. R. Nassau Sutton-Nelthorpe, of Scawby, Lincolnshire, was married to the Hon. Dulcibella Eden, eldest daughter of Lord Auckland. The bridegroom was accompanied by Sir William Eden, Bart., his best man. The bridesmaids were the Hon. Mary Eden, Miss Janetta Sutton, the Hon. Maud and the Hon. Constance Hamilton Russell, Miss Violet Dickinson, Miss Beatrice Eden, Miss Tollemache, Miss Elfrida Lloyd, Miss Paget, and Miss Janetta Sibthorp; and there were two pages, the Hon. Evelyn and the Hon. Ashley Eden, half-brothers of the bride. The bridesmaids' dresses, designed after Sir Joshua Reynolds, consisted of white satin petticoats, and overskirts of soft white silk, with pointed bodices and fichus of the same, large caps, and yellow shoes and stockings. Each wore a pin brooch, with the initials "D" in pearls and "N" in diamonds, the bridegroom's present, and carried a bunch of yellow chrysanthemums. The pages were in Gainsborough costumes of cream ribbed serge, cloaks lined with yellow silk, and three-cornered white hats. Each wore a pin to match the bridesmaids' brooches. The bride was conducted to the chancel by her father, who gave her away. The service was fully choral.

The marriage of Sir John Sinclair, Bart., of Dunbeath, with Miss Edith Dunbar, only daughter of Colonel Dunbar, of her Majesty's Bodyguard, took place on Wednesday afternoon at St. Peter's Church, Edinburgh. A number of gentlemen, including the bridegroom and best man, the Earl of Caithness, wore Highland costumes. The bride was conducted to the altar by her father. She wore a costume of the richest white satin brocade, trimmed with Mechlin lace and orange-blossoms, with a train of plain white satin. Her ornaments were diamonds and pearls. Her young brother followed as a page in full Highland costume. There were eight bridesmaids. They were tastefully dressed in costumes of cream brocade and satin, decorated with feather trimming; high-crowned hats, with pale salmon-coloured feathers. The service was fully choral; the officiating clergy were the Bishop of Edinburgh and the Rev. Canon Sellar, M.A., Incumbent of St. Peter's.

At St. George's Church, Hanover-square, on Wednesday morning, the marriage was solemnised of Mr. Shakerley (60th Rifles), eldest son of Sir Charles Watkin Shakerley, Bart., with Miss Hilda Hodgson. The bride, who was attired in a costume of ivory duchesse satin, trimmed with old point lace and orange-blossoms, was given away by her father.

The marriage of Mr. S. H. Allenby with Lady Sophia Constance Montgomerie, eldest daughter of the Earl and Countess of Eglinton, will take place in town the third week in the present month.

The marriage of the Hon. John G. P. Vereker and Miss Eleanor Surtees, daughter of the late Mr. Surtees, of Hamsterley Hall, in the county of Durham, will take place at St. George's, Hanover-square, on the 28th inst.

The marriage of Viscount Torrington and Miss Emmeline St. Maur, daughter of the Rev. Henry Seymour, Rector of Holme, Pierrepont, Notts, will take place next month.

It was omitted to be stated in the Obituary notice of Mr. Hartopp, given in this week's Supplement, that he was twice married. His first wife was Honoria, daughter of the late General Gent; his second (who survives him) being Marie, daughter of Mr. Charles Hey, of Hanover.

The "Theatre Annual," an excellent Number, edited by Clement Scott, and published by David Bogue, contains, in addition to much interesting matter, contributed by Messrs. E. L. Blanchard, G. R. Sims, F. C. Burnand, and other authors of repute, eight portraits of favourite actresses.

THE COURT.

The Queen drove out yesterday week with the Duchess of Albany and Princess Beatrice. Prince Henry of Battenberg dined with her Majesty and the Royal family. Lieutenant-Colonel Stockwell, C.B., commanding the Seaforth Highlanders at Parkhurst, had the honour of being invited. Last Saturday morning the Queen went out with Princess Beatrice and Prince Henry. General the Right Hon. Sir Henry Ponsonby, K.C.B., arrived at Osborne. The Queen drove out in the afternoon, accompanied by the Duchess of Albany and Princess Beatrice. The Bishop of Newcastle and Mrs. Wilberforce arrived at Osborne. Prince and Princess Louis and Prince Henry of Battenberg dined with the Queen and the Royal family. The Bishop of Newcastle and Mrs. Wilberforce had the honour of being invited. On Sunday morning her Majesty, the Duchess of Albany, Princess Beatrice, Prince Henry of Battenberg, and the members of the Royal household attended Divine service. The Bishop of Newcastle officiated. The Bishop and Mrs. Wilberforce had the honour of dining with the Queen and the Royal family. On Monday morning her Majesty went out, accompanied by their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Albany and Princess Beatrice and Prince Henry of Battenberg.

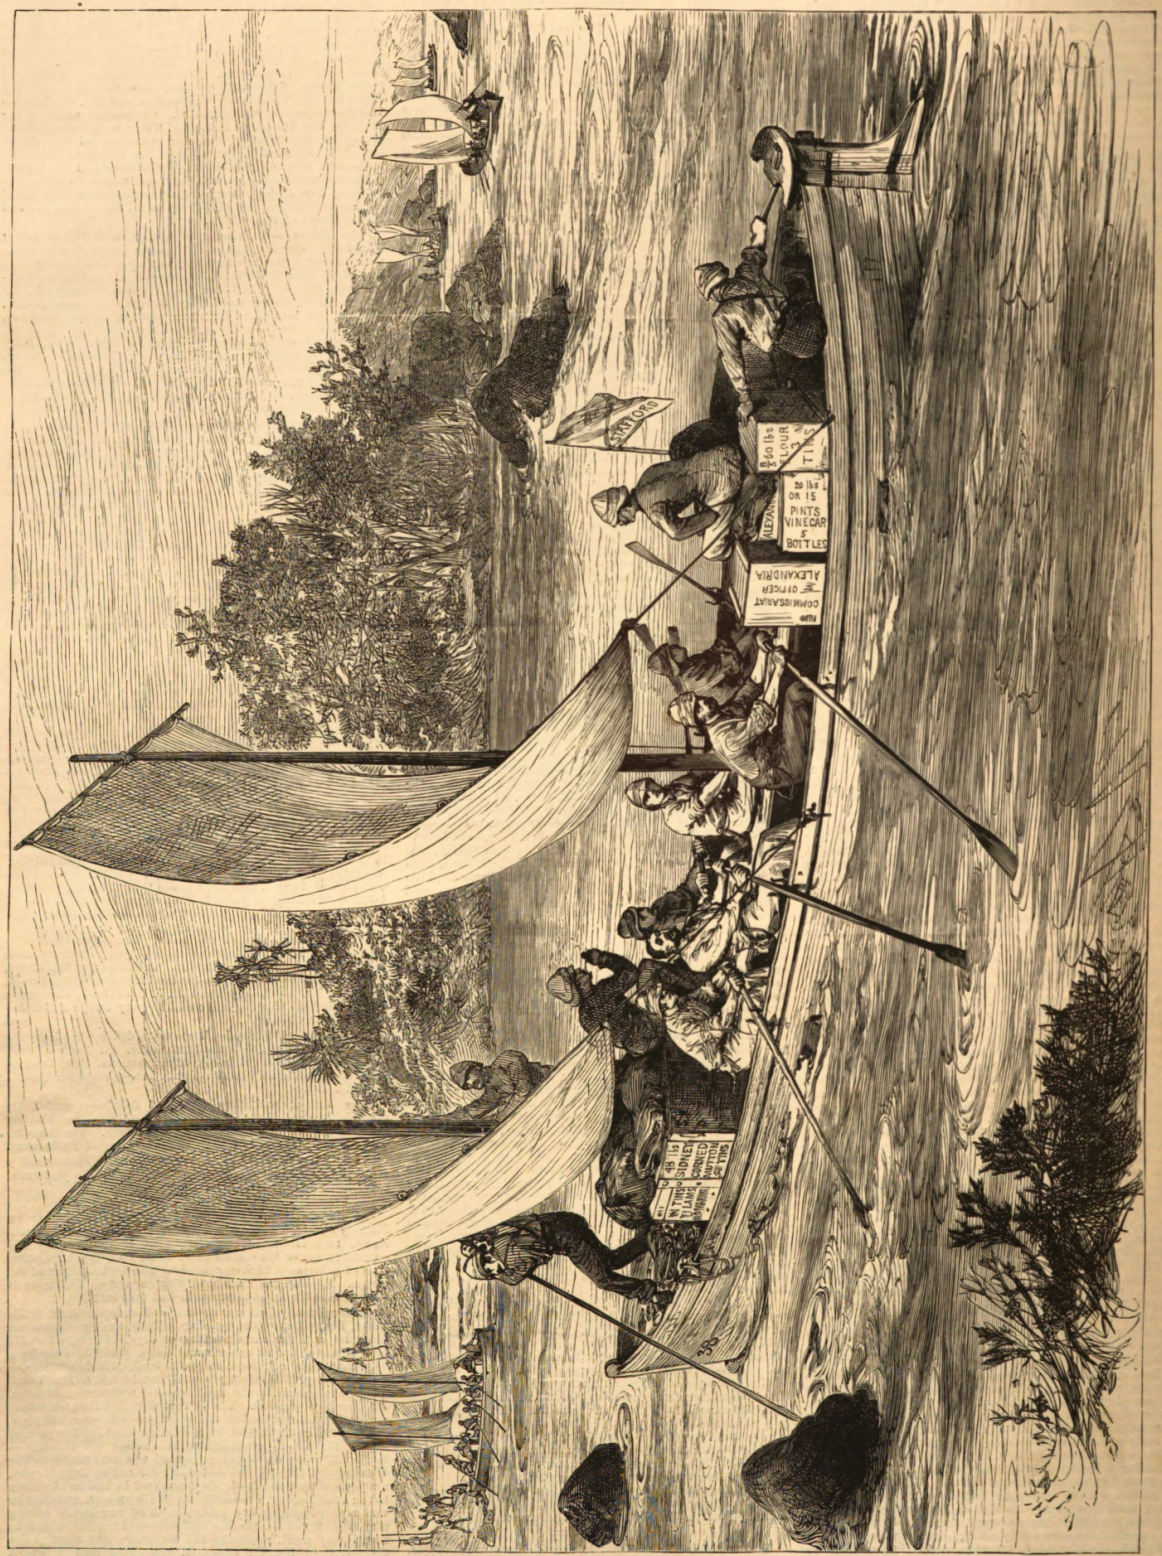
The Prince and Princess of Wales, with Prince Albert Victor and Prince George and Princesses Louise and Victoria, went to Sherburne last Saturday morning, and hunted with the West Norfolk Hounds, afterwards returning to Sandringham House. The Prince and Princess, accompanied by Prince Albert Victor and Prince George, Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud, and the guests staying at Sandringham, and attended by the ladies and gentlemen of the household, were present at Divine service at the Church of St. Mary Magdalene in the Park on Sunday morning. The Rev. F. Henry, M.A., Chaplain to the Queen and Domestic Chaplain to the Prince and Princess of Wales, officiated, assisted by the Rev. J. O. Stephens, M.A., Rector of Blankney, Lincolnshire, who preached the sermon.

Great preparations were made at Sandringham duly to celebrate on Thursday last the coming of age of Prince Albert Victor of Wales. A Portrait of him is given with this Number, and some particulars of the young Prince will be found in another column. The Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh, Prince and Princess Christian, Princess Louise, Marchioness of Lorne, and the Marquis of Lorne, the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, the Prince of Leiningen, Count and Countess Gleichen and Countess Feodore Gleichen, arrived at Sandringham on Monday afternoon on a visit to the Prince and Princess of Wales, to attend the "coming of age" festivities. The distinguished party were met at the Wolferton station of the Lynn and Hunstanton Railway by the Prince of Wales, accompanied by Prince Albert Victor and Prince George, and attended by Colonel Teesdale.

The Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh and suite arrived at Charing-cross from Eastwell Park, Ashford, Kent, last Saturday. In the evening the Duke and Duchess, Princess Louise, and the Marquis of Lorne witnessed the performance of "The Sorcerer," at the Savoy Theatre. His Royal Highness has consented to take the chair at a dinner to be held in the course of the next few months in aid of the funds of the Royal Albert Orphan Asylum.

The arrangements for the return of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught from India are complete. Their Royal Highnesses will embark on the Peninsular and Oriental steam-ship Carthage, at Bombay, on April 3 next, and will arrive at Plymouth on the 29th of the same month.

Her Majesty has conferred the Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath upon the Marquis of Normanby, the Most Illustrious Order of St. Patrick upon Lord Monteagle and Lord Annaly, and the Grand Cross of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath upon Lord Aberdare. Her Majesty has appointed Mr. Augustus Rivers Thompson, C.S.I., C.I.E., Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and Mr. Charles Grant, C.S.I., Secretary to the Government of India in the Foreign Department, to be Knights Commanders of the Star of India. Mr. Henry William Primrose, private secretary to the late Viceroy, is appointed a Companion of the Order. The Gazette also publishes a number of nominations to the dignity of Companion of the Order of the Indian Empire. A Companionship of the Bath has been bestowed upon the head librarian of the British Museum, Mr. Bond, and upon M. J. C. O'Dowd, the senior Army Purchase Commissioner and Deputy Judge Advocate-General of the Forces.



The Duke of Sutherland, accompanied by the Hon. the Master of Blantyre, left Stafford House, St. James's, yesterday week, for a cruise in the Mediterranean. The Duchess and Lady Alexandra Leveson-Gower have gone to her Grace's villa at Torquay.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Salisbury, and Lady Gwendolin Cecil left Hatfield House, Herts, on Monday morning for the South of France and Italy. The Marquis will return home the week prior to the meeting of Parliament.

The Earl and Countess of Carnarvon have entertained a succession of visitors at Highclere Castle during the past week, previous to their departure for Italy.

At the meeting of the Royal Geographical Society on Monday night Mr. John M. Cook, the well-known excursion agent, gave an account of the ascent of the Nile by the expedition under the command of Lord Wolseley, expressing himself in terms of high commendation of the behaviour of the troops. He said the Canadians who are out on that river at present were the finest boatmen he had ever seen.

A new Board school was opened on Monday in Great Wild-street, Drury-lane. The building affords accommodation for 300 girls and the same number of boys, and also for 373 infants, the different departments being presided over by a head master and a staff of certificated teachers and assistants.—The same day, in St. George's-road, Southwark, a large Board school was opened in the presence of a numerous gathering. Mr. Hawkins presided. The chairman stated that the school was built to accommodate 595 children—180 boys, 180 girls, and 235 infants. It had been decided already, however, to extend the school to accommodate another 400 children.—Mr. F. Richards, an insurance agent, was summoned to the Wandsworth Police Court last week for not sending his girl, ten years of age, to school. He urged that he had an objection to the Board school to which she had been sent, and that he was now educating her privately. The magistrate having personally tested the reading and writing of the girl, which he found very good, dismissed the summons, and allowed the defendant £2 10s. for expenses, remarking that it was a vexatious proceeding on the part of the School Board officers.—The new Board schools at Folkestone were opened on Wednesday in the presence of a large number of persons. The doors were opened by Sir Edward Watkin with a silver key, presented to him for that purpose by the architect. The buildings are intended to accommodate 700 pupils. An address was delivered by Mr. Mundella, M.P. 700 scholars were afterwards entertained to tea in the Townhall, and at night a banquet was held.

THE NILE EXPEDITION: THE 1ST BATTALION SOUTH STAFFORDSHIRE REGIMENT PUSHING FORWARD AT THE HANNEK CATARACT
SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, MR. MELTON PRIOR.

THE SONS OF THE PRINCE OF WALES LEARNING HOW TO SPLICE A ROPE.

THE ROYAL MIDDIES, PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR AND PRINCE GEORGE.

NAVAL TRAINING OF PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR OF WALES AND HIS BROTHER.

PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR OF WALES.

The "coming of age," or reaching the twenty-first birthday, of his Royal Highness Prince Albert Victor (sometimes called Prince Edward), the eldest son of their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, was celebrated on Thursday with domestic and local festivities at Sandringham, the seat of the Prince of Wales in Norfolk. Our account of the proceedings upon this very interesting and happy occasion must be reserved for next week's publication; but several of the young Prince's Royal uncles and aunts, and other members of the Royal family, were present among the guests of his illustrious parents; and messages of congratulation have been sent by the municipalities of cities and towns, and by various public bodies in different parts of the country. In some places, banquets and balls have been given in his especial honour, under the direction of the Mayors of corporate towns, supported by leading persons of the community, and the event has been hailed with general satisfaction by all classes of people throughout the kingdom.

Prince Albert Victor Christian Edward was born on Jan. 8, 1864. He was baptised Victor, after the Queen; his other names are those of his paternal and maternal grandfathers (the Prince Consort and the King of Denmark) and of his great-grandfather, Edward, Duke of Kent. Two of his godfathers were the King of Denmark and Leopold, the late King of the Belgians. Up till 1871 he was educated at home; the late Domestic Chaplain to the Prince of Wales, the Rev. William Lake Onslow, R.N. and M.A., instructing both him and his younger brother, Prince George, in the same way as he had previously instructed H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh when a midshipman on board H.M.S. St. George. In 1877 both the brothers entered the Navy as cadets, and passed the usual two years on board H.M.S. Britannia, at Dartmouth, under the care of Captain Henry Fairfax, R.N., C.B. In July, 1879, they went to sea in H.M.S. Bacchante, Captain Lord Charles Douglas Montagu Scott, R.N., C.B., and visited the West Indies. In the following year the flying squadron, under the command of Rear-Admiral the Earl of Clanwilliam, was organised, and consisted of H.M.S. Inconstant, Captain Fitzgerald; H.M.S. Bacchante, Captain Lord C. D. M. Scott; H.M.S. Tourmaline, Captain Robert Peel Dennistoun; Carysfort, Captain H. F. Stephenson, C.B.; and Cleopatra, Captain F. Durrant, C.M.G. The flying squadron proceeded to Vigo, Madeira, St. Vincent, Bahia, Montevideo, and the Falkland Islands. Thence to the Cape of Good Hope and Australia, on which two stations they spent a considerable time. From Australia they proceeded to Fiji, Japan and China, Singapore, Colombo, and Suez. The Bacchante then passed into the Mediterranean, and Prince Albert Victor visited Egypt, the Holy Land, and Athens, and finally returned to England in the summer of 1882. He was confirmed at Whippingham, in the Isle of Wight, by the late Archbishop Tait. This was the last time that His Grace appeared in public. The other two clergy who took part in the same ceremony are also since dead: Dean Wellesley, of Windsor, and the Rev. W. O'Connor, the then Vicar of Newport. In the autumn of the same year, Prince Albert Victor proceeded to Lausanne in order to perfect his French studies, and there he resided with M. Hua till the following May. In October, 1883, he became an undergraduate at Trinity College, Cambridge. He has attended several courses of lectures at that University, and won golden opinions of everyone there who has been brought into personal relations with him. During the Long Vacation he continued his studies at the University of Heidelberg, under the care of Professor Ihne, and returned to Cambridge last October. He will probably complete his two years' residence at Cambridge in June, and thus devote the same period to the University training as the Prince of Wales did. He is an active and zealous member of the Cambridge University Rifle Volunteers, of which corps he became Lieutenant, October, 1884. His career up to the present has been a very bright and happy one; and his amiability, good sense, thoughtfulness for others, and devotion to duty, augur well for his future, when in the course of Providence he may be called to take the Headship of the English race throughout the world as "King of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the Colonies and Dependencies thereof." He has already visited every one of them with the exception of New Zealand and Canada. His diary, together with that of Prince George, during their cruise in H.M.S. Bacchante, and which enters into full details of their experiences in every part of the globe, is now passing through the press, and will be published by Messrs. Macmillan and Co. in the course of the coming spring.

Our Extra Supplement presented with this week's Number of the Illustrated London News is a Coloured Portrait of his Royal Highness (named thereon Prince Edward of Wales), from a photograph by Messrs. Hills and Saunders, of Eton. The other two Engravings that bear reference to this subject are illustrative of the period, from 1877 to 1882, when this young Prince and his brother, Prince George of Wales, were under professional instruction as Naval Cadets (the old designation, "Midshipmen," being retained by familiar usage in popular speech), and when, at their first going on board the training-ship Britannia, they probably had to learn how to splice rope, with other needful arts of practical seamanship.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

Mrs. Gladstone, who is at Hawarden, yesterday week distributed the prizes gained at the annual shooting competition of the local Volunteer corps. The Premier, who was unable to attend, was represented by Mr. W. H. Gladstone.

Orders have been issued from the Horse Guards calling a meeting of commanding officers to consider the proposals for Volunteer manœuvres at Easter next.

A movement is in progress in the 20th Middlesex (Artists) Rifles for the formation of a company of mounted infantry from among the members of that battalion. On receiving the names of a sufficient number of men for the purpose, Lieutenant-Colonel Edis will apply to the War Office for permission to form the company. The Victoria Rifles are at present the only corps in London which has mounted infantry; but there are indications, notwithstanding the somewhat heavy expense, that the movement will spread.

The annual report of the National Rifle Association will soon be issued. It is stated that, notwithstanding the unfavourable weather during the first week of the meeting, the finances have not suffered; for although the association gave £1200 more in prizes, this has been fully recouped, and £900 placed to credit, after paying all expenses in connection with the meeting. This year £1500 has been placed to the account of the association.

A permanent and free Art Gallery was opened at Leicester, on Tuesday night, by a conversazione, given by Alderman George Stevenson, Chairman of the Art Gallery Committee. A considerable number of pictures by eminent artists have been presented to the town, and the Trustees of the National Gallery have rendered valuable aid by granting the loan of a selection of celebrated pictures, the property of the nation. The opening ceremony was performed by the Mayor, Mr. Israel Hart, in the presence of a large company.

KING JOHN'S CUP, LYNN REGIS.

On Thursday last, the day on which Prince Albert Victor of Wales attained his majority, the Corporation and Burgesses of King's Lynn, Norfolk, presented him with a replica of the beautiful wassail cup which is the principal feature in the interesting regalia of the borough. It is known as "King John's Cup," the tradition being that the cup was given to the Corporation of Lynn by King John of England, who is said also to have at the same time taken his sword from his side, and presented it to be for ever thereafter carried before the Mayor. This is recorded in the inscription some time afterwards engraven on the bars of the sword:—"Ensis hic donum fuit Regis Johannis, a suo ipsius latere datum." But, some years ago, reasonable doubts were expressed as to the popular belief, the design and workmanship of the cup all proclaiming it to be the production of a later period. The art of enamelling was unknown in that reign, and the cup owes much of its beauty to enamel. It will be fitting here to describe it. It is a "full pint" measure, and weighs 73 oz. It is silver-gilt and is richly embossed and enamelled. The ornamentation is after the Decorated style, and the panels are filled by figures gracefully clothed. The decoration of the cover is evidently of later date than the cup itself. The workmanship is exquisite. The style of ornamentation, as already observed, is that of the fourteenth century; and the drapery of the figures, more especially of the ladies, is that of the time of Edward III. This seems conclusively to fix the date; but the cup may have been the gift of another King John. It is on record that in 1349, during the mayoralty of Robert Braunche, Edward III. and Queen Philippa, with King John of France, visited Lynn, and were there entertained at a sumptuous banquet. There is in St. Margaret's Church, Lynn, under the south-west tower, a magnificent monumental brass to the memory of Robert Braunche and his wives, Letitia and Margaret; and on the "frieze" is engraved a representation of a peacock feast. The King is represented sitting at the head of the table, and next him in the place of honour is the noble figure of a man, supposed to be the French King, before whom, on bended knee, an attendant, whom, from his rich attire, a local historian assumes to be Braunche himself, presents the first dish—a peacock dressed in his plumes. A goodly company of ladies and gentlemen occupy other seats at the table, and at each end are waitresses and musicians. It is supposed that King John of France presented the cup after or during the visit to Lynn. This is probably the history of "King John's Cup."

"KING JOHN'S CUP," PRESENTED TO PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR BY THE MAYOR AND CORPORATION OF KING'S LYNN.

The cup made for presentation to Prince Albert Victor is in every respect an admirable reproduction. It was a fortunate idea. The presentation was made at Sandringham, on Thursday, by a deputation consisting of the Recorder (D. Brown), the Mayor (Mr. J. Bowker), three senior Aldermen, three Councillors, and two representatives of the town.

The Prince of Wales has sent thirty pheasants for the patients in the Consumption Hospital at Brompton, and presents of game for the patients of other hospitals.

The Manchester City Council on Wednesday afternoon unanimously resolved to commence the works in connection with the Thirlmere water scheme at once, and to confirm the appointment of Mr. Hill as engineer.

The Tallowchandlers' Company have made a distribution of £136 10s. as Christmas gifts among seventeen charities, including 25 guineas to their own Benevolent Association, and donations to the poor-boxes at the two City police courts.

On behalf of the Belgian Government, Major-General Wray, the Lieutenant-Governor of Jersey, on Tuesday afternoon presented silver crosses of the first class and diplomas to Captain Carcaud and his chief officer, and medals to three of the crew of the brigantine G.D.T., for their gallant and humane services in rescuing the crew and passengers of the Belgian steamer Plantyn, fifty-six in number, and conveying them safely a distance of 2000 miles. The Chamber of Commerce also presented Captain Carcaud, through his Excellency, with a vote of thanks inscribed on vellum for his gallant conduct.

A fancy-dress ball for children was given by the Lady Mayoress on Tuesday evening, at the Mansion House. More than 800 persons were present, of whom about half were juveniles. The scene presented by the gathering was most brilliant, the fancy dresses which were worn by all the children, and many of the adults, being very varied. Besides dancing, there were dissolving views, Punch and Judy, and a couple of fortune-telling gipsies.

THE POLITICAL SITUATION.

The New Year was but a few days old when we received yet another grave warning that the time cannot be far distant for the retirement of Mr. Gladstone from office. The Prime Minister has himself, over and over again, foreshadowed this event; which, however deeply it may be regretted by the Liberal Party, is a contingency that should be prepared for. Naturally, the troublous condition of Foreign affairs, the difficulties of the Egyptian question, and the attitude of France and Germany (or of M. Jules Ferry and Prince Bismarck), have tended to greatly increase the anxieties of the Premier. Insomnia has been the result. It is true, Mr. Gladstone came to town at the close of the past week to attend the first two Cabinet Councils of the New Year. But the urgent need of rest and repose was pointed out by Sir Andrew Clark. Hence Mr. Gladstone returned on Saturday afternoon last to Hawarden Castle. We are glad to hear he has since then suffered less from the sleeplessness occasioned by the wellnigh overwhelming burdens of State.

There is reason to believe that one result of the first Ministerial consultations of the year will be to stimulate the action of the somewhat lethargic Foreign and Colonial Offices. Rather amusing was the alarmist report spread on Monday by the simple orders for the officers and men of the Channel Fleet to join their ships at Portsmouth and Plymouth, on the termination of the usual period of leave at Christmas time. Still, it cannot be doubted that the bold policy of colonisation adopted by Prince Bismarck has roused our Government to reassure Australia on the one hand, and on the other to encourage British Colonists in South Africa to rely for support on England, by formally proclaiming our Protectorate over Pondoland—a step in the direction recommended by Mr. Forster in his recent letter to the Times.

Nilewards, the prospect is still very gloomy from the financial point of view. But hopeful is the report from Lord Wolseley of the steady progress of the Expedition for the relief of General Gordon, who had by a messenger communicated the following good news to his Lordship at Korti:—"Khartoum all right. Dec. 14.—C. G. Gordon." It was heart-stirring to read of the cheery way in which General Stewart's smart corps welcomed the New Year on their expeditious desert march to Gakdul wells, which the Camel Corps and Mounted Infantry reached on the 2nd inst. If Lord Wolseley should succeed in succouring General Gordon by the beginning of February, as it is hoped he may, the Government would in all likelihood find the Egyptian horizon considerably cleared—politically speaking.

Mr. Chamberlain may claim the credit, if there be any credit in it, of having broken the political truce which appeared to have been sealed by the chiefs of the two great parties in the State when they met at the little house in Downing-street to amicably agree upon the lines of the Redistribution Bill. Entertained at dinner on Tuesday by the Birmingham Artisans' Association, the President of the Board of Trade raked up the Aston riots dispute, which might very well be dropped now. In his references to the looming land legislation, Mr. Chamberlain would have done well to have remembered the praiseworthy efforts of Earl Cairns and other Conservative leaders to reform the land laws, and should in fairness have mentioned the generous concessions English landlords are continually making to their tenants. The Marquis of Salisbury, for instance, before leaving Hatfield for Dieppe, granted an abatement of 15 per cent to his tenants.

Sir Charles Dilke, who returned to town from his remote seat in France too late for last Saturday's Cabinet Council, has elected to stand for the newly constituted borough of Chelsea at the General Election.

One of the most highly respected members of the Conservative Party has notably distinguished himself by speaking out boldly against the "Fair Trade" delusion. We refer to Sir Matthew White Ridley. Addressing a meeting at Newcastle on Saturday, Sir Matthew seasonably condemned the mischievous agitation in favour of a return to Protection under another name.

The pet idea of Sir John Lubbock and of Mr. Leonard Courtney, "Proportional Representation," is to be advocated with more or less eloquence throughout the kingdom, the campaign beginning on the 13th inst. at Leicester. In the meantime, the Cobden Club is doing good service by circulating Mr. Cobden's common-sense condemnation of this crotchet.

In Ireland, Mr. Parnell's protégé, Mr. John O'Connor, has, through the intervention of the Home Rule leader, been chosen after all as the favoured candidate for Tipperary, instead of Mr. O'Ryan, of Cashel. We also learn that one of the ablest of Mr. Parnell's young followers, Mr. Healy, was on Tuesday rewarded for his services by the electors of Monaghan, who presented the hon. member with a cheque for £1000.

Enormous catches of sprats have been recently made off Herne Bay and other parts of the Kentish coast.

Mr. Newton, of the British Museum, recommenced his lectures on archæology at University College on Friday. The course this term will consist of six lectures on Greek inscriptions, to be delivered on alternate Fridays at four p.m.

Reports obtained by the Foreign Office from our diplomatic agents abroad, in reference to the tenure of dwelling-houses, show that the English leasehold system is almost unknown in Continental countries—house property, as a general rule, being freehold.

The Marquis of Salisbury has returned his tenants 15 per cent of their rents; and Lord Donington's annual distribution of coals to the poor and aged on his estates took place last week. Between ninety and one hundred tons of coals were given away in the various parishes in Leicestershire and Derbyshire, where his Lordship's estates are situate.

The Queen has approved of the 10th (Prince of Wales' Own Royal) Hussars being permitted to bear the words, "Egypt, 1884," on its appointments; and of the undermentioned regiments, which already bear on their appointments or colours the words, "Egypt, 1882," being permitted to add thereto the date "1884," in commemoration of their distinguished and gallant behaviour during the campaign in the Eastern Soudan:—19th Hussars, the Black Watch (Royal Highlanders), the King's Royal Rifle Corps, the York and Lancaster Regiment, the Gordon Highlanders, and the Princess Victoria's (Royal Irish Fusiliers).

While two passenger-trains were passing each other on the evening of the 2nd inst., midway between King's-cross and Gower-street Stations, on the Metropolitan Railway, an explosion occurred, breaking the glass in the carriages, extinguishing the lights, and damaging the brickwork of the tunnel and the telegraph wires. Several passengers sustained slight injuries, but, the permanent way being unaffected, traffic was not interrupted. The explosion is involved in mystery, but there appears to be no doubt that dynamite of some kind was used. In the opinion of the authorities the explosion was caused by the throwing a small bomb from one of the carriages.

PARISIAN SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Tuesday, Jan. 6.

The New Year commences much as the old year ended, with more grief than joy, and more misery than prosperity. Everybody is complaining. The humble dealers who count upon the receipts of the annual New-Year's fair on the boulevards have been disappointed. Money is scarce, and the Parisians are restricting their expenditure.

There has been much talk of late about Louise Michel, the Scarlet Virgin, who, in 1871, proposed to burn Paris in order to oppose a barricade of fire to the advancing Versailles troops; who preached Revolution from the pulpit of the Church of St. Bernard, and who, while taking her turn at firing from the barricades, displayed a courage and self-sacrifice in caring for the sick and wounded which won the admiration of all. Since the manifestation of the Esplanade des Invalides in March, 1883, when Louise Michel led the mob to the pillage of the bakers' shops, she has been imprisoned in the Penitentiary of Clermont. Recently, she was transferred to St. Lazare, at Paris, and allowed to spend the day at the bedside of her sick mother. On Saturday the old mother died, and yesterday her funeral was made the occasion of a great revolutionary manifestation. Between ten and twelve thousand persons followed the hearse, and the various Anarchist societies were represented with their red banners surmounted by the Phrygian liberty cap. All along the route, from the Boulevard Ornano to the cemetery of Levallois-Perret, the cortége marched calm and orderly, and from time to time uttered a dull roar, which resolved itself into cries of "Vive la Commune!" "Vive l'Anarchie!" "Vive la Révolution Sociale!" On passing in front of a barracks the crowd cried "Down with the army!" At the Boulevard Berthier the police interfered, and insisted upon the red flags being rolled up. M. Henri Rochefort maintained that they were not flags, but banners; that they had figured at the funeral of Gambetta; and that he answered for the order of the crowd, if the police would allow the banners to remain. M. Rochefort's argument prevailed, and the cortége continued, preceded now by the police. The coffin was placed in the grave where Ferré, the Communist leader, shot at Satory in 1871, is buried. Various Anarchist and incendiary speeches were delivered, and the crowd separated with renewed cries of "Vive l'Anarchie!"

Louise Michel was not allowed to follow her mother to the grave. She was taken back to prison in the morning; and reports are current that the "grande martyre," as she is called, has lost her reason. One may perhaps be excused for doubting whether she ever fully possessed her reason. At any rate, she is now a most embarrassing prisoner for the Government. Having certain qualities in common with Jeanne d'Arc, and certain others in common with Charlotte Corday, and being inspired as she is with a mania of self-sacrifice, Louise Michel has alone sufficient influence to instigate the populace of Paris to revolution. On the other hand, while dangerous when at liberty, she is dangerous when imprisoned, because the populace regard her as a martyr of liberty and the Government as the representative of tyranny and oppression. Furthermore, if she be no longer in her right mind, even the reactionary press makes common cause with the Anarchists, and demands her pardon in the name of humanity. M. Grévy is reported to have said that Louise Michel would greatly oblige the Government if she would make her escape; and during the past week every facility has been given her for escaping, but the great martyr of anarchy has refused to take advantage of her opportunities.

The preparations for the forthcoming Senatorial elections absorb the attention of politicians. The only event of the political week is the resignation of the Minister of War, General Campenon, who has been replaced by General Lewal. General Campenon has resigned because he considers pernicious the programme of foreign policy advocated by M. Ferry and approved by the Chamber of Deputies in the vote of Nov. 28—namely, the entire occupation of Tonquin, and vigorous offensive measures against the Chinese. General Campenon is of opinion that the sending of more troops to China, and the exhaustion of the munitions of war in the arsenals, will endanger the safety of the home country. General Lewal believes that the French army can accomplish in the East the effort demanded by Parliament without compromising the national defence. It is reported that the French have gained a great victory in Tonquin, completely routing the Chinese, six hundred of whom were killed, besides a considerable number being wounded.

Some emissaries from Timbuctoo have arrived in Paris for the purpose of concluding a commercial treaty with France.—The Théâtre Italien, started, two years ago, by the singer Maurel, is closed. The experiment has failed utterly, and definitively proved that the Parisians will no longer support a style of opera which has no longer a raison d'être.—M. Arnold Mortier, the "Monsieur de l'Orchestre" of the Figaro, died last week, at the age of forty-one. M. Mortier created a kind of light descriptive theatrical criticism, devoted to the minor and anecdotic sides of the stage, which has won great favour with the public, and been introduced into all the Parisian newspapers. The inventor of this "essentially Parisian" daily article of theatrical gossip was a Dutchman. By force of work and habit he became one of the wittiest of Parisians. The sum of £20,000 sterling, offered as the chief prize by the Decorative Arts Lottery, has been paid to a M. Breton, who is a gardener at Grand Montrouge, near Paris.—A proclamation has been issued by the grandson of Naundorff, who claimed to be the Dauphin, imprisoned with Louis XVI. in the Temple.

T. C.

Fresh earthquake shocks have been felt at Nerja, Algarrobo, Granada, Malaga, Loja, and Motril. Many towns and villages are destroyed and deserted, their inhabitants being encamped in the fields. King Alfonso is about to visit the provinces of Malaga and Granada, and a national subscription will be raised in aid of the sufferers.—There have been earthquake shocks also in Austria, Italy, and America.

The Emperor William held the usual New-Year reception, which was attended by the Ambassadors of Italy, Austria, France, England, and Turkey. Their Excellencies, who were in full Court dress, drove to the Palace in State carriages. His Majesty, in receiving their congratulations, conversed cordially with each in turn.

The Emperor of Austria, the Crown Prince, Archduke Ferdinand of Tuscany, Prince Leopold of Bavaria, and the other members of his Majesty's hunting party, returned to Vienna on Wednesday week from Styria. The Emperor left again in the evening for Pesth, which he reached next morning, being followed by the Crown Prince and Princess. The Emperor and the Crown Prince left Buda on Monday morning by special train to shoot in the vicinity of Gödöllö.—Prince Adolf Auersperg, President of the Supreme Court of Accounts, died suddenly on Monday from heart disease.

President Arthur gave the usual New-Year reception at the White House to the Diplomatic Corps, the Cabinet Ministers, the members of Congress, and the public officials. The reception was largely attended.—Mr. Cleveland gives a contradiction to the statement that he was president of a free-trade club, and declares that he has never been connected with any such organisation. He has resigned the Governorship of New York.—Mr. William R. Grace became Mayor of New York on the 1st inst., thus entering upon the reformed system of city government.—General Grant's affairs have been arranged satisfactorily to himself and to his friends. His personal effects, gifts, trophies, relics, &c., will be given up by Mr. Vanderbilt.—An earthquake shock was felt in the southern section of Frederick County, Maryland, on the 2nd inst.

A telegram from Calcutta states that the Tarakeswar Railway was formally opened on Monday by the Viceroy and the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. This is the first broad-gauge railway constructed by private enterprise in India.

A Reuter's telegram from Durban on Tuesday states that a British protectorate has been proclaimed over the whole coast of Pondoland. Pondoland is a strip of country on the South-East Coast of Africa, lying between Cape Colony and Natal. Its acquisition will join the coast-line of the two colonies, which lie unbroken as far north as the Tugela River. Between this point and St. Lucia Bay there is a break formed by a portion of Zululand.

A Melbourne telegram says that the Agent-General in London for Victoria has been instructed to vigorously protest against the recognition of German claims to New Guinea. New South Wales has declined to join in the protest made by Victoria against the German annexations in New Guinea. The reasons given, however, signify anything but indifference to the event. The provisional refusal is "based on the absence of definite information—first, as to whether the recent action of Germany is the result of an arrangement with the Imperial Government; secondly, as to the terms of such agreement, if it exists; thirdly, as to the possibility of extending the British protectorate over New Guinea so as to include the shores of the island from East Cape to the German line of occupation; and, fourthly, as to whether, as a counterpoise to the German occupation, England may not have determined to occupy all the islands which command, from a strategical point of view, the whole of that portion of the Pacific. For these reasons, the Government of New South Wales declines to take any steps in questions of such gravity and complexity, seriously involving as they do the relations of the Colonies with England and her relations with the European nations, without the fullest information."—The New South Wales revenue returns show an increase of £346,000 for the quarter ending December, 1884, upon the returns for the corresponding period of 1883, and an increase of £641,000 upon the whole year. The outcome for the year exceeds the Treasurer's estimate of February last by £300,000. Mr. Farnell, the Minister for Lands of New South Wales, in moving the second reading of the Crown Lands Bill in the Legislative Assembly in November, stated that the area of the whole colony was estimated to be 323,438 square miles, equal to about 207,000,000 acres. Up to Sept. 30, 1883, 36,553,416 acres had been alienated, leaving up to that date 170,446,484 acres unalienated.—Herr Frederick Buck has been instructed by the Government of Tasmania to dispatch from Germany a number of emigrants of that nationality, and has accordingly proceeded thither with that object.

A Reuter's telegram from Melbourne, dated Monday evening, says:—A match has been played between Shaw's team of English cricketers and a representative Australian eleven composed of picked men from the different colonies, exclusive of the members of Murdoch's team who visited England last year. The match resulted in a victory for the English Eleven.

MUSIC.

The earliest performance of the year just opened was that of "The Messiah" by the Royal Albert Hall Choral Society on Jan. 1. The chorus singing was, as usual, excellent, and produced a profound impression, especially in those sublime movements "For unto us" and "Hallelujah." Three of the solo vocalists were, as on previous occasions, Madame Valleria (soprano), Madame Patey (contralto), and Mr. E. Lloyd (tenor)—each of whom sang with special effect. A comparative novelty was the assignment of the bass solo to Mr. Watkin Mills, a rising young singer, who made a very favourable impression, particularly in the airs "Why do the Nations" and "The Trumpets shall Sound." Mr. Barnby, as conductor, and Dr. Stainer, as organist, manifested their well-known practised skill. The sixth concert of the society will take place next Wednesday evening, when Haydn's "Creation" will be given.

The Monday Popular Concerts recommenced this week, with the same string quartet party as before—Madame Norman-Néruda, Mr. L. Ries, Mr. Holländer, and Signor Piatti. A new sonata composed by the last-named gentleman—for violoncello obbligato with pianoforte—was played by him in association with Madame Haas. The work is of full dimensions, consisting of four divisions, each of which is amply developed. Although the violoncello part is chiefly prominent, the pianoforte has occasionally more than the importance of a mere accompaniment. The former was played to perfection by the composer of the work, who was well supported by his coadjutor. The lady was also heard in Bach's organ prelude and fugue in A minor, as transcribed for the pianoforte by Liszt; and in another solo in answer to the encore. Mr. E. Lloyd, being indisposed, was replaced by Miss C. Elliot, who rendered some vocal pieces with much expression; Signor Romili having been the accompanist. Beethoven's string quartet in C minor (from Op. 18) and Haydn's in D minor (Op. 42) completed an interesting programme. The first of the Saturday afternoon performances takes place this week.

The first Ballad concert of the year was given at St. James's Hall last Saturday afternoon, the first of a new series of evening concerts taking place next Wednesday evening.

Miss Esther Barnett gave an evening concert at Steinway Hall last Wednesday, when a varied programme of vocal and instrumental music included her own pianoforte performances. The young lady's merits have gained her distinction as an exhibitioner of the Guildhall School of Music.

London music will soon begin to resume its wonted activity. The principal events during the remaining portion of this month will be—besides those mentioned above—the Sacred Harmonic Society's performance of Berlioz's oratorio, "The Childhood of Christ," and other works, on Jan. 23; and Scotch concerts, at St. James's Hall on the following evening, and on the succeeding Monday at the Royal Albert Hall.

The Handel Society has organised a public performance of Handel's "Saul," to be given at St. James's Hall on Saturday evening, Feb. 21, with full orchestra and chorus.

The Oswestry Musical Festival, which resembles the Welsh Eisteddfod in everything but name, was held on Monday in the Powis Hall, Oswestry. The shops were closed, and the day was observed as a general holiday. Dr. Rogers, the organist of Bangor Cathedral, was the musical adjudicator.

HOME NEWS.

The Law Courts reopen for the Hilary Sittings next Monday.

Lord Rosebery has sent £25 to the Mayor of Hull for the distress fund in that town.

Captain Fellowes, M.P. for Huntingdonshire, has been elected a director of the Great Northern Railway, in room of the late Mr. Denison.

The sentence of death passed upon Elizabeth Gibbons for the murder of her husband at Hayes has been commuted to one of penal servitude for life.

An aeronautical exhibition will be opened in June at the Alexandra Palace, under the patronage of the Aeronautical Society of Great Britain.

A concert, arranged by Miss Staveley, was given by the Kyrle Society on Monday evening, at the Hospital for Sick Children, Great Ormond-street, to the nurses and staff.

A general order issued from the War Office notifies the award of 226 silver medals to as many non-commissioned officers and men of the Army for long service and good conduct.

An Indian good-service pension has been conferred upon Colonel Alexander Brownlow, of the Royal Engineers, who was mentioned in despatches, and promoted for his services in the memorable Indian Mutiny Campaign.

A Civil List pension of £80 per annum, with the benefit of survivorship, has been granted to Miss Charlotte and Miss Caroline Raeburn, the grand-daughters of Sir Henry Raeburn, R.A., Portrait Painter to the King in Scotland, who died in 1823.

A collision occurred in the Channel on Thursday night, last week, between a Norwegian and a German vessel, by which both ships were cut down to the water's edge. They were kept afloat with difficulty until they reached Torbay and Brixham.

A Civil List pension has been granted to Miss Emma Lubbock Brown, in recognition of the services rendered to history by her brother, Mr. Rawdon Brown, the editor of the Venetian series of State papers, and other important documents.

Dr. Storrar, chairman, presided on Tuesday evening at the meeting of Convocation of the University of London, at which a committee of forty-three was appointed to consider the proposed establishment of a teaching University for London, and to report thereon.

The annual distribution of prizes in connection with Onslow College, Chelsea, was held on Tuesday evening, in the presence of a considerable gathering of ladies and gentlemen. Sir Charles Dilke, M.P., presided, and Sir Algernon Borthwick distributed the prizes.

The Victoria (Philosophical) Institute held a meeting on Monday evening, at which twenty-nine new members were elected, raising the institute's strength to 1100. A paper on the "Religions of the Aboriginal Tribes of India," by Professor Avery, was read.

Mr. A. C. Benson, son of the Archbishop of Canterbury, who was educated at Eton College, on the foundation, has been appointed a junior assistant master of Eton College, in the place of Mr. Inge, resigned. The students return from the Christmas holidays on the 21st inst.

Her Majesty's New-Year's gifts were distributed on the 1st inst., in the riding-school, Windsor Castle, to the poor of Windsor, Holy Trinity, and Clewer, in the presence of the clergy and a party from Windsor. The gifts consisted of beef, coals, and blankets, amounting to the value of £300.

A handsome memorial to the late Mr. Street, R.A., the architect of the Royal Courts of Justice, is in course of erection in the central hall of that building. The memorial has been designed by Mr. A. W. Blomfield, and will consist of a statue, by Mr. Armstead, R.A., upon a stand, the whole being surmounted by an ornamental canopy.

After careful inquiry into the question of the adequacy of the Central Post and Telegraph Office in London, a departmental committee have recommended the extension of the existing buildings rather than the construction of a new central office elsewhere, and they suggest the purchase of adjoining property, at a total cost of £375,000.

The late Miss Baxter, the foundress of Dundee University College, has left £71,000 in legacies; and the residue, between £300,000 and £400,000, will be divided between ten nephews and nieces, among whom are the Right Hon. W. E. Baxter, Mrs. Armitteed, Mrs. W. O. Dalglish, Mrs. James Ramsay, Mrs. Betts, and Mrs. Sheriff Robertson, of Forfar.

An extraordinary affair has occurred at Chiswick. A young servant-girl, after having received from her mistress some instructions which appeared to annoy her, destroyed various household articles, and then taking two of the children out for a walk, threw them into the Thames, afterwards jumping in herself. Fortunately, they were observed by some boatmen, although when brought ashore they were all nearly lifeless.

Miss Marsh's Convalescent Hospital, Blackrock, has received above 9000 patients, the majority from amongst the East of London sick poor. The hospital is greatly valued, both by the patients and those who send them, as, from the bracing air and excellent diet, the recoveries in it are remarkably rapid and complete. Funds are urgently needed; and contributions will be gratefully received by the secretary of the institution, Mr. F. Dowuham, 1, Gloucester-terrace, Beckenham, Kent; or they may be sent to Messrs. Drummond's Bank, Charing-cross, London.

The Registrar-General's returns for the past week show that in London 3283 births and 1918 deaths were registered. Allowing for increase of population, the births exceeded by 951, while the deaths were 69 below, the average numbers in the corresponding weeks of the last ten years. The excess of births was in a great measure due to arrears of registration from the previous week. The deaths included 33 from smallpox, 22 from measles, 28 from scarlet fever, 28 from diphtheria, 34 from whooping-cough, 11 from enteric fever, 15 from diarrhœa and dysentery, and 1 from cholera. The deaths referred to diseases of the respiratory organs, which had steadily declined in the five preceding weeks from 511 to 370, rose again last week to 537, but were 39 below the corrected average.

The annual meeting of the committee of the Civil Service Life-Boat Fund, was held on the 7th inst., and was presided over by Mr. W. H. Haines, of the House of Lords. The report, which was read by Mr. Charles Dibdin, the honorary secretary, stated that during the past year there had been a satisfactory increase in the number of subscribers, of whom there are now 7416, and that the fund had, during 1884, endowed the life-boat "Civil Service No. 4," which is placed at Walmer. The three other life-boats which have been presented by the Civil Service to the National Institution, and endowed, are stationed respectively at Tynemouth, Port Patrick, and Wexford, and have been the means of saving 156 lives and three vessels. The report closes with a strong appeal for £1200, to enable the committee to defray the expense of the boat-houses and shipways which the Fund's boats have entailed on the parent society.

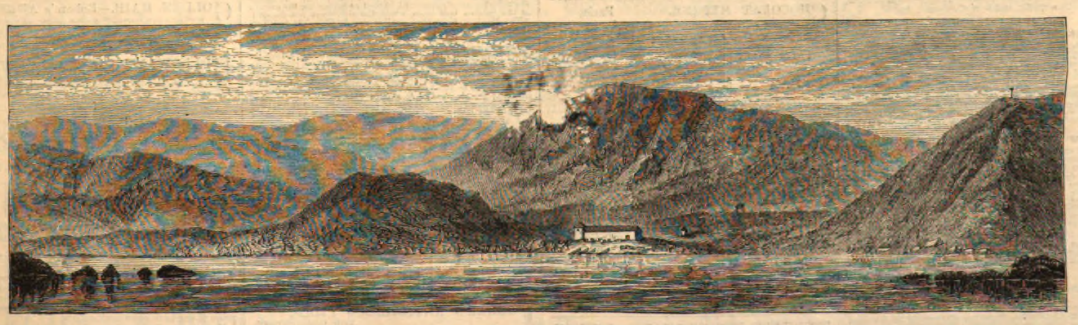
1. Arrival of Major Doward's Engineer-Boats at Dongola.
2. Trying Camel Saddles at Wady Halfa.
3. Lord Wolseley inspecting the Guards' Camel Corps at Dongola.
4. Mimic Charge of Arabs before Lord Wolseley at Dongola.

THE NILE EXPEDITION: SKETCHES BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, MR. MELTON PRIOR.

DEATH OF THE BISHOP OF LONDON.

We regret to announce the rather sudden death of the Right Rev. John Jackson, D.D., who has been the Bishop of London sixteen years past. His Lordship, who was in the seventy-fourth year of his age, had of late been in weak health, but preached in St. Paul's Cathedral last Sunday afternoon. He was taken ill at five o'clock on Monday morning, and his medical attendant was summoned, but no dangerous results were then apprehended. On Monday afternoon and in the evening his Lordship was able to attend to some correspondence and other urgent business. He retired to rest early, and slept soundly for a short time; but as the night wore on he was taken worse, and the physician was again hastily summoned. The Bishop, however, was beyond such aid; he expired at half-past three on Tuesday morning. The sad news was conveyed, at an early hour in the morning, to the Dean of St. Paul's, when the great bell of the Cathedral was tolled. As the tolling of this bell is only heard on the occasion of the death of a member of the Royal family, of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Bishop of London, the attention of the citizens of London was immediately attracted to the circumstance, and great regret was expressed at the sudden decease of one who was so well known, and who for so many years had been connected with the Metropolis. The minute bell of the church in Bishopsgate, in which parish the deceased ministered in the early part of his career, was also tolled, also those of several other of the City churches.

THE LATE RIGHT REV. DR. JACKSON, LORD BISHOP OF LONDON.



The late Bishop, a son of Mr. Henry Jackson, London merchant, was born on Feb. 22, 1811, and was educated at Reading School under Dr. Valpy, whence he proceeded to Pembroke College, Oxford. He there graduated in 1833, with first-class honours, and gained the Denver Theological Prize. From 1836 to 1846 he was Head Master of the Islington Proprietary School, and was during part of the time Incumbent of St. James's, Muswell-hill. He was appointed Rector of St. James's, Piccadilly, in 1846; Chaplain to the Queen, 1847; and Canon of Bristol, 1852; and, on the death of Dr. Kaye, next year, was made Bishop of Lincoln. He was translated to the See of London on Jan. 4, 1869, in succession to Dr. Tait, the late Archbishop of Canterbury. Bishop Jackson was a diligent administrator and frequent preacher; he was the author of a religious treatise entitled "The Sinfulness of Little Sins," and of many published Episcopal charges and sermons. He was a widower, Mrs. Jackson having died eleven years ago.

GERMAN ANNEXATION IN SOUTH AFRICA.

The western coast of South Africa, on the Atlantic Ocean shore, north of the Gariep or Orange River, which is the boundary of the Cape Colony, has recently been annexed to the dominions of the German Empire, with the exception of Walvisch Bay, an outlying dependency of the British Colony four or five hundred miles beyond its frontier. Angra Pequeña, which is situated halfway between the mouth of the Orange River and Walvisch Bay, had been purchased from the native chiefs by Mr. Lüderitz, a merchant of Bremen, who wished to put his settlement under the protection of some European Government. Prince Bismarck, willing to consider the interests of German settlers on the coast of Africa, made inquiry of our own Government, and was informed, after some delay, that Angra Pequena did not belong to the Cape Colony, and that the region north of the Orange River was no part of the British dominions. The German Empire has now, therefore, formally taken possession, of the whole extent, seven hundred miles, of the African coast from the mouth of the Cunene River, which is generally taken to be the southern limit of the Portuguese possessions, to the boundary of the Cape Colony. It consists of a belt of shifting sandhills, which extend from ten to forty miles inland. From the Cunene for three hundred miles south there is no harbour known; and the whole coast is beaten by a surf which prevents landing. The only object of interest is a stone cross erected by Diaz on a prominent cape; this has looked out for 400 years on a scene as desert as it was when the brave Portuguese won his way down the coast to his great discovery. Walvisch Bay is the best port on the coast. It was annexed by the Imperial Government, at the instance of the Cape Government, in 1878, with a small surrounding territory of about ten miles radius; but even here the supply of water is scanty and bad, and the sand belt is a great bar to waggon transport. Further south, about twenty miles, is Sandwich Harbour, where there is a good spring of water, but the communication with the interior is even worse than at Walvisch Bay. There is, however, a trading and fishing establishment belonging to Cape merchants. There are several roadsteads where landing can be effected between Sandwich Harbour and the Orange River, but none of any importance except Angra Pequeña, which is a lagoon protected by an island. The mainland is barren beyond description, and destitute, or nearly so, of water. The interior of this forbidding coast line may be roughly divided into three parts; the Kalahari desert, stretching from the British territory in Griqualand west; the part of the country inhabited by the Namaqua Hottentots, and that part occupied by the Damaras. It is, however, quite unsuited for settlers from Europe, and is at present only inhabited by wandering Bushmen. The Cape Colony remains in possession of the small islets yielding valuable guano, annexed by the British Government in 1867, and leased to a merchant at Capetown.

WALVISCH BAY, THE MOST NORTHERLY BRITISH POSSESSION.

GERMAN SETTLEMENT AT ANGRA PEQUENA.

GERMAN ANNEXATION ON THE COAST OF SOUTH AFRICA.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

POPULAR NEW WORKS.
Now ready, at all Bookselers and Libraries.
In 2 vols, with Portraits, 30s.
A THIRD EDITION OF MR. EDMUND YATES'S RECOLLECTIONS.
Edited by Lord Brabourne.
JANE AUSTEN'S LETTERS. 2 vols, 24s.
In 1 vol., with numerous Illustrations, 21s.
A LADY'S WANDERINGS IN THE SOUDAN.
By Mrs. T. C. S. SPEEDY.
With an Introduction by George Macdonald, LL.S.D.
LETTERS FROM HELL. 1 vol, 6s.
Monthly, Price One Shilling.
PRINCE BISMARCK'S CHARACTER; Lord Malmesbury; Recollections of Mark Pattison, besides other Essays and Stories, appear in the January Number of TEMPLE BAR.
RICHARD BENTLEY and SON, New Burlington-street.

NEW and POPULAR NOVELS.
Now ready, at all the Libraries.
ALTHOUGH HE WAS A LORD. By Mrs. FORRESTER. 3 vols.
THE CARDICS. By WILLIAM GEORGE WATERS. 3 vols.
THE WITCH'S HEAD. By H. RIDER HAGGARD. 1 vol.
CYCLAMEN. By Mrs. RANDOLPH, Author of "Gentianella," &c. 3 vols.
WEST OF SWARDHAM. By the Rev. W. O. PEILE. 3 vols.
HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

Now ready, Eighty-eight pages, 6d.; by post, 7d.
Old-fashioned Paper and Print, with Quaint Woodcuts.
YE EARLIE ENGLYSHE ALMANACK for 1885; Thynges Olde and Newe. Contains Old Notes on ye Kalendar, Weather Folk-Lore and Folk-Lore of ye Daies, Birdis and Flowers, Olde Poems, the Occult Science of Chyromancy of ye Realtynge of Handes, Ye Health Notes for each month, Olde Englyshe Remedies and Recipes, Ye Way to Wealth, A Diary of Events for a Yeare Past in ye Manner of Sam Pepys his Diery, Meteorological and Astronomic Notes, Merrie Jokes and Riddles, and manie other Thynges of very greate importe.
Imprynted and solde by Master T. Pettitt and Compy., of 23, Frith-street, Soho, London; Messrs. Simpkin and Co.; and of all Booke Shoppes.
"This Almanack is an interesting, amusing, and useful novelty, worth getting, and worth keeping."—Western Morning News.

CHEAP UNIFORM EDITION OF E. SPENDER'S NOVELS.
Price 2s. boards, 2s. 6d. cloth, 3s. 6d. half morocco, postage 6d.
RESTORED. By E. SPENDER, Author of "A True Marriage," "Son and Heir," &c. "A work which will be read widely and praised abundantly."—Morning Post.
London: J. and R. MAXWELL, Shoe-lane; and at all Booksellers', &c.

SECOND EDITION OF THE ARGOSY FOR JANUARY NOW READY.
"MRS. HENRY WOOD'S ARGOSY is literally laden with golden grain."—Daily Telegraph.

THE MYSTERY OF ALLAN GRALE, a new Illustrated Serial Story, commences in the January Number of "The Argosy." Second Edition, now ready.

CARAMEL COTTAGE, by JOHNNY LUDLOW; and "Among the Welsh," by CHARLES W. WOOD, F.R.G.S., commence in the January Number of "The Argosy." Second Edition, now ready.

Now ready,
MRS. HENRY WOOD'S MAGAZINE.
THE ARGOSY, for JANUARY.
CONTENTS.
1. THE MYSTERY OF ALLAN GRALE. A New Serial Story.
Chap. I.—The Farm by the Lock.
" II.—The knock at the door.
" III.—What could it mean?
" IV.—The Black Pool.
Illustrated by M. Ellen Edwards.
2. CARAMEL COTTAGE. By Johnny Ludlow.
3. AMONG THE WELSH. By Charles W. Wood, F.R.G.S. With Nine Illustrations.
4. THE CONVERSION OF PROFESSOR NABS.
5. No. 1 OF THE FIRST FOOR.
6. LITTLE MAID OF ARCADIE.
7. A REQUIEM. By G. B. Stuart.
Sixpence, Monthly.
"'The Argosy' sails over golden seas."—Daily Telegraph.
"'The Argosy' sails as gaily as ever, and the golden grain with which Mrs. Henry Wood loads her vessel shows no sign of diminution. The present number is one of the best ever issued."—Bell's Life.
"Mrs. Henry Wood's 'Argosy' is one of the brightest and most amusing as well as the cheapest amongst the English serials."—Broad Arrow.
"The best and cheapest magazine we have."—Standard.
"Johnny Ludlow's stories are almost perfect."—Spectator.
"The interest aroused in Johnny Ludlow is considerable."—Saturday Review.
Sixpence, Monthly.
SECOND EDITION now ready for JANUARY.
RICHARD BENTLEY and SON, 8, New Burlington-street, W.

THE LADIES' TREASURY: A Household Magazine of Literature, Education, Fashion, Needlework, and Cookery. 7d., Monthly.
The JANUARY PART (beginning a new volume) contains:—
An Egyptian Fellah Woman. | The Five-Franc Piece. A complete story.
Illustrated.
Marriage Customs.
His Father's Darling. A complete story.
Lady Nairne and Her Songs.
Egypt: Ancient and Modern. Illustrations.
My Lover, John Jessen.
Irish Superstitions.
Gardening for Amateurs.
Cookery and Parisian Gossip.
Notes on Dressmaking.
Literary Notes and Chess.
Prize Competition Questions.
Notices to Correspondents.
On Dits and Facts of the Month.
LARGE COLOURED FASHION PLATE:—Ball Costumes.
SUPPLEMENT.—A Coloured Picture, entitled "The Fisherman's Daughter."
FASHIONS ENGRAVINGS.—Bridal Costume—Promenade Costume—Children's Dresses—Ulster—Dolman Ulster—Newmarket Coat—Skating Costume—Ball Costume—Evening Dress for Young Lady—Dress for Young Lady—Dinner Gown.
NEEDLEWORK ENGRAVINGS.—Squares for the Centre of a Chair Tidy in Crochet—Golden Drop Design in Crochet.
London: BEMROSE and SONS, 23, Old Bailey, and Derby.

Just published, Ninth Edition, large 8vo, pp. 722. Cloth, 8s.; Half Bound, 10s. 6d.
Post-free in England, throughout Europe and in Canada; for other parts of the Postal Union an extra 1s. must be sent for the additional postage; but for India and Ceylon, only 6d. extra; for China and the Straits Settlements, 2s. extra; and for Australia and New Zealand, 3s. extra.
HOMŒOPATHIC
DOMESTIC PHYSICIAN, containing the
TREATMENT OF DISEASES, with Popular Explanations of Anatomy, Physiology, Hygiene, Hydropathy, and Domestic Surgery, by JAMES H. PULTE, M.D.,
Revised, with Important Additions, by
WASHINGTON EPPS, L.R.C.P., M.R.C.S.,
Assistant Physician to the London Homœopathic Hospital, Member of the British Homœopathic Society,
Author of "Skin Diseases treated Homœopathically," &c.
This is the most complete Popular Work published on Homœopathic Medicine, and is especially adapted for Emigrants and others, who are unable to obtain any Professional assistance, as it treats of all possible diseases, prescribing clearly the remedy, dose, and general treatment in each case.
THE WORK IS DIVIDED INTO THREE PARTS.
PART I.—Consisting of eighteen chapters, headed respectively:—General Diseases; Casual Diseases; Fevers; Skin Diseases; Affections of the Mind; Affections of the Head; Affections of the Eyes; Affections of the Ears; Affections of the Nose; Affections of the Face, Lips, and Jaws; Affections of the Teeth, Gums, and Mouth; Affections of the Throat; Affections of the Windpipe and Chest; Affections of the Stomach and Bowels, Affections of the Urinary and Genital Organs; Diseases of Women; Treatment of Children.
PART II.—Consists of three chapters, headed:—Anatomy and Physiology; Hygiene and Hydropathy; and Materia Medica.
PART III. is on Domestic Surgery, and treats of Medical and Surgical Appliances; Dislocations and Luxations, and Fractures. Besides which there is a Glossary of Medical Terms and a Copious Index.
London: Published by JAMES EPPS and Co., 48, Threadneedle-street; and 170, Piccadilly.

By Dr. BARR MEADOWS, Physician (20 years) to the National Institution for Diseases of the Skin. Ninth Edition, 2s. 6d.
ERUPTIONS; Their Rational Treatment.
London: G. HILL, 154, Westminster Bridge-road.

WHAT IS YOUR CREST and WHAT IS YOUR MOTTO? Send name and county to CULLETON'S Heraldic Office, Plain Sketch, 3s. 6d.; coloured, 7s. The arms of man and wife blended. Crest engraved on seals, rings, books, and steel dies, 8s. 6d. Gold seal, with crest, 25s. Solid Gold Ring, 18-carat, Hall-marked, with crest, 42s. Manual of Heraldry, 400 Engravings, 3s. 9d.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX of STATIONERY contains a Ream of the very best Paper and 500 Envelopes, all stamped in the most elegant way with Crest and Motto, Monogram, or Address, and the engraving of steel Die included. Sent to any part for P.O. order.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

VISITING CARDS by CULLETON.
Fifty best quality, 2s. 8d., post-free, including the Engraving of Copper-plate. Wedding Cards, 50 each, 50 Embossed Envelopes, with Maiden Name, 10s. 6d.—T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

FOR FAMILY ARMS (Lincoln's-inn Heraldic Office) send Name and County. Sketch, 3s. 6d.; in colours, 7s. 6d. Arms Painted and Engraved on Seals, Dies, &c. HUGH BROTHERS, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn, W.C.; and 76, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. Prize Medal, Paris, 1878.
ARTISTS' SKETCHES.

FOR PANEL PAINTING, Terra Cotta, &c., for SALE and on HIRE. Priced List post-free.
WM. BARNARD, 119, Edgware-road, London, W.

WEDDING and BIRTHDAY PRESENTS at
RODRIGUES', 42, PICCADILLY.
SETS FOR THE WRITING-TABLE AND BOUDOIR, IN POLISHED BRASS, OXIDIZED SILVER, and CHINA.

DRESSING CASES from 21s. to £10.
JEWEL CASES	21s. to £50
CASES OF IVORY BRUSHES	15s. to £10
DESPATCH BOXES	63s. to £10
WRITING CASES	21s. to £10
ENVELOPE CASES AND BLOTTERS	12s. to £5
STATIONERY CASES AND CABINETS	16s. 6d. to £5
INKSTANDS	21s. to £5
CIGAR AND CIGARETTE CABINETS	7s. 6d. to £3
LIQUEUR CASES	42s. to £10
CLOCKS, SCENT BOTTLES, OPERA GLASSES, FANS.	50s. to £10

And a large and choice assortment of ENGLISH, VIENNESE, and PARISIAN NOVELTIES, from 5s. to £5.

TRAVELLING DRESSING BAGS, Morocco, with Hall-marked Silver Fittings.
£5 5s., £10 10s., £15, £20, £30 to £50.

PORTRAIT ALBUMS at RODRIGUES'
for Cartes de-Visite and Cabinet Portraits, 10s. 6d. to £5.
PHOTOGRAPH SCREENS, Leather and Plush, with gilt reversible hinges, to hold from 2 to 24 Portraits.

RODRIGUES' MONOGRAMS,
ARMS, CORONET, CREST, and ADDRESS DIES
Engraved as Gems from Original and Artistic Designs.
NOTE-PAPER and ENVELOPES, brilliantly Illuminated by hand in Gold, Silver, Bronze, and Colours.
BEST RELIEF STAMPING, any colour, 1s. per 100.
HERALDIC ENGRAVING, PAINTING, and ILLUMINATING.
All the New and Fashionable Note-Papers.
RODRIGUES, 42, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

ELKINGTON and CO.
ELECTRO and SILVER PLATE.
CLOCKS and BRONZES.
DIRECT FROM THE MANUFACTURERS.

ELKINGTON and CO.
TABLE and TESTIMONIAL PLATE.
DESIGNS and PHOTOGRAPHS,
SUPPLIED TO COMMITTEES.

ELKINGTON and CO.—CAUTION.
SEE ALL GOODS MARKED,
"E and CO." IN SHIELD.
ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST-FREE.

ELKINGTON and CO.,
MANUFACTURING SILVERSMITHS,
22, Regent-st.; and 42, Moorgate-st., City.
Birmingham, Liverpool, and Manchester.

BINDING the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.—Half-yearly Volumes bound in the new appropriate Covers, with gilt edges, at 5s. 6d. each, if sent carriage free to LEIGHTON, SON, and HODGE, 16, New-street-square, Fleet-street. The only Binders authorised by the Proprietors.

IMPROVED POSTAGE-STAMP ALBUM FOR 1885. Systematically arranged, and all the most modern improvements. Superior, 224 pages, post-free, 5s. 6d. Circulars free.—STANLEY GIBBONS and CO., 8, Gower-st., London.

MODELLING in Clay and Wax.—A Complete Guide, by MORTON EDWARDS. Post-free, 1s. 1d. Clay, wax, tools, &c., at LECHERTIER, BARBE, and CO., 60, Regent-street, W.

105,000 ACCIDENTS, for which TWO MILLIONS have been paid as COMPENSATION by the RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE COMPANY, 64, Cornhill. Accidents of all kinds. Paid-up Invested Funds, £260,000. Premium Income, £235,000. Chairman, Harvie M. Farquhar, Esq. Apply at the Railway Stations, Local Agents, or West-End Offices, 3, Grand Hotel-buildings, Charing-cross; or at the Head Office, 64, Cornhill, London, E.C.—WM. J. VIAN, Sec

CHOCOLAT MENIER.
AMSTERDAM EXHIBITION, 1883. Awarded the GRAND DIPLOMA OF HONOUR.

CHOCOLAT MENIER, in ½ lb. and ¼ lb. PACKETS.
For BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, and SUPPER.

CHOCOLAT MENIER.—Awarded Twenty-Eight PRIZE MEDALS.
Consumption annually exceeds 25,000,000 lb.

CHOCOLAT MENIER. Paris, London, New York.
Sold Everywhere.

UNIVERSALLY PRESCRIBED BY THE FACULTY.
TAMAR INDIEN GRILLON. For CONSTIPATION, Hæmorrhoids, Bile, Headache, Loss of Appetite, Cerebral Congestion.
Prepared by E. GRILLON, Chemist of the Paris Faculty, 69, Queen-street, City, London.
Tamar, unlike Pills and the usual Purgatives, is agreeable to take, and never produces irritation, nor interferes with business or pleasure.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists, 2s. 6d. a Box, Stamp included.

NO MEDICINE for the Cure of Asthma, Consumption, Coughs, and Bronchitis was ever attended with such speedy and unfailing success as DR. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS.

A SIMPLE FACT ABOUT KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—There is absolutely no remedy that is so speedy in giving relief, so certain to cure, and yet the most delicate can take them. One Lozenge gives ease. Sold in 1½d. TINS.

TOWLE'S PENNYROYAL and STEEL PILLS for FEMALES. Sold in Boxes, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d., of all Chemists. Sent anywhere on receipt of 15 or 31 stamps by the maker, E. T. TOWLE, Chemist, Nottingham.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET.

ANNUAL STOCK-TAKING SALE.

ON ACCOUNT of the RE-BUILDING of a portion of the Oxford-street Premises, all STOCK will be RE-MARKED at GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

SILK is now lower in Price than at any period since the French Revolution, 1848. Per yard.
One thousand Pieces of new Brocaded Satins, combining all the Fashionable colourings. These are the Cheapest Silks ever submitted 2s. 6d. to 5s. 6d.
500 Pieces of Rich Brocaded Velvets in all the new coloured mixtures 6s. 6d. to 9 11

BLACK BRACCADED VELVETS.
SATIN GROUND, from 4 11
2000 Pieces of Plain Silks, Satins, and Merveilleux to match the brocades, from 2 6
Coloured Twill-faced All-Silk Satins, usually sold at 4s. 6d. 2 6
Patterns post-free.
PETER ROBINSON'S.

NEW WINTER DRESSES. Per yard. s. d.
Devonshire, Witney, Scotch, and other SERGES, in various shades of Navy, Cream, Black, Beige, &c.; all Wool, very wide 9d. to 1 6
Homespun Cashmere Bege, mixed colours 1 0

NEW WINTER DRESSES. Per yard. s. d.
All the usual and several distinctly New Shades of Colour in Ottoman Casimir Angola Foules 1 2
Cashmere d'Italie; all wool, very durable 2 0
French Merinos, very wide 1s. 11d. to 2 9
Very Fine French Cashmeres 2s. 9d. to 2 9
Velvet Velveteens, much improved in make, colour, and price 2s. 3d. to 3 3
A Black Velveteen, specially cheap 3s. 6d. to 4 11
Patterns post-free.
PETER ROBINSON'S.

DRESS MATERIALS. £ s. d.
Cream-coloured Richly-embroidered Alsatian Lawn Robes, double quantity of wide embroidery, each 1s. 9d., 1s. 11d., and 2s. 9d. 18 9
Finely-worked Cashmere Robes in Black and all the new shades of Brown, Bronze, Grey, Bark Green, Navy, Drab, &c., extra quantity of embroidery, each 1 18 6
COMPOSITE ROBES, 20 yards in each; a great novelty, in every combination of style and colour, all Wool each 1 1 0
FOR PALETOTS, JACKETS, &c.,

ARCTIC SEAL CLOTH.
The highest perfection of make and wear.
52 in. wide, superior in effect to sealskin.
Also every kind of Polaire, Beaver, Peau de Chameau, Peau de Mouton, &c., in Black, White, Brown, Drab, &c.

CLEARANCE SALE of SURPLUS STOCK.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET AND REGENT-STREET.

GREAT SALE at REDUCED PRICES at
PETER ROBINSON'S
MOURNING WAREHOUSE,
REGENT-STREET.

THE ANNUAL JANUARY SALE will COMMENCE on MONDAY, JAN. 5, and continue for One Month.

GENUINE BARGAINS will be offered in each Department.
Amongst them may be mentioned Silk Costumes, reduced from 6½ to 4½ guineas, from 8½ to 6, from 10 to 7½, from 14 to 10 gns.

BALL, DINNER, and EVENING DRESSES. Reduced from 3 to 2 guineas, from 4 to 3, from 5 to 3½, from 8 to 6 guineas.

MATERIAL COSTUMES in Black and Grey, beautifully fashioned and designed, in various New Textures and Combinations. Reduced from 3 to 2 guineas, from 4 to 3, from 6 to 4, from 8 to 6 guineas.

THE MAGNIFICENT STOCK of CLOAKS, MANTLES, JACKETS, and OPERAS are all very considerably reduced.

BLACK SILKS and VELVETS.—Very handsome Brocaded Velvets, Plain Black Silks, Ottomans, Merveilleux, and Satins, are all marked down to very low prices.

FANCY SILKS and REMNANTS. Many reduced to One Half.

ALSO SHAWLS, Operas, Evening Fichus, Fans, Hosiery, Gloves, Collars.
The beautiful Stock of French Millinery Materials, by the yard. Crapes, &c., have all undergone the same reduction.

MOURNING ORDERS during the SALE will be supplied at the same cheap rates, best care and prompt attention will be given to all orders, large or small. Travelling assistants fully competent to take measures and instructions will be sent at once to any part of the country, free of any extra expense whatever to the customer, immediately
ON RECEIPT OF LETTER OR TELEGRAM
ADDRESSED TO
PETER ROBINSON,
MOURNING WAREHOUSE,
REGENT-STREET, LONDON.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY for the HAIR.
If your hair is turning grey, or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White Hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. "The Mexican Hair Renewer" is sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 3s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE. For the Teeth and Breath.
Is the best Liquid Dentifrice in the world; it thoroughly cleanses partially-decayed teeth from all parasites or living "animalcule," leaving them pearly white, imparting a delightful fragrance to the breath. The aromatic Floriline removes instantly all odours arising from a foul stomach or tobacco smoke; being partly composed of honey, soda, and extracts of sweet herbs and plants, it is perfectly delicious to the taste, and as harmless as sherry. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 2s. 6d. per Bottle.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR LIVER.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR BILE.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR INDIGESTION.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR HEARTBURN.

JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

COSTUMES (all Silk), SATIN DUCHESSE and BROCHE SILK VELVET, 5 guineas,
Including sufficient Material for unmade Bodice.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

FRENCH MODEL COSTUMES.—DRAP FRANCAISE, BLACK, ALL WOOL, fully trimmed, mixed with striped velvet, and including sufficient material, with velvet, for bodice unmade. 2½ guineas.
JAY'S, REGENT-STREET.

EVENING DRESSES.—Two guineas and 2½ guineas each, with sufficient material for bodice included. The Newest and most fashionable styles, and made of Non-Crushing Silk Net. Pencil drawings of the same postage free, on application.
JAY'S
THE LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE,
REGENT-STREET, W.

DRESS SHIRTS.—FORD'S EUREKA DRESS SHIRTS.—A large stock ready made in eight different sizes and three different qualities, of the very finest Linen, as well as the fashionable ribbed Pique, to wear with one stud or three, 5s. 9d., 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., 9s. 6d. each. In single bodies, ready for use, by parcels post free.
R. FORD and CO., 41, Poultry, London.

ÆGIDIUS.—The only Flannel Shirts that Never shrink in Washing.
Three for 29s. 6d.
R. FORD and CO., 41, Poultry, London.

ÆGIDIUS.—Three for 39s. 6d.
Soft as Silk, and very Elastic.
Free by parcels post.
R. FORD and CO., 41, Poultry, London.

ANNUAL SALE.—ALLISON and CO. beg respectfully to announce that they are now offering, at greatly REDUCED PRICES, their SURPLUS STOCK of FANCY GOODS. Each Department has been carefully revised, and all made-up goods subject to change of fashion are offered at very low prices. In addition to their regular stock, they invite attention to a large purchase of Satin Merveilleux, in white ours, at 2s. 11½d., and Black Satin Duchesse, at 3s. 11d., much under the regular price; coloured Vigogne Cloth at 10½d.; well-made red Satin Sash-Ribbons, 9½ wide, at 2½d.; and rich Cashmere Sash-Ribbons at 3s. 6d.
REGENT HOUSE, 238, 240, and 242, Regent-street.

CANNES.—Hôtel Beau Site. Adjoining Lord Brougham's property. Beautiful and sheltered situation. Large gardens; lawn-tennis. Baths, Lifts, 200 chambers. Moderate charges.—GIACOMO GORGOZZA, Proprietor.

MARSEILLES.—Grand Hôtel Louvre, and Paix. Largest in Marseilles; universal reputation for modern comforts; moderate charges. Lift, table d'hôte, billiards, baths, omnibus.—PAUL NEUSCHWANDER and Co., Propts.

NAPLES.—Hôtel Métropole (Cook's special house). Pension from 8f., with wine. Restaurant, cafe, English bar. Grand establishment of baths, Hammam and others, sea and fresh water. Omnibus; tram passes door.

NICE.—COSMOPOLITAN HOTEL.
HOTEL DE LA GRANDE BRETAGNE.
These two very superior grand hotels excel any on the Riviera. South aspect. Calorifère and Ascenseur at each.
J. LAVAL, Director.

NICE.—TERMINUS HOTEL.
facing the station.
Splendid south position.
Hydraulic Ascenseur and Baths.
180 Chambers and Salons.

PEGLI.—Grand Hôtel Pegli (formerly De la Méditerranée). Facing the sea. South aspect, surrounded by gardens and mountains. Climate unsurpassed. Sanitary arrangements; satisfactory charges. BUCHER-DURRER, Prop.

VERMOUTH.—Francesco Cinzano and Co. Vermouth, combination Acti Wine and Alpine herbs, with quinine. Refreshing tonic and digestive. Of Wine Merchants, and F. CINZANO and CO., Corso Re Umberto, 10, Turin.

ILKLEY WELLS HYDROPATHIC ESTABLISHMENT and HOTEL, renovated and refurnished, offers a delightful winter residence. A covered way, covering one square yard, connected with the house, and commanding magnificent views of Wharfedale, has recently been added. Reduced winter terms.
Address, Manager, Wells House, Ilkley, via Leeds.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR
IS A WORLD-WIDE NECESSARY.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR
FOR THE NURSERY.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR
FOR THE FAMILY TABLE.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR
FOR THE SICK-ROOM.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR
HAS A WORLD-WIDE REPUTATION.

A DELICIOUS MEDICINE.—Dr. LIEB'S "EDIBLE" FRUIT PILLS may be eaten like a sweetmeat. Renowned for their efficacy in Constipation, Bile, Indigestion, and all ailments of the Stomach. Eagerly taken by children and the delicate. Highly recommended by the faculty. Of all Chemists, at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d. per Box; or post-free of the Consignees, A. POSNER and CO., 61, Mansell-street, London.

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA.
The best remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and safest aperient for delicate constitutions, ladies, and children. Of all Chemists.

NUDA VERITAS.—GREY HAIR restored by this specific; after which it grows the natural colour, not grey. Unequalled as a dressing. It causes growth, arrests falling, and ITS use defies detection. The most harmless and effectual restorer extant. One trial will convince it has no equal. Price 1s. 6d., of all Chemists and Hairdressers. Testimonials free. Agents, R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

GOLDEN HAIR.—Robare's AUREOLINE produces the beautiful golden colour so much admired. Warranted perfectly harmless. Price 5s. 6d. and 10s. 6d., of all principal Perfumers and Chemists throughout the world.
Agents, R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.
The Pills purify the blood, correct all disorders of the liver, stomach, kidneys, and bowels. The Ointment is unrivalled in the cure of bad legs, old wounds, gout, and rheumatism.

POSTAGE OF
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

AT HOME.

The postage within the United Kingdom, including the Channel Islands, is One Halfpenny.

ABROAD.

To places abroad the postage is Twopence, with the following exceptions:—

To Abyssinia, Aden, Borneo, Ceylon, India, Java, Labuan, Penang, Philippine Islands, Sarawak, Singapore, and Zanzibar, Threepence.

To Madagascar (except St. Mary and Tamatave) and the Transvaal, Fourpence.

Copies printed on thin paper may be sent to the Colonies and Foreign Countries at half the rates stated above; but their use is not recommended, the appearance of the Engravings being greatly injured by the print at the back showing through.

Newspapers for foreign parts must be posted within eight days of the date of publication, irrespective of the departure of the mails.

Office: 198, Strand, W.C.

A WONDERFUL MEDICINE.

BEECHAM'S PILLS.

BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS
BEECHAM'S PILLS

Are admitted by thousands to be worth above a Guinea a Box for Bilious and Nervous Disorders, such as Wind and Pain in the Stomach, Sick Headache, Giddiness, Fullness and Swelling after Meals, Dizziness and Drowsiness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite, Shortness of Breath, Costiveness, Scurvy, Blotches on the Skin, Disturbed Sleep, Frightful Dreams, and all Nervous and Trembling Sensations, &c. The first dose will give relief in twenty minutes. This is no fiction, for they have done it in thousands of cases. Every sufferer is earnestly invited to try one Box of these Pills, and they will be acknowledged to be WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

For Females of all ages these Pills are invaluable, as a few doses of them carry off all humours. No female should be without them. There is no medicine to be found to equal Beecham's Pills for removing any obstruction or irregularity of the system. If taken according to the directions given with each Box, they will soon restore females of all ages to sound and robust health.

For a weak stomach, impaired digestion, and all disorders of the liver, they act like "Magic," and a few doses will be found to work wonders upon the most important organs of the human machine. They strengthen the whole muscular system, restore the long-lost complexion, bring back the keen edge of appetite, and arouse into action, with the Rosebud of Health, the whole physical energy of the human frame. These are "facts" admitted by thousands embracing all classes of society; and one of the best guarantees to the Nervous and Debilitated is, Beecham's Pills have the largest sale of any patent medicine in the world.

Full Directions are given with each Box. Sold by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers in the United Kingdom.

In Boxes, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each.

NEW MUSIC.

TRIAL BY JURY. By W. S. Gilbert and ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Now performing at the Savoy Theatre. Complete words and music, 3s. net; pianoforte solo, 2s. 6d. net.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S NEW SONGS.

BID ME GOOD-BYE (Just Published). Words by F. E. Weatherly; Music by P. TOSTI. For Soprano, Tenor, Contralto, Baritone, or Bass. Price 2s. net. "'Bid me Good-bye' will rival in popularity all previous songs by this favourite composer." "An enormous success."

MOTHER. Words by F. Weatherly. Music by P. TOSTI. Sung by all the principal Vocalists.

AT VESPERS. P. TOSTI.

WHERE MEMORY DWELLS. ISIDORE DE LARA.

GATES OF THE WEST. CAROLINE LOWTHIAN

GATES OF THE WEST. As a Vocal Duet.

O RIPPLING TIDE. Mrs. MONCRIEFF. Mrs. Moncrieff's greatest success.

MY TRUST. I. DE LARA.

SO SWEET A STORY. COTSFORD DICK.

FAREWELL, YET NOT FAREWELL. CAROLINE LOWTHIAN. Price 2s. each net.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street, W.; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

MAUDE V. WHITE'S NEW SONGS. Words from Tennyson's "In Memoriam."
1. I SOMETIMES HOLD IT HALF A SIN.
2. 'TIS BETTER TO HAVE LOVED AND LOST.
3. LOVE IS AND WAS MY LORD AND KING.
4. BE NEAR ME WHEN MY LIGHT IS LOW.
Price 2s. each net.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

NEW DANCE MUSIC.

BID ME GOOD-BYE VALSE. On the melody of Signor Tosti's newest and most successful song. By HENRY W. DE CAMOUS. Performed with great success by the Bijou Drawing-Room Orchestra, Coote's Band, &c. Price 2s. net.

PHYLLIS WALTZ. P. BUCALOSSI.

CLAIRE WALTZ. LEONARD GAUTIER. Illustrated with a photograph of Mrs. Kendal, by Elliott and Fry.

MERRY FOOTSTEPS POLKA. P. BUCALOSSI.

FAHRWOHL WALTZ. CAROLINE LOWTHIAN.

BLACK AND TAN POLKA. CAROLINE LOWTHIAN.

TOI SEULE VALSE. LUKE WHEELER.

SEA BREEZE POLKA. "The Sea Breeze Polka is one of the best and most spirited polkas which has been published for some time."—Morning Post. 2s. each net.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO. have on view every description of PIANOFORTES by the best makers, returned from hire, to be SOLD at greatly reduced prices for cash, or may be purchased on the Three-Years' System.
CHAPPELL PIANOFORTES, from 15 guineas.
COLLARD PIANOFORTES, from 35 guineas.
ERARD PIANOFORTES, from 50 guineas.
BROADWOOD PIANOFORTES, from 35 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO'S STUDENT'S PIANOFORTES, from 16 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S PININOS, with Check Action, from 2? guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S IRON-FRAMED OBLIQUE and COTTAGE PIANOFORTES for Ocean Steamers and Extreme Climates, from 35 to 65 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO. have on View Grand Pianofortes from 50 to 250 guineas.
50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ALEXANDRE HARMONIUMS, for Church, School, or Drawing-Room, from 6 to 150 guineas; or, on the Three-Years' System, from £1 5s. per quarter.—50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S PET ORGAN, Seven Stops, including Sub-bass and Sub and Super Octave Coup'er. Elegant Carved Walnut Case. 18 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S CENTENNIAL GRAND ORGAN. 15 Stops, 9 Sets of Reeds, and Combination Tubes, 85 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S
PIPE and REED COMBINATION ORGANS.
With one manual, from 60 guineas.
With two manuals and pedals, from 120 guineas.
Hydraulic motors, for blowing, from 8 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S ORGANS have been pronounced by the most eminent musicians in England to be superior to all others in pipe-like quality of tone.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S AMERICAN ORGANS. A combination of pipes and reeds, which do not go out of tune by the most severe changes of temperature. Easy of manipulation, handsome in design, and of great durability.
From 18 to 225 guineas.
Secondhand from 12 guineas.
Testimonials and Descriptive Lists free by post.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry.

KIRKMAN and SON,
MAKERS of GRAND and COTTAGE PIANOS,
3 and 9, SOHO-SQUARE, LONDON, W.

KIRKMAN and SON'S STEEL GRANDS (horizontal and upright) are constructed with their patent wrought-steel frame and wrest-plank, securing a pure tone as well as the utmost durability. They also make an overstrung iron grand, only 5 ft. 9 in. long, at a lower price.

KIRKMAN and SON'S IRON-FRAMED COTTAGE PIANOS range from 4 ft. in height, are full trichord, and are fitted with the best repetition check-actions. They can be obtained in solid walnut cases, and specially prepared for extreme climates. A new model has just been introduced for yachts, bungalows, school-rooms, &c., only pianette size (3 ft. 9 in. high by 2 ft. wide), but full trichord, and with check action.
All their Pianos are for sale, hire, or on the three-years' system.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—Messrs. ERARD, of 18, Great Marlborough-street, London, and 13, Rue de Mail, Paris, Makers to her Majesty and the Prince and Princess of Wales, CAUTION the Public that Pianofortes are being sold bearing the name of "Erard" which are not of their manufacture. For information as to authenticity apply at 18, Great Marlborough-st., where new Pianos can be obtained from 50 guineas.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—COTTAGES, from 50 guineas.
OBLIQUES, from 85 guineas.
GRANDS, from 125 guineas.

MOORE and MOORE'S Iron Pianofortes, from 30 guineas, on Three-Years' System, carriage free. Liberal discount for cash. Illustrated Price-Lists post-free. Pianofortes from 14 guineas.—104 and 105, Bishopsgate Within.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE or for SALE, from 25 guineas upwards.—JOHN BROADWOOD and SONS, 33, Great Pulteney-street, Golden-square, W. Manufactory, 45, Horseferry-road, Westminster.

NEW MUSIC.

OUR LAST WALTZ. A New Romantic Song. By MOLLOY. The Words by Weatherly. To be sung by Madame Du Fonblanque at the Ballad Concert, Jan. 14. Published this day, in C and D, arranged as a Waltz by G. Lamothe. Both Song and Waltz illustrated with a beautiful vignette. Price 2s.—BOOSEY and Co., London.

A PENNY FOR YOUR THOUGHT. A New Song. By CECILE HARTOG, the Composer of "Swinging." Sung by Miss Mary Davies. 2s.—BOOSEY and Co.

MARZIALS' New Song, MAY MARGARET. Sung by Miss Mary Davies. 2s.—BOOSEY and Co., London.

LADY ARTHUR HILL'S New Song. TWO THOUGHTS. This Day. 2s.—BOOSEY and Co.

BOOSEY and CO.'S POPULAR SONGS.

THE RIVER OF YEARS. By MARZIALS. Sung by Miss Eleanor Rees.

NEVER TO KNOW. By MARZIALS.

LOVE'S OLD SWEET SONG. By MOLLOY. Sung by Madame Antoinette Sterling.

TO-MORROW WILL BE FRIDAY. By MOLLOY. Sung by Mr. Barrington Foote.

THE MAID OF THE MILL. By STEPHEN ADAMS. Sung by Mr. Edward Lloyd.

SHIPWRECKED. By STEPHEN ADAMS. Sung by Mr. Maybrick.

WHEN WE MEET. By HOPE TEMPLE.

ONLY ONCE MORE. By F. L. MOIR.

DADDY. By BEHREND.

SWINGING. By CECILE HARTOG. 2s. each.—BOOSEY and Co., London.

FOUR SPLENDID SONGS.

LOVED VOICES. By EDITH COOKE. In F, E flat, and G. Is now ready, and may be had of all Musicsellers. 2s. net.

LOVED VOICES. Is also published as a VOCAL DUET. 2s. net.

PLEASE YOURSELF. G. ADELMANN.

THE SONG OF A BOAT. A. BORTON. In F and E flat.

I MEAN TO WAIT FOR JACK. COTSFORD DICK. In E flat and F. Each 2s. net.
ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street, London, W.

CHARMING NEW SONGS. 2s stamps each.

HEART TO HEART. By BEHREND. "A pretty and most effective song." A, B flat (C to E), C, and D.

SURELY. New Song. By A. H. BEHREND. 15,620 copies sold first month of issue.
15,620 copies sold first month of issue.
15,620 copies sold first month of issue.
E flat, F, G (compass D to E), A flat, B flat, and C.

GOING HOME. New Song. By COTSFORD DICK. "Will take high rank in the musical world." G, A flat, A (compass F to F), and B flat.

TILL THE BREAKING OF THE DAY. By CIRO PINSUTI. "A splendid song, one of uncommon merit; the music is rich and full, and contains a most charming melody. Certainly Signor Pinsuti's prettiest and most beautiful song." F, G, A flat, A (E to F), and B flat. "The successes of the season." 2s stamps each.

W. MORLEY and CO., 269, Regent-street, W.; and 70, Upper-street, N.

EDWIN ASHDOWN'S POPULAR SONGS.

I AM WAITING. Four keys . . .. F. Birch.
ANSWERED! Harmonium ad lib. .. Berton Smith.
DEAR BIRD OF WINTER. Three keys .. Wilhelm Ganz.
UNDER THE SHADOW OF ST. PAUL'S.. Seymour Smith.
A LITTLE BIRD TOLD ME .. .. Charles Tirbutt.
Price 2s. each net, postage free.

EDWIN ASHDOWN'S POPULAR PIANOFORTE PIECES.

PAROLES DU COEUR .. .. Victor Delacour.
PIAVOLINA .. .. Gustav Lange.
ROMEO AND JULIET .. .. Seymour Smith.
MARCHE DES MENESTRELS .. Seymour Smith.
Price 1s. 6d. each net, postage free.

EDWIN ASHDOWN'S POPULAR PIANOFORTE PIECES.

MARITANA (Wallace) .. .. Sydney Smith.
CARNAVAL GALLOP .. .. Paul Beaumont.
BOUTON DE ROSE .. .. .. Victor Delacour.
VALSE CHAMPETRE .. .. .. Gustav Lange.
Price 2s. each net, postage free.

EDWIN ASHDOWN'S POPULAR PIANOFORTE DUETS.

PSYCHE (Gavotte) .. .. Tito Mattei. 4s.
MARITANA (Wallace) .. .. Sydney Smith. 6s.
THE BOHEMIAN GIRL (Balfe) Sydney Smith. 6s.
Half price, postage free.

SYDNEY SMITH'S METHOD "The method of methods." Price 2s. 6d. net, postage free.
EDWIN ASHDOWN, Hanover-square.

SECOND EDITION.

NEW SONG. OH! WHO TO DULL ROSES WOULD LIKEN HIS LOVE? By R. WHITE. "Light and piquant." "No difficulties." By post, 2s.
J. B. CRAMER and Co., 201, Regent-street, London; Wood and Co., George-street, Edinburgh.

GOUNOD'S SPLENDID NEW SONG, THE KING OF LOVE MY SHEPHERD IS, cannot be too highly praised. It has been said that beautiful words inspire beautiful music; it would certainly appear to be so in this case, for these charming words have been most gracefully set by Ch. Gounod. The song is equally suitable for the home and the concert-room. It is so well laid out for the voice that the most ordinary singer can give quite an effective rendering. Four keys. 2s. net.—PHILLIPS and POPE, 43, Kilburn High-road, N.W.

TO LADIES.—SALE of NEW MUSIC at a large reduction and post-free. All new Songs, Pieces, &c., of all publishers at half the published editions. Prices commence 4d., 6d., 9d. Catalogues sent post-free.
J. W. MOFFATT, 2, Barnsbury-street, London, N. Established 1827.

TO MANITOBA.
The Completion of
THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY (which is the ONLY DIRECT ROUTE to the Canadian North-West) to the summit of the Rocky Mountains has thrown open to settlement some of the finest Agricultural Lands in Manitoba and the North-West, of which the Dominion Government offer ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES FREE.
For further information apply to any Steam-ship Agent; and for new maps, pamphlets, and the fullest particulars about the country (free of charge), as well as the new tourist guide, "From Quebec to the Rocky Mountains," when published, apply either personally or by letter to
ALEXANDER BEGG,
Canadian Pacific Railway Offices,
88, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

WALKER'S CRYSTAL CASE WATCHES are superseding all others. Prize Medals—London, 1862; Paris, 1867. Silver Watches, from £4 4s.; Gold, from 20 6s. Price-Lists sent free.—77, Cornhill; and 230, Regent-street.

MAPLE and CO.,
TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD, LONDON.
UPHOLSTERERS by Appointment to HER MAJESTY.
MAPLE and CO.'S FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT, the largest in the World. Acres of Show-Rooms for the display of first-class Furniture, ready for immediate delivery. Novelties every day from all parts of the globe. No family ought to furnish before viewing this collection of household requisites, it being one of the sights in London. To export merchants an unusual advantage is offered. Having large space, all goods are packed on the premises by experienced packers.—MAPLE and CO., Tottenham-court-road, London, and 61, Boulevard de Strasbourg, Paris.
MAPLE and CO. BEDSTEADS.
MAPLE and CO. BEDSTEADS.
MAPLE and CO. have a SPECIAL DEPARTMENT for IRON and BRASS Four-post BEDSTEADS, CRIBS, and COTS, specially adapted for Mosquito Curtains, used in India, Australia, and the Colonies. Price for Full-size Bedsteads varying from 25s. Shippers and Colonial visitors are invited to inspect this varied Stock, the largest in England, before deciding elsewhere. Two Thousand Bedsteads to select from.—MAPLE and CO., Export Furnishing Warehouses, Tottenham-court-road, London.
MAPLE and CO. BEDSTEADS.
MAPLE and CO. BEDSTEADS.
MAPLE and CO.—SPRING MATTRESSES.—The Patent Wire-Woven Spring Mattress.—We have made such advantageous arrangements that we are enabled to forward the above much-admired Spring Mattresses at the following low prices:—3 ft., 17s. 9d.; 3 ft. 6 in., 21s. 6d.; 4 ft., 25s. 9d.; 4 ft. 6 in., 30s. 9d.; 5 ft., 42s.
MAPLE and CO., London; 61, Boulevard de Strasbourg, Paris.
MAPLE and CO. MATTRESSES.
MAPLE and CO. MATTRESSES.
MAPLE and CO.—BEDDING.—Special extra soft Spring and French Mattresses. Having large space, all bedding is manufactured on the Premises, and warranted pure. Established forty-four years.
MAPLE and CO., Tottenham-court-road, London.
MAPLE and CO. FURNITURE.
MAPLE and CO. FURNITURE.
MAPLE and CO.—Bass Wood FURNITURE is one of the novelties particularly recommended, being much harder than pine, and a pretty wood, although costing no more. 500 Bed-room Suites, finished in various woods, to select from. Prices, 5l. to 200 guineas. Many of these are quite novelties in shape and finish.—Tottenham-court-road, London.
MAPLE and CO. FURNITURE.
MAPLE and CO. FURNITURE.
MAPLE and CO. Manufacturers of First-class Seasoned FURNITURE for immediate shipment, the largest assortment in the world to select from. Orders for exportation to any part of the globe packed carefully on the premises, and forwarded on receipt of a remittance or Lond n reference. Catalogues free.
MAPLE and CO. CARPETS.
MAPLE and CO. CARPETS.
MAPLE and CO.—The largest assortment of INDIAN, Persian, and Turkey CARPETS always in stock, superior qualities. Purchasers should beware of inferior Turkey carpets, which are being imported and sold as best quality at so much per square yard.—MAPLE and CO., London.
MAPLE and CO. CARPETS.
MAPLE and CO. CARPETS.
MAPLE and CO.—A Manufacturer's Stock of stout BRUSSELS CARPETS, at 2s. 11d. per yard, usually sold at 3s. 9d.; best quality Tapestry Brussels (but old patterns), at 1s. 10d. and 2s. per yard; short Tapestry Carpet, 1s. 3½d. per yard. 3000 Carpets, a great variety of patterns, in all sizes, ready made up, in stock, which can be laid same day as ordered. MAPLE and CO., London.
MAPLE and CO. CARPETS.
MAPLE and CO. CARPETS.
MAPLE and CO. would advise all buyers of CARPETS, &c., especially Americans now visiting London, to call and see for themselves these great novelties, which are not yet to be found on the other side.
MAPLE and CO., Tottenham-court-road, London.
MAPLE and CO. CRETONNES.
MAPLE and CO. CRETONNES.
MAPLE and CO.—CRETONNES.—The Blocks for the reprinting of the fine old French Cretonnes having been now re-covered, MAPLE and CO. are receiving the finest goods ever offered. The cloths upon which these are printed are of superior quality; the colours are also guaranteed. The designs are exclusive, being engaged to MAPLE and CO., 145, Tottenham-court-road, London; and Paris.
MAPLE and CO. CRETONNES.
MAPLE and CO. CRETONNES.
CRETONNES.—MAPLE and CO. have great pleasure in stating that they have on show the most magnificent selection ever seen of fascinating CRETONNES, both on extra strong and serviceable tissues.—MAPLE and CO., Tottenham-court-road, London. Catalogues Free.
MAPLE and CO. CURTAINS.
MAPLE and CO. CURTAINS.
MAPLE and CO.—CURTAINS.—A large assortment of curtains in every texture, Madras, Guipure, Swiss, Lace, Muslin, at prices from 4s. 11d. to 20 guineas per pair. Some special novelties.
MAPLE and CO., Tottenham-court-road.
MAPLE and CO.—CURTAINS.—The most wonderful improvements have been made within the last few years in the manufacture and colouring of Cretonne Fabrics. The artistic effect which some of these goods—even at 3s. 2d. per yard, double width—give is extraordinary. The principal factories for the production being in France, MAPLE and CO. have established a house in Paris, whereby they see all the new designs, and are enabled to reserve them exclusively for their customers' selection.
MAPLE and CO. CLOCKS.
MAPLE and CO. CLOCKS.
DRAWING-ROOM CLOCKS to go for 400 days with once winding; a handsome present. Price 7½s. Warranted. MAPLE and CO. have a large and varied assortment suitable for dining and drawing room. Over five hundred to select from. Price 10s. 9d. to 50 guineas. Handsome marble clock, with inclosed lines in gold and superior eight-day movement, 5l. 5s. 6d.; also bronzes in great variety.—MAPLE and CO., London.
MAPLE and CO.—CATALOGUES FREE.
POSTAL ORDER DEPARTMENT. Messrs. MAPLE and CO. beg respectfully to state that this department is now so organised that they are fully prepared to execute and supply any article that can possibly be required in furnishing at the same price, if not less than in any other house in England. Patterns sent and quotations given free of charge.
MAPLE and CO.—Manufacturers of First-Class Seasoned FURNITURE for immediate shipment. The largest assortment in the world to select from. Orders for exportation to any part of the globe packed carefully on the premises, and forwarded on receipt of a remittance or London reference.
MAPLE and CO., Tottenham-court-road, London; and 61, Boulevard de Strasbourg, Paris.

CHARLES HALLÉ'S PRACTICAL PIANOFORTE SCHOOL.
New Edition. The two first sections enlarged.
Charles Hallé's New Pianoforte Tutor.
The best and most useful Tutor ever published.
FORSYTH BROTHERS, London and Manchester.

CHARLES HALLÉ'S MUSICAL LIBRARY.
Forsyth Brothers beg to call attention to their New Edition of Charles Hallé's Musical Library, which has been enlarged and entirely remodelled on the plan of his celebrated Pianoforte School.
Catalogues post-free on application.
FORSYTH BROTHERS, London and Manchester.

DOMINION ORGANS.
A Large Stock of these celebrated Organs always on view. Considered the finest-toned American Organs yet produced. A New two-manual pedal Organ just introduced, style 92.
Catalogues post-free.
FORSYTH BROTHERS, 272A, Regent-circus, Oxford-street, London; and 122 and 126, Deansgate, Manchester.

BROADWOOD'S PIANOFORTES.
CRAMER'S SUPPLY every size of these INSTRUMENTS on their Three-Years' System of Hire.
207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

ERARD'S PIANOFORTES.—CRAMER'S SUPPLY every size of these INSTRUMENTS on their Three-Years' System of Hire.—207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

COLLARD'S PIANOFORTES.
CRAMER'S SUPPLY every size of these INSTRUMENTS on their Three-Years' System of Hire.
207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

GRAND PIANOFORTES. — CRAMER'S SUPPLY GRAND PIANOFORTES by all the great makers, from 47 3s. to 425 10s. per quarter. Full Price-Lists post-free.—207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

D'ALMAINE'S PIANOS Half Price, from 42s. D'ALMAINE'S AMERICAN ORGANS from £4. All full compass, warranted for ten years; carriage free, and all risk taken. Easiest terms arranged. Established 100 years.
91, Finsbury-pavement, City, E.C.

WANTED, Respectable Young Women, as DOMESTIC SERVANTS, to proceed to NEW SOUTH WALES. Passages, including Provisions, Bedding, &c., will be granted by the Agent-General in first-class steamers to approved applicants, upon payment of £2 each. An experienced Surgeon and Matron accompany each ship. The Colonial Government provides free accommodation for the Single Women during ten days after their arrival in Sydney. The next steamer will be dispatched on or about Jan. 20. Further information may be obtained at the EMIGRATION DEPARTMENT, 9, New South Wales Government Offices, 5, Westminster-chambers, Victoria-street, Westminster, S.W.

CHUBB'S PATENT LOCKS.
CASH AND DEED BOXES.
TWENTY MEDALS awarded at the various International Exhibitions.
68, ST. JAMES'S-STREET, PALL-MALL.
128, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, E.C.
Price-Lists Post-free.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
EPPS'S (BREAKFAST) COCOA.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.
Made simply with boiling water or milk.
Sold in Packets, labelled,
JAMES EPPS and CO., HOMŒOPATHIC CHEMISTS.
Also Makers of EPPS'S CHOCOLATE ESSENCE.

TRELOAR'S
BRUSSELS CARPETS.

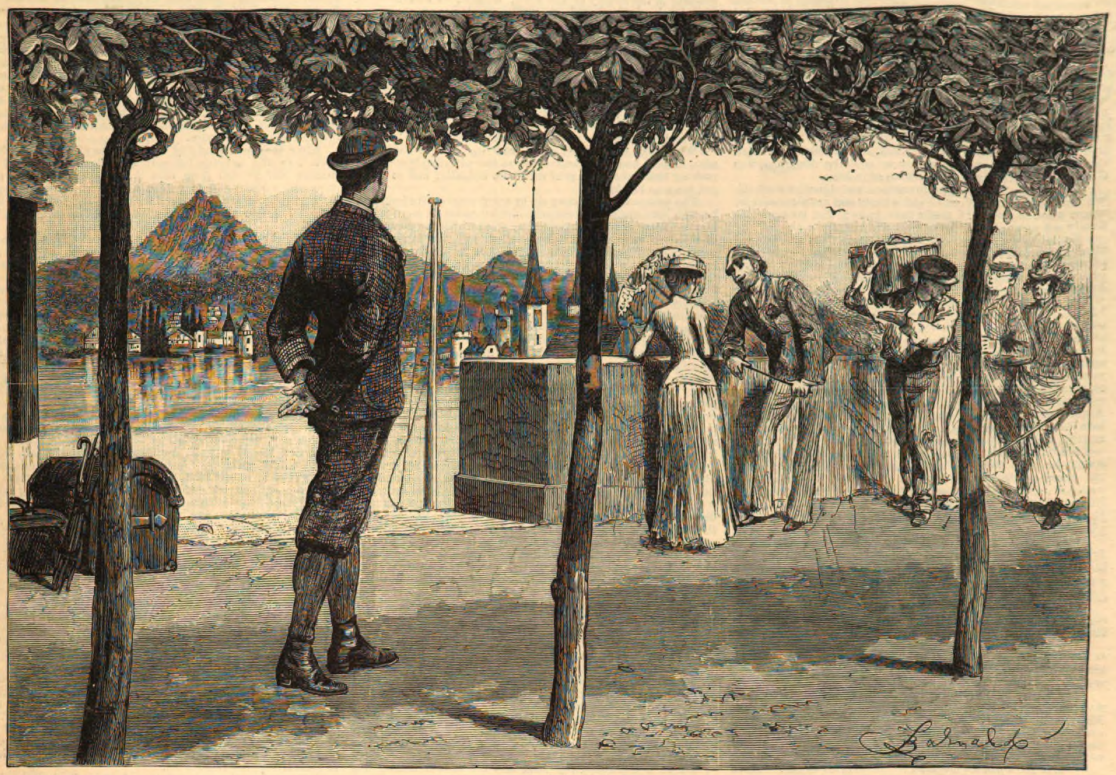
2s. 3d. per yard.	4s. 3d. per yard.
3s. 6d. " "	4s. 6d. " "
3s. 9d. " "	4s. 9d. " "
4s. 6d. " "	5s. 6d. " "

Exclusive in design. Special in quality.
TRELOAR and SONS,
LUDGATE-HILL.

JOHN BROGDEN, deceased.
The VALUABLE STOCK of ART-JEWELLERY is NOW FOR SALE, at a REASONABLE REDUCTION, for a LIMITED TIME,
by order of the Executors,
6, GRAND HOTEL-BUILDINGS, CHARING-CROSS.

DRIVING BY NIGHT.
The LIGHT from a PAIR of WESTAWAY'S PATENT LAMPS is equal to that from SIX ORDINARY CARRIAGE LAMPS. These LAMPS are STRONGLY MADE and PERFECTLY VENTILATED.
A pair will be SENT on APPROVAL, CARRIAGE PAID, and a FAIR TRIAL ALLOWED, on receipt of a remittance.
SOLD by all CARRIAGE-BUILDERS, PARSONS and CHAPMAN, TAVISTOCK.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA.
Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder.
Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa, with excess of Fat extracted. Four times the strength of Cocoa Thickened yet Weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c., and in reality cheaper.
The faculty pronounce it the most nutritious, perfectly digestive Beverage for "BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, or SUPPER." Keeps for years in all Climates. Requires no Cooking. A teaspoonful to Breakfast-Cup costing less than a halfpenny.
In Air-Tight Tins, 1s. 6d., 3s., &c., by Chemists and Grocers.
H. SCHWEITZER and CO., 10, Adam-street, Strand, W.C.



FRY'S COCOA.
GOLD MEDAL, Calcutta Exhibition, 1884.
FRY'S CARACAS COCOA. "A most delicious and valuable article."—Standard.
PURE COCOA ONLY.
FRY'S COCOA EXTRACT. "Strictly pure, easily assimilated."—W. W. STODDART, Analyst for Bristol.
NINETEEN PRIZE MEDALS.

DR. G. H. JONES, No. 57, Great Russell-street, opposite the British Museum, will forward a Sixty-four Page ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET, GRATIS and post-free, with lists of medals, diplomas, and awards at the great International Exhibitions.
R. G. Hutchins, Esq., Surgeon-Dentist to the Queen, in his last letter to Dr. G. H. Jones, said:—"Your system is the perfection of painless dentistry, and your teeth are the best, safest, and most lifelike."
See also Opinions of the Press. "Christian Union" says:—"Dr. G. H. Jones supplies prize-medal teeth and workmanship at a less cost than ordinary dentists charge for inferior and worthless imitations of his patented perfectly painless and safe system."
Consultations Free.

INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION,
South Kensington.—London, 1884.
GOLD MEDAL AWARDED for EXCELLENCE of QUALITY to
SALT and CO.,
EAST INDIA PALE and BURTON ALE BREWERS.
Stores and Offices—21 to 31, Pancras-road, London.

LIST of Prices to be obtained of all the principal Dealers.

HOOPING COUGH.
ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION.
The celebrated effectual cure without internal medicine. Sole Wholesale Agents, W. EDWARDS and SON, 157, Queen Victoria-street (formerly of 67, St. Paul's-churchyard), London, whose names are engraved on the Government Stamp.
Sold by most Chemists. Price 9s. per Bottle.

DRAWN BY F. BARNARD.

Vidal sauntered across to the horse-chestnut alley, beneath which Miss Irvine and the unknown were standing.

ADRIAN VIDAL.

BY W. E. NORRIS,

AUTHOR OF "MDLLE. DE MERSAC," "MATRIMONY," "THIRLBY HALL," &c.

CHAPTER III.

AFTER DINNER.

As it turned out, there was no need for the ceremony which Vidal had made up his mind to solicit. When the table-d'hôte was at an end, the greater part of the assemblage, including those five members of it with whom we have to do, trooped out to the colonnade in front of the hotel to listen to the band; and so Vidal presently found himself seated beside Miss Irvine, who at once addressed him. What she said is hardly worth recording. The range of subjects upon which it is possible to open conversation with a total stranger does not afford much scope for originality, nor was Miss Irvine ambitious of achieving small effects. But Vidal was as much delighted with her natural ease of manner as with the soft contralto tones of her voice. For the present, he was quite content to exchange commonplaces with her, to establish the fact that she and he sympathised upon a variety of unimportant points, and to leave the question of a possible closer relation between them to the dim future. Nevertheless, his interest in his companion had so far deepened at the expiration of a quarter of an hour that it was with some considerable inward anxiety that he asked her whether she would be likely to remain a few days at Lucerne.

Mrs. Irvine, who had arrived at a hiatus in her colloquy with Heriot, answered the question. "Well, now we must really talk this over," she said, bending forward, with her elbows on her knees. "We ought to do the place properly, now that we are here. Let me see—there's the Lion, and the bridge with the Dance of Death, and the organ at the Cathedral: a few hours would exhaust the town, I should say. But then, the Rigi railway—and perhaps Pilatus—and oughtn't we to go round the lake in a steamer? What do you think, Clare? Is it worth worth while to stay a day or two?"

"I don't think I care very much, one way or the other," answered Miss Irvine, rather disappointingly, after a brief consideration of the matter.

"It would be a positive sin to leave the place without having been round the lake," struck in Vidal, eagerly. "You ought to devote three days, at the very least, to Lucerne. Could we not make up a party and see what there is to be seen? For my part, I should never forgive myself if I went away without having studied the Rigi railway. Now, don't you agree with me, Heriot?"

"I am afraid," said Heriot, "that I am rather inclined to agree with Miss Irvine; I don't care much, one way or the other. Still, I am quite ready to do what everybody else wishes."

Neither his words nor his tone were quite as amiable as usual, and Vidal wondered why. If Heriot had not been Heriot, it would almost have looked as though the green-eyed monster were at work. But, for more reasons than one, that surmise was inadmissible, and presently it seemed to strike the last speaker that he had been wanting in cordiality, for he added briskly, "Of course I should enjoy having a day or two with you, Adrian; and though I have seen the Lake of Lucerne before, other people haven't. I suppose there is no need for you to hurry home, is there, Mrs. Irvine?"

"Well, no doubt they would be able to get on without me for a few days longer," replied that lady, making the admission a trifle unwillingly. "There are heaps of things that I must see about as soon as I get back; but after all, two days is only forty-eight hours—or indeed one may say only about sixteen, making deductions for sleeping and eating. Suppose we put it to the vote. Mr. Vidal is in favour of our remaining; Clare and Mr. Heriot are indifferent; so that unless I vote with the ayes we shall get no decision. Very well, then we will consider the motion carried."

It did not appear to have occurred to anybody to inquire the opinion of Mr. Irvine, who had drifted away aimlessly into the darkness some time before, and had not reappeared. In a few minutes the ladies withdrew, and no sooner were they out of ear-shot than Vidal broke forth into impetuous praises of Miss Irvine's beauty.

"My dear Heriot, why didn't you mention her when you were talking about them before dinner? She is far and away the most exquisite creature I ever beheld!"

"Yes, she is a beautiful girl," said Heriot, rather drily.

"And as good as she is beautiful, I am sure."

"Oh, well, that would be saying a great deal, wouldn't it? To the best of my belief, she is neither better nor worse than the generality of young ladies who have not been very long out of the school-room. No; that is not quite true: she is better than the generality in some respects; for there is a freshness and innocency about her which"——

"Well?" asked Vidal; for Heriot had come to a full stop.

"Which, in the nature of things, can't last much longer—more's the pity. If I were you, Adrian, I wouldn't flirt with her. She doesn't understand the game yet, and why should you be the one to teach it to her?"

Now Vidal had a theory, founded upon experience, that the game of flirtation is one in which no woman, however, young, stands in need of an instructor. He did not, however, even inwardly, seek to apply it in the present instance, but contented himself with an energetic disclaimer of the intention attributed to him.

"Surely," he exclaimed, "I may be permitted to admire respectfully what no man with eyes in his head could help admiring! And really I don't know why you should take it for granted that Miss Irvine would condescend to flirt with me, if I wished her to do so. But I don't wish anything of the kind."

Heriot smiled. He was quite conscious of the absurdity of his appeal, but he had not found himself able to resist making it. "How long are you going to be in Switzerland?" he asked, with an abrupt change of subject.

"Well, I thought about a month; but I may stay longer, if I find solitude conducive to work. You see, Heriot, I don't quite know yet whether it is in me to write a good novel, and I want to make sure and to give myself every chance. I didn't do my utmost with that last book; I doubt whether I should do my utmost with this one if I were in London, liable to constant interruptions. It is true that the brain is apt to grow sluggish when one has no company to keep one alive; but whether that disadvantage isn't partly compensated for by"——

"I beg your pardon," broke in a deprecating voice; "but can you tell me whether this is the principal inn of the place? I have lost my way, and cannot at this moment recall the name of my hotel. The Soldierhof—or Shoulderhof—or"——

"Try Schweizerhof," suggested Heriot. "Your instinct has led you to the right place, Mr. Irvine; and I shall be delighted to show you the way up to your room."

Perhaps he was not altogether sorry to escape the end of a dissertation to which not even the most devoted of friends could be expected to listen without some degree of boredom.

CHAPTER IV.

MISS IRVINE.

When Vidal woke on the following morning the sunshine was streaming into his room. Lucerne had been up and about for hours. The church bells were ringing; the steamers were blowing their hoarse whistles; from the quay without came guttural shouts, and from the corridors within the tramp of departing travellers and the banging of heavy trunks. But Vidal no longer anathematised this unending turmoil. On the contrary, so completely was this young man's judgment at the mercy of a mood that he actually found something cheerful and exhilarating in the signs of surrounding life and movement that were thus borne to him; and so far from stigmatising his fellow-tourists as "vile," would, upon the slightest provocation, have been quite willing to shake hands with them all round.

He got up and threw open his window. The deep blue lake was like a mirror in some places, and flecked with passing breezes in others; nearer to the shore every wavelet was a flashing diamond; the sky overhead was unclouded; but up the sides of the distant mountains light mists were curling and vanishing. Evidently there was going to be glorious weather, and Vidal, being in such good humour, determined that, as a reward for having worked so hard of late, he should have two whole days of idleness and enjoyment—or, upon Mrs. Irvine's calculation, sixteen hours, making deductions for food and sleep. Perhaps, even, it would not be necessary to subtract so long a time; since meals are not generally eaten in solitude, and many people like to sit up late when the nights are fine and the moon at the full.

All this only shows with what alarming rapidity a susceptible man will jump to conclusions; for assuredly it was neither by himself, nor with Heriot, nor even with Mrs. Irvine, that our young friend looked forward to contemplating the moon. He dressed after a leisurely, dawdling fashion, pausing every now and again to lean out of the window and look down upon the clipped horse-chestnut alley beneath, and upon the passers-by. And so it befell that, during one of these pauses, he became aware of a lady seated upon the low wall beside the lake. This lady wore a dress of white serge, and was sitting sideways, in such a manner as to display one of the neatest boots that ever gladdened the eyes of an appreciative spectator.

Unfortunately, she carried a large sunshade, which concealed the upper part of her person: but, although Vidal had never seen the dress before in his life, and could not have sworn to the boot, he felt no doubt at all as to the identity of the wearer. He remained watching her patiently until a change of posture caused her to raise her sunshade for a moment, and revealed the head of Miss Irvine, surmounted by one of those straw sailor hats which are becoming even to plain women, and, when worn by pretty ones, are simply irresistible.

After that glimpse, there was clearly only one thing to be done. Vidal performed the remainder of his toilet with the utmost dispatch, and was upon the point of running down stairs and crossing the road when he was arrested by a most unpleasing spectacle. Taking a last glance out of the window, he perceived that Miss Irvine had altered her position. She now had her back turned towards him, and was leaning over the wall, while beside her, in a similar attitude, was a tall individual, whose get-up, as far as could be discerned, was that of a modern young Englishman of fashion.

"So much for childlike innocence and ignorance of the wicked ways of men!" was Vidal's hasty and unjust comment upon what he saw. "I might have known that young ladies don't get up at eight o'clock in the morning for nothing."

So he threw himself down in his arm-chair, and decided that he wouldn't take a holiday, after all. What!—make one of a party to circumnavigate that weary lake and talk to a tedious old woman, while the daughter was amusing herself with her long-legged admirer? Hardly! No; he would go for a long walk into the country all by himself, and cease to trouble his head about people whom he was most unlikely ever to meet again. But it was not in Vidal's nature to sit and sulk in a corner long, and after a time he began to see that he was behaving very foolishly. Was it to be supposed that Miss Irvine could have reached her present age (she looked about twenty) without having had a single admirer? And because she allowed her admirers to speak to her, did it follow that she reciprocated their admiration or made appointments with them? Again, why should not the gentleman with the long legs be her brother or her cousin? Finally, what the deuce did it matter to him—Vidal—who or what the fellow might be?

Having reached the conclusion that it didn't matter in the least, he went down stairs and sauntered across the road to the horse-chestnut alley, beneath which Miss Irvine and the unknown were still standing. Of course it would never do to interrupt their conversation: but Vidal thought he would just walk slowly past, and she could see him or not, as she pleased.

He duly executed this manœuvre, with the result that Miss Irvine not only saw him, but was evidently pleased into the bargain. She smiled, nodded, and when the young man made as though he would have passed on, stopped him with a gesture.

"Are you taking an early constitutional?" she asked. It struck Vidal that she was rather anxious for the company of a third person.

Her interlocutor, it appeared, did not share this anxiety. "Well, good-bye, Miss Irvine," he said. "I hope we may meet in England before long; and if not—well, perhaps you will let me hear from you."

He was a broad-shouldered, fresh-complexioned man of five or six and thirty, with a loud, but not disagreeable voice. Miss Irvine shook hands with him, but made no audible reply, and he strode over to the hotel without bestowing a glance upon the new-comer, who, on the other hand, had carefully taken stock of him.

"Is it not a perfect morning?" Miss Irvine began. "Have you breakfasted yet?—and are you going to do anything particular to-day? My mother has gone off to inspect the bridges; but she told me that if I saw you or Mr. Heriot, I was to let you know that we think of starting at twelve o'clock to make the tour of the lake. She hoped you might be inclined to come with us."

There was a certain hurry and nervousness in the girl's manner which Vidal did not fail to notice: but he had been too much pleased at hearing of the stranger's imminent departure for England to care whether he was or was not a suitor for Miss Irvine's hand.

"I should enjoy it of all things," he answered, heartily; "and I am sure Heriot will like to come." He added, with a disingenuousness of which he ought to have been ashamed: "The face of your friend who was here just now seems to be familiar to me—and yet I am not sure. His name isn't—isn't Parker, is it?"

"No," answered Miss Irvine, calmly; "his name isn't Parker." She had raised her eyes, with just the faintest shade of surprise in them, to those of her questioner. She did not exhibit any of the embarrassment which he had half expected, and he felt that it was he who was looking rather foolish.

"Oh!" he murmured, confusedly; "I—I thought perhaps it was."

"He is a Mr. Wilbraham, whom we met last winter," Miss Irvine said. "Do you know him?"

"No; I must have been mistaken. One person is so like another."

"So papa always says; and perhaps, now that you mention it, Mr. Wilbraham's is rather a common type of face. Would you care to walk as far as the bridge with me? I think I had better go and find my mother."

Vidal made use of no conventional figure of speech when he replied that he should be delighted. Nothing, indeed, could have been more delightful to him than Miss Irvine's society; and the matter-of-course way in which she offered it convinced him that his first impression of her had been correct, and that her beauty was equalled only by her simplicity.

"I am so glad that we are going to stay a day or two here," she said, after they had proceeded a few yards on their way. "I suppose we should have been starting now, if we had made up our minds to go straight home. How horrid it would have been!"

"You said last night that you didn't care whether you stayed or not," remarked Vidal.

She laughed. "Well—I couldn't tell that it was going to be such a fine day. Besides, all sorts of things may happen to prevent one from enjoying an excursion. Tiresome people may turn up, for instance; and there is no possibility of escape from them on board a steamer."

This was most satisfactory. "Tiresome people" obviously meant Mr. Wilbraham; and since it seemed to be implied that he had turned up unexpectedly, there was no occasion to harbour any further feeling of malice against the poor man. Vidal's spirits, which had hitherto been a trifle depressed, now fully recovered their tone; and if his companion did not find him clever and amusing, she must have been singularly insensible to qualities which had made this fortunate fellow a general favourite, from his boyhood up.

So these two passed on through sunlight and shade till they reached the old covered bridge, where Mrs. Irvine, with "Murray" in her hands and her chin in the air, was laboriously examining the quaint triangular paintings overhead, and endeavouring to decipher the crabbed German characters of the legend which each scene bore, inscribed beneath it.

"Oh, here you are at last, Clare!" she exclaimed. "And you have brought Mr. Vidal with you, which is such a comfort, because I am sure he understands German better than I do. Now, Mr. Vidal, will you explain this to me? It is most interesting, and Murray gives one no sort of help. 'Scenes relating to the history of the town,' he says, or something of that kind. Just enough to excite one's curiosity without gratifying it, you know."

"Well, Mrs. Irvine," answered Vidal, with great presence of mind, "the fact is that some of the subjects are not quite—that is, it is better not to inquire into them too closely."

"Good gracious me, you don't say so!" exclaimed the good lady. "I should never have supposed that from the look of them. Clare, we had better seek out your father and keep him until the boat starts, or he will be sure to wander off somewhere and lose himself. Never mind the pictures: they have no artistic merit—not a bit worth looking at."

With that she bustled away, carrying off her daughter, who, indeed, had not been looking at the pictures, but at the rushing blue-green waters of the Reuss beneath; and so Vidal got home to breakfast.

The prospect of spending six or seven consecutive hours on board a lake steamer in company which demands a more or less incessant flow of conversation is one from which the generality of mankind may well shrink appalled. Silence is the prerogative of intimacy; to acquaintances of recent date you are bound to go on talking; and unless you are blessed with an exceptionally fertile brain, the result is but too certain. Economise your stock of subjects as you may, it must needs run dry at last; you search in vain for fresh ones; then a numbing sense of lassitude steals over you, and finally comes the inevitable moment when Nature asserts herself, and you yawn undisguisedly in the face of your neighbour, whose jaws fly open in ready sympathy. But there are certain persons who are strangers to such dismal experiences, and Adrian Vidal was one of them. Solitude often bored him; society scarcely ever. He took a real interest, not only in humanity at large, but in almost every individual whom he encountered; whence, no doubt, arose his great popularity. Like Abou ben Adhem, he might have cried, "Write me as one who loves his fellow-men," and the just system of reciprocity which prevails in all human affairs caused him to be beloved by them in return.

Therefore, neither he nor the lady to whom he devoted himself through the greater part of that spring day found the time long or wished for a change of partners. Miss Irvine, it is true, was not very difficult to get on with; for she was predisposed in favour of the young author, to whom, shortly after the boat had left the quay, she began to speak of those literary ambitions which he might reasonably be supposed to cherish. She had not her mother's unflattering vagueness of impression as to Vidal's past achievements; she was well aware that he had as yet produced no book, charming or otherwise; but Heriot had shown her some of his articles, and these she had read with the reverence and admiration for printed matter which belongs to youth.

"Do you know," she said, "you are the first author I have ever met? I think, if I were a man, I would rather be an author than anything else."

"But it is not necessary to be a man in order to be an author," remarked Vidal, "and I am afraid, if the truth were known, most men are only authors—at least, novelists—because they can't be anything else."

"I don't think you can mean that," said Miss Irvine—and in fact it is probable that he did not. "You surely would not place Dickens or Thackeray below a successful doctor or lawyer?"

"No; but perhaps the rank and file of our calling are rather below the rank and file of others. At all events, that is the common opinion. We are a discredited class, because the immense appetite for fiction causes hundreds of novels to pay their way which have no business to pay their way. Novel-writing is like every other art: it looks so easy and it is so difficult! Only in other arts the failure is more apparent and more decisive; so that those who have mistaken their vocation find it out sooner."

"I suppose the great thing is to be very much in earnest over it," said the girl, thoughtfully.

"Exactly; that is the one indispensable condition. Art won't accept a divided allegiance. You must give yourself up to her wholly and entirely, or she will never allow you a chance of conquering her."

"Do you think art the only thing worth living for, then?"

Mr. Vidal was not prepared to go quite so far as that. He explained that he had been speaking only of a temporary self-surrender, and that he was well aware that life contained possibilities of happiness such as art could never bestow. But it would be hardly fair upon him to record any more of the sentiments to which he gave utterance upon this occasion. When a man is falling more and more deeply in love every minute, he must needs say things which would sound supremely ridiculous to an eavesdropper; and if Vidal was a little high-flown in his talk, it must be admitted that he met with a good deal of encouragement. Miss Irvine evidently did not find him ridiculous. She ignored his occasional lapses into sentimentality, but seemed willing to admit him to terms of confidential intimacy. She questioned him upon the subject of his family, and told him about her own home in Cornwall, and her six brothers, and the difficulty that there had been in providing that stalwart half-dozen with education and a start in life. "For we are not particularly well off," she added, simply.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Irvine harangued the patient Heriot; and Mr. Irvine dozed in the shade; and the steamer pursued its zigzag course, crossing and recrossing the lake, passing beneath wooded cliffs, and stopping at villages where cattle were taken on board or disembarked, and where the huge hotels and pensions were as yet untenanted; until at last Flüelen was reached, and Vidal and Miss Irvine exclaimed, "Already!" in one breath.

Flüelen does not offer many attractions to the casual visitor; but Vidal long preserved, and perhaps still preserves, a grateful memory of the place. For the hour which had to be spent there before the steamer started on its return voyage proved one of the pleasantest that had fallen to his lot in a life composed largely of pleasant hours. Mr. Irvine expressed his intention of drinking a cup of tea quietly at the inn; and his wife, after consulting Murray, found that she could keep him company without neglecting her duty. "If you want to walk about, Clare," she said, "I daresay Mr. Heriot or Mr. Vidal will be kind enough to look after you."

To this appeal Heriot did not see fit to make any response; and thus the conversation which had begun on board the steamer was continued with even less danger of interruption. By this time Vidal's subjugation was an accomplished fact, and he knew it and gloried in it. In Miss Irvine he saw, not merely a girl of singular beauty and charm of manner, but far more than that—nothing less, indeed, than the Ideal Woman. He recognised in her the embodiment of all the virtues which are supposed to be especially feminine—purity of mind, charity, sympathy with the afflicted, devotion to her family. It must be confessed that she obtained this recognition upon tolerably easy terms, and that Vidal was satisfied to draw inferences where people of more mature years might have demanded tangible proofs; but perhaps in this he did not differ greatly from other lovers; nor was it very wonderful that such simple things as a few kind words spoken to a cripple, and some coppers bestowed upon a beggar at the church door should have served him as a foot upon which to mould a Hercules. Moreover, as it happened, he was not very far wrong in his inductions, and if he could have made inquiries down in Cornwall he would have heard from many mouths a description of Clare Irvine enthusiastic enough to have fulfilled even his high expectations. That there might be nothing wanting in her, she had a touch of melancholy in her manner at times, and a dreamy look in her eyes, which seemed to suggest unsatisfied yearnings. It would not have been consonant with Vidal's conception of her that she should have been altogether happy, although he had not yet quite reached the length of picturing himself as the one thing lacking to give her life completeness.

After they had wandered through the streets of the little town into the country beyond, and when the bell of the steamer had warned them that it was time to retrace their steps, she asked Vidal to gather a handful of wild crocuses for her; whereupon he begged for one of the flowers for himself. "I should like to have some memento of to-day," he said.

The girl glanced at him for a moment with a grave and rather startled look, and then laughed, as if not wishing to make too much of a trifle. "Yes, it has been a very pleasant day," she answered; but did not give him the flower.

He was rather sorry that he had committed the indiscretion of asking for it when he perceived the effect produced by his request; for after that she became perceptibly less communicative and contrived so to arrange matters that he had to listen to Mrs. Irvine's descriptions of Roman society the whole way back to Lucerne. Disappointing as this was, Vidal submitted to his fate with resignation and good humour; and perhaps it was just as well for him that he did so. Talking him over later in the evening, with Heriot, Mrs. Irvine pronounced him to be one of the most delightful and intelligent young men she had ever met, adding that she had a very great mind to prolong their sojourn at Lucerne by another day, as he had entreated her to do.

Heriot looked a little doubtful, and said, "Well, if you think it would be wise"—; but as Mrs. Irvine did not understand him, and as he hardly liked to be more explicit, the extra day was granted, and an excursion to the Lake of Zug added several more hours of sunshine and bliss to the credit side of Vidal's account with time.

But on the third day, unhappily, the sunshine vanished. The mountains were shrouded in woolly clouds; across the grey lake showers came sweeping at intervals, and only one of the party had the hardihood to assert that it would be worth while to go up the Rigi in such weather.

"You see," Vidal said, "it isn't for the sake of the mountain, which is a cockneyfied sort of place at the best of times; and the view—well, of course, there are people who admire a panoramic view, but I really don't think we need regret the loss of that very much. What I am sure that you would regret most deeply, Mrs. Irvine, would be to have missed seeing the railway. Gradients of one in four—just think of that!"

"Can't we sit still and revel in the thought of a gradient of one in four without getting wet through?" suggested Heriot.

"My dear fellow, it's one of those things that must be seen to be realised. Besides, the railway carriages are covered."

Mrs. Irvine showed signs of wavering. "The worst of it is that one is sure to meet such heaps of friends who have done it and who will pretend that it was the most exciting experience of their lives," she murmured.

"Exactly so," said Vidal; "and after all, the only alternative is to stay indoors all day. For my part, I shouldn't be at all surprised if it were to clear up in the afternoon."

His representations were strengthened by a timely break in the clouds, and also—somewhat unexpectedly—by Mr. Irvine, whose soul was thirsting after an illuminated missal which he had unearthed in a curiosity shop, and who wished to be removed from temptation. The consequence was that, although the weather became worse instead of improving, the strongest will carried the day, and five travellers in mackintoshes and waterproofs disembarked at Weggis that afternoon. All that Heriot had been able to obtain, by way of compromise, was that, since there could be nothing whatever to be gained by ascending to the top of the mountain, they should content themselves with going as far as Kaltbad and returning by the next train. Thus, he said, they might hope to accomplish their purpose with a minimum of misery.

As for Vidal, he saw no question of misery in the matter. It is true that he did not derive any particular satisfaction from standing under the dripping awning of the steamer, nor even from the curious sensation of being dragged in a railway carriage up an incline steeper than the steepest of high roads, but what he thought was that, when once they had reached their destination, Miss Irvine might perhaps be disposed to take a short walk, upon the chance of catching a glimpse of view through the clouds, and he insisted a great deal upon the probability that at a certain height the rain would be replaced by mist.

Both of these expectations were justified by the event. At Kaltbad, where there is a gigantic hotel, empty in the month of May, but crowded later in the season, nothing worse was encountered than a nipping cold air and a dense white fog; and when the three elders had grouped themselves round the stove, expressing their unalterable determination not to move thence until the train should come to take them down, it required but a very little exercise of diplomacy to carry out the remainder of the programme.

(To be continued.)

The steamer Duke of Buccleuch left Gravesend on the 1st inst. with 88 single men, 67 single women, and 101 families, making a total of 256 souls, equal to 230 statute adults.

The season of Christmas at the Brompton Hospital was commenced by a special Confirmation held by the Bishop of London in the chapel attached to the hospital. About twenty patients were presented to the Bishop by the Rev. J. Hughes-Owen, the Chaplain, and the scene was an impressive one. In the evening a charming performance of Christmas carols and other music appropriate to the season was given by Mr. Malcolm Lawson and a party of friends. The Christmas morning was ushered in by a number of the nurses perambulating the different galleries at six o'clock singing appropriate hymns. The galleries and wards in the two buildings had been tastefully decorated with evergreens, formed into wreaths and festoons. The chapel was also tastefully decorated by Mrs. Hughes-Owen and others. The evening of Christmas Day was passed by the patients with music, carols, songs, and games, Miss Abbott (lady superintendent), Dr. Waugh (medical officer), and all the other resident doctors being indefatigable in their exertions to promote the happiness of the invalids. On Tuesday evening there was a distribution of gifts to all the inmates from the Christmas-trees, provided by the Misses Heddy, assisted by a few friends. The trees were placed in the concert-room in the new building, which was crowded by the patients and nurses.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will of Mr. Christopher Beckett Denison, late of The Old Bank, Leeds, and No. 41, Upper Grosvenor-street, London, Deputy Chairman of the Great Northern Railway Company (who died suddenly, in Ireland, on Oct. 30 last), has been proved. The personal estate amounts to upwards of £380,000. The testator bequeaths to his trustees and executors, Edmund Beckett Faber, Henry Oakley, and Francis Charles Greenfield, all his real and personal estate, upon trust, for sale, and out of the sale to pay his debts and a certain legacy of £5000, and then to set apart £50,000, to be held upon a special trust; and the testator directs his trustees to divide the residue of his estate into ten equal parts, one-tenth part of which is to be held upon the special trust, and the remaining nine-tenth parts the will expressly declares shall be considered undisposed of.

The will (dated Oct. 28, 1881), with two codicils (dated Dec. 29, 1883, and Jan. 15, 1884), of the Rev. William Thursby, late of Ormerod House, near Burnley, Lancashire, and of No. 6, Brunswick-terrace, Hove, Brighton, who died on Oct. 10 last, was proved on the 6th ult. by Thomas Hughes, Q.C., Henry Paulson Bowling, and Frederick John Graut, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to upwards of £254,000. The testator leaves £14,000 each to his sons James Leigh and Arthur Harvey; £10,000, the advowson of Berg Aptou, Norfolk, all his divinity books, and a silver inkstand to his son William Ford; £9000 to his son Piers; £6000 to his son Richard Hasell; £22,500, his house Elfinsward, Hayward's Heath, and his horses and carriages, to his daughter Sophia Charlotte; his house at Brighton and the furniture and effects, with some exceptions, are directed to be sold and the proceeds divided between all his children, except his sons John Hardy and Richard Hasell; £6000, the residue of his real estate, certain furniture and effects, and his cattle and farming stock to his son John Hardy; and there are other legacies and provisions. He directs one annual subscription to be paid by his trustees to all the charitable institutions to which he was a subscriber. The residue of the personalty is to be divided between all his children except his son John Hardy.

The will (dated Oct. 23, 1883), with two codicils (dated May 17 and Sept 23, 1884), of Mr. Henry Gardiner, late of Essendene, Caterham, Surrey, who died on Oct. 5 last, was proved on the 10th ult. by Henry John Gardiner, the son, George Bernard Harvey Drew, and Robert Gresley Hall, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £70,000. The testator gives to his wife, Mrs. Margaret Gardiner, £500, all his furniture, plate, books, effects, and pictures (except some paintings specifically bequeathed to each of his children), and an annuity of £1200, during life or widowhood, to be reduced to £600 on her marriage again; he also gives her a right of residence at Essendene, and £200 per annum to keep up the property; upon trust for his daughter Ellen, £14,000, the same sum as he settled on each of his other children on their respective marriages; and to his executors £200 each. The residue of his property he leaves to all his children.

The will (dated Aug. 18, 1877), with a codicil (dated April 4, 1879), of Mr. John George Joy, late of No. 112, St. George's-road, Southwark, who died on Nov. 9 last, was proved on the 9th ult. by George Joy, William Joy, and James Joy, the sons, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £46,000. The testator bequeaths legacies to his children and to his three sisters; and as to the residue of his estate, he gives one fourth to each of his said three sons; and one fourth, upon trust, for his daughter, Mrs. Sarah Masters.

The will (dated Jan. 3, 1883) of Mr. John Fyson, late of Soham, in the county of Cambridge, who died on Aug. 4 last, was proved on the 5th ult. by Robert Fyson, the brother, Alfred Slack, the nephew, and James Button, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £29,000. The testator bequeaths £200 to the Rector and Churchwardens of the parish of Snailwell, Cambridgeshire, upon trust, to apply the dividends in the purchase of coals to be distributed at Christmas among the poor of the said parish; and legacies to his sister, brother, nephews, nieces, and others. The residue of his property is to be divided between his brother, Robert, and his sister, Mary Anne.

The will (dated Aug. 17, 1883) of Mr. George Bentham, late of No. 25, Wilton-place, Knightsbridge, who died on Sept. 10 last, was proved on the 11th ult. by Sir Joseph Dalton Hooker and the Right Hon. Sir Nathaniel Lindley, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £23,000. The testator bequeaths £8000 to Madame Wallon, the grand-daughter of his late sister; £2000 to Sir H. J. J. Brydges, Bart., the brother of his late wife; £1000 each to the Linnean Society of London and the Royal Society Scientific Relief Fund; and legacies to his executors, trustees, servants, and others. The residue of his real and personal estate is to be held, upon trust, to apply the same in preparing and publishing botanical works, or in the purchase of books or specimens for the botanical establishment at Kew; or in such other manner as his trustees may consider best for the promotion of botanical science.

The will (dated Sept. 28, 1878) of Mr. Charles Spencer Scrase Dickins, late of Newells, Lower Beeding, Sussex, who died on May 1 last, at Cannes, was proved on the 5th ult. by Charles Robert Scrase Dickins, the son, one of the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to upwards of £21,000. The testator leaves £300, and all his wines, consumable stores, horses and carriages, to his wife, Mrs. Anna Maria Scrase Dickins; the household furniture, plate, pictures, books, and other articles and things at his dwelling house, to his wife, for life, or widowhood, and then to his said son; all his real estate in England and Wales to the same uses as the real estate settled under the will of his late father; and his real estate in Ireland, and all his mortgages, stocks, shares, money, and securities for money, upon trust, for his wife, for life, or until she shall marry again, and then for his issue (except his said son and his daughter, Mary Caroline, otherwise provided for) as she shall appoint. The residue of his personal estate he gives to his son, the said Charles Robert Scrase Dickins.

The will (dated July 21, 1884) of Sir Richard George Augustus Levinge, Bart., late of Knock Drin Castle, Mullingar, Ireland, who died on Sept. 28 last, at Brussels, was proved in London on the 10th ult. by Richard Bayley, one of the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £10,000. The testator leaves Knock Drin Castle, with the furniture, plate, pictures, horses, carriages, and farming stock, and all other his real estate, to his brother, and successor in the baronetcy, Vere Henry, for life; and, if he shall leave issue, to his heirs, absolutely. There are several legacies to his executor, servants, and others; and the residue of his property, including his leasehold house in Chester-square, he gives to his brother Harry Carlyon.

The Rev. C. P. Meehan, Roman Catholic priest, has been offered £150 by Mr. Gladstone out of the Royal Bounty Fund, in recognition of his services as an Irish historian.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications relating to this department of the Paper should be addressed to the Editor, and have the word "Chess" written on the envelope.

J J M (Weymouth).—The variation you suggest in the solution of No. 2123 is a very simple one. After the moves 1. Q to K 6th, P to R 3rd, White continues with 2. R to Q B 4th, and 3. Q mates.

W E P (Philadelphia).—Thanks for your note. The withdrawal of one three-move problem is noted; the other appeared last week.

Castle (Edinburgh).—Try No. 2126 again. The oversight is on your part, not on the author's.

C P (Tooting).—Please accept our congratulations, and thanks for good wishes.

Emmo (Darlington).—Thanks; the problem shall soon appear.

Toz (Manchester).—The problem appears below. We shall take an early opportunity of referring to your chess "labels."

W A (Old Romney).—We have not had time to examine your proposed solution of Mr. Vansittart's Problem, but it does not agree with that worked out by ourselves. The latter we believe to be the author's, but from internal evidence only.

Hereward (Oxford).—Please read answer to "W. A." Many of our solvers have been "posed" by Mr. Shinkman's Problem, but you will find it an instructive chess study.

J G (Bradford).—Very pleased to hear from you. The gamelet is very acceptable.

Correct Solutions of Problem No. 2123 received from W E Tinney (Philadelphia), E L G; of No. 2125 from D W (Aberdeenshire); A Chapman and Carl Friedleben; of No. 2126 from Shadforth, J R (Edinburgh), R Worters (Canterbury), T G (Ware), E L G, Alpha, Jumbo, E Louden, Plevna, Emmo (Darlington), A Nevin, D W (Aberdeenshire); of Problem from Chess Strategy, from D W (Aberdeenshire), George J Yeale; of Herr Seeka's Problem from J A B; of all the Christmas Chess Nuts from R H Brooks; of L'Hermet's, McArthur's, and Shinkman's Problems from Rev. W Anderson (Old Romney); of L'Hermet's, McArthur's and the End Game from L Vander Haeghen; of the same and the Sui-mate from Hereward; of the Sui-mate from J G (Edinburgh); of L'Hermet's Problems from Alfred Castellain Junior (Ouchy, Switzerland).

Correct Solutions of Problem No. 2127 received from C Darrach, H Lucas, A M Colborne, W Hillier, Emmo (Darlington), G W Law, H Wardell, R L Southwell, G S Oldfield, E Casella (Paris), M O'Halloran, Fanny H Levy (Edmonton), E Louden, Jumbo, R Grey, D W Keil, B R Wood, A C Hunt, T Greenbank, A Lion (Canonbury), J T W, Ben Nevis, L Sharswood, W Warren, L Falcon (Antwerp), F and G Howitt, A W Scrutton, H Reeve, Jupiter Junior, S Lowndes, Aaron Harper, R Tweddell, L L Greenaway, Rev. W Anderson (Old Romney), Hereward, L Wyman, W Dewse, James Pilkington, R J Vines, F Ferris, C W Milsom, Dominican, T Waters, G Haskinson, Shadforth, N H Mullen, R Ingersoll, T H Holdron, Carl Friedleben, and Ernest Sharswood.

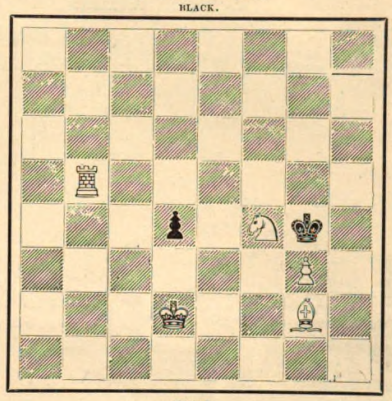
Note.—This problem cannot be solved by way of 1. P to R3th, or 1. P to K Kt4th, as many correspondents have supposed.

SOLUTIONS.

HERR MAKOVSKY'S PROBLEM.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Q to Kt 7th	P to Q 5th (best)
2. Q to Q R 7th	K or P moves
3. Q or R mates accordingly.

HERR SEEKA'S PROBLEM.



WHITE.	BLACK.
1. K to K 2nd	K to Kt 2nd*
2. Q takes P (ch)	K takes Q
3. B to B 8th. Mate.

* If Black play 1. K takes P, White continues with 2. Q to B 8th (ch), and mates next move. The other variations should present no difficulty to the student.

PROBLEM No. 2129.

By "Toz" (Manchester).

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

Played recently between Mr. Mortimer and the Rev. G. A. MacDonnell.

(Ruy Lopez.)

WHITE (Mr. M.)	BLACK (Mr. M'D.)	WHITE (Mr. M.)	BLACK (Mr. M'D.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	14. K to R sq	P to R 3rd
2. Kt to Q B 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd	15. B to K R 4th	P to Kt 4th
3. B to Kt 5th	B to B 4th	16. B to Kt 3rd	P to K R 4th
Not so safe as either 3. P to Q R 3rd or 3. Kt to B 3rd.		17. P to K B 3rd	P to R 5th
		18. B to K sq	B to K 3rd
4. P to Q 3rd		19. B to Q 2nd	Kt to R 4th
4. P to Q B 3rd is the best line of play here.		20. P to Q 4th	P takes P
		21. P takes P	B takes B
4.	Q to K 2nd	22. Q takes B	P to B 3rd
5. Castles	Kt to B 3rd	23. Q R to B sq	R to Q B sq
6. Kt to B 3rd		24. Q to Q 3rd
The "Four Knights' Game"!		Intending to advance the K B P probably, but Black gives him no time for the manœuvre.
6.	P to Q R 3rd
7. B to R 4th	P to Q Kt 4th	24.	Kt to Kt 6th (ch)
8. B to Kt 3rd	Kt to Q 5th	25. Kt takes Kt	P takes Kt
9. Kt takes Kt	B takes Kt	26. P to K R 3rd	Q to Q 2nd
10. B to Kt 5th		Threatening mate in a few moves by R takes R P (ch), &c.
10. Kt to K 2nd, with the view of pushing on the centre Pawns, seems a preferable line of play.		27. P to K 5th
		Inadequate, but we see no good move for White in this position.
10	P to B 3rd
11. R to Kt sq		27.	R takes P (ch)
The Q Kt P being now undefended, he is obliged to make this move before retreating the Kt to K 2nd.		28. K to Kt sq	B takes P (ch)
		29. B to K 3rd	B takes B (ch)
11.	P to Q 3rd	30. Q takes B	R to R 8th (ch)
12. Kt to K 2nd	B to Kt 5th	White resigned, because Black mates in two more moves.
13. P to Q B 3rd	B to Kt 3rd

We had looked forward to the Christmas holidays being enlivened by the progress of the match which, as we have already announced, has been arranged between Messrs. Throld and Wayte. The match has been postponed, however, until the week commencing the 19th inst., when it will be played at the City of London Chess Club.

The week referred to in the above paragraph will be an eventful one in the chess world. Besides the match between Messrs. Thorold and Wayte, now fixed for that date, there will be another battle between the St. George's and City of London Chess Clubs, and also a meeting of the members of the newly-organised British Chess Association. At the latter, a code of rules, drawn up by the Council, will be submitted to the members for approval.

We have received from Messrs. Robert Clarke and Co., of Cincinnati, a handsome volume containing a reprint of the last edition of Mr. Cook's "Synopsis of the Chess Openings," and an "American Supplement" containing "American Inventions" in the openings, together with fresh analysis since the publication of Mr. Cook's work in 1882. To English readers, who already possess a copy of the "Synopsis," the American part of this volume will be of great interest, and we can cordially recommend the work to all English-speaking students of the game. It is edited by Mr. J. W. Miller, of the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, with loving care in the one part and conspicuous ability in the other.

Mr. Alderman John O'Connor, Nationalist, was sworn in on the 1st inst. Lord Mayor of Dublin for the ensuing year. The Mayors of Cork and Limerick were installed the same day—Mr. Stephen O'Mara as Mayor of Limerick and Alderman Madden of Cork. Both gentlemen are Nationalists, and were elected upon that ground. After being installed, the new Mayor of Limerick declared that, if the Government attempted to levy the obnoxious police tax on the ratepayers, he should advise them to resist payment.

OBITUARY.

SIR ROBERT BRISCO, BART.

Sir Robert Brisco, third Baronet, of Crofton Hall, Cumberland, High Sheriff of that county in 1862, died on the 23rd ult., at his seat near Wigton, aged seventy-six. He was the eldest son of Sir Wastel Brisco, second Baronet, and succeeded to the title at his father's death, in 1862. He married, July 10, 1832, Annie Drewry, daughter of Mr. George Rimington, of Tyne Field House, and had by her, who died Aug. 14, 1875, six sons and four daughters. The eldest son, now Sir Musgrave Horton Brisco, fourth Baronet, was born Aug. 11, 1833, and married, in June, 1867, Mary Elizabeth, widow of Captain R. Newsham Pedder, 10th Hussars, and eldest daughter of Sir W. H. Feilden, Bart., by whom he has issue.

FRANCES, LADY HASTINGS.

Frances, Lady Hastings, died on the 30th ult., at her residence, Franklands, Sussex, in her fifty-fifth year. She was daughter of Mr. T. Cosham, and married, first, May 19, 1860, Jacob, Lord Hastings, of Melton Constable, Norfolk, who died in 1871; and secondly, Sept. 16, 1873, Major Heane, of Barnewood, Gloucestershire.

MR. HARTOPP.

Mr. Edward Bourchier Hartopp, of Dalby Hall, in the county of Leicester, died on the 31st ult., at 21, Thurloe-square. He was born Dec. 14, 1808, the elder son of Mr. Edward Hartopp, of Little Dalby, by Anna Eleanora, his wife, eldest daughter of Sir Bourchier Wrey, Bart., and was grandson of Mr. Edward Hartopp-Wigley, of Little Dalby, by the Hon. Juliana, his wife, daughter of George, Lord Carbery, through which lady a coheirship to the Barony of Vaux descended to the Hartopps. Mr. E. B. Hartopp, who was educated at Eton and at Christ Church, Oxford, served as High Sheriff of Leicestershire in 1833, and sat in Parliament for the northern division of that county from 1859-68. He married, 1834, Honoria, daughter of Major-General William Gent, by whom he leaves issue.

REV. DR. BLAKENEY.

The Rev. Richard Paul Blakeney, D.D., Vicar of Bridlington, Rural Dean and Canon of York, died on the 31st ult., at his rectory-house, aged sixty-four. His family, originally of Norfolk, became settled in Ireland, and Dr. Blakeney graduated at Trinity College, Dublin, in the first class of the Divinity Tripos. He translated and published extracts from the "Moral Theology" of Alphonsus Liguori and other works, the principal of which was "The History and Interpretations of the Book of Common Prayer."

We have also to record the deaths of—

Major-General Gibbes Rigaud, late 60th Royal Rifles, Hon. M.A. Magdalen College, suddenly, at Oxford, on the 1st inst., aged sixty-four.

Major-General Mortimer Robert Sandys Whitmore, formerly 7th Royal Fusiliers, son of the late General Sir George Whitmore, K.C.H., Colonel Commander, on the 30th ult.

Doris, Lady Behrens, wife of Sir Jacob Behrens, and daughter of Mr. Joseph Hohenemser, of Mannheim, on the 31st ult., at Springfield House, Bradford, aged sixty-five.

Mr. Alfred H. Baily, the proprietor of Baily's Magazine, a well-known sporting man of the old school, on the 31st ult., at his residence at South Hampstead, aged seventy-six.

The Ven. Thomas FitzGerald French, Archdeacon of Killaloe and Rector of Castleconnell, third son of the late Mr. Savage French, of Cuskinny, county Cork, on the 30th ult., aged fifty-nine.

The Rev. William Cook, D.D., a well-known and esteemed minister of the Methodist New Connexion body, in his seventy-ninth year. He was author of "Christian Theology, Explained and Defended," "The Bible, its Trials and its Triumphs," and other works.

Captain Nicholas W. Patrick Brophy, accidentally drowned in Egypt. He served with the Black Watch in the Ashantee Campaign of 1874 and in the Egyptian War of 1882, taking part in the battle of Tel-el-Kebir. We hope to give a Portrait of Captain Brophy.

Dr. Andrew Findlater, who had for many years been associated with the Messrs. Chambers, of Edinburgh, on the 1st inst., aged seventy-four. His name will be best known in connection with "Chambers's Encyclopædia," which he edited, and afterwards revised. He also published manuals of languages, physical geography, and astronomy. He received the degree of LL.D. from the University of Aberdeen in 1864.

LIFE-BOAT SERVICES IN 1884.

During the past twelve months, the services of the life-boats of the Royal National Life-Boat Institution resulted in the saving of 621 lives, the greater part of which must have perished had it not been for the promptness and daring of the brave crews of the life-boats. Had we space, we might give a description of the grand deeds of heroism performed by these sea heroes at these services, many of which entailed great suffering and exposure on the gallant fellows. One of the last life-boat services of the year was that performed by the Honourable Artillery Company boat, which was only stationed by the National Life-Boat Institution at Walton-on-the-Naze about two months since. She was launched, through a heavy surf, on the evening of Christmas Day, in reply to signals from the Sunk light-ship. She first proceeded to the light-vessel, a distance of ten miles, and ascertained the position of the wreck, which was found to be eight or nine miles away on the Long Sand. At daybreak, with some difficulty, the life-boat was veered under the ship's jib-boom, it not being possible to get nearer; and it was then discovered that the vessel was the Deike Rickmers, of Bremerhaven, and that there were twenty-five persons on board. By means of a rope from the end of the jib-boom, they were all got into the boat, the captain being the last to leave. There were then forty men in the life-boat, and great risk was incurred in crossing the Long Sand, the sea being in a perfect ferment. Happily, however, the boat acted splendidly, passed safely through all dangers, and arrived at her station on the evening of Boxing Day, after an absence of twenty-five hours.

In addition to these invaluable services in saving life, no less than seventeen vessels were, by means of the life-boats, rescued in 1884 from being totally wrecked or were brought by them safely into harbour. Further, the life-boats were launched 142 times in reply to distress signals, but returned to shore, the crews having jeopardised their lives in vain, because the signals had been either made in error or help was not required. During the year the society also granted rewards for the rescue of 159 lives by means of shore-boats and fishing-boats, so that the grand total of 780 lives has been saved in the last twelve months through its instrumentality, bringing up the number of lives saved since the foundation of the institution to 31,434. In order to carry on this great work and to maintain in efficiency their fleet of 284 boats, the committee make a strong appeal to the public for help, feeling assured that that appeal will not be made in vain.

Deck Plan.

THE BRITISH NAVY: H.M.S. AGAMEMNON.

SHORTENED LEAVE: "I'VE PLEDGED MY HEART TO POLL."

OLD MASTERS AT BURLINGTON HOUSE.

It is now close upon eighty years since the British Institution became the purchasers of Mr. Boydell's Shakspeare Gallery in Pall-mall, and inaugurated that series of exhibitions of pictures by old masters, which was subsequently taken up by the Royal Academy. The British Institution, which in a great measure owed its existence to Lord De Tabley, was originally founded on what was known as the "exclusive" principle, for the exhibition of painters resident within the United Kingdom; but this rule only applied to the Spring exhibitions—the later Summer display being formed of the works by old masters, both home and foreign, borrowed from those who were disposed to educate popular taste. In spite of the difficulties of transport in those days, and the still greater obstacles arising from the jealousy of the patrons of art, the summer exhibitions, as the catalogues show, were often very creditable; and, at any rate, it must be placed to their credit that they familiarised the public with works which would otherwise have remained unknown, and accustomed their owners to bear without murmuring the steady recurrence of appeals to their good-nature and liberality. Royal Academicians, from the commencement, figured in considerable force in the council of the British Institution; and it was therefore only natural that they should as a body feel some interest in keeping alive a custom which had received the cordial support of many of their predecessors. Since 1870, until quite recently, they have practically enjoyed a monopoly, and it must be admitted that they have exercised it with zeal and discretion. Of late years especially there has been a manifest desire on the part of Sir Frederick Leighton and his colleagues to keep up to the high standard first reached, and, if possible, to show each year an advance upon its predecessor. The display for 1885 quite bears out this view. The number of pictures is small—scarcely more than 250; but of these nearly every one deserves special notice, and of a character quite unsuited to the space at our disposal. Our readers must therefore be content with certain general ideas of the contents of the four rooms of Burlington House in which these treasures are assembled, and endeavour to find an opportunity of deciding for themselves the respective merits of individual works.

Where there is so much to be proud of and to be grateful for, it may seem ungracious to begin by finding fault. But the sooner our regret is expressed, the better. After the first stir of pleasure at the sight of the collection has passed away, it is impossible to put away altogether the sense that for a second time the feeling of jealousy of a rival exhibition has prompted the application for some of the pictures. Sir Coutts Lindsay made no secret of his wish to give the public as complete an idea of Gainsborough's work as was possible; and there is no reason to suppose that owners of Gainsboroughs would be less liberal towards Sir Coutts Lindsay than towards Sir Frederick Leighton. The ten or twelve Gainsboroughs at Burlington House would have sufficed to make the show at the Grosvenor Gallery absolutely unrivalled—for, with the exception of his Miss Linley, all his most important works would then have been grouped together. A similar manœuvre last year divided the best from the second best works of Sir Joshua Reynolds, and prevented Sir Coutts Lindsay from carrying out to its utmost his good intentions. The managers of the Royal Academy Exhibition would have found but little difficulty in filling up the spaces occupied by Gainsborough's works, and the Grosvenor would have had, amongst others, probably the finest accessible works of that artist—the portraits of "Squire Hillard and His Wife" (195), which is the glory of the large Gallery at Burlington House.

As it is in this gallery that the most important works are displayed, we may as well commence with discussing its contents. Hogarth's "Southwark Fair" (144), lent by the trustees of the Duke of Newcastle, shows with marvellous realism the boisterous amusements of our forefathers. On the raised stage a play is being acted before an audience, whose habits are depicted with lifelike fidelity, and their follies exposed with keen humour. Although it is eminently a story with a moral drawn from low life, there is nothing vulgar, either in the conception or treatment of the scene—as too often is the case when Dutch artists deal with the pastimes of the people. Next came four of the works from Blenheim, of which the world has heard so much during the past year. Two by Rubens—"Venus and Adonis" (146) and "The Departure from Sodom" (148)—of which we need not regret the loss to our National Gallery. But this cannot be said of the other two. The portrait of "Anne of Austria" (147), in a low black dress against green curtains, is a noble work, but far outshone by the group of "The Duchess of Buckingham and Her Children" (145), by Van Dyck. Like her real or supposed rival, Anne of Austria, the Duchess is painted in a black dress seated; her two sons are standing beside her, also in dark dresses, and on the right is her daughter, in a white satin dress, holding a flower in her hand. At the opposite end of the room is Lord Lothian's portrait of "Charles I.," by the same artist (183), advancing on horseback through an archway, which, festooned with curtains, forms a setting to the noble picture. The spirit and construction of the picture are alike unimpeachable, but the colour is somewhat slatey and poor. Before reaching this, however, we pass a charming "Portrait of a Lady" (153) by Bernard Van Orley, in a black dress and fur cloak and close-fitting black cap; a work which on the present occasion offers greater interest than usual, since it permits a comparison of his work with that of his contemporary, Mabuse, whose chef-d'œuvre, "The Adoration of the Magi" (230), in the adjoining room, is one of the chief attractions of the year. The large canvas by Murillo, "The Virgin and Child in Glory" (164), is somewhat less ecstatic than many of the numerous replicas which this artist reproduced with such facility: the Virgin's robe—of deep crimson, with a blue mantle—is painted with the dexterity of a master-hand; but there is little, even of Spanish mysticism, in her face. A far more striking example of the school is Zurbaran's "Monk" (162), a full-length figure, of great dignity, with a face full of the struggles it had gone through. "The Holy Family," by Andrea del Sarto (171), will attract everyone by its exquisite truth and reality. The Child is clinging passionately to the Mother's neck, whilst her deep and straining eyes seem to foresee the sorrows which await Him. The picture is smaller than one is accustomed to in Andrea's work; and it is finished with all the care he could bestow when not harassed by household cares and disappointed hopes. We cannot help grudging the National Gallery of Ireland the possession of two very remarkable portraits—one by Hans Asher (174), the other by Wolfgang Hauber (175), two little-known German artists of the early part of the sixteenth century. At the same time, the keeper of the gallery, Mr. Doyle, must be congratulated on obtaining, with the slender grant at his disposal, such rare gems. The full-length figure of "St. Roch" (176), by Francia, is a very interesting specimen of this master's work, the landscape being scarcely less carefully treated than the saint in his monk's robe, and with his pilgrim's staff. The portraits of "Queen Mary" (178), by Sir Antonio More, and of "Lady Jane Grey" (182), by Lucca Penni, might have been intended for companion pictures—the size and pose being about identical. Whatever our sympathies may be, it must be admitted that the crowned Queen was more successful in her painter than her uncrowned rival. Two portraits by unknown (Italian) masters, lent by Mr. William Graham—one, that of a Pope (156), and the other that of a Choir-Master (180)—deserve notice; and Mr. Aug. Savile's "Head of a Man," by Velasquez (181), is a very excellent instance of that great master's method. The villainous and not really powerful face of "The Duke of Alva" (185), by Sir Antonio More, will strengthen most people in their belief in Mr. Motley's character of this savage Governor of the Netherlands; and, by the aid of the grandeur and power of Vandyck's rendering of the Earl of Strafford (188), it is easy to understand the feeling of how true a friend and how dangerous an enemy a man with such a face must have been. Passing by the two remarkable works of Lucas de Heere, the Duke (184) and the Duchess (187) of Norfolk—which seem to have been once more brought together, after a long separation—we come to the side of room where English art is alone represented. In the centre is Gainsborough's masterpiece, Squire Hillhard and his wife—a young couple with ease and distinction in every movement—walking arm-in-arm. In the pose of the lady's head, Gainsborough shows to what heights he could rise by taking pains; and in this work, even down to the white Pomeranian dog, care and interest are shown. The picture, moreover, is hung just as Gainsborough would have wished (except, perhaps, for the neighbourhood of Turner's bright landscapes on either side), just three feet from the ground; and it was because he could not obtain this privilege at the Royal Academy that for fourteen years he abstained from exhibiting there. In those days the rule was that portraits—and especially full-length ones—should be hung at least nine feet above the ground, and consequently altogether out of the line in which the painter himself had ever seen or conceived his work. The two landscapes by Turner—"Old London Bridge" (194) and "The Burning of the Houses of Parliament" (197)—are fine examples of the artist at about the best period of his career. The wonderful analysis of light which both works display, the treatment of the water under two such different conditions, and the movement of the smoke and clouds, are "notes" of the Turnerian style strongly marked. Sir Joshua Reynolds' portrait of "John Musters, of Colwick" (189), shows the artist at his best, because he is perfectly simple, and has aimed at no startling effects of pose or colour. The landscape, in which is standing the plain country gentleman in brown coat, yellow waistcoat, and white stockings, is painted with more than Reynolds' usual love for such details; and even in the foreground he has made no small concessions to the lovers of realistic art in his attempts at flower painting. On the other hand, the "Portrait of Mrs. Musters" (198), as Hebe, is hard in feature and poor in colour—whilst the clouds and other accessories of the goddess are distinctly scamped. Romney's "Lady Brook" (192) is as delicate and charming as Hoppner's "Portrait of Mrs. Gibson" (193) as a wood-nymph is solid and unsentimental: whilst the examples of the works of two successive Presidents, Sir Benjamin West and Sir Thomas Lawrence (196), mark accurately the successive steps in the decay of English art.

Here we must break off, reserving for another occasion notice of the other galleries, of which the customary arrangement has been maintained. In the first are the works of the English school, of which Reynolds' "Penelope Poothby" will be regarded as the gem; in the second the Dutch school, with one Franz Hals, at least, of first-rate merit; whilst in the fourth the "Adoration of the Magi," from Castle Howard, carries off the undisputed palm.

H.M.S. AGAMEMNON.

This ship, which has been undergoing considerable alterations at Devonport Dockyard, and has been tried in experimental trips in the Bay of Biscay, is now ordered to be commissioned for active service, and is going to reinforce the British Naval Squadron on the China Station. The Agamemnon is a double-screw armour-plated turret-ship, constructed of iron, carrying four heavy guns in her two turrets; her tonnage capacity is 8510 tons, and her engines are of 6360-horse power. She is commanded by Captain Samuel Long, an officer who served in the old Agamemnon, wooden line-of-battle ship, in the Black Sea, and at the bombardment of the forts of Sebastopol, under Admiral Sir Edmund Lyons. The new Agamemnon, of which we give an Illustration, is a very different sort of vessel; and, though her fighting power must be considerable, some doubts have been expressed of her fitness to encounter rough weather at sea. The oblique position of the two gun-turrets on deck, as indicated in the plan which accompanies our Illustration, does not seem favourable to security of balance, and has been disapproved by professional critics.

SHORTENED LEAVE FOR SEAMEN.

Some excitement was caused at Portsmouth and Plymouth, and in other parts of the country, by an order from the Admiralty, on Saturday night, that all men belonging to the Channel Squadron, who were absent on leave, should return to their ships on Monday before half-past one in the afternoon. This notice was posted up on Sunday at many public places in the naval seaport towns, and telegrams were sent to call the men from every part of England and Scotland where they were known to have gone to visit their families and friends. Ten days' leave had been granted to a portion of the officers and seamen, dating from the Monday of last week, so that their expected holiday would have been continued till Thursday last. It was understood that the Channel Squadron was to be ready to proceed to sea not later than Friday, the Northumberland leaving Devonport on Tuesday for Portsmouth, where Vice-Admiral De Horsey, who has succeeded the Duke of Edinburgh in command of the squadron, would hoist his flag on board that ship instead of on board the Minotaur, which is to undergo extensive repairs. The two divisions were ordered to meet off the Eddystone on Friday, and will proceed to Arosa Bay, where they are to arrive on the 15th inst. They will proceed thence to Vigo, Madeira, and Gibraltar, remaining until further orders are received from England.

"Shortened leave" is an incident of the naval service which cannot fail to have a startling effect on domestic and social life in the neighbourhoods where any of our brave seamen have been spending their Christmas holidays; and the smart young fellow depicted by our Artist, who is earnestly conversing with an older man in a hurried farewell talk, may be imagined to have an important personal secret to communicate, touching the tender relations between himself and a certain "Poll," whose charms have found a vulnerable spot, not yet ironclad, in his susceptible "Heart of Oak." The gentle reader, of either sex, will not deny to him and her, since they are really betrothed, a considerable allowance of sympathy upon this occasion; and will regret the necessity of cutting off two or three days from the happy time which they might have spent together in "keeping company," before he mustered with his comrades on deck in Plymouth or Portsmouth harbour. But "duty" rhymes to "beauty" in the most popular songs of Dibdin, and in the feelings and conduct of every true British sailor; it is not the habit of Jack to repine at a separation, however sudden, even from the cherished object of his honest love, when he is summoned to go afloat in the performance of a gallant vocation, still justly held in honour by all classes of our countrymen. As for the young woman herself, she ought to be very proud of him, and to await his return from the next cruise, whether it be in peace or in war, trusting the pledge of constant affection that he has given her, and taking what consolation she may derive from the well-known verse:—

> I said to our Poll, for, d'ye see, she would cry,
> When last we weighed anchor for sea—
> What anguies snivelling, and piping your eye?
> Why, what a d—d fool you must be!
> Can't you see the world's wide, and there's room for us both,
> Me on sea, Poll, and you upon shore?
> And if to Old Davy I go, friend Poll,
> Why, you'll never hear of me more!"

It is to be hoped that she will, like a sensible English lass, feel perfectly satisfied with this explanation of her prospects, and not send him from home with a burden of undue vexation and needless anxiety upon her account. But she may cry a little, for a day or two, after Jack goes, if she will then set about her own work in a good-humoured spirit, and keep a smile always ready for the sailor's return.

The revenue received during the year 1884 amounted to £85,509,883, being £4,525,639 less than the amount received during the year 1883. Of this decrease, £593,000 is in the Excise; £171,000 in stamps; £2,402,000 in income and property tax; and £1,707,962 miscellaneous. There is an increase of £400,000 in the receipts from the Post Office, and of £140,000 in those from the Customs.

THE CENTURY DRESS FABRICS

Direct from the Loom to the Consumer.

GREAT SAVING TO EVERY PURCHASER!!

Patterns sent post-free to any Address. Any length cut at MILL PRICES. All parcels over £1 value carriage paid.

THE CENTURY CASHMERES,

Which received the highest awards (Silver Medals) at the International Health and Crystal Palace Exhibitions, have now a world-wide reputation.

THE CENTURY

SERGES, COATINGS, TWEEDS, AND ULSTERINGS,

For Ladies', Boys', and Gentlemen's Wear, cannot be equalled for Value and Quality.

DRESS FABRICS,

To suit every Climate and every Fashion, at prices from 4½d. to 5s. per yard.

Registered Trade Mark.

Write at once to the

BRADFORD MANUFACTURING COMPANY,

BRADFORD,

YORKSHIRE.

And mention this Paper.

BABY BABY BABY BABY BABY BABY

A LADY WRITES:

MOTHERS and NURSES should try WILSON'S AMERICAN BABY BISCUITS, because they suit the weakest digestion, and a delicate baby soon gains healthy flesh when fed upon them. I am thinking of a bouncing boy of eleven months, who is usually taken to be five or six months older, but who was a wretched specimen of infant humanity the first two or three months of his life. Wilson's Biscuits worked wonders for him. They are delicious, and all children like them; they have been used to nourish invalids who can take scarcely any other food, but who flourish upon them. Their price puts them within the reach even of the poor, because they only cost 1s. the Tin. Be sure to get the right ones, which are crescent-shaped, and stamped with the name 'Wilson.'"

WILSON'S AMERICAN BABY BISCUITS

are sold in Shilling Tins. If not kept in stock by your Grocer or Chemist a Tin will be sent, parcels post paid, on receipt of 16 stamps, by the Sole Consignee,

DAVID CHALLEN, MILDMAY-ROAD, LONDON, N.

TRADE MARK

Dr. Carter Moffat's AMMONIAPHONE Harness' Patent

DR. CARTER MOFFAT'S AMMONIAPHONE

is invaluable in all Pulmonary Affections. It is a tube about 25in. long, constructed of a specially prepared non-corrosive metal, with handles, ebony polished, having patent spring valves. It is charged with a chemical compound, combined so as to resemble in effect that which is produced by the soft balmy air of the Italian peninsula when inhaled into the lungs, hence the term—Artificial Italian Air.

THE VERDICT OF THE DOCTORS.

A. S. KENNEDY, Esq., L.R.C.P., L.R.C.S., &c., writes:—
"14, Conduit-street, London, W., Dec. 20, 1884.
"The two Ammoniaphones that I had from you have given very good results, apart from improved timbre, resonance, and extension of register, which are undeniable. I have found the Ammoniaphone most useful in cutting short catarrhal and laryngeal troubles, and of great benefit in removing huskiness. Several patients have tried the Ammoniaphone at my suggestion and are all pleased with the improvement in their voices."

C. J. BOYD WALLIS, Esq., L.D.S., R.C.S., Eng., 23, Brook-street, Grosvenor-square, London, W., writes, Nov. 21, 1884:—
"I have carefully tested the contents of your Ammoniaphone, and have found it to contain all those ingredients which you have discovered to be present in the air of Italy. The Ammoniaphone forms an excellent inhaler, superior to any other that has come under my notice. I am of opinion that it will be of great value in the treatment of throat and chest affections and in a variable climate like ours your clever invention will be a desirable remedy to have at hand. Several of my patients have spoken favourably of the Ammoniaphone, and I can fully confirm your Italian air theory."

THE PRESS APPROVES OF IT.

"TRUTH," Nov. 13, 1884:—
"It was, I confess, with profound scepticism that I placed the little silver mouthpiece to my lips, and drew a deep breath. . . . . It was not unpleasant, and I persevered, alternating each pull with a good gasp of common air to follow. I had previously been asked to say a sentence or two in my natural voice, and after two or three pulls at the Ammoniaphone, I was requested to repeat the same words without using any extra exertion. I was really startled at the involuntary loudness of my own voice, and a friend who accompanied me, and who was a greater sceptic than myself, fairly burst out laughing at the result. Dr. Carter Moffat smiled benignly, and told me he had now 30,000 persons using the Ammoniaphone with the same results."

DR. CARTER MOFFAT'S AMMONIAPHONE will last for years. Should be used by Actors, Vocalists, Clergymen, Public, Speakers, Parliamentary Men, Readers, Reciters, Lecturers, Leaders of Psalmody, Schoolmasters, Amateurs, Church Choirs, Barristers, and all persons who have to use their voices professionally, or who desire to greatly improve their speaking or singing tones, producing a rich, powerful, melodious voice of extraordinary ringing clearness and range. A poor weak voice becomes rich and massive, while great good is done to the general health.

DR. CARTER MOFFAT'S AMMONIAPHONE

has proved of the utmost value in the treatment of Coughs, Colds, Clerical Throat, Bronchitis, Asthma, Consumption, Aphonia, or Loss of Voice, Deafness resulting from Colds, all Affections of the Throat and Chest, and Sleeplessness. Such ailments may be entirely overcome by means of this simple and beneficent invention.

THE PUBLIC PRAISE IT.

The Very Rev. Dr. VAUGHAN, Dean of Llandaff and Master of the Temple, writes:— Nov. 5, 1884.
"My voice has now nearly recovered its tone, and I have certainly derived benefit, though not suddenly or rapidly, from the use of your Ammoniaphone."

Lady MACFARREN, (wife of Sir G. A. Macfarren, the distinguished President of the Royal Academy of Music) writes:—
"7, Hamilton-terrace, N.W., Oct. 22, 1884.
"I consider the Amnoniaphone to have a wonderfully bracing effect on the vocal organs, and shall have great pleasure in recommending it to such as have weak or relaxed throats; indeed, I have already done so."

Mons. MARIUS, the well-known Comedian, writes:—
"57, Wellington-road, St. John's-wood, N.W., Dec. 27, 1884.
"Dear, Sir,—If I have lingered before writing to thank you for the Ammoniaphone, it was because I was determined to give it a fair and exhaustive trial before expressing my opinion. For years I have suffered with my throat, sometimes losing my voice entirely; but since using the Ammoniaphone, although I have had two or three severe colds, I have never lost the use of my voice."

Miss LEONORA BRAHAM, the eminent Operatic Vocalist, writing from the Savoy Theatre, Oct. 31, states:—
"Having used your Ammoniaphone through a most trying cold, and having thereby obtained great relief, I am anxious to express my admiration of, and thanks for, your truly wonderful invention. This testimony is unsolicited, and is given you to prove the immense value of the Ammoniaphone to all public singers."

"THERE WAS NO DENYING IT."

"PALL MALL GAZETTE," Nov. 7, 1884:—
"Last night St. James's Hall was filled with an intelligent company of musical and scientific people, who were invited to witness the results of the Ammoniaphone. . . . . The doctor himself, surrounded by distinguished vocalists, all of whom were Ammoniaphonical votaries, explained, instrument in hand, the wonders of his new discovery. . . . . Our representative was invited to repeat a few lines in his natural voice, then take some deep inhalations and repeat the same words over again. He did so, and was positively startled at the loudness and sonority of his own voice. The thing seemed absurd; but there was no denying it; the increased volume and improved timbre were too obvious."

DR. CARTER MOFFAT attends daily at the Rooms of the MEDICAL BATTERY CO., 205, Regent-street, London, W., to demonstrate the extraordinary utility of the Ammoniaphone. Write for the "HISTORY OF THE AMMONIAPHONE," an eighty-page treatise, post-free on application.

DR. CARTER MOFFAT AMMONIAPHONE (Harness' Patent) will be sent free by post to any part of the United Kingdom on receipt of P.O.O. or Cheque (crossed "London and County Bank") for 21s., and payable to

C. B. HARNESS, THE MEDICAL BATTERY COMPANY, 205, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, W.

CHAPMAN and CO.'S FIRST GREAT CLEARANCE SALE.

£100,000!

SILKS. £20,000 worth of Black and all Colours. Plain and Broché, from 8½d. to 7s. 11d., all reduced. Wonderful Black Gros Grains, 1s. 9d. per yard.

SATINS. £20,000 worth of Black and Colours. Plain, Stamped, and Broché, 10½d. to 6s. 11d. Wonderful Black Satin, 1s. 9d. per yard.

VELVETS £15,000 worth of Black Silk Velvet, 1s. 9d. to 8s. 11d. per yard. 22-inch Coloured Silk Gown Velvets, half value, 3s. 6d. per yard

VELVETEENS. £15,000 worth, for which we are more celebrated than any other Merchant. Nonpareil, and every known make, 1s. 9d. to 3s. 9d. per yard.

DRESSES. £20,000 worth of British and Foreign Manufactures, from 5s. 11d. to 7s. 11d. the Dress. Celebrated Cashmeres, most beautiful quality, 1s. 9d. per yard.

MISCELLANEOUS. £10,000 worth Manchester Goods. Broché Zephyrs, Scotch Ginghams, 4½d. to 8½d.

UNDERCLOTHING. Every Article in this Department for Ladies and Children's use enormously reduced. All the Flannel and Knitted Woollen Goods in the above will be found the cheapest ever seen.

FURS. The Stock of Furs is unusually heavy this Season, and will be sold at a great sacrifice. A Wonderful Bargain is offered in Ladies' Fur-lined Cloaks, Cashmere Lined Squirrel, 21s., worth 42s. Ladies' Shoulder Capes, in Black Racoon and other Furs, 18 inches deep, 5s. 11d.

SPECIAL BARGAINS.

CHAPMAN and CO.'S 1½ GUINEA PARCEL of HOUSEHOLD LINEN, containing
1 Pair Real Heavy Witney Blankets, 3¼ yards long, 2 yards wide ... ... } ONE AND
1 Handsome Honeycomb Quilt, with Fringe Border, 2¼ yards long, 2¼ yards wide ... ... } HALF
1 Pair Superior White Sheets, ready hemmed, 3 yards long, 2 yards wide ... ... } GUINEAS.
1 Large-size Tea Table-Cloth, with Ornamental Red Border ... ... }
2 Honeycomb Toilet-Covers, to match Quilt ... ... }
3 White Linen Chamber Towels, Superior Quality ... ... }

BUNDLES OF REMNANTS, 50 yards for 25s.

SPECIAL VALUE.

PATTERNS OF ALL GOODS SENT POST-FREE.

To avoid delay, CASH should accompany all orders.

CHAPMAN and CO.,

NOTTING-HILL, W.

ESTABLD 1798

MOUSON & CO.'S

FIRST PRIZE MED. REGIST.D TRADE MARK LONDON, VIENNA, SYDNEY & C.

CELEBRATED TOILET SOAPS

MOUSON and CO.'S Toilet Soaps are warranted to be made of the very best and purest materials, not to shrink or vary in shape or weight, even if kept for years.

Improved Toilet Soaps assorted in Honey, Rose, and Windsor.

Cocoa Butter Soap, a veritable medicinal soap for softening the skin.

Spring Violet Soap, of the natural perfume, pronounced, even by rival makers, unequalled.

Aromatic Vegetable Soap, a bijou for the Nursery, pure and uncoloured, with a splendid perfume of herbs.

Handy and Handsome (Registered Mark), a new and most conveniently shaped Toilet Soap.

"The Challenge" Windsor Soap (Regd. Mark), wonderfully mild and of excellent perfume.

J. G. MOUSON and CO., Perfumers, FRANKFORT-ON-MAIN;
and 32 and 33, HAMSELL-STREET, LONDON, E.C.

To be had of the principal Wholesale Perfumers and Druggists throughout the Country.

HARTMANN'S HYGIENIC WOOD WOOL.

Pronounced by the most eminent members of the British Medical Profession to be unequalled and unrivalled of its kind for Health and Comfort.

HARTMANN'S PATENT WOOD WOOL,

Used in all the leading Hospitals throughout the country, and acknowledged to be far superior to the common absorbent Cotton Wool Pads.

INDISPENSABLE TO LADIES TRAVELLING.

To be had in Packages of Six each, at 2s. per package, of every Chemist, Surgical Instrument Maker, Ladies' Outfitter, and Linendraper. Sample Packages by parcels post, with Pamphlet, for 2s. 3d.; or five packages for 10s. Stamps or P.O.O. direct from the Sole Consignees, ESSINGER & NEUBURGER, 11, HATTON-GARDEN, LONDON, E.C.

N.B. To the Trade.—To be had of all Wholesale Houses. CAUTION.—Beware of spurious imitations.
NOT TO BE MISTAKEN FOR THE COMMON ABSORBENT COTTON WOOL-PADS.
None genuine unless each article stamped with above Trade Mark. Patent Rights rigidly protected.

JOHN WARD 246 & 247, TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD
(LATE OF SAVILLE HOUSE, LEICESTER-SQUARE), LONDON.

INVALID CHAIR MANUFACTURER TO THE QUEEN AND ROYAL FAMILY.
The largest assortment in the world of INVALID CHAIRS, SPINAL COUCHES, BATH CHAIRS, BED TABLES, and INVALID FURNITURE, &c., for Sale or Hire.
Prize Medals—London, 1851 and 1862; Paris, 1855, 1867, and 1878 (3 Medals); Vienna, 1873 (3 Medals); Dublin, 1865.
Established 150 years. Price Catalogues, Post-free.

No. 19.

No. 10.

No. 1.

No. 12.

PASSENGER, DINNER, AND LUGGAGE LIFTS.

CLARK, BUNNETT, & CO.

(LIMITED),

RATHBONE-PLACE, W.; and 30, KING-STREET, LONDON, E.C.

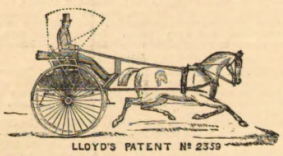
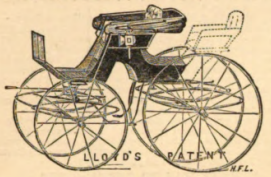
Estimates Free for Lifts and Revolving Steel Shutters for any part of the Country.



LLOYD'S PATENT FOLDING

TWO and FOUR WHEEL

ALBANY CARRIAGES.



LLOYD'S PATENT No 2339

LLOYD'S PATENT No 2339

SAME CARRIAGE AS ABOVE (CLOSED).

ALBANY PHAETON (CLOSED).

Dotted Lines showing Open.

(PATENT No. 4052.)

Changed instantly from two to four seats and vice versâ. There is nothing in the world to equal their marvellous and ingenious construction. Inspection will never be regretted.

HENRY LLOYD (Inventor),

SHOW-ROOMS AT

162, Queen's-road, Bayswater, London, W.

(OPPOSITE WHITELEY'S);

and 12, Colquit-street, Liverpool.

CATALOGUE, 50 NEW DESIGNS, of Landaus, Broughams, Victorias, Phaetons, &c.

NEGRETTI & ZAMBRA'S NEW-YEAR'S GIFTS.

USEFUL AND ORNAMENTAL.

LADIES' IVORY OPERA GLASS,

gilt mounted, with engraved monogram. Prices from £1 12s. 6d.

GENTLEMEN'S LEATHER-COVERED FIELD GLASS,

with monogram in pierced silver. Price from £2 15s.

Opera-Glasses mounted in Aluminium, Tortoiseshell, or Pearl. Barometers, Binoculars, Microscopes, Telescopes, Magic Lanterns, &c., of every description.

Illustrated Price-Lists posted free to all parts of the world.

NEGRETTI & ZAMBRA,

SCIENTIFIC INSTRUMENT MAKERS AND OPTICIANS TO THE QUEEN,

HOLBORN VIADUCT, E.C.

BRANCHES: 45, Cornhill; 122, Regent-street; Photographic Studio, Crystal Palace.

Negretti and Zambra's Illustrated Catalogue of Meteorological, Optical, Nautical, and Surveying Instruments, 1200 Engravings, price 5s. 6d.

BY SPECIAL ROYAL APPOINTMENT.

Spearman's PURE WOOL ONLY! DEVON SERGES

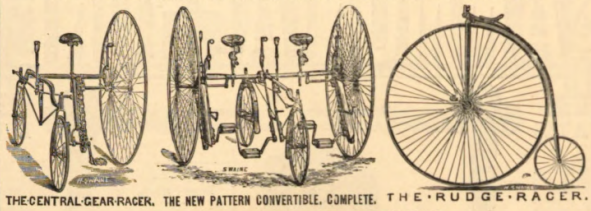
No other article woven equals this in general utility.

According to the "Queen," "It has no rival."

For Ladies' wear, beautiful qualities, 1s. 6d. to 4s. 6d. the yard; for Children's wear, capitally strong, 1s. 3d. to 2s. the yard; for Gentlemen's wear, double width, 2s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. the yard. The Navy Blues and the Blacks are fast dyes. On receipt of instructions, samples will be sent Post-Free.—N.B. Any length Cut, and Carriage Paid to principal Railway Stations.

Only Address: SPEARMAN and SPEARMAN, Plymouth. NO AGENTS.

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL



PRESERVES THE HAIR, and can be had in a golden colour. Buy only ROWLANDS', of 20, Hatton-garden, London.

Sizes, 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d.

IMPORTANT TO INTENDING "CYCLE" PURCHASERS.

D. RUDGE & CO., Show-Rooms and Works, COVENTRY.

THE OLDEST AND LARGEST CYCLE MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD.

THE CENTRAL GEAR RACER. THE NEW PATTERN CONVERTIBLE. COMPLETE. THE RUDGE RACER.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE-LISTS FREE ON APPLICATION.

DEPOTS:—London, 12, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.; 443, Oxford-street, W.; Manchester, 160-4, Deansgate; Birmingham, 4, Livery-street; Liverpool, 101, Bold-street; Glasgow, 241, Sauchiehall-street; Edinburgh, 2, Hanover-street; Belfast, 49, Royal Avenue.

ADAMS'S FURNITURE POLISH.

THE OLDEST AND BEST.—"THE QUEEN"

(the Lady's Newspaper) says:—"Having made a fresh trial of its virtues, after considerable experience with other compounds of the same nature, we feel no hesitation in recommending its use to all housewives who are in any difficulty in polishing their furniture."—Dec. 22, 1883.

SOLD BY GROCERS, CHEMISTS IRONMONGERS, CABINET MAKERS, BRUSH DEALERS, OILMEN, &c.

Manufactory: VICTORIA PARK, SHEFFIELD.

CAUTION.—See that the Name is on the Bottle, and Beware of cheap imitations.

NESTLE'S MILK FOOD.

TRADE MARK Registered.

FOR INFANTS; Also well adapted for CHILDREN AND INVALIDS.

PREPARED AT VEVEY, SWITZERLAND. Sold Everywhere.

THE ONLY PERFECT SUPPLEMENT & SUBSTITUTE FOR MOTHER'S MILK.

EASY OF PREPARATION—REQUIRES MERELY THE ADDITION OF WATER.

Recommended as a PERFECT FOOD by the Highest Medical Authorities in England, and all parts of the World.

Pamphlets containing their testimonials, with opinions of the Press, sent free on application to 9, SNOW-HILL, LONDON, E.C.

£10.

In return for a £10 Note, free and safe by post, one of BENNETT'S

LADIES' GOLD WATCHES,

perfect for time, beauty, and workmanship. With Keyless Action. Air-tight, damp-tight, and dust-tight.

Bennett's WATCHES 65, Cheapside

£15.

In return for Post-office Order free and safe by post, one of BENNETT'S

GENTLEMEN'S GOLD KEYLESS WATCHES,

perfect for time, beauty, and workmanship. With Keyless Action. Air-tight, damp-tight, and dust-tight.

SIR JOHN BENNETT'S WATCHES and CLOCKS.

£10 LADY'S GOLD KEYLESS. Elegant and accurate.
£15 GENTLEMAN'S STRONG GOLD KEYLESS.
20 GUINEA GOLD HALF CHRONOMETER for all Climates.
£25 MEDICAL and SCIENTIFIC CENTRE SECONDS.
£20, £30, £40 PRESENTATION WATCHES. Arms, and Inscription emblazoned for Noblemen, Gentlemen, and others.
£25 HALL CLOCK to CHIME on 8 Bells, in oak or mahogany; with bracket and shield 3 Guineas extra.
18 Carat GOLD CHAINS and JEWELLERY.

65 and 64, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

Allen & Hanbury's "Perfected" COD-LIVER OIL.

"Is as nearly tasteless as Cod-Liver Oil can be."—Lancet.

"Has almost the delicacy of salad oil."—Brit. Med. Journal.

"No nauseous eructations follow after it is swallowed."—Medical Press.

It can be borne and digested by the most delicate; is the only oil which does not "repeat"; and for those reasons the most efficacious kind in use. In capsuled Bottles only, at 1s. 4d., 2s. 6d., 4s. 9d., and 9s.

Sold Everywhere.

ALLEN & HANBURYS' MALT EXTRACT

Forms a valuable adjunct to Cod-Liver Oil, being not only a highly concentrated and nutritious food, but a powerful aid to the digestion of all starchy and farinaceous matters, rendering them easy of assimilation by the most enfeebled invalid. It is thus utilised in the manufacture of ALLEN and HANBURYS' Malted Farinaceous Food for Infants. Both it and the Food can be obtained through any Chemist. The Malt, in Bottles, 2s. and 3s. 6d.; the Food, in Tins, at 6d., 1s., 2s., 5s., and 10s.

CIGARS DE JOY

ASTHMA, COUGH, BRONCHITIS

CAUTION.—To guard against fraudulent imitations, see that each Box bears the name of "WILCOX and CO., 239, Oxford-street, London."

One of these Cigarettes gives immediate relief in the worst attack of Asthma, Cough, Bronchitis, and Shortness of Breath. Persons who suffer at night with coughing, phlegm, and short breath find them invaluable, as they instantly check the spasm, promote sleep, and allow the patient to pass a good night. Are perfectly harmless, and may be smoked by ladies, children, and most delicate patients.

Price 2s. 6d. per Box of 35, post-free; and of all Chemists.

DEPILATORY FREE FROM POISON.

This, the only preparation recommended by the Medical Faculty, is Professor Böttger's Depilatory, in powder, prepared solely by Mr. G. C. Bruning, Frankfurt-on-the-Maine.

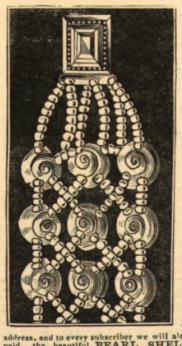
G. C. B.'s prepared Depilatory is the best and safest known remover of Superfluous Hair, free from poisonous matter, quite harmless; may be used with safety and without injury to the softest and most delicate skin; is therefore especially recommended to Ladies. Its efficiency is instantaneous; it is also strongly recommended to Gentlemen with a strong beard, who either cannot shave themselves or shaving is an inconvenience.

To be had at all first-class Chemists and Perfumers, Price per Bottle and Brush, 4s. 3d.

Wholesale Depôt for England, by

S. MORRIS, 33, North Audley-street, Grosvenor-square, W.

and at the Retail Depôts of Messrs. Armbrecht, Nelson, and Co., 23, Duke-street, Grosvenor-square, W.; Francis Ward, 11, Lower Grosvenor-place, Grosvenor-gardens, S.W.; F. K. Matterson, 94 and 96, New Oxford-street, W.C.; W. Schacht and Co., 26, Finsbury-pavement, E.C., and 8, Cullum-street, E.C.



Trade Mark.

Beware of imitations, and see that you get G. C. B's Deridatory, which has on every Box this Regist. Trade Mark.

FREE TO ALL!

This Elegant Pearl Shell Necklace and Bracelet!

The beautiful Pearl Shell Necklace and Bracelet, here illustrated, are imported from the Congo River, Africa. Our design shows one rod of necklace, they are 16inches long and bracelet is regular size. The design cannot give a faint idea of their beauty and elegance. They are composed of a large number of beautiful Pearl Shells, and neatly joined together by the natives of that wonderful new country. They are very beautiful and fashionable, and there is nothing about them to tarnish or wear out. Every lady ought to have one of these beautiful Necklaces and Bracelets, and we will now tell you how you can obtain them FREE of cost. We publish a most charming illustrated literary weekly family paper called the "Golden Argosy," the circulation of which we are ambitious to increase to 160,000. To accomplish this we now make the following wonderful liberal offer: Upon receipt of only twenty six stamps or P.O.O. for 2s. we will send The "Golden Argosy" for Thirteen Weeks, post paid, to any address, and to every subscriber we will also send FREE, and post paid, the beautiful PEARL SHELL NECKLACE and BRACELET above described. Remember, the Necklace and Bracelet cost you nothing—they are sent free as a premium with the "Golden Argosy." The "Golden Argosy" is a finely Illustrated Family Story Paper, printed on fine paper, and containing the choicest reading matter, embracing serial and short stories, sketches, poems, useful knowledge, history, biography, wit and humour, etc. You will be delighted with it, as well as with the elegant and valuable premiums. This is undoubtedly the most liberal offer ever made by any reliable publisher, and no family can afford to miss it. Every subscriber is guaranteed more than three times the value of money sent, and if you are not perfectly satisfied we will cheerfully refund the amount. This GOLDEN opportunity is only offered, the publishers believing that by thus introducing The "Golden Argosy" in new homes for three months, that they will become regular subscribers and continue to subscribe for it and introduce it to the notice of their friends. Send Stamps or P.O.O. Address—

THE "GOLDEN ARGOSY" Co.,

13, Salisbury Square, Fleet St., London, E.C.

AFTERNOON TEA SET.

(Design of Tom-tits and Apple-blossom.)

Soft sage-green, on Ivory ground, as above, 7s. 6d.

Same, with turquoise-blue or red edge, 10s. 6d.

Same with gold edge, 14s.

If to be sent in the country, 1s. extra for box.

ALFRED B. PEARCE,

33, LUDGATE-HILL, E.C. (Established 1760.)

Catalogue (with Nine Furnishing Estimates) on application.

GET A BOTTLE TO-DAY OF

PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER.

The Oldest, Best, and most widely known Family Medicine in the World.

Get a Bottle to-day of PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER. It instantly relieves and cures severe scalds, burns, sprains, bruises, toothache, headache, pains in the side, joints, and limbs, all neuralgic and rheumatic pains. Taken internally, it cures at once coughs, sudden colds, cramp in the stomach, colic, diarrhœa, and cholera infantum. PAIN KILLER is the greatest household medicine, and affords relief not to be obtained by other remedies. It dispels the agony of pain, gives REST, SLEEP, COMFORT, QUIETUDE. It supersedes the use of dangerous Narcotic and Anodyne Remedies. Any Chemist can supply it, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per Bottle.

Depôt, 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

"ADVICE TO DYSPEPTICS."

Symptoms of Dyspepsia and Indigestion, with Special Advice as to Diet.

"This little pamphlet appeals forcibly to those who have allowed the palate to decide everything for them, and have paid the inevitable penalty of their folly."—Globe.

Sent for One Stamp.

J. M. RICHARDS, Publisher, 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

CIRIO & CO.,

SPECIALLY APPOINTED AGENTS TO THE PRINCIPAL WINE-GROWERS OF ITALY.

EQUAL TO BEST CHAMPAGNE. 30s. to 36s. per Doz.

DRY and OLD. Best Marsala. From 24s. per Doz.

2's. per Doz.

Two Gallons.

20 PRIZE MEDALS.

Best Tinned Peas, Haricots, Tomatoes, Peaches, &c.

11 and 13, SOUTHWARK-ST. London; and Turin.

CHOICE RED and WHITE. 25s. per Doz.

EQUAL to BURGUNDY. Special. 21s to 24s.

LIPSCOMBE & CO.

Celebrated FILTERS effectually purify any water, however foul, making the most Impure Water, wholesome and sweet.

For cheapness, durability, simplicity, and efficiency, they stand unrivalled.

PROSPECTUS FREE.

THE LARGEST MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD.

144, OXFORD-STREET, W.

SAMPLES AND PRICE-LISTS POST-FREE.

CAMBRIC POCKET HANDKERCHIEFS.

Children's, 1s. 3d. per doz. | Hemstitched.
Ladies', 2s. 1d. per doz. | Ladies' .. 3s. 6d. per doz.
Gents', 2s. 11d. per doz. | Gents' .. 7s. 3d. doz.
All Pure Flax.

By Appointments to the Queen and Crown Princess of Germany.

ROBINSON and CLEAVER, BELFAST.

"The Cambrics of Robinson and Cleaver have a world-wide fame."—Queen.

Complete Catalogue of Iron Fencing, Hurdles, Gates, Wire Netting, Poultry, Lawn-Tennis, and Cricket-ground Fence, Stable Fittings, Garden Requisites, &c., free.

BAYLISS, JONES, & BAYLISS,

WOLVERHAMPTON,

And 3, CROOKED-LANE, KING WILLIAM-STREET, E.C.

Please name this Paper.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by INGRAM BROTHERS, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JANUARY 10, 1885.

From Photo by Hills & Saunders

RIDDLE & COUCHMAN, LITH 22, SOUTHWARK BRIDGE ROAD, S.E.

H. R. H. Prince Edward of Wales.

NAVY DEPARTMENT
RECEIVED
JAN 31 1885
LIBRARY.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 2387.—VOL. LXXXVI. SATURDAY, JANUARY 17, 1885. WITH EXTRA SUPPLEMENT | SIXPENCE. By Post, 6½d.

Lord Wolseley talking with his Generals by telegraph.

Lord Wolseley's last words to the Mudir were, "I intend concentrating my troops at Abu-Dom. If I want you, I shall certainly send for you."

THE NILE EXPEDITION: DEPARTURE OF LORD WOLSELEY FROM AMBUKOL—THE MUDIR OF DONGOLA BIDDING GOOD-BYE.
FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, MR. MELTON PRIOR.

OUR NOTE-BOOK

Cynicism, alas! appears to be on the increase: it has crept even into an excellent almanack, which contains this year the following question in the "doctrine of chances:" A speaks truth three times out of four, B four times out of five, C five times out of six; what is the chance of the truth of an event which A and B agree in asserting, but which C denies? The questioner evidently takes it for granted that not a letter of the alphabet speaks the truth always. The question, however, is very loosely worded. There cannot be any question of truth or falsehood about an event, but there may be about an assertion, and though C's average of veracity is very high for the sons of men, it appears that his evidence is to the combined evidence of A and B (who are comparative liars) only as 5 to 12. After this, who shall say that two blacks do not make something whiter than one white?

What avails it to have saved one's country and to have been twice President of so great a Republic as the United States of America? Here is the gallant and victorious General Grant, of Vicksburg celebrity, reduced to such plight, they say, that it is almost another case of "Da obolum Belisario." Only Belisarius could not fall back upon that refuge for the destitute, "writing for the magazines," which are nowadays open to popular names rather than to literary talent. Besides, Belisarius was blind, says tradition; General Grant is not, not nearly.

The Right Hon. C. P. Villiers well deserved the compliment of the jubilee which was celebrated in his honour on the 10th inst. To have represented the same constituency in Parliament for fifty continuous years is to have done a great thing, especially such a constituency as Wolverhampton. Still Mr. Villiers has not, in sporting phrase, "beaten the record": Mr. Talbot has sat fifty-five consecutive years for Glamorganshire. But Wolverhampton is said to require more "riding" than Glamorganshire.

How dangerous it is to derive conclusions and comfort from statistics has once more been pointed out. A worthy gentleman, in the joy of his heart, wrote to a newspaper to show how the affections of the people must be set upon the Established Church, because so many marriages take place in a church of the Establishment, and "only one marriage in twenty takes place in a Nonconformist Sanctuary." Another equally worthy gentleman wrote immediately to explain that "marriages in Nonconformist churches are under a Government ban," which is sufficient to account for the state of the odds, as Nonconformists are driven to the parish church. Which of the two worthy gentlemen is the more to be listened to may be left an open question; but there is doubtless, as Sir Roger (not of Tichborne, but of Coverley) would have told us, much to be said on both sides. The Rev. Mr. Malthus would perhaps have held that where people got married proved nothing, but that getting married at all proved them to be weak, improvident, and unpatriotic.

All must have heard of the celebrated "dog-and-man fight"; and now there has been, they say, a "man-and-donkey fight"—at Normanton. The fight is reported to have lasted an hour and a half, at the end of which the man (a miner) "threw up the sponge," and the (other) donkey, a regular "savage," was awarded the stakes, if there were any. Evidently our civilisation has not yet penetrated into the depths of our mines; and very often appears to be but skin deep, like our beauty, among the "upper crust" themselves.

This year the Epsom Derby will be run on June 3, the birthday, by-the-way, of Prince George of Wales, and, as a general impression seems to prevail that the great race ought to be run in May, it may be as well to observe that there is no "ought" in the case, which is regulated by the dates of other preceding events. The Derby has been run in June, according to the modern successor of the ancient Cocker, eighteen times: as late as the 9th when Eager won (1791); in 1794, when Dædalus won; in 1797, when the Sister to Pharamond colt won; in 1802 (the 3rd), when Tyrant won; in 1808, when Pan won; in 1810 (the 7th), when Whalebone won; in 1813 (the 3rd again), when Smolensko won; in 1821 (the 7th again), when Gustavus won; in 1824 (the 3rd again), when Cedric won; in 1829, when Frederick won; in 1832 (the 7th again), when St. Giles won; in 1835, when Mündig won; in 1840 (the 3rd again), when Little Wonder won; in 1862, when Caractacus won against the largest field that ever ran; in 1870, when Kingcraft won; in 1874 (the 3rd again), when George Frederick won; in 1878, when Sefton won; and in 1881, when the Americans won with Iroquois. There may have been one or two other instances overlooked by the modern Cocker; but it is quite clear that there is nothing very extraordinary about running the Derby in June and that the third is a peculiarly proper day for it.

A certain John Black came before a police magistrate the other day and professed to have "walked eight hundred miles in search of work, but in vain." His case was published in the papers; offers of work were made to him; he closed with Mr. H——, of St. John-street, West Smithfield, on New-Year's Day, at a pound a week, with board and lodging; and, according to Mr. H——, after spending several idle hours, was asked to carry two baskets down stairs, fell, said he had hurt his back, and was going to St. Bartholomew's Hospital (just opposite Mr. H——'s). Up to the 9th inst. he had not been seen again by Mr. H——, nor had the hospital authorities "made his acquaintance." Mr. H—— naturally came to the worst conclusion, and, very naturally again, has hardened his heart against similar "cases." Mr. H—— may, of course, have come to a wrong conclusion, and John Black may have a satisfactory explanation to offer (which, in any case, should have been offered at once); but, if Mr. H—— be right, we see what mischief such persons as John Black may do to their own class. No doubt there are many poor men who really do walk hundreds of miles in search of work, but in vain, and who would do it faithfully, if they could get it; and yet henceforth their stories will meet with less credence, and their needs will receive less attention, from sympathetic employers of labour, like Mr. H——, because of John Black and his behaviour. Among the Blacks, who are as the seashore for multitude, there may be many who heartily sympathise with John Black in his dislike of both light and heavy work; but they can hardly help regretting that he and such as he should be so regardless of the harm they may do to their own "mates" by their manner of requiting kindness. The "working man," too, would do well to consider whether he has not to thank John Black and Company as much as anybody or anything else for some of the "hard lines" he attributes to a very different cause, such as the "tyranny," or suspiciousness, or covetousness of "masters."

The condition of women in Turkey, as in all Oriental countries, has always been degraded and degrading, but the present Sultan has something like European ideas respecting the young girls of his Empire, and has established more than one school for them at the expense of the State. L'Ecole Sanié may be considered representative, and occupies the spacious palace of a deceased Pasha at Stamboul. There are 320 pupils, all of whom have their meals provided, while 100 of them live and are entirely maintained by the institution, at the head of which is Mademoiselle Calavassy, assisted by six teachers, four of whom speak French, and by four visiting masters, who teach writing, drawing, music, and singing. The ages of the pupils range from seven to fourteen, and they are taught to make their own clothes, to embroider, and to read, write, and cipher, the accomplishments being music, singing, and drawing, in which latter many of them are said to show great promise.

If it be true that "there is something not altogether displeasing to us in the misfortunes of our best friends," we surely must be expected to feel some satisfaction at hearing that, in consequence of the sanguinary affair in O'Donovan Rossa's office, New York, "serious dissensions have broken out among the Dynamite Party": for we know what is said to happen when thieves fall out, and when Beelzebub is divided against himself.

In the dramatic library of Mr. Herman, joint author of the "Silver King" and "Claudian," to be dispersed next week, there are some works of more than usual interest. A small quarto pamphlet, "The Bond Man," by P. Massinger, is the original edition of the first play ever performed at Drury Lane Theatre, and is dated 1624. But perhaps "The Empress of Morocco," a tragedy, with six engravings, published in 1673, is still more interesting; for it is the first play published in England with illustrations, and of course at that early period the difficulties and expenses of producing pictures were enormous. In these days too, when the success of a great play depends so much on mounting and costumes, and books are constantly being published in all countries on the subject of dress from the archæologist's point of view, the father of all such works is indeed a curiosity. Habiti Antichi et moderni di tutto il mondo, in Italian and Latin, by Vecellio, with woodcuts from designs of the master hand of Titian, and dated 1598, is the earliest work on costumes known, and is included in the forthcoming sale.

But throughout the whole catalogue of hardly anything, by-the-way, but rare books there is one striking attribute. Although many great and fashionable actors have from time to time tried their hands at poetry, there is hardly a line of it that lives in the memory or is ever quoted. Yet we find "The Poetical Works of David Garrick," "The Poems of John Henderson," and "The Odes, Lyrical Ballads, and Poems of Stephen George Kemble." The great John P. Kemble was so heartily ashamed of his "Fugitive Pieces" that he bought up every copy he could find soon after their publication, so that the work is now extremely rare. Shakspeare, of course, was an exception; but then he does not owe his fame to acting. The sale of the library will take place at Messrs. Sotheby's rooms on the 23rd inst.

Those who were invited to the annual celebration of the cutting of Baddeley's cake, at Drury Lane Theatre, hardly know that they owe the feast to the fact that, before he became a comedian, Baddeley had been a cook. This was not, of course, the sole reason for his curious bequest, as throughout all the latter part of his life he seemed to miss no opportunity of working for posthumous notoriety, if not fame. An extremely unpopular man, he was curiously sensitive on the subject of personal criticism, and had he lived in these outspoken days, would probably have had a bad time. His behaviour to his wife was such that scathing pamphlets were written about him and his private life. One of them was so aggressive in tone that the aggrieved actor wrote, on April 20, 1790, to The General Advertiser on the subject, and in his will requested that his executors should republish this letter every year, "to prevent the world from looking on his conduct in the villanous point of view as set forth in certain books and pamphlets." Even his ambition would have been satisfied had he seen the vast crowd of literary, artistic, and social notabilities who attended to taste his cake and punch on Drury Lane stage on Twelfth Night.

One of the greatest dangers a diamond-seeker suffers from is the one of having his gems stolen by the workmen he employs. These, for the most part, are native Zulus or Kaffirs, and there is no dodge for concealing the stones that they are not acquainted with. All they work for (their wages are about 25s. a week, out of which they save 20s.) is to collect enough money to buy sufficient cows to exchange for a wife. This being secured, they do no more work during their lives, as the woman's duty is to support her husband, look after the garden, and attend to the cattle. At Kimberley, in South Africa, diamond-stealing and buying from unlicensed dealers assumed such dangerous proportions that illicit buying was made punishable by long terms of penal servitude, and the South African jails are now loaded with what are shortly called I.D.B.'s (illicit diamond-buyers). But though the evil has apparently abated, and the well-judged severity has reduced the number of complaints, a colonist and diamond-digger of large experience informs us that the crime is positively on the increase. The organisation of the dealers and robbers is good, and the reason they remain undiscovered is because, instead of poor men of small means inciting the natives to robbery, the conspiracies are now worked by large capitalists, who themselves live outside the territory where to be found in possession of stones is an offence. Some more stringent measures ought to be taken, our informant thinks, to preserve for the proprietor of the claims the fruits of his industry and speculation.

The Princess of Wales is very fortunate in the matter of dress, she can afford to wear any colour from dead white to crimson, and from pale pink to blue of all shades. At the Sandringham State ball last week she wore a crimson brocade with salmon-tinted flowers on it, diamonds galore. At the second ball she was dressed in delicate blue and silver and had pearls mingled with her diamonds. All this is perfectly natural since she comes of the race of "Balder, the ever young."

Mr. Cleveland, the President-elect of the United States, has been at his wits' end ever since Christmas on account of the presents that pour in upon him, very much against his will. They are of all kinds and values, and have up to the present time cost him a great deal of letter writing. One was a handsome Newfoundland dog, which he speedily returned to the donor, and another was a case of claret, with his likeness on each bottle by way of label. Mr. Cleveland has now solved the difficulty, by announcing that all presents sent to him will be given to the charities of Albany, the town in which he lives. The slippers, smoking caps, perfumes, and other fancy articles will be sent to the bazaars, which are plentiful during the winter months; and the wines, spirits, liqueurs, and dainties of all sorts will be bestowed on the local hospitals. This, in his case and many similar ones, would seem to be the only independent course of action.

The new President of the United States, like so many of his predecessors, is a man who has risen from the ranks. Thirty years ago he was a teacher in the New York Institution for the Blind, and a few days since a little pupil of that school was delighted by half-an-hour's chat with the future head of the Republic, who told him stories and compared notes about "now" and "then" with kindly interest. A former self-made President, Andrew Johnson, was once a tailor in a small way of business in a little town in Tennessee, and one of the exhibits in the World's Exposition at New Orleans at the present time is the wedding-coat he made for a neighbour in 1838. It may be presumed that the functions of the race of moths have been suspended during the existence of that garment.

Mr. Frith's well-known series of pictures, the "Road to Ruin," served as a text on a recent Sunday to a clergyman, who expounded it in the Leek Museum to about three thousand working men and women. It is not often that so large a congregation of that class is brought together, and to judge by their wrapt attention it is rarely that they listen to so interesting a sermon.

Is the science of mnemonics ever really useful? or are good memories, like the poetic and teaching faculties, born rather than made? The question is a difficult one to answer, but Professor Loisette has invented a system which is declared by eminent authorities to be both physiological and scientific. Perhaps the people whose memories are the best and clearest, do really practise some system of mnemonics in a half unconscious way; but most probably those whose minds are orderly and well regulated can mentally put their fingers on facts and dates and details, just as a good man of business knows exactly where to find his papers or his goods.

When Commander Rawson fell at Tel-el-Kebir the Queen showed great sympathy for his widow, and offered to become godmother to her little babe, who was born at that sad time. Soon after her Majesty reached Osborne this winter, she sent for the mother and child, and received them so cordially, and with such warm interest, that Mrs. Rawson felt quite at home, and realised that the Sovereign's kindness was no mere formal expression of goodwill, but that she felt as woman to woman, heart to heart.

County and charity balls are just now in full swing, and it is said that there is a reaction in favour of modern dress this winter, after the plethora of fancy-costume balls which have been so popular during the last year or two. Young ladies are once more wearing simple white toilettes, partly because French mothers are dressing their débutantes in the very finest white muslin, and partly on account of the example set by the Princess of Wales, whose three daughters wear white very usually in the evening. At the birthday-balls last week at Sandringham, they were attired in the chenille-spotted tulle which is so fashionable at present, and nothing could be prettier or less ostentatious.

At a meeting of vegetarians, at Exeter Hall, last Monday evening, a lady doctor announced that she had cured herself of tubercular disease by living in pure air and abstention from animal food. The question that rises to most people's minds on reading this, is whether pure air, combined with a moderate amount of animal diet, would not have cured her in half the time.

OLD MASTERS AT BURLINGTON HOUSE.

THE ENGLISH SCHOOL.

The varied collection of works by British artists in the first room shows little sign of languishing resources. On the contrary, this year's display includes some works of very exceptional interest as well as of rare beauty. Amongst the latter, and in the very first rank, will be placed Sir Joshua Reynolds' "Miss Penelope Boothby" (55), one of those charming child portraits of which, in spite of its appearance in every window or house, one is never tired. One may be disposed to doubt whether any child of three could have presented so sedate an expression; for, in spite of the exquisite simplicity of the face, it is not wanting in thoughtfulness; but one cannot help wondering how Reynolds, within a year of that attack which was to paralyse his hand during the last few years of his life, could have found time to spend such care upon any one work at almost the busiest time of his career, and in a year when, as we know, he exhibited no less than eighteen pictures of various kinds. "Little Penelope," in her white dress, mob-cap, and mittens, was the only child of Sir Brooke, a minor poet of that select "Lichfield" circle of which Dr. Darwin, Edgeworth, and Miss Seward were the greater lights. She died only a few months before Sir Joshua, when scarcely six years old. "The Dead Bird" (59), by the same, is almost a companion picture; but, in spite of the story it is supposed to tell, it lacks the interest of the simple portrait, and the child, mourning the loss of her pet, is wanting in real emotion. There is no accurate date assigned to this work, but it seems to belong to Reynolds' later period; whereas the brilliant portrait of Barbara, Countess of Scarborough, the heiress of the Saviles, was one of his earliest works, and painted even before he had removed from Newport-street to Leicester-square. Of Reynolds' other works in this room, notice should be taken of his portraits of his sister-academician "Angelica Kauffman" (2), "Lady Charlotte Johnstone" (27), "Barnet Langton" (52), the friend of Dr. Johnson, and Langton's wife, "The Countess of Rothes" (63). The portrait of "Mrs. Billington" (9) deserves, however, a few words of special notice. She and Mrs. Jordan were at the moment the most popular actresses of the day, and Reynolds', as was his custom, was anxious to paint their portraits, as he had those of Mrs. Abington, Mrs. Siddons, and other public favourites. Mrs. Billington seems to have especially pleased him; for, in addition to this picture, there is another portrait of the lady as St. Cecilia, now in the New York Museum, besides numerous sketches of her engaging face, surrounded by soft brown curls. Reynolds's portrait of himself (39), lent by Mr. Samuel Cousins, R.A., is also one of many which the artist did at various periods of his life. The one here exhibited is probably that which was painted for Dr. Thrale, about 1775; and the litted hand towards the ear betokens that even at that time his deafness had made progress. The attitude, in fact, almost inevitably recalls Goldsmith's description of him:—

> When they talked of their Raphaels, Correggios, and stuff,
> He shifted his trumpet, and only took snuff.

We are, however, in no danger of losing Reynolds' notion of his own appearance; for there are nearly a score of portraits of himself, extending from one painted before his journey to Italy for one of his Plympton friends, down to the portrait in triplicate representing him an old man in spectacles, of which the date must have been about 1788. Another interesting portrait is that of "Samuel Foote" (41), the actor, who invented the "entertainments" at the Haymarket, which were so successful that they drove to rage and despair the managers of the "patent" theatres. "To take a dish of tea" with Mr. Foote was one of the chief delights of the theatre-going public of 1746, who probably enjoyed Foote's imitations of the actors of the day all the more because they were helping him to set the Lord Chamberlain at defiance. Foote, however, soon made his peace with the profession, and became especially fond of Garrick, whom he made the butt of his wit and his banker in his oft-recurring times of need. Foote was one of the intimate circle which often gathered round Reynolds' table, where his never-flagging spirits made him a general favourite.

Of Gainsborough enough has been said elsewhere, so that we will limit our reference to his portraits of "Mr. Hibbert" (36), of Chalfont, and "Lady Musgrave" (47), the daughter of "Harvey the Handsome and the Beautiful Molly Lepell"; but in the stately lady here represented one fails to recognise her, as described by Horace Walpole before her marriage, as "a fine black girl, but as masculine as her father should be."

But something more is due to Hogarth, who this year shows with more than usual strength at Burlington House. The time has long since gone by when it was the custom to say that English art dates from Reynolds, and anyone who will measure Hogarth's work as here exhibited, by no matter what standard, must admit that it was he who imprinted upon English art a national as well as individual stamp. It should also not be forgotten that to Hogarth (indirectly) we owe the modern custom of picture exhibitions open to the public by payment. The first idea of any such "benevolence" is due to the Governors of the Foundling Hospital, who permitted visitors to see the Hogarth pictures there at a charge of one shilling per head. Of the works exhibited at Burlington House, mention has already been made of "Southwark Fair;" but the two pictures "Morning" (44) and "Night" (48), which form part of the series known as "the four times of the day," are, if possible, still more crowded with moral lessons, if not with incidents. London life in those days was still semi-civilised, and Hogarth has not hesitated to lay bare its vices and foibles with a "brutal" brush. But there is no pruriency of thought, no suggestion of anything below thes urface in which moralists are so often tempted to indulge, and nothing can hardly be healthier in the lesson than that here taught. "A Conversation at Wanstead House" (28) is admirable in colour and composition, as well as of historical interest, recalling this fine old place, in which the first owner, Sir Richard Child, afterwards Earl Tylney, was said to have expended upwards of £100,000. He was a man of great wealth and apparently little taste. His brother, Mr. Josiah Child, made for himself notoriety by introducing one-horse chairs into Paris; and for an entire season la fureur des cabriolets possessed the fashionable Parisians to such an extent that the men painted them on their waistcoats and the ladies wore caps which imitated carriage wheels. The portrait of "James Quin" (6) is a solid piece of work, and scarcely suggests that fund of brilliant repartee and ready wit for which the actor was so noted. Another artist, George Morland, can this year be seen almost at his best—the two bright, delicately-finished studies "Idleness" (7) and "Diligence" (14) conveying a far higher idea of his power of application than is to be obtained from his works in general. His marvellous facility of expression was his greatest enemy; it enabled him to produce rapidly works which found a sale at such prices as permitted him to maintain, without dignity or self-respect, his free and easy life. As a rule, Morland is more at his ease among rustic scenes, of which the "Dancing Dogs" (30) in the present Exhibition is an excellent example; but these two figures of women in their different moods shows the artist as a gentle satirist though by no means a stern censor.

Richard Wilson, the first of classic painters, must not be judged by his "San Lazzaro" (20), though it may possibly have been painted under the eye of Zuccarelli, his master, at Venice; and Bonington is most inadequately represented by his single work, the "Fish-market, Boulogne" (3), which, in spite of the skill with which the misty morning light is rendered, falls far short of Sir W. Calcott's "Tomb of Cicero" (68), where a somewhat similar atmosphere is flushed with far richer and more transparent tones. It is time, too, that Bonington should be better known in this country, to which he at least belongs by birth, if not by education; and we have too long allowed our French neighbours to claim him for their own, as may be seen from the official catalogue of the Louvre Gallery, where his picture of "Francis I. and the Duchesse d'Etampes" is placed among the works of the French School. James Ward's "Swans" (32) is, as a composition, excellent—conforming to every rule of art; but his "Dogs Fighting" (13) are ungainly and wooden; whilst the "Village Scene" (33) is scarcely more than an imitation of Rubens. Sir Edwin Landseer's "Fallen Monarch" (12) will add little to the artist's reputation, for the dead lion and the rock, behind which he has concealed himself to die alone, are of apparently the same texture and surface; but it is not possible to wish for anything grander and simpler than Turner's rendering of his "Devil's Bridge" (18), with the high rocks of the St. Gothard Pass cold and grey in early morning light. Of the three works by Romney, "Little Bo-Peep" (24), with her crook and sheep, has a pretty pose, but no expression; whilst the "Portrait of Mrs. Musters" (55), "most beautiful, but most unhappy," has a special interest, as it allows of comparison with Reynolds' two portraits of the same lady in the large gallery.

Mr. W. T. Dannat has been elected a member of the Incorporated Society of British Artists.

Messrs. J. W. Waterhouse, R.I., F. D. Millet, and C. Napier Henry, R.I., have been elected members of the Institute of Painters in Oil Colours.

Mr. Sidney Cattermole has had the honour of submitting his oil paintings of the Cornish coast to the Prince and Princess of Wales.

It was announced at the Liverpool City Council meeting last week that a cheque for £11,720 had been received from Sir A. B. Walker, to cover the cost of the extension of the Walker Art Gallery, which building was erected by Sir Andrew at his own expense and presented to the city.

The Channel Squadron left Plymouth Sound on Monday morning for Arosa Bay, Spain, and is not expected to return to England until about the middle of May.

Vice-Chancellor Bacon has made perpetual the injunction obtained by Lord Lytton preventing the publication of letters written by his Lordship's father to the late Lady Lytton.

In consequence of some cases of measles having occurred in the children's ward at the London Hospital, the proposed entertainment to be given by Princess Christian last Wednesday has been postponed.

Mr. Charles Barrett Russell, of the Western Circuit, has been appointed Recorder of South Molton, in place of Mr. J. J. Hooper, who recently resigned the post in consequence of having been appointed a County Court Judge.

We are requested by Lord Walsingham to state that there is no truth whatever, so far as he is aware, in a report which has been widely circulated to the effect that he has lately been found to be entitled to a large sum of money.

It was intimated in the Court of Appeal on Monday that the motion by the London correspondent of a Paris journal for a new trial of the action for libel brought by Mrs. Weldon had been abandoned, and additional costs were awarded to the plaintiff.

On Saturday evening Sir William Gull distributed to the students of the Working Men's College the prizes gained during the last term. He remarked on the work done by the College, which he thought was leading the way towards the progress of adult education in London.

A long list of shipping accidents, the result of the recent stormy weather, has been telegraphed from various parts of our coasts. Gallant service has been performed by several life-boats. Snow fell over a wide area on Monday, and in the north it lies to a considerable depth.

"Low's Handbook to the Charities of London," published by Messrs. Sampson Low and Co., has been issued, revised and edited to December, 1884, by Mr. Charles Mackeson. It gives, as usual, trustworthy information with regard to the objects, funds, and officials of the metropolitan charitable institutions.

A public meeting of the Vegetarian Society was held on Monday night at Exeter Hall—Mr. E. Collier, of Manchester, in the chair. It was stated that the society had supplied during the Health Exhibition 161,000 meals, and had made a small profit on their work. Several prominent advocates of vegetable diet addressed the meeting.

Sir Edmund Hay Currie opened on Monday a large school, which has recently been erected by the London School Board in Highbury Station-road, Islington, at a cost of £21,840. The new building will accommodate at present 1195 children, but it is in contemplation at a future date to increase its capacity until it will hold 1600 pupils.

The Earl of Powis, Lord Lieutenant of the county, on Monday presided at a meeting at Welshpool to promote the foundation of a Montgomeryshire Scholarship at the Royal College of Music. A committee was formed, and Lord Powis, Captain Pryce, Mr. R. E. Jones, and Mr. Dugale were elected trustees. The scholarship it is proposed to found will be worth £100 a year.

At the annual meeting of the Essex Agricultural Society, held at Chelmsford on the 9th inst.—Mr. James Round, M.P., in the chair—it was decided to invite the Duke of Connaught, Ranger of Epping Forest, to be president for the year. The summer exhibition is to be held the first week in June at Waltham Abbey, and the sum of £1600 has been voted for prizes in the various classes.

In a report drawn up for Sir Arthur Bass, M.P., Professor Leone Levi estimates the present earnings of the working classes in the United Kingdom at four hundred and seventy million pounds a year, an average of about thirty-two shillings per week for each family. Assuming the calculations to be correct, Professor Levi comes to the conclusion that the working population is in a better economic condition than the labouring classes of any other country.

At a meeting of the general committee of the recent Norwich Festival, it was shown that the receipts from all sources (including a balance of £40 brought forward from the festival of 1881) had been £4723. After payment of all expenses, £953 remained available for distribution among the local charities, and it was resolved to distribute the bulk of it accordingly. The amount paid to the principal vocal performers at the festival was £1155, the cost of the instrumental band had been £896, and that of the chorus £279; £418 was expended in fitting up St. Andrew's Hall for the festival.

CITY ECHOES.

Wednesday, Jan. 14.

Rates in the Money Market have now taken an upward course, the large amount of cash let loose by the dividend payments having been reduced by the repayment of loans had of the Bank of England, and by the steady absorption of money by the revenue collections. In addition, the half-monthly settlement in the Stock Exchange, which concluded to-day, has caused the inquiry for money to be more active, though this, of course, is only a temporary factor. Those, however, who expected to see money cheap in January are apparently not to have their expectations realised; particularly as further borrowings on the part of the Colonies are to be looked for.

The Stock and Share Markets have improved in tone, the scare caused a week ago by the unfounded rumours respecting the ordering of the Channel Fleet having passed away. The Funds have had an important advance, while there appears to be a very good inquiry by the public for safe investments generally, the success attending the New Zealand loan confirming this impression. Foreign Government loans have not been in much demand, but as on the Continent the tone has been more cheerful, prices have risen here in sympathy. The Manchester and Sheffield dividend announcement was up to anticipation, but the rate proposed by the South-Eastern Company is rather below what had been hoped for, and this has had a depressing effect upon the tendency of the Home railway department. American and Canadian railways have had a satisfactory rise.

Three of the leading English Railway Companies have announced their dividends for the past half-year. The Metropolitan recommend the usual 5 per cent per annum, but to pay this £14,000 is to be taken from the reserve fund, the amount at the credit of which will then be £128,241. The South-Eastern Company will distribute 6½ per cent per annum on the ordinary stock, leaving about £1000 to be carried forward. The holders of the deferred stock will thus receive 3¼ per cent for the entire year, 6 per cent per annum being paid for the half-year on the preferred stock. For the second half of 1883 the distribution on the ordinary stock was 7½ per cent per annum, and on the preferred 6, the deferred receiving 4½ for the year, while the sum of £3310 was carried forward. A dividend, at the rate of 4 per cent per annum, is recommended by the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway Company, compared with 4½, while £2980 will remain to be carried forward as against £2816.

The further dividend announcements by the London joint-stock banks are remarkably satisfactory, considering the complaints that have been made about the unprofitableness of trade during the second half of last year. The Central Bank of London have even managed to increase their rate of distribution, the shareholders getting 11 per cent per annum, compared with 10 for the past six half-years. The Alliance Bank recommend a distribution at the rate of 7 per cent per annum, the City 10, the Consolidated 10, and the London and Provincial 12½, all of which rates are the same as for the corresponding period. The London and Westminster distribute 16 against 18; the London Joint-Stock, 13½ against 15; the Union, 12½ against 15; and the Imperial 7 against 8. The London Joint-Stock make their distribution on £600,000 increased capital, the amount of paid-up capital being now £1,800,000.

Discount companies are more influenced by the changes in the Money Market than the banks, from the fact that they are obliged to pay a given rate of interest on the total amount of deposits they hold. As in the case of the joint-stock banks, the experience of the half-year has been quite as favourable as could have been reasonably expected. The National Discount Company have, it is true, reduced their dividend from 13 to 12 per cent per annum, and the General Credit and Discount from 2s. 3d. to 1s. 9d. per share, but the United Discount propose paying 7 against 6 per cent per annum for the corresponding period.

Telegrams have been received announcing the suspension of specie payments by the Argentine Republic; and, as usual in such cases, a greatly exaggerated view of the matter has been taken by the Stock Exchange, the loans of the Republic, as well as the Railway issues, having fallen sharply in market value. The resources of the country are, however, great; and the exercise of strict economy is all that is required to set the finances up in a perfectly healthy state.

At the meeting of the bondholders of the Montreal and Sorel Railway an influential committee was appointed, so that the injured subscribers are likely to get to a full knowledge of what led up to their being drawn into such an enterprise.

T. S.

The Irish College of Surgeons decided last Saturday to admit lady candidates for surgical diplomas.

Mr. Bompas, Q.C., has been appointed Recorder of Plymouth, in succession to Mr. Cole, deceased.

General the Earl of Longford has become a vice-president of the Military and Civil Service College, Milford Haven.

A deputation of the provisional committee of the promoters of the Manchester Ship Canal Bill on Tuesday deposited £299,600 in Consols with the Accountant-General in Chancery as the Parliamentary deposit required by Standing Orders. This is the largest sum ever deposited by promoters of any private bill.

Lord M'Laren decided an important question of law in the Court of Session, at Edinburgh, on Tuesday. Janet Goldie, Kilmarnock, asked to have it declared that two deposit receipts, amounting to over £200, were her property. She said that on his death-bed her brother indorsed the receipts, and wrote on the back of each of them, "I leave this to my sister Janet." His Lordship decided that this was not a valid settlement.

The council of the Royal Astronomical Society have awarded their gold medal to Dr. W. Huggins for his researches on the motions of stars in the line of sight and on the photographic spectra of stars and comets. The presentation will take place at the annual meeting next month. This is the second time that Dr. Huggins has received the medal—he having, in 1867, in conjunction with the late Professor Miller, received it for his researches in astronomical physics.

Mr. Burt, M.P., presented the prizes to the students at the Science and Art Schools, Newcastle-on-Tyne, last Saturday evening. He said the Education Act had accomplished a revolution, not less real or complete for being bloodless, in the thoughts, aspirations, and habits of our countrymen. The expenditure was high, but we had got a good return for the money so far as elementary education was concerned. He advocated the establishment of science and art schools.

At the annual meeting of the friends of the Royal Ear Hospital, on Tuesday, in Frith-street, Soho, it was stated that during the sixty-nine years it has been established, over 120,000 patients had been treated for ear diseases within its walls. During 1884 there were 8128 out-patient attendances, at which 2625 separate cases received careful treatment. These numbers greatly exceeded any former record. Fifty patients were admitted into the in-patient wards, all serious cases and mostly children. This new department is a great success.

THE LATE MAJOR BROPHY.

Major Nicholas Winsland Brophy, whose untimely death took place on the 28th ult., by drowning, from the upsetting of a boat on the Nile, was one of the most distinguished officers of the 42nd Royal Highlanders (the Black Watch). He had recently displayed singular courage and skill, at a critical moment, among the upgoing boats on the Nile. When entering one of the dangerous rapids, a baggage-boat, directed by two of the trained Canadians, got into difficulties. Both the Canadians were thrown out, and the boat was in imminent peril of being lost. Major Brophy, with a brother officer, Mr. Bald, was on the bank; the latter jumped into a small boat, put off at once, and succeeded in saving one of the Canadians, but the other was drowned. This accident occasioned a scare among the Canadians, who hesitated to make an attempt to save the baggage-boat; and then Major Brophy, whose sporting experiences, both with the gun and the rod, on Irish and Scotch rivers and lakes, had rendered him very conversant with the management of boats, promptly volunteered to undertake the task. His example gave courage to one of the Canadians, who consented to join him, and they succeeded in righting and bringing up the boat, with a dexterity which excited the admiration of the lookers-on. It is sad that, so soon after this notable performance, Major Brophy, by some unaccountable mischance, should have fallen a victim to the treacherous river. This lamented officer's military career has been, from the first, with the "Black Watch," which he entered as Ensign in March, 1865; he became Lieutenant in March, 1869, Captain in October, 1878, and received his Brevet Majority in recognition of his gallant services in the field during the expedition to the Soudan last February. Major Brophy had seen a great deal of active service, and had been frequently mentioned in despatches. When serving with this regiment in the Ashantee war, during a check which occurred in the battle of Amoaful, when his men fell back, his cool intrepidity in walking across an open space, exposed to the full fire of the enemy, so reassured the men that they came on with a rush. For this signal act of courage he was recommended for the Victoria Cross. He received the medal, with clasp, for the Ashantee war, and again, with the Khedive's star, for the Egyptian war of 1882, in which he was at the storming of Tel-el-Kebir. At the battles of El Teb and Tamai, in the Eastern Soudan, he showed remarkable gallantry, which was recognised by his promotion to higher rank. His body has been recovered from the Nile.

THE LATE MAJOR BROPHY, 42ND HIGHLANDERS, DROWNED IN THE NILE.

THE TRACERY OF TREES.

Many are the writers who have written about the season of winter; and Burton, one of them, thus speaks of it: "Thou hast thy beauties—sterner ones, I own, than those of thy precursors; yet to thee belong the charms of solemn majesty and naked grandeur;" and this naked grandeur is never better seen than when "great ice-bound trees are glittering," and, "sap-checked with frost, and lusty leaves quite gone," we get the wondrous lace-work of that grace of growth which is called tree-tracery. Wondrous indeed it is that such sturdy trunks should have a lace-like edging, whose graceful growth is made more graceful still when, "as winter drives along the darkened air" against the leaden backing, they stand out, white with hoar-frost; as it is then that the beautiful tracery of their mixed twigs and branches is more fully displayed, and we see more clearly that perfect symmetry of form, and that infinite variety of character, which are so dependent on individual species, soil, age, and aspect.

It is, however, when "the poorest twig on the elm-tree is ridged inch-deep with pearl," that frost-work has for us its greatest charm; as the branching of the elm, in its ultimate ramifications, exceeds, in its delicacy, all other trees. Miss Mitford most aptly termed hoar-frost "that matchless magician," as we see in her winter picture, where she says, "We have reached the trees, the beautiful trees! Never so beautiful as to-day. Imagine the effect of a straight and regular double avenue of oaks, arching overhead, and closing into perspective like the roof and columns of a cathedral; every tree and branch incrusted with the bright and delicate congelation of hoar-frost, white and pure as snow, delicate and refined as carved ivory." But it is when "the snow had begun in the gloaming, and busily all the night had been heaping field and highway with a silence deep and white," that we most note the difference in elms and oaks; for though, from the very nature of its structure, the elm, for beauty from frost-work, beats the oak—as is so strikingly exemplified in the elm-treed lanes of Worcestershire, "when we look upon their tracery by the fairy frost-work bound"—yet the oak, with snow on it, exceeds it in grandeur, through the stronger markings we get by the greater width of its branches.

Shropshire is the county where oaks most abound; but Warwickshire, also, is a great place for them; and the Forest of Arden—of Shakspeare—as we know, was full of them—old ones, gnarled and knotty; and there yet remain at Henley-in-Arden—in that remnant of the forest called Packington Park—many of those oaks, now hoary, old as the one under which the melancholy Jacques did lie and moralise, that form favourite tree-studies with the artists of the Midlands. They are glorious old trees, and we have many times sketched them—in autumn for their mellow tints, and in winter for their branching; when, snow-clad, they loomed aloft in solemn majesty, dwarfing, by the greatness of their growth, all but their fellows. For tree-studies—trunk, branch, and tracery—Winter is the friend of the landscape-painter; as it is then, by carefully sketching the skeleton forms—which Vandermeer and Isaac Ostade well depicted—that he ensures the accuracy of his finished work; as he is thereby enabled to avoid mistakes, by graduating, as in nature, the size of his trunks to the number of their branches, and by tapering those branches most where most stems are shown; and by also noting where excrescences of a past growth are indicated, he knows where his trunk should be thinner—namely, just above where those knots are placed. That this winter study of tree-tracery is an all-important one is clearly evident, not only by the common mistakes of modern artists, but also by the errors we find in the pictures of famous painters, whose branches, in diameter, are often at variance with the relative girth of the tree.

No writer on Art has been more alive to the necessity of this study than our great art-critic, Mr. Ruskin, who, after condemning Claude and others for their wrong tree-proportions, and stating that the stems and boughs of trees taper only where they fork, writes thus in his "Modern Painters":—"Wherever a stem sends off a branch, or a branch a lesser bough, or a lesser bough a bud, the stem or the branch is, on the instant, less in diameter by the exact quantity of the branch or the bough they have sent off; and they remain of the same diameter until they send off another branch or bough. This law is imperative, and without exception"; whilst further on he says, "and in the upper parts of the tree, the ramifications take place so constantly and delicately, that the effect upon the tree is precisely the same as if the bough actually tapered." It will therefore be seen that, even in their tracery, trees are subject to rule. As it is now amongst modern artists, so was it with those in the days gone by—each had a fondness for some special tree. Thus, to cite a few instances only—whilst thinking of Berghem and Paul Bril, we think but of stained-oak trunks and ivied ones; we connect the names of John Both, Huysmans, and Albert Cuyp, with oaks of fine form and majestic foliage; Ruysdael, with twisted birch and beech, and Claude with stone-pines and elms; Adrian Vanderveldewith aspens and poplars, and Salvator Rosa with cleft chestnut-trees; Hobbema with dark groves; and Everdingen with sombre cedars.

But not only is winter of value to artists for its snow-clad tree-tracery, it is also of use to them when February comes in, and brings, with its lessened severity, the herald of the flowers—"sent with its small white flag of truce, to plead for its beleaguered brethren"; and the pale primrose that truly brings "the welcome news of sweet returning spring"; as it is then that the delineation can be best effected of those mosses and lichens which so enhance the character of forest trees, as instanced by Gilpin, in his definition of the picturesque; and when we think of the different tints and tones that belong to that verdure of winter, it will be seen that those mosses need careful work. Thus, whilst on the beech their colour will be spring-green; on the oak, green olive and black; and on the elm, of a yellow or a mottled shade, it will on all trees of a certain age be white or silvery, and the tint will differ at the base of most, ranging through diverse shades of green, to that soft quaint mossiness which belongs to the beech, and makes its roots so velvety. There is the same variety with lichens,

THE NILE EXPEDITION: THE GUARDS' CAMEL CORPS ON THE WAY TO DONGOLA—BUYING MILK AT THE VILLAGE OF MAGREKAH.
SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, MR. MELTON PRIOR.

1. Sandringham, the residence of the Prince of Wales. 2. The ball-room. 3. Sanger's procession entering the park. 4. Tea-party of labourers' wives. 5. The Royal party at Sanger's Circus.

FESTIVITIES ON THE COMING OF AGE OF PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR OF WALES.

too, and an equal scale of colour—from primrose, yellow, and orange to russet and purply-red, brown, and grey; so that both lichens and mosses require some study, and there is no time for it so good as the winter.

Winter, by Rowe, is made the "father" of the year—"snowy-headed winter leads"—as by Proctor, also—"the eldest of the seasons"; but with Shelley, it is simply the "sleep" of the year—"for the year is but asleep"; and the apparent death of the trees in winter is but the prelude to their spring awakening. "The decay of one year," says the Rev. Aris Wilmot, "is the foliage of the next; the leaves that summer spared, the gales will scatter; death must reign in the silent woodlands. But the sight is beautiful, for the tracery of the tree grows transparent, as if a light were shining through it." Thus, as beauty is in everything, there is beauty at all times, even in the desolate time of winter.

THE NILE EXPEDITION.

There is good cause to hope that the advanced force of Lord Wolseley's army will have reached that of General Gordon on the Nile below Khartoum by the end of the present week. The point at which this junction may take place is Metammeh, opposite Shendy, where General Gordon's armed steam-boats are able to come down the river. Brigadier-General Sir Herbert Stewart, who on Thursday week again set out from Korti, with additional troops, to lead forward his brigade of camel-mounted infantry and cavalry from the Gakdul Wells, expected to get to Metammeh yesterday (Friday). He took with him from Korti, in this second march across the Desert, a squadron of the 19th Hussars, the heavy section of the Camel Corps, the Mounted Infantry, the Royal Sussex Regiment, and the Naval Brigade, both the latter mounted on camels, with a large convoy of stores. The troops he had already collected at Gakdul consisted of 1150 men, Guards, Marines, and light cavalry soldiers of the Camel Corps, some Artillerymen without guns, and the 26th Company of Royal Engineers. It is understood that the Sussex Regiment would be left at Gakdul to guard the wells, and that Sir Herbert Stewart would push on to Metammeh with about two thousand men. The route is by the wells of Abou Klea, fifty-two miles south-east of Gakdul, and twenty-two miles beyond Abou Klea to the Nile at Metammeh. It is arranged that, as soon as Sir Herbert Stewart's column reaches Metammeh, Colonel Wilson, with three other officers, shall go up immediately in one of General Gordon's steamers to Khartoum, ascertain from him the exact position of affairs, and, after consultation with General Gordon as to the best course to be pursued, return to Metammeh by steamer. By that time, no doubt, Lord Wolseley himself will be at Metammeh. A messenger sent by him to General Gordon returned to Korti on the 11th inst., having left Khartoum on Dec. 28. He was taken prisoner returning, and Gordon's letters were taken from him. This man bears marks of having been bound and beaten; but, sewn up in clothes not taken from him was a copy of Gordon's previous little note, bearing same date, Dec. 14, and announcing all well then. Gordon was in perfect health on the 28th, and the troops on the five steamers were well and happy. Gordon's steamers continue to seize cattle and grain, and take them up the river to Khartoum. The advance of Sir Herbert Stewart's brigade is accompanied by Lord Charles Beresford's naval detachment, with a Gardner gun; and if Gordon's steamers should be found at Shendy, these sailors will take charge of them, and endeavour to establish communication with Khartoum by the river.

It is quite uncertain whether the Mahdi, who has about two thousand men at Metammeh, will choose to fight there, when Sir Herbert Stewart's force approaches, or will take his stand nearer Khartoum. His whole army is now reckoned at eight thousand, but this information is extremely vague.

The whole force of mounted men assembled under command of Sir Herbert Stewart, Brigadier-General, amounts to over 1900—the Mounted Infantry Regiment 476, the two Cavalry and the Guards regiments 1150, and the squadrons of the 19th Hussars, mounted on horses, 280, giving a total of 1906 officers and men. It may be worth noting that the right designation of the different component parts of the Camel Corps is as follows:—The Camel Corps comprises four regiments, the Heavy Cavalry Regiment of the Camel Corps, the Light Cavalry Regiment of the Camel Corps, the Guards Regiment of the Camel Corps, and the Mounted Infantry Regiment of the Camel Corps. Our Special Artist, Mr. Melton Prior, has sketched a party of the Guards of the Camel Corps innocently buying milk in a village through which they marched.

The removal of Lord Wolseley's head-quarters from Dongola to Korti, in the middle of December, was accompanied by much military bustle. The Mudir of Dongola, whose assistance to the British expedition has been of the greatest value, put his iron steam-boat and dahabiyeh at Lord Wolseley's disposal for the passage up the river to Ambukol. The scene at their leave-taking is represented in our Artist's Sketch; Lord Wolseley told the Mudir where he intended to fix his next head-quarters, adding, "If I want you, I will send for you." The Mudir has since been actually sent for to Korti, whence Lord Wolseley has now sent him up the Nile to Merawi, to help General Earle in dealing with the Monassir and Robatat tribes.

The scene depicted in our large Engraving is the start of a portion of the British cavalry on the march across the Desert.

The Engraving in our last issue illustrating the naval career of the sons of the Prince of Wales was copied from a photograph by Messrs. Downey, of Ebury-street, Pimlico. The same eminent firm of artists have just been honoured by Prince Henry of Battenberg with sittings for his portrait.

The Gazette announces that Lord Aberdare and the Marquis of Normanby have been appointed Knights Grand Cross of the Bath; and that Messrs. E. A. Bond, Principal Librarian of the British Museum; H. H. Murray, Secretary of the Board of Customs; J. C. O'Dowd, Deputy Judge Advocate-General; Mr. George Scharf, Director of the National Portrait Gallery; Stair Agnew, Registrar-General for Scotland; and John Clerk Brodie, Keeper of the Registrar of Sasines, Scotland, have been appointed Companions of the Bath.

A novel exhibition was on Monday opened to the public at Humphreys' Hall, Knightsbridge, by Sir Rutherford Alcock, late Consul-General in Japan. It consists of a miniature, but animate, representation of a Japanese art and industrial village. About one hundred natives, male and female, of the "Land of the Rising Sun," have been brought to this country, through the enterprise of Mr. Tannaker Buhicrosan, to illustrate in person the manners and customs of their ingenious and industrious race. They represent various trades and professions, and may be seen daily engaged in their different vocations, in native-built shops and houses, as in Japan. Not only their labours, but their recreations are reproduced, one portion of the building having been arranged as a theatre, in which the Orientals appear on the stage in fencing and wrestling matches and other athletic exercises. They also give musical entertainments, after the fashion of their country; and five-o'clock tea is regularly served to visitors. A Buddhist temple is included in the exhibition.

DEATH.

On the 7th inst., at Scarborough, Mabel Harriett, eldest and only surviving child of the late Neil Benjamin Baillie, Esq., Surgeon-Major of the Bengal Army, and sometime Civil Surgeon at Bhagulpore, in the 19th year of her age.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, is Five Shillings for each announcement.

THE VALE OF TEARS.—DORÉ'S Last Great PICTURE, completed a few days before he died, NOW on VIEW at the DORÉ GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street, with his other great pictures. Ten to Six Daily. 1s.

ANNO DOMINI, by EDWIN LONG, R.A.—This great Work is NOW ON VIEW, together with other important works, at the GALLERIES, 168, New Bond-street. Ten to Six. Admission, 1s.

THE JAPANESE VILLAGE, Erected and peopled exclusively by NATIVES of JAPAN, ALBERT-GATE, HYDE PARK. OPEN DAILY from Eleven a.m. to Ten p.m. under the distinguished Patronage of her Royal Highness PRINCESS CHRISTIAN, and her Royal Highness PRINCESS LOUISE, MARCHIONESS of LORNE, &c. SKILLED JAPANESE ARTIFICERS and WORKERS (Male and Female) will illustrate the MANNERS, CUSTOMS, and ART-INDUSTRIES of their Country, attired in their National and Picturesque Costumes.
Magnificently Decorated and Illuminated BUDDHIST TEMPLE.
FIVE O'CLOCK TEA in the Japanese Tea-House.
JAPANESE MUSICAL and other ENTERTAINMENTS.
EVERY-DAY LIFE in JAPAN. MILITARY BAND.
ONE SHILLING.
WEDNESDAYS, Half-a-Crown. Children under Twelve, Sixpence.
Promoter and Managing Director, T. BUHICROSAN.

NICE CARNIVAL, February 1 to 17.
CORSO CARNIVALESQUE.
Masked Revelries, Promenade of Allegorical Cars, Cavalcades, Masquerades.
CORSO DE GALA.
Bataille de Fleurs, Bataille de Confetti.
Veglione, Masked and Costume Balls,
Grand Charity Fancy Fair.
Moccoletti, Serenades, Torchlight Parades, Electric Lights, Fireworks, Illuminations.
Distribution of £2400 in Prizes.
President, Monsieur LE COMTE DE CESSOLE.
Secretary, M. A. SAETONE. Treasurer, BARON ROISSARD DU BELLET.

MONTE CARLO.—MUSICAL SEASON (CONCERTS, REPRESENTATIONS).
In addition to the usual Concerts, directed by Monsieur Romeo Accursi, the Société des Bains de Mer de Monaco has authorised M. Pasdeloup to arrange a Series of Extraordinary Grand Musical Entertainments (Concerts, Representations) this Winter.
The services of the following distinguished Artistes have been already retained:—

Mesdames Krauss,	Messieurs. Faure,
„ Devriès,	„ Vergnet,
„ Salla,	„ Capoul,
„ Donadio,	„ Bioarstein,
„ Frank-Duvernoy,	„ Coutarier,
„ Belloca,	„ Villaret,
„ Simonnet.	&c.

Added to which the celebrated Instrumentalists will appear:
VIOLINISTS:
Mons. Sivori, Mons. Marsik, Miss N. Carpenter. American artiste, 1st Octaverraioire Prize, 1883.
PIANISTS: Mons. Planté, Mons. Th. Ritter, Madame Essipoff.
HARPIST: Mons. Hasselmans.
These Extraordinary Representations will be given each Wednesday and Saturday, commencing the end of January and terminating the middle of March.
The Classical Concerts every Thursday.

The GRAND INTERNATIONAL CONCOURS will take place in the following order:—
Monday, Jan. 19: Prix de Monte Carlo. Grand Free Handicap. A Purse of 3000f. added to 100f. entrance.
Thursday, Jan. 22: Prix de Consolation. An object of Art and 1000f.
BI-WEEKLY MATCHES FOR PRIZES.
Jan. 24: Prix de Saint-Quentin. An object of Art, added to a Poule of 50f.
Jan. 27: Prix Yeo. A Purse of 500f., added to a Poule of 50f.
Jan. 31: Prix Saint Trivier. An object of Art, with Poule of 50f.
Feb. 3: Prix Robert. A Purse of 500f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 7: Prix Hopwood. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 10: Prix Ladoucette. A Purse of 500f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 12: Prix Edenbury. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 16: Prix du Comité. A Purse of 500f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 21: Prix Camasser. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 24: Prix Drevon. A Purse of 500f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 28: Prix Dori. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Mar. 3: Prix de Mars. A Purse of 500f. and a Poule of 50f.
Mar. 7: Prix Patton. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Mar. 10: Prix W. Gall. A Purse of 500f., added to a Poule of 50f.
GRAND CLOSING PRIZES.
March 12 and 13: Grand Prix de Clôture. A Purse of 4000f. added to 100f. entrance; Second Prize, 1000f.; Third Prize, 700f.; Fourth, 300f.
A. BLONDIN, Secretary.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY. NEWLY DECORATED.
THE NEW and MOST SUCCESSFUL PROGRAMME of the MOORE AND BURGESS MINSTRELS will be repeated EVERY NIGHT, at Eight; And on MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and SATURDAY AFTERNOONS, at Three, as well. Tickets and Places can be secured at Austin's Office, St. James's Hall. Fauteuils, 5s.; Sofa Stalls, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. No fees of any description.

MR. FREDERICK BURGESS'S TWENTIETH ANNUAL DAY and NIGHT FETE St. James's Grand Hall, Tuesday Afternoon and Evening, JAN. 27. One of the greatest and most extraordinary combinations of musical and dramatic artists ever brought together at a single entertainment. Vide following list:—Miss Alice Lingard, Mrs. Billington, Miss E. Farren, Miss Constance Loseby, Miss Florence St. John, Mrs. Frederic Burgess (née Miss Ellen Meyrick), Mr. James Fernandez, Mr. Charles Warner, Mr. Fred Leslie, Mr. Harry Waldman, Mr. Walter Jones, Mons. Marius, Mr. Harry Paulton, Mr. Arthur Roberts, Mr. George Barrett, Mr. J. M. Dallas, Mr. W. J. Hill, Mr. W. Penley, Mr. Lionel Brough, and Mr. Edward Terry. An entirely new and beautiful Musical Entertainment will also be given by the Moore and Burgess Minstrels. Tickets for all parts of the hall, and also for reserved seats, can be secured at Ambrose Austin's Universal Ticket Office, St. James's Hall.

MR. FREDERICK BURGESS'S GRAND DAY and NIGHT MUSICAL and DRAMATIC FETE.
IMPORTANT NOTICE.
TICKETS for all parts of the Hall, and for Numbered and Reserved Seats, at St. James's Grand Hall, Tuesday Afternoon and Night, JAN. 27, can now be secured at Austin's Office, St. James's Hall, daily, from 9.30 till 6.30. Visitors from the country may secure tickets by post on sending P.O.O. or cheque, together with a stamped and directed envelope addressed to Ambrose Austin, St. James's Hall, to whom all orders or cheques are to be made payable.

HOLDERS of BALCONY or AREA TICKETS for Mr. FREDERICK BURGESS'S MUSICAL and DRAMATIC FETE, at the St. James's Great Hall, Tuesday Afternoon and Night, JAN. 27, purchased prior to the 25th inst., will be admitted fifteen minutes before the regular opening of the doors, thereby avoiding all crowding or inconvenience; and tickets can be forwarded by post if a stamped and directed envelope is inclosed, on applicat on, addressed Ambrose Austin, at St. James's Hall.

MASKELYNE and COOKE, EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, give their performance EVERY AFTERNOON at Three, and on the Evenings, at Eight, of Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Mr. Maskelyne's Christmas Novelties, entitled THE FAKIRS OF BENARES AND THEIR BRAZEN ORACLE, introducing many Novel Effects and startling Illusions, differing entirely in character from any previously witnessed. Stalls, 5s.; Reserved Seats, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Balcony, 1s.

PRINCESS'S THEATRE.—MR. WILSON BARRETT, Lessee and Manager.—EVERY EVENING, at 7.45, HAMLET. Messrs. Wilson Barrett, Speakman, Dewhurst, Willard, Clifford Cooper, Frank Cooper, Cranford, &c., and Miss Barrett; Mesdames Eastlake, Dickens, &c., and M. Leighton. Doors open at 7.15. Box-office, 9.30 to Five. No fees. Matinees, Saturday, Jan. 24, and Saturday, Feb. 7, at 1.30. Business Manager, J. H. Cobbe.

BRIGHTON.—Frequent Trains from Victoria and London Bridge.
Also Trains in connection from Kensington and Liverpool-street.
Return Tickets, London to Brighton, available for eight days.
Weekly, Fortnightly, and Monthly Tickets, at Cheap Rates. Available to travel by all Trains between London and Brighton.
Cheap First-Class Day Tickets to Brighton every Weekday, from Victoria 10.0 a.m., fare 12s. Including Pullman Car.
Cheap Half Guinea First-Class Day Tickets to Brighton every Saturday from Victoria and London Bridge, admitting to the Grand Aquarium and Royal Pavilion.
Cheap First-Class Day Tickets to Brighton every Sunday from Victoria at 10.45 a.m. and 12.50 p.m.
Pullman Drawing-room Cars between Victoria and Brighton.
Through Bookings to Brighton from principal Stations on the Railways in the Northern and Midland Districts.

PARIS.—SHORTEST, CHEAPEST ROUTE.
Via NEWHAVEN, DIEPPE, and ROUEN.
Cheap Express Service Week-days and Sundays. From Victoria 7.50 p.m., and London Bridge 8.0 p.m. Fares—Single, 34s., 25s., 18s.; Return, 57s., 41s., 32s.
Powerful Paddle steamers, with excellent Cabins, &c. Trains run alongside steamers at Newhaven and Dieppe.
SOUTH OF FRANCE, ITALY, SWITZERLAND, &c.—Tourists' Tickets are issued, enabling the holder to visit all the principal places of interest.

TICKETS and every information at the Brighton Company's West-End General Offices, 28, Regent-circus, Piccadilly, and 8, Grand Hotel Buildings; Hay's Agency, Cornhill; Cook's, Ludgate-circus; also at the Victoria and London Bridge Stations. (By order) J. P. ESTOURT, General Manager.

PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR EDWARD OF WALES.

Prince Edward, or Prince Albert Victor—for he is still called by either name—eldest son of the Prince of Wales, and probably our future King, reached the manly age of twenty-one on Thursday week. This happy event was celebrated at Sandringham, the home of the Prince of Wales as an English country gentleman, with liberal, but simple and unceremonious, festivities, of which our Artist supplies a few Illustrations.

Sandringham, three miles from the northern seacoast of Norfolk, seven miles and a half from the town of Lynn Regis, or King's Lynn, and nearly two miles from the Wolferton railway station, is a small village with a beautiful little parish church, the sole landowner of which is the Prince of Wales, and of Babingley, the adjoining parish. The mansion, built in 1870, is a large and handsome Elizabethan building of brick and stone, occupying, with the subordinate parts, an oblong space of 450 ft. by 70 ft.; the architect was Mr. A. J. Humbert. It has gardens and pleasure-grounds tastefully laid out, with fine oak-trees and evergreens; a kitchen-garden of fifteen acres, and stables to accommodate forty horses; the park, which contains several pieces of water, is entered by stately iron gates; it is stocked with deer, and there is good pheasant and blackcock shooting on the estate. The parish has about a hundred inhabitants, and the population of Babingley is less; the Rector of both parishes, jointly, is the Rev. W. Lake Onslow. The Prince of Wales has built an excellent school-house and model cottages for the labourers' families; his Royal Highness has also bestowed much care and cost on agricultural improvement.

The new ball-room, in which the young Prince, accompanied by his parents and others of the Royal family, received addresses of congratulation at noon on his birthday, has recently been constructed in the south wing of the mansion, from the designs of Mr. Robert W. Edis, architect, of London. It is 66 ft. long by 30 ft. 6 in. wide, the walls 18 ft. high. The ceiling, which is arched and elaborately panelled, is 23 ft. high in the centre. On each side are deep-recessed alcoves 25 ft. in length and 4 ft. in depth; the south alcove is filled with windows, and the north with a magnificent fire-place. There are large bay windows at each end. At the east end is the minstrels' gallery, the front of which is an open white arcaded balustrade. An elaborate cornice and sculptured frieze, nearly 2 ft. deep, goes quite round the room. The walls are painted a delicate fawn-colour, the lower portion being panelled as a high dado, with mask and scroll ornamental frieze, 7 ft. high. The floor is of oak, with simple parquet bordering. The ceilings and decorations are white. For dancing purposes it is lighted by three large gas lights in the roof, which serve for the purpose of ventilation as well. There are also seven two-light gas-brackets projecting from the walls, fitted with opal globes, which throw out a soft tint. The walls are at present decorated with the Prince's Indian collection of arms arranged in various trophies, and the windows are curtained with heavy gold-embroidered Indian silk.

In this apartment, the Prince and Princess of Wales, with their eldest son between them, stood to receive the successive deputations. Behind them were Prince George of Wales and his three sisters. The Princess of Wales wore a mauve satin dress with dark red velvet trimmings, and a gold chain with pendant locket. The young Princesses were dressed in costumes of warm-coloured brown, and the Princes wore plain morning dress. With them stood their Royal uncles and aunts, the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh, Prince and Princess Christian, Princess Louise (Marchioness of Lorne) and the Marquis of Lorne; also the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, the Prince of Leiningen, Count and Countess Gleichen and Countess Feodore Gleichen. The Royal party were attended by the Hon. Julia Stonor, Miss Knollys, Major-General Du Plat (Equerry to the Queen), Colonel Teesdale, C.B., V.C., Colonel Ellis, C.S.I (Equerries to the Prince of Wales), Sir Oscar Clayton, Extra Surgeon in Ordinary to the Prince of Wales; Mr. F. W. Gibbs, C.B., formerly tutor to the Prince of Wales; Mr. R. P. Cockerell, Groom of the Bedchamber to the Prince of Wales; Rev. J. N. Dalton, C.M.G., Governor to Prince Albert Victor; Captain Durrant, R.N., C.M.G., Governor to Prince George; Mr. Knollys, C.B., Private Secretary to the Prince of Wales; Mr. Holzmann, Librarian to the Prince of Wales, and Private Secretary to the Princess of Wales; Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. O. Montagu; Mr. C. Sykes, M.P.; Captain Welch, R.N.; Mr. J. K. Stephen; Lord Colville of Culross, Chamberlain to the Princess of Wales; Lady Colville and the Hon. Blanche Colville; Sir Dighton and Lady Probyn; Lord Suffield, K.C.B., Lord of the Bedchamber to the Prince of Wales; Lady Suffield, Lady in Waiting to the Princess of Wales; the Hon. Alice Harbord; Captain H. Stephenson, R.N., C.B., Extra Equerry to the Prince of Wales.

The first deputation was that of the tenants of the Sandringham estate, headed by Mr. Sherringham, who presented an address, with a massive silver dish, or salver. Prince Albert Victor replied with heartfelt thanks, saying that he hoped to imitate his parents' example of goodwill, generosity, and kindness. The Mayor, Town Clerk, and Corporation of Norwich presented their address, with the gift of a rosewater ewer and salver, copied from the plate given to the Corporation in the year 1663; they also presented an address to the Prince and Princess of Wales, congratulating them upon the way in which they have brought up their children. The Prince of Wales replied first, and was followed by his son, who expressed his gratitude for the education that his parents had given him, and for having been enabled to visit our loyal fellow-subjects in the British Colonies. The Municipality of King's Lynn next presented the facsimile of "King John's Cup," of which we gave an Illustration last week, and which Prince Albert Victor accepted with a few remarks on the interesting local and historical associations of that town. Addresses were presented by the Mayor of Cambridge and by the head master and scholars of Lynn Grammar School, with an inkstand and a pair of antique candlesticks, subscribed for by the boys. The young Prince replied in the same kindly spirit, and shook hands with members of all the deputations, who were invited to partake of refreshments in the ball-room.

Outside the park gates, a crowd of spectators had assembled. The Sandringham and West Newton School children, the girls in scarlet cloaks, and the labourers on the estate, were conducted up the avenue to the front of the house, and a hearty cheer was raised when the Royal party—the ladies of which had now donned their outdoor costumes—appeared in the porch. The labourers were in their Sunday best, of divers patterns, but all wore low black wideawakes with scarlet bands. The keepers were smart in their shiny beavers encircled with gold cord and tassels, dark green velveteen jackets and gilt buttons, buff breeches and drab gaiters. The head steward announced to Prince Albert Victor that they had come to offer him their congratulations. The young Prince replied, "Thank you very much, kind friends."

Music was heard along the road beyond the avenue; the park gates were opened wide, and Mr. John Sanger's "grand cavalcade, and gorgeous procession" entered the park, the sun shining upon the chariots and horsemen resplendent in their brave array, the armour of the knights, the gay colours of the ladies' equestrian costumes, and the general equipments. The Royal party, no less than the school children and rustic dependents, much enjoyed the spectacle. The band chariot, the teams of Liliputian ponies, the crusaders and cavaliers, the beautiful trick horses led by dapper grooms, the coal-black steeds and black-robed riders, the elephants and camels, the hairless horse from Egypt, the tall trophy cars that could barely pass, marched to a stately measure before Sandringham House, across to the Lynn road, and to the Admiral's walk, where the circus had been prepared for their afternoon performance.

A short interval was spent in the porch, during the process of photographing the Prince's family by Mr. Barraud, of Oxford-street, in presence of the labourers and school children. This operation was successfully performed; the three young Princesses sat upon their chairs in the foreground; the Prince of Wales in his velvet-collared and velvet-cuffed overcoat, and the Princess of Wales, in hat, long jacket, and furs, by his side, stood between their sons. Mr. Barraud took other photographs, several single portraits, and a group of all the Royal persons staying in the house.

While the labourers were eating a substantial dinner in a tent outside the park, and the children were dealing with the buns and oranges given to each before retiring from the lawn, there was a general inspection in the hall of the birthday presents to Prince Albert Victor. An enormous quantity had been delivered, together with congratulatory telegraphic messages from all parts of the world. The presents were laid out on tables in one room, and attached to each was the letter accompanying it. Her Majesty's birthday-gift was a large golden bowl of rare workmanship. Amongst the miscellaneous gifts was a golden inkstand from Sir Moses Montefiore. A huge birthday-cake, made at Sandringham, stood upon the centre table.

The whole of the house party walked across through the gardens to see the circus performance in the afternoon. It had been announced that the people on the estate were first to be admitted, and then all comers. The result was a crowded marquee. The performance was, of course, highly appreciated. Mr. John Sanger has a permanent establishment at Norwich for the winter; and his company, animals, and effects were brought to Wolferton by special train, and returned in the same way to Norwich for the ordinary entertainment at night. A good programme was provided for the "Royal Pavilion Circus, Sandringham Park, Special Command"; and the Royal party, who occupied a set of state chairs opposite the band waggon, expressed their satisfaction of Mr. Sanger's efforts to please them. The rain began to fall just as the circus emptied, and the homeward walk to Sandringham Hall was rather hurried.

In a tent erected near the house about three hundred women, wives of labourers, were regaled with tea and cake. The rain ceased later in the evening, giving a chance for the illuminations which Mr. James Pain had been instructed to provide; and about nine o'clock the scene in the park, on the east and north fronts, was one of great brilliancy. Nearly a thousand large Chinese and Japanese lanterns were suspended on wires stretched across the broad avenue the whole length, from the Norwich park-gates to the house, whilst arranged in various devices facing the east front were 10,000 small cup lights. The effect was very fine. The Royal party and all the guests invited to the ball were charmed with the spectacle. The ball that night was a very brilliant scene, of which we give an Illustration in our Extra Supplement; Prince Albert Victor wore the uniform of the Norfolk Artillery Militia.

On Friday, the Prince of Wales, with Prince Albert Victor, Prince George, the Duke of Edinburgh, Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, the Prince of Leiningen, Count Gleichen, and the Marquis of Lorne, were out shooting at Winwood, Wolferton. The Prince and Princess on Friday night gave the tenants' ball, in continuation of the festivities. Signor Corti's band played a capital programme of dance music. The House party included the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh, Prince and Princess Christian, Princess Louise and the Marquis of Lorne, the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, the Prince of Leiningen, Count and Countess Gleichen and Countess Feodore Gleichen, the Hon. Julia Stonor, Miss Knollys, Mdlle. Vauthier, Fraulein Nödel, Lieutenant-Colonel O. Montague, Sir Oscar Clayton, Major-General Du Plat, Mr. F. W. Gibbs, Colonel A. Ellis, Captain P. Durrant, R.N., Captain D. N. Welch, R.N., Mr. C. Sykes, M.P., Mr. A. P. Cockerell, Mr. J. K. Stephen, Colonel Teesdale, Mr. H. Tyrwhitt Wilson, Mr. F. Knollys, the Rev. J. L. Dalton, and Mr. Holzmann. The general company consisted of the tenantry from the following estates:—Sandringham, Holkham (Lord Leicester's), Houghton (Marquis of Cholmondeley's), Raynham (Marquis Townshend's), Melton Constable (Lord Hasting's), Gunton (Lord Suffield's), Hillington (Sir W. Ffolkes), Westacre (Mr. A. Hamond's), Merton (Lord Walsingham's), and Middleton (Sir Lewis Jarvis's). After the first quadrille a number of representatives of the tenants of the Duchy of Cornwall were presented to the Prince and Princess of Wales, and offered their congratulations. The night was beautifully clear and fine, and the illuminations were again singularly effective.

On Saturday, there was a Royal meet of the West Norfolk Foxhounds. Many of the members of the hunt and their friends were entertained at breakfast in the ball-room, till the hounds arrived, under the mastership of Mr. Andrew Fountaine, of Narford Hall. The Prince and Princess of Wales, Princes Edward and George, Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud, the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh, the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, and others of the Royal party, joined the cavalcade, which rode to the Commodore Wood, to Anmer, and to other woods, where several foxes were found. The German Ambassador arrived at Sandringham on Saturday afternoon for the purpose of presenting Prince Edward, on behalf of the Emperor of Germany, with the order of the Black Eagle. The King of Sweden and the King of the Belgians have intimated their intention to confer their respective Orders upon Prince Edward. On Sunday morning the Prince and Princess of Wales, with Princes Edward and George, Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud, the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh, Princess Louise (Marchioness of Lorne) and the Marquis of Lorne, the Duke of Cambridge, and Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, were present at Divine service at the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, in the park. The Rev. Canon Tarver, M.A., officiated, assisted by the Rev. J. N. Dalton, M.A., the sermon being preached by the Rev. Canon Tarver.

The event was celebrated at Balmoral Castle with a dinner given to the tenants and servants of the Queen; Dr. Profeit, her Majesty's Commissioner for the Balmoral estate, presiding; while a bonfire was kindled on the hill at Craigowan. At Birkhall, Aberfeldie, the Highland residence of the Prince of Wales, there was a bonfire on the summit of Tomfour, with a supper and ball presided over by Mr. L. Mackinnon. The Common Council of London have resolved to present the freedom of the City, in a gold casket, to Prince Albert Victor of Wales. In London, on Thursday week, church bells were rung, flags were hoisted, and the Grenadier Guards' band played in the courtyard of St. James's Palace. At Windsor, a salute of twenty-one guns was fired in the Park near Frogmore, where the young Prince was born; there was also a juvenile dress ball at the Townhall. The Mayor of Brighton held a grand reception at the Royal Pavilion. Various tokens of recognition of the event were exhibited at Portsmouth, Dover, Eastbourne, Winchester, Dorchester, Stafford, Nottingham, Newcastle, Leamington, Grantham, Peterborough, Bury St. Edmund's, Huntingdon, Harwich, and many other towns throughout the Kingdom.

The Prime Minister, the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, has addressed the following letter to the young Prince:—

"Hawarden Castle, Jan. 7, 1885.

"Sir,—As the oldest among the confidential servants of her Majesty, I cannot allow the anniversary to pass without notice which will to-morrow bring your Royal Highness to full age, and thus mark an important epoch in your life.

"The hopes and intentions of those whose lives lie, like mine, in the past, are of little moment, but they have seen much, and what they have seen suggests much for the future.

"There lies before your Royal Highness in prospect the occupation, I trust at a distant date, of a throne which, to me at least, appears the most illustrious in the world, from its history and associations, from its legal basis, from the weight of the cares it brings, from the loyal love of the people, and from the unparalleled opportunities it gives, in so many ways and in so many regions, of doing good to the almost countless numbers whom the Almighty has placed beneath the sceptre of England.

"I fervently desire and pray—and there cannot be a more animating prayer—that your Royal Highness may ever grow in the principles of conduct and may be adorned with all the qualities which correspond with this great and noble vocation.

"And, Sir, if Sovereignty has been relieved by our modern institutions of some of its burdens, it still, I believe, remains true that there has been no period of the world's history at which successors to the Monarchy could more efficaciously contribute to the stability of a great historic system, dependent even more upon love than upon strength, by devotion to their duties, and by a bright example to the country. This result we have happily been permitted to see, and other generations will, I trust, witness it anew.

"Heartily desiring that, in the life of your Royal Highness, every private and personal may be joined with every public blessing, I have the honour to remain, Sir, your Royal Highness's most dutiful and faithful servant,

"W. E. Gladstone.

"H.R.H. the Prince Albert Victor, &c."

Our Coloured Portrait of his Royal Highness Prince Albert Victor Edward of Wales, presented as the Extra Supplement to the last week's Number of this Journal, was copied from the photograph taken by Messrs. Hills and Saunders, of Cambridge, also of the Oxford Photographic and Fine-Art Gallery at Oxford, and having branch establishments at Eton, Harrow, and Rugby.

At a meeting of the Royal Botanic Society last Saturday, Mr. Samuel Stubbs, F.L.S., was elected a Fellow of the society. Upon the tables were specimens of the jack fruit and bread fruit, the former weighing over 32 lb., from Rio de Janeiro; also some large radishes, grown in Portugal.

At the annual general court of the Royal Humane Society, held on Tuesday evening at the society's offices, Trafalgar-square—Mr. W. Hawes, treasurer, in the chair—the principal business was the selection from among twelve silver-medallists, who during the past year had by distinguished gallantry saved life from drowning, of the most deserving case for the award of the Stanhope Gold Medal. The meeting was unanimous in its bestowal of the medal upon Mr. Walter Cleverley, for saving the life of a Lascar who fell overboard from the steamship Rewa, while it was proceeding through the Gulf of Aden.

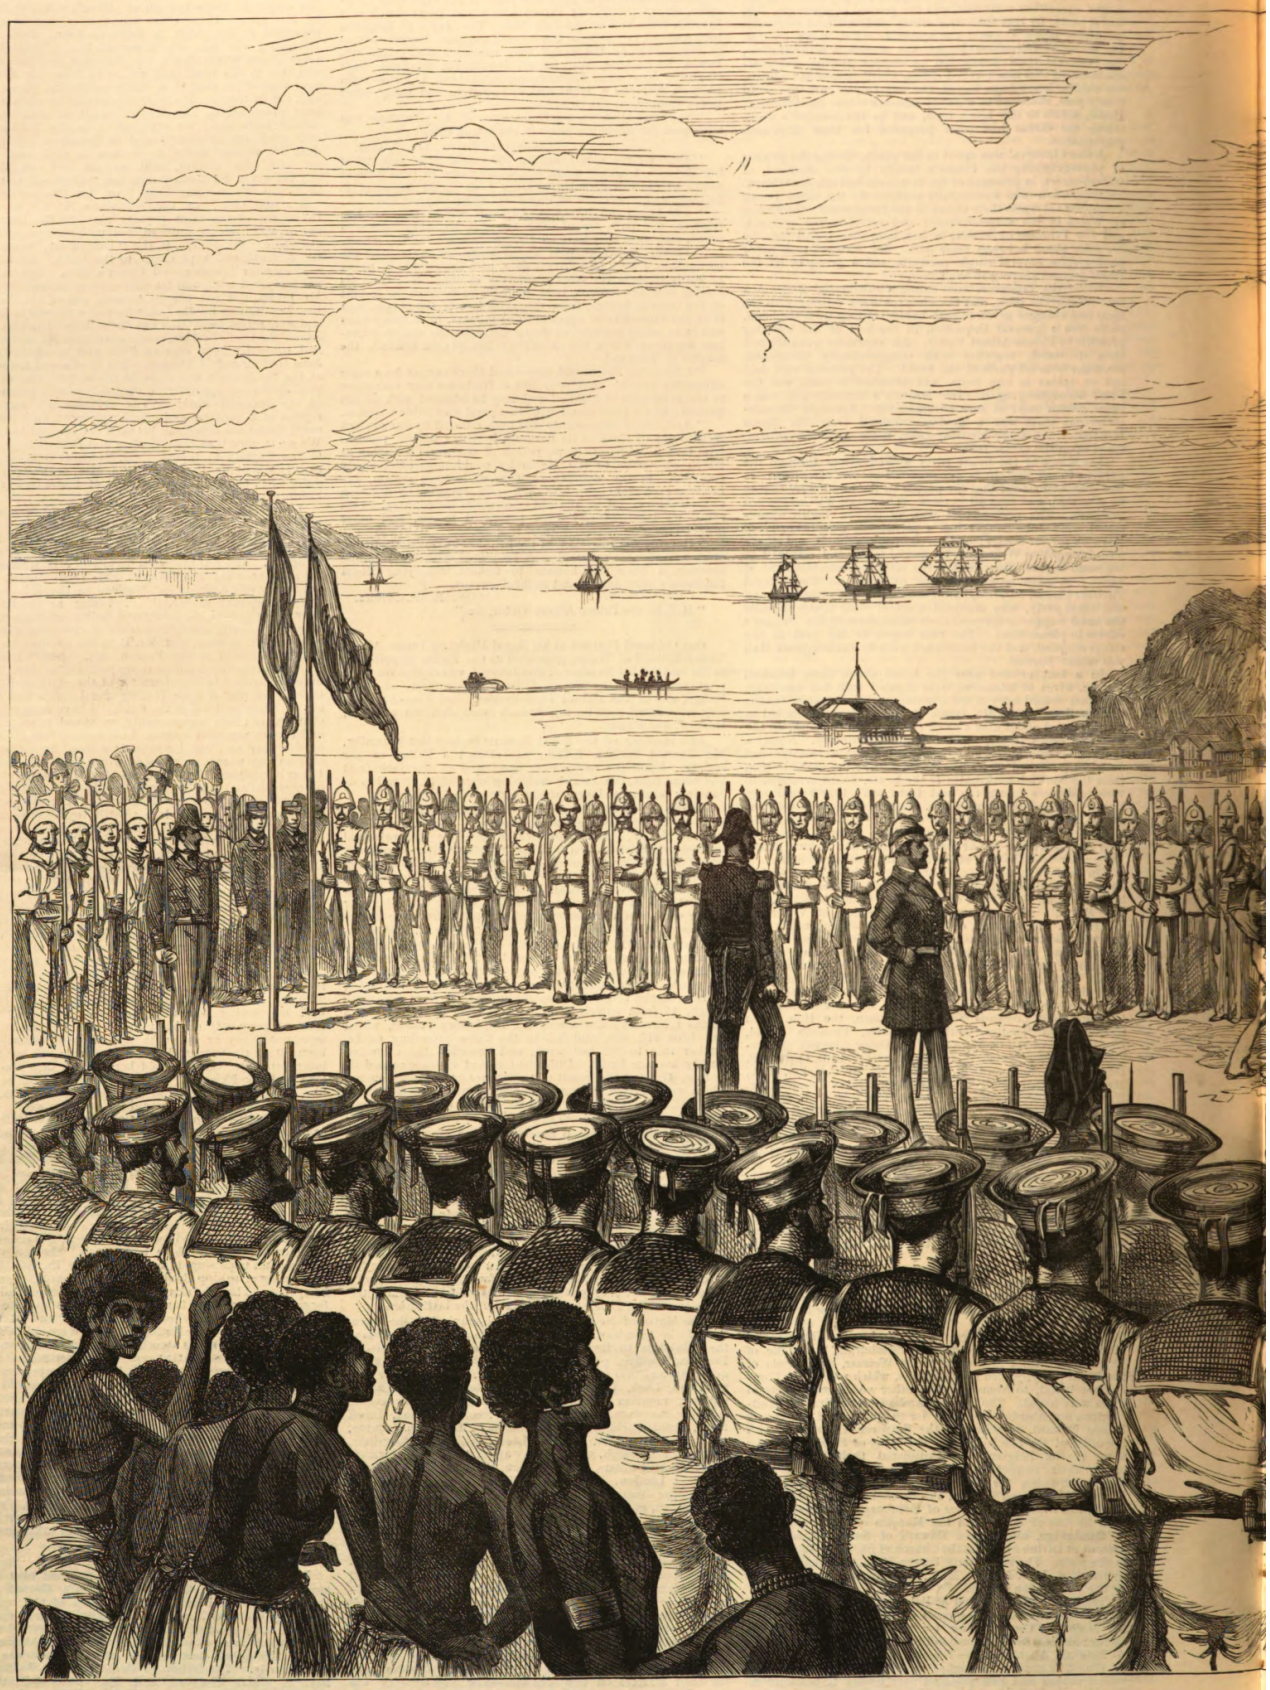
Last week 2816 births and 1956 deaths were registered in London, the former having exceeded by 270 and the latter by 52 the average numbers in the corresponding weeks of the last ten years. There 34 deaths from smallpox, 14 from measles, 16 from scarlet fever, 26 from diphtheria, 38 from whooping cough, 15 from enteric fever, and 11 from dysentery. The deaths referred to diseases of the respiratory organs, which had been 416, 370, and 537 in the three preceding weeks, further rose to 602 last week, and exceeded the corrected weekly average by 93. Different forms of violence caused 57 deaths; 47 being the result of negligence or accident, among which were 21 from fractures and contusions, 8 from burns and scalds, 2 from drowning, 2 from poison, and 11 of infants under one year of age from suffocation.

On Monday the annual general meeting of governors and subscribers to the Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb took place at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street. Mr. Charles Few, treasurer, presided. The report of the managing committee, which was submitted by the secretary, Mr. Warwick, stated that, in the course of the past year, 337 children had been maintained and educated at the Ramsgate and Margate branches of the charity. Fifty-three children were admitted last year; thirty-seven completed their education, whilst twenty-six had been apprenticed to various trades, making a total of 1819 assisted in this way, at a cost to the institution of over £17,063. A poll was opened for the election, out of a list of ninety-seven approved candidates, of twenty children—ten boys and ten girls—to the benefits of the institution.

The Mayor of New Orleans has telegraphed to the Secretary of the American Legation in London a list of awards at the exhibition to English firms as follows:—"Art pottery, Doulton, London, gold; account-books, Waterlow, London, gold; agricultural implements, Howard, Bedford, silver; art furniture, Lock, London, gold; carpets, Brinton, Kidderminster, mention; cutlery, Beal, Sheffield, silver; cotton spinning, Crewson, Manchester, gold; sewing-cotton, Brook Bros., Huddersfield, silver; chronometers, Frodsham, London, gold; steam-engines, Fowler, Leeds, gold; printing-inks, Fleming, Edinburgh, gold; diving apparatus, Siebe, Gorman, gold; mineral waters, Fleet, London, gold; carriages, Morgan and Co., London, gold; chandeliers, Crofts, Birmingham, gold; fire-engines, Merryweather, gold; lace, May, Nottingham, gold.

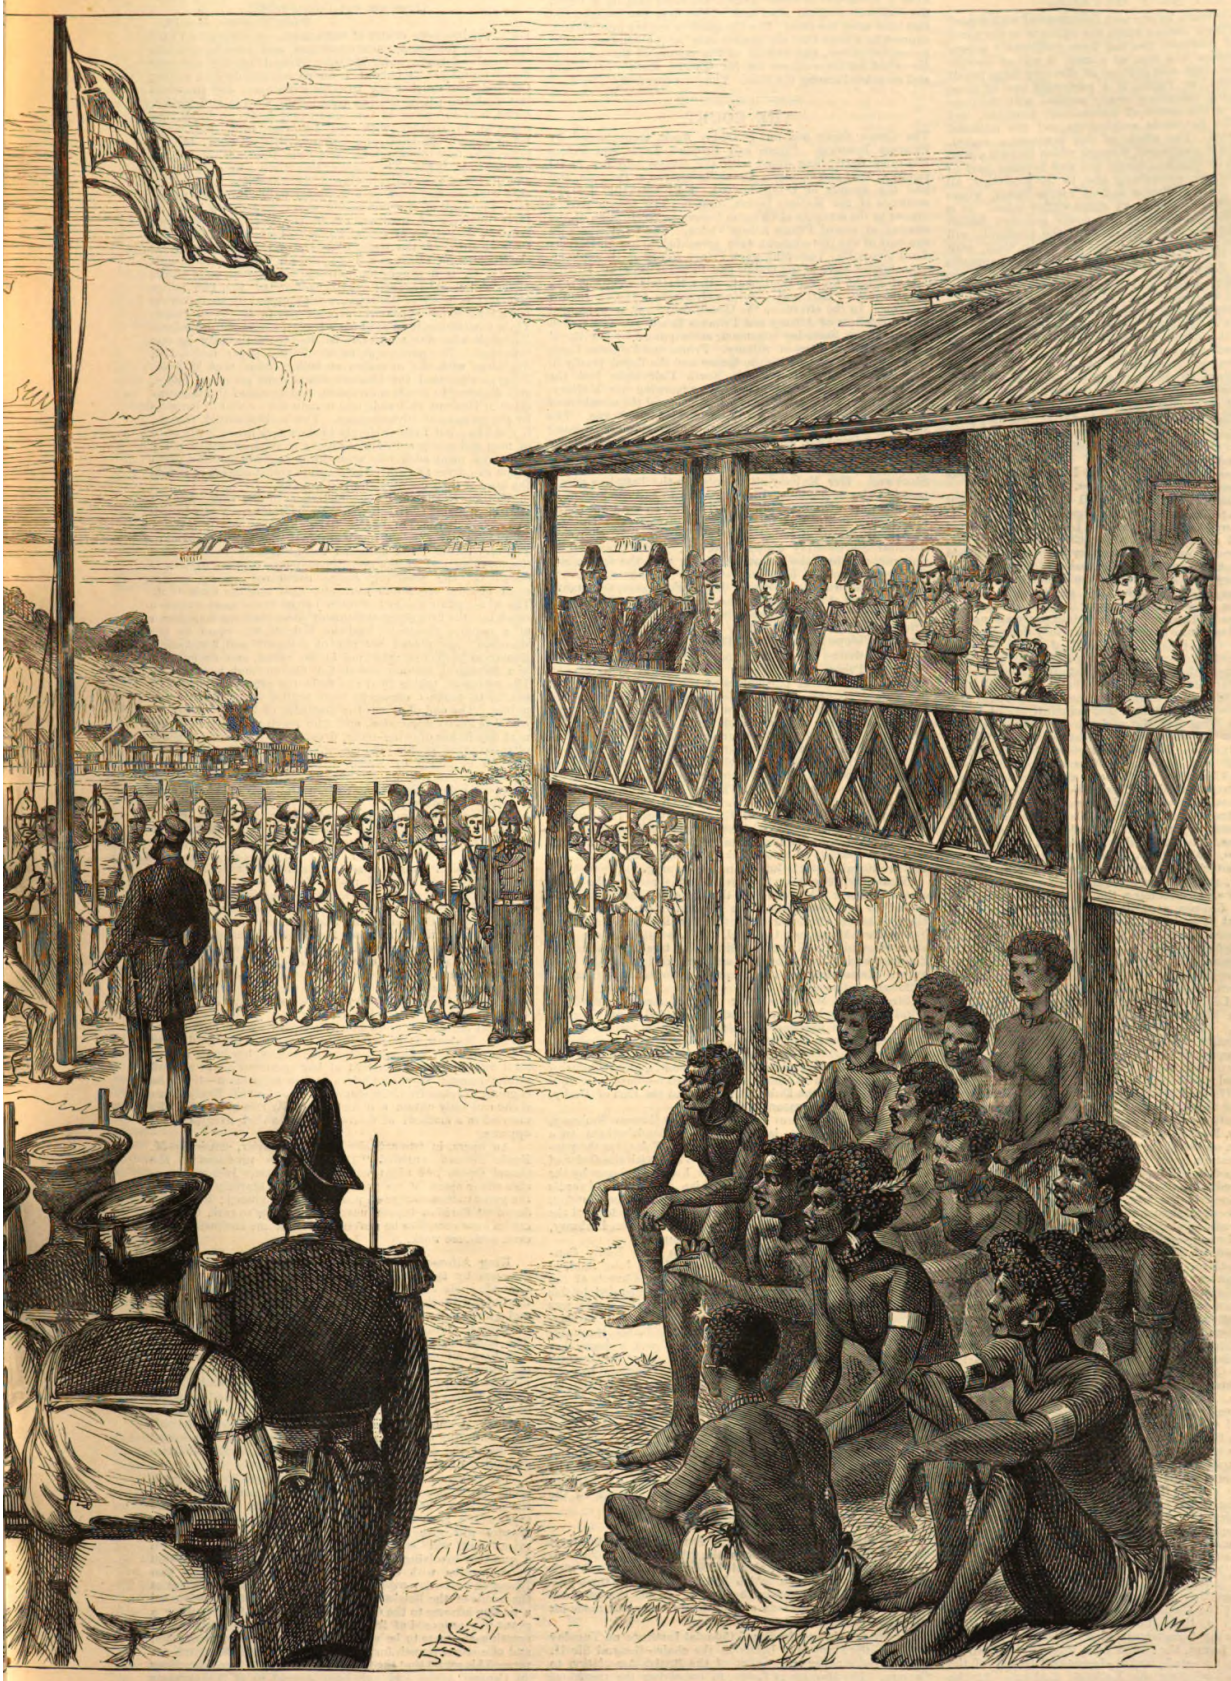
The Japanese Government have awarded a red ribbon, medal, and bronze vase to Captain Williams, and also a similar vase to Mr. Sincock, master and chief officer, respectively, of the Merionethshire, in appreciation of the humanity and gallantry shown by them in rescuing the crew of a shipwrecked junk from imminent peril during a typhoon on Sept. 15 last.—Her Majesty Government have awarded a silver "shipwreck" medal to the pilot, Jean Marie le Mat, in acknowledgment of his gallant conduct in jumping into the sea, at the risk of his life, in order to render assistance to the steamer Bellmore, of Glasgow, Oct. 9. The Board of Trade have also awarded sums of money to the crews of the life-boat and a fishing-boat for their services on this occasion.—The President of the United States has awarded a gold watch and chain to Mr. C. F. Tremlett, her Majesty's Consul at Saigon, in recognition of the valuable assistance the Consul rendered to the shipwrecked crew of the American ship Rainier.

THE PLAYHOUSES.



We ought to know enough of Ohnet's "Maître de Forges" by this time. Three times has this celebrated story been presented to the public in dramatic form. First by Robert Buchanan, who not only vulgarised but misunderstood it in Lady Claire, weakening every character that stood out bold and firm in the novel, and giving to Miss Ada Cavendish a poor ineffective part in a sickly indifferent play. If, years ago, the feuilleton of the Figaro containing such a story had been presented to Tom Taylor, what an English play we should have had; for although it is the fashion to weep and rend our garments and to besmirch ourselves with dust if anyone dares to borrow a plot and utilise it for our own market, still we are not, on the whole, any the worse for having seen the "Ticket-of-Leave Man," or "Still Waters Run Deep," or, for the matter of that, "Box and Cox" or the "Porter's Knot," or nineteen-twentieths of the most popular plays in the language, not one of which would have existed without a suggestion from elsewhere. Mr. Pinero, in the "Ironmaster," went nearer to the original, and kept closer to the truth. All who saw the "Ironmaster" understood Ohnet's idea. His scheme was not tampered with, and his characters preserved their dignity. Mr. Pinero did not change Octave, son of the Marquise de Beaulieu into an idiotic lad, who was supposed to be at Eton, and wore velvet jacket and knickerbockers. The play at the St. James's had some backbone and consistency. Mr. and Mrs. Kendal had evidently been over to Paris and in sufficiently studied Jane Hading and M. Damala. The business of the whole play at the St. James's is almost identical with the mise-en-scène published as an appendix to Paul Ollendorf's printed edition of the dramatic work. "The Ironmaster" was a clever replica of a striking and popular picture; only connoisseurs could detect the difference between the original and the copy. We see it, now that Jane Hading and Damala have come over to the Royalty to repeat their Gymnase success. We see exactly where Mr. Pinero differed with, or was persuaded to differ with, Ohnet in his treatment of Claire de Beaulieu and Philippe Darbly, the Ironmaster.

I will start with the bold statement that, as a whole, the play is infinitely better acted at the St. James's than at the Royalty. There can be scarcely any question about that. One might as well compare a London with a provincial wandering company. The soft maternal dignity of Mrs. Gaston Murray; the gentle sisterly sympathy of Miss Linda Dietz; the grave yet tender solicitude of Mr. Maclean as the old lawyer; the fussy pomposity of Mr. J. F. Young as the irrepressible parvenu; the cold effrontery and irritating sarcasm of Miss Vane; the sharp, distinct sketches of character given by Mr. Sugden, Mr. Waring, and Mr. Brandon Thomas, are not even faintly suggested in the French cast. But, for all that, I don't think that such almost incomprehensible objections would have been raised to the character of the story and the moral tone of the play if Jane Hading and Damala had been seen at the outset, and not at the finish. I have been told that the character of Claire is unwomanly, unnatural, incomprehensible, and I know not what besides. I am assured that the difference between her and her husband is a storm in a tea-cup, and that no sane woman so situated would have acted as she did. It has been dinned into my ears that the motive of the play is erroneous and that the details are nasty. For the life of me, I cannot see it as Jane Hading and Damala present the characters to my mind. It is a battle royal between a wilful woman and a strong, noble-minded man, and it is carried out with dignity and sufficiency on both sides. But, in order to understand it, you must convey quickly to the audience the intense affection that underlies the outside nature of a proud woman, and the almost brutal power that overlies the natural tenderness of a strong man. I can conceive nothing unmaidenly, immodest, or unnatural in the position of a Claire who, in a fit of temper, has married a man she has never studied, and awakens to the horror of the consequences of her imprudent step. I see everything that is natural and consistent in the fact that her wilfulness, her ingratitude, and unfairness arouse the brute in the man and arrest his sympathy. I am told that Claire could not possibly taunt the Ironmaster with the fact that he may take her money and have done with her, seeing that there has been no question of any want of generosity on his part. I ask, why not? A bitter woman will say or do anything. Claire is bitter. She has been jilted; the woman she hates most on earth has taken her lover from her. She has sold herself to a man she does not love, and who looks as if he had power to become her master. She, the proud Claire, is at the mercy of this man. Under such circumstances, what would she not do or say?



Jane Hading is an actress of very remarkable talent. She can think as well as she can act. She is wholly interesting and sympathetic. Youth, good looks, an expressive countenance, a pleasing voice, are all in her favour. She will do great things some day, when she can arrange, sort, and harmonise the gifts with which she has been endowed. I wish that many of our actresses could visit the Royalty to see what power Jane Hading gets over her audience by entering into the part and never leaving it. No one can take their eyes off the actress, because she is always thinking; and she communicates her thoughts to those who watch. She is always conveying what is passing in her mind. The English idea is to stop acting or to stop thinking when more words have not to be spoken. Then the actress subsides into her normal self and forgets the woman she is representing. Not so Jane Hading. She is Claire de Beaulieu from the first and at the last. She is never once Jane Hading for half a second. When the curtain draws up, she is absorbed in the character, and she in a great degree possesses that personal magnetism that binds the audience and actress together. M. Damala always promised well as an actor. French critics laughed at us when we said he could play Armande in "Camille." He has proved that we were right; and has now the command of certain Fechteresn parts on the Parisian stage. He has one grave fault, which he might well avoid. He intones his pathos. He gets into a chant, and never leaves it. Sentence after sentence is sung, not spoken. But in strong passionate scenes he is natural again; his artificiality disappears, and he shows very decided power. The laugh, ending in a sob, when the strong man bursts out with the satirical "Car enfin j'ai votre fortune, n'est il pas vrai? Je suis payé, je n'ai pas le droit de réclamer," is admirable, and roused the astonished audience to enthusiasm.

C. S.

Yesterday week the Lord Mayor presided over the first annual meeting of the Mansion House Council on the Dwellings of the People. The adoption of the report was moved by Cardinal Manning, who described it as embracing perhaps every point of main importance connected with the object which the promoters had in view. Mr. Alderman and Sheriff Whitehead seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously. The Bishop of Bedford, Sir J. Goldsmid, the Rev. Septimus Hansard, and Mr. Burdett-Coutts were amongst the other speakers.—The Lord Mayor has refused the use of the Guildhall for a meeting, to be addressed by Mr. Henry George and others, on the subject of industrial depression.

PROCLAIMING THE BRITISH PROTECTORATE OF SO

UTH-EAST NEW GUINEA AT PORT MORESBY.

THE BRITISH ANNEXATION OF SOUTH-EAST NEW GUINEA.

The action recently taken by our own Government with regard to that portion of New Guinea which lies opposite to the north and north-east of Australia has not been sufficiently appreciated. If the reader will look at a map, it will at once be perceived that the south-east portion of the very large island called New Guinea, or Papua, is a peninsula two or three hundred miles long, extending nearly parallel with the Cape York peninsula at the north of Queensland, Australia, and terminating at the Louisiade archipelago and the adjacent Entrecasteaux Isles. The whole of this peninsular region, with the islands just mentioned, through which there is a good maritime passage by Goschen Strait, has now become part of the British dominions; comprising also, to the westward, all the coasts of the Gulf of Papua and of Torres Strait, where the width of the sea diminishes to about eighty miles. It is understood that the boundary of the newly annexed British territory along the north-eastern shore of the peninsula will be at Cape Nelson; beyond which lies the Huon Gulf, with the part that has been taken by the German Empire, opposite to the islands of New Britain and New Ireland, and to the Admiralty Islands, which also become German possessions. Geographically, it is evident that Australia has no real concern, or at least has no natural connection, with anything on the north side of New Guinea. The different parts of New Guinea are, in fact, different countries, being separated from each other by vast mountain ranges and dense forests; and are inhabited by very different races, those on the south coast being utter strangers to those on the north; so that there is no cause whatever to apprehend any future conflict of jurisdiction between the German and the British authorities. The western half of the island, to longitude 141 E., has long been under the dominion of the Dutch Government. All New Guinea is henceforth divided between Holland, Germany, and Great Britain; and the part which will be held by our own Government is exactly what is desirable in the interest of our Australian colonies, neither more nor less.

It will be remembered that, on April 4, 1883, the Colonial Government of Queensland, by the agency of Mr. H. M. Chester, police magistrate of Thursday Island, in the Gulf of Papua, performed a ceremony of annexation at Port Moresby, on the New Guinea shore, which was very properly disallowed and annulled by the Imperial Government of Great Britain. No British Colony has a right to extend the limits of its political dominion at its own pleasure; and it would be most dangerous to the peace of the world if the Colonies were permitted to do so. The wishes of a certain party among the Australian colonists were extremely wild; they demanded the annexation not only of New Guinea, but of all the scattered islands in the West Pacific Ocean, a thousand miles from their own shores, disregarding express diplomatic obligations to European Governments; and they offered the small contribution of £15,000 a year towards the cost, which would probably have exceeded ten times that amount. Lord Derby plainly told them that her Majesty's Government would not undertake so vast an addition to its existing responsibilities, but would establish an Imperial protectorate over the south-eastern shores of New Guinea; and this has now been done. As for the New Hebrides, which lie at a far greater distance beyond the French island of New Caledonia, France and England are bound by a mutual convention, stipulated in 1878, to refrain from annexing those islands. Samoa, which is still more remote, being three thousand miles from Sydney, New South Wales, has long had relations with Germany and the United States. New Zealand, certainly, has no right to annex Samoa, which lies about two thousand miles distant from that colony, and has never had any connection with it.

The final act of proclaiming the British Protectorate in South-East New Guinea, according to Lord Derby's promise, took place at Port Moresby on Nov. 6, and we are enabled to present an Illustration of this important ceremony, which ought to be satisfactory to all who accurately understand the situation of affairs. Captain James Elphinstone Erskine, R.N., Commodore commanding the naval squadron, composed of H.M.S. Nelson, H.M.S. Raven, H.M.S. Harrier, H.M.S. Swinger, and H.M.S. Espiègle, was there with his ships, accompanied by Mr. Romilly, Deputy-Commissioner for the Western Pacific. The chiefs of the Motu tribes, representing the native population, assembled to the number of about fifty, quite willing to repeat the act of cession and submission to which they freely consented in April, 1883, trusting in the advice of the resident missionaries, the Rev. W. G. Lawes and the Rev. James Chalmers (London Missionary and Scottish Presbyterian), who have laboured faithfully amongst them during many years past. These gentlemen acted as interpreters, and introduced the native chiefs, headed by Boe Vagi, chief of the local tribe at Port Moresby, on board the flag-ship Nelson, the day before the act of annexation.

Boe Vagi was dressed in a shirt, with a handkerchief round his loins and a red felt hat on his head, with some green leaves ornamentally stuck in the lobe of his left ear; but most of the other chiefs were almost naked, while their heads were adorned with bands of shells and tufts of feathers. A tub of boiled rice with brown sugar was placed on deck, and they were regaled with basins of this simple food. Commodore Erskine then addressed them, explaining that the Queen of England would protect the native people of the country, and would not allow them to be deprived of their lands, or to be taken away from their homes as labourers for the plantations; and that nobody would be permitted to sell them firearms and gunpowder, or intoxicating liquors. The tribes are left to be ruled by their own chiefs, but Boe Vagi, who was presented with an ebony stick, having a florin with the Queen's head uppermost, inserted at the top, has been appointed a sort of federal president, not to reign over the others, but to communicate their grievances or requests to the resident British officer. Gifts of cloth, shirts, knives, axes, and tobacco were distributed among them, and they were shown the wonders on board the ship; not the least amazing to them was the sight of their own figures in a large mirror in the Captain's cabin. One of the eighteen-ton guns was fired, and the machine-guns, to the great astonishment of the natives; the electric light and rockets were displayed at night, and the fog-signal made a terrific noise.

On the next day, the officers of the naval squadron going ashore in full uniform, with detachments of seamen and Marines, the formal proclamation took place. On a site commanding a view of the harbour was the flag-staff used by the missionaries and Mr. Romilly. The native chiefs were seated in a group on the ground. The mission-house is a long weather-board building of one storey and wide verandah; it was here that the Commodore stood and proclaimed the protectorate, while the Marines presented arms. The proclamation having been translated into the Motu language by the Rev. Mr. Lawes, the Union Jack was slowly raised to the truck of the flag-staff by Sub-Lieutenant Gaunt, of the Nelson, the band playing the National Anthem. At the same time a salute of twenty-one guns was fired from the Nelson, and the other ships were instantaneously dressed with flags from stem to stern, the Royal standard flying conspicuously from the Nelson's main. When the Nelson had saluted the flag and the firing had ceased the troops fired a feu-de-joie of three rounds, the band playing a bar of the National Anthem after each of the first two rounds, and two bars after the third. The Commodore made a brief speech, expressing a hope that the protectorate might conduce to the peace, happiness, and welfare of the people of the territory. He called for three cheers for the Queen; these were given, and re-echoed among the hills. Thus the ceremony closed.

THE COURT.

The Queen drove out on Thursday week, accompanied by Princess Beatrice. Prince and Princess Louis and Prince Henry of Battenberg dined with the Queen and the Royal family. Earl and Countess Granville arrived at Osborne, and had the honour of being invited. Earl Granville had an audience of her Majesty before dinner. The Queen gave a dinner to the servants at Osborne House, in celebration of the coming of age of Prince Albert Victor. The felicitations on the part of the Government were presented to her Majesty by Lord Granville. Yesterday week Prince Henry of Battenberg, after taking leave of the Queen and Princess Beatrice, left the Isle of Wight for the Continent. Her Majesty went out with the Princess. Earl and Countess Granville left Osborne for London. In the afternoon the Queen drove out, accompanied by the Duchess of Albany and Princess Beatrice. The Queen drove out on Saturday afternoon, accompanied by her Royal Highness the Duchess of Albany. Prince and Princess Louis of Battenberg dined with the Queen and the Royal family in the evening. The Hon. Mrs. North Dalrymple had the honour of being invited. On Sunday morning her Majesty, the Duchess of Albany, Princess Beatrice, and the members of the Royal household attended Divine service at Osborne. The Rev. Canon Prothero, M.A., officiated. On Monday morning the Queen drove out, accompanied by the Duchess of Albany and Princess Beatrice, and met the Seaforth Highlanders on the march, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Stockwell. Her Majesty afterwards saw the battalion march past in Osborne grounds. Bishop Hellmuth had the honour of an interview with her Majesty. The Queen went out in the afternoon, accompanied by Princess Beatrice. The Duchess of Albany drove, attended by the Hon. Mrs. R. Moreton. Admiral Sir Geoffrey Phipps Hornby, K.C.B., arrived at Osborne, and had the honour of dining with the Queen and the Royal family. Lieutenant-Colonel Guinness, Seaforth Highlanders, was also invited. Major Fergusson, commanding the guard at East Cowes, was received by her Majesty in the evening. On Tuesday morning her Majesty went out with Princess Beatrice. The Hon. Frederica Fitzroy and Sir Geoffrey Phipps Hornby have left Osborne.

The festivities at Sandringham in celebration of the coming of age of Prince Albert Victor were brought to a close on Saturday last. Some particulars of the festivities are given in another column. On Sunday morning the Prince and Princess of Wales, with Princes Albert Victor and George, Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud, accompanied by the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh, Princess Louise, Marchioness of Lorne, and the Marquis of Lorne, the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, and the rest of the guests, were present at Divine service at the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, in the park. The Rev. Canon Tarver, M.A., officiated, assisted by the Rev. J. N. Dalton, M.A., the sermon being preached by the Rev. Canon Tarver. The Prince, attended by Colonel Teesdale, arrived at Marlborough House on Monday afternoon from Sandringham. His Royal Highness, accompanied by Prince Leiningen and suite, visited the Theatre Royal, Covent-Garden, in the evening.

Yesterday week being the twelfth anniversary of the death of the Emperor Napoleon III., the Empress Eugénie, accompanied by her suite, visited the Imperial mausoleums at St. Mary's Church, Chislehurst. After Mass had been celebrated by the Rev. Monsignor Goddard, the Absolutions were pronounced, and the Empress visited the tombs of the late Emperor and Prince Imperial, and sprinkled them with holy water. Before leaving, the Empress deposited some wreaths of flowers on the coffins.

Sir Albert Woods, Garter King-at-Arms, arrived at Windsor on Monday afternoon, and proceeded to St. George's Chapel, for the purpose of taking down the banners of the following former Knights of the Order—The Duke of Buccleuch, Earl Cowley, and the Duke of Wellington. In their places Sir Albert put the flags, swords, and regalias of the newly created Knights of the Garter—namely, Prince George of Wales, the Duke of Argyll, and the Earl of Derby. There are now three vacant stalls.

His Excellency Count Munster left the German Embassy, Carlton House-terrace, last Saturday for Sandringham, on a short visit to the Prince and Princess of Wales, for the purpose of presenting Prince Edward of Wales with the Order of the Black Eagle, bestowed upon his Royal Highness by the Emperor of Germany on the occasion of Prince Edward's coming of age. His Excellency returned to town on Monday.

His Excellency the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador and the Countess Karolyi and family arrived at the Austrian Embassy, Belgrave-square, last Saturday, from Vienna.

The marriage of Lord Dormer with Miss Emily Constance Campbell Bald, eldest daughter of Mr. John Bald, of Monzie Castle, Perthshire, took place in the Church of the Oratory, Brompton. Lord Dormer was accompanied by his brother, the Hon. Herbert Dormer; and the bride was attended by six bridesmaids—namely, Miss Evelyn Barclay, Miss Dormer, Miss Gertrude Dormer, Miss Isabel Hanbury, and Miss Verena and Miss Ethel Bald, and a page, her brother. The Rev. Father Williamson, of the Oratory, officiated, assisted by the Rev. A. Delerne, Chaplain to Lord Dormer. Later the newly wedded pair started for Paris, on their way to Cairo.

The coming of age of the Hon. Gustavus William Hamilton-Russell, eldest son of Viscount Boyne, was celebrated at Brancepeth Castle, Durham, on Monday. The principal tenantry presented an illuminated address to the heir, and were afterwards entertained at luncheon in the castle. The workmen and smaller tenants on the estate dined in a marquee in the grounds, and at night a bonfire was lighted on the heights above the castle.

The annual supper which Dr. Barnardo gives to street arabs of both sexes took place on the 8th inst., in the People's Mission Church, Stepney, about 1200 ragged boys and girls accepting the invitation which had been given to them previously in lodging-houses or the streets. A selection of about 200 of the most necessitous and destitute cases was made for admission to the benefits of the homes.

At the meeting of the Royal Colonial Institute on Tuesday evening—the Marquis of Lorne in the chair—General Sir H. Lefroy read a paper on the visit of the British Association to Canada. The Marquis of Lorne, in conveying the thanks of the meeting to the General, said that Sir H. Lefroy might almost be called the father of Canadian science, and remarked he hoped the visit of the British Association to Canada would be repeated.

PARISIAN SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Tuesday, Jan. 13.

Paris, the luminous centre of civilisation—according to Victor Hugo—has forgotten its duties of late, and been lapsing into violence and barbarism. Madame Clovis Hugues has already found imitators. A lady at Tonnerre has calmly shot an old Celadon, who worried her with his attentions; and one night last week two police officers, armed with swords and pistols, broke into the office of the newspaper, Le Cri du Peuple, and engaged in combat with the editorial staff, the result being wounds on both sides and a terrible scandal. If even policemen take justice into their own hands, what are we coming to? What is the cause of this stirring up of the blood and nerves of the excitable Gaul? Is it absinthe, or adulterated wine, or bad food, or a thirst for publicity at any price? Is it the fault of the journalists who turn people's heads by their analyses of neorose, or of the novelists with their horrible dissections of eccentricities; or of the doctors, with their theories of the irresponsibility of criminals and their classification of crime as a simple disease, like measles or epilepsy? Or is it simply the outcome of the bad taste of the modern Parisians? The frantic action of the two police officers, the brothers Ballerich, was prompted by an infamous paragraph which appeared the other day in Le Cri du Peuple. These two officers, it must be stated, are the sons of the Madame Ballerich who was murdered at Belleville recently by one Gamahut. The paragraph in M. Vallès' paper insinuated, doubtless with the intention of being comic, that M. Jules Ferry, seeing that the Chinese affairs were going on badly, and desiring to create a diversion, had arranged the assassination of Madame Ballerich, and bought the consent of her sons by the promise of advancement. This is silly, stupid, frantic, if you like; but I cite it simply to show how queer is the state of men and manners in Paris when a newspaper, out of party spite, can print such vile absurdities, and when such a paragraph can drive two otherwise sensible police-officers to violate the laws of their country and run a-muck.

Not less strange or less characteristic of the times was the trial of Madame Clovis Hugues on Thursday. Never before had a French court of justice been so disgracefully invaded by a mob; never before had a criminal trial been less solemn. The very lees of Paris occupied the best places in the room; the jurymen had women of loose manners leaning over their shoulders; the presiding Judge could not sit up in his chair because spectators were clustered over the back of it. The whole affair was looked upon by the tumultuous audience much like the first representation of some thrilling melodrama at a popular theatre. Madame Hugues was equal to the situation; she played her rôle of a superb and remorseless Roman to perfection, glorying in her crime, and declaiming in a theatrical manner about her honour and her virtues. The witnesses, taking their cue from the principal culprit, all sought to produce effects by their replies, and posed for the public. The end of it was the acquittal of Madame Hugues, who was loudly applauded, and who received her friends the next day in her drawing-room, decorated with flowers. Some ultra-sceptical people are cynically suggesting that the assassination of Morin by Madame Hugues was more or less an electoral movement—a vulgar manœuvre to enable her husband to appear before his electors with the notoriety of a hero, even if a hero of a scandal.

The French Assembly reopened to-day after the Christmas recess. In the Chamber, M. Brisson was re-elected President without opposition. The Senate adjourned to the 29th, after provisionally re-electing M. Leroyer as President.

The cause of irreligion is progressing in France. A new society has been founded under the title of "Société des Antidéistes," whose object is simply to suppress the word GOD. "The object of the society," says the prospectus, "is to suppress the word God in all the languages of the world. God being only a fiction, the name has no signification, and has therefore no reason to exist." All members of the society are forbidden to use the words "God," "Providence," or "Divine power," except to combat them. At funerals the usual farewell at the end of speeches over the grave—namely, "Adieu," is to be replaced by the phrase "A ton souvenir!" What a crazy place Paris is becoming!

Sarah Bernhardt, momentarily eclipsed by the escapade of Madame Hugues, is endeavouring to recover her hold upon public attention. She announces the sale of her house and of all it contains for the benefit of her numerous creditors, and public rumour says—doubtless at her suggestion—that she is going to retire from the stage and marry a rich Englishman if she can only obtain a divorce from M. Damala, whom she married in a moment of distraction, somewhat irregularly, it appears.

An opera, in two acts, by M. Paul Ferrier, music by M. Emile Pessard, entitled "Taburin," was produced at the Grand Opéra last night with some success. It is an agreeable comic opera of no great importance, scarcely worthy of the great national stage on which it was produced; but on the decadent Parisian boards novelties are now so rare, that the critics have ceased to be severe, and welcome enthusiastically even mediocre work.

T. C.

King Alfonso, on his way to the principal scene of the disasters by the earthquake, spent last Saturday night in Granada. He started on Sunday morning by a special train for Loja, with the authorities, the Governor, the Archbishop, and a large suite. He took with him every kind of assistance, provisions, clothing, and money for the distressed villages. The King made Alhama his head-quarters for journeys on horseback all over the country between Granada and the mountains of Albujarras. He lived under canvas every night until he left for Malaga, towards the close of the week.

The Italian Senate, after two days' debate, has adopted, by 96 votes to 21, a bill for improving the sanitary condition of Naples. A sum of 100,000,000f. is to be expended for this purpose during the next ten years. The works will be carried out under the direction of the Government, which will also guarantee a new loan to be raised by the city.

The Emperor William, writing to the Berlin Town Council, speaks of the beneficial development of the economic affairs of the country. The settlements on a distant Continent, he says, which have been placed under the protection of the Empire will give an additional outlet to German enterprise, and will stimulate trade and manufactures.—On a question involving a vote of £7500 for African exploration in connection with Germany's colonial policy, Prince Von Bismarck yesterday week sustained a Parliamentary defeat at the hands of the Reichstag, a small majority of which carried a motion adverse to the Chancellor's wishes. On Saturday a grant was proposed of 180,000 marks for the construction of coasting-steamers to be employed in the Cameroons district, and of a steam launch for the Governor. Prince Bismarck expressed his regret that the vote of 150,000 marks for explorations in Central Africa had not been agreed to at the previous day's sitting. If the Reichsrath did not want colonies it should say so plainly, so that the country might be spared useless expenses. If, however, colonies were required, the necessary cost must be provided. In the course of his speech he referred to the fighting in Cameroons and the proposed annexation of the Samoan Islands by New Zealand. There was nothing, however, which threatened a war with this country. "Our little differences with England" he added, "can always be peaceably settled with a little good will." — The Budget Committee of the German Reichstag has voted the Naval Estimates without modification, and agreed to the Central African Exploration credit of £7500.

The King of the Netherlands has nominated Prince Albert Victor of Wales Grand Cross of the Order of the Lion of the Netherlands.

In the Imperial Russian Budget for the current year, receipts and expenditure, amounting to 866,294,997 roubles, are exactly balanced.

A Royal decree abolishing the forced currency in Greece was published on Monday, and came into operation next day.

Mr. Vanderbilt, on coming into possession of General Grant's property, as security for his loan of 150,000 dollars to the General, offered to present the whole of it to Mrs. Grant, who, however, declined the gift.—Mr. Schuyler Colfax, Vice-President of the United States from 1869 to 1873, fell down dead last Tuesday at the Mankato railway station, in Minnesota.—An Irish Nationalist, named Phelan, was stabbed eleven times in O'Donovan Rossa's office, at New York, last Saturday, by one Richard Short, for revealing certain secrets of the "Irish Invincibles." Phelan is expected to recover.

At a large meeting of Boers, held at Vryburg, Mr. Rhodes, the Deputy Commissioner of Stellaland, promised that the Boers' land-titles should be recognised, that they should have their own Government, and that funds should be supplied to them pending the annexation of the country to the Cape Colony.

The Hon. James Service, Prime Minister of Victoria, in a letter to the Agent-General in London, complains of the insignificant amount of influence possessed by each individual colony in dealing with the mother-country, and strongly supports the scheme for Imperial federation.

A telegram from Wellington states that the Government of New Zealand purposes annexing the Samoa Islands, and that a steamer is held in readiness to proceed to sea, pending Lord Derby's decision in the matter. The news is said to have created a great sensation in Berlin. The Samoa Islands, otherwise known as the Navigator Group, are a very long way from any part of New Zealand. They are more than six hundred miles north of Fiji.

GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL.

One of the most interesting and respectable, though apparently the least numerous, of the diverse races of mankind in Asia, is represented by the Parsi community of Bombay. Two volumes published by Messrs. Macmillan, History of the Parsis, by Dosabhai Framji Karaka, C.S.I., present a satisfactory account, written in very good English, of the past and present condition of that unique people, a surviving remnant of the ancient Persian nation, who escaped from Mohammedan persecutions and emigrated to India about a thousand years ago. Mr. Dosabhai Framji (Karaka is not the proper individual name) has held with credit high judicial and official positions at Bombay; and his patriotic zeal for the social welfare and deserved reputation of the Parsis, who form a loyal, well-behaved, intelligent, and useful part of Indian native society, does honour both to him and to them. His work is also of some historical value, and should be worthy the attention of readers occupied with the comparative study of religions, customs, and varieties of civilisation. The Parsis to this day preserve, as we understand, not less faithfully than the Jews, a religion of pure monotheism which was taught by Zarathushtra (Zoroaster) thirteen centuries before Christ, and which was undoubtedly regarded by the Israelites, during their Babylonian Captivity, as the worship of the one true God. Fire and the Sun were regarded as divinely-appointed symbols of the glory of God, of the light, the energy, and the purity emanating from the Creative Spirit of Good; and the Parsis have ever rejected all forms of idolatry and polytheism. They were, however, led to believe in the existence of an Evil Spirit, called by them Angro-Mainyush (Ahrimanes), to whom they ascribed, as the later Jews did to Satan, all the vices and errors of the world; but it seems not to be the fact that they believed this Author of Mischief to be co-eternal or equal in power with Ahuri-Mazda, the Supreme Deity. The Zend-Avesta, their Bible, teaches a high and pure morality; and they have many precepts or prohibitions, similar to those of the Mosaic Code, some of which relate to particulars of cleanliness, health, and personal decency, and to the regulation of married life. As the Parsis are not disagreeably fanatical, and their faith is as rational, and probably as beneficial, as that of the Mussulmans anywhere, within the present narrow limits of the sect, their hereditary attachment to it merits our sympathy, humanly speaking, and no class of our Asiatic fellow-citizens are more deserving of esteem. The greater part of Mr. Dosabhai Framji's book relates to their experiences and the laudable performances of their leading men in modern India, where they have distinguished themselves in commercial enterprise, in manufacturing industry, and in liberal deeds of public charity and endowments for popular education. The name of the late Sir Jamshedji Jijibhai, Bart. (Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy), has become proverbial for the exercise of these virtues, and others have followed his example. We commend this excellent Parsi History, which is handsomely printed and adorned with fine illustrations, as a work that treats of an important subject in an attractive and effective manner, and we trust that it will perpetuate in England the good opinion now entertained of the author's race and of their claim to a fair share of British favour.

The deliberations of the Berlin Conference on the international regulation of European trade with the interior of Central Africa up the Congo have revived attention to the promising settlements on that great river, formed by Mr. H. M. Stanley, the discoverer of its upper course, with the means furnished by the King of the Belgians and the Association under his Majesty's patronage. We would again direct our readers' notice to Mr. H. H. Johnston's interesting narrative, The River Congo, from its Mouth to Bolobo (Sampson Low and Co.), relating his visit, in 1883, to the principal stations held by Mr. Stanley for that enterprising Association—namely, Vivi, near the Falls of Yellala, above a hundred miles from the sea; Isangila, Manyanga, and Leopoldville, the capital of the new colony, adjacent to the curious small inland lake called Stanley Pool; where the French settlement of M. De Brazza occupies a rival position on the opposite shore. Mr. Johnston gives a very agreeable account of the management of Mr. Stanley's undertakings, and of the conduct of the agents and servants of the Belgian Association; but we cannot feel persuaded that its operations, liberal and even magnificent as they are, will repay the great pecuniary cost. The native tribes, whose ethnological connections, languages, and habits are described with much precision, have been fairly and judiciously treated by Mr. Stanley, and seem, along the left bank of the Congo, to the south and west, favourably disposed towards a peaceful intercourse with European civilised men. The aspects of nature in that tropical region of mighty waters and luxuriant forests, with its abundance of heavy rains and frequent thunderstorms, are tremendously imposing; and Mr. Johnston, as a scientific naturalist, is enabled to portray the various wild animals and plants, the birds, reptiles, insects, and gorgeous flowers, and the larger beasts familiar to us in zoological collections, with all the exactness that could be desired. His journeys up the Congo extended as far as Bolobo, about two and a half degrees south of the Equator, in the country of the Ba-yansi, whose King, named Ibaka, an extremely ugly old fellow with an amazingly tall hat, which contains his treasury and which he seldom takes off his head, figures in the frontispiece portrait. This place was the farthest of Mr. Stanley's stations up the Congo at the time of Mr. Johnston's visit, but other settlements have since been created beyond the range of the travels described in the present volume. In any case, the general features of the Lower and Middle Congo region, to a length of several hundred miles along the river, are here delineated as fully as can be wished by the generality of readers; and the author's skill, both with his pen and with his pencil, makes this work a valuable contribution to the store of books on African travels.

The wife of Captain Speedy, a military gentleman whose services as a political business agent of the British Government, in India, in Abyssinia, and in the Arab countries of East Africa, ought to be remembered, was with him in the Soudan in 1878, and has now collected the letters she wrote at that time into a couple of small volumes of pleasant and useful reading. My Wanderings in the Soudan, by Mrs. Speedy (R. Bentley and Son), have the lively personal interest of a courageous lady's experiences in travelling through a rather wild part of the world, though it was then at peace; and she describes the camel route from Souakim to Kassala, and further to the banks of the Gash and the Settite, among the sword-hunter Hamram tribes, and the Basé, or Baza, with whom Mr. F. L. James has lately made us acquainted. This country is not at all in the way to Khartoum, but it may possibly come within the reach of future arrangements for the solution of the difficult Soudan problem, and Captain Speedy has recently been engaged with the ruler of Abyssinia in some attempts to provide for its tranquillity, if the Mahdi will let it alone. Mrs. Speedy's agreeable narrative is therefore very welcome, as it would have been at any time, but particularly just now, when the condition of the mongrel Moslem nations of East Africa has become important; while it has the charm of true womanly tastes and feelings, and wifely appreciation of the manly powers and accomplishments of her distinguished husband. Their ride southward and return to Souakim, with occasional sporting excursions and some accidental delays, including a severe attack of fever, occupied five months, and they sometimes had very enjoyable days and nights, but endured upon other occasions what most English ladies would think serious discomforts. We expect it will be a long while before the political state of the Soudan will again be such as to allow our ladies to travel safely in that region, and Mrs. Speedy's experiences may not soon be matched by any of her sex; but, whenever they do come to pass, they cannot be much better related.

About the end of October, when the survivors of the officers and crew of the Nisero, a Liverpool merchant-steamer which been wrecked on the north-west coast of Sumatra, arrived home in safety, we published some Illustrations of their dismal captivity among the barbarous Malays of that island. Mr. W. Bradley, third engineer of the vessel, has written a plain, simple, unaffected narrative, The Wreck of the Nisero, and Our Captivity in Sumatra, which makes a concise little book, issued by Messrs. Sampson Low and Co., and which is almost worth the second part of "Robinson Crusoe," because it is so evidently truthful, and because truth of this kind is as interesting as the best fiction. The story has been recently told, but merely in outline, and the details are here filled up with a minute record of the hardships inflicted, rather by insolent neglect on the part of the Rajah of Tenom than by malicious wilful cruelty, upon some twenty English sailors and others, who were kept in durance from November, 1883, to September, 1884, suffering much from bad food, want of proper shelter, and the diseases of an unwholesome climate. It would have been more satisfactory to British public opinion if this barbarian chief had been severely chastised, instead of obtaining a large pecuniary ransom; but the affair was sadly complicated by the Dutch hostilities with the Acheen Malay tribes, and it is probable that an early resort to the use of British naval force would have caused them to put our unlucky countrymen at once to death. Mr. Bradley, at any rate, seems to be of opinion that the British authorities in the Straits Settlements did all they could both to alleviate the distress of himself and his companions and to procure their ultimate deliverance. Seven of them died of sickness, and it was altogether a deplorable affair; but civilisation is not yet omnipotent in every corner of the world, even within a few days' march of the sea where the British flag protects our maritime commerce and the lives and liberties of seafaring men.

With the January Number of The Theatre, containing articles of great interest to playgoers and others, are given capital photographs of Mrs. Langtry as Pauline, and Mr. Terriss as Romeo.

In consequence of the illness of Professor Newton, his first lecture on Greek inscriptions at University College, which was announced to be given on Friday, the 9th inst., has been postponed to Jan. 23.

Mr. Charles Morrison, whose rent audit for his Berks and Oxon estates was held at Wallingford last week, has allowed his tenants an abatement of 15 per cent for some years; but his agent announced last week an abatement of 25 per cent from Lady Day last, which is to extend for three years.

Last year there left the United Kingdom for places out of Europe 241,691 persons of British origin, 37,543 foreigners, and 4840 whose nationality was not distinguished—the total thus being 304,074. During the year 1883 the total was 397,157, thus exhibiting a decrease last year of 93,000.

Major-General Gipps presided at the Horse Guards yesterday week over a large meeting of metropolitan volunteer commanding officers, to consider the proposed Easter manœuvres. Opinions seemed to be equally divided between Dover and Brighton, and ultimately it was agreed to leave the final decision in the hands of the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief.

Mr. W. P. Clayden, author of "England under Lord Beaconsfield," has opportunely issued a pamphlet entitled "The Proposed Electoral Divisions of London," in which he argues with great force and acuteness against the proposed divisions. It is reprinted, with additions, from the Daily News, and is published by the National Press Agency. Mr. Clayden thinks that a great gift is spoiled in the giving by treating parish boundaries as sacred, and solicits co-operation in a movement for removing this great blot from a great measure.

OBITUARY.

LETITIA, LADY VIVIAN.

Letitia, Lady Vivian, widow of Richard Hussey, first Lord Vivian, G.C.B., the distinguished military commander, died on the 4th inst., at 51, Cadogan-place, aged eighty. Her Ladyship was third daughter of the Rev. James Agnew Webster, of Ashford, county Longford, and niece of Sir Henry Brooke, Bart., of Colebrooke. She was married Oct. 10, 1833, and had one daughter, Lalagé Letitia Caroline, who married, in 1857, Mr. Henry Hyde Nugent Bankes, and died Oct. 4, 1875.

MR. COLE, Q.C.

Mr. Henry Thomas Cole, Q.C., formerly M.P. for Penryn and Falmouth, Recorder of Plymouth and Devonport, died on the 5th inst., at 4, Glendower-place, South Kensington. He was born 2nd February, 1816, the second son of Captain George Cole, M.A., by Sarah, his wife, daughter of Captain Crozier, R.M., of Stramore. He was called to the Bar 1842, and joined the Western Circuit, on which he acquired considerable practice, and became eventually leader. In 1867 he was made a Queen's Counsel and a Bencher of his Inn. From 1862 to 1872, he was Recorder of Penzance, and from 1872 to the time of his death Recorder of Plymouth and Devonport. He unsuccessfully contested Taunton in 1868, but was returned for Penryn and Falmouth, in the Liberal interest, from 1874 to 1880. He acted as Treasurer for the Middle Temple in 1883. Mr. Cole married, 1846, Georgiana, daughter of Mr. John Stone, barrister-at-law.

MR. JOHN HYDE.

Mr. John Hyde, of Creg, formerly of Castle Hyde, county Cork, D.L., and at one time High Sheriff, died on the 3rd inst., at his seat near Fermoy, aged eighty-one. He was eldest son of Mr. John Hyde, of Castle Hyde, by the Hon. Elizabeth O'Callaghan, his wife, daughter of the first Lord Lismore, and represented the ancient and highly allied family of Hyde of Castle Hyde. During the years of panic consequent on the Irish famine and the sales under the Encumbered Estates Court, the famous demesne of Castle Hyde, celebrated in Irish poetry as a valley unrivalled in beauty, was sold by Mr. Hyde for less than a third of its value.

We have also to record the deaths of—

Mr. P. J. Smyth, who recently resigned his seat in Parliament on becoming secretary to the Loan Fund Board in Ireland, on the 12th inst., in Dublin, aged sixty-three.

Lady Letitia Louisa MacGregor, widow of Cortlandt George MacGregor, of Carisbrooke House, Isle of Wight, and eldest sister of the ninth Earl of Antrim, on the 5th inst., at her residence in Brighton.

Colonel the Hon. Charles Grantham Scott, second son of Thomas, second Earl of Clonmell, and maternal grandson of the second Earl of Warwick, on the 5th inst., at 79, Eaton-square, aged sixty-six.

The Rev. Christopher Whichcote, M.A., Rural Dean, Rector of Aswarby, and Vicar of Swarby, in the county of Lincoln, fifth son of Sir Thomas Whichcote, fifth Baronet, on the 4th inst., in his seventy-ninth year.

Lady Dulcibella Jane Wodehouse, only daughter of William, sixteenth Earl of Erroll, on the 10th inst., in her ninety-second year. The venerable lady married, in 1821, the Rev. Charles N. Wodehouse, and was left a widow in 1870.

Lady Louisa Cator, at her residence in Bryanston-square, on the 7th inst., in her ninety-first year. She was the second daughter of John, seventh Earl of Scarborough; and married, in September, 1825, the Rev. Thomas Cator, M.A., and was left a widow in August, 1864.

Dr. Henry Thomas Lanchester, at his residence, Park House, Croydon, on the 8th inst., aged forty-seven. He was chairman of the Finance Committee of the Croydon School Board, a governor of Whitgift Hospital, and chief of the medical staff of the Croydon General Hospital.

Mr. John Deedes, of the Inner Temple and South-Eastern Circuit, at his residence in Belgrave-square, on Sunday, at an advanced age. He was admitted a student of the Inner Temple in April, 1826; was called to the Bar in November, 1829; was elected a Bencher of his Inn in 1863; and held office as treasurer during 1877.

The Hon. John Frazer, a leading member of the Legislature of New South Wales, aged fifty-eight. He was by birth an Irishman, and settled in Australia in 1840, where, after many years of usefulness, he was given, in 1874, a seat in the Legislative Council. He was a munificent benefactor to the town of Sydney, and contributed generously to its local wants.

Captain the Hon. Henry Holmes A'Court, R.N., third son of the present Lord Heytesbury, by Elizabeth, his wife, daughter and heiress of Sir Leonard Thomas Worsley Holmes, Bart., aged forty-three. He entered the Royal Navy in 1834, was employed in the China expedition of 1858-68, for which service he obtained the medal with clasp, and was promoted to a captaincy in 1881.

Dr. Herbert Davies, F.R.C.P., Consulting Physician to the London Hospital, on the 11th inst., in the sixty-seventh year of his age. He was a Scholar of Caius College, Cambridge; a Wrangler in 1842; and, later, a Fellow of Queen's College. Dr. Davies had been a Censor of the Royal College of Physicians, an Assessor and Examiner in the University of Cambridge, and was for many years Lecturer on Medicine at the London Hospital Medical College.

Cluny Macpherson, of Cluny, chief of the Clan Macpherson, in his eightieth year. He was a Companion of the Bath, Colonel of the Inverness-shire Rifle Volunteers, and held many important offices connected with the town and county of Inverness. He celebrated his golden wedding two years ago. His eldest son is Colonel Donald Macpherson, commanding the 42nd Regimental District, and late Colonel of the Black Watch, and his second son is Colonel of the 93rd Highlanders.

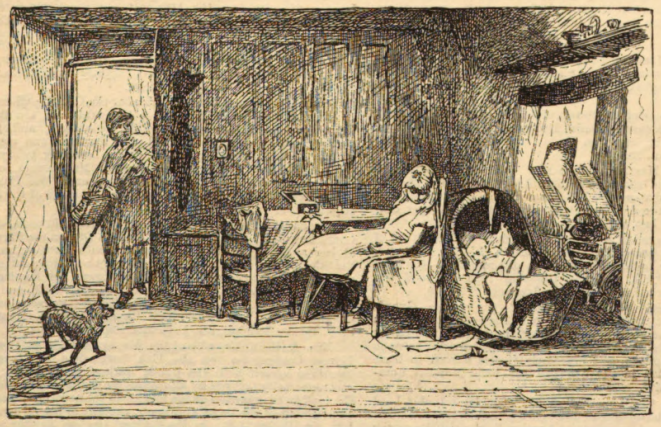
Amelia, Countess de Salis, widow of John Francis, sixth Count de Salis, formerly in her Majesty's Diplomatic Service, at her residence, Atherstone-terrace, South Kensington, on the 8th inst., aged forty-seven. She was the eldest daughter of Mr. Christopher and Lady Sophia Tower, of Huntsmere Park, Bucks, married the Count on Feb. 11, 1862, and was left a widow in August, 1871. She leaves two sons and a daughter—namely, John Francis Charles, present Count de Salis, Henry Rodolph, and Catherine Sophia de Salis.

Mrs. A. K. Rollit, wife of the Mayor of Hull, at Thwaite House, Cottingham, on the 11th inst. She had greatly identified herself with the public work of her husband, and was universally beloved by all classes for the practical interest she took in the charities of the town. In the new Out-patients' Department of the Royal Infirmary, the gift of her father, the late Mr. Bailey, J.P.; in the Sailors' Orphan Asylum; and other benevolent institutions, she was greatly interested. The graceful manner in which she helped Dr. Rollit to entertain the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh on their visit to Hull in October to open the Sailors' Orphan Bazaar (in which she took so active a part as to cause her last illness), gave the greatest public satisfaction.

WINTER EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.

Our critical examination, a month ago, of the pictures at the Winter Exhibition of the Royal Society of Painters in Water Colours has not left much to be said upon this occasion. It was then remarked that while the figure-painters, especially Sir John Gilbert, President of the Society, and Mr. Carl Haag, with Mr. W. E. Lockhart, Mr. A. H. Marsh, Mr. Tom Lloyd, and Mr. John Burr, presented work of notable excellence, the predominant class of subjects was that of landscapes and wayside studies of the simple aspects of nature. Our selection is now made with regard chiefly to the interest of those delineations of incidents and characters in human life, which do not lose so much in black-and-white sketches of the subjects. We have already mentioned with due commendation Mr. Burr's kindly and humorous picture of "The Tired Nurse," where the baby in the cradle wakes up and cries while the young girl is asleep in her chair, and the mother comes home just in time. Mrs. Allingham's picture of a farmer's daughter, accompanied by a little child, bringing a pail of food to the pig-stye, is a scene of not unpleasing rusticity; and Mr. Glindoni's "Rent Day" is expressive of gloomy perplexities which just now beset the English agriculturist in many parts of the country. The charming lass whom Mr. Brewtnall has brought out into the blooming fields, "All on a Summer's Day," surrounded with the pleasant gifts of nature at that season, is a welcome personage on the walls of this Winter Exhibition, giving us fair promise of coming sunshine and sweet mild air, of renewed green leaves and fresh flowers, as delightful as in summers past. "Bob and his Grandfather," the very small boy intently watching the process of repairing the fisherman's net, on the sea-wall of a village along our southern coast, is a work of Mr. T. Lloyd's, which has considerable artistic merit. The girl with the story-book, perched on a high stool, pausing as she reads to ask herself whether the tale can be true, may have assumed a rather ungraceful attitude, but is a fine child nevertheless, and her intellectual powers will not be enfeebled by the dreamy indulgence of romantic fancy.

BOB AND HIS GRANDFATHER. TOM LLOYD.



IS IT TRUE? J. H. HENSHALL.

RENT DAY. H. G. GLINDONI.

ALL ON A SUMMER DAY. E. F. BREWTNALL.

THE TIRED NURSE. JOHN BURR.

FEEDING THE PIGS. MRS. ALLINGHAM.

1. Miss Florence Treloar, Kate Greenaway Costume.
2. Miss Ida Constance Bird, My Great Grannie, 1785.
3. Miss Ethel Colls as Pierrette.
4. Miss Mary Lloyd as Pierrette.
5. Master and Miss Blackwood as Love Birds.
6. Miss Elsie Milman as Phyllis, from "Under the Window."
7. Miss Josephine Arnold.
8. Master Cecil Palmer as Baby Bunting.
9. Miss Dorothy Biddle as a Normandy Bride.
10. Master Martin as Hamlet.
11. Master T. Smith, Court Dress.
12. Miss A. Richards as a Canadian Skater.
13. Miss Violet Anson as a Marylebone Charity Girl.
14. Master Douglas Leslie as Lord Chancellor.
15. Miss Minnie Kynaston as a French Patissière.
16. Miss Stella Phillips as a Canary.

SKETCHES AT THE LORD MAYOR'S JUVENILE FANCY-DRESS BALL ON TWELFTH NIGHT.

TWELFTH NIGHT AT THE MANSION HOUSE.

The Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress have for many years been in the habit of giving a juvenile fancy-dress ball, or similar entertainment, at their civic mansion soon after Christmas, but having it on Jan. 6 and heading the invitation "Twelfth Night" was the revival of an old custom, and a most appropriate one. The jour des rois was never more fitly kept; for the little people were kings and queens of the occasion, and their unaffected enjoyment was a sight to make an old man young. Dancing began at the very reasonable hour of half-past six, and was to have ended at half-past eleven, but the charms of the last dance were so potent, and it went with such joyous entrain, that "God Save the Queen" was not played till twelve o'clock.

One of the prettiest sights of the evening was when Punch and Judy gave their time-honoured exhibition in the Saloon, and the children were grouped round in a large semicircle—the very little ones sitting on the floor in front, while bigger girls and boys were ranged behind, and at the back of all stood fathers and mothers with happy little creatures in their arms or perched on their shoulders.

Later on, there were dissolving views in the Egyptian Hall, but the principal sight to lookers-on was when the children walked in procession round that splendid saloon; and the chief pleasure was evidently the dancing, which was very brisk and general, thanks to the exertions of the kindly M.C.'s and of the Mistresses of the Ceremonies, who were distinguished by wearing a blue ribbon round their right arms. This latter was quite a new institution; and the ladies who fulfilled its duties were Mrs. Ernest Palmer, Miss Phillips, Miss Kimber, and the Misses Palmer, Puleston, and Allen.

The children's dresses were very pretty, the idea of many of those worn by the younger ones being taken from nursery rhymes and fairy tales. Master Cecil Palmer, the grandson of the Lady Mayoress, who said he was two years and a half old, was dressed in white fur as Baby Bunting, with an impertinent-looking little tail, prodigiously long ears, and a very innocent-looking weapon by his side, presumably a gun. Miss Maud Bushby and Miss Nelly Bone made very pretty Bo-Peeps, and Miss E. M. Lavington was Little Red Riding Hood. Sir William Charley's juvenile niece, Miss Maud Mackenzie, was simply Mr. Millais' "Cherry Ripe" who had stepped out of the frame. Sir Reginald Hanson's daughters were attired as Marylebone charity-girls, in white mob caps, with blue ribbons, white kerchiefs, and aprons adorned with blue bows, and black stuff skirts. Miss Hetty Lewis was dressed as a village maid, in a light pompadour tunic and green stomacher over a green striped skirt, and had a cap adorned with wild flowers on her head. Miss Ethel Coils, in white satin and silver, with a long veil, made a pretty Pierrette. Master Douglas Leslie looked very quaint as a miniature Lord Chancellor, in gold brocaded robe, spotless white bands, immaculate grey wig and spectacles. Mr. Sheriff Phillips was naturally proud of his little Stella, who was capitally got up as a canary, the only one of those delightful song-birds present. Her dress down to her small shoes was all of yellow plush or velvet; she had a pair of wings that looked capable of flying, and her head-dress was a very good imitation of a canary's head, with beak and eyes all complete. A tiny brother and sister represented a pair of love-birds. Miss Ida Bird personated "My Great Granny" as she appeared in 1785, with powdered hair, and a gown of old brocade rich enough literally to stand alone. Miss Ada Morris looked very pretty as Winter, with snow on her hair, swan's-down trimming on her soft white dress, snow-balls round the tunic, and bunches of holly and mistletoe giving the requisite touches of colour; and Miss Annie Richards as a Canadian was in white cashmere and swan's-down, with a pretty muff, some blue birds on her head and shoulders, and a pair of skates by her side. Master Ralph Truscott, grandson of Sir Francis Truscott, was very elaborately got up as Prince Eugène, in a court suit of the Queen Anne period, plum-coloured embroidered satin coat, white lace jabot, blue silk stockings, and powdered hair. Miss Ethel Halse, as Diana, wore a becoming dress of green cashmere, with silver ornaments, and a quiver full of arrows that might have done damage to over-susceptible hearts. Master H. J. Smallpage wore a very correct Marquis costume, dating somewhere about 1740, with claret satin coat, lace collar and ruffles, "buckled shoon," a powdered wig, and a black patch on his rosy cheek. The costumes, sketched by our Special Artist, must be considered representative. There were scores of others equally striking, and all the youthful wearers must from the experience of that happy evening look forward to their "next merry meeting" with the utmost pleasures of anticipation.

THE CHURCH.

The remains of the late Dr. Jackson, Bishop of London, were interred last Saturday in Fulham churchyard, in the presence of a very large number of prelates and clergy of his own and adjacent dioceses. The funeral service was read by the Archbishop of Canterbury. On Sunday in the churches of the metropolis mourning draperies testified to the feeling of sorrow for the loss of the Bishop, and funeral sermons were preached in St. Paul's, Westminster Abbey, the Chapels Royal, and the other churches of London.

The Rev. W. Durst, Rector of Alverstoke, has been appointed an Honorary Canon of Winchester Cathedral.

Dr. Vaughan, who was announced to preach on Sunday at the Temple Church was unable to do so owing to indisposition. The pulpit was occupied by Canon Spence.

The Church of St. Mary, Deane, has been reopened, after enlargement and restoration, the chancel having been lengthened and the cumbrous galleries removed.

The Rev. A. W. Callis, M.A., formerly Assistant Master in Cranleigh School, Guildford, has been appointed Head Master of King Edward VI. Grammar School, Wymondham, Norfolk.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has been nominated to succeed Mr. J. R. Lowell, the American Minister, in the presidential chair of the Birmingham Midland Institute.

The Rev. Canon Cook, the editor of "The Speaker's Commentary on the Bible," has announced his intention, through failing health and the infirmities of age, of resigning his position as a Canon Residentiary of Exeter.

The living of St. Mary's, Kilburn, void by the preferment of the Rev. Charles V. Childe to Christ Church, Cheltenham, has been conferred by the trustees on the Rev. Job Robertson, Vicar of Holy Trinity, Stroud-green, Hornsey.

The debt incurred in restoring the towers of Wimborne Minster having been fully discharged, it is now proposed to proceed with the restoration of the transepts, towards which the nucleus of a fund has been already promised.

At a meeting in favour of Church extension held on Monday afternoon, under the presidency of the Duke of Northumberland, at Newcastle-on-Tyne, it was announced that the amount already in hand is over £40,000.

Last week the Bishop of Chester consecrated Macclesfield old church, which has been undergoing restoration for eighteen months. The chancel and vestries have been restored, and the galleries taken down, at a cost of £3250. The remainder of the work is estimated to cost from £6000 to £8000.

The Bishop Jeune Memorial Prize for 1884 has, with the approval of the Archbishop of York, been divided between the Rev. A. S. Newman, Curate of Emmanuel Church, Loughborough, and the Rev. H. A. Smyth, Curate of Aylestone, whose essays were decided to be of equal merit.

Earl Nelson presided on Tuesday evening at a meeting held in St. Saviour's Mission-room, Fleet-road, South Hampstead, to promote the building-fund of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Mansfield-road. The building-fund has received, among other donations, £500 from Mr. Reginald Prance, and £500 from Mr. George Bell.

A silver salver and a purse of ninety sovereigns have been presented to the Rev. J. Davey, by his pupils and friends, on the occasion of his resigning the Head-Mastership of the Grammar School at Coatham, Redcar, which he has held for more than fifteen years.—The Rev. A. M. W. Christopher, the Rector of St. Aldate's, Oxford, has been presented with a purse containing 110 guineas, and a handsome clock and vases, in recognition of his labours in the parish, extending over a period of a quarter of a century.—Testimonials have also been presented to the Rev. A. B. M. Ley, for twelve years Senior Curate of St. Nicholas, Great Yarmouth; to the Rev. E. G. Sandford, upon resigning the vicarage of Landkey, North Devon; and to the Rev. W. R. Wollen, late Curate of Olveston.

The Dowager Marchioness of Hertford has erected an elaborate reredos of alabaster and marble in Arrow church, near Alcester, to the memory of the late Marquis of Hertford.—A new font has been placed in the Church of St. Michael, Helston, which is said to be the finest work of its kind in the county of Cornwall. The bowl is of Beer stone, and the shaft of local serpentine.—A new lectern has been presented to the parish church of Paul, near Newlyn, by a parishioner of the latter picturesque suburb of Penzance.—A fine five-light Munich east window has been placed in the church at Burgess Hill, illustrating the text, "Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden." An inscription at the foot runs as follows:—"To the glory of God and in memory of Thomas Crundon, of Burgess Hill, this window was raised by his loving wife and children, 1884." The work has been designed and carried out by Messrs. Mayer and Co.

The London Corporation has granted fifty guineas to the Boys and Girls' Industrial Homes.

Lord Reay, as Rector of St. Andrew's University, has intimated his intention of delivering his inaugural address on Friday, the 30th inst.

The Manchester and Salford Councils have passed resolutions ordering a 2d. rate for the purpose of the Manchester Ship Canal. The rate will produce £24,000.

In the twenty-fourth annual exhibition of the Kennel Club, which has been held this week at the Crystal Palace, 1600 dogs were shown, the display being the finest held by the society.

Admiral Henry Schank Hillyar, C.B., has been awarded the good-service pension of £300 a year, void by the death of Sir G. R. Mundy, Admiral of the Fleet.

SMITH, ELDER, & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

Now ready, price 12s. 6d., bound in cloth; or, in half-morocco, marbled edges, 18s.

VOLUME I. (ABBADIE—ANNE), royal 8vo, of

THE DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.

Edited by LESLIE STEPHEN.

Further Volumes will be issued at intervals of Three Months; and it is confidently expected that the work will be completed in about Fifty Volumes.

EXTRACTS FROM NOTICES BY THE PRESS.

The ATHENÆUM, Jan. 10, 1885.

"For years past there has been abundant need of an exhaustive work on English biography, like those which learned Societies, under Royal or national patronage, are issuing in Germany and Belgium. In England we hardly look to an "Akademie der Wissenschaften," or a Royal commission for a purely literary enterprise, even if it be one of national importance. It is to the exertions of a publishing firm and private man of letters that we owe the present noble undertaking. An examination of the first of the fifty volumes of which it is to consist, shows that the expectations which have been formed concerning it will not be disappointed. In fulness, in thoroughness, and in general accuracy, it leaves little or nothing to be desired. It compares very favourably with its two foreign models in most essential points, and in one, at least, it is distinctly superior. Neither the German nor the Belgian Dictionary indicates the sources from which the matter in the text has been drawn with equal completeness and precision. A careful bibliographical note is appended to even the shortest of the articles; and in some of the longer ones this note becomes nothing less than an exhaustive critical digest, the utility of which can scarcely be rated too highly."

The SPECTATOR, Jan. 10, 1885.

"We receive with most cordial welcome the first volume of Mr. Leslie Stephen's 'Dictionary of National Biography,' a work long needed, often contemplated, at least once commenced, but during the last 130 years never achieved. . . . The volume before us, though far from being perfect, is yet deserving of very high commendation, as being in most points far in advance of any yet attempted. No more competent editor could be found for such a work than Mr. Leslie Stephen, and the list of contributors shows that he has obtained the co-operation of men who have distinguished themselves in several departments of literary research. In his prospectus, the Editor has referred to the German and Belgian dictionaries now in progress, and has stated that it is the intention to provide a dictionary for our own nation worthy of taking a place beside them. . . . If the 'Dictionary of National Biography' continues as it has begun, it will not only be entitled to a place beside these dictionaries, but as much above them as they are above the two great French collections."

The PALL MALL GAZETTE, Dec. 24.

"We have before us, in this handsome volume, the first instalment of a work which promises to do credit alike to the enterprise of its publishers and the scholarly assiduity of its editor. Every literary workman must have felt the lack of such a book of reference. Since the "Biographia Britannica," no attempt has been made, on anything like an adequate scale, to provide a complete storehouse of British Biography. The magnitude of the task has, not unnaturally, deterred publishers from attempting it. . . . In any such undertaking, the editor's chief difficulty is, in the first place, to determine who shall be deemed worthy of notice, and, in the second place, to preserve a due proportion in the length of the articles. In both respects Mr. Stephen has shown excellent judgment. . . . But it is the shorter notices rather than the more extended monographs upon which the real utility of the work will depend. These, so far as we have looked into them, seem to have been executed with great care, and to embody, in most instances, a good deal of original research . . . The attention devoted to theatrical biography will greatly enhance the value of the Dictionary."

NEW WORK BY AUGUSTUS J. C. HARE.
Now ready, crown 8vo, with Illustrations, 5s.,
SKETCHES IN HOLLAND AND SCANDINAVIA.
By AUGUSTUS J. C. HARE, Author of "Cities of Italy," "Wanderings in Spain," &c.

POPULAR EDITION, with a Preface, crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.,
GOD AND THE BIBLE: a Sequel to "Literature and Dogma." By MATTHEW ARNOLD.

NEW, REVISED, AND CHEAPER EDITION OF BOSWORTH SMITH'S "LIFE OF LORD LAWRENCE."
In the press, Sixth Edition, with Portraits and Maps, 2 vols., large crown 8vo, 21s.,
LIFE OF LORD LAWRENCE. By R. BOSWORTH SMITH, M.A., late Fellow of Trinity College, Oxford; Assistant Master at Harrow School; Author of "Mohammed and Mohammedanism," "Carthage and the Carthaginians," &c.

In the press, crown 8vo, with numerous Illustrations,
STUDIES IN RUSSIA. By AUGUSTUS J. C. HARE, Author of "Walks in Rome," "Cities of Northern and Central India," "Wanderings in Spain," &c.

Now ready, Third Edition, foap 8vo, 5s.,
FERISHTAH'S FANCIES. By ROBERT BROWNING.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF "DON QUIXOTE."
In the press, 4 vols., 8vo, 12s. 6d. each,
THE INGENIOUS GENTLEMAN DON QUIXOTE OF LA MANCHA. By MIGUEL DE CERVANTES SAAVEDRA. A Translation, with Introduction and Notes, by John Ormsby, Translator of the "Poem of the Cid."

Now ready, Third Edition, crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.,
T. LEAVES: A Selection of Pieces for Public Reading. By EDWARD F. TURNER. Author of "Tantler's Sister," &c.

ENGLAND, EGYPT, AND THE SOUDAN.
Now ready, Second Edition, with Portrait Group of Hicks Pasha and Staff, crown 8vo, 6s.,
WITH HICKS PASHA IN THE SOUDAN. By Colonel the Honourable J. COLBORNE, Special Correspondent of the "Daily News."

Now ready, Second Edition, with Illustrations, post 8vo, 2s.,
FIRST AID TO THE INJURED. Five Ambulance Lectures. By Dr. FRIEDRICH ESMARCH. Translated from the German by H.R H. Princess Christian.

NEW VOLUME OF THE "STANDARD" EDITION OF THE COMPLETE WORKS OF W. M. THACKERAY.
Now ready, large 8vo, 10s. 6d.,
THE PARIS SKETCH-BOOK. With Twelve Steel Plates and Forty-eight Wood Engravings.

NEW WORKS OF FICTION.

NEW WORK BY W. E. NORRIS.
Will be ready in February, 3 vols., post 8vo.
A MAN OF HIS WORD, and other Stories. By W. E. NORRIS, Author of "Matrimony," "No New Thing," &c.

NEW NOVEL BY JAMES PAYN.
Just Published, 2 vols., post 8vo, with Numerous Illustrations by Harry Furniss.
THE TALK OF THE TOWN. By JAMES PAYN, Author of "By Proxy," &c.

London: SMITH, ELDER, and CO., 15, Waterloo-place.

MUSIC.

The afternoon performances associated with the Monday Popular Concerts were resumed last Saturday, when the programme included Beethoven's septet for stringed and wind instruments, which was admirably performed by Herr Straus, Mr. Hollander, Mr. Lazarus, Mr. Mann, Mr. Wotton, Signor Piatti, and Mr. Reynolds. It was given for the thirty-ninth time here on this occasion. Herr Straus was heard as a soloist in four movements from Bach's fourth sonata for violin alone (which he played with great success, although interrupted by the breaking of a string), and Miss Zimmermann in three of Henselt's charming pianoforte studies, and a piece by Scarlatti. Mr. Santley sang, with fine effect, Schumann's declamatory scena "Belshazzar," and two expressive songs by Miss Maude V. White, settings of words by Herrick and the Marquis of Montrose. At the second Monday Evening Concert of the year, Madame Essipoff appeared. This accomplished Russian pianist played a Prelude by Mendelssohn, a Nocturne by Chopin, a Mazurka by M. Godard, and another piece for the encore, with special grace and refinement. The lady's rare powers of bravura execution were very successfully displayed in the pianoforte part of Rubinstein's elaborate Trio in G minor (op. 15), the accompanying violin and violoncello parts having been worthily sustained, respectively, by Madame Norman-Néruda and Signor Piatti. This gentleman and Madame Essipoff were associated in Chopin's Introduction and Polonaise at the close of the programme, which included Miss M. V. White's expressive song, "Ye Cupids droop each little head," and Purcell's "Nymphs and Shepherds," charmingly rendered by Mrs. Hutchinson. Mr. Zerbini was the accompanist on Saturday, and Mr. S. Naylor on Monday.

As already mentioned, Mr. John Boosey gave the first London Ballad Concert of the year on Saturday afternoon, Jan. 3, when a varied programme was effectively rendered by eminent performers. The first evening concert of 1885 took place this week, when the selection comprised some favourite national songs and popular modern pieces. Another afternoon concert is to be given next Wednesday.

The Royal Albert Hall Choral Society, conducted by Mr. Barnby, gave the sixth concert of the fourteenth season during the week, when Haydn's "Creation" was the work selected for performance.

London musical activity has not yet quite recovered from the temporary lull that is usually induced by the prevalence of Christmas and New-Year entertainments; but signs are already apparent of a speedy return to the plenty and variety of musical performances by which the metropolis is distinguished during nearly all the twelve months.

The Queen has sanctioned the adoption of the diapason normal by her private band, and this will in future be used at the state concerts. It is to be hoped that the example will be universally followed, and that the uniformity of musical pitch so frequently urged will soon be an accomplished fact in England.

CHATTO and WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS. Full List free by post.

WOMEN OF THE DAY: a Biographical Dictionary of Notable Contemporaries. By FRANCIS HAYS. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 5s.

FARNELL'S FOLLY: a Novel. By J. T. TROWBRIDGE. 2 vols., crown 8vo, 12s. At all Libraries.

GERALD. By ELEANOR C. PRICE, Author of "Valentina." 3 vols., crown 8vo. At all Libraries. [Immediately.

NEW VOLUMES of "THE PICCADILLY NOVELS." Crown 8vo, cloth extra, each 3s. 6d.,
DOROTHY FORSTER. By WALTER BESANT.
WEIRD STORIES. By Mrs. J. H. RIDDELL.
MISTRESS JUDITH. By C. C. FRASER-TYTLER.
MRS. LANCASTER'S RIVAL. By ELEANOR C. PRICE.
SAINT MUNGO'S CITY. By SARAH TYTLER.

STRANGE STORIES. By GRANT ALLEN (J. ARBUTHNOT WILSON). With a Frontispiece by George Du Maurier. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

PRINCESS NAPRAXINE. By OUIDA. New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth extra (uniform with the Collected Edition of her Works), 5s.

THE ADVENTURES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN. By MARK TWAIN. Crown 8vo, with 174 Illustrations by E. W. Kemble, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

ON A MEXICAN MUSTANG. By ALEX. E. SWEET and J. ARMOY KNOX. Crown 8vo, with 265 Illustrations, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.
London: CHATTO and WINDUS, Piccadilly.

MESSRS. J. and R. MAXWELL'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.
NEW NOVEL BY A NEW AUTHOR.
THE QUEEN OF THE MOOR. By FREDERIC ADYE.
In 3 vols. At all Libraries.
NEW NOVEL BY A NEW NOVELIST.
CURRENT REPENTANCE. By "A. B. C. S."
In 3 vols. At all Libraries.
CHEAP UNIFORM EDITION OF "RITA'S" NOVELS.
LIKE DIAN'S KISS. By "RITA," Author of "Dame Durden," &c.
Price 2s., boards; 2s. 6d., cloth; 3s. 6d., half morocco (postage 4d.).
CHEAP UNIFORM EDITION OF E. SPENDER'S NOVELS.
RESTORED. By E. SPENDER, Author of "A True Marriage," &c.
Price 2s., boards; 2s. 6d., cloth; 3s. 6d., half morocco (postage 4d.).
London: J. and R. MAXWELL, Shoe-lane; and Libraries, Bookstalls, &c.

LONDON JOURNALISTS.—A Superb Litho-Engraving, 22in. by 28in., with Portraits and Facsimile Autographs of Members of Editorial Staff of the "Times," "Standard," "Telegraph," "Daily News," "Chronicle," "St. James's Gazette," "Illustrated London News," "Graphic," "Punch," "Truth," "World." A representative group of exceptional interest. This finely executed picture will be sent post-free to any address on receipt of P.O.O. for 2s. 6d. by RICHARDS, TERRY, and Co., 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

POPULAR NEW NOVELS.
Now ready at all the Libraries.
NEAR NEIGHBOURS. By FRANCES MARY PEARD. 2 vols.
NOW READY.
BETWEEN THE ACTS. By C. H. D. STOCKER. 3 vols.
PERIL. By JESSIE FOTHERGILL. 3 vols.
JOHNNY LUDLOW, 3rd series. In 3 vols. By MRS. HENRY WOOD.
[Just ready.
RICHARD BENTLEY and SON, New Burlington-street.

THIRD EDITION OF THE ARGOSY FOR JANUARY NOW READY.
"MRS. HENRY WOOD'S ARGOSY is literally laden with golden grain."—Daily Telegraph.

THE MYSTERY OF ALLAN GRALE, a new Illustrated Serial Story, commences in the January Number of "The Argosy." Second Edition, now ready.

CARAMEL COTTAGE, by JOHNNY LUDLOW; and "Among the Welsh," by CHARLES W. WOOD, F.R.G.S., commence in the January Number of "The Argosy." Second Edition, now ready.

Now ready,
MRS. HENRY WOOD'S MAGAZINE,
THE ARGOSY, for JANUARY.
CONTENTS.
1. THE MYSTERY OF ALLAN GRALE. A New Serial Story. Chap. I.—The Farm by the Lock.
" II.—The Knock at the Door.
" III.—What could it mean?
" IV.—The Black Pool.
Illustrated by M. Ellen Edwards.
2. CARAMEL COTTAGE. By Johnny Ludlow.
3. AMONG THE WELSH. By Charles W. Wood, F.R.G.S. With Nine Illustrations.
4. THE CONVERSION OF PROFESSOR NABS.
5. No. 1 OF THE FIRST BOOK.
6. LITTLE MAID OF ARCADIE.
7. A REQUIEM. By G. B. Stuart.
Sixpence, Monthly.
"'The Argosy' sails over golden seas."—Daily Telegraph.
"'The Argosy' sails as gaily as ever, and the golden grain with which Mrs. Henry Wood loads her vessel shows no sign of diminution. The present number is one of the best ever issued."—Bell's Life.
"Mrs. Henry Wood's 'Argosy' is one of the brightest and most amusing as well as the cheapest amongst the English serials."—Broad Arrow.
"The best and cheapest magazine we have."—Standard.
"Johnny Ludlow's stories are almost perfect."—Spectator.
"The interest aroused in Johnny Ludlow is considerable."—Saturday Review.
Sixpence, Monthly.
THIRD EDITION now ready for JANUARY.
RICHARD BENTLEY and SON, 8, New Burlington-street, W.

SECOND EDITION.
Now ready, price 2d., post-free, Three Penny Stamps.
FAMILY HERALD SUPPLEMENT
NEW YEAR'S DOUBLE NUMBER, containing
A COMPLETE NOVEL
More than double the length of the ordinary Supplement, Entitled
QUEEN OF HIS LIFE.
By a New Author.
Price Twopence; post-free, Three Penny Stamps.
London: W. STEVENS, 421, Strand; and all Newsvenders.

Eighth Thousand. Post-free, 6d.
BEFORE I BEGAN to SPEAK. By a BABY.
Vide Reviews.
18, Whitefriars-street, London, E.C.; Booksellers and Bookstalls.

MR. T. FISHER UNWIN'S LIST OF NEW BOOKS and NOVELS. At all the Libraries and Booksellers'. CHARLES DICKENS AS I KNEW HIM. By GEORGE DOLBY. Crown 8vo, 6s., post-free. "Pleasant and unpretentious. . . . Will be welcome to all lovers of Dickens for Dickens' sake."—Athenæum. TARANTELLA. By MATHILDE BLIND. Crown 8vo, 2ls. "Reserves much praise."—Morning Post. ICHABOD. By BERTHA THOMAS. 2 vols., crown 8vo, 21s. "It is distinctly clever."—Society.
26, Paternoster-square, London, E.C.

HYPATIA WALTZ. By MAY OSTLERE. Undoubtedly the Waltz of the season. Dedicated by special permission to Miss Mary Anderson. Performed daily with the greatest success in Augustus Harris's pantomime at the Gyt-tal Palace, and every evening at the Aeolphi Theatre, and at all fashionable dances.

HYPATIA WALTZ. "Broad Arrow" of Jan. 3 says:—"This charming waltz, dedicated to the lovely Miss Mary Anderson, with well-executed photo-engraving on the front leaf, is sure to be one of the most popular, if not the most popular, waltz of the season. It has a most delightful swing with a singing chorus, which adds greatly to its popularity. The compositions of May Ostlere but fair to rival those of the well known composer of "Venetia," &c.

HYPATIA WALTZ.—The following appears in "Truth," of Dec. 25, under "Girls' Gossip":—"Dearest Amy,—You will certainly want to know of some new and good dance music for your Christmas festivities; so I shall make that my first subject this week. Fortunately, I have discovered a quite delightful value called 'Hypatia,' which is composed by a member of our own sex. It is full of melody and music, and is, at the same time, so rhythmically marked that it sets one's feet going involuntarily. It can be had of Pitman, Paternoster-row, or of Cramer, Regent-street. Whether the composer, by her choice of title, means to infer that Hypatia delivered her lectures to the accompaniment of a brisk deux-temps cannot be gathered from anything in the bright and tempting composition itself."
Prices—Piano Solo, 2s. net; Septet, 1s. net; Full Orchestra, 1s. 6d. net; Violin Part, 3d. All now ready. Of all Musicsellers; or, post-free, of FREDERICK PITMAN, 20 and 21, Paternoster-row, London.

RODRIGUES' MONOGRAMS, ARMS, CORONET, CREST, and ADDRESS DIES
Engraved as Gems from Original and Artistic Designs.
NOTE-PAPER and ENVELOPES, brilliantly Illuminated by hand in Gold, Silver, Bronze, and Colours.
BEST RELIEF STAMPING, any colour, 1s. per 100.
HERALDIC ENGRAVING, PAINTING, and ILLUMINATING.
All the New and Fashionable Note-Papers.
BALL PROGRAMME, MENU CARDS, GUEST CARDS, WEDDING CARDS, INVITATIONS, and BOOK PLATES.

A VISITING CARD PLATE, elegantly engraved, and 100 CARDS Printed, for 4s. 6d.
RODRIGUES, 42, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

FOR FAMILY ARMS (Lincoln's-inn Heraldic Office) send Name and County. Sketch, 3s. 6d.; in colours, 7s. 6d. Arms Painted and Engraved on Seals, Dies, &c. PUGH BROTHERS, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn, W.C.; and 76, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. Prize Medal, Paris, 1878.

COCKLE'S
ANTIBILIOUS
PILLS.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR LIVER.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR BILE.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR INDIGESTION.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR HEARTBURN.

NUDA VERITAS.—GREY HAIR restored by this specific; after which it grows the natural colour, not grey. Unequalled as a dressing. It causes growth, arrests falling, and ITS use defies detection. The most harmless and effectual reabover extant. One trial will convince it has no equal. Price 10s. 6d., of all Chemists and Hairdressers. Testimonials free. Agents, R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

GOLDEN HAIR.—Robare's AUREOLINE produces the beautiful golden colour so much admired. Warranted perfectly harmless. Price 5s. 6d. and 10s. 6d., of all principal Perfumers and Chemists throughout the world.
Agents, R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

WHAT IS YOUR CREST and WHAT IS YOUR MOTTO? Send name and county to CULLETON'S Heraldic Office. Plain sketch, 3s. 6d.; colours, 7s. The arms of man and wife blended. Crest engraved on seals, rings, books, and steel dies, 8s. 6d. Gold seal, with crest, 25s. Solid Gold Ring, 18-carat, Hall-marked, with crest, 42s. Manual of Heraldry, 400 Engravings, 3s. 6d.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX of STATIONERY contains a Ream of the very best Paper and 500 Envelopes, all stamped in the most elegant way with Crest and Motto, Monogram, or Address, and the engraving of steel Die included. Sent to any part for P.O. order.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

VISITING CARDS by CULLETON. Fifty best quality, 2s. 8d., post-free, including the Engraving of Copper-plate. Wedding Cards, 50 each, 50 Embossed Envelopes, with Maiden Name, 12s. 6d.—T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

ELEGANT SCIENTIFIC PRESENT. FACSIMILES of the celebrated DIAMONDS OF THE WORLD, White and Coloured (Twenty-eight), wrought in crystal, glass of great lustre. In handsome Morocco Case, with descriptive catalogue, price £12 12s.
R. DAMON, F.G.S., Weymouth.

ARTISTS' SKETCHES.
FOR PANEL PAINTING, Terra Cotta, &c., for SALE and on HIRE. Priced List post-free.
WM. BARNARD, 139, Edgware-road, London, W.

BINDING the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.—Half-yearly Volumes bound in the new appropriate Covers, with gilt edges, at 3s. 6d. each, if sent carriage free to LEIGHTON, SON, and HODGE, 16, New-street-square, Fleet-street. The only Binders authorised by the Proprietors.

IMPROVED POSTAGE-STAMP ALBUM FOR 1885. Systematically arranged, and all the most modern improvements. Superior, 224 pages, post-free, 3s. 6d. Circulars free.—STANLEY GIBBONS and Co., 8, Grower-st., London.

BANK OF NEW ZEALAND.
(Incorporated by Act of General Assembly, July 29, 1861.)
Bankers to the New Zealand Government.
Capital subscribed and paid up, £1,000,000.
Reserve Fund, £325,000.
Head Office—Auckland.
BRANCHES AND AGENCIES.
In Australia—Melbourne, Sydney, Newcastle, and Adelaide.
In Fiji—Levuka, Suva.
In New Zealand—Auckland, Blenheim, Christchurch, Dunedin, Invercargill, Napier, Nelson, New Plymouth, Picton, Wellington, and at 95 other towns and places throughout the Colony.
This Bank grants Drafts on all its Branches and Agencies, and transacts every description of banking business connected with New Zealand, Australia, and Fiji on the most favourable terms.
The London Office RECEIVES FIXED DEPOSITS of £50 and upwards, rates and particulars of which can be ascertained on application. F. LARKWORTHY, Managing Director.
No. 1, Queen Victoria-street, Mansion House, E.C.

WANTED, Respectable Young Women, as DOMESTIC SERVANTS, to proceed to NEW SOUTH WALES. Passages, including Provisions, Bedding, &c., will be granted by the Agent-General in first-class steamers to approved applicants, upon payment of £2 each. An experienced Surgeon and Matron accompany each ship. The Colonial Government provides free accommodation for the Single Women during ten days after their arrival in Sydney. The next steamer will be dispatched on or about Jan. 25. Further information may be obtained at the EMIGRATION DEPARTMENT, New South Wales Government Offices, 5, Westminster-chambers, Victoria-street, Westminster, S.W.

TO MANITOBA.
The Completion of
THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY
(which is the ONLY DIRECT ROUTE to the Canadian North-West) to the summit of the Rocky Mountains has thrown open to settlement some of the finest Agricultural Lands in Manitoba and the North-West, of which the Dominion Government offer ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES FREE. For further information apply to any Steam-ship Agent; and for new maps, pamphlets, and the fullest particulars about the country (free of charge), as well as the new tourist guide, "From Quebec to the Rocky Mountains," when published, apply either personally or by letter to
ALEXANDER BEGG,
Canadian Pacific Railway Offices,
88, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

CHOCOLAT MENIER.
AMSTERDAM EXHIBITION, 1883. Awarded the GRAND DIPLOMA OF HONOUR.

CHOCOLAT MENIER, in ½ lb. and ¼ lb. PACKETS.
For BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, and SUPPER.

CHOCOLAT MENIER.—Awarded Twenty-Eight PRIZE MEDALS.
Consumption annually exceeds 25,000,000 lb.

CHOCOLAT MENIER. Paris, London, New York.
Sold Everywhere.

SEEDS! SEEDS! SEEDS!
Before purchasing your Spring Supply, send for DANIELS'
ILLUSTRATED GUIDE for AMATEUR GARDENERS.
Magnificent Coloured Illustrations of
FLOWERS, FRUITS, AND VEGETABLES,
100 pages beautifully Illustrated Letterpress.
This Catalogue may justly be termed the
GEM OF THE SEASON.
Price 1s., post-free.
Gratis to Customers.
DANIELS BROS., Seed Merchants, Norwich.

A DELICIOUS MEDICINE.
DR. LIEB'S "EDIBLE" FRUIT PILLS.
May be eaten like a sweetmeat. Renowned for their efficacy in Constipation, Sick Headache, and all ailments of the Stomach. Eagerly taken by children and the delicate. Highly recommended by the Faculty. Of all Chemists, at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d. per Box; or post-free of the Consignees, A. FOSENER and CO., 61, Mansell-street, London.

UNIVERSALLY PRESCRIBED BY THE FACULTY.
A laxative and refreshing Fruit Lozenge.
TAMAR For CONSTIPATION, Haemorrhoids, Bile, Headache, Loss of Appetite, Oversea Congestion.
INDIEN Prepared by E. GRILLON, Chemist of the Paris Faculty, 69, Queen-street, City, London.
GRILLON. Tamar, unlike Pills and the usual Purgatives, is agreeable to take, and never produces irritation, nor interferes with business or pleasure.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists, 2s. 6d. a Box. Stamp included.

COLDS CURED BY
DR. DUNBAR'S ALKARAM, or Anti-Catarrh Smelling-Bottle.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
IF inhaled on the first symptoms, ALKARAM will at once arrest them, and cure severe cases in half an hour. Sold by all Chemists, 2s. 6d. a Bottle. Address, Dr. Dunbar, care of Messrs. F. Newbery and Sons, 1, King Edward-st., E.C.

TOWLE'S PENNYROYAL and STEEL PILLS for FEMALES. Sold in Boxes, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d., of all Chemists. Sent anywhere on receipt of 15 or 34 stamps by the maker, E. T. TOWLE, Chemist, Nottingham.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT. The Pills purify the blood, correct all disorders of the liver, stomach, kidneys, and bowels. The Ointment is unrivalled in the cure of bad legs, old wounds, gout, and rheumatism.

JAY'S HALF-YEARLY SALE.
BLACK SILKS, warranted to be made by Bonnet, of 14 yds. 3s. 6d. per yard.
RICH FIGURED VELVETS, 6s. 9d. per yard.
BLACK SILKS of every kind proportionately cheap, but there will be no reduction on the Satin Duchesse, as sold by Messrs. JAY at 3s. per yard.
COSTUMES.—An elegant and rich variety of Black Silk, Velvet, and other Costumes, the product more or less of this season, marked in plain figures, and showing the reduction in the prices. But the 5 and 10 guinea silk Costumes (including sufficient materials for unmade bodice) lately sold by Messrs. JAY will not be altered in price.
MANTLES.—A large and costly collection of French Model Mantles by Worth, Pingat, and other artistes, at common prices. Useful Mantles, large sizes, late 15 guineas, now 3½ guineas each.
MODEL JACKETS, 1 guinea each.
FASHIONABLE BONNETS, HATS, and other incidental MILLINERY, COLLARS, CUFFS, &c., generally reduced in prices, and among these odds and ends many will be found worth inspection.
BLACK STUFFS.—In the Black Stuff Department the prices are generally lowered, and some fine Cashmeres and other good Woollen Manufactures are very cheap; but the all-wool Zouis, as usually sold by Messrs. JAY at 1s. per yard, will remain at the same cost.
FURS.—Owing to the mild weather, the Stock of superior Sealskin and rich Fur-trimmed Mantles have not been so freely sold as was anticipated; therefore those luxuries are reduced to every-day prices.
HOSIERY.—There is no reduction in the French Gloves sold at 2s. 6d. per pair, but sundry Lisle Thread Hose, 1s. 11½d. per pair; Cashmere, ribbed and plain, at 1s. 11½d.; pure Silk, small ladies' size, 2s. 6d. per pair; and Cashmere Jerseys, braided, from 10s. 6d., worth notice, and very cheap.
THE CRÊPE IMPÉRIAL, specialty in the Black Department, remains at the same price.
THE SALE does not in any way affect the execution of Mourning orders, a special staff being retained for that purpose.
CRÊPE IMPÉRIAL for Mourning Wear.
"MESSRS. JAY, of Regent-street, London, have a novel manufacture for black. It is all wool, and yet looks exactly like crêpe, as it has the crinkled or crimped surface which is inseparable from that fabric. It is solid and most durable, being free from the elasticity of the more perishable silk crêpe, which it so closely resembles, and yet it is glossy. It appears under the name of 'Crepe Imperial,' and is made up effectively into costumes for deep mourning, when it is not compulsory to trim with crêpe. The firm should be congratulated on introducing a fabric which will answer for the deepest mourning dress, and will wear as long as the mourner elects to use it."—Extract from "The Queen, the Lady's Newspaper."
JAY'S,
THE LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE,
REGENT-STREET, W.

TO TAILORS and WOOLLEN BUYERS. We are selling all classes of Woollen Goods and Tailors' Trimmings at Lower Prices than ever. Before buying your spring parcels, inspect our Stock, or write for patterns, stating class of Goods required.
ALFRED BROWN and SONS, 8, Holborn-circus, London, E.C.

CANNES.—Hôtel Beau Site. Adjoining Lord Brougham's property. Beautiful and sheltered situation. Large gardens; lawn-tennis. Baths, lifts, 200 chambers. Widened Entrance. THOMAS GONDARD, Proprietor.

NICE.—COSMOPOLITAN HOTEL. HOTEL DE LA GRANDE BRETAGNE. These two very superior grand hotels excel any on the Riviera. South aspect. Calorifère and Ascenseur at each.
J. LAVIT, Director.

NICE.—TERMINUS HOTEL. facing the station. Splendid south position. Hydraulic Ascenseur and Baths. 180 Chambers and Salons.

PEGLI.—Grand Hôtel Pegli (formerly De la Méditerranée). Facing the sea. South aspect, surrounded by gardens and mountains. Climate unsurpassed. Sanitary arrangements; satisfactory charges. BUCHER-DURRER, Prop.

VERMOUTH.—Francesco Cinzano and Co. Vermouth, combination Acid Wine and Alpine herbs, with quinine. Refreshing tonic and digestive. Of Wine Merchants, and F. CINZANO and CO., Corso Re Umberto, 10, Turin.

LEFT-OFF CLOTHES, the oldest and best buyers in the kingdom for cash. Parcels sent, appointments attended to.—Mr. and Mrs. PHILLIPS, Old Curiosity Shop, 31, Thayer-street, Manchester-square, London, W.

CORPULENCE.—Dr. YATE HOLLAND'S EMACERATING POWDERS (or Pills) safely and speedily absorb superfluous fat and reduce corpulency, however long standing or excessive. 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. per Box. Any Chemist; or post-free of C. GRICE and CO., 198, Fleet-st., E.C.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY for the HAIR. If your hair is turning grey, or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White Hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. "The Mexican Hair Renewer" is sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 3s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE. For the Teeth and Breath. Is the best Liquid Dentifrice in the world; it thoroughly cleanses partially-decayed teeth from all parasites or living "animalculæ," leaving them pearly white, imparting a delightful fragrance to the breath. The Fragrant Floriline removes instantly all odours arising from a foul stomach or tobacco smoke; being partly composed of honey, soda, and extracts of sweet herbs and plants, it is perfectly delicious to the taste, and as harmless as sherry. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 2s. 6d. per Bottle.

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, and NEURALGIA.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the inventor of Chlorodyne; that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See the "Times," July 13, 1864.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in cholera was Chlorodyne.—See "Lancet," Dec. 31, 1853.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Extract from the "Medical Times," Jan. 12, 1866:—Is prescribed by scores of orthodox practitioners. Of course, it would not be thus singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the best and most certain remedy in Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a certain cure in Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—CAUTION.—None genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each Bottle. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London. Sold in Bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s.

NEW MUSIC.

TRIAL BY JURY. By W. S. Gilbert and ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Now performing at the Savoy Theatre. Complete words and music, 3s. net; pianoforte solo, 2s. 6d. net.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S LATEST SUCCESSES:

NEW AND SUCCESSFUL SONGS.

PAOLO TOSTI.

BID ME GOOD-BYE. By Weatherly. "A tuneful ditty in valse rhythm; is certain to acquire vast popularity."—Times, Jan. 9, 1885.

MOTHER. By Weatherly.

AT VESPERS. Sung by all the principal Vocalists. Price 2s. each net.

NEW AND SUCCESSFUL DANCES.

BID ME GOOD-BYE VALSE. On the melody of Signor Tosti's newest and most successful song. By HENRY W. DE CAMORS. Played with enormous success by the "Bijou Drawing-Room Orchestra," Coote's Band, &c. Price 2s. net.

CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street, W.; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

P. BUCALOSSI.

PHYLLIS WALTZ. Played nightly with great success at the Haymarket Theatre.

MERRY FOOTSTEPS POLKA. Price 2s. each net.

CAROLINE LOWTHIAN.

BLACK AND TAN POLKA.

FAHRWOHL WALTZ. Price 2s. each net.

LUKE WHEELER.

TOI SEULE WALTZ.

LOYAUTÉ WALTZ.

CHIC POLKA.

SEA BREEZE POLKA. "The Sea Breeze Polka is one of the best and most spirited polkas which has been published for a long time."—Morning Post. Price 2s. each net.

CLAIRE WALTZ. By LEONARD GAUTIER. Illustrated with a beautiful photo of Mrs. Kendal. Price 2s. net.

CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street, London. City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

MAUDE V. WHITE'S NEW SONGS. Words from Tennyson's "In Memoriam."
1. I SOMETIMES HOLD IT HALF A SIN.
2. "'TIS BETTER TO HAVE LOVED AND LOST.
3. LOVE IS AND WAS MY LORD AND KING.
4. BE NEAR ME WHEN MY LIGHT IS LOW.
Price 2s. each net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO. have on view every description of PIANOFORTES by the best makers, returned from hire, to be SOLD at greatly reduced prices for cash, or may be purchased on the Three-Years' System.
CHAPPELL PIANOFORTES, from 15 guineas.
COLLARD PIANOFORTES, from 25 guineas.
ERARD PIANOFORTES, from 35 guineas.
BROADWOOD PIANOFORTES, from 35 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO'S STUDENT'S PIANOFORTES, from 16 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S PIANINOS, with Check Action, from 23 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S IRON-FRAMED OBLIQUE and COTTAGE PIANOFORTES for Ocean Steamers and Extreme Climates, from 35 to 65 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO. have on View Grand Pianofortes from 50 to 250 guineas.
50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry.

CHARMING NEW SONGS. 24 stamps each.
HEART TO HEART. By BEHREND. "A pretty and most effective song." A, B flat (C to E); C, and D.

SURELY. New Song. By A. H. BEHREND. 15,620 copies sold first month of issue. 15,620 copies sold first month of issue. 15,620 copies sold first month of issue. E flat, F, G (compass D to E), A flat, B flat, and C.

GOING HOME. New Song. By COTSFORD DICK. "Will take high rank in the musical world." G, A flat, A (compass F to F), and B flat.

TILL THE BREAKING OF THE DAY. By CIRO. PINSUTI. "A splendid song, one of uncommon merit; the music is rich and full, and contains a most charming melody. Certainly Signor Pinsuti's prettiest and most beautiful song." F, G, A flat, A (E to F), and B flat. "The successes of the season." 24 stamps each.

W. MORLEY and CO., 269, Regent-street, W.; and 70, Upper-street, N.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—Messrs. ERARD, of 18, Great Marlborough-street, London, and 13, Rue de Mail, Paris, Makers to her Majesty and the Prince and Princess of Wales, CAUTION the Public that Pianofortes are being sold bearing the name of "Erard" which are not of their manufacture. For information as to authenticity apply at 18, Great Marlborough-st., where new Pianos can be obtained from 30 guineas.

ERARDS' PIANOS. — COTTAGES, from 50 guineas. OBLIQUES, from 85 guineas. GRANDS, from 125 guineas.

MOORE and MOORE'S Iron Pianofortes, from 30 guineas, on Three-Years' System, carriage free. Liberal discount for cash. Illustrated Price-Lists post-free. Pianofortes from 14 guineas.—104 and 105, Bishopsgate Within.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE or for SALE, from 21 guineas upwards.—JOHN BROADWOOD and SONS, 33, Great Pulteney-street, Golden-square, W. Manufactory, 45, Horseferry-road, Westminster.

D'ALMAINE'S PIANOS Half Price, from £10. D'ALMAINE'S AMERICAN ORGANS from £5. All full compass, warranted for ten years; carriage free, and all risk taken. Easiest terms arranged. Established 100 years. 91, Finsbury-pavement, City, E.C.

BROADWOOD'S PIANOFORTES. CRAMER'S SUPPLY every size of these INSTRUMENTS on their Three-Years' System of Hire. 207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

ERARD'S PIANOFORTES.—CRAMER'S SUPPLY every size of these INSTRUMENTS on their Three-Years' System of Hire.—207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

COLLARD'S PIANOFORTES. CRAMER'S SUPPLY every size of these INSTRUMENTS on their Three-Years' System of Hire. 207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

GRAND PIANOFORTES. — CRAMER'S SUPPLY GRAND PIANOFORTES by all the great makers, from £7 7s. to £33 10s. per quarter. Full Price-Lists post-free.—207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

NEW MUSIC.

BOOSEY and CO.'S NEW SONGS.

OUR LAST WALTZ. New Romantic Song. By MOLLOY.

OUR LAST WALTZ. Words by Weatherly.

OUR LAST WALTZ. Sung by Madame De Fonblanque at the Ballad Concerts.

OUR LAST WALTZ. Sung by Miss Damian.

OUR LAST WALTZ. Sung by Miss Agnes Larkcom.

OUR LAST WALTZ. Arranged also as a Dance. By LAMOTHE.

OUR LAST WALTZ. Both Editions are Illustrated with a beautiful Vignette. 2s. each.—BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

LADY ARTHUR HILL'S NEW SONG.

TWO THOUGHTS. By the Composer of "In the Gloaming." This day. 2s.—BOOSEY and Co.

A PENNY FOR YOUR THOUGHTS. By the Composer of "Swinging."

A PENNY FOR YOUR THOUGHTS. Sung by Miss Mary Davies. 2s.—BOOSEY and Co.

THE LAST REGRET.

THE LAST REGRET. By F. L. MOIR, the Composer of "Only Once More." Sung by Miss Damian. 2s.—BOOSEY and Co.

NEW EDITIONS of POPULAR SONGS.

THE RIVER OF YEARS. By MARZIALS.

NEVER TO KNOW. By MARZIALS.

LOVE'S OLD SWEET SONG. By MOLLOY.

TO-MORROW WILL BE FRIDAY By MOLLOY.

THE MAID OF THE MILL. By STEPHEN ADAMS.

SHIPWRECKED. By STEPHEN ADAMS.

WHEN WE MEET. By HOPE TEMPLE.

ONLY ONCE MORE. By F. L. MOIR.

GOOD-BYE, SWEET ROSE. By F. L. MOIR.

DADDY. By BEHREND.

SWINGING. By CÉCILE HARTOG. 2s. each.—BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

NEW SONGS IN THE CAVENDISH MUSIC BOOKS. Price 1s. each.
77. EIGHTEEN SONGS FOR YOUNG GIRLS.
78. TEN SONGS OF THE DAY, including "When the Heart is Young," "Mignonette," and "I'm not forget."
46. TEN SONGS OF THE DAY, including "Twickenham Ferry" and "Olivia."
68. TEN SONGS OF THE DAY, including "She wandered down" and "It was a Dream."
47. EIGHT SONGS by ARTHUR SULLIVAN, including "Looking Back."
65. TEN NEW BARITONE SONGS, sung by Santley and Maybrick.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

THE DIAMOND MUSIC BOOKS, 32 and 40 pages, price 6d. each.
1. The Singing Master.
2. The Music Master (Piano).
3. The Violin Master.
4. Family Glee Book (40 Glees and Part-Songs).
5. Harmonium Voluntary Book (50 pieces).
6. Select Piano Pieces (6).
7. Ditto (10).
8. Gavottes and Minuets (12).
9. Marches (14).
10. Sacred Songs (46).
11. Scotch Songs (30).
12. Irish Songs (30).
13. Old English Songs (30).
14. Modern Songs (10), Book 1.
15. Ditto (10), Book 2.
16. New American Songs (12).
17. Songs of the Sea (15).
18. Country Dances, &c. (75).
19. Juvenile Pianoforte Book.
20. Juvenile Song Book (41).
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

GOUNOD'S SPLENDID NEW SONG, THE KING OF LOVE MY SHEPHERD IS, cannot be too highly praised. It has been said that beautiful words inspire beautiful music; it would certainly appear to be so in this case, for these charming words have been most gracefully set by Ch. Gounod. The song is equally suitable for the home and the concert-room. It is so well laid out for the voice that the most ordinary singer can give quite an effective rendering. Four keys. 2s. net.—PHILLIPS and PAGE, 43, Kilburn High-road, N.W.

TO LADIES.—SALE of NEW MUSIC at a large reduction and post-free. All new Songs, Pieces, &c., of all publishers' Books. New copies, best editions. Prices commence 4d., 6d., 8d. Catalogues sent post-free. J. W. MOFFATT, 3, Barnsbury-street, London, N. Established 1827.

ELKINGTON and CO. ELECTRO and SILVER PLATE. CLOCKS and BRONZES. DIRECT FROM THE MANUFACTURERS.

ELKINGTON and CO. TABLE and TESTIMONIAL PLATE. DESIGNS and PHOTOGRAPHS SUPPLIED TO COMMITTEES.

ELKINGTON and CO.—CAUTION. SEE ALL GOODS MARKED, "E and CO." IN SHIELD. ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST-FREE.

ELKINGTON and CO., MANUFACTURING SILVERSMITHS, 22, Regent-st.; and 62, Moorgate-st., City, Birmingham, Liverpool, and Manchester.

CHURCH AND TURRET CLOCKS.
J. W. BENSON, maker of many of the best known CHURCH and TURRET CLOCKS. Now making the GREAT ILLUMINATED CLOCK for the HUSAINABAD TOWER, LUCKNOW, to show time on four dials 13 ft. in diameter and quarter on bells of 2½ tons. Also the Clock for NEW COLLEGE, OXFORD, &c. Estimates and specifications for all kinds of Church, Turret, Stable, and Factory Clocks, on application to the Steam Factory (the only one in the City of London where Turret Clocks can be seen in process of manufacture).—J. W. BENSON, the Steam Factory, Ludgate-hill and Belle Sauvage-yard, E.C. London.

JOHN BROGDEN, deceased. The VALUABLE STOCK of ART-JEWELLERY is NOW FOR SALE, at a REASONABLE REDUCTION, for a LIMITED TIME, by order of the Executors, 6, GRAND HOTEL-BUILDINGS, CHARING-CROSS.

DRIVING BY NIGHT. The LIGHT from a PAIR of WILLANS'AYS'S PATENT LAMPS is equal to that from SIX ORDINARY CARRIAGE LAMPS. These LAMPS are STRONGLY MADE and PERFECTLY VENTILATED. A pair will be SENT on APPROVAL, CARRIAGE PAID, and a FAIR TRIAL ALLOWED, on receipt of a remittance. SOLD by all CARRIAGE-BUILDERS, PARSONS and CHAPMAN, TAVISTOCK.

WALKER'S CRYSTAL CASE WATCHES are superseding all others. Prize Medals—London, 1862; Paris, 1867. Silver Watches, from £4 4s.; Gold, from £6 6s. Price-Lists sent free.—77, Cornhill; and 230, Regent-street.

MODELLING in Clay and Wax.—A Guide, by MORTON EDWARDS. Post-free, 1s. 1d. Clay, wax, stands, &c., at LECHERTIER, BARBE, and CO., 60, Regent-street, W.

NEW MUSIC.

EDITH COOKE'S NEW SONG.

LOVED VOICES. In F, E flat, and G. Is now ready, and may be had of all Musicsellers. 2s. net.

LOVED VOICES also as a Vocal Duet. 2s. net.

I MEAN TO WAIT FOR JACK. COTSFORD DICK. In E flat and F. 2s. net.

TIP-TOE. A Fairy Dance. By HENRI LOGE. 1s. 6d. net. As striking as Delibe's well-known "Sylvia." ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street, London.

EDWIN ASHDOWN, Hanover-square, forwards Catalogues of his 20,000 MUSICAL WORKS post-free to all parts of the world.

ASHDOWN EDITION of STANDARD PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

	Net, s. d.
1. Chopin's Twenty-seven Studies	2 6
2. Stephen Heller's Album. Op. 136	1 6
3. Henri Roubier's 20 Melodies of Franz Schubert	2 0
4. Stephen Heller's Twenty-four Preludes. Op. 81	1 6
5. Chopin's Eighteen Nocturnes	2 0
6. Czerny's One Hundred and One Exercises	1 0
7. Czerny's Etude de la Vélocité	2 0
8. Schumann's Phantasiestücke. Op. 12	1 6
9. Schubert's Eight Impromptus	2 6
10. Liszt's Soirées de Vienne	1 0
11. Clementi's Six Sonatinas. Op. 36	1 0
12. Stephen Heller's Thirty-two Preludes. Op. 119	1 6
13. Rubinstein's Soirées à St. Petersbourg, 6 Morceaux	1 0
14. Chopin's Forty-three Mazurkas	3 0
15. Schumann's Album für die Jugend. Op. 68	1 6
16. Dussek's Six Sonatinas. Op. 20	1 0
17. Gottschalk Selection No. 1 (Pasquinade and five others)	2 6
18. Kuhlau's Six Sonatinas. Op. 55	1 0
19. Chopin's Eight Waltzes	1 6
20. Kuhlak's Youthful Days. 24 Characteristic Pieces	1 6
21. Kessler's Twenty-four Studies	2 6
22. Clementi's Six Sonatinas. Op. 37 and 38	1 6

ASHDOWN EDITION of STANDARD VOCAL MUSIC.

	Net, s. d.
1. Concone. 50 Singing Lessons (pour le médium de la voix)	1 6
2. Constantino Perugini. Six Lessons for Two Voices	1 0
3. Niels W. Gade. Eight Vocal Duets (English and German)	1 0
4. Franz Abt. 10 Vocal Duets (English and German Words)	2 0
5. Romanini and Nava. 12 Solfeggios for Contralto Voice	1 0
6. Keller. Eight Vocal Duets (English and German Words)	1 0
7. Panseron. The Elements of Singing	1 0
8. W. S. Bennett. Six Songs. (English and German)	1 0

All the above Works sent, post-free, at prices quoted.

CHARLES HALLÉ'S PRACTICAL PIANOFORTE SCHOOL. New and Enlarged Edition. Charles Hallé's New Pianoforte Tutor. The best and most useful Tutor ever published. Charles Hallé's Musical Library. Entirely remodelled and enlarged. Catalogues post-free on application. FORSYTH BROTHERS, London and Manchester.

THREE NEW PIECES FOR THE PIANOFORTE. By STEPHEN HELLER. FABLIAU. Op. 135. CAPRICIETTO. Op. 156. TROIS FEUILLETS D'ALBUM. Op. 157. Price 2s. each, net. FORSYTH BROTHERS, London and Manchester.

DOMINION ORGANS. A Large Stock of these celebrated Organs always on view. Considered the finest-toned American Organs yet produced. A New two-manual Model just introduced, style 82. Catalogues post-free. FORSYTH BROTHERS, 272A, Regent-circus, Oxford-street, London; and 122 and 124, Deansgate, Manchester.

QUARTETTS, &c.—A Gentleman, disengaged one evening a week, is desirous of an engagement with an Amateur Party to lead or play Tenor. Terms moderate.—MUSICUS, Temple News-Rooms, Fleet-street, E.C.

TRELOAR'S BRUSSELS CARPETS.
3s. 3d. per yard. | 4s. 3d. per yard.
3s. 6d. " " | 4s. 6d. " "
3s. 9d. " " | 4s. 9d. " "
4s. 0d. " " | 5s. 0d. " "
Exclusive in design. Special in quality.
TRELOAR and SONS, LUDGATE-HILL.

EPPS'S (BREAKFAST) COCOA.
GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.
Made simply with boiling water or milk.
In Packets, labelled JAMES EPPS and CO., HOMŒOPATHIC CHEMISTS. Also Makers of EPPS'S CHOCOLATE ESSENCE.

CHUBB'S PATENT LOCKS. CASH AND DEED BOXES.
TWENTY MEDALS awarded at the various International Exhibitions.
68, ST. JAMES'S-STREET; PALL-MALL.
128, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, E.C.
Price-Lists Post-free.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA. Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder. Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa, with excess of Fat extracted. Four times the strength of Cocoa Nibs, and yet Weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c., and in reality cheaper. The faculty pronounce it the most nutritious, perfectly digestive Beverage for "BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, or SUPPER." Keeps for years in all Climates. Requires no Cooking. A teaspoonful to Breakfast-Cup makes less than a halfpenny. In Air-Tight Tins, 1s. 6d., 3s., &c., by Chemists and Grocers. H. SCHWEITZER and CO., 10, Adam-street, Strand, W.C.

FRY'S COCOA.
GOLD MEDAL, Calcutta Exhibition, 1884.
FRY'S CARACAS COCOA. "A most delicious and valuable article."—Standard.
PURE COCOA ONLY.
FRY'S COCOA EXTRACT. "Strictly pure, easily assimilated."—W. W. STODDART, Analyst for Bristol.
BETWEEN PRIZE MEDALS.

INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION, South Kensington.—London, 1884.
GOLD MEDAL AWARDED for EXCELLENCE of QUALITY to SALT and CO., EAST INDIA PALE and BURTON ALE BREWERS. Stores and Offices—21 to 31, Pancras-road, London.

LIST of Prices to be obtained of all the principal Dealers.

SAVAR'S CUBEB CIGARETTES always alleviate and frequently cure ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, &c. Of all Chemists, 1s. and 2s. 6d.

"THERE IS UNQUESTIONABLY" no better remedy in the whole world for all cough and throat troubles than KEATING'S LOZENGES—any medical man will assure you of this fact. Sold everywhere, in 1½d. Tins.

GREAT SALE at REDUCED PRICES
PETER ROBINSON'S
MOURNING WAREHOUSE, REGENT-STREET.

THE ANNUAL JANUARY SALE will COMMENCE on MONDAY, JAN. 5, and continue for One Month.

GENUINE BARGAINS will be offered in each Department. Amongst them may be mentioned Silk Costumes, reduced from 6½ to 4½ guineas, from 8½ to 6, from 10 to 7½, from 14 to 10 gns.

BALL, DINNER, and EVENING DRESSES. Reduced from 3 to 2 guineas, from 4 to 3, from 5 to 3½, from 8 to 6 guineas.

MATERIAL COSTUMES in Black and Greys, beautifully fashioned and designed, in various New Textures and Combinations. Reduced from 3 to 2 guineas, from 4 to 3, from 6 to 4, from 8 to 6 guineas.

THE MAGNIFICENT STOCK of CLOAKS, MANTLES, JACKETS, and OPERAS are all very considerably reduced.

BLACK SILKS and VELVETS.—Very handsome Brocaded Velvets, Plain Black Silks, Ottomans, Merveilleux, and Satins, are all marked down to very low prices.

FANCY SILKS and REMNANTS. Many reduced to One Half.

ALSO SHAWLS, Operas, Evening Fichus, Fans, Hosiery, Gloves, Collars. The beautiful Stock of French Millinery Materials, by the yard. Crapes, &c., have all undergone the same reduction.

MOURNING ORDERS during the SALE will be supplied at the same cheap rates, best care and prompt attention will be given to all orders, large or small. Travelling assistants fully competent to take measures and instructions will be sent at once to any part of the country, free of any extra expense whatever to the customer, immediately ON RECEIPT OF LETTER OR TELEGRAM ADDRESSED TO PETER ROBINSON, MOURNING WAREHOUSE, REGENT-STREET, LONDON.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET.

ANNUAL STOCK-TAKING SALE.

ON ACCOUNT of the RE-BUILDING of a portion of the Oxford-street Premises, all SURPLUS STOCK will be RE-MARKED at GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

SILK is now lower in Price than at any period since the French Revolution, 1848. Per yard. One thousand Pieces of new Brocaded Satins, combining all the Fashionable colourings. These are the Cheapest Silks ever submitted ... 2s. 6d. to 5s. 6
500 Pieces of Rich Brocaded Velvets in all the new coloured mixtures ... 6s. 6d. to 9 11

BLACK SATIN STRIPES, 2s. to 2s. 6d. 200 Pieces Coloured Satin Stripes. 2 6
800 Pieces of Fancy Silks and Satins in different designs, specially made for Costumes ... 3 11

BLACK BROCADED VELVETS, SATIN GROUND, from ... 4 11
2000 Pieces of Plain Silks, Satins, and Merveilleux to match the brocades, from ... 2 6
Coloured Twill-faced All-Silk Satins, usually sold at 4s. 6d. ... 2 6
Patterns post-free.
PETER ROBINSON'S.

NEW WINTER DRESSES. Per yard. s. d.
Devonshire, Witney, Scotch, and other SERGES, in various shades of Navy, Cream, Black, Bronze, &c.; all Wool, very wide ... 9d. to 1 6
Homespun Cashmere Bège, mixed colours ... 1 0

NEW WINTER DRESSES. Per yard. s. d.
All the usual and several distinctly New Shades of Colour in Ottoman Cashmir Angola Foulés ... 1 2
Cashmere d'Italie; all wool, very durable ... 2 0
French Merinos, very wide ... 1s. 11d. to 2 9
Very Fine French Cashmeres ... 2s. 3d. to 2 9
Velvet Velveteens, much improved in make, colour, and price ... 2s. 3d. to 3 3
A Black Velveteen, specially cheap ... 1 11
Patterns post-free.
PETER ROBINSON'S.

DRESS MATERIALS. £ s. d.
Cream-coloured Richly-embroidered Alsatian Lawn Robes, double quantity of wide embroidery, each 14s. 9d., 16s. 9d., and 18 9
Finely-worked Cashmere Robes in Black and all the new shades of Brown, Bronze, Grey, Dark Green, Navy, Drab, &c., extra quantity of embroidery, each 1 15 6
COMPOSITE ROBES, 20 yards in each; a great novelty; in every combination of style and colour, all Wool ... each 1 1 0
FOR PALETOTS, JACKETS, &c.,
ARCTIC SEAL CLOTH. The highest perfection of make and wear. 52 in. wide, superior in effect to sealskin. Also every kind of Polarian, Beaver, Feil de Chamois, Peau de Mouton, &c., in Black, White, Brown, Drab, &c.

CLEARANCE SALE of SURPLUS STOCK.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET AND REGENT-STREET.

DRESS SHIRTS.—FORD'S EUREKA DRESS SHIRTS.—A large stock ready made in eight different sizes and three different qualities, of the very finest Linen, as well as the fashionable Ribbed Pique, to wear with one stud or three, 5s. 3d., 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., 9s. 6d. each. In single boxes, ready for use, by parcels post free.
R. FORD and CO., 41, Poultry, London.

ÆGIDIUS.—The only Flannel Shirts that Never Shrink in Washing. Three for 29s. 6d.
R. FORD and CO., 41, Poultry, London.

ÆGIDIUS.—Three for 39s. 6d. Soft as Silk, and very Elastic. Free by parcels post.
R. FORD and CO., 41, Poultry, London.

ANNUAL SALE.—REGENT HOUSE. J. ALLSON and CO. beg respectfully to announce that they are NOW OFFERING at GREATLY REDUCED PRICES, their SURPLUS STOCK of FANCY GOODS. In addition to which some important purchases in coloured Satin Merveilleux, at 2s. 11½d., worth 4s. 6d.; Black Satin Duchesse, at 3s. 11d., worth 4s. 9d.; very rich Ditto, at 3s. 11d., worth 5s. 6d.; and a Manufacturer's Stock of Coloured Vigoynes, at 10½d., usual price, 15½d REGENT HOUSE, 238, 240, and 242, Regent-street, W.

DR. G. H. JONES, No. 57, Great Russell-street, opposite the British Museum, will forward a Sixty-four Page ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET, GRATIS and post-free, with list of medals, diplomas, and awards at the great International Exhibitions.
S. G. Hutchins, Esq., Surgeon-Dentist to the Queen, in his last letter to Dr. G. H. Jones, said:—"Your system is the perfection of painless dentistry, and your teeth are the best, safest, and most lifelike."
See also Opinions of the Press. "Christian Union" says:—"Dr. G. H. Jones supplies price-medal teeth and workmanship at a less cost than ordinary dentists charge for inferior and worthless imitations of his patented perfectly painless and safe system."
Consultations Free.

DRAWN BY F. BARNARD.

Immediately afterwards a figure loomed up through the mist.

ADRIAN VIDAL.

BY W. E. NORRIS,

AUTHOR OF "MDLLE. DE MERSAC," "MATRIMONY," "THIRLBY HALL," &C.

CHAPTER V.

IN THE CLOUDS.

All sorts of extravagant ideas passed through Vidal's head as he walked along the mountain-side with the girl whom he loved and whom he had known for barely three days. Every now and again the mist-wreaths parted, showing them some sombre peak towering high overhead or a gleam of grey water from beneath; then they were wrapped once more in a sort of white darkness, through which they could hardly distinguish one another's forms. They seemed so completely alone, so separated from the world and all its conventionalities, that Vidal, upon whom external conditions always possessed a strong influence, felt as if there would be nothing very strange in speaking his heart out and saying, "I love you."

But, underlying the impetuosity of his nature, there was ever a vein of common-sense, which had preserved him from the commission of many absurdities before then, and he had more reasons than one for knowing that the utterance of those three words must be preceded by a considerable period of reflection. Therefore he did no more than repeat them many times inwardly, and only said aloud: "So you are really going away to-morrow!"

"Yes," answered the girl with something like a sigh. "I am sorry. It is as if we had come to the end of the holidays, though we are going home."

"It is something to have a home to go to when holiday time is over," remarked Vidal.

"And have you no home? Oh, no, I remember you told me that you had rooms in London. That can hardly be like a home, I suppose. You said you had a mother, though."

"Yes; I am blessed with a mother, and also with a sister. But we are three. I am glad to say that we are always very good friends when we meet; but it is doubtful whether we should continue to be so if we lived under one roof. So we don't live under one roof; and, in default of a home, I have to make the best of Duke-street, St. James's."

"Well," said the girl, after a short pause, "I suppose most people must be contented with second bests in this world, and ought to be thankful enough if they get as much."

"I don't agree with you in the least!" cried Vidal, with some warmth. "I think there is nothing so fatal to happiness as making up your mind to be contented with something less than what you want."

"But if you can't get what you want?—or if you don't quite know what you want?"

"If you don't know, you are in a bad way, I admit; but surely it ought not to be very difficult to find out; and then it depends almost entirely upon yourself, I believe, whether you get it or not. There are very few things, except good health, of which a man can say that it is impossible that he should ever gain them."

"Ah, a man—perhaps. But a woman is in a very different position. It is not always possible for her to control her destiny, and even if it were, she might shrink from consulting only her own interests."

"Are you speaking of yourself?" asked Vidal, abruptly.

Miss Irvine laughed. "Oh," she said, "my destiny is a very uncertain affair as yet, and at any rate I have this advantage over you, that I am quite satisfied with my home. I wonder whether you will ever see it. Polruth is rather out of the world; but numbers of people—quite ten families, I should think—come down every summer now for the sea-bathing; and it is admitted that ours is the finest coast in England in point of scenery."

"I have been for a long time meditating a tour in Cornwall," said Vidal, with pardonable mendacity. "Perhaps I might be able to illustrate my theory of being able to do what I want to do by turning up in your neighbourhood some time in August."

"Oh, I wish you would!" cried Miss Irvine, displaying more frank cordiality than was quite agreeable to her would-be lover. "If you came in August, Mr. Heriot would be with us, most likely; so that we should be able to offer you that additional attraction. Do try to manage it. I wish we could give you a room; but I am afraid all the boys will be at home then. However, we could easily find tolerable quarters for you in the village."

She went on talking about Polruth and about Cornish manners and customs with a good deal of animation, hardly allowing Vidal to get in a word edgeways. Evidently she was desirous of avoiding the more serious subject which they had begun to discuss; and this excited her companion's curiosity, and made him determine to reintroduce it at the earliest opportunity. However, she spared him that trouble by recurring to it herself, after a time. They had reached a point near the Rigi Staffel, and, the veil of mist having lifted for a moment, were looking down upon a motionless sea of cloud, out of which dim mountain-tops rose like islands here and there.

"According to you," Miss Irvine began, abruptly, "one has only to wish for a thing with sufficient energy and one is pretty sure to get it. That may be so; but surely, without being at all heroically unselfish, one must be guided a little by what others wish. One's own happiness ought not to be the sole aim and object of one's life."

"I don't say that it should; although, as a matter of fact, happiness, present or future, is exactly what everybody does pursue. Of course, happiness admits of many definitions. Some people, I firmly believe, get it by simply satisfying their appetites; others find it in doing their duty, or in sacrificing themselves for the benefit of their neighbours."

"I can't think that anyone would sacrifice himself merely because he expected to be the happier for doing so. But perhaps a sacrifice might cease to be a sacrifice if it gave a great deal of pleasure to those whom one cared most about in the world."

"That would depend upon what it involved, I should say. But the fact is that we are at cross purposes, Miss Irvine. I was speaking generally, whereas you are thinking of some particular instance."

"No;—at least, I was thinking of something—but it doesn't signify," answered the girl, rather incoherently. "Ought we not to be going back?"

Vidal looked at his watch, and found that they certainly ought. They had but ten minutes in which to retrace their steps; and very soon the imprudence of indulging in day-dreams and propounding vague theories while walking through a fog was brought home to him. He did not like to tell Miss Irvine that he had utterly lost his bearings, but when he had spent a quarter of an hour in hurrying her hither and thither the admission was superfluous.

"Mr. Vidal," she said calmly, "have you the slightest idea of where we are?"

"If you insist upon the truth," answered Vidal, half laughing, "I must confess that I have not."

"Then hadn't you better shout until someone comes?"

It really seemed the only thing to be done. There was something rather humiliating in shrieking for assistance, and also in being lost upon a mountain which is traversed by two lines of railway, and sprinkled all over with hotels; but the awkwardness of the predicament that they were in was more apparent to Vidal than to Miss Irvine; besides which, he had just a faint hope of being able to stop the train, if he could make their whereabouts known.

This hope died away after he had shouted himself hoarse without eliciting any response, and he was beginning to feel as uncomfortable as he had ever felt in his life, when he was startled by a stentorian bellow, proceeding from some point only a few yards away, and immediately afterwards a figure loomed up through the mist, which proved to be that of a native, who had been sent up from the hotel to search for the wanderers. The train had left some time since, he explained; and as, unfortunately, it was the last one, the Herrschaft had gone down in it. But he could take them down by some short cuts, and there was a boat from Weggis at seven o'clock, which they could easily catch, if the lady did not mind the walk.

It was only too plain that, whether the lady minded it or not, the walk would have to be undertaken, and Vidal's contrition was so deep and unfeigned that a far less amiable person than Miss Irvine must needs have pardoned him.

"It was not your fault," she said; "and I am quite accustomed to rough walking and wet weather. So long as we catch the boat, there will be no harm done."

Whether she realised the situation in all its bearings, Vidal hardly knew; but, for his own part, he was a good deal vexed, feeling that he had not only let slip the opportunity of saying many things to her which he would have liked to say, but that he had probably put in serious jeopardy the position that he had won in Mrs. Irvine's good graces.

Their guide was hastening down hill at a jog-trot which made conversation all but impossible; and Miss Irvine declined the young man's repeated offers of assistance, declaring that she was perfectly well able to take care of herself, and begging only that no time might be lost; but he took advantage, at last, of a short stretch of level ground to turn round and say, "I hope your mother will not be very angry with me."

To which she replied, "Oh, dear, no! Why should she be? She will not even be angry with me. My mother is very good-natured."

Vidal could but trust that the old lady might prove worthy of the character attributed to her; but he felt very ill at ease and ashamed of himself; and when, at length, they reached Weggis, weary, muddy and wet, it was a great relief to him to find only Heriot waiting for them on the landing-stage.

Mr. and Mrs. Irvine, it appeared, had been persuaded to go on to Lucerne by the last boat, and Heriot was too glad to see the truants back safe and sound to scold either of them; but Vidal, knowing the man, saw that he was more annoyed than he wished to show, and as soon as they were on board the steamer, he took occasion to apologise.

"I'm awfully sorry to have kept you standing about there in the rain, old man; but I didn't do it on purpose, you know."

"Oh, the waiting was nothing," Heriot said.

"I didn't give Miss Irvine that long walk on purpose either, as far as that goes."

His friend was silent for a minute or two, and then remarked: "Well; they are going away to-morrow."

"So that I shan't be able to do it again, do you mean?" asked Vidal, laughing.

"I mean that I am very glad they are going away," answered Heriot; and Vidal did not see fit to press him for an explanation.

CHAPTER VI.

SI JE VOUS LE DISAIS.

Mrs. Irvine was perhaps less particular or less suspicious than the generality of mothers. At all events, she did not seem to think that Vidal's heedlessness called for any blame; but, on the contrary, began to beg his pardon for having run away and left him in the lurch. "Mr. Irvine did want to set out in search of you," she said; "but, you know, if I had let him do that I should have had to go and look for him, and then somebody else would have had to look for me, and there would have been no end to it. So I persuaded him to come straight back; and afterwards I was particularly glad that I had done so, because we met the Skeffingtons at the table-d'hôte—do you happen to know General Skeffington?—such a nice man!—and he was very encouraging about poor Charley. Charley is my second boy, who has failed for the Army, poor fellow! General Skeffington says he isn't in the least surprised. I mean, he thinks that all these examinations are great nonsense, and that an officer ought not to be a bookworm. Fortunately, there is still the militia, so that we need not despair."

Mrs. Irvine had innumerable acquaintances, whom she utilised, or thought that she utilised, to assist her in heating the equally innumerable quantity of irons which she always had in the fire. The smooth things prophesied to her by General Skeffington and the prospects of the unlearned Charley occupied all her conversation until she bade Vidal good-night; and the young man felt that he had been let off cheaply.

The next morning, at eight o'clock, he was at the station to say good-bye to his new friends. Heriot, intending to break the journey at Bâle, had decided to leave by a later train. It was not without a certain sinking of the heart that our hero followed Miss Irvine, whose travelling-bag and cloak he was carrying, across the platform. The three days' romance was at an end, he thought, sadly. Yesterday he had not been far from declaring his love; to-day it seemed impossible that he could ever have dreamt of doing so insane a thing. For what was he, or could he be, to her but a stranger in whose company a few hours had been spent, more or less agreeably—at best, one whom she might have learnt to like, if chance had thrown them together for a longer time?

They had to part now, like the mere acquaintances that they were. And then he thought how beautiful she was, and how, as a matter of course, others besides himself must be captivated by her beauty; and something seemed to tell him that she was reserved for a higher destiny than he could offer. So opposite are the influences exercised by a mountain-top and a railway station! As he helped her to arrange her parapherналia, and mechanically uttered the commonplaces suitable to the occasion, Alfred de Musset's lines kept ringing in his head—Si je vous le disais, pourtant, que je vous aime! Did she understand at all? he wondered. And, supposing that she could be made to understand, would she be surprised, or angry, or only amused? At any rate, it was certain that no hint could be conveyed in the midst of all that hurry and bustle. He was obliged to get out of the carriage to make room for Mr. and Mrs. Irvine; and to them, too, some last words had to be spoken. The old gentleman roused himself to say that his clubs were the Athenæum and the Oxford and Cambridge, and that he hoped Mr. er—er— Ryder would look him up when he was in London; and then Mrs. Irvine broke in with,

"Oh, but Mr. Vidal is going to pay Cornwall a visit. Mr. Heriot, do you know that he talks of being in our parts in August?"

"Oh!" said Heriot, rather drily.

"Yes; and I was thinking about what rooms there were in Polruth; and I feel sure that old Mrs. Treweeke would be just the person. A most respectable old creature, and would do her very best to make you comfortable—lost both her sons in a mining accident, poor thing! so that one would be glad to do her a good turn; only perhaps you ought to lock the wine up, you know—just as a precaution, that's all. But I will make a point of writing to you about it. Have you got one of your cards? Duke-street, St. James's—thank you so much! And you 'll bear in mind that Italian governess, won't you? Signora Lisetto, or Stiletto, or something like that—however, all particulars can be had on application to me. Good-bye—so glad to have met you! Good-bye, Mr. Heriot."

And now there was only time to repeat the same melancholy word to Miss Irvine and to catch her last smile and nod before the train began to move. Vidal stood looking after it with mournful eyes, and murmuring to himself, "Si je vous le disais, pourtant, que je vous aime, Qui sait, brune aux yeux bleus, ce que vous en diriez?"

He was roused by Heriot's voice, which sounded a little harshly, saying, "Come and sit down somewhere in the shade, Adrian; I want to talk to you."

"You say that as if you intended to give me a tremendous rowing," remarked Vidal, as he took his friend's arm. "Have I been misbehaving myself?"

"Ah, that is just what I don't know," answered Heriot; "and that is what I want you to tell me."

But as Vidal only laughed, without replying, the other said no more until they had passed out of the station and had found an unoccupied bench near the lake, when he resumed abruptly: "Well, how far has it gone?"

"I don't know what you mean."

"Oh, pardon me, my dear fellow, I think you do know. You and I understand one another pretty well at this time of day, and I am not going to make any apologies for my impertinence."

"Certainly not. But all the same, I don't know what you mean. In one sense—so far as I am concerned, that is—it has gone very far indeed; about as far as it could go. I don't mind telling you that; and, in fact, I should have told you, whether you had asked me or not. In another sense, it hasn't gone on at all; it hasn't begun."

Heriot stroked his beard and sighed. "I hope you won't go down to Cornwall," he said, presently.

"Why not? Can you give me any good reason why I shouldn't? I don't understand you. Look here, Heriot—you won't mind my asking, will you? Have you any—any feeling for her yourself?"

"I have such a feeling for her as a middle-aged man, who is dying of angina pectoris, may have for a beautiful girl upon the threshold of life," answered Heriot, quietly; and you must remember that it was I who took the responsibility of introducing you to her. As for giving you good reasons for letting a flirtation of three days drop now"——

"It has not been a flirtation," interrupted the younger man, eagerly. "Believe me or not, as you like, she is the only woman whom I have ever loved, and whether I have known her three days or three years is nothing to the purpose."

"Well, well—. But I can give you good reasons, nevertheless. To begin with—and, for the matter of that, I suppose we might end with it too; for it's painfully conclusive—you are not well enough off to marry."

"I have six hundred a year."

"That is what I say. You have six hundred a year, and stinginess has never been one of your defects. You know very well that it is all you can do to live upon your income as a bachelor. To bring up a family upon it would be so wildly impossible that I can't believe you have seriously contemplated such a thing."

It struck Vidal that this was taking time by the forelock with a vengeance. "I confess that I haven't given much thought to the family," he answered, with a slight laugh; "but as for my income, I hope it won't remain stationary. I have added to it a little already from time to time, and I mean to add to it in a more systematic way now, if I can."

"By writing?"

"Why not? Men have made money by writing before now."

"How many men?—and how much money? You know, I am not altogether ignorant of literary matters; I have written a little myself at odd times."

"But not novels."

"Not novels, certainly; still I know something of the experiences of novelists. It isn't altogether a question of merit; so I may say, without casting any reflection upon you, that the chances are very much against your ever making a living at that trade."

"Yet you recommended it."

"As being preferable to none; I know I did. I was sure that you could write what I should consider a good novel; but I can't answer for the opinion of the public, which pays. All I wish to point out is that the prospect is an uncertain one; and you yourself will admit that much."

"I admit that all beginners must be uncertain of success. But, Heriot, doesn't it occur to you that you are taking a great deal too much for granted? You talk as if winning Miss Irvine's love would be the easiest thing in the world—as if I had only to throw the handkerchief. It seems to me that you are as far from understanding her as you are from realising that poverty is only a relative evil."

"I venture to look upon poverty as a positive evil," said Heriot. "As for Clare Irvine—well, since we are alone, I will speak plainly and without regard for your blushes. You are very good-looking, my dear Adrian, and you are also clever and amiable; so that a young woman who should fall in love with you could hardly be accused of bad taste. I don't think it is taking too much for granted to assume that this particular young woman is liable to be attracted by what attracts others, and that is why I say that you are bound to consider consequences. The thing isn't done yet; just stop and think a little before you do it. And there's something more that I should like to say to you. I heard yesterday from Mrs. Irvine that Clare has it open to her to make an excellent marriage. It seems that in the course of their wanderings they fell in with a man named Wilbraham, whom I know a little, and who is a thoroughly good fellow in every way. He has the advantage of being rich and well connected, and I suppose no parents can be indifferent to such things. He proposed to Clare when they were at Rome, and although she began by refusing him, she afterwards seemed disposed to change her mind; and the long and the short of it is that he hasn't yet received his final answer."

"Oh, is that it?" said Vidal. "Now I understand."

He was thinking of what the girl had said to him the day before, and he shuddered at the idea that she was in danger of throwing away her life, to please a mother, whom, in his haste, he set down as greedy and scheming.

Heriot, who could not follow his thoughts, went on:

"You understand the nature of the case now. She is just upon the point of accepting a man who will make the kindest and best of husbands, when, lo and behold! down drops a good-looking pauper from the clouds and sets to work to unsettle her mind. Don't you thing the good-looking pauper would do well to betake himself to Jericho?"

"I dare say I might think so if I were her father," answered Vidal; "but I am not her father—nor are you. Would you like to see her marry a man whom she doesn't love, because he is rich and may help her brothers on in the world? For I take it that that is the English of the matter."

"No," answered Heriot, "I shouldn't like that, and I doubt very much whether she would do it either. What I should like her to do would be to love the man. She certainly can't be very far off loving him or she wouldn't hesitate."

"I don't see that at all; but if it is as you say, she will have ceased to hesitate before I can meet her again. So that I am powerless to do her any harm—or good. If only I had known yesterday as much as I know now!"

"What would you have done?"

"I should have told her that I loved her. She would have refused me, without any doubt; but it is just possible that my speaking might, as you say, have 'unsettled her mind'; and that would have been something."

Heriot clasped his hands behind his head, stared up at the sky, and whistled a tune.

"Why do you do that?" asked Vidal, irritably.

"To keep myself from being so rude as to say what I think of you."

Vidal laughed. "Now, Heriot, that's humbug. The sort of generosity which you ask of me would be no generosity at all. It is quite comprehensible that you shouldn't wish me to marry Miss Irvine"——

"I don't see how you can marry her."

"Well, let us put things at the worst, and say that I can't. Then, according to you, I ought to stand aside and allow some other man to make her happy. I don't know whether I should be capable of such magnanimity if the case were to arise—I hope I should. But the case has not arisen; because I happen to know that this man Wilbraham cannot make her happy."

"How do you know anything about it?"

"From a few words that she let fall yesterday. I didn't understand her at the time; but I do now; and I tell you that if she gives way, it will be simply and solely because that infernal old mother of hers has persuaded her that it is her duty to sacrifice herself for her family."

The young man started to his feet, as he spoke, strode away for a few yards, then came back and threw himself violently down upon the bench again. "I wish to Heaven you hadn't told me of this, now that it is too late!" he exclaimed.

Heriot smiled. The truth was, that he had seen his friend in love before, and was not greatly moved by this display of agitation. "You are quite mistaken," he said, quietly. "Poor Mrs. Irvine doesn't deserve abuse. Like other mothers, she would be very much pleased if her daughter made a brilliant match; but she is not worldly or grasping, and Clare is as free to choose for herself as any girl can be. Hitherto she has not been embarrassed by a large field of choice. She has lived all her life down in the country, and this season at Rome has given her her first sight of the outer world. I wish she could have fancied Wilbraham; but, from what you say, I fear there is very little chance for him. It is a pity."

"Do you really think that?" asked Vidal, eagerly. "Do you think she will refuse him?"

"I don't think she would have spoken to you upon the subject if she had meant to accept him. But, setting him aside, I do wish, Adrian, both for your sake and for hers, that you would try to get over this fancy. You and she are not suited to one another; but I won't dwell on that point, because, of course, you wouldn't believe me. You will acknowledge, though, that, from a common-sense point of view, it would be a great deal better if you were not to meet again. You have no business to make love to her unless you see some prospect of being able to marry her; and you can't ask her to starve with you upon six hundred a year. Dive into the mysteries of the family," he answered, with a slight laugh; the mem—a few words that she let fall yesterday. I didn't understand her at the time; but I do now; and I tell you that if she gives way, it will be simply and solely because that infernal old mother of hers has persuaded her that it is her duty to sacrifice herself for her family."

The young man started to his feet, as he spoke, strode away for a few yards, then came back and threw himself violently down upon the bench again. "I wish to Heaven you hadn't told me of this, now that it is too late!" he exclaimed.

Heriot smiled. The truth was, that he had seen his friend in love before, and was not greatly moved by this display of agitation. "You are quite mistaken," he said, quietly. "Poor Mrs. Irvine doesn't deserve abuse. Like other mothers, she would be very much pleased if her daughter made a brilliant match; but she is not worldly or grasping, and Clare is as free to choose for herself as any girl can be. Hitherto she has not been embarrassed by a large field of choice. She has lived all her life down in the country, and this season at Rome has given her her first sight of the outer world. I wish she could have fancied Wilbraham; but, from what you say, I fear there is very little chance for him. It is a pity."

"Do you really think that?" asked Vidal, eagerly. "Do you think she will refuse him?"

"I don't think she would have spoken to you upon the subject if she had meant to accept him. But, setting him aside, I do wish, Adrian, both for your sake and for hers, that you would try to get over this fancy. You and she are not suited to one another; but I won't dwell on that point, because, of course, you wouldn't believe me. You will acknowledge, though, that, from a common-sense point of view, it would be a great deal better if you were not to meet again. You have no business to make love to her unless you see some prospect of being able to marry her; and you can't ask her to starve with you upon six hundred a year. Dive into the mysteries of the family," he answered, with a slight laugh; "but as for my income, I hope it won't remain stationary. I have added to it a little already from time to time, and I mean to add to it in a more systematic way now, if I can."

"By writing?"

"Why not? Men have made money by writing before now."

"How many men?—and how much money? You know, I am not altogether ignorant of literary matters; I have written a little myself at odd times."

"But not novels."

"Not novels, certainly; still I know something of the experiences of novelists. It isn't altogether a question of merit; so I may say, without casting any reflection upon you, that the chances are very much against your ever making a living at that trade."

"Yet you recommended it."

"As being preferable to none; I know I did. I was sure that you could write what I should consider a good novel; but I can't answer for the opinion of the public, which pays. All I wish to point out is that the prospect is an uncertain one; and you yourself will admit that much."

"I admit that all beginners must be uncertain of success. But, Heriot, doesn't it occur to you that you are taking a great deal too much for granted? You talk as if winning Miss Irvine's love would be the easiest thing in the world—as if I had only to throw the handkerchief. It seems to me that you are as far from understanding her as you are from realising that poverty is only a relative evil."

"I venture to look upon poverty as a positive evil," said Heriot. "As for Clare Irvine—well, since we are alone, I will speak plainly and without regard for your blushes. You are very good-looking, my dear Adrian, and you are also clever and amiable; so that a young woman who should fall in love with you could hardly be accused of bad taste. I don't think it is taking too much for granted to assume that this particular young woman is liable to be attracted by what attracts others, and that is why I say that you are bound to consider consequences. The thing isn't done yet; just stop and think a little before you do it. And there's something more that I should like to say to you. I heard yesterday from Mrs. Irvine that Clare has it open to her to make an excellent marriage. It seems that in the course of their wanderings they fell in with a man named Wilbraham, whom I know a little, and who is a thoroughly good fellow in every way. He has the advantage of being rich and well connected, and I suppose no parents can be indifferent to such things. He proposed to Clare when they were at Rome, and although she began by refusing him, she afterwards seemed disposed to change her mind; and the long and the short of it is that he hasn't yet received his final answer."

"Oh, is that it?" said Vidal. "Now I understand."

He was thinking of what the girl had said to him the day before, and he shuddered at the idea that she was in danger of throwing away her life, to please a mother, whom, in his haste, he set down as greedy and scheming.

Heriot, who could not follow his thoughts, went on:

"You understand the nature of the case now. She is just upon the point of accepting a man who will make the kindest and best of husbands, when, lo and behold! down drops a good-looking pauper from the clouds and sets to work to unsettle her mind. Don't you thing the good-looking pauper would do well to betake himself to Jericho?"

"I dare say I might think so if I were her father," answered Vidal; "but I am not her father—nor are you. Would you like to see her marry a man whom she doesn't love, because he is rich and may help her brothers on in the world? For I take it that that is the English of the matter."

"No," answered Heriot, "I shouldn't like that, and I doubt very much whether she would do it either. What I should like her to do would be to love the man. She certainly can't be very far off loving him or she wouldn't hesitate."

"I don't see that at all; but if it is as you say, she will have ceased to hesitate before I can meet her again. So that I am powerless to do her any harm—or good. If only I had known yesterday as much as I know now!"

"What would you have done?"

"I should have told her that I loved her. She would have refused me, without any doubt; but it is just possible that my speaking might, as you say, have 'unsettled her mind'; and that would have been something."

Heriot clasped his hands behind his head, stared up at the sky, and whistled a tune.

"Why do you do that?" asked Vidal, irritably.

"To keep myself from being so rude as to say what I think of you."

Vidal laughed. "Now, Heriot, that's humbug. The sort of generosity which you ask of me would be no generosity at all. It is quite comprehensible that you shouldn't wish me to marry Miss Irvine"——

"I don't see how you can marry her."

"Well, let us put things at the worst, and say that I can't. Then, according to you, I ought to stand aside and allow some other man to make her happy. I don't know whether I should be capable of such magnanimity if the case were to arise—I hope I should. But the case has not arisen; because I happen to know that this man Wilbraham cannot make her happy."

"How do you know anything about it?"

"From a few words that she let fall yesterday. I didn't understand her at the time; but I do now; and I tell you that if she gives way, it will be simply and solely because that infernal old mother of hers has persuaded her that it is her duty to sacrifice herself for her family."

The young man started to his feet, as he spoke, strode away for a few yards, then came back and threw himself violently down upon the bench again. "I wish to Heaven you hadn't told me of this, now that it is too late!" he exclaimed.

Heriot smiled. The truth was, that he had seen his friend in love before, and was not greatly moved by this display of agitation. "You are quite mistaken," he said, quietly. "Poor Mrs. Irvine doesn't deserve abuse. Like other mothers, she would be very much pleased if her daughter made a brilliant match; but she is not worldly or grasping, and Clare is as free to choose for herself as any girl can be. Hitherto she has not been embarrassed by a large field of choice. She has lived all her life down in the country, and this season at Rome has given her her first sight of the outer world. I wish she could have fancied Wilbraham; but, from what you say, I fear there is very little chance for him. It is a pity."

"Do you really think that?" asked Vidal, eagerly. "Do you think she will refuse him?"

"I don't think she would have spoken to you upon the subject if she had meant to accept him. But, setting him aside, I do wish, Adrian, both for your sake and for hers, that you would try to get over this fancy. You and she are not suited to one another; but I won't dwell on that point, because, of course, you wouldn't believe me. You will acknowledge, though, that, from a common-sense point of view, it would be a great deal better if you were not to meet again. You have no business to make love to her unless you see some prospect of being able to marry her; and you can't ask her to starve with you upon six hundred a year. Dive into the mysteries of the family," he answered, with a slight laugh; "but as for my income, I hope it won't remain stationary. I have added to it a little already from time to time, and I mean to add to it in a more systematic way now, if I can."

"By writing?"

"Why not? Men have made money by writing before now."

"How many men?—and how much money? You know, I am not altogether ignorant of literary matters; I have written a little myself at odd times."

"But not novels."

"Not novels, certainly; still I know something of the experiences of novelists. It isn't altogether a question of merit; so I may say, without casting any reflection upon you, that the chances are very much against your ever making a living at that trade."

"Yet you recommended it."

"As being preferable to none; I know I did. I was sure that you could write what I should consider a good novel; but I can't answer for the opinion of the public, which pays. All I wish to point out is that the prospect is an uncertain one; and you yourself will admit that much."

"I admit that all beginners must be uncertain of success. But, Heriot, doesn't it occur to you that you are taking a great deal too much for granted? You talk as if winning Miss Irvine's love would be the easiest thing in the world—as if I had only to throw the handkerchief. It seems to me that you are as far from understanding her as you are from realising that poverty is only a relative evil."

"I venture to look upon poverty as a positive evil," said Heriot. "As for Clare Irvine—well, since we are alone, I will speak plainly and without regard for your blushes. You are very good-looking, my dear Adrian, and you are also clever and amiable; so that a young woman who should fall in love with you could hardly be accused of bad taste. I don't think it is taking too much for granted to assume that this particular young woman is liable to be attracted by what attracts others, and that is why I say that you are bound to consider consequences. The thing isn't done yet; just stop and think a little before you do it. And there's something more that I should like to say to you. I heard yesterday from Mrs. Irvine that Clare has it open to her to make an excellent marriage. It seems that in the course of their wanderings they fell in with a man named Wilbraham, whom I know a little, and who is a thoroughly good fellow in every way. He has the advantage of being rich and well connected, and I suppose no parents can be indifferent to such things. He proposed to Clare when they were at Rome, and although she began by refusing him, she afterwards seemed disposed to change her mind; and the long and the short of it is that he hasn't yet received his final answer."

"Oh, is that it?" said Vidal. "Now I understand."

He was thinking of what the girl had said to him the day before, and he shuddered at the idea that she was in danger of throwing away her life, to please a mother, whom, in his haste, he set down as greedy and scheming.

Heriot, who could not follow his thoughts, went on:

"You understand the nature of the case now. She is just upon the point of accepting a man who will make the kindest and best of husbands, when, lo and behold! down drops a good-looking pauper from the clouds and sets to work to unsettle her mind. Don't you thing the good-looking pauper would do well to betake himself to Jericho?"

"I dare say I might think so if I were her father," answered Vidal; "but I am not her father—nor are you. Would you like to see her marry a man whom she doesn't love, because he is rich and may help her brothers on in the world? For I take it that that is the English of the matter."

"No," answered Heriot, "I shouldn't like that, and I doubt very much whether she would do it either. What I should like her to do would be to love the man. She certainly can't be very far off loving him or she wouldn't hesitate."

"I don't see that at all; but if it is as you say, she will have ceased to hesitate before I can meet her again. So that I am powerless to do her any harm—or good. If only I had known yesterday as much as I know now!"

"What would you have done?"

"I should have told her that I loved her. She would have refused me, without any doubt; but it is just possible that my speaking might, as you say, have 'unsettled her mind'; and that would have been something."

Heriot clasped his hands behind his head, stared up at the sky, and whistled a tune.

"Why do you do that?" asked Vidal, irritably.

"To keep myself from being so rude as to say what I think of you."

Vidal laughed. "Now, Heriot, that's humbug. The sort of generosity which you ask of me would be no generosity at all. It is quite comprehensible that you shouldn't wish me to marry Miss Irvine"——

"I don't see how you can marry her."

"Well, let us put things at the worst, and say that I can't. Then, according to you, I ought to stand aside and allow some other man to make her happy. I don't know whether I should be capable of such magnanimity if the case were to arise—I hope I should. But the case has not arisen; because I happen to know that this man Wilbraham cannot make her happy."

"How do you know anything about it?"

"From a few words that she let fall yesterday. I didn't understand her at the time; but I do now; and I tell you that if she gives way, it will be simply and solely because that infernal old mother of hers has persuaded her that it is her duty to sacrifice herself for her family."

The young man started to his feet, as he spoke, strode away for a few yards, then came back and threw himself violently down upon the bench again. "I wish to Heaven you hadn't told me of this, now that it is too late!" he exclaimed.

Heriot smiled. The truth was, that he had seen his friend in love before, and was not greatly moved by this display of agitation. "You are quite mistaken," he said, quietly. "Poor Mrs. Irvine doesn't deserve abuse. Like other mothers, she would be very much pleased if her daughter made a brilliant match; but she is not worldly or grasping, and Clare is as free to choose for herself as any girl can be. Hitherto she has not been embarrassed by a large field of choice. She has lived all her life down in the country, and this season at Rome has given her her first sight of the outer world. I wish she could have fancied Wilbraham; but, from what you say, I fear there is very little chance for him. It is a pity."

"Do you really think that?" asked Vidal, eagerly. "Do you think she will refuse him?"

"I don't think she would have spoken to you upon the subject if she had meant to accept him. But, setting him aside, I do wish, Adrian, both for your sake and for hers, that you would try to get over this fancy. You and she are not suited to one another; but I won't dwell on that point, because, of course, you wouldn't believe me. You will acknowledge, though, that, from a common-sense point of view, it would be a great deal better if you were not to meet again. You have no business to make love to her unless you see some prospect of being able to marry her; and you can't ask her to starve with you upon six hundred a year. Dive into the mysteries of the family," he answered, with a slight laugh; "but as for my income, I hope it won't remain stationary. I have added to it a little already from time to time, and I mean to add to it in a more systematic way now, if I can."

"By writing?"

"Why not? Men have made money by writing before now."

"How many men?—and how much money? You know, I am not altogether ignorant of literary matters; I have written a little myself at odd times."

"But not novels."

"Not novels, certainly; still I know something of the experiences of novelists. It isn't altogether a question of merit; so I may say, without casting any reflection upon you, that the chances are very much against your ever making a living at that trade."

"Yet you recommended it."

"As being preferable to none; I know I did. I was sure that you could write what I should consider a good novel; but I can't answer for the opinion of the public, which pays. All I wish to point out is that the prospect is an uncertain one; and you yourself will admit that much."

"I admit that all beginners must be uncertain of success. But, Heriot, doesn't it occur to you that you are taking a great deal too much for granted? You talk as if winning Miss Irvine's love would be the easiest thing in the world—as if I had only to throw the handkerchief. It seems to me that you are as far from understanding her as you are from realising that poverty is only a relative evil."

somewhat remarkable for strength of purpose. He had been quite sincere, and had imagined that he was speaking from experience, when he laid down the proposition that a man has only himself to blame if he does not obtain the object of his desires. He had pretty generally got what he had wanted, and had not looked as closely as he might have done into the causes which had led to that happy result. As a fact, moral strength did not happen to be his most striking quality. Sanguine, easily elated, and easily depressed, he stood in constant need of sympathy, and was not one who could bear many failures or hold out for an indefinite time against difficulties. Yet (as Heriot had long ago found out) he was capable of distinguishing himself far above his fellows. Granted a first success, he might make himself heard of in the world. The few steps which he had already taken on the road towards fame had been tolerably long steps for a beginner. His essays, contributed to various reviews and magazines, and dealing chiefly with such aspects of modern life as lie upon the surface, had attracted a good deal of notice. They had been bright, clever, excellently worded, and had conveyed the idea that their writer possessed a wider and more profound acquaintance with his subjects than was actually the case. Now, he had written a novel, to which he had given the name of Satiety, in which he had satirised what he, oddly enough, fancied to be the prevailing characteristic of his generation. Of this work he secretly—perhaps unconsciously—expected great things. He had spoken, and even thought, disparagingly of it; but he hardly anticipated a disparaging verdict from the press or the public. And if it should prove—as why should it not?—to be the passport to that Tom Tiddler's ground in which successful novelists are popularly supposed to disport themselves, might not marriage be among the good things which it would bring within the reach of its talented author?

As he walked among those lonely heights, his love grew stronger and deeper. Hitherto he had lacked an object in life: now he had found one. In Clare he recognised at once his inspiration and his reward. Upon more mature reflection, he had admitted to himself the justice of much that Heriot had urged; but he resolved that, whether he might find it his duty to avoid Miss Irvine for a time or not, he would approach her as soon as he had the right to do so, and that for that end he would labour and live. The only deplorable part of the business was that it should be complicated with a Wilbraham.

(To be continued.)

The Spanish Consul-General in London has forwarded to King Alfonso £3600 for distribution amongst the sufferers by the recent earthquakes.

Dr. Gill, F.R.S., Astronomer Royal at the Cape, has applied to the Royal Society for funds necessary to obtain a Photographic Atlas of the Stars of the Southern Hemisphere. The Royal Society have intrusted the work (under the supervision of Dr. Gill) to Mr. C. Ray Woods, who is about to leave England for the purpose.

Mr. E. Corbett, British Minister of Rio, has been appointed to succeed Sir H. Rumbold as her Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary at Stockholm; and the Hon. E. Monson, C.B., now British Minister at Buenos Ayres, will succeed Mr. Vivian at Copenhagen as her Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary.

At the Royal Institution, Professor H. N. Moseley on Tuesday began a course of five lectures on "Colonial Animals: their Structure and Life Histories." Professor Dewar on Thursday began a course of eleven lectures on "The New Chemistry"; and Dr. Waldstein to-day (Saturday) begins a course of three lectures on "Greek Sculpture from Pheidias to the Roman Era." The Friday evening meetings began on Jan. 16, when Professor Tyndall gave a discourse on "Living Contagion."

The Board of Trade have awarded a piece of plate to Captain Domenico Romeo, of the Italian brig Marietta, of Naples, in acknowledgment of his humanity and kindness to the shipwrecked crew of the William Jones, of Newport, which was abandoned at sea on Dec. 9, 1883, while on a voyage from Puerto Cabello to Liverpool. The crew of the William Jones were forty-eight days on board the Marietta, during which time they were treated with the greatest kindness, the master and owner declining to receive anything for their subsistence.

For competition at the Sixth Annual London Show of the Shire Horse Society, to be held at the Agricultural Hall, Islington, in the last week of February, prizes in money and cups are offered to the value of £646 5s. Mr. Walter Gilbey offers his "Elsenham" Challenge Cup, value 100 guineas, for the best animal in the show.—The prize-list, a good one, for the forthcoming meeting at Brighton of the Bath and West of England and Southern Counties Agricultural Association, which will be held in June next, has been issued from the offices of the society. There will be twenty-two classes for horses, and forty-four classes for cattle.

The year 1885 finds four English Judges still actively pursuing their judicial labours after attaining the age of fourscore years. They are Vice-Chancellor Bacon, who is in his eighty-seventh year; Judge Peterdorff, in his eighty-fifth; Judge Hulton, in his eighty-third; and Judge Bayley, of the Westminster County Court, also in his eighty-third year. For the first time, the Judges of the County Courts in England and Wales occupy, by virtue of her Majesty's recent Warrant under the sign manual, a special place in the Table of Precedence, where they are placed next after Knights Bachelors, thus displacing the Serjeants-at-Law. The Queen's Warrant, which bears date Aug. 4, 1884, further directs that the Judges of County Courts in England and Wales "shall at all times hereafter be called, known, and addressed by the style and title of 'His Honour,' prefixed to the word 'Judge,' before their respective names."

The London Society for the Extension of University Teaching has issued its prospectus of lectures and classes which will be held during the ensuing term (January to April) at twenty different centres in London. Amongst the new centres may be mentioned the Bank of England, where Dr. Waghorn is announced to lecture on electricity; and another new feature about the society's work this term is that a lady, Mrs. Bryant, is amongst the lecturers. Mrs. Bryant, it will be remembered, was the first woman to obtain the D.Sc. degree of the University of London, and she is to lecture at the Camden-road centre on "Moral Ideals, Ancient and Modern." Professor S. R. Gardiner will continue to give several historical courses for the society—this time at Dulwich, Highbury, and Whitechapel; and of the other lectures, Mr. J. Churton Collins's courses on different periods of English literature will be popular. At Whitechapel there are to be four sets of lectures, which will now be given in the rooms of the University Settlement in Toynbee Hall. Mr. Sedley Taylor is to be one of the lecturers here, his subject being "Schemes for Bettering the Relations between Labour and Capital." In addition to the regular lectures it is announced that the "University settlers" will organise reading parties among the students, who will also have the free use of a reading-room and reference library.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications relating to this department of the Paper should be addressed to the Editor, and have the word "Chess" written on the envelope.

R M (Liverpool).—We have not the book at hand to refer to, and, as you do not state the conditions of the problem, cannot answer your question.

C W P (Toronto).—Very neat, indeed; but rather too easy. We shall be glad to hear from you again.

F M (Prague).—The last I. L. N. has been dispatched to you. Thanks for copy of Zlata, to which we cordially wish bon voyage.

W B (Stratford).—Your last is good: and, if found correct, it shall have early honours.

A A B (Margate).—1. It is not possible to mate with King and two Knights against a King alone. 2. Two Bishops are stronger in an end game than two Knights.

H E A B (Watford).—In the ideal problem the King should be of some use, but "ideal" problems, as the late Mr. Lowe used to say of pawns, are not to be picked up in the street.

J K (Epsom).—Your second letter pleased us, your first did not. You should never be "cock-sure" of the inaccuracy, nor, indeed, of the accuracy, of a chess problem.

POLYANTHUS (Liverpool).—We cannot acknowledge even correct solutions through the post, and yours of No. 2127 is very wide of the mark.

P J (Broadmoor).—Thanks for good wishes. To what Australian problem do you refer?

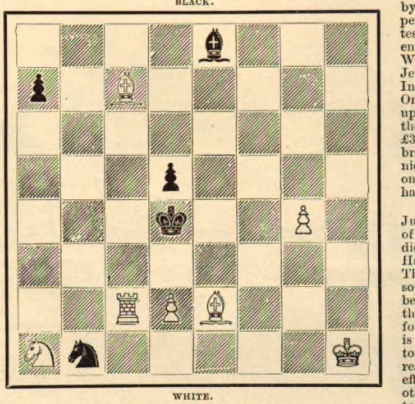
REV. W A (Old Romney).—We never see the paper mentioned, so are not likely to be puzzled by the mistake.

ALPHA.—Please look at No. 2127 again. Your good wishes are cordially reciprocated.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEMS Nos. 2118, 2119, 2120, received from O H B (Richmond, Cape of Good Hope); of No. 2125 from W E Manby, Plevna, F and G Howitt (Norwich), F E Gibbins (Tiflis), C Belton (Tiflis), Carl Stepan; of No. 2126 from New Forest, A L Ory, H E B Arnold, F and G Howitt, B H C (Salisbury), John Keen, Pierce Jones, Carl Stepan; of No. 2127 from G A Walker, T G (Ware), Jumbo, John Hodgson (Maidstone), W F B (Swansea), R Worters (Canterbury), B H C (Salisbury), William Davis, F F Pott, Carl Stepan; of the CHRISTMAS CHESS NUTS from T G (Ware), R Worters, Plevna, Emmo (Darlington), Pierce Jones, E L G, Carl Stepan, F F Pott, Henry Ecles, E Casella (Paris), Jupiter Junior, G Huskisson, H Lucas, N Cator, An Old Hand, A W Scrutton, M O'Halloran, D W Kell, C S Coxe, R Ingersoll, and Nerina.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 2128 received from Hereward, E Casella (Paris), J Hepworth Shaw, R H Brooks, Jupiter Junior, Shadforth, J S (South Hampstead), H Lucas, Rev W Anderson (Old Romney), A W Scrutton, Alpha, A L Ory, M O'Halloran, D W Kell, L Desanges, Z Ingold, D McCoy, C S Coxe, G A A Walker, J T W, Jumbo, Benjamin Hewitt, Plevna, R Ingersoll, T L Greenaway, A W emere, L Falcon (Antwerp), R L Southwell, L Sharswood, Ernest Sharswood, W Hillier, Joseph Ainsworth, G W Law, A M Porter, T H Holdron, H Wardell, S Lowndes, B L Dyke, H E B Arnold, Hermit, S Ballen, C Oswald, G L Mayne, Anon, Harper, H H Noyes, C W Milsom, L Wyman, F and G Howitt (Norwich), W Dewse, H Blacklock, Otto Fulder (Ghent), C Darragh, A Karlberg (Hamburg), W J Buhman, B H C (Salisbury), F Battlehorne (Dunbar), T G (Ware), Emmo (Darlington), Pierce Jones, E Louden, F F Pott, I E C B (Plympton), Laura Greaves (Shelton), C B N (H.M.S. Asia), R Worters, Tweedsmouse, and Carl Stepan.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 2125.



WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Kt to Q Kt 3rd	K to K 7th (best)
2. B to Q R 5th	Any move
3. Kt or B mates accordingly.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 2126.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Kt takes K P	K takes Kt
2. Q to K 3rd	Any move
3. Q mates.

If Black play 1. K to Q 5th, then follows 2. Q to Q B 3rd (ch), and 3. Q takes P, mate.

PROBLEM No. 2130.
By K. MAKOVSKY.
BLACK.

WHITE.
White to play, and mate in three moves.

Played in a Correspondence Tourney organised by the English Mechanic. The notes appended are contributed by Mr. W. T. Pierce.

WHITE (G. H. Mainwaring).	BLACK (J. Pierce).
1. P to K 4th	P to Q B 4th
2. Kt to K B 3rd	Kt to Q B 3rd
3. Kt to B 3rd	P to K Kt 3rd

Said to be unsound.

4. P to Q 4th	P takes P
5. Kt takes P	B to Kt 2nd
6. B to K 3rd	Kt to B 3rd
7. B to K 2nd	P to Q 3rd
8. Castles	Castles
9. P to B 4th	B to Q 2nd
10. Q to Q 2nd	Q to B 2nd
11. Kt takes Kt	B takes Kt
12. B to Q 3rd	P to Q R 3rd
13. Q R to Q Kt sq

It is difficult to see the object of this move. This R, if played at all, should be placed on Q sq; but White's best move is apparently P to B 5th.

13.	P to K 4th

Good; necessitating either a passed P. or leaving White with an isolated centre P.

14. P takes P	P takes P
15. Q to K 2nd	B to Q 2nd
16. B to K Kt 5th

Here White misses a chance—16. R takes Kt, B takes R; 17. Kt to Q 5th, Q to Q 3rd best (if 17. Q to Q sq, 18. B to Kt 6th; and if 17. B to B 3rd, 18. R to K B sq, and wins); 18. Q to B 2nd, followed by 19. B to B 5th, &c.

16.	Q to B 4th (ch)
17. K to R sq	Kt to K Kt 5th
18. P to K R 3rd	P to K R 3rd
19. B to Q 2nd	Kt to B 3rd
20. B takes K R P

Inviting, but hardly sound.

WHITE (G. H. Mainwaring).	BLACK (J. Pierce).
20.	Kt to K R 4th
21. B to K 3rd	Kt to Kt 6th (ch)
22. K to R 2nd	Kt takes B (ch)
23. R takes Kt	Q to Q 3rd
24. Q to K B 2nd	Q R to Q B sq
25. Q to R 4th	P to K B 4th

B to Q B 3rd or K 3rd, to stop the Knight from coming to Q 5th, would have been more prudent.

26. Kt to Q 5th	B to K B 3rd
27. Q to R 6th	B to K sq
28. Kt to Q Kt 6th	R to Q B 2nd
29. B to Q B 4th (ch)	R takes B

Clearly forced.

30. Kt takes R	Q to Q B 3rd
31. P to Q Kt 3rd

P takes P is admissible here; for if then 31. Q takes Kt, 32. P takes P ensures, at least, a draw.

31.	P to K B 5th
32. B to Q B sq	P to Q Kt 4th
33. Kt to Q 2nd	Q takes Q B P
34. Kt to B 3rd	Q takes K P
35. R to K sq	Q to Q B 7th
36. B to R 3rd	R to K B 2nd
37. Kt takes K P	B takes Kt
38. Q takes B	B to B 3rd
39. P to K Kt 5th

The double attack is very interesting.

39.	P to K 5th
40. R to K Kt 4th	P to B 6th

The Pawn is irresistible.

41. Q to K 3rd	P to B 7th
42. Q to Q 4th	P to B 8th (Q)

White resigns.

A neat position by Mr. J. Jespersen, of Copenhagen.

White: K at Q R sq, Q at K B 5th, Kts at K Kt 7th and K R 3rd. (Four pieces.)

Black: K at K R 5th, Kt at K 5th, Pawn at K Kt 4th. (Three pieces.)

White to play and mate in three moves.

Our Problem this week is quoted from the Svetozor of Prague, one of a trio of papers in that city which devote some space to chess. The other two are the Pulacek and the Humoriste Lisky, and to these must now be added a fourth, the first number of which has just come to hand. The last is named the Zlata-Praha. It is beautifully illustrated, and contains an excellent chess department, edited by M. François Moucka.

M. François Moucka's energies must be fully exercised at present. Besides his editorial labours, he discharges the duties of honourary secretary of the Bohemian Chess Club, in Prague, an association which has recently been installed in new and commodious quarters at the Black Horse Hotel. The installation was marked by a banquet, attended by all the chess amateurs of Prague and by many from a distance. The toasts included the "Prosperity of the Bohemian Chess Club"; the health of the president, M. Snirch; the "Chess Press"; the "Bohemian Problem School"; and the memory of Paul Morphy, "the most celebrated chessmaster of all nations," whose likeness, painted by M. Kotre, adorns the walls of the club-room. The health of the host of the Black Horse, M. A. Cifka, brought the toasts to a conclusion. We are requested to state that visitors to Prague will be cordially welcomed at the Bohemian Chess Club.

The English Mechanic announces a problem tourney, and provides four prizes for the competition. The problems to be sent in before March 1 next, and must be original direct mates either in two or in three moves. A solution tourney is also announced, for which suitable prizes are provided.

A match was played on the 5th inst. at 107, Cannon-street, between the Greenwich and Railway Clearing House Chess Clubs, which resulted in a victory for the former by 5½ points to 3½. The latter score included two games against Greenwich absentees. On the 7th inst. the Athenæum defeated Leytonstone by six points to two.

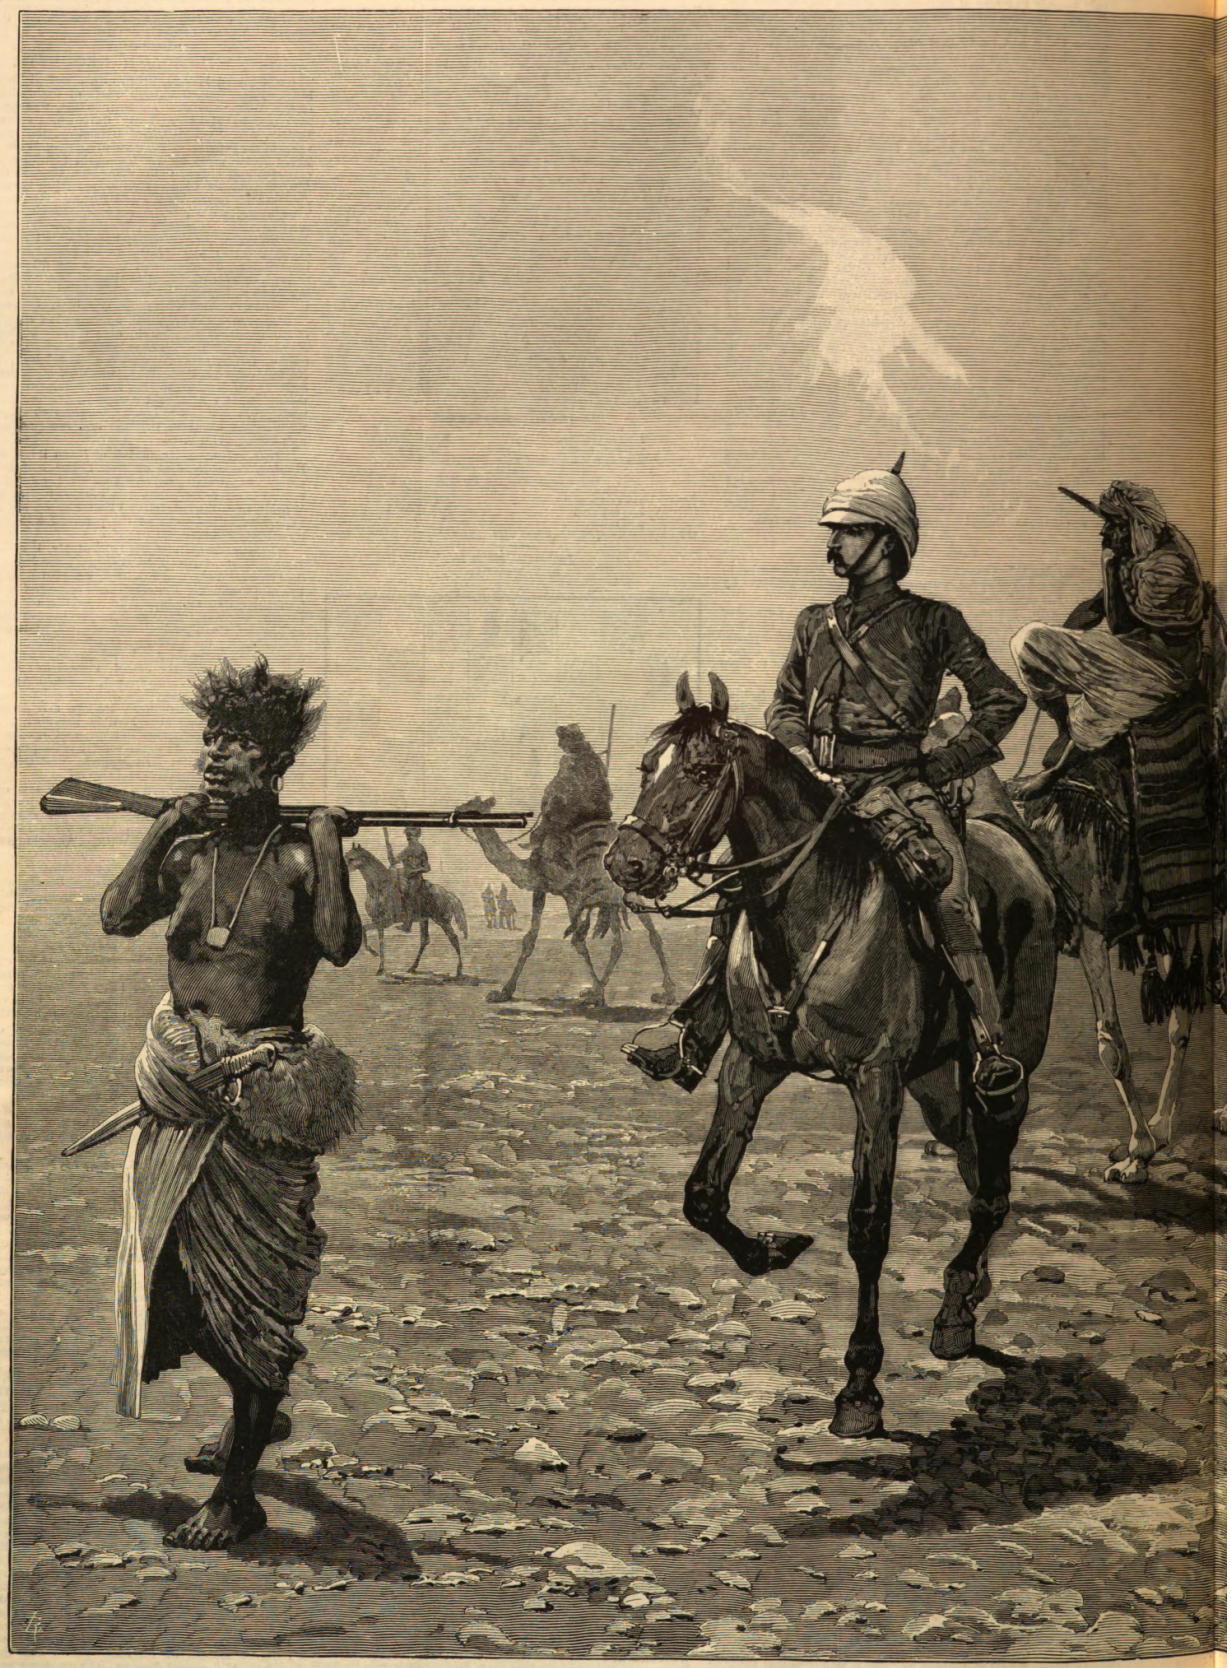
WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will (dated May 24, 1882), with a codicil (dated Jan. 21, 1883), of Mr. Jesse Gouldsmith, late of Rodwell Hall, Trowbridge, Wilts, who died on Nov. 20 last, was proved on the 24th ult. by Matthew Henry Devenish, George Llewellyn Palmer, and Joseph Charles Kennerley, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to upwards of £133,000. The testator gives all his household furniture and effects, carriages and horses, to his wife, Mrs. Hannah Gouldsmith; £10,000 as his son Charles Cecil on attaining twenty-one shall appoint; his freehold mills and certain cottages and land at Trowbridge, with all the engines, standing and movable machinery, to his nephews, William Alfred Gouldsmith and Jesse Devenish Gouldsmith, if they have attained twenty-one at his decease; and legacies to his executors, cashier, and bandmaster. The residue of his real and personal estate is to be held, upon trust, to pay the income to his wife, for life; at her death he leaves £15,000 to each of his said nephews, and the ultimate residue of his property as his said son shall appoint.

The Scotch Confirmation, under seal of the Commissariot of the county of Edinburgh, of the trust settlement (dated May 2, 1872) of Mr. Thomas Scott Anderson, Writer to the Signet, formerly of Atholl-place, Edinburgh, but late of Norfolk-crescent, Hyde Park, who died at Bournemouth, on Sept. 14 last, granted to Mrs. Hannah Lowthrop or Anderson, the widow, and Archibald Anderson, the son, the executors nominate, was sealed in London on the 15th ult., the value of the personal estate in England and Scotland amounting to upwards of £77,000.

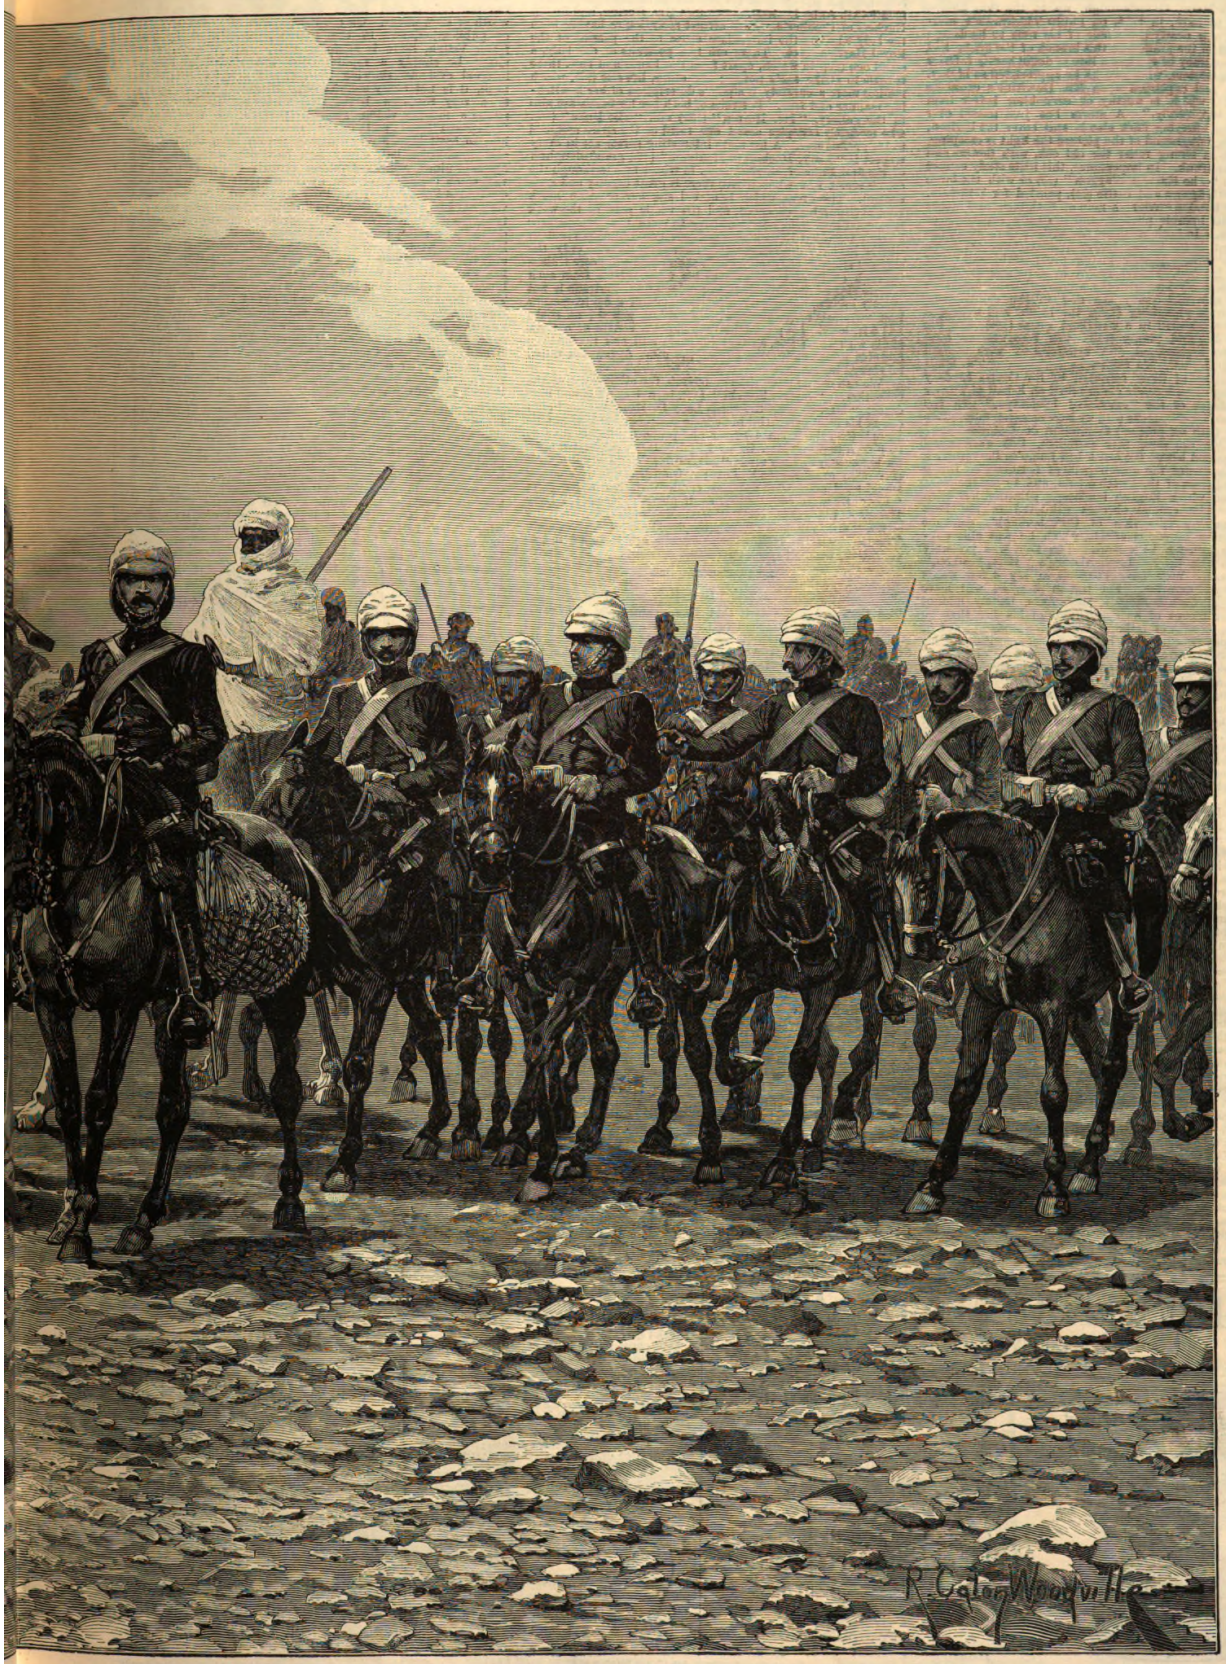
Mr. Ely Thomas Dyson, late of Brian Royd, in Greetland, Halifax, Yorkshire, died on Nov. 17 last, a bachelor, without parent and intestate, and on the 4th ult. Letters of Administration of his personal estate were granted to Mrs. Mary Harriet Wheelwright, the natural and lawful sister, and only next of kin; the declared value of the personal estate amounting to upwards of £61,000.

The will (dated Sept. 12, 1873) of Mr. Benjamin William Benson, late of No. 2, St. Leonard's-terrace, Chelsea, who died on Nov. 14 last, at Brighton, was proved on the 24th ult. by John Cashmore, the surviving executor, the value of the personal estate amounting to upwards of £55,000. The testator bequeaths £100 each to the London Hospital, Mile-end-road; the Jews' Infant School, Commercial-street, Whitechapel; the Deaf-and-Dumb Asylum, Kent-road; the Jewish Society for the Aged and Needy; the Society for the Indigent Blind of the Jewish Persuasion; and the Jews' Orphan Asylum, Tenter-ground, Goodman's-fields; £10,000, upon trust, for his sister Mrs. Marinda Solomons, for life, and then for her two daughters, Isabella and Annette Martha; £3000 to his sister Mrs. Matilda Rosenberg; £5000 to his brother Charles Solomons Benson; and legacies to nephews, nieces, and others. As to the residue of his property, he leaves one half to his sister Mrs. Marinda Solomons, and the other half between his brothers and sisters.



The will (dated April 7, 1884), with two codicils (dated June 13 and Sept. 23 following), of Mr. Edmund Burke, late of No. 85, Avenue-road, Regent's Park, barrister-at-law, who died on Nov. 10 last, was proved on the 18th ult. by Mrs. Harriet Burke, the widow, William Adey Russell Pavier, and Thomas Addison Negus, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £47,000. The testator bequeaths £500 each to the Barristers' Benevolent Association, the Cottage Hospital, Walsall, near Birmingham; the Refuge for Homeless and Destitute Boys, of which William Williams is secretary, and the London Society for Teaching the Blind to Read, Upper Avenue-road, Regent's Park;—his leasehold residence, Avenue-road, all his furniture, plate, pictures, effects, horses and carriages, and £2500, to his wife; and some other legacies. The residue of his real and personal estate is to be held, upon trust, for his wife, for life or widowhood; and on her death or marriage again, it is distributed in legacies of various amounts, principally to his wife's relatives.

The will (dated Aug. 14, 1884), with a codicil (dated Nov. 5 following), of Mr. Henry Arthur Beaumont, late of No. 6, Raymond Buildings, Gray's Inn, who died on Nov. 29 last, was proved on the 1st inst. by Henry Forman and Mrs. Eliza Beaumont, the widow, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £37,000. The testator bequeaths £5000 to Sarah Sherwood, the sister of his wife; and legacies to his sister, late partners, niece, god-daughters, executor, and a clerk. The residue of his estate he gives to his wife.



The will (dated Jan. 26, 1882) of Mr. Hugh Hamersley, J.P., D.L., late of Pyrton, Oxfordshire, who died on Nov. 2 last, at Southsea, was proved on the 12th ult. by General Robert Newton Philips and Herbert Edlmann, the surviving executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £27,000. There are various bequests and provisions in favour of his wife and children; and as to the residue of his property, the testator leaves one third to his wife, the Hon. Mrs. Gertrude Ann Holmes Hamersley; and two thirds between his children by his late wife (excepting his son Edward Samuel), and the children of his deceased son, Arthur.

The will (dated May 31, 1872), with a codicil (dated March 13, 1884), of the Right Hon. Edward Mostyn, Baron Mostyn, Lord Lieutenant of the county of Merioneth, late of Mostyn Hall, Flintshire, who died on March 17 last, was proved on the 19th ult. by Colonel the Hon. Roger Mostyn and the Hon. and Rev. Hugh Wynne Mostyn, the sons, two of the executors, the personal estate being sworn at a nominal sum. The testator gives all that he may die possessed of to his wife, the Right Hon. Harriot Lady Mostyn, absolutely.

The three English Masonic charitable institutions, which are supported by the voluntary contributions of lodges, chapters, and members, together with contributions from Grand Lodge, Grand Chapter, and other Masonic bodies, received, to the last day of the year recently closed, £48,747. Of this amount the Benevolent Institution, which grants annuities to aged Masons and Masons' widows, received £19,824; the Girls' School, £14,928; and the Boys' School, £13,993. During the last nine years, the Benevolent Institution has headed the list six times; and, with the exception of last year, when the Boys' School, by an extraordinary and special effort on its behalf, received over £25,000, has succeeded this year in obtaining the largest amount ever received in one year by any of the three institutions. In the same year the Board of Benevolence, which meets once a month, voted £9252 to indigent Masons of all nationalities, and the widows and orphans of deceased Masons; but in doing so they exceeded the income of the fund of benevolence by about £2000, for which sum they had to draw on the capital of the fund.

THE NILE EXPEDITION: A COLUMN OF TROOPS STARTING ACROSS THE DESERT.

THE GROSVENOR GALLERY.

SECOND NOTICE.

As far as we know, Gainsborough, up to the time of his first removal to Bath, in 1754, on Philip Thicknesse's invitation, had given nearly the whole of his time to landscape painting; and in the pursuit of this branch of the art he had acquired an accuracy of eye and a love of detail hardly inferior to the Dutch masters, whose works he appreciated so highly. This care we find expended upon Mr. Heseltine's exquisite landscape (51), which is worthy of something better than to be called "A Study." A storm has just passed over the scene—the hurrying dark clouds still cover the horizon, but along the foreground of the picture the light is creeping, throwing out in strong relief the old oak, with flowers and moss about its trunk. In importance, this little study cannot compare with "The Harvest Waggon" (33) or with the large landscape, with figures and cattle (54), painted for Wiltshire, the Bath and London carrier—a man of both taste and means in spite of his humble pursuit, and a steady supporter of Gainsborough. In both of these the artist's love of nature is as apparent as his knowledge of animals; the old white horse in the former picture giving proof of his care and sympathy. In fact, Gainsborough as a painter of dumb animals has scarcely met with the appreciation he deserves; but anyone who will study the dog in the child's arms (173), the horses ploughing (133), the bright and animated farmyard group, seated in a woodland glade (124), and the Pomeranian dog and puppy (113), will recognise at once the man who appreciated and sympathised with animal life in all its forms. To return to Gainsborough's landscapes, the sight of those collected by Sir Coutts Lindsay will effectually dispose of the claim raised on behalf of Turner as the originator of the "emotional landscape." In the wholly un-English-like scene (54), we have more a reminiscence of Berghem than an original inspiration of Gainsborough; but, unless we are altogether mistaken, this work must belong to a period before the artist had found in the intimacy of De Loutherbourg the encouragement necessary to throw away the traditions of the Dutch school, and to lay the solid foundation on which English landscape painting has been established. The camera obscura exhibited in the East Gallery is another indication of Gainsborough's constant efforts to obtain luminous effects, which he was able subsequently to transfer to canvas. The idea was probably suggested to him by De Loutherbourg's "Eidophusikon," but on this we may have occasion to say a few words on some future occasion. For the present, we will leave the subject of Gainsborough's landscapes, merely adding that it is the record of an eye-witness of his life that he used to make models, or rather thoughts, for landscape out of the most unpromising materials. In the composition of his designs, he would arrange coal or cork for his foreground, make his middle-ground of sand and clay, bushes of mosses and lichens, and set up distant woods of broccoli.

In passing to Gainsborough's portraits, we find ourselves in the society of one who was not the fashionable painter of his day. Professional beauties and the leaders of society went, for the most part, to Reynolds; and, although some few may have desired to have their personality interpreted by both artists, the instances were few, and the consequence is that it is not always easy to establish the identity of Gainsborough portraits, and in the task the catalogue does not help us. For example, two of the loveliest and most finished heads are "Mrs. Walker" (39), in a black lace dress trimmed with blue ribbons, and "Mrs. Carr" (21), a small picture executed with as much care as a miniature, about whom we know nothing. These two works, however, suffice to show how much wider was Gainsborough's range than Reynolds', of whom it was said, not quite justly perhaps, that he could not paint a portrait of less than life size. "Mrs. Fitzherbert" (10), with her rich brown hair falling over the gauze which covers her shoulders, seems to be in the act of listening to the painter's last compliment or witty story. "Mrs. Minet" (5) has the face of a somewhat weak woman; and if we are not mistaken, the lady (name unknown) (85) lent by Mr. Louis Huth, can be none other than Mrs. Minet somewhat advanced in life and grown more portly. "The Countess of Sussex and Lady Barbara Yelverton" (35), the mother in white silk and the daughter in white muslin, form a charming group; and one would be glad to know something of two such attractive persons as the one is and the other promises to be—and about whom contemporary history, which at that time was made up of gossip, is singularly silent. Lady Sussex, who had married a great-grandson of Charles II., was a Miss Hall. The second Earl of Sussex's father, a man of retired habits, lived the greater part of his time at Easton Mauduit, in Northamptonshire, and got together a good many portraits of living artists, English and foreign. But there would appear, from comparing this picture with another (72), to be some confusion between two bearers of the title, as there is little in common between the faces. With the exception of the picture of the painter's two daughters (91), the only other similar groups are those of the "Misses Cruttenden" (61), of the "Dehany Family" (176)—in which Gainsborough seems to have for once allowed himself the satisfaction of painting in as brilliant colours as ever his rival Reynolds could boast; and that of "Lady Eardley and her daughter" (31), a mass of white drapery—yet full of the richest colour. The mother is standing beside a column on which she has for a moment stood her child—and the artist seems to have caught the moment when the child's surprise is being reflected back in the mother's pride. Among the ladies not already mentioned, Anne Luttrell, afterwards Mrs. Horton, and finally Duchess of Cumberland, will attract attention as having been the lady who was the immediate cause of the passing of the Royal Marriage Act. There are two portraits of this lady, a small one (25), in which, apart from the hands and hair, there is little to strike one's notice; the other, life size (97), which realises more accurately Walpole's description of her bewitching manner and face. Portraits of both her husbands are also in the gallery, "Mr. Horton" (159) and "The Duke" (26), who modestly occupies about one third of the space assigned to his predecessor. A far more interesting personage in every respect is "Mary, Duchess of Montagu" (28), grand-daughter of the first Duke of Marlborough, in whose face (although the colour seems somewhat faded) there is great dignity and self-control. The dress, which is of red silk covered with black lace, is admirably executed, and the whole pose of the work is so good that it is not surprising to learn that the painter himself regarded it as a success. Of the famous portrait of "Miss Linley," afterwards Mrs. Sheridan, there is only the original study in bistre (42), but it shows with what care Gainsborough could at times give to his work. How from such minute studies he succeeded in producing his portraits is not exactly known, but we have the testimony of a contemporary that "Gainsborough painted portraits with pencils, on sticks full 6 ft. long. He placed himself and his canvas at a right angle with the sitter, so that he stood still and touched the features of his picture exactly at the same distance at which he viewed his sitter."

We can do no more than enumerate the other gems of the collection. "Lady Sheffield" (47), in a large hat and blue dress; "Mrs. Basset, afterwards Lady De Dunstanville" (59), one of his most delightful in delicate colouring; "Madame Le Brun" (63), the famous singer and prima donna, worthy to be placed beside "Mrs. Grace Elliott" (110), celebrated alike for her beauty and her many "adventures"; "Lady Dudley" (75), wife of "Parson" Bate; "Gainsborough's Younger Daughter" (87), who appears again with her sister (91); "Lady Mary Bowlby" (96), as if about to speak; "Lady Margaret Lindsay" (160); "Mrs. Meares" (166) and her sister, "Mrs. Villebois" (186), the daughters of Sir Benjamin Truman. Of the men, whose portraits are included in this collection, we shall speak on another occasion.

NEW BOOKS.

Ten thousand pities is it that there cannot be discovered any sort of index attached to the two large volumes entitled Narrative of a Journey from Heraut to Khiva, &c.: by Captain James Abbott (W. H. Allen and Co.); and the omission was the less to be expected, as the work is a third edition of a very interesting account published nearly fifty years ago; so that there has been plenty of time to prepare an index, which would have been especially useful to readers or reviewers who, having a sufficient general recollection of the original publication, or of the second edition, published before the Russian conquest of Khiva became an "accomplished fact," would require simply to know at what page of which volume they would find such statements, predictions, warnings, and comments, as the course of time and events has rendered of special importance. Let the presence of a map, or of maps and of appendices, however, be at once and most gratefully acknowledged, and let the preface which ushers in this third edition meet with similar acknowledgment. That the publication is timely, too, must be cordially allowed; and that it is of great interest and value, for purposes of comparison between past and present, is not to be denied. But, after all, the volumes are chiefly attractive as a record of arduous duties performed at great personal risk and with no little personal suffering. An orthographical exercise, moreover, is provided by the spelling of the foreign words; so spelt that quite old friends appear almost unrecognisable in a kind of fancy-dress costume. Our familiar Turcoman, for instance, leaps forth as Toorcumun; from which an argument may be deduced in favour of those etymologists who would derive the vulgar "rum'un" from the classic "Roman." It was in the last month of the year 1839 that our author "quitted Heraut in progress to Khiva"; and the changes wrought during the lapse of time, therefore, give to his narrative a piquant flavour of historical romance. Of human nature the author's experience was most astonishing and gratifying, though hardly credible: "the good," he says, "was never eclipsed by the evil," in spite of what the famous Greek sage has left on record concerning "the majority"; he declares that amongst "the Russians" he "met goodness everywhere," which sounds like mockery; and "in my own country, and amongst my own people," he continues, "I saw this goodness in its noblest dress." Should Judæus Apella or any other unbeliever hereupon stop his ears, let it be urged in our author's favour that his remarks apply to a state of things which he found existing when the world was nearly fifty years younger. But, for all his love of the Russian people, our author calls upon us with fervour and vehemence to be up and doing against that ambitious Russia which, since he first published the account of his mission, has made gigantic strides, and, in twenty-five years, marched fifteen hundred miles upon India.

Very little or no information is supplied about the origin of Memorials of James Hogg, the Ettrick Shepherd: edited by his daughter, Mrs. Garden (Paisley: Alexander Gardner); not has the volume that index which so greatly enhances the worth of such works. On the titlepage there is not any date of publication, and to the preface, contributed by Professor Veitch, there is again no date. The volume, then, might be simply a republication but for little bits of internal evidence showing that, at any rate in its present form, it is not many months old. However, old or new, it is a very readable book, and will call up before the reader's mental vision such a portrait of the tuneful "shepherd" as will create some surprise, and prove him to have been a very different person from the superior sort of buffoon, half clever boy, half silly man, altogether coarse-grained, whisky-drinking egotist, which is the idea very often suggested of him by the conversations in the once celebrated but now very generally depreciated "Noctes." The very likeness of the "shepherd" on the frontispiece, with the facsimile of his handwriting, is enough to upset preconceived opinions of the pastoral, uneducated son of the Muse: he looked and wrote, so far as his caligraphy is concerned, noticeably like a gentleman; and "Christopher North," of whom a likeness is given also, was not nearly so gentleman-like in exterior, if the rough sketch may be depended upon, as the "shepherd." That Hogg was egotistical to the height of sublimity is plain from the "memorials"; but it was an ingenuous egotism, not unpardonable or unnatural in one who was supposed by the superstitious to be literally "descended from the fairies." Even Lockhart would probably have handled the "shepherd" less roughly after death, if the "shepherd" himself had not been so ill-advised as to publish his "Domestic Manners and Private Life of Sir Walter Scott."

We are to have a Japanese colony, it appears, at Knightsbridge, on the ground belonging to "Humphrey's Hall," so that Nine Years in Nipon: by Henry Faulds, L.F.P.S. (Paisley: Alexander Gardner), is a peculiarly opportune volume, containing "sketches of Japanese life and manners." The book has no index, but, on the other hand, it has many more or less useful and instructive, as well as exceedingly funny, illustrations. Perhaps it is quite as well that the author was "obliged to omit, most reluctantly, a large section in which" he "intended to give some account of the religious and moral systems which prevail in Japan"; since, according to "travellers' tales," whatever may be the case with the religious system of Japan, the "moral" system resembles, as it were, the snakes of Ireland: in fact, there is not any, but an immoral system prevails instead. Nevertheless, the author promises or threatens to "expand" his "notes on those subjects into a separate volume," if only his present "work succeed in finding a moderate measure of public approbation"; and as that condition is pretty sure to be fulfilled, we shall soon know all about the Japanese moral system. It is to be hoped that the account will be thoroughly "fit for publication," as the present volume undoubtedly is; although even here the author could not, of course, leave altogether unnoticed that "social evil" which is quite an institution in Japan. The length of time—nine years—over which the author's experience extends, invests his work with a trustworthiness beyond that of the mere tourist, on whom we have had to depend, to a considerable extent, for our knowledge of a most interesting country and nationality; and it is not surprising to find him differing now and then from some previous describer of Japan and the Japanese, such as Miss Bird. He informs us, too, that the newspapers perpetuate a blunder by printing "hari kiri," instead of "hara kiri," which is genuine Japanese for the somewhat chivalrous but disgusting ceremony called in English "the happy dispatch." Furthermore, the author's profession, which is that of a surgeon, was of assistance to him, as it nearly always is to aliens seeking to know the actual life of those among whom they sojourn; and the author seems to be a gentleman of very sound sense and views. Here is a remark of his, which may be commended to the notice of the Alpine Club: "One who wishes to admire a great mountain," says he, "must remain below. The very worst use you can put it to is to climb it" (p. 107). Verily, a Daniel come to judgment.

The second annual meeting of the subscribers of the Actors' Benevolent Fund was held yesterday week at the Lyceum Theatre, Mr. Bancroft presiding. Mr. C. G. Compton, the secretary, read the report and balance-sheet for the past year, according to which the receipts were £3905, and the relief and loans afforded £2241. Funds have been invested to the amount of £2000.

The Pall Mall Gazette says:—"The next Royal book will come from the pens of the two sons of the Prince of Wales, Prince Albert Victor and George. It will be in two large volumes of 500 pages each, and will be profusely illustrated with pictures and maps. During their voyage round the world each of the young Princes kept his diary up to date most religiously, and upon these daily entries, written on board, on horseback, and in tents, the two volumes will be based. The Rev. J. N. Dalton, who accompanied the Princes, has, we believe, made important additions from his own diary, and has revised the sheets himself. The two volumes will probably be ready in April."

GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE
(LIMITED),
LATE A. B. SAVORY AND SONS,
SILVER AND BEST SILVER-PLATED MANUFACTURERS,

ALCESTER.
Massive Silver Bowl, richly chased, gilt inside, on ebonized plinth, to hold 9 pints ... £20 0 0
Larger size, ditto, 13 pints 25 10 0

11 & 12, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.
(Opposite the Bank of England.)

SPOONS & FORKS.
TEA & COFFEE SERVICES.
WAITERS & TRAYS.
CLARET JUGS & GOBLETS.
CRUET & BREAKFAST FRAMES.
INKSTANDS, CANDLESTICKS.

A new Pamphlet of Prices, Illustrated with over 500 Engravings, will be forwarded, gratis and post-free, on application.

HEAL AND SON.

BEDSTEADS.
3 ft. IRON FRENCH, from 10s. 6d.
3 ft. BRASS FRENCH, from 48s.

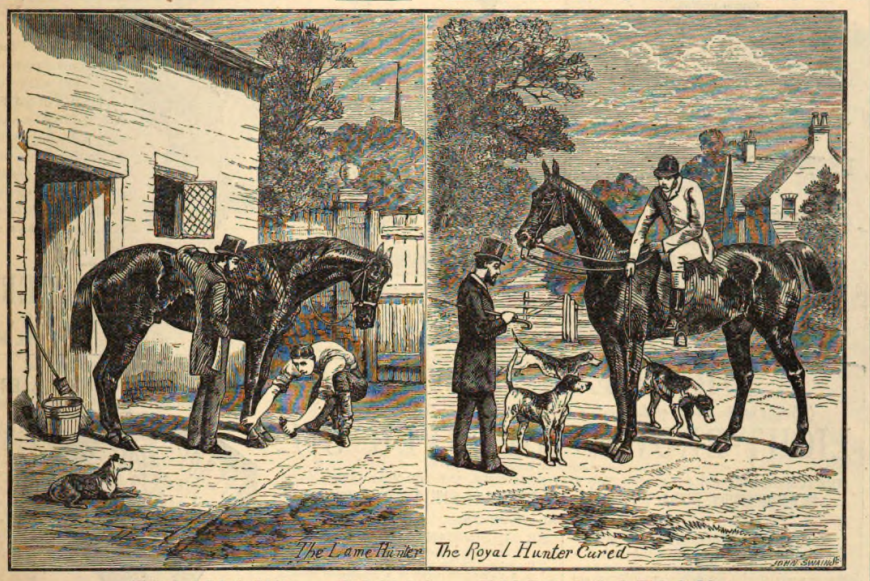
BEDDING.
MATTRESSES, 3 ft., from 11s.
A NEW SPRING MATTRESS, warranted good and serviceable, at a very moderate price. 3 ft., 28s.
THIS, WITH A TOP MATTRESS—3 ft., 20s.—makes a most comfortable Bed, and cannot be surpassed at the price.
GOOSE DOWN QUILTS, 1 yard by 1¼ yard, 10s.
BEDDING CLEANED AND RE-MADE.

BED-ROOM FURNITURE.
PLAIN SUITES, from £3.
DECORATED SUITES, from £8 10s.
ASH AND WALNUT Ditto, from £12 12s.
SUITES OF WHITE ENAMEL, similar to that in the Health Exhibition, from £14.

EASY-CHAIRS, from 35s.
COUCHES from 75s.
WRITING-TABLES, from 25s.
OCCASIONAL TABLES, from 10s. 6d.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, WITH PRICE-LIST OF BEDDING, FREE BY POST.
195 TO 198, TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

£10.
In return for a £10 Note, free and safe by post, one of BENNETT'S
LADIES' GOLD WATCHES,
perfect for time, beauty, and workmanship. With Keyless Action. Air-tight, damp-tight, and dust-tight.



Bennett's WATCHES 65, Cheapside

£15.
In return for Post-office Order, free and safe by post, one of BENNETT'S
GENTLEMEN'S
GOLD KEYLESS WATCHES,
perfect for time, beauty, and workmanship. With Keyless Action. Air-tight, damp-tight, and dust-tight.

SIR JOHN BENNETT'S WATCHES and CLOCKS.
£10 LADY'S GOLD KEYLESS. Elegant and accurate.
£15 GENTLEMAN'S STRONG GOLD KEYLESS.
20 GUINEA GOLD HALF CHRONOMETER for all Climates.
£22 MEDICAL and SCIENTIFIC CENTRE SECONDS.
£20, £30, £40 PRESENTATION WATCHES. Arms, and Inscription emblazoned for Noblemen, Gentlemen, and others.
£20 HALL CLOCK to CHIME on 8 Bells, in oak or mahogany; with bracket and shield 3 Guineas extra.
18 Carat GOLD CHAINS and JEWELLERY.
65 and 64, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

NO STABLE IS COMPLETE WITHOUT

ELLIMAN'S ROYAL EMBROCATION.

ELLIMAN'S ROYAL EMBROCATION,

Introduced to the public thirty-four years since, has maintained its world-wide reputation, not only by its possessing remarkable healing properties, quickly restoring an injured limb or part to a healthy state, but also on account of the ease with which it is applied, its use being unattended by the slightest risk of blemish. A large proportion of the Masters of the Foxhounds and Harriers throughout the United Kingdom use it constantly in their stables. The testimony of these men as to its efficacy all must recognise as unimpeachable. The Embrocation is very generally used by Contractors, Builders, Farmers, Brewers, Colliery Owners, Livery Stable Keepers, and Owners of Carriage and Draught Horses; in fact, by all those who see that it is the strictest economy to keep their horses' legs sound and fit for hard work.

GOLD MEDAL AWARDED, NEW ZEALAND EXHIBITION, 1882.

Castle Weir, Kington, Herefordshire.
December, 1878.
Gentlemen,—I use the Royal Embrocation in the stables and kennels, and have found it very serviceable. I have also used the Universal Embrocation for Lumbago and Rheumatism for the last two years, and have suffered very little since using it.
R. H. PRICE, Lieut.-Col., Master of Radnorshire Hunt.

From Col. Pryse, Peithyil, Aberystwith.
April 1, 1884.
Sirs,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is used in my stables. I find this a very useful application for cuts, strains, and bruises in horses' legs.
C. PRYSE, Master of Col. Pryse's Hounds.

From G. C. Carew Gibson, Esq., Sandgate, Pulborough, Sussex.
Oct. 7, 1878.
Sirs,—I like your Embrocation very much; we use a great deal of it. All sorts of cuts, bruises, and slight sprains it does well for; capped hocks and sore throats it is almost certain to cure.
Yours faithfully, G. C. CAREW GIBSON.

PREPARED BY ELLIMAN, SON, & CO., SLOUGH, ENGLAND.

TESTIMONIALS.

From Admiral Parker, Delamere, Ivybridge.
April 24, 1882.
Sirs,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is used in my stable, and with good results; I think it a valuable preparation.
GEORGE PARKER,
Master of the Dartmoor Hounds.

Bochym, Helston, Cornwall.
Gentlemen,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is used in my stables, and gives satisfaction.
J. SYDNEY DAVEY, Master of Mr. Davey's Harriers.

Hillmore, Taunton, Somerset.
Oct. 20, 1879.
Sirs,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is used in my stables; I have used it regularly for many years, and have always found it invaluable, and strongly recommend it to my friends. LIONEL PATTON,
Master of Taunton Vale Foxhounds.

Cliff House, Atherstone.
May 6, 1882.
Sirs,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is used in my stables with good results. WILLIAM E. OAKLEY,
Master of Atherstone Hounds.

From Major J. M. Browne, Master of South Staffordshire Hounds.
Fosseway, Lichfield, Oct. 17, 1879.
Sirs,—I find Elliman's Embrocation exceedingly good for sprains and cuts in horses, and also for cuts in hounds' feet. I shall strongly recommend it to all my friends.
Yours faithfully, J. M. Browne.

From Lieut.-Col. H. Leach, Corston, Pembroke.
April 1, 1884.
Sirs,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is used in my stables. I think it very useful. HENRY LEACH,
Master of S. Pembrokeshire Foxhounds.

From E. R. Sworder, Esq., Barham Court, Canterbury.
April 1, 1884.
Sirs,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is used in my stables and kennels, and I consider it a good thing for strains and bruises. E. R. SWORDER,
Master of East Kent Hounds.

From T. Walton Knolles, Esq., Oatlands, Kinsale.
April 2, 1884.
Sirs,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is used in my stables. I have used it for some time past, and find it very efficacious if properly applied.
T. WALTON KNOLLES,
Master of South Union Hunt (Ireland).

From Burton R. P. Persse, Esq., Mayode Castle, Athenry, Ireland.
April 2, 1884.
Sirs,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is used in my stables, and I consider it most valuable.—BURTON R. P. PERSSE, Master of Galway County Foxhounds.

Posen, Prussia.
Aug. 10, 1882.
Elliman's Royal Embrocation has been used in my stables for many years. I have found it invaluable for sprains and bruises in the horses. I shall recommend this remedy to all my friends. BARON VON KEUDELL,
Riding Master in the 2nd Royal Hussars, Nr. 2.

Wolmirstedt, Prussia.
Sept. 20, 1882.
I am glad to be able to tell you that for the last two years I have regularly used Elliman's Royal Embrocation with very excellent results; especially is it to be recommended for preventing and curing sore backs. I have used it in some cases for sprains of the shoulder with good results. I should also recommend it for applying to the legs of horses after a hard day's work, to give them renewed freshness. KRICHELDORFF,
Riding Master, Estate Owner, and Lieutenant of the Reserve of the Altmarkischen Ulanen Reg., Nr. 16.

THE "LOUIS" VELVETEEN.

"Le Follet" says:—The Louis Velveteen has already rejoiced in a longer reign in the world of fashion than that of any material within our recollection; and when we take into consideration that it is equally suitable for all occasions—an advantage no other fabric possesses—and that, whether employed as a complete dress, portions of toilettes, or trimmings, it is as effective as it is serviceable, its favour is not surprising.

The Louis Velveteen, from its wonderful resemblance to the richest Silk Velvet, is essentially a lady's material; the lights and shadows so thoroughly like those of Genoa and Lyons Velvet, the rich folds and graceful drapery, so soft and silky to the touch, all account easily for its great and permanent vogue among the aristocracy, both here and abroad.

Though very strong, it is so light in wear that even in elaborately made dresses, with long trains, it has no inconvenient weight; while from some peculiar and special arrangement of the pile, no amount of creasing will flatten or rub it; neither rain nor dust alter its rich colourings or dim the silky bloom for which it is so celebrated—advantages that cannot be too highly appreciated.

EVERY YARD OF THE GENUINE BEARS THE NAME "LOUIS."
THE WEAR OF EVERY YARD GUARANTEED.

"CARNRICK'S"
PEPTONISED (Digested)

COD-LIVER OIL AND MILK.

Sold by all Chemists, in 16 oz. Amber Bottles, at 4s. 6d., or sent direct, carriage paid, on receipt of price.

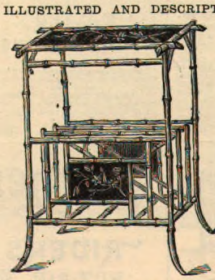
It contains 52 per cent of pure Norwegian Cod-Liver Oil combined with 48 per cent of evaporated Milk reduced to the consistency of the Oil, both digested. The best, cheapest, and most nourishing emulsion ever made. Sweet as cream. Never separates. The taste of the Oil WHOLLY DISGUISED by the addition of the digested Milk. Can be taken by the most delicate person WITH A RELISH. Keeps in any climate. Most emulsions contain 50 to 70 per cent of water, and 30 to 50 per cent of oil, by using evaporated digested Milk instead of water. This preparation is WHOLLY NUTRITIOUS, and therefore the CHEAPEST. A trial of Peptonised Cod-Liver Oil and Milk will produce an IMMEDIATE GAIN in FLESH and STRENGTH. Delicate persons and children who have heretofore been unable to take Cod-Liver Oil in any form will find the Digested Cod-Liver Oil and Milk in this preparation MOST PALATABLE. We also manufacture the above preparation, combined with HYPOPHOSPHITES of LIME and SODA.

THE MALTINE MANUFACTURING COMPANY, LTD.,
24 AND 25, HART-STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON, W.C.

The ONLY GOLD MEDAL awarded at the International Health Exhibition for Malt Extracts was given for MALTINE, the only Malt Extract made from Wheat, Oats, and Barley; also a GOLD MEDAL for "CARNRICK'S BEEF PEPTONOIDS."

FURNISH THROUGHOUT (REGISTERED).

OETZMANN & CO.,



67, 69, 71, 73, 77, & 79, HAMPSTEAD-ROAD, NEAR TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD, LONDON.

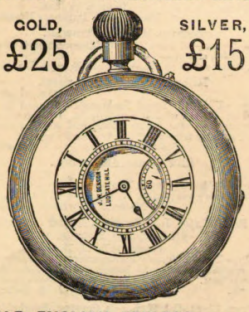
ORDERS PER POST, LARGE OR SMALL, RECEIVE PROMPT AND FAITHFUL ATTENTION. ILLUSTRATED AND DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE POST-FREE.

OCCASIONAL EASY-CHAIR.
Ebonized or Walnut. Oval seat, in Plush, any colour, 37/6.

SOLID BRASS HANDSOMELY EMBOSSED GIRANDOLE,
With two candle-brackets, best bevelled plate, and velvet mount, 17/9.

OCCASIONAL TABLE.
Ebonized or Walnut, covered with Indian Tapestry and Fringe. Top, 18 in. by 18 in., 21/-; 21 in. by 21 in., 25/6.

CANTERBURY WHATNOT.
Bamboo, with Japanese Panels. 19 in. by 12 in. by 24 in. high, 15/9.



OCCASIONAL EASY-CHAIRS,
Upholstered in Rich Silk Tapestries, and Plush, with carved banisters, or stuffed back, 25/6 each.
An immense variety of Easy-Chairs always on view in the Show-Rooms.

OETZMANN & CO., COMPLETE HOUSE FURNISHERS, HAMPSTEAD-ROAD, LONDON.

FOR INDIA AND THE COLONIES OR FOR HUNTING AND ROUGH WEAR.

BENSON'S SPECIALLY-MADE

GOLD, £25 SILVER, £15

GOLD ENGLISH KEYLESS "FIELD" HALF-CHRONOMETER.

CONSTRUCTED WITH PATENT BREGUET SPRING, WHICH ENTIRELY COUNTERACTS THE SUDDEN VARIATION CAUSED IN ORDINARY LEVER WATCHES BY HUNTING, &c. JEWELLED AND ALL LATEST IMPROVEMENTS. GUARANTEED ENTIRELY OF MY BEST ENGLISH MAKE, TO KEEP PERFECT TIME UNDER THE MOST TRYING CIRCUMSTANCES, AND TO LAST A LIFETIME. EXACT SIZE OF SKETCH. HALF-HUNTER, HUNTER, OR CRYSTAL GLASS. SENT FREE AND SAFE TO ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD FOR £25 DRAFT WITH ORDER. SILVER, SAME QUALITY, £15. PAMPHLETS FREE, GIVING FULL PARTICULARS OF THIS WATCH AND ALL OTHERS MADE AT BENSON'S, LUDGATE-HILL, AND OLD BOND-STREET, LONDON.

ESTABLISHED 1749.

The Hunting Editor of "The Field," after a trial of one of these watches, extending over four months, says:—

"I have used the watch for four months, and have carried it hunting sometimes five days a week, and never less than three. * * * I can confidently recommend Messrs. Benson a hunting watch as one that can be depended on."—Field, March 22, 1884.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO

Is the best TOOTH POWDER. Whitens the Teeth, prevents decay, and gives a pleasing fragrance to the breath; contains no acid or gritty substances. Ask anywhere for ROWLANDS' ODONTO.

THE OXYGEN-GIVING DISINFECTANT,

HARTIN'S CRIMSON SALT

In addition to this well-known and highly-valued Preparation, a Shilling Bottle of which makes 300 Gallons of Crimson Fluid, the public can now obtain

HARTIN'S CRIMSON SALT DISINFECTING POWDER, a perfectly soluble, non-poisonous, non-corrosive, ODOURLESS, and most powerful Disinfectant, Deodoriser, and Antiseptic, ready for instant use, by sprinkling upon all that is offensive or dangerous.

Geo. E. Tweedie, Esq., F.C.S., says:—"The results of an extended and elaborate series of carefully conducted experiments convince me that Hartin's Patent Crimson Salt Disinfecting Powder is a most reliable, economical, thorough, and safe disinfectant."

Sold by Chemists everywhere in Tins.
Prices, 1s. and 2s.
Wholesale by HARTIN'S CRIMSON SALT Co., Ltd., Worcester.

LAYETTES.

List No. 1	.. £5 5 0	List No. 4	.. £47 6 9
List No. 2	.. £11 2 3	List No. 5*	.. £31 0 4
List No. 3	.. £25 11 8	*A speciality for hot climates.

"Excellent quality and good taste."—The Queen.

ADLEY HOUSE,
Ladies' Outfitter, Corset and Baby-Linen Manufacturer,
37, PICCADILLY (opposite St. James's Church), LONDON.

COACHING NOTICE.

"THE WONDER COACH" was on Saturday, Dec. 6, taken off the road after a most successful season of thirty-two weeks, running daily (Sundays excepted), viz., sixteen weeks between Eastbourne and Brighton and sixteen weeks between London and St. Albans, during which time the Coach carried no less than 1920 passengers, and covered 9000 miles, without having a single accident of any kind. Mr. RUMNEY, the Proprietor of the "Wonder," hopes to be on the road again early in the Spring of 1885. See future notices.

UNCLIMBABLE HURDLES.

No. 11. No. 11 S.

Catalogue of all kinds of Iron and Wire Fence, Hurdles, Gates, Tree-Guards, Poultry, Lawn Tennis, and Cricket-ground Fence, Wire Netting, Stable Fittings, &c., free on application.

BAYLISS, JONES, & BAYLISS,
WOLVERHAMPTON.
And 3, CROOKED-LANE, KING WILLIAM-STREET, E.C.
Please name this Paper.

AVERY & CO.

ARTISTIC WINDOW-BLINDS.
SHOW-ROOMS:
18, GREAT PORTLAND-STREET, W.
Where may be seen a splendid assortment of Blinds of every description, including the much admired

NEW EMPIRE BLINDS,
As supplied to Her Majesty.
Plain or Decorated,
NEW AND BEAUTIFUL DESIGNS.

FESTOON BLINDS,
In Silk and Sateen, &c.

ART PRINT BLINDS,
LEADED GLASS BLINDS,
NIPON DWARF BLINDS,
OUTSIDE SUN-BLINDS,
BALCONY AWNINGS, &c.

LARGEST SHOW IN LONDON.
SAMPLES AND PRICE-LISTS POST-FREE.

THE "CITY" DECANTER.

Best glass, beautifully made, 5s. the pair.
Same, tastefully engraved, 7s. 6d. the pair.
If to be sent in the country, 9d. extra for box.

ALFRED B. PEARCE,
39, LUDGATE-HILL, E.C. (Established 1760.)
Catalogue (with Nine Furnishing Estimates) on application.

DR. DE JONGH'S

(Knight of the Order of Leopold of Belgium and of the Legion of Honour)

LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL.

Incontestably proved by thirty years' medical experience to be
THE PUREST, THE MOST PALATABLE, THE MOST DIGESTIBLE, AND THE MOST EFFICACIOUS
IN CONSUMPTION, THROAT AFFECTIONS AND DEBILITY OF ADULTS AND CHILDREN.

SELECT MEDICAL OPINIONS.

SIR HENRY MARSH, BART., M.D.,
Physician in Ordinary to the Queen in Ireland.
"I consider Dr. De Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil to be a very pure Oil, not likely to create disgust, and a therapeutic agent of great value."

SIR G. DUNCAN GIBB ART. M.D.,
Physician to the Westminster Hospital.
"The value of Dr. De Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil as a therapeutic agent in a number of diseases, chiefly of an exhaustive character, has been admitted by the world of medicine."

DR. GRANVILLE, F.R.S.,
Author of "The Spas of Germany."
"Dr. De Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil does not cause the nausea and indigestion too often consequent on the administration of the Pale Oils."

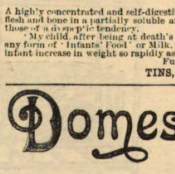
DR. SINCLAIR COGHILL,
Physician to the Hospital for Consumption, Ventnor.
"In Tubercular and the various forms of Strumous Disease, Dr. De Jongh's Oil possesses greater therapeutic efficacy than any other Cod-Liver Oil with which I am acquainted."

DR. EDGAR SHEPPARD,
Professor of Psychological Medicine, King's College.
"Dr. De Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil has the rare excellence of being well borne and assimilated by stomachs which reject the ordinary Oils."

DR. HUNTER SEMPLE,
Physician to the Hospital for Diseases of the Throat.
"I have found Dr. De Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil very useful in cases of Chronic Cough, and especially in Laryngeal Disease complicated with Consumption."

Sold ONLY in Capsuled Imperial Half-Pints, 2s. 6d.; Pints, 4s. 9d.; Quarts, 9s.; by all Chemists and Druggists.
Sole Consignees—ANSAR, HARFORD, and CO., 210, High Holborn, London.
CAUTION.—Resist mercenary attempts to recommend or substitute inferior kinds.
"VERY DIGESTIBLE—NUTRITIOUS—MADE IN A MINUTE—NO BOILING OR STRAINING REQUIRED."

HOOPING COUGH.



ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION.
The celebrated effectual cure without internal medicine. Sole Wholesale Agents, W. EDWARDS and SON, 157, Queen Victoria-street (formerly of 67, St. Paul's-churchyard), London, whose names are engraved on the Government Stamp.
Sold by most Chemists. Price 4s. per Bottle.

Sound White Teeth Insured.
JEWSBURY & BROWN'S
ORIENTAL TOOTH PASTE.
60 YEARS USE. ALL CHEMISTS.

"A Perfect Frisette in Ten Minutes."

HINDE'S Hair Curling Pins

Produce charming Ringlets, &c.

USED COLD.
Surer and much more effective than curl papers. Comfortable—Invisible—Simplicity itself.
This is a Patented Article. Every Pin and label bears the stamp—"HINDE'S Careless Patent."
BEWARE of knavish Imitations, which are absolutely useless frauds. Vendors will be rigorously prosecuted.
Sold in 6d. and 1s. Boxes, sample Box, 7 stamps, of Retail Agent, J. CARELESS, Harborne, Birmingham. Wholesale, Messrs. HINDE, Birmingham and London.

ARGOSY BRACES.

An unconscious Advertisement of the "ARGOSY BRACES," Actually seen and Sketched by one of H.M. OFFICERS in South Africa.

THE PUBLIC ARE WARNED to see that they are supplied with the ARGOSY proper. The Argosy is the only Brace with two Independent Cord Attachments going from Back to Front. Sold everywhere. Central Depôt, Wholesale only, 6 and 7, Newgate-street, London.

"VERY DIGESTIBLE—NUTRITIOUS—MADE IN A MINUTE—NO BOILING OR STRAINING REQUIRED."

Allen & Hanbury's MALTED FARINACEOUS Food FOR INFANTS AND INVALIDS.

A highly concentrated and self-digesting nutriment for young children; supplying all that is required for the formation of firm flesh and bone in a partially soluble and easily assimilable form. It also affords a sustaining and healthful diet for Invalids, and those of a dyspeptic tendency.

"My child, after being at death's door for weeks from exhaustion, consequent upon severe diarrhœa and inability to retain any form of 'Infants' Food' or Milk, began to improve immediately he took your malted preparation, and I have never seen an infant increase in weight so rapidly as he has done. H. E. TRESTRAIL, F.R.C.S., M.R.C.P."

Further Testimony and Full Directions accompany each Tin.
TINS, 6d., 1s., 2s., 5s., and 10s., RETAIL EVERYWHERE.

Domestic Water Supply.

RIDER'S Patent HOT-AIR Pumping Engine.
HAYWARD TYLER & Co

AT WORK DAILY AT 39, QUEEN VICTORIA ST LONDON. E.C.

Will raise 1000 Gallons 80 ft. High FOR ONE PENNY

SAMUEL BROTHERS

"ETON" SUIT.

respectfully invite applications for PATTERNS of their NEW MATERIALS for the Present Season. These are forwarded post-free, together with the ILLUSTRATED PRICE-LIST, containing 250 Engravings, illustrating the most becoming and fashionable styles of Costume for the wear of Gentlemen, Youths, Boys, and Ladies.

SAMUEL BROTHERS,

Merchant Tailors, Outfitters, &c.,
65 & 67, Ludgate-hill, London, E.C.

GET A BOTTLE TO-DAY OF
PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER.

The Oldest, Best, and most widely known Family Medicine in the World.

Get a Bottle to-day of PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER.—It instantly relieves and cures severe scalds, burns, sprains, bruises, toothache, headache pains in the side, joints, and limbs, all neuralgic and rheumatic pains. Taken internally, it cures at once coughs, sudden colds, cramp in the stomach, colic, diarrhœa, and cholera infantum. PAIN KILLER is the greatest household medicine, and affords relief not to be obtained by other remedies. It dispels the agony of pain, gives REST, SLEEP, COMFORT, QUIETUDE. It supersedes the use of dangerous Narcotic and Anodyne Remedies. Any Chemist can supply it, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s 9d. per Bottle.
Depôt, 44, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

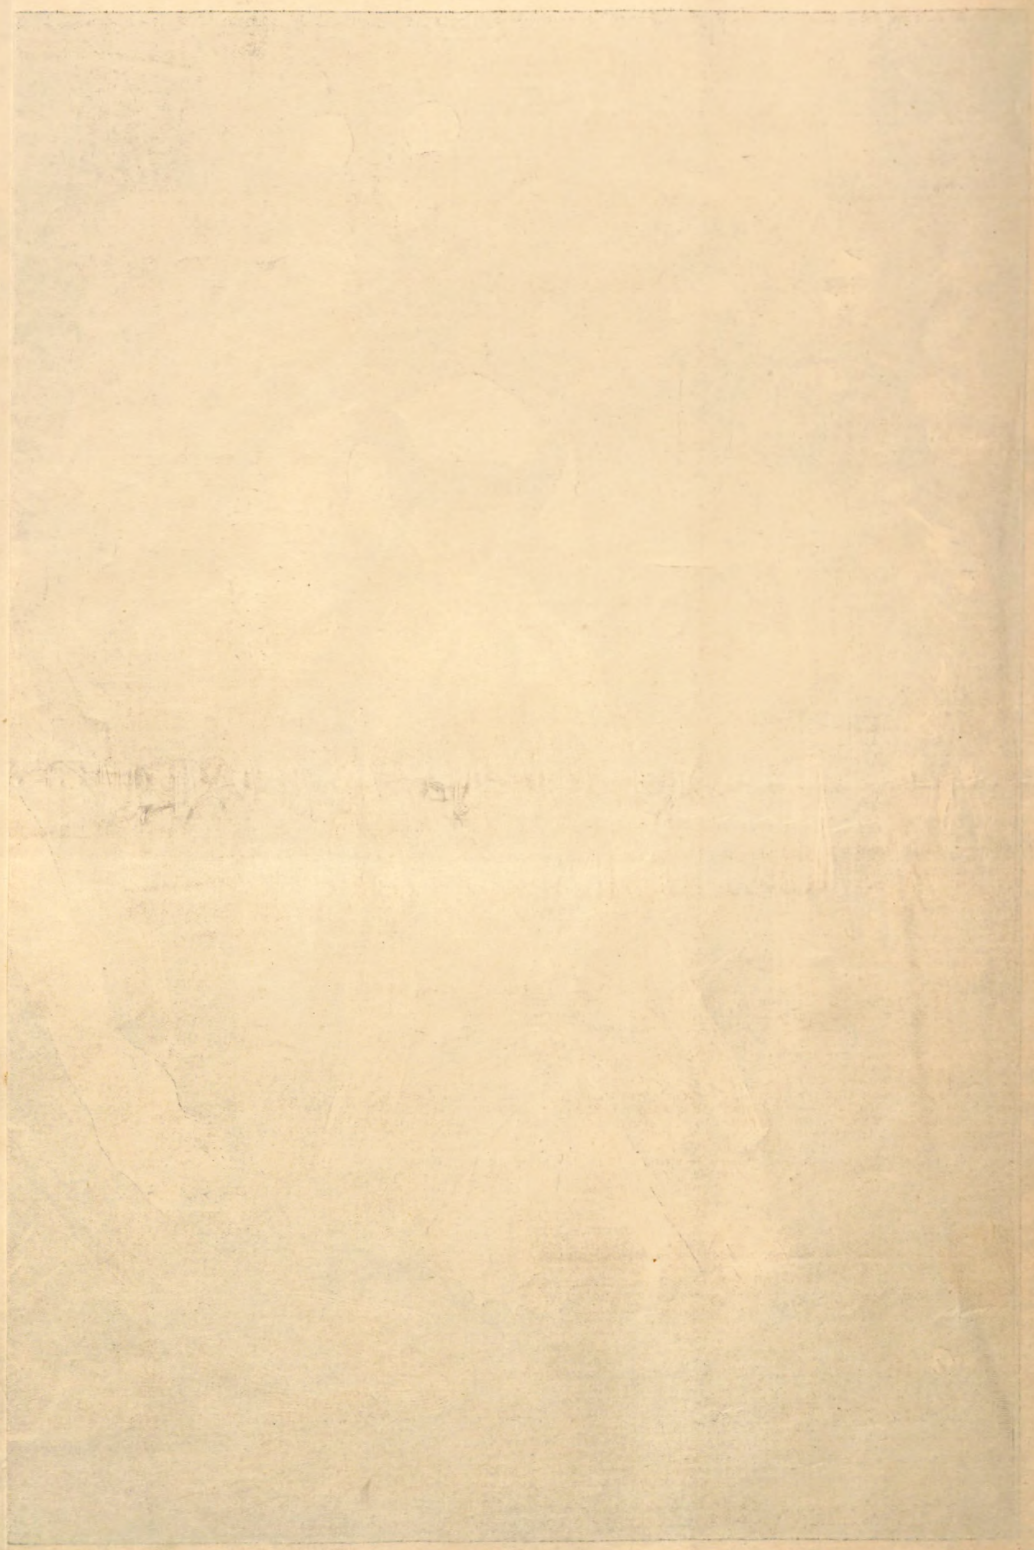
"ADVICE TO DYSPEPTICS."
Symptoms of Dyspepsia and Indigestion, with Special Advice as to Diet.
"This little pamphlet appeals forcibly to those who have allowed the palate to decide everything for them, and have paid the inevitable penalty of their folly."—Globe.
Sent for One Stamp.
J. M. RICHARDS, Publisher,
46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

LAIRITZ'S REMEDIAL PINE WOOL FABRICS AND PREPARATIONS.

Celebrated Anti-Rheumatic and Gout Remedies.
ESTABLISHED 1853.
Awarded 10 Prize Medals.
Consisting of Pine Wool Flannels, all Description of UNDER clothing, Chest Preservers, Knee-Caps, Knitting Yarn, Wadding, Needle Oil, Bath Extract, Soap, &c., FOR PREVENTION, RELIEF, AND CURE of Gout, Rheumatism, Cold, Neuralgia and all Nervous Disorders, Sold by all Drapers, Hosiers, Chemists and Druggists. Wholesale of Messrs. WELCH, MARGETSON, and CO., and Druggists' Sundriesmen.
CAUTION.—None Genuine without Trade Mark and Signature Lairitz

"IT IS ALMOST HUMAN" THE NORTON DOOR CHECK, AND SPRING.

THE SLAMMING OF DOORS ABSOLUTELY PREVENTED.



The principle upon which these springs are made renders it utterly impossible for the door to Remain Open or to Shut with a Slam. They are therefore peculiarly adapted to all kinds of doors, especially those that are framed with handsome STAINED or ORNAMENTAL GLASS, also that are constantly left open by Careless Servants or otherwise, thereby admitting dust, cold draughts, and odours from the Kitchen or Pantry. In the Nursery, Sick-Room, and Study, or WHERE ABSOLUTE QUIET IS DESIRABLE they are almost indispensable, as they render the closing of the door PERFECTLY NOISELESS, and act with almost "human skill." Send for Illustrated Price-List.
NORTON DOOR-CHECK AND SPRING COMPANY,
46, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON, E.C.

SULPHOLINE LOTION.

The Cure for Skin Diseases.
In a few days Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, entirely fade away.
Beautifully Fragrant. Perfectly Harmless.
Bottles, 2s. 9d. Sold Everywhere.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by INGRAM BROTHERS, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JANUARY 17, 1885.

NAVY DEPARTMENT
RECEIVED
FEB 7 1885
LIBRARY.

THE ILLUSTRATED
LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 2388.—VOL. LXXXVI. SATURDAY, JANUARY 24, 1885. TWO WHOLE SHEETS SIXPENCE. By Post, 6½d.

THE EARTHQUAKE IN SPAIN: PEOPLE OF GRANADA TAKING SHELTER IN WOODEN HUTS AND TENTS.
FROM A SKETCH BY MR. H. STANIER, BRITISH VICE-CONSUL.

OUR NOTE-BOOK

Mrs. Langtry's dresses for the Princesse Georges are simply magnificent, though not gorgeous. It must have been a labour of love for the great Worth to design costumes for a woman of her mould, and he has well acquitted himself of the task. One walking-dress is of mouse-grey velvet, with narrow gold lines about the skirt and gold embroidery on the tunic. Another is of dark-green velvet, trimmed with the feathers of the Impeyan pheasant, and with a waistcoat composed entirely of its metallic gleaming plumage. One very elegant ball-toilette is of white satin and violet velvet, adorned with violets and pansies; and another has golden foliage on a white velvet ground, with train, sash, and bodice of pale pink trimmed with delicate blush roses and pearls. The Jersey Lily is also patronising the Irish poplin, for this beautiful material enters largely into the composition of one of her handsomest costumes, which may be described as a "harmony in pinks," relieved by the contrast of black and gold passementerie.

The late Rev. Frederick Silver, of Norton-in-Hales, whose multifarious collection of curios is about to be dispersed, began getting them together very early in life. Contributions were levied from South Africa and New Zealand while he was still an undergraduate; and when a Curate in a South Bucks parish, he used sometimes to astonish the bucolic mind by exhibiting them in the national school room. The paternal business, of course, afforded facilities for collecting barbaric weapons and costumes; but the catholic taste, which included old oak, old Elzevirs, and Old Masters, was evolved from Mr. Silver's own inner consciousness, and grew with what it fed on. He was a pleasant, kind-hearted man, but did not attain the threescore and ten years of life which those who knew him from his youth up would have expected.

By the death of Lord Aylesford, which took place lately in Texas, the Jockey Club has lost a member, though not a very valuable member. The late Lord, in fact, who was elected to the Jockey Club in 1875, and had at first raced as "Mr. Gillman," belonged, as it were, to a preceding generation; he should have lived in the days when the "First Gentleman of Europe" (afterwards George IV.) and the "first orator of his age" (Charles James Fox) would ride "leader" and "wheeler," respectively, of their own post-chaise to Newmarket; or when the celebrated Colonel Mellish was conspicuous among "bruisers" and betters of reckless sums; or when "Jack" Mytton went on like a madman. He was just too young, moreover, to share notoriety with the unfortunate Marquis of Hastings, against whose Lady Elizabeth there was no end of scandal. The late Earl of Aylesford, indeed, may be said to have been born out of due season; and from that point of view cannot be considered to have died prematurely, though he was but thirty-six. He is reported to have had all the faults of the old school of sporting noblemen; and to have had one of their virtues—open-handed generosity—in a remarkable degree.

Perhaps the most practical attempt ever made to utilise convict labour has been recently adopted in North Carolina. The public school system of that State owns a large quantity of swamp land, which, in its normal condition, is unproductive, and positively pernicious to the health of the community at large. The malefactors who are their country's guests against their will are now occupied in reclaiming these swamps, and as it is a form of labour which does not interfere with anything that the honest, hard-working classes endeavour to earn a living by, their time and strength are being turned to the best possible account.

Liége is neither a fashionable nor a musical town, but there are a great many poor in it, for whose benefit, from time to time, the neighbouring nobility endeavour to get up concerts and other entertainments, the proceeds of which go to local charities. The latest thing of the kind was organised by the Comtesse De Mercy d'Argenteau, who is herself a distinguished musician, and it was a concert at which only Russian music was played. The compositions were principally those of MM. Borodine and César Cui, the authors of the "Prisonnier du Caucase," an opera much appreciated at St. Petersburg, but scarcely known elsewhere. César Cui is the son of an officer who, during the disastrous retreat from Moscow, was left behind wounded at Wilna, where he recovered and married a Lithuanian lady. In 1835 she became the mother of a boy, who was brought up to the military profession and lightened his severer studies by the love of music. The science of sweet sounds does not afford a livelihood for anyone in Russia, and Colonel Cui is a Professor of Fortification at the Military Academy of St. Petersburg; while M. Borodine, his friend and collaborateur, is Professor of Chemistry at the School of Medicine.

By all means let us discard superstition, let us have no belief in luck, omens, predestination, and so on. But really some things are very odd. We have most of us had something to say lately about Twelfth Night, and this may probably have led to talking about the Fête des Rois, whereupon somebody may have recalled to mind how Francis the First was nearly killed by a certain Comte De Montgomery, in one of the games in which the King delighted to take part at that season; and then somebody else may have remarked how singular it was that that Comte De Montgomery who nearly killed Francis the First, King of France, by accident, should have been the father of the Comte De Montgomery who did kill Francis the First's son, Henry II., King of France, by accident. This was certainly a curious case of "coming events cast their shadows before." Perhaps the story is not true; but there is French authority for it.

The hungry horse-racer who has had no cheer for some time past may now fall to upon the Spring Handicaps, or the chief of them, the entries for which have recently been published. Lovers and haters of horse-racing may deduce what conclusions they please from the fact that, from 1878 to this year, both included, the entries have varied as follows:—Lincolnshire Handicap, 121, 103, 84, 114, 74, 70, 68, 85; City and Suburban, 118, 103, 108, 108, 74, 74, 79, 66; Great Metropolitan, 62, 43, 38, 35, 40, 36, 39, 39; Great Northamptonshire, 64, 51, 45, 42, 41, 41, 38, 36; Newmarket Handicap, 57, 38, 42, 47, 35, 26, 19, 72; and the Chester Cup, 74, 59, 63, 47, 62, 53, 47, 66. The Babraham Plate, instituted in 1883 only, 21, 21, 57; the Crawfurd Plate, just one year old, 81, 67; and the brand-new Leicestershire Handicap has 85 entries. "Added money" will do a great deal, as some of the entries testify, but the promise of 1000 sovs. on certain conditions has not caused the numbers in the Babraham Plate and Crawfurd Plate to fulfil those conditions.

There is a very strong feeling in the Emerald Isle that reform in the Irish Poor Law is urgently needed. It might be made very much more effective if better administered, and the poor rates might be reduced, while the paupers would not suffer any diminution of their comforts. The qualifications of nurses for the infirmary wards of workhouses are the same as for all other gardes-malades—sobriety, cleanliness, and knowledge of their work; but it is said that the only points taken into consideration by the guardians in many parts is whether the applicants for these situations are Catholics or Protestants. This sounds strange in the nineteenth century.

One feels inclined to wonder what manner of men and women the pioneers of Toynbee Hall expect to find in Whitechapel. The permanent residents are pretty much like others, their means of livelihood are local, and they adapt themselves to circumstances. It is quite within the memory of living man that Leman-street was the abode of people of good position, and Prescott-street was inhabited by wealthy Hebrews, who lived in considerable state in the fine, roomy old houses. There will be one distinct advantage when the Toynbee people come to be on local boards and committees—they will not represent property in the neighbourhood, and consequently are likely to be disinterested.

In England we have very little idea of the extent or value of the annual ice crop on the Hudson River. Two days after Christmas the scraping of the ice began, and in many parts the blocks are now being cut and stored in the ice-houses. It is calculated that no less than 10,000 men and boys, 150 steam-engines, and 2500 horses will be employed in the work, and that by the 5th or 10th of February three million tons of ice will be housed. Many of these store places hold from 75,000 to 500,000 tons, and when they are filled, large quantities of ice are stacked all round them, to be carried away by the first shipments. As there is still some dread of a cholera visitation next summer, it is anticipated that the demand for ice will be enormous.

A long time has elapsed since there was a real struggle for the championship at billiards, though the title of champion has been assumed and held by Mr. W. Cook and Mr. John Roberts, jun., successively, for lack of anybody to dispute the claim. There is now, however, a chance that there will be a match for the championship between Mr. W. Cook and Mr. John Roberts, junior; and it may therefore be worth while to make a note of the principal conditions appertaining to a match for the championship. The table must be supplied by one of three firms, and the three are Messrs. Thurston and Co., Messrs. Burroughes and Watts, and Messrs. Cox and Yeman; the pockets must be 3 in. wide (instead of the usual 3¼ in. to 3½ in.) at the "fall"; the fatal "spot" must be 12½ in. (instead of the usual 13 in.) from the face of the top cushion; the diameter of the semicircle in the "baulk" must be 21 in. (instead of the usual 23 in.), or so it is, whether there be any express condition to that effect or not; and the balls must be (as they ought always to be) $2\frac{1}{16}$ in. in diameter.

According to the Lancet, everybody seems to be in a bad way, suffering from "melancholia." It was so, we have been told, with poor Grimaldi, the clown; and even with Molière, the wit. Not that we display our atrabiliousness to our neighbour; we keep it for confidential communication between ourselves and our medical men; such as the gentlemen who write in the Lancet. But, after all, life for some of us, if not for all, is more than a little calculated to produce "melancholia"; and our cheerfulness, our twinkling eyes, our ready jests, our loud guffaws, are downright hypocrisy. Why, do we not enter life with a cry and leave it either in our last agony or with a sigh of relief? On the other hand, even a writer in the Lancet, being presumably human, may suffer from "melancholia," and may write under the influence thereof. Be it remembered, moreover, that the "melancholic" remarks in the Lancet appeared just about the time when the festivities of the season were over, and the reaction may be said to have begun, when "puddings was out, pills was in."

Various attempts have been made to light her Majesty's big ships with electricity, but they have hitherto fallen short of success. The Swan and the Brush are systems have been tried on board the Inflexible, but now the Brush incandescent is on its trial in the Colossus. Three Victoria dynamo-machines are employed, and placed well below the water-line, where they are protected by three inches of armour. Each of these machines is capable of producing sufficient electricity to light the whole ship, which is fitted with 380 lamps; and this will leave the power of the other two at liberty for search light purposes. It is believed that the cost will be less than that of oil-lamps.

Compliments and thanks to Mr. Price, a "sweep," of Stoke-on-Trent, who on the 15th inst., it is reported, saved eight boys from drowning, at the risk of his own life. To call a man a "sweep" has hitherto been considered uncomplimentary; henceforth it should cease to be a term of reproach

Strange are the uses of—advertisement. This is an age in which a novelty is, above all things, sought for by the advertiser in a large way of business; and not only tradesmen and manufacturers, but even professional men, do not scorn to pay for public reference to their crafts. But who would imagine that several of the candidates at the Civil Service and other examinations are not legitimate aspirants, but are dummies entered for the glorification of tutors? Yet it is so. And when we see that Mr. So-and-so passed seventeen pupils, nine in honours, it is disappointing to find that many of these do not intend embarking on the career they have qualified for, but are accomplished scholars put up to show the expertness of their "coach," and attract to him legitimate paying pupils. If our information be correct, some course should be taken to prevent these specimens nominally occupying positions which other hard-working, deserving students actually want, and are kept out of by unfair practices.

The old question of arsenical wall-papers has arisen with fresh life and vigour. There is plenty of correspondence on the subject, and some of the experiences stated are alarming indeed. As no practical result has hitherto been arrived at, and the public appears to have no guarantee for safety by using any particular colour paper, the National Health Society promises to take the matter in hand, and present to Parliament a bill to render the sale of arsenical wall-paper a penal offence. If this should ever reach the House of Commons, it is to be hoped that its clauses will affect the manufacturer rather than the retail dealer. The latter cannot afford to keep a chemist on his premises; the former can, and, as he is the root of the evil, he should be most sternly dealt with.

Photography has already done good service in the causes of philosophy, science—and thief-catching. Now it is going to be utilised as a check on the frauds supposed to be committed by omnibus conductors on the companies employing them. Some ingenious person has invented a machine that takes photographs of the interior of a public carriage every few minutes, so that an accurate estimate may be formed of the numbers inside at almost any period of the day. If the inspector is not satisfied that the returns of the official coincide with his pictures, he can take proceedings in the police court, and produce his photographs as evidence. This, at least, is the theory. In practice, we know that if we move while sitting for a photograph we shall be reproduced in doubles, a fact very compromising indeed for the honest conductor. More than this, young gentlemen escorting their sweethearts to the Zoological Society's Gardens or Madame Tussaud's have now another spirit of vengeance to rise up against them in evidence in a breach of promise case. It is well to be warned—in case the promised instruments come into use—to go alone in such omnibuses as they may be affixed to.

Theatrical "make up" and dresses are now considered as important as literary dialogue or dramatic construction. Artists vie with each other to discover some new form of paint or powder, or novelty in millinery. Madame Sarah Bernhardt, as the Empress Theodora in Sardou's new play, not content with gorgeous costumes that make dressmakers stare and their customers wild with envy, has adopted something hitherto unknown. Her shoes are flat soled, with straps across the instep, while her feet, peeping out, are left naked. This is appropriate to the period of the play, but the invention of having her toes made up with paint and powder is Sarah's very own, and she is entitled to any credit the new departure may command. We have heard of a conscientious Othello who blacked himself all over; he has a disciple in the great French tragédienne.

The Château de Montaigne, where the great French philosopher was born, has been reduced by fire within the last few days to a heap of smoking ruins. The well-known tower called the Library is, however, intact, and people from every part of the Dordogne and Gironde flock daily to see it. For three centuries this curious feudal château belonged to the family of Montaigne. Their patronymic was originally Eyquem, but when the manor came into their possession they adopted its name. They were succeeded by M. Isaac De Ségur, who rebuilt the old boundary walls; and, towards the end of the First Empire, M. Du Buc de Marcuzzi bought it for his son-in-law, who, in process of time, sold it to Baron Curial, from whom, in 1851, it was purchased by M. Magne. This gentleman was a poet and a philosopher, and his dream was to live in communion with the spirit of Montaigne, to frequent his favourite walks, and, finally, to die in the room that had formerly been his. He had his wish, and from that narrow chamber bequeathed the old place to his son-in-law, who is now the Deputy for Bergerac. He added many modern rooms, which are, unhappily, destroyed; and he intends as speedily as possible to rebuild the château as nearly as may be on the original plan.

Strange things happen to promising race-horses. The "savage" Cruiser, after running second for the Criterion Stakes, became the "shocking example" paraded about by Mr. Rarey, the famous horse-tamer, who took him to America, where he died in Ohio, at the age of twenty-three, in 1875; and now we hear of a once-hopeful race-horse that has "gone on the stage," and is, or lately has been, performing at Covent Garden Theatre. This is Somerset, son of The Duke, son of the great Stockwell. Somerset at two years of age, in 1872, won the July Stakes and Molecomb Stakes; ran for the Two Thousand and the Derby in 1873; for the Cambridgeshire, as well as several other races, in 1874; and afterwards took to the "jumping business," going from bad to worse, until he is now reduced to the circus. To such base uses we may come. But even here history repeats itself in a manner; for Chillaby, the "mad Arabian," who was the ruin, or partly the ruin, of poor Mr. Constantine Jennings, member of the Jockey Club, and known as "Dog" Jennings (having purchased "the dog of Alcibiades" in effigy of stone), performed in a circus more than a hundred years ago.

THE PLAYHOUSES.

It has been continually urged, often not without reason, that a French play altered or adapted is a French play spoiled. If, after mature consideration, it is deemed advisable to localise the story, instantly someone discovers how inappropriate are the actions and the actors to the spirit of the scene. If long tirades of unnecessary talk, devised by a Dumas or a Sardou, are left in, the play is voted wordy and dull; if they are boldly omitted, as ill-suited to an English audience, the comedy is said to lose all point and significance. In the case of the first English version of the celebrated "Princesse Georges" of Alexandre Dumas, produced for the sake of Mrs. Langtry, at the Prince's Theatre, the author has not, at any rate, suffered by misrepresentation. There he is as he stands in print—bold, crude, rude, and uncompromising. He has only been tampered with to the extent of charitable omission. His pseudo-scientific theses have been cut down; his sermonettes of doubtful philosophy have been curtailed; the patience of an English audience has been charitably spared, but Dumas could scarcely accuse his translator of any want of reverence. A spade is called a spade in English as in French. Mrs. Langtry has not shirked to do what Aimée Desclée did before her; and we are presented with the mental torture and unalleviated distress of a good and pure married woman who is deceived by a worthless and graceless man. It will remain to be seen how far English audiences relish these social studies. Mrs. Grundy may pride herself that such things may occur in France, but could not possibly happen in England: or she may chuckle over the similarity of the story as applied to one of her own set, and enjoy the scandal immensely. Time will show. Meanwhile, it may be permitted to point out the obvious defects of the play by Dumas now that it has been presented, to all intents and purposes, in its original form. "La Princesse Georges," as a play, is inartistic in more senses than one. Its characters, with one laudable exception, are wholly and almost cruelly unsympathetic. Severine stands alone in a world of falsehood and deceit. She is the good doctor wandering about in a plague-stricken city. Except for her, life as represented to the spectator causes an inevitable shudder. The second inartistic fault is that Dumas is too direct in his utterance, and far too uncompromising in his expression. He tells his story of guilt in the manner of a detective. He uses his servants, male and female, to peep in at doors and to pry at keyholes. There is an atmosphere of the divorce court, and of divorce court evidence in his play. It reeks of the newspaper report. May I venture to say, in connection with so celebrated a writer, that the details illustrating his story are frequently vulgar? The third, and to some the worst fault, is that the play is wholly destitute of comedy interest. There is not a laugh, or even a smile, in the whole play. There is much sermonising, but no fun. The subordinate characters are lay-figures, and our whole interest is absorbed in the mental torture of the good but undeniably weak Severine.

Now the question is, How could these radical artistic defects be remedied without injuring the main principle of the play? Rumour has already declared that this difficult task was, at any rate, attempted; but that, out of respect for Dumas, the revision scheme was on consideration rejected. How if some ingenious playwright had been able to devise a scheme whereby the servants, with their keyhole prying propensities, could be wholly dispensed with? How if the secret of Severine's domestic troubles were conveyed to her in the course of accidental social gossip, and not on the evidence of a waiting-maid dispatched by her to test the truth of an anonymous letter? How if a wholly sympathetic character could have been evolved for an excellent comedian out of the mere suggestion of a Madame De Perigny, and a ripple of laughter could, through him, have been made to lighten the more sombre scenes of the play? Why, with a M. De Perigny of this sort, it is not impossible that even the celebrated daring last line of the play might have been spoken as a counter-blast to the bold statement of the furious De Terremonde that he would kill anyone who dared to come between him and his wife: "By gad, he will be murdering half Paris! I must get him arrested!" In the mouth of a servant, such a sentiment would have shocked any English audience, and it was well to omit it, even to the destruction of the idea of Dumas. But it is possible a blasé, cynical man of the world, such as M. De Perigny might have been, could have spoken such a line not only without offence, but with effect. "The Princess George" remains, as it was intended to be, a one-part play. The whole interest is centred in Mrs. Langtry, whose grace, refinement, beautiful dresses, and what is far more important, advanced strides towards perfection in her profession, will be food for considerable comment for the next few weeks. Industry and persistency have told here as they ever will tell. Determination is on a fair way to conquer. Those who sneered at the ambition of the lady will have reason to alter their opinion; and here, at any rate, Mrs. Langtry has had an opportunity of showing that she has neither miscalculated her strength nor undervalued her enthusiasm. On a more fitting opportunity I shall be able to describe the effect of Mrs. Langtry's acting on a general audience. In a play of bad parts, not even Mr. Coghlan or Miss Amy Roselle can do more than give genuine and generous assistance, but Mr. Coghlan's aid was invaluable in arranging and adorning a most difficult work to handle effectively.

It very often happens that a favourite play revived as an experiment proves to be so successful that it stops the way of novelty. Such is the case with "Barbe Bleue," at the Comedy Theatre, which has never been so well cast as now at any previous performance in this country. To begin with, the music is well known, and that is half the battle. The tunes return familiar to the ear. We know not where we may have heard them—at a dance, at a dinner, or a seaside pier, discoursed by some regimental or local band. Familiarity in music certainly does not breed contempt. And then the cast! Think of hearing in combination the silver-toned and sympathetic Florence St. John, the handsome and dashing F. Leslie, the vivacious Lottie Venne, the inimitable Arthur Roberts—a master of comical expression—and Marius, excellent actor, once more returned to his old trade of comic opera! No wonder, then, that "Barbe Bleue" attracts the lazier set of playgoers to the Comedy. And it is pleasant once more to hear the lyrics of the late, but not quite forgotten, Charles Lamb Kenney, who had a musical ear, a gift not to be despised in the writer of verse, however humble.

Before the week is done, and, unfortunately, also before these lines go to press, the most striking notes of the new dramatic year will have been struck. So I am compelled to be silent on Mr. Mark Quinton's new drama at the Olympic, where its once favourite manageress, Miss Ada Cavendish, will be found, happily restored to health again; on Jane Hading's acting of Frou Frou, which I anticipate with pleasure; and on the "As You Like It" at the St. James's, which doubtless will be very beautiful.

C. S.

The second of Mr. John L. Child's annual series of dramatic and miscellaneous recitals will take place at St. George's Hall, Langham-place, next Thursday evening. An excellent varied bill-of-fare is announced.

MUSIC.

Madame Essipoff appeared at last Saturday afternoon's Popular Concert, for the second time this season. Her solo performances on this occasion were in the Romance from the first of Robert Schumann's Pianoforte sonatas, a Caprice by M. Saint-Saëns (based on themes by Gluck), and a study in A minor by Thalberg. In all these, her thorough command over executive difficulties was notably exemplified; above all in the study, the reiterated triplets in which, for each hand in succession, were given with rare distinctness. The lady's manipulative skill was also displayed in Rubinstein's Sonata for piano and violoncello, in association with Signor Piatti. Madame Norman-Néruda was the solo and leading violinist, and Miss Ambler (Mrs. Brereton) was the vocalist. At the evening concert of Monday, Mr. Max Pauer (son and pupil of the eminent Professor, Herr Ernst Pauer) appeared for the first time here, and played Beethoven's Sonata in A flat, op. 110, and (for the encore) the same composer's Rondo in G, op. 129—besides having co-operated with Signor Piatti in three of Schumann's "Stück im Volkston," for piano and violoncello, and with that gentleman and Madame Norman-Néruda in Mozart's Trio in C major (No. 7). Mr. Pauer's reception was highly favourable. The concert included Spohr's "Quatuor Brillant," op. 93, finely led by Madame Néruda, and vocal pieces expressively sung by Mdlle. M. De Lido; Signor Romili having been the accompanist.

The second of Mr. John Boosey's attractive London Ballad Concerts (the first evening performance of this year) was briefly adverted to by us last week. The selection comprised some national songs of the past and some vocal pieces of the present time, among them two pleasing novelties, "May Margaret," by Mr. Marzials, sung by Miss M. Davies, and "Our Last Waltz," by Mr. Molloy, rendered by Madame Fonblanque. These artists, Mesdames Valleria and Antoinette Sterling, Mr. E. Lloyd, Signor Foli, and Mr. B. Foote gave full effect to other interesting portions of the programme, which also comprised violin solos, skilfully played by Madame Norman-Néruda, and some good part-singing by Mr. Venables' choir. Mr. Sidney Naylor was an efficient accompanist. Another afternoon concert was given this week, when a selection of Sir Arthur Sullivan's songs was included in the programme.

A few additional lines may be given in record of last week's performance of Haydn's "Creation" by the Royal Albert Hall Choral Society, conducted by Mr. Barnby. The solo soprano and bass music was finely sung, respectively, by Mrs. Hutchinson and Mr. Santley, the airs, "With verdure clad," by the former, and "Now Heaven in fullest glory shine," by the latter, having been among the special effects of the evening. In the tenor music, Mr. Charles Wade displayed a voice of agreeable quality, although not of great power. The chorus-singing was of that exceptional excellence to which we are accustomed at these concerts. Mr. Mackenzie's oratorio, "The Rose of Sharon," will be performed on Feb. 4.

The English version of M. Massenet's opera "Manon" was produced by Mr. Carl Rosa at the Royal Court Theatre, Liverpool, last Saturday evening with great success. The title-character was sustained by Madame Marie Roze, and the cast was otherwise also an efficient one. The local critics speak in the highest terms of the music and its performance. The work will be given during Mr. Rosa's approaching season at Drury-Lane Theatre (beginning on Easter Monday), and will have to be spoken of in detail in reference to its London performance.

Madame Viard-Louis, the eminent pianist, is continuing her interesting performances of Beethoven's works, at Prince's Hall, Piccadilly. The programme of this week's matinée comprised the solo sonatas, op. 28, op. 31 (Nos. 1 and 2), and op. 30 (No. 3), and the Kreutzer sonata—both with violin. Mr. Carrodus was the violinist, Miss C. Elliott the vocalist, and Mr. Libotton violoncellist in the accompaniments to Scotch songs as arranged by Beethoven.

Mr. A. V. Benham gave a pianoforte recital at Prince's Hall, Piccadilly, on Wednesday afternoon, when his programme included a selection of classical and brilliant pieces and an improvised performance.

Two attractive concerts will be given in celebration of Burns's birthday—one at St. James's Hall, this (Saturday) evening; the other at the Royal Albert Hall, next Monday evening, this being one of Mr. William Carter's series of National Concerts.

The Sacred Harmonic Society's fourth concert of the new season was announced for yesterday (Friday) evening, the programme including Berlioz's sacred trilogy, "The Childhood of Christ," Goetz's psalm, "By the Waters of Babylon," and Bach's cantata, "God's Time is the Best."

French operas are to be given at the Gaiety Theatre, beginning on June 6. Mdlle. Vanzandt is to appear in "Mignon," "Lakmé," "Mireille," and other works.

The arrangements for the forthcoming Handel Festival at the Crystal Palace have already been adverted to. Since then the following eminent vocalists have been announced in association therewith:—Madame Albani, Miss Annie Marriott, and Madame Valleria; Madame Patey and Madame Trebelli; Mr. Edward Lloyd, and probably Mr. Maas, Signor Foli, Mr. Bridson, Mr. F. King, and Mr. Santley. Mr. Manns will conduct, and the band and chorus will be of the usual gigantic proportions. As before stated, the dates will be June 19, 22, 24, and 26; the first day being allotted to the grand public rehearsal; "The Messiah" and "Israel" being fixed respectively for the 22nd and 26th; and the Selection day, which will include some interesting novelties, for the 24th. For the convenience of London residents desirous of obtaining information, tickets, &c., town offices will be opened at 48, Pall-mall.

Mr. Frederick Burgess's twentieth annual musical and dramatic fêtes will take place, at St. James's Grand Hall, on Tuesday next (afternoon and evening), upon which occasion he will be honoured with the valuable assistance of eminent artistes from nearly all the London theatres.

Sir Henry Bessemer was, on the 15th inst., entertained at a banquet by the Ancient Company of the Armourers and Brasiers of the City of London. Prior to the dinner a special court was held, at which the honorary freedom of the Company was conferred upon him.

A lady, who wishes to be described only as "A Hearty Sympathiser," sends £50 to the "George Smith Fund," collected by the Pall Mall Gazette editor; and Lord Aberdare forwards a cheque for ten guineas, in addition to a previous contribution of £20, so that the fund now exceeds £1000.

Messrs. A. H. Baily and Co., of Nicholas-lane, have issued "Who's Who in 1885," a handy little volume, revised up to date. While the main features of the work remain the same, there are certain improvements. In the Peerage separate lists are given of the Scottish and Irish Representative Peers, with a list of the titles under which various Scottish and Irish Peers sit and vote in Parliament. At the end of the book, under the head of "Men and Women of the Day," there is a list of celebrities in literature, the arts, the sciences, divinity, journalism, and the drama.

THE EARTHQUAKE IN SPAIN.

Some Illustrations of this terrible visitation of a natural calamity, by which 800 or 900 human beings have perished, and thousands of families have been deprived of their homes and reduced to destitution, are now presented to our readers. Its worst effects have been felt in the town of Alhama, which is about half-way between Malaga, the large commercial seaport on the south coast, and Granada, the ancient capital of the famous Moorish kingdom. Alhama was a town of 1757 houses, containing a population of 12,000, situated on the steep northern declivity of the Sierra Tejada, "perched on the edge of an awful rent in the hills, round which the river Marchan sweeps, winding through ravines and between rocky pinnacles." The volcanic hot springs below the town, impregnated with mineral substances of a medicinal quality, made the Baths or "Hummums" of Alhama a celebrated resort of the luxurious Moors. In 1482, the capture of this town by the Spaniards caused great lamentation among the Moslem rulers of Granada; which is plaintively expressed in the refrain of the ancient ballad translated by Byron, with the mournful interjection, "Ay de mi, Alhama!" The old Moorish Castle, ornamented with the emblematic sculpture of two keys, the Gothic church, the principal one of five churches in the town, and the once stately mansion which had fallen into picturesque decay, were often noticed by travellers in Spain. These are now in ruins, with the greater part of the houses, most of which, standing on insecure steep ground, or on the brink of the cliffs, were overthrown by the earthquake. One of our Illustrations is that of a local religious ceremonial, the procession of the Rose Garland to be consecrated at the church altar.

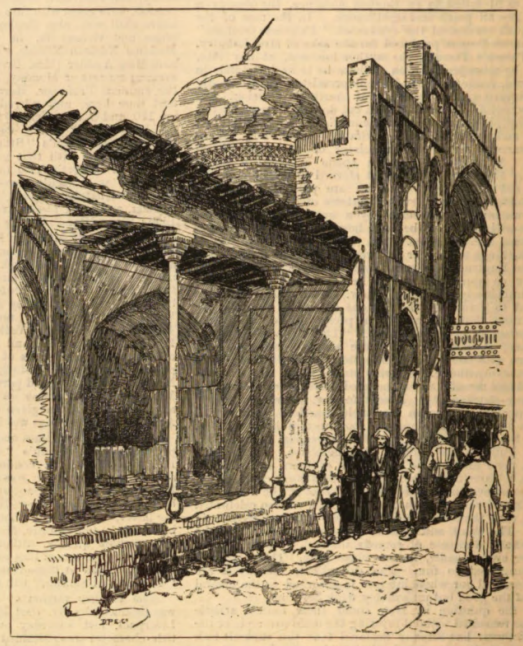
The city of Granada has not suffered much substantial damage. It has a population of 80,000, but has lost its former prosperity, though it commands the fertile plain of the Vega, one of the richest agricultural districts in Southern Europe. It is overlooked by the grand mountain range of the Sierra Nevada, on the north-east side, and the river Darro, joined by the Xenil, flows close to the city. The Alhambra, the magnificent palace and fortress of the Moorish Princes, who were finally conquered by the Spanish King and Queen, Ferdinand of Arragon and Isabella of Castile, in 1492, has often been described. Those Sovereigns are entombed in the Cathedral of Granada, in a sumptuous Royal Chapel; the edifice, in the Grecian style of architecture, belongs to the Renaissance period. There is little beauty or grandeur in the public buildings of the city; but its older streets have an interesting aspect, and the Zacatin, the popular market-place, filled with old-fashioned shops and stalls, is peculiarly characteristic. Our correspondent, Mr. H. Stainer, an artist, who is British Vice-Consul at Granada, has sent us the Sketch that appears on our front page. He relates as follows his personal experiences of the earthquake on Christmas Eve:—

"I was at home, sitting around the fire with my family and some friends, it being Christmas Eve, when just about nine o'clock the house began to move in a most alarming manner. The curtains seemed to be blown by a strong wind, the chandelier swung about, and I could see the ceiling and walls moving; it lasted fifteen or sixteen seconds. I called on my people not to fear, saying it was all over; but it went on increasing. There was scarcely time to run out of doors. But my wife ran to her child's bed, ready to die with her dear boy if she could not save him. When it was all over I made light of it, and got them to dance and play the piano. But we continued to feel renewed shocks, of which there were four or twelve to fifteen that night, pretty severe, though none like the first. Next day we heard of the dreadful havoc in the neighbouring towns. In this city, when we went out, it was a curious sight to see hundreds of people huddled together around fires. The fortunate made themselves comparatively comfortable, but many of them had been sleeping out of doors in shelters of any kind they could put together, made of canvas, rags, planks, matting, or whatever they could get. They were calling on the saints to help them, while processions of priests went on chanting and the people responding in chorus. We received, day after day, from the country around, most heart-rending accounts of families buried alive, and of the survivors enduring great hardships, as the night and the next day were bitterly cold, with fierce howling wind and rain. The poor people kept wandering about, mad with fear, and calling on their dear friends and relatives, who lay buried in the ruins—some, perhaps, alive—while pitiful cries and groans were heard during that fearful night. Many were got out alive; but, no doubt, many others died a lingering death. The details are sickening and heartrending in the extreme. Fresh shocks of earthquake were again and again felt, prolonging the terror for two or three weeks. The huts and tents at Granada have now been taken down, since the people venture to return to their houses. The King was at Alhama this morning (Jan. 10), and is expected to-day at Granada."

In a constitution adopted on Tuesday for Aberystwith University College, it is provided that women shall not only be admitted to all the benefits of the College, but be eligible to sit in the governing bodies.

Deputy Surgeon-General Alfred M. Tippetts, of the Army Medical Staff, who was mentioned in despatches for his services in the last Afghan war, has been appointed on the staff of Major-General Willis, commanding the Northern District, as principal medical officer.

The Association of Assistant Mistresses in High Schools held its second annual general meeting, last Saturday, at the North London Collegiate School for Girls, Camden-road. This association, which has been established to improve the position of assistant mistresses with respect to salaries, hours of work, and other matters, and to give opportunities for social intercourse, already numbers over 450 members. The president, Mrs. Hankin, gave an address; and Mrs. Bryant, D.Sc., was elected president for the ensuing year.



A curious difference between English and Continental law has again been made clear by the decision given by the "Tribunal de Commerce" of Brussels, according to which some English dealers, who attempted to sell their extract of meat in Belgium as Baron Liebig's brand, placing a photograph of the late Baron Liebig on their jars against the expressed will of the present Baron Liebig and the Liebig Company, are prohibited from either using the name Liebig, or the title Baron Liebig, or the photograph, the exclusive use of which had been granted by Baron Liebig to the well-known Liebig's Extract of Meat Company.

Sir Edmund Currie gave last Saturday, at the weekly meeting of the Metropolitan Asylums Board, an emphatic denial to the charges reported to have been brought against the management of the Darenth Camp Hospital by Mr. Nathan Robinson. These charges were of a most serious character. They alleged that there was a deficiency in the supply of clean linen, that the meat was bad and improperly cooked, that there were no proper baths, and that the sanitary arrangements were scandalously inadequate. All these allegations Sir Edmund Currie categorically denies on his own authority and on that of Mr. Russell Rogers, solicitor to the board, who visited the camp, and drew up a report.

THE AFGHAN BOUNDARY COMMISSION: SKETCHES BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, MR. W. SIMPSON.

GATE OF MAIAMAI.

TOMB OF OMAR KHAYYOUM, THE PERSIAN POET, AT NISHAPORE.

BAZAAR AT SHAHRUD.

SKATING PARTIES.

1. A Party who would like to try.
2. Parties who have made up their minds to try.
3. A Party who is invited by post to try.
4 and 5. Parties who object to Skating.
6. Parties who don't.
7. Parties who are too lazy.
8. A diffident Party.

BIRTH.

On the 18th inst., at Berkhampsted, Lady Richard Grosvenor, of a daughter.

DEATH.

On the 21st inst., at 47, Lancaster-gate, Hyde Park, in her 81st year, Eliza Chitty, widow of the late Thomas Chitty, of the Inner Temple.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, is Five Shillings for each announcement.*

THE VALE OF TEARS.—DORÉ'S Last Great PICTURE, completed a few days before he died. NOW on VIEW at the DORÉ GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street, with his other great pictures. Ten to Six Daily. 1s.

ANNO DOMINI, by EDWIN LONG, R.A.—This great Work is NOW ON VIEW, together with other important works, at the GALLERIES, 168, New Bond-street. Ten to Six. Admission, 1s.

SALON PARISIEN, 160, NEW BOND-STREET, W. JULES BASTIEN-LEPAGE'S LAST UNFINISHED WORK; also the celebrated Collection of Pictures by JAN VAN BEERS. Amongst them being "La Sirène," "Embarquez," "Little Jack Horner," "Peace with Honour," "Flirtation," &c. Also including his 300 Landscapes, besides Paintings and Sculptures by other eminent foreign artists, are now on view. Admission, 1s.

UNDER ROYAL PATRONAGE.

JAPANESE VILLAGE,

ALBERT-GATE, HYDE PARK.

ELEVEN to TEN. ONE SHILLING.

MILITARY BAND.

WEDNESDAYS, HALF-A-CROWN.

MONTE CARLO.—MUSICAL SEASON (CONCERTS, REPRESENTATIONS).
In addition to the usual Concerts, directed by Monsieur Romeo Accursi, the Société des Bains de Mer de Monaco has authorised M. Pasdeloup to arrange a Series of Extraordinary Grand Musical Entertainments (Concerts, Representations) this Winter.
The services of the following distinguished Artistes have been already retained:—

Mesdames Krauss,	Messieurs Faure,
" Devriès,	" Vergnet,
" Salla,	" Capoul,
" Donadio,	" Bjorksténn,
" Frank-Duvernoy,	" Couturier,
" Belloca,	" Villaret,
" Simonnet.	&c.

Added to which the celebrated Instrumentalists will appear:
VIOLINISTS:
Mons. Sivori, Mons. Marsik, Miss N. Gerpenter, American artiste, 1st Conservatoire Prize, 1883.
PIANISTS: Mons. Planté, Mons. Th. Ritter, Madame Essipoff.
HARPIST: Mons. Hasselmans.
These Extraordinary Representations will be given each Wednesday and Saturday, commencing the end of January and terminating the middle of March.
The Classical Concerts every Thursday.

The GRAND INTERNATIONAL CONCOURS will take place in the following order:—
BI-WEEKLY MATCHES FOR PRIZES.
Jan. 24: Prix de Saint-Quentin. An object of Art, added to a Poule of 50f.
Jan. 27: Prix Yeo. A Purse of 500f., added to a Poule of 50f.
Jan. 31: Prix Saint Trivier. An object of Art, with Poule of 50f.
Feb. 3: Prix Robert. A Purse of 200f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 7: Prix Hopwood. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 10: Prix Lafond. A Purse of 500f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 12: Prix Esterhazy. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 16: Prix du Comité. A Purse of 500f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 21: Prix Canaston. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 24: Prix Drevon. A Purse of 500f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 28: Prix Dorl. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Mar. 3: Prix de Mars. A Purse of 500f. and a Poule of 50f.
Mar. 7: Prix Pelton. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Mar. 10: Prix W. Call. A Purse of 500f., added to a Poule of 50f.
GRAND CLOSING PRIZES.
March 12 and 13: Grand Prix de Clôture. A Purse of 4000f. added to 100f. entrance; Second Prize, 1000f.; Third Prize, 700f.; Fourth, 300f.
A. BLONDIN, Secretary.

NEWS FROM NICE.—The weather is really splendid, the temperature ranging from 60 deg. to 65 deg. in the shade. The sun shines almost perpetually, and its warm rays makes life enjoyable to all, and more especially to those who have by illness or otherwise sought its influence.
There has been an almost entire absence of rain for several months, but this has not interfered with the sanitary arrangements of the city, as its streets and roads are daily watered from the mountain stream of the Vesubie, which is also used for flushing the drains, which are so disinfected by addition, ceased of disinfecting chemical compounds.
The streets were never so clean and tidy, and the average mortality of the city is less than many fashionable towns in England.
Four resident English medical men are in practice here, and would be willing to communicate with any intending visitors desirous of satisfying their nervous fears as to the healthfulness of the town by addressing Doctors West, Sturge, Wakefield, or Waters, or Mr. Nicholls, the English qualified chemist here. In future, there will be an authorised tribunal for this purpose, as a hygienic society of medical men French, English, and others, is now in course of formation.
The Prolongation of the Promenade des Anglais is complete, and forms one of the finest drives in the Riviera. The police force has been reorganised.
The Italian Theatre, a very handsome building, has been reconstructed and enlarged, and a grand ball of inauguration will be given in February.
The Casino Theatre is giving its entertainments; and the Théâtre des Français, of which Mr. Cortelazzo is the able Director, has an excellent Troupe de Comédie, as also some star artistes for the Opéra Comique.
The Jetty Promenade is, they say, to be immediately rebuilt. The Races will take place shortly. The renowned Carnival will surpass all others, and the Regattas will form an important part of the attractions, particulars of which anon.
The visitors are daily arriving in increased numbers to this bright and sunny land.

THE PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Mrs. LANGTRY.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Edgar Bruce. Season under the direction of Mr. Henry E. Abbey. EVERY EVENING, at a Quarter to Nine, will be produced a Drama in Three Acts, adapted from the French of Alexandre Dumas, called PRINCESS GEORGE. Characters by Mr. Coghlan, Mr. F. H. Macklin, Mr. Carne, Mr. Smedley, Mr. C. W. Somerset, Mr. Crisp, Mr. Dalzell, Mr. Weatherby; Miss Amy Roselle, Miss Kate Pattison, Miss Helen Mathews, Miss Annie Rose, Miss Rosina Phillips, Mrs. John Billington, and MRS. LANGTRY. The Play produced under the direction of Mr. Coghlan. Doors open at half-past Seven; Comedietta, TOM NOBBY'S SECRET, at Eight; PRINCESS GEORGE at a Quarter to Nine. Carriages at 10.30. Box-Office open daily from Eleven to Five. No fees. Telephone 3705.—THE PRINCE'S THEATRE, Coventry-street, W.

PRINCESS'S THEATRE.—MR. WILSON BARRETT, Lessee and Manager.—EVERY EVENING, at 7.45, HAMLET. Messrs. Wilson Barrett, Speakman, Dewhurst, Willard, Clifford Cooper, Frank Cooper, Cranford, &c., and George Barrett; Mesdames Eastlake, Gregory, &c., and M. Leighton. Doors open at 7.15. Box-office, 9.30 to Five. No fees. Matinées, this day (Saturday), Jan. 24, and Saturdays, Feb. 7 and 21, at 1.30. Business Manager, J. H. Cobbe.

MASKELYNE and COOKE, EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, give their performance EVERY AFTERNOON at Three; and on the Evenings, at Eight, of Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Mr. Maskelyne's New Programme includes a new sketch, entitled THE PAKIRS OF BENARES AND THEIR BRAZEN ORACLE, introducing many Novel Effects and Startling Illusions, differing entirely in character from any previously witnessed. Stalls, 5s.; Reserved Seats, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Balcony, 1s.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.
EVERY NIGHT AT EIGHT O'CLOCK.
MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and SATURDAY at THREE also.
THE
MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS'
TWENTIETH ANNUAL CARNIVAL OF MUSIC AND FUN.
The Monstre Holiday Programme. This and EVERY NIGHT at Eight.
MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and SATURDAY at Three and Eight.
All New and Beautiful Songs.
New Budget of Screamingly Funny Stories. New Comic Sketches.
New and Important Additions to the Great Company.

ST. JAMES'S GRAND HALL,
REGENT-STREET and PICCADILLY.
TUESDAY AFTERNOON NEXT, JAN. 27, at 2.30; TUESDAY NIGHT at 8.10.
MR. FREDERICK BURGESS'S TWENTIETH ANNUAL MUSICAL and DRAMATIC FETE, upon which occasion Two Programmes of the most attractive character will be presented, in which the following extraordinary combination of eminent artists will take part:—Miss Alice Lingard, Mrs. Billington, Miss E. Farren, Miss Constance Loseby, Miss Florence St. John, Mrs. Frederick Burgess (nee Miss Ellen Meyrick), Mr. James Fernandez, Mr. Charles Warner, Mr. Fred Leslie, Mr. Harry Waldauer, Mr. Walter Joyce, Mons. Marius, Mr. Harry Paulton, Mr. Arthur Roberts, Mr. George Barrett, Mr. J. M. Dallas, Mr. W. Penley, Mr. Lionel Brough, and Mr. Edward Terry. An entirely new and beautiful Musical Entertainment will also be given by the Moore and Burgess Minstrels. Tickets for all parts of the Hall, and also for Reserved Seats, can be secured at Ambrose Austin's Universal Ticket Office, St. James's Hall.

ST. JAMES'S GRAND HALL.
On TUESDAY AFTERNOON NEXT, JAN. 27, at 2.30; TUESDAY NIGHT at 8.10.
MR. FREDERICK BURGESS'S TWENTIETH ANNUAL MUSICAL and DRAMATIC FETE, when nearly every Musical and Dramatic Artist of Celebrity now in London will appear. New and beautiful music will be presented by the magnificent choir and orchestra of the Moore and Burgess Minstrels.
IMPORTANT NOTICE.
TICKETS for all parts of the Hall, and for all Numbered and Reserved Seats, at St. James's Grand Hall, Tuesday Afternoon and Night, JAN. 27, can now be secured at Austin's Office, St. James's Hall, daily, from 9.30 till 6.30. Visitors from the country may secure tickets by post on sending P.O.O. or cheque, together with a stamped and directed envelope addressed to Ambrose Austin, St. James's Hall, to whom all orders or cheques are to be made payable.

THE AFGHAN BOUNDARY COMMISSION.

General Sir Peter Lumsden, the British Commissioner, with the officers and gentlemen of his party, and with the military escort sent from India to meet him, is on the banks of the Murghab, on the northern frontier of Afghanistan, waiting for the arrival of General Zelenoy, the Russian Commissioner. They will scarcely be able to commence their work before March. Our Special Artist, Mr. William Simpson, accompanied the Commissioner all the way from England, by the route of Odessa and the Black Sea, Tiflis, the Caspian Sea, Teheran, and along the north parts of Eastern Persia and Khorassan to Meshed, and thence to Sarakhs, on the Afghan frontier. The long journey on horseback from Teheran eastward, as we hope our readers will recollect, gave Mr. Simpson opportunities of sketching many places of interest, and many interviews with Persian local grandees and the people of those countries. We still have a few of his Sketches taken in October and November on that road, three of which are now published as Illustrations of Oriental life, and of towns which were flourishing and famous in the palmy days of the Persian monarchy, but which have decayed through centuries of misrule and social declension. Shahrud, one of these towns, is even now a place of some importance, as "a connecting link between Central Asia, Meshed, Herat, and the Caspian, through Asterabad. A considerable commerce with Russia passes along this line, and there are a number of Russian merchants in Shahrud. There is a fort of mud walls. The bazaars are outside the fort, and there is a large suburb of walled-in gardens, which covers a considerable space. All these gardens, as well as the town, are supplied by water carried by small artificial streams, of which there seems to be a plentiful supply." Our Artist further says the bazaars of Persia are all covered in with arches. At Teheran, and the towns he has passed through which were large enough to boast of a bazaar, they have all been covered. The principal object in this is to keep out the sun in the hot weather. Shahrud is at present under a process of improvement. "No place could have improved along the road we have come while Turkoman raids went on, but that is now a thing of the past, and we notice buildings in progress in most of the towns. This is particularly the case at Shahrud, where Nowshirwan Khan, the Governor, seems to take an active interest in his district, and under his auspices bazaars and serais are being constructed."

"The village of Maiamai is the second nearest to the east of Shahrud, and is consequently nearer to the Turkomans, whose raids spread such terror in the past. I sketched this gate because it was picturesque, but I also saw that it told a tale of danger. It is the inside of the gate, and it will be seen that originally it had been a portal of considerable size, with a pointed brick arch. This large gate had evidently been looked upon as insecure, and a contraction was thought necessary. The arched gate was therefore filled up, and a smaller one formed; wooden beams were laid across to form lintels, thus forming a square-topped entrance, to which a couple of strong wooden folding-doors were added. Either the Turkomans must have been more frequent in their visits or more daring in their acts, for the entrance has been again reduced, this time with an arched top, composed partly of stone and brick. The massive wooden doors of the second gateway had been thought strong enough, and although of a size far too large for the last entrance, they had been left to do duty. The door is now so low that I had to slightly bend my head as I passed. When a raid occurred, there was a frantic rush made for the gate by all who were on the outside; for whoever was caught became a prisoner, and was carried off into slavery. Hence, the door had to be left open, as a place of refuge, to the last moment, and its smallness would prevent a rush of the enemy, who might have entered with the last of the fugitives, and thus taken the whole village. The Turkomans were always on horseback, and they could not have passed in without dismounting, while a rush of a sufficient number to take the village was not likely. This may have been the reason for the lowness of the doorway."

The name of Omar Khayyoum, an elegant didactic and philosophical poet of the most renowned period of Persian literature, is not entirely unknown to English readers. Mr. Fitzgerald's able translation of his melodious quatrains, published by Mr. Bernard Quaritch, of Piccadilly, a few years ago, engaged the attention of qualified critics and scholars. Our Artist, in his brief stay at Nishapore, a town of Khorassan, where Omar Khayyoum died, went to visit the tomb of the poet, of which he sends us a Sketch—sending also to Mr. Quaritch a small tribute of rose-leaves plucked on the spot. The tomb is a recess of plastered brick, at the east side of a building which contains the sepulchre of an Imamzadeh, or son of an Imam, brother to the Imam Reza, whose sacred shrine is in the city of Meshed. This building, which has a dome, covered with blue enamel, directly over the tomb of the Imamzadeh, is close to the ruined walls of the old town of Nishapore, about two miles from the present inhabited town.

The twenty-fourth annual exhibition of the Glasgow Institute of the Fine Arts will open on Feb. 3.

It has been decided by the Council of the Royal Academy that the works of the outsiders must be sent in on March 27, 28, and 30, and the works of members on April 6. Instead of the three "varnishing" days hitherto customary, members will for the future only have two.

Messrs. Hart and Co., of Paternoster-row, have published a work of great interest, being the first volume of "The Lark," edited by W. C. Bennett, containing above three hundred songs, ballads, and recitations, by English and American authors of note.

Some lectures on sculpture are announced for delivery at the Royal Academy during the month of February. The lecturers on these occasions will be Mr. C. T. Newton, C.B., Mr. R. Stuart Poole, LL.D., Mr. Hamo Thorneycroft, A.R.A. (who takes for his subject Imitation is the Means, not the End of Art), and Mr. J. Boehm, R.A. Lectures on architecture by Mr. R. S. Poole, Mr. G. F. Bodley, A.R.A., Mr. F. C. Penrose, Mr. G. Aitchison, A.R.A., and Mr. Waterhouse, A.R.A., will complete the session 1884-5.

The Holyhead steamer Admiral Moorsom, belonging to the London and North-Western Railway Company, has been wrecked by collision in the Irish Sea. Whilst crossing from Dublin with passengers and crew, numbering thirty-five, and a quantity of live stock, she was run into by the American ship Santa Clara, which carried away her paddle-box, masts, and funnel, and so completely disabled her that the passengers and crew took to the boats, the captain having fallen or jumped overboard. Fourteen men in a boat were picked up by the Santa Clara and taken to Holyhead. Subsequently five persons, including a woman and child, were taken off the wreck of the Admiral Moorsom when it was on its beam ends, and landed at Queenstown; and eleven men who escaped in a boat were picked up by the Norwegian vessel, Stanley. The number of the lost is five. From the narratives of survivors, it would appear that the course of the Admiral Moorsom was shifted to keep clear of another vessel, on passing at the stern of which the steamer was run into by the Santa Clara

SKATING PARTIES.

The brief opportunity, soon interrupted by a change of weather, for this healthful and exhilarating exercise, was enjoyed in the North of England, in the first week of January, by large numbers of persons; the ice, however, was seldom hard enough for safety, and in Lancashire and Yorkshire ten or twelve lives were lost by its breaking under the weight of skaters. Our Artist has applied his humorous fancy to delineate various species of "skating parties," taking the liberty, by the way, to perpetrate a confessed, though still common, solecism in language by using the word "party" for an individual person, which is only admissible in a relative sense, as where a person is said to be "a party" to a certain transaction. The fastidious reader will perhaps forgive this slight verbal inaccuracy for the sake of a little harmless joking, as well in the special descriptive titles as in the amusing Sketches, which are fairly typical of different characters and classes interested more or less in a favourite pastime of the winter season. The central group is very pleasing; it consists of a young lady, a pretty girl, seated in the back shop of a country ironmonger, trying on a new pair of skates which the tradesman is adjusting to her neat little foot, while the young gentleman who accompanies her is watching the fit with a critical and complacent air; these are "parties" who have evidently made up their minds to try. The poor little boy outside the shop-door is one who would like to possess a pair of skates for his own use, and turns a desiring eye to those suspended for sale at a price beyond his wildest dreams of pocket-money, for they are marked twelve shillings, and he has only fivepence in the world; he might as well think of buying or hiring a horse to ride. There is another indoor scene, in which a young lady has unexpectedly got an invitation by letter to join some friends in a social skating party on the pond in their private grounds, and is thoughtfully examining the skates that she used last year, meditating whether she can put sufficient confidence in her own skill to risk a public display. Of those who "object to skating," besides the timid and consciously awkward persons who might enjoy the free use of their limbs if they would venture to practise the art, there are several distinct specimens, the stout old sailor with the wooden leg is no coward, but is manifestly incapacitated for this mode of progression. The elderly maiden lady, who never did such things in her youth, and whose imagination is filled with stories of disasters on the treacherous ice, prefers the comfortable security of her own fireside, and blames other people for "tempting Providence," as she says, by going the way of danger. There are two lazy gentlemen at their Club, one of whom likes dozing in an easy-chair, the other likes crossing his legs, sipping a glass of liquor, and smoking a cigar, with the unread newspaper dropping from his nerveless hand, after a night of dissipation which has left him in a languid condition; and there is a diffident man, rather past middle age, who doubts whether he can pretend any longer to emulate the nimble feats which delight some of the younger generation. All these non-skaters may be left in pence to consult the dictates of prudence or the bent of their peculiar disposition; it is quite a matter of taste and private judgment. The youthful, the strong, the high-spirited, of both sexes, if they like to take the trouble, if they are not afraid of falls, and if they will be careful about the condition of the ice, can obtain in settled frosty weather—though we do not get that every winter—a real pleasure in the sensation of swiftly gliding, with the slightest effort beyond that of preserving a graceful balance, over the glassy surface of congealed water, and feel it a joyful addition to their physical powers. Skating or sliding, like swimming in the water or sailing over it, and like swinging in the air, seems to be a temporary compensation for the absence of that faculty of flying which is given to the birds. The human biped, in walking on earth, has to put up with a tedious mode of locomotion compared to that with which many other animals have been endowed. We instinctively long to soar and to glide; our bodies are something of a burden, and our motion, if not fatiguing, is too slow for the mind to be content with its effect. No wish or taste is more natural than that of indulgence in easy speed, which is the purest form of simple bodily sport. The art of skating cannot, in our uncertain English climate, be brought to such perfection, or employed in such long journeys, as in some other countries; but its judicious practice is a most agreeable incident of winter, and the finest remedy for chills and colds.

GALLANT DEEDS.

The Board of Trade have awarded their bronze "Gallantry" medal, together with a sum of money, to Mrs. Jane Whyte, in recognition of her praiseworthy services on the occasion of the wreck of the steam-ship William Hope, of Dundee, in Aberdour Bay, during a heavy gale on Oct. 28, 1884. Mrs. Whyte was the only person on the shore when the vessel stranded, and a rope being thrown to her by the crew she, at great risk to her life, waded into the breakers, caught it, and passed it round her body, with the intention of tying it to a log lying further up the beach, when other persons arrived on the spot, with whose assistance the crew of the vessel were enabled to land.

The Mayor of Exeter on Saturday last presented Frank Shooter, the superintendent of the public bathing place, with a gold medal and £150, in recognition of the numerous rescues from drowning which he has made. In recognition of his courage the Town Council raised his wages, the Royal Humane Society have given him a silver medal, and the people of Exeter subscribed the gift presented last Saturday night.

Stoke-on-Trent has also its hero—Mr. Price, a chimney-sweep. His last feat was the rescue of eight boys who had broken through the ice into deep water, and all of whom apparently would have drowned but for his boldness and promptitude. This young man, well known in the neighbourhood as a swimmer, dashed in among them and clutched two of them—a pretty good handful for any swimmer. Two more, however, managed to get hold of him, and with all four of these he struggled ashore. A second plunge might have had a different termination but that a bystander happened to have a halter with him. He had got hold of a second couple, when a third boy seized him by the hair of his head, and he was pulled under. Fortunately the halter was thrown to them, and two of the three were pulled ashore with it, Price himself landing the third. Another boy was still clinging to the broken edge of the ice, and was just slipping down, when the chimney-sweep, in response to his heartrending cries, again went in, and just reached him in time. The Globe has opened a subscription for the heroic chimney-sweep.

A binocular glass has been awarded by the Board of Trade to Captain Don Miguel Baldo, of the Spanish steam-ship Cortes, of Barcelona, in acknowledgment of his humanity and kindness to the shipwrecked crew of the Anatolia, of West Hartlepool, whom he picked up at sea on Nov. 6 last.

Mr. Burdett-Coutts presided last Saturday at the first anniversary dinner of the Columbia Market Fruit and Potato Salesmen's Association, and, in returning thanks for the toast of Baroness Burdett-Coutts and himself, said he believed the market had before it such a career of success as would place it in a position superior to that of any market in the metropolis.

PARISIAN SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Tuesday, Jan. 20.

Of late, one has often been tempted to speak ill of Paris, to ape Jeremiah, and rehash Juvenal. But, like the incidents which provoke our reprobation, our anger is of short duration and soon forgotten, and we begin once more to admire and wonder at this vivacious city, where letters and art and the things of intellect have undisputed precedence. You may think, perhaps, on the strength of inevitably misleading special-wire correspondence, that the Parisians are discussing the unpleasing début of the new Minister of War at the Chamber, the preparations for the senatorial elections, the speeches of M. Constans or of M. Paul Bert, the interminable Tonquin difficulty or the commercial crisis. These are not the topics of the day, nor even in the gravest journals do such subjects hold the chiefest place; the topic is M. Alexandre Dumas' new comedy, "Denise," which was produced with complete success at the Comédie Française last night. The Londoners, I know, have come to take a great interest in the stage; but even they can scarcely imagine the curiosity excited amongst the Parisians by the announcement of a new play by a man like Dumas, who is famous for his bold and novel theorising. "Denise," like all Dumas' pieces, is more than a play with a moral: it is an ethical thesis. In a few words, here is the plot. M. De Bardannes, a rich country gentleman, who, after a youth more or less dissipated in accordance with the traditions of men of his rank, has settled down to serious life, falls in love with Mdlle. Denise Brissot, the daughter of his steward, who had been recommended to him by Madame De Tauzette, a brilliant coquette, and the first flame of M. De Bardannes. This Madame De Tauzette has a son, Fernand, who is rather disreputable. She asks M. De Bardannes to give his sister Marthe in marriage to Fernand; M. De Bardannes refuses, knowing that Fernand is unworthy, and Madame De Tauzette replies by casting suspicion on the reputation of Denise. In the course of the very dramatic and touching plot, M. De Bardannes discovers that Fernand has lied to save the honour of Denise. What is to be done? Is Fernand to be forced to marry Denise? Is M. De Bardannes to marry her, in spite of all prejudices? M. Dumas adopts the latter course, and so obtains a happy if not a very satisfactory dénouement. "Denise" is admirably played by Mesdames Pauline Granger, Bartet, Pierson, the brothers Coquelin, Baillet, Got, and Worms. During four acts of conversation, M. Dumas never allows our interest to flag for a moment, and, while the piece is preponderantly emotional, brilliance of dialogue and witty repartee do not lose their rights.

While M. Dumas has crowned his career with a play as powerful as any he ever wrote, French literature has lost one of its shining lights in M. Edmond About, who died last week, at the age of fifty-six, only a few weeks after his election to the French Academy. About has been bombarded with the title of "petit fils de Voltaire"; the implied praise is perhaps exaggerated. He was, however, the brilliant genius of the Empire. Augier, Feuillet, Dumas, Sardou, worked their way up slowly; in 1851 About, in his first book, "La Grèce Contemporaine," revealed himself a full-blown genius, to the astonishment and admiration of everybody. In "Tolla," "Germaine," "Les Mariages de Paris," "Le Progrès," "La Question Romaine," he remained the sparkling and witty author of "La Grèce Contemporaine," and for ten years he continued to hold that position in the public esteem. After the war, he began to waste his talent in political journalism and business speculations, and now, with two or three exceptions, his works have taken up their abodes in the book-boxes along the quais of Paris, that Appian Way of literary royalties. As a writer, About had Sidney Smith's great and rare quality of writing in an entertaining manner on dry subjects: his pamphlet on taxation is a model in this respect.

In Paris, the children who provide the journalists with mots are quaintly precocious. Witness the little girl of six, who, seeing the snow falling in fine flakes, said, "Mamma, look! The angels are dropping their face-powder!" I cite this remark simply in order to intimate that we have been having snow and wintry weather during the past week. T. C.

The German Emperor, and all the Princes and Princesses and Knights of the Black Eagle, and numerous deputations from German and foreign regiments, attended the funeral service of the late Prince Augustus of Würtemberg on the 16th inst. in the Garrison Church. The Emperor looked well, and stood during the long Liturgy. Prince and Princess William arrived at the Castle in Berlin on the same day. The Emperor has been confined to his bed with a cold caught at the funeral service.—On the 16th inst. the opening of the Prussian Diet took place. The Speech from the Throne dealt exclusively with domestic affairs.—Notwithstanding a protest against the new colonial policy, the German Reichstadt passed the Imperial Naval Estimates on Tuesday.

In the sitting of the Lower House yesterday week Herr Von Koeller, Dr. Von Heereman, and Herr Von Benda were re-elected President and Vice-Presidents by acclamation.—In the Lower House on Monday the Budget for the ensuing year was discussed on its first reading. The Minister of Finance, in addressing the House, declared that in the Budget for 1883-4 the actual receipts exceeded the estimates by 3,000,000 marks. The total surplus, chiefly arising from the railway receipts, amounted to 20,000,000 marks, which would be applied in the redemption of the Railway Debt. For the current year a surplus of 10,000,000 marks might be expected.

The Empress of Austria and Princess Valérie, after several weeks' absence, arrived in Vienna from Pesth on the 15th inst. The Emperor arrived next day. The Austrian Crown Prince and Crown Princess will start on a tour in the middle of February. They will visit Munich, Brussels, the Hague, and then embark at Rotterdam for Alexandria. After visiting Cairo, Smyrna, Greece, and Corfu, they will return home via Trieste.—Count Taaffe, the Austrian Premier, gave a grand ball last Saturday night. Among the guests invited were several of the Archdukes and the members of the diplomatic body, the latter including Sir Augustus Paget, the British Ambassador, and Lady Paget.—At the opening of the Austrian Parliament on Tuesday, an Anti-Socialist Bill was introduced by the Government.

The Dutch East Indian Budget was passed by the First Chamber of the States-General on Tuesday.

The Swedish Parliament was opened on Monday. The Speech from the Throne announced the creation of a new department of State for trade, manufactures, and agriculture; and the presentation of bills for increasing the navy and definitively regulating the salaries of national school teachers. The Budget is drawn up on the basis of a reduction of 30 per cent in the land tax. No fresh taxation or increase of existing taxes is proposed.—In Norway the Ministerial crisis has terminated, the differences between M. Sverdrup, Minister of State, and M. Daal, Chief of the War Department, with regard to the army organisation having been adjusted.

Major-General Count Ignatieff has been appointed Governor-General of Eastern Siberia, in the room of Lieutenant-General Anutchin, who recently resigned.—The Finnish Diet was formally opened on Monday by General Hayden, the Governor-General, in the name of the Emperor. The Speech from the Throne, which was drawn up in the Russian language, was read by the Governor-General, after which it was translated into Swedish and Finnish by one of the members of the Senate.

The British Chargé-d'Affaires at Athens, while walking with his wife in a park which was not open to the public, was assaulted and struck by a gendarme, who ordered him to leave. The King and the principal Ministers promptly expressed their regret at the incident; and the offender is to be publicly dismissed from the service, in the presence of the entire force, and then imprisoned for two months.

Prince Waldemar of Denmark dined with the Sultan on Sunday evening. On the previous day his Majesty conferred upon the Prince the decoration of the Grand Cordon of the Osmanieh, set in brilliants.

The United States Senate has passed the bill placing General Grant on the retired list of the army. Nine members voted against the bill, all being Democrats.—The House of Representatives has passed the Chinese Indemnity Fund Bill, authorising the President to return to the Chinese Government 583,400 dols., being the residue of the fund in question. The Senate will concur in this measure.—The Agricultural Department reports that last year's cereal crops were the largest ever raised in the United States, wheat yielding 513 million bushels, oats 583 millions, Indian corn 1795 millions.—Henry Irving has had good success in Chicago, where he has been playing for a fortnight. His representation of Eugene Aram has been very popular. "Richelieu" is played this week.—The infirmary building of a lunatic asylum at Kankakee, in Illinois, has been burnt down. Seventeen of the patients perished.—Last year 453,983 emigrants reached the United States, being 100,000 less than in the previous year.

A comparative statement of the industries of the Dominion of Canada for the years 1878 and 1884 show a remarkable increase. The number of people employed in these industries in 1878 was 26,764; in 1884 it had increased to 47,828. The wages paid in 1878 amounted to 7,290,000 dols.; in 1884 they had reached 15,189,000 dols. The products of these industries were in 1878 of the value of 32,554,000 dols.; and in 1884 they reached a total of 77,543,000 dols. The capital employed in 1878 was 24,353,000 dols.; and in 1884 it was 39,488,000 dols.

The Duke and Duchess of Connaught arrived at Calcutta on the 14th inst. The Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphs:—The Duke and Duchess of Connaught have been busily employed in seeing all that is to be seen in and near Calcutta. On Friday the Duke reviewed the troops of the garrison. On Saturday they accompanied the Viceroy to Barrackpore. On Sunday they crossed the river to Chandernagore and lunched with the French Governor. On Monday they returned to Calcutta, and in the evening attended a ball given in their honour by the European community. They started for Meerut on Tuesday evening.—An important addition has been made to the Indian railway system by opening the Bengal and North-Western line. The ceremony took place at Myrwa, a place on the boundary of the two provinces. Both Lieutenant-Governors were present. Mr. Rivers Thompson described the ceremony as marking an historical epoch in Indian railway enterprise, and the new line, he said, was certainly the largest and most important railway based upon purely private enterprise.

It is stated in a telegram from Shanghai that the agreement between Corea and Japan provides that Corea shall pay an indemnity of 500,000 taels. Japan is to place a garrison of 1500 soldiers permanently in Seoul. The Corean authorities have issued a proclamation, in which they absolve Japan from all blame in connection with the recent disturbances.

Rear-Admiral Edye has been appointed Admiral-Superintendent of Devonport Dockyard.

The Croydon Corporation announced last Saturday that the Mayor had received a notification from the Home Secretary to the effect that her Majesty had been pleased to direct that a separate Commission of the Peace be issued, creating a Borough Bench for Croydon.

Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall, and Co. are rendering great service in the periodic publication of Shakespeare's plays, as reprinted verbatim from the first folio, bearing date 1623. "Hamlet" and "Romeo and Juliet" have appeared opportunely, to be followed by "As You Like It" and "Cymbeline."

Damages to the amount of £10,000 have been awarded by a Middlesex jury to Mr. John Neville Maskelyne, of Maskelyne and Cooke, against Mr. Washington Irving Bishop for libel, the latter having allowed judgment to go by default, and not being represented when the damages were assessed.

Yesterday week the Court of Appeal disallowed the appeal taken by Mr. Yates, the proprietor of the World newspaper, against a judgment obtained against him for a libel on the Earl of Lonsdale. Mr. Yates having stated that he did not intend to carry the case to the House of Lords, he was committed to Holloway Prison as a first-class misdemeanant for four months, according to the sentence passed by the Court of Queen's Bench.

In the new Canadian guide-book, prepared under the authority of the Canadian Government, recently issued, the facts and statistics have been brought down to the latest possible date, and the pamphlet contains some excellent illustrations taken from sketches by Princess Louise. A chapter is devoted to each province, and particulars are given upon every subject that will present itself to the mind of an emigrant.

A meeting of the Victoria Institute was held on Monday evening, when a paper on the "Historical Evidences of the Abramic Migration" was read by Mr. W. Boscawen, in which he gave extracts from the new translations of some tablets discovered by Mr. Rassam during his last visit to the East; these extracts contained a large number of names of persons and cities mentioned in the Bible record of the times to which they referred. Mr. Rassam and several others took part in the discussion which followed.

Miss J. E. Harrison, of Newnham, who for some time past has, with steadily increasing success, been lecturing at the British Museum on Greek Art, has been invited by the managers of the Leicester Museum to give a course in that town. If local museums, and especially those which showed an interest in the formation of a central museum of casts, followed the example of Leicester, a very important step towards raising the standard of public taste would have been made. At the same time, care will need to be taken to secure exponents of classical antiquities capable of throwing life and interest into their subject. Miss Harrison has shown her powers in this particular, as her steadily increasing classes at the British Museum bear witness: and Mr. Newton, C.B., and the other authorities who have encouraged her in her work deserve thanks for having brought into notice a lady who is not only thoroughly acquainted with her subject, but who can show to the world that it is possible—even for a woman—to be learned without pedantry.

MEMBERS OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

Wonderful is the recuperative power of Mr. Gladstone. The period of rest at Hawarden Castle, after the first two Cabinet Councils of the New Year, proved as beneficial as Sir Andrew Clark thought it would. In the teeth of the biting wind the Prime Minister was enabled to attend the services at Hawarden church, where he had the satisfaction of hearing the banns of marriage between the Rev. Stephen Gladstone and Miss Wilson called the first and second times. On Tuesday, the Premier felt strong enough to undertake the railway journey from Chester to London; and, despite the coldness of the weather, the right hon. gentleman looked as hale as of yore when he alighted at the little house in Downing-street to attend the Cabinet Council called to consider the French proposals for a loan of nine millions to Egypt, to be guaranteed by the Great Powers collectively. It was to be noted that Mr. Chamberlain was absent from this Council through indisposition, and that Earl Spencer was detained in Dublin as Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. The Cabinet met again on Wednesday. The upshot of the Ministerial deliberations was believed to be a qualified and conditional agreement to the counter-proposals of France, but a firm stand against any reimposition of the Dual Control on Egypt. Meantime, the public watches with increased interest and anxiety the venturesome advance of Sir Herbert Stewart's corps across the desert in the direction of Khartoum.

Plenty of early birds are in the field to woo the new constituencies. In a mild and gentle manner, suitable to his native Devonshire, Sir Stafford Northcote has been courting the Barnstaple division, which he seeks to represent in the new Parliament. What is there in the air of Devonshire to foster mellifluousness of speech? In action, Devon's sons have many a time fought most valiantly for their country. Can it be that Devonshire cream softens the tongues of Devonshire men? Be that as it may, it is clear that neither Sir Stafford Northcote's amiable deliverance at the Barnstaple Music-Hall on Monday nor his Bideford utterances under the ominous auspices of Mr. Pine Coffin on Tuesday can be accepted as Battle Cries to inspire the Conservative Party to fight and to "conquer again and again."

Mr. Chamberlain's bold bid for the Democratic vote did not escape mild and vague animadversion on the part of Sir Stafford Northcote both at Barnstaple and at Bideford. But he merely nibbled at the questions respecting which the President of the Board of Trade was so outspoken at Ipswich. The Leader of the Opposition in the Commons neglected the opportunity correspondents of the press have not been slow to avail themselves of. Champion in a manner of the Landlords against Utopian and impossible plans of reform, Sir Stafford Northcote failed to take advantage of the opening given him by Mr. Chamberlain to propound and make clear to the public the Conservative proposals for a rational amendment of the Land Laws. He also failed to deliver an obvious retort in the shape of a counter-attack upon Mr. Chamberlain himself for the signal aggrandisement of the class of manufacturers at the expense of their wage-receivers. Other sharper members of the Conservative Party have, however, been quick to recognise the importance of turning the tables on Mr. Chamberlain in this way. Here, indeed, especially at a time of great industrial distress in Birmingham, is a formidable weapon for political argument ready to the hand of those willing, with Lord Randolph Churchill, to raise the standard of a "Tory Democracy."

Sir Stafford Northcote, it should be admitted, protested earnestly at Bideford on Tuesday against the injustice to his party implied by the terms Liberal and Conservative. The right hon. Baronet frankly stated that if the Conservative party desired to maintain their position in the country, and to preserve that which they held dear in the Constitution, it was their duty to remember that they must deal with all the interests of the country in a truly Liberal spirit. Quite so. The Redistribution Bill is a happy instance of what can be brought about by friendly co-operation on the part of the Conservative and Liberal leaders. It is the first step that costs. Henceforth, it may be that both Parties will vie with each other as to which can pass the more rapidly desirable measures of legislative reform. While Sir Stafford Northcote avowed himself thus progressive with regard to home affairs, and virtually a rival reformer of the Government, he hinted dislike of the Colonial policy of the Ministry generally, and claimed that Lord Beaconsfield's administration of foreign affairs contrasted favourably with the embroiled state of things on the Continent since Mr. Gladstone had been in power.

Lord George Hamilton, presiding at the dinner of the Glasgow University Club on Monday, was far more sweeping than his chief in the denunciation of the Government for their alienation of the Colonies, and for their having given offence to Prince Bismarck, who "detested a policy of cant, rant, and humbug." Lord George Hamilton also deprecated the enunciation of "revolutionary theories" by Mr. Chamberlain. Curiously enough, Mr. Bradlaugh, speaking the same evening at Coventry, referred to Mr. Chamberlain's warm welcome of the coming Democratic government, but was of opinion that the people would have to be "educated up" to the habit of self-government before the aristocracy could be supplanted.

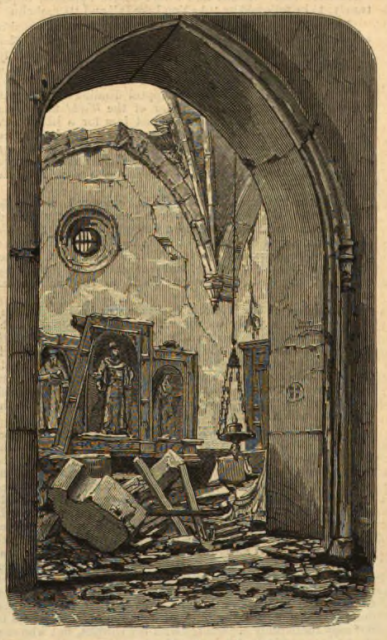
Mr. Bright, fearful lest the new constituencies should not be posted up in the services of the Liberal Party, has rehearsed the articles of his belief afresh in a printed letter, published by the National Press Agency. In this the veteran Reformer has retold more than a thrice-told tale. Mr. Bright says of looming legislation:—

> The Land Laws will be reformed, and much of them reformed out of existence. In past times and now our land laws have been framed to protect the great estates of great families. Great estates lead to great farms, and great farms lead to the result that it is almost impossible for farm-labourers to become farmers, and thus the path of the intelligent and hard-working labourer to an improved position and condition for himself and his family is barred and blocked.
>
> The holding of great estates under entails and settlements, and often heavily mortgaged and burdened, makes it impossible for them to be well cultivated; and thus the demand for labour is lessened, and a better rate of wages is prevented. This whole system of Land Laws must be broken down, and the new and great reform will do little, if it does not get rid, as far as possible, of the mischiefs of the past.
>
> The Game Laws, too, will come under revision. Parliament may accept the principle that the creatures which live on and from the land are the property, if there be any property in them, of the farmer at whose cost and by whose labour the farm is cultivated.

Last week 2876 births and 1855 deaths were registered in London, both having exceeded by 42 the average numbers in the corresponding weeks of the last ten years. There were 47 deaths from smallpox, 27 from measles, 21 from scarlet fever, 14 from diphtheria, 40 from whooping-cough, 8 from enteric fever, and 8 from dysentery.

We are requested to state that the Lords of the Committee of Council on Education have caused a medal to be prepared by Mr. Allan Wyon, from designs by Mr. Poynter, R.A., as a memorial of the founding and endowment of the Whitworth Scholarships by Sir Joseph Whitworth. Their Lordships have also authorised the issue of a copy of this medal to each of the scholars who have held scholarships, and have gone through the prescribed course satisfactorily.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE RUINS OF ALHAMA.



CALLE DE AQUAS, ALHAMA.

PROCESSION OF THE ROSE GARLAND AT GRANADA.

A STREET IN ALHAMA.

CHAPEL OF THE HIGH CHURCH, ALHAMA.

THE TAJO AT ALHAMA.

THE EARTHQUAKE IN SPAIN.

"ONLY THAT ROSE!"

OBITUARY.

THE EARL OF AYLESFORD.

The Right Hon. Heneage Finch, seventh Earl of Aylesford and Baron of Guernsey in the Peerage of Great Britain, J.P. and D.L. for Warwickshire, whose death, at Big Springs, Texas, is announced, had been in declining health for the last year, but nothing serious was apprehended until a few hours before his demise. His Lordship was born Feb. 21, 1849, the eldest son of Heneage, sixth Earl; was educated at Eton; and succeeded, Jan. 10, 1871, to the family honours, conferred by Queen Anne on the celebrated lawyer, the Hon. Heneage Finch. The late Peer's mother, Jane Wightwick, only child of Mr. John W. Knightley, of Offchurchbury, was a Warwickshire heiress. The Earl married, Jan. 8, 1871, Edith, third daughter of Colonel Peers Williams, M.P., of Temple House, Berks, and leaves only two daughters, to the younger of whom, born in 1875, the Princess of Wales stood sponsor. The titles devolve, consequently, on his brother, the Hon. Charles Wightwick Finch, now eighth Earl of Aylesford, born June 7, 1851, who has been twice married, and has issue, by his second wife, a son, Lord Guernsey, and two daughters. The nobleman whose death we record held formerly a Captain's commission in the Warwickshire Cavalry, and was well known but most unfortunate on the turf. At his fine old seat of Packington Hall he entertained, in 1874, the Prince of Wales, and subsequently accompanied his Royal Highness to India.

THE EARL OF DUNDONALD.

The Right Hon. Thomas Barnes Cochrane, eleventh Earl of Dundonald, Baron Cochrane of Dundonald, Lord Cochrane of Paisley and Ochiltree, in the Peerage of Scotland, one of the Representative Peers, died on the 15th inst., at 4, Hyde Park-place. He was born April 18, 1814, and educated at Eton. After serving three years in the Royal Navy, he entered the Army in 1830, and was with the 66th Regiment throughout the rebellion in Canada. His father, Thomas, tenth Earl, better known as Lord Cochrane, was the gallant and distinguished Admiral, whose destruction of Napoleon's ships in the Basque Roads, in 1809, was a very memorable achievement in naval annals. The nobleman whose death we record succeeded to the family honours in 1860. He married, Dec. 1, 1847, Louisa Harriet, daughter of Mr. William Alexander Mackinnon, M.P., of Mackinnon, and had two sons and four daughters; the elder son, Douglas Mackinnon Baillie Hamilton, now twelfth Earl of Dundonald, Captain 3rd Life Guards, born Oct. 29, 1852; married, Sept. 18, 1878, Winifred, daughter of Mr. Robert Bamford-Hesketh, of Gwyrch Castle, Denbighshire, and has one daughter.

THE EARL OF WILTON.

The Right Hon. Arthur Edward Holland Grey Egerton, third Earl of Wilton, Viscount Grey de Wilton, and Baron Grey de Radcliff, in the Peerage of the United Kingdom, Hon. Colonel Duke of Lancaster's Own Yeomanry Cavalry, died on the 18th inst. He was born Nov. 25, 1833, and educated at Eton, and at Christ Church, Oxford. He was formerly Lieutenant, 1st Life Guards. From 1859 to 1865 he sat in the House of Commons for Weymouth, and from 1875 to 1874 for Bath. His politics were Conservative. In 1875 he was created a Peer as Baron Grey de Radcliff, and in 1882 succeeded his father as Earl of Wilton. His Lordship married, in 1858, Lady Elizabeth Charlotte Louisa, eldest daughter of William, second Earl of Craven, but had no issue. His brother and successor, Seymour John Grey, now fourth Earl of Wilton, was born in 1839, and married, in 1862, Laura Caroline, daughter of Mr. William Russell (of the House of Bedford), and has a son, Arthur George, Viscount Grey de Wilton, born 1863, and one daughter.

We have also to record the deaths of—

Colonel John Stephenson Ferguson, 2nd Life Guards, on the 11th inst., in his fiftieth year.

Mr. John Christopher Baron Lethbridge, of Tregcare, Launceston, Cornwall, J.P. and D.L.

The Most Rev. Dr. Quinn, for many years Roman Catholic Bishop of Bathurst, at an advanced age.

Mr. Charles Fetherstonhaugh, of Staffield Hall, Cumberland, J.P. and D.L., on the 10th inst., in his seventy-third year. He served as High Sheriff in 1857.

Mr. William James Hertslet, H.M. Consul for East and West Prussia, Posen, and Silesia, on the 12th inst., at Königsberg. He was for fifty years in the Consular Service.

The Rev. T. Thornton, M.A., late Fellow and Tutor of University College, Durham, Rector of Shadforth, on the 7th inst.

Mr. Henry Charles Coote, F.S.A., Lawyer and Antiquary, on the 4th inst., in his seventieth year. Son of Dr. Coote, advocate in Doctors Commons; he was author of "The Romans of Britain."

Lady Maria Anne Keppel, widow of the Hon. and Rev. Edward Southwell Keppel, M.A., Rector of Quiddenham, Norfolk, and eldest daughter of Nathaniel, second Earl of Leitrim, on the 8th inst., aged eighty-three.

Lady Hardy (Laura), wife of Sir John Hardy, Bart., of Dunstall Hall (elder brother of Lord Cranbrook), and third daughter of Mr. William Holbeck, of Farnborough, Warwickshire, on the 19th inst.

The Rev. Edward Paske, one of the oldest clergymen in the diocese of Norwich, aged ninety-two. He held the living of St. Peter, Creeting, near Bury St. Edmunds, and also of Battisford, for over sixty years.

Mr. James Jones Aston, Q.C., on the 17th inst., after a long illness. Mr. Aston, who was in his sixty-second year, was called to the Bar at the Middle Temple in 1846, and a few years ago was appointed a Queen's Counsel in the County Palatine of Lancashire.

Dowager Lady Ribton (Emily), widow of Sir John Sheppey Ribton, of Woodbrook, Bart., and previously of Mr. Walter Hussey Hill. She was only daughter of Mr. Thomas Quinlan, and was married to Sir John Ribton in 1841. Her death was the result of a carriage accident.

Dr. Evan Buchanan Baxter, Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, and, until recently, Professor of Materia Medica in King's College, on the 14th inst., aged forty. Dr. Baxter was an accomplished scholar. He edited the last edition of "Garrod's Essentials of Materia Medica," and contributed papers of interest and importance to the medical journals.

Mr. William Eliot, head of the firm of Messrs. Eliot, Pearce, and Co., bankers, on the 20th inst., at his residence in Weymouth, in his ninety-second year. The deceased was the oldest Freemason in Europe; in fact, he is believed to be the oldest in the world, having been initiated nearly seventy years ago.

Lady Georgiana Charlotte Fullerton, sister of Earl Granville and the Hon. E. F. Leveson-Gower, M.P., on the 19th inst., at her residence at Bournemouth, aged seventy-two. Her Ladyship had been an invalid for a long time. She married, July 13, 1833, Mr. Alexander George Fullerton, of Ballintoy, county Antrim.

Lady Catherine Georgiana Barrington, wife of the Hon. and Rev. Canon Barrington, Rector of Watton, Herts, at St. Leonards, on the 18th inst. Her Ladyship was the fifth daughter of Thomas, second Earl of Chichester, and was born July 21, 1814. She married, Oct. 26, 1837, the Hon. and Rev. Lowther John Barrington, son of George, fifth Viscount Barrington, by whom she leaves a family.

Mr. Thomas Davison Bland, of Kippax Park, Yorkshire, J.P. and D.L., at his seat near Leeds, on the 10th inst., aged seventy-two. He was the eldest son of Mr. Thomas Davison Bland, of Kippax Park, by Appollonia Mary, his wife, daughter of the sixteenth Lord Stourton, and was grandson of Mr. Thomas Davison, who took the additional surname of Bland on inheriting the estates of his cousin, Sir Hungerford Bland, Bart., of Kippax Park.

Vice-Admiral James Hosken, on the 9th inst., at Ilfracombe, Devon, aged eighty-six years. The deceased officer entered the Royal Navy so far back as 1808, and passed his examination in 1816. In 1836 he took command of the Great Western steam-ship, in which he made sixty-six passages to and from New York; and in 1844 he was appointed to the command of the Great Britain steam-ship. He was promoted to the rank of Captain in the Royal Navy in 1857, became a retired Rear-Admiral in 1875, and a Vice-Admiral in 1879.

THE TROUBLES IN BECHUANALAND.

It is to be hoped that the efforts of Sir Hercules Robinson, Governor of the Cape Colony and High Commissioner of the British Government in South Africa, and of Major-General Sir Charles Warren, R.E., Special Commissioner in Bechuanaland, will be successful in effecting a pacific settlement of the dispute occasioned by the unruly conduct of some of the Boers who have squatted on the lands beyond the western frontier of the Transvaal. These people, it will be recollected, with others of a lawless disposition, have formed themselves into two semi-independent communities, styled the Republics of Stellaland and Goshen; the latter being situated to the north, on the Molopo river, in the territory of a native tribe whose chief, named Montsioa, is considered to have some claim to British protection. It is here that the political difficulty has to be dealt with, as the southern community, that of Stellaland, which is adjacent to the West Griqualand or Diamond Fields province of the Cape Colony, seems disposed to accept the Colonial jurisdiction; and the Government of the Cape, represented by its responsible Ministers, has recently been endeavouring to negotiate with the Boers, at Vryburg and Goshen, for the incorporation of the whole country with its own dominions. The Dutch Government of the Transvaal, or South African Republic, disavows all responsibility for the actions of the Goshen Boers; and it is reported that President Krüger will meet Sir Charles Warren on the frontier to concert measures for the pacification of the country; but there can be no doubt that the Goshenites have been receiving aid and encouragement from some of their friends and kinsmen in the Transvaal. Bechuanaland is a region very difficult of access, its nearest part being quite five hundred miles from any point of the seacoast, and a much greater distance from the Cape, in the very centre of the interior of South Africa; it is a long and narrow strip of country between the Kalahari Desert, to the west, and the Transvaal to the east, hitherto frequented only by a few traders and hunters, but there are English missionary stations among the native tribes. As a route for commerce with the large native population farther north, this line is deemed of considerable prospective importance; and it was therefore kept outside of the Transvaal frontier in the amended convention signed last year by Lord Derby and Sir Hercules Robinson with Mr. Krüger and others in London. The object of Sir Charles Warren's present mission is to enforce the due execution of that arrangement; to investigate the disputed land claims between the native chief and the Boers of Goshen; and, if the latter prove disobedient to lawful authority, to expel them by force, with the aid of a corps of armed volunteers raised in England and in the Cape Colony, and a small force of regular troops. We trust that these extremities will be spared by the timely submission of the Goshenites, and that the proposed annexation of Bechuanaland to the Cape Colony will put an end to every cause of trouble.

Of the Sketches by Mr. H. C. Sepping Wright, which are presented as Illustrations of the recent disturbed state of that country, the first shows the interruption of travelling on the ordinary trade route through Stellaland and Goshen, when those pretended local Republics insisted on levying duties which the traders refused to pay, and the waggons and horses were frequently seized. To avoid such extortions they were often obliged to quit the usual road, which had previously been a free highway, and commerce was greatly hindered. The second sketch is that of a scene witnessed on the eve of the late disturbances in Goshen, when the families of the Boers residing there were sent to the Transvaal for safety. We see the Dutch family leaving their home; everything in the house is put into the waggon. Mrs. Boer sits up on the cartel or bed inside the waggon; the father helps the Kaffir servants in loading up; and the eldest daughter is taking leave of the husband she may never see again. In the distance beyond the oxen is a small troop of armed Boers, ready to act as an escort.

Mr. J. C. Clarke, M.P. for Abingdon, has offered to build, at his own expense, a cottage hospital for the borough, at a cost of about £1000.

THE COURT.

The Queen, with the Duchess of Albany, Princess Beatrice, Prince Edward of Wales, and the members of the Royal household, attended Divine service at Osborne on Sunday morning. The Rev. Henry White, M.A., Chaplain of the Savoy, officiated. Prince Albert Victor of Wales, attended by the Rev. J. Dalton, C.M.G., arrived at Osborne last Saturday; leaving for Cambridge on Monday morning, to resume his studies. The Duchess of Albany, who had been staying for some time with the Queen at Osborne, left on Monday.

The Prince of Wales and the Duke of Edinburgh, attended by Colonel Teesdale, V.C., arrived at Cumberland Lodge last week on a visit to Prince and Princess Christian. The Prince left the Great Park yesterday week upon the conclusion of his visit to Prince and Princess Christian, and, driving to the Windsor station of the Great Western Railway, returned by the 4.10 express to London. Prince Albert Victor, attended by the Rev. J. N. Dalton, arrived at Marlborough House in the afternoon from Sandringham. Their Royal Highnesses received in the evening the Dutch, Belgian, and Swedish Envoys, who, in the names of their Sovereigns, presented to Prince Albert Victor the highest decorations of their respective countries. Last Saturday morning the Prince of Wales was present at a meeting of the members of the standing committee of the trustees of the British Museum. His Royal Highness, attended by Colonel Teesdale, left Marlborough House in the afternoon for Sandringham. The Prince and Princess, accompanied by Prince George and Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud, were present at Divine service on Sunday morning at the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Sandringham. The Rev. Canon Fleming preached. The Swedish and Norwegian Minister, Count Piper, who has been on a visit to the Prince and Princess since Saturday, left Sandringham on Monday morning for London.

The Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh have returned to Eastwell Park, and are about to receive a succession of guests there.

The King of Portugal has created M. De Oliveira, Attaché to the Portuguese Legation in London, Baron De Oliveira.

CITY ECHOES.

Wednesday, Jan. 21.

There is little to remark about the Money Market, the situation having scarcely altered. Large repayments have been made by the public to the Bank of England, and instalments on the New Zealand Loan and other issues have told upon the supply of cash in the market. Beyond this exceptional demand, however, loanable capital has not been in much request; and the fact that at times short money is quoted under 3 per cent per annum, and on other occasions at nearly 4, sufficiently expresses the condition of the market. Three months' bills have been discounted as low as 3¼ per cent. The influence exercised upon the tendency of the Stock Markets by the course of monetary events has been slight, the changes being in response to other considerations. The English Funds have been firm, Consols having at one time touched par, though they are now about ¼ lower than that. In foreign bonds the continued heaviness in Argentine loans has formed the chief incident, both the National and Provincial Banks now having suspended specie payments. Business in Egyptian stocks is checked by the uncertainty in connection with the proposals put forward by the English Government. Railways of all classes have been depreciated in value. Home descriptions have been offered on unfavourable expectations regarding the dividends not yet announced, and on discouraging views about the current half-year's business. American lines have fallen on the further failures in New York, and Canadian have moved in sympathy. Mexican railway stocks also have receded, and there has been a reduction in the Indian issues. There has been little to call for attention in the more miscellaneous securities.

It is only a few months ago that two Lombard-street banks (Bosanquet's and Barnett's) were absorbed by a provincial joint-stock bank, and now Messrs. Glyn's Bank is registered as a joint-stock company. Forty years have elapsed since the passing of the Bank Act; and it is just over fifty years since, by the establishment of the London and Westminster Bank, the joint-stock principle of banking was popularly taken in hand. In the interval, about one half of the private banks then existing have disappeared, while so great has been the growth of joint-stock banks that private banking has become relatively of unimportant dimensions. But Messrs. Glyn's example will deal a heavier blow at the old method than anything which has yet been experienced. While registering as a joint-stock company, the partners retain unlimited liability as partners, and they remain the sole partners except that to qualify to be a joint-stock company in point of numbers some additions have been made from the families of the old partners. Lord Wolverton is a partner for £274,000, Sir Charles Mills for £274,000, Mr. Currie for £249,000, Mr. Pascoe Glyn for £100,000, Mr. Charles Mills for £75,000, Mr. Algernon Mills for £26,000, and two juniors for £1000 each. No partner may sell out, except to the remaining partners, for at least seven years. A balance-sheet is to be published, but not a profit and loss account.

The Great Eastern Railway Company recommend a dividend at the rate of 3½ per cent per annum, and, after the usual £15,000 has been credited to permanent-way renewal account, a surplus of about £18,000 will remain to be carried forward. This is ½ per cent per annum higher than the distribution for the second half of 1883, when £10,378 was carried over. A dividend at the rate of 7 per cent per annum is notified by the London, Brighton, and South Coast Company, being the same rate as for the corresponding period; while £7600 will be carried forward, compared with £5724. The deferred stockholders will receive 3 per cent for the year. Several of the companies have also issued their reports, which, however, contain nothing of special interest, except perhaps that of the Metropolitan. In this case complaint is made that the District Company, by their action in attempting to run additional trains between Hammersmith and Mansion House, have blocked the Inner Circle traffic.

Owing to the Denver and Rio Grande Railway Company having suspended their bonded interest payments, committees were formed in Europe towards the end of last year. The delegates of the London Committee have now issued their report on the financial condition of the line, which is far from encouraging. It is first proposed that some two-and-a-half to three million dollars be expended on the road during the next three years, while another recommendation is that the interest on the consolidated bonds be reduced to 3½ per cent, preferred stock to be given to an amount sufficient to make up the 7 per cent interest, if earned.

Some question having arisen in India regarding the accounts of the fire insurance and river flotilla reserve funds, the Eastern Bengal Railway Company have found it necessary to postpone the issue of the warrants for the payment of the final dividends. The sum meanwhile sanctioned by the Earl of Kimberley is 1,18,619 rupees, which is 35,262 rupees less than the amount which was to have been paid by the company.

T. S.

THE NILE EXPEDITION.

Up to Wednesday evening this week, the expected news of the arrival of Brigadier-General Sir Herbert Stewart's force at Metammeh, opposite Shendy, on the Nile, a hundred miles below Khartoum, had not been received. The brigade, consisting of the Heavy Camel Corps, the Guards, Marines, mounted infantry, half a battalion of the Sussex Regiment, and Lord C. Beresford's sailors, a squadron of the 19th Hussars, and others, altogether about nineteen hundred fighting men, was at Gakdul Wells, a hundred miles from Lord Wolseley's head-quarters at Korti, and seventy-eight miles from Metammeh, till Saturday last. They had crossed the Desert from Korti by a very trying march, setting out each day at two o'clock in the morning. The supply of drinking-water fell short, from the leaking of the goatskin bags, the "old bottles" of the East, in which it was carried on the camels' backs. Only a quart of water could be allowed to each of the soldiers per day, and their thirst was so great that a dollar was offered for a tumblerfull of the water from the wells, which was of the colour and consistency of pea-soup. The march was prolonged by the size of the convoy, the little moonlight, and the necessity of saving the camels for the work ahead; but there need have been no great suffering had not the men, yielding to thirst, exhausted the store of water prematurely. The mounted infantry, having had previous experience of Desert marching, reserved some water until the last. At Howeiyat, the small party previously left to guard the wells were fired into, one night, but not otherwise molested. Small parties of Arabs were in movement over the Desert, all wearing the Mahdi's uniform. Some of them who came in to sell sheep asserted that there was only a small body of the Mahdi's troops at Metammeh. On the column starting from Howeiyat, a detachment of the Essex Regiment was left as garrison, under Captain Carter and Lieutenant Young. A zareba had been constructed there, and a hospital organised under Surgeon Lingard. On the 12th inst., Monday week, the column arrived at Gakdul. The plentiful supply of good water proved a welcome refreshment after the severity of the march. A despatch of Friday week, from Gakdul, says:—"The brigade leave here at two to-morrow (Saturday) afternoon, and will march fifty-two miles to the Abu Klea Wells. They will leave a post there, and thence push forward to Metammeh, where the enemy is expected to attack. Half of the Sussex Regiment remains to guard this post."

On Saturday evening Lord Wolseley telegraphed from Korti:—

"Large convoy returned to-day from Gakdul; all quiet all along route. To-morrow convoy of Sowarab and Howayat tribes takes stores to Gakdul. Saleh, the chief of the Kabbabish, has come in. He reached our post at Debbeh to-day, and comes on here at once. Our English boats still coming in. It is satisfactory to know that out of 800 landed in Egypt 750 are now working along the river, and many of the remainder are now being repaired, a small number only having been totally wrecked at various times and places."

The part of the Camel Corps attached to General Earle's command has gone on to Hamdab. It is reported that reinforcements from Berber have arrived at Wady Gamr. The enemy say they will resist at Birteh. This is a village twenty-eight miles above Hamdab and as much below Wady Gamr, which is about ten miles from the scene of Colonel Stewart's murder. All letters for General Earle's command are ordered to be sent to Korosko for Abu Ahmed by the Desert route, which is now considered safe for travel, as the column will have reached Abu Ahmed by the time the first caravan across the Desert arrives there.

On Friday the Mudir of Dongola telegraphed to the Khedive announcing the return of his messenger to General Gordon. This man says: "General Gordon immediately questioned me as to the state of Dongola. During my stay in Khartoum the Mahdi sent a letter to General Gordon asking permission to enter Khartoum. General Gordon replied that he could come; he was willing to go to Omdurman to receive him. Orders were given to the troops to be ready. General Gordon, with four steamers carrying cannon, crossed the river to Omdurman. On their arrival, a considerable number of rebels attacked them. A sharp fight took place, and the rebels sank one steamer with a shell. The other steamers rescued the crew, and continued the fight, eventually dispersing the enemy. I afterwards visited the Mahdi's camp, and learnt that the Mahdi had several men kept in chains, among whom were Saleh Bey, Slaten Bey, and many others, but Hussein Bey Khalifa was free, and prays daily with the Mahdi. The strong tribe of the Bakarahr left the Mahdi, and were followed by his troops, but they fought and beat the Mahdi's men. The tribe have returned to their homes."

There is continued fighting with Osman Digna, on the Red Sea coast about Souakim, and the first battalion of the Berkshire Regiment, a squadron of Hussars, and two guns of the Royal Horse Artillery have been ordered to Souakim from Cairo. They were expected to leave about Friday. It is reported from Constantinople that the Sultan has given orders for an expedition of six thousand men to occupy Souakim. It is proposed to defray the expenses out of the revenues of certain territories on the Red Sea littoral belonging to Egypt.

Our large Engraving in the Supplement this week represents an incident of military tactics in the Soudan campaign.

"ONLY THAT ROSE!"

Is it much to ask of this young lady? She is going up stairs, after a happy evening of social gaiety, saying "Good-night" to departing guests, one of whom, a gentleman who has long sought by refined attentions to win the desired place in her favour, still lingers behind the others, in hopes of one sweet last word. He cannot be satisfied, indeed, without many more words, the last from her being to him so much the sweetest that he must detain her for yet another; and now he has ventured to ask her for a gift. "What is it?" she says, holding back the flower that has fallen out of her bouquet, the flower which he picked up for her in the ball-room while dancing; and his answer is what she must have expected, "Only that rose!" These little transactions are symbolical of tender regard, and more eloquent than any of the long speeches in which old-fashioned romances make a lover to plead with the mistress of his affections, abounding in elaborate phrases of flattery and professions of devotion. Something or other to the same effect, upon occasions of such a nature, will always be said or done while man and woman feel a mutual interest in each other; and that will be so long as the world goes round.

C'est l'amour, l'amour, l'amour,
Qui fait le monde à la ronde;
Et chaque jour, à son tour,
On fait l'amour, par tout le monde.

Mr. C. B. Lawes, the defendant in the Belt case, came up before Mr. Registrar Hazlitt, in the Court of Bankruptcy on the 15th inst., when an order of discharge was made. The liabilities were returned at £25,021, and the assets had realised £1208.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications relating to this department of the Paper should be addressed to the Editor, and have the word "Chess" written on the envelope.

MUNICH CHESS WEEKLY.—There are two monthly magazines devoted to chess published in England—the British Chess Magazine, John Watkinson, Fairfield, Huddersfield; annual subscription, six shillings, post-free to all parts of the world; and the Chess Monthly, L. Hoffer and J. H. Zukertort, 18, Tavistock-street, Covent-garden, London; annual subscription, ten shillings, postage extra. We can cordially recommend both. We are obliged for the compliment.

B H C (Salisbury).—The key-moves of the problem from "Chess Strategy" are 1. P to K 3rd and 2. K to K 3rd, the rest is "leather and prunella."

E L G (Blackwater).—See answer to B H C.

C S (Venice).—We cannot read "slips," but have forwarded our last Number.

W H D (Clapton).—"The Knight's Tour" was exhausted many years ago, and is now only found in the company of "acrostics" and things of that kind.

Rev W A (Old Romney).—Your last solution of Mr. Vanittart's is the same as ours, and, as we think, the author's. The other is a "true bill."

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 2126 received from F E Gibbins (Tiflis) and Emile Frau, of No. 2127 from D W (Aberdeenshire), E L G, J R (Edinburgh), Clement Fawcett; of No. 2128 from Columbus, Emile Frau, W Davis, L Vanderhaeghen, Janie B (Devonport), W H D Hervey, D W, T S Redmond (Wexford), Carl Friedleben, G Heuraus (Brussels), Bentheregem (Ghent), W F R (Swansea), Hugh Davidson, and E L G; of all the CHRISTMAS CHESS NUTS from J G G; of L'HERMET'S PROBLEMS from Clement Fawcett and B H C (Salisbury); of MCARTHUR'S PROBLEM from Plevna, B H C (Salisbury); of SHINKMAN'S PROBLEM from Jumbo and William Davis.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM No. 2129 received from Rev W Anderson (Old Romney), G W Law, Aaron Harper, C B N (H.M.S. Asia), H Wardell, H Z (Manchester), H Revey, G A A Walker, R L Southwell, J K (South Hampstead), Dominican, W Biddle, G S Oldfield, E Casella (Paris), G Seymour, N S Harris, J Hepworth Shaw, L Wyman, S Bullen, H Blacklock, M O'Halloran, S Lowndes, D W Kell, L Desanges, Heswood, R H (the King), Otto Fulder (Ghent), J T W, T Greenbank, L L Greenaway, B R Wood, A W Scrutton, F F Pott, F and G Howitt (Norwich), F Ferris, R H Postlethwaite, Laura Greaves (Skelton), G Meurice (Brussels), Joseph Ainsworth, L Sharswood, Ernest Sharswood, Kitten, Jumbo, Jupiter Junior, C Darragh, Henry Hancock, An Old Hand, W Hillier, T H Holdron, R J Vines, Carl Friedleben, Bentergbem (Ghent), A M Porter, James Pilkington, H Lucas, L Falcon (Antwerp), J G Antee, E Louden, Emmo (Darlington), Shadforth, Hugh Davidson, E E H, G Huskisson, A Mogren, and R Steinforth.

NOTE.—This problem cannot be solved, as many of our correspondents have imagined, by way of 1. K to B 5th, afterwards bringing the White King to K B 2nd, defending the Pawn. When the King has been played to that square, Black promotes his Pawn to a Knight, checking, delaying the mate beyond the stipulated number of moves.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 2127.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. R to Kt 3rd	P to Q 4th *
2. R to Q 3rd	P takes Kt
3. P to Q 5th. Mate.

* If in the above variation Black play 2. Kt moves, then either Kt mates accordingly; if 1. K to Q 4th, White continues with 2. Kt to B 5th, and 3. R to Kt 6th. Mate. The other variations are obvious.

SOLUTIONS OF CHRISTMAS CHESS NUTS.

No. 1.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Q to Kt 8th	Any move
2. Mates accordingly.

No. 2.

1. Q to Q B 7th	Any move
2. Q mates.

No. 3.

1. P to K R 6th	K moves
2. B to R 7th, and the King, and winning.	White brings up Queens the Pawn

No. 4.

1. B to B 5th	K to B 5th
2. Kt to K B 2nd	Any move
3. Q mates.

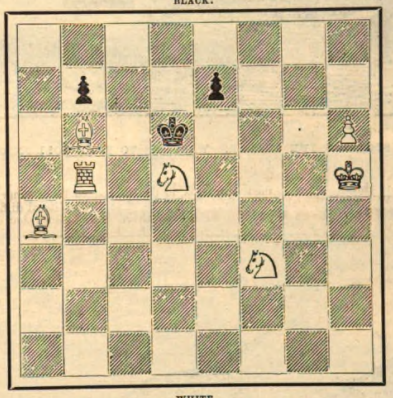
No. 5.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. K to Kt 6th	Kt to Q 4th (ch)
2. Q takes Kt (ch)	Any move
3. Kt mates.

Several correspondents point out a second solution, by way of 1. Q to Q Kt7th.

No. 6.

1. Q to Q B 8th	K to Kt 3rd
2. B to Kt 3rd, and the mate in two moves is obvious.



No. 7.

1. Q to K R sq	B moves
2. R takes P (ch)	B takes R
3. Kt to Kt sq (dis. ch)	P to B 6th. Mate.

PROBLEM No. 2131.

By Dr. E. MÜLLER (Darlington).

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

One of a number of Games played simultaneously at the Ilkeley Chess Club, by Mr. GUNSBERG on Dec. 29 last.

(Allgaier Gambit.)

WHITE (Mr. G.)	BLACK (Amateur).	WHITE (Mr. G.)	BLACK (Amateur).
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	12. Kt to Q 5th	Q to K 3rd
2. P to K B 4th	P takes P	Truly, her Majesty is bold, not to say reckless, in thus courting danger.
3. Kt to K B 3rd	P to K Kt 4th
4. P to K R 4th	P to Kt 5th	13. Castles	Kt to R 3rd
5. Kt to Kt 5th	P to K R 3rd	14. Kt to Kt 6th	Q takes P
6. Kt takes P	K takes Kt	15. Q R to K sq	Q to B 3rd
7. P to Q 4th	P to Q 3rd	16. Q to Q 3rd	R P takes Kt
Either 7. P to Q 4th, or 7. P to K B 6th is preferable here. Black's play throughout, indeed, is indicative of inexperience.		17. B to K 5th (ch)	K to B sq
		All this is very neat.
8. B to B 4th (ch)	K to Kt 2nd	17.	P takes B
9. B takes P	Kt to K B 3rd	18. R to B 7th (ch)	K to Kt sq
10. Kt to B 3rd	Kt to R 4th	19. R to Q 7th (dis. ch), and Black resigned.
11. Q to Q 2nd	Q to B 3rd

A neat three-move Problem from "Chess Strategy":—

White: K at Q B 5th, Q at K 3rd, B at K B sq, Pawn at K B 4th. (Four pieces.)

Black: K at K Kt 5th. (One piece.)

White to play, and mate in three moves.

The return-match between the City of London and the St. George's Chess Clubs was played in the rooms of the former at the Salutation Tavern, Newgate-street, on Monday last. The large number of spectators, including many amateurs from distant provincial towns, testified to the interest excited by the contest between East and West London. There were twenty competitors on each side, and the play resulted in a victory for the City with a score of twelve games to eight. Dr. Zukertort acted as umpire, and in that capacity decided unfinished games between Messrs. Salter and Earnshaw, and Messrs. Plunket and Hooke; in the first case, in favour of the St. George's, and in the second, half a point to each club. We shall give a list of the players and their several scores in our next issue.

With the new year, a new chess column has been opened in the Gazetta del Popolo, of Venice, conducted by Signor C. Salviola, an Italian amateur of known ability. The number at hand contains three problems, and one of fifteen games played by HERR Englisch simultaneously, at Venice, on Dec. 26 last.

A meeting of the newly-constituted British Chess Association is arranged to be held on Tuesday, the 20th inst. We go to press too early in the week, as most of our readers are aware, to chronicle the result in this Number, but we shall endeavour to find space for it in our next.

We own to a prejudice against what are called "Chess Labels," that is to say, adhesive imprints of the pieces and pawns, prepared to fix on diagrams of the chessboard, recording problems and positions in games, &c. Our experience hitherto has been that the so-called adhesive labels never adhere to anything for any length of time; but Mr. T. R. Hopwood, of 409, Oxford-road, Manchester, has produced a "chess-label" that has passed successfully through several tests to which we submitted it. The price is one penny per sheet of twelve dozen figures; or, one thousand for sixpence! The latter should serve a reasonable problem composer for the term of his natural life.

THE CHURCH.

The Rev. Stephen Gladstone, speaking at Hawarden last week, expressed himself strongly in favour of free and open churches, and urged the working classes to claim their rightful position of equality in the churches of the land.

A conference was held on Tuesday to consider the subject of Clergy pensions, the Archdeacon of Middlesex presiding. He pointed out the necessity of such a course, and was supported by several of the Clergy. A committee was appointed to take up the matter.

In aid of the fund for restoring the parish church of Lessingham, Norfolk, a concert was recently given in the Corn Exchange, Holt, under the patronage of Lord and Lady Hastings, Sir Alfred Jodrell, and Mrs. Wilkinson, whose father was for forty-four years Rector of the parish.

A mission church has been opened in the parish of Camborne, Cornwall, by the Bishop of Truro, the Rev. Sir Vyell Vyvyan giving the site and a donation of £400 towards the cost, which amounted to £1550.—A new mission church is to be erected at Coverack St. Keverne, near the Lizard, where the population has recently increased considerably on account of the numerous visitors in the tourist and winter seasons.

The church tower in the pleasant village of Kintbury, Berks, has been fitted with a new clock by Mr. J. W. Benson, of Ludgate-hill. The dial is 4 ft. 6 in. diameter, of copper, painted black, with figures and hands in gold well displayed. The escapement is "Graham's" dead beat, with special improvements introduced. For the striking part, the rack-repeating principle is used, instead of the old-fashioned locking-plate, much given to strike the wrong hours. Altogether, this clock is of the best design and construction.

The Incorporated Society for Promoting the Enlargement, Building, and Repairing of Churches and Chapels held its usual monthly meeting last week at the society's house, No. 7, Whitehall, the Ven. Archdeacon Harrison in the chair. Grants of money were made in aid of the following objects, viz.:—Building new churches at Byker (St. Michael), Newcastle-on-Tyne, £80; Stranton (St. Paul), near Hartlepool, £100; and Sunnybrow (St. John), near Crook, Durham, £150. Rebuilding the churches at Portsea (St. Mary), Hants, £250; and Pwllheli (St. Peter), Merioneth, £60;—and towards enlarging or otherwise improving the accommodation in the churches at Rillington (St. Andrew), near York, £10; and Rye (St. Mary), Sussex, £50. The society likewise accepted the trust of a sum of money as a repair fund for St. Peter's Church, Addlestone, Surrey. The society now holds upwards of £79,000 on trust as repair funds for 327 different churches.

THE CAMBRIDGE MATHEMATICAL TRIPOS.

The following list of such of the Wranglers in the Mathematical Tripos published in June last as presented themselves for examination in the highest branches of mathematics and other obstruse subjects has been published:—

Mathematical Tripos.—Part III.—Examined and approved:—
Class I.—Anderson, Sydney; Beckett, St. John's; Bragg, Trinity; Cassie, Trinity; H. H. Knight, Clare; Larmor, Clare; Little, Caius; Muirhead, St. Catherine's; Sheppard, Trinity; Workman, Trinity; Young, Peterhouse.
Class II.—Hensely, St. John's; Monckton, Pembroke; Toms, Queen's.
Class III.—Pattinson, St. John's.

Mr. William Robertson Smith, M.A., Lord Almoner's Professor of Arabic at Cambridge University, has been admitted to a Junior Fellowship at Christ's College.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY.

The Open Mathematical Scholarship at New College has been awarded to Mr. Edgar M. Jones, from Bristol Grammar School.

Mr. Bower Marsh, of Christ's Hospital, has been elected to an open Mathematical Scholarship at Exeter College.

FRESH MEAT FROM THE RIVER PLATE.

The insufficiency of the home supply of meat in this country is rapidly becoming more seriously felt, and is drawing supplies from many parts of the globe. The Argentine Confederation and the Uruguay Republic, which contain together about a hundred millions of sheep and twenty-one millions of cattle, are now entering the field through the agency of the River Plate Fresh Meat Company (Limited). This company has factories at Campana and Colonia, and is refrigerating at the present time more than seven hundred sheep a day, which gives a yearly out-turn of two hundred thousand sheep. These sheep, although small, approach in quality the best Southdowns, which is quite natural, seeing that they are bred on magnificent plains covered with the richest verdure, and are allowed to mature in a natural way. The carcases of these sheep do not, as is sometimes erroneously supposed, come into contact with ice, but are simply placed in chambers in which the air has been freed from moisture, and reduced to ten degrees below zero. They are afterwards kept in the refrigerators of the ocean steamers and of the stores on this side until sold. By these means all the juices of the meat are preserved; and the fallacy of the notion that frozen meat becomes tainted sooner than fresh meat was shown by the fact that, during the hot weather last year, the frozen mutton kept perfectly sweet for two or three days. The price at which this mutton is sold is so low that only prejudice has hitherto prevented its adoption.

Our Illustrations represent the establishments of the River Plate Fresh Meat Company at Colonia, which is a port on the River Plate accessible to ocean steamers, and at Campana, which is situated on the Paraná, a grand river navigable for a thousand miles. The Province of Buenos Ayres, which is the largest source of supply, contains about seventy millions of sheep. The Illustrations show the interior of a portion of one of the Factories, with carcases of mutton laid up there; a baling-shed for the wool, and some of the country carts being laden with the bales; a country store, with the carts drawn up for the men and bullocks to take their noonday rest; and a shepherd's hut, with its accessories, presenting a fair type of the mode of life and the accommodation with which the young men of spirit and enterprise who enter upon the life of sheep-farmers in the River Plate are satisfied. If such a life holds out few inducements in the shape of comfort and luxury, it is not without its compensations, in the way of vigorous health, with life in a fine climate, and the prospect of future independence.

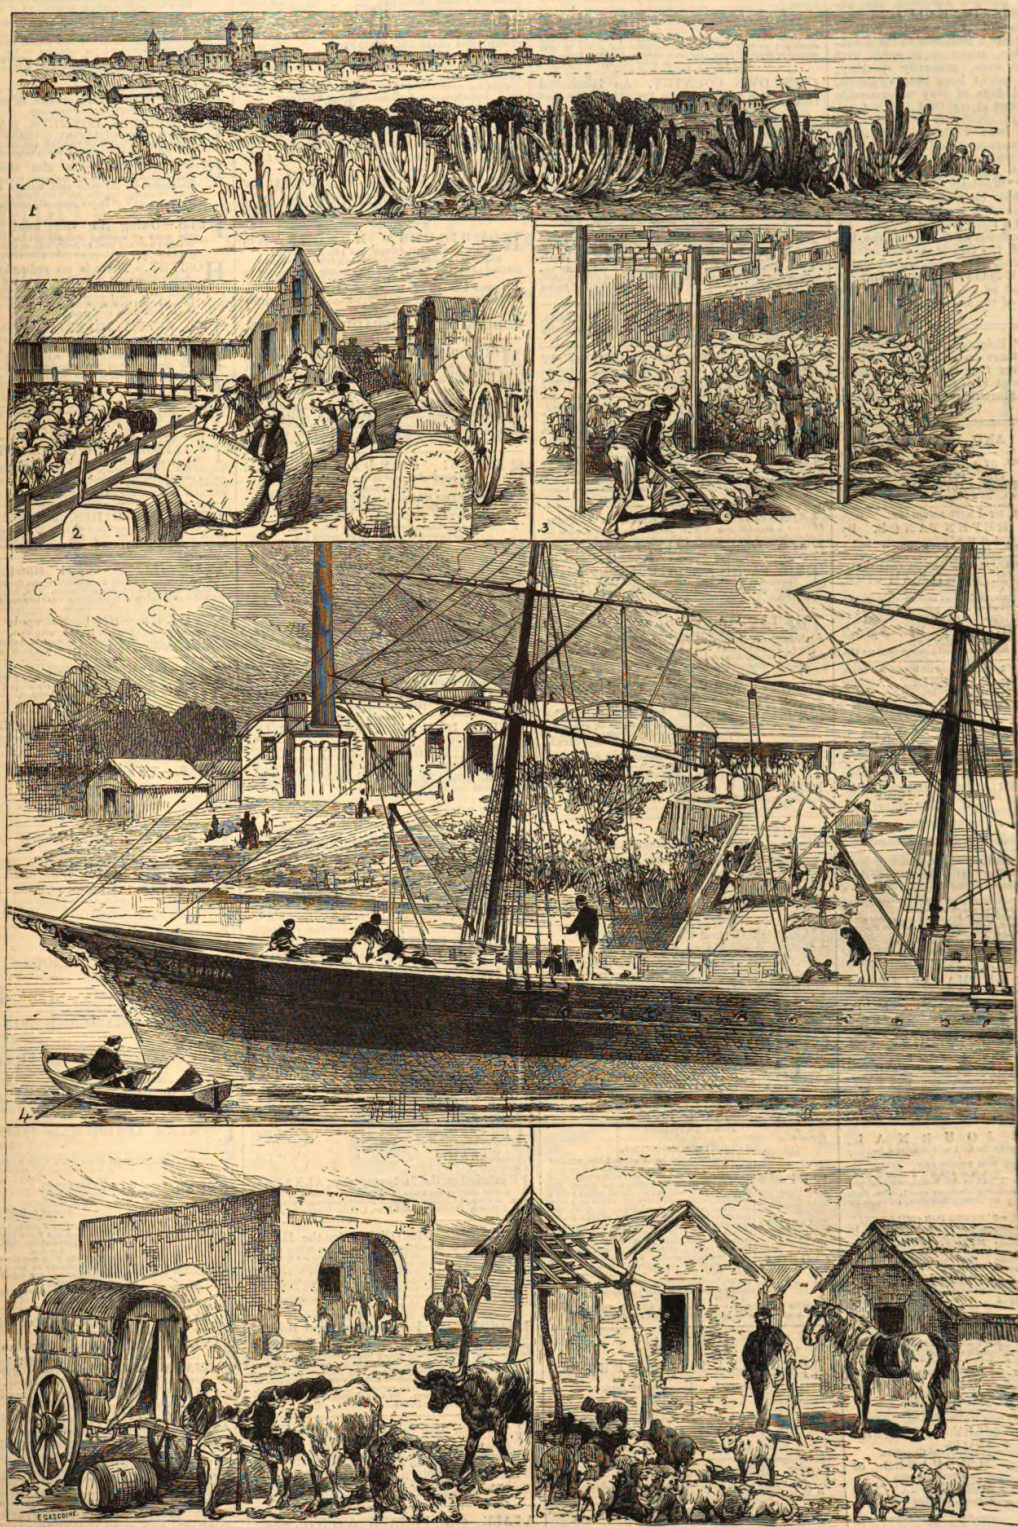
It has been decided at Bournemouth to construct an under-cliff carriage drive and promenade, upwards of two miles in length, at a cost of about £25,000.

Sir William Muir, who has had a distinguished official career in India, and is a member of the Indian Council, has been elected Principal of the University of Edinburgh.

Mr. Russell Lowell, the American Minister, presided at the meeting of the Society of Arts on Wednesday, when a paper was read by Mr. D. Pidgeon on "Labour and Wages in the United States."

The arrivals of live stock and fresh meat at Liverpool during the past week, from American and Canadian ports, amounted to 1088 cattle, 299 sheep, 10,621 quarters of beef, 988 carcases of mutton, and 450 hogs.

THE TROUBLES IN BECHUANALAND, SOUTH AFRICA.



STOPPING THE TRADERS' WAGGONS TO TAKE TOLL IN GOSHEN.

BOERS OF GOSHEN SENDING THEIR FAMILIES INTO THE TRANSVAAL FOR SAFETY.

THE FROZEN MEAT TRADE OF THE RIVER PLATE.

1. Colonia, on the River Plate, with the Steam-ship Pier.
2. Baling Shed for Wool; Country Carts waiting to be laden.
3. Interior of a Meat Factory, with carcases of sheep.
4. Factory at Campana, on the Parana River.
5. Country Store, with Bullock-carts halting for rest.
6. Shepherd's Hut in the River Plate Country.

THE NATIONAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION.

The annual report of the National Rifle Association gives exhaustive details of the last Wimbledon meeting. The financial result is most satisfactory, as, notwithstanding that the large sum of £1200 was added to the prize-list last July, thus bringing the amount shot for, exclusive of challenge cups, to £10,837, the receipts exceeded the expenditure by £860. The list of subscribers shows an increase of 220—namely, 3220 as against 3000. After a reference to the shooting at Wimbledon, where it is noted that the scores made were, generally speaking, not so high as might have been expected, owing to several days of very unfavourable weather, the report states that the net increase of entries, exclusive of pools, over the preceding year, was 2797, to which, for purposes of comparison, should be added 1649, as the number which would have been included had not the "Glen Albyn" been merged in the "Windmill." Thus the true increase was 4446, or about 12½ per cent. Altogether the number of prizes shot for last July was 2737, of a total value of £10,837. Of these, 2411 were offered by the association, the value being £8448, the largest amount offered since the foundation of the association, which opened the first Wimbledon meeting in 1860 with a modest list of 67, value £2238. The balance in favour of the association on Nov. 30 last was £29,624.

There is to be at Brighton on Easter Monday a review of volunteers on as large a scale as possible. At Dover four regiments of volunteers will take part in a field-day with the regular troops. Marching columns will also be organised.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

NEW NOVEL BY A NEW AUTHOR.

THE QUEEN OF THE MOOR. By FREDERIC ADYE.
In 3 vols. At all Libraries.

NEW NOVEL BY A NEW NOVELIST.

CURRENT REPENTANCE. By "A B C & E."
In 3 vols. At all Libraries.

NEW AND ORIGINAL NOVEL, IN ONE VOLUME.

BOULDERSTONE. By WILLIAM SIME, Author of "King Capital," &c.
Price 2s., boards; 2s. 6d., cloth; 3s. 6d., half morocco (postage 4d.).

CHEAP UNIFORM EDITION OF "RITA'S" NOVELS.

LIKE DIAN'S KISS. By "RITA," Author of "Dame Durden," &c.
Price 2s., boards; 2s. 6d., cloth; 3s. 6d., half morocco (postage 4d.).

CHEAP UNIFORM EDITION OF E. SPENDER'S NOVELS.

RESTORED. By E. SPENDER, Author of "A True Marriage," &c.
Price 2s., boards; 2s. 6d., cloth; 3s. 6d., half morocco (postage 4d.)
J. and R. MAXWELL; and Libraries, Bookstalls, &c.

NEW and POPULAR NOVELS.
Now ready, at all the Libraries.
COLVILLE OF THE GUARDS. By JAMES GRANT, Author of "The Romance of War," &c. 3 vols.
ALTHOUGH HE WAS A LORD. By Mrs. FORRESTER, Author of "Viva," &c. 3 vols.
THE CARDICS. By WILLIAM GEORGE WATERS. 3 vols.
THE WITCH'S HEAD. By H. RIDER HAGGARD, Author of "Dawn." 3 vols.
CYCLAMEN. By Mrs. RANDOLPH, Author of "Gentianella," &c. 3 vols.
HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

One Shilling. 103th to 130th Thousand.

DARK DAYS. By HUGH CONWAY, Author of "Called Back." Being Vol. III. Arrowsmith's Bristol Library.
"An excellent story."—Dublin Evening Mail. "Will maintain his reputation and popularity as a writer."—Pall Mall Gazette. "The attention of most readers will be riveted upon this story from the first page to the last."—The Scotsman. "The reader's curiosity on the stretch."—Daily News.
Bristol: J. W. ARROWSMITH, 11, Quay-street.
London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL and Co.; and all Railway Bookstalls.

On Jan. 26 (Sixpence), New Series, No. 20,

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE for FEBRUARY.
CONTENTS.
RAINBOW GOLD. By David Christie Murray. Book 1.—How Hercule Asmodée Bonaventure enlisted Job Round. Chaps. IV.—VI.
EXPERTS IN HANDWRITING.
THE DAISYCLIFFE MYSTERY. Illustrated by M. Fitzgerald.
DE BANANA.
THE TALK OF THE TOWN. By James Payn. Chap. XXXI.—The Messenger of Disgrace. Chap. XXXII.—The Foot of Clay. Chap. XXXIII.—Breaking it. Chap. XXXIV.—A Comforter. Chap. XXXV.—Farewell. With Illustrations by Harry Furniss.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

"Ladies who desire to be well dressed find a most valuable guide and counsellor in MY A'S JOURNAL, which is always early in the field with novelties."—Daily Chronicle.

NOVELTIES FOR FEBRUARY.
A COLOURED FASHION PLATE.
FULL-SIZED PAPER PATTERN of the Bolinbroke Casaque.
DIAGRAM SHEET containing Patterns of—(1) The Yesta Mantle; (2) Lady's Chemise; (3) Corsage Mathilde; (4) Dress for a Girl.
NEW PARIS MODELS of Costumes, Toilettes, Mantles, Chapeaux, Coiffures, and Lingerie for Ladies; Costumes, Chapeaux, and Mantles for Children. Costumes, Mantles, and Chapeaux.
MODELS from Les Grands Magasins du Louvre.
METHOD OF MOUNTING Drawings.
DRESS AND FASHION in Paris.
MODES FOR CHILDREN.
SPINNINGS IN TOWN, by the silkworm.
MYRA'S ANSWERS. Latest from Paris. Gardening. New Music and Books.
ANSWERS on Dress, Health and Personal Attention, Etiquette, Miscellaneous, &c.
NEEDLEWORK: Designs for Braiding, Table Cloth in Russian Embroidery and Crochet, Baby's Shoe, Crochet Edgings, &c.

Price Sixpence; by post, 8d.
MYRA and Son (late Goubaud and Son), 39 and 40, Bedford-street, Covent-garden.

PRICE ONE SHILLING; by post, 1s. 2d.,

LE MONITEUR DE LA MODE, A HIGH-CLASS FASHION JOURNAL.
Patronised and subscribed to by Her most Gracious Majesty the Queen.
The FEBRUARY NUMBER contains
FOUR BEAUTIFULLY COLOURED FASHION PLATES,
Expressly designed for this Journal, and Copyright.
TWENTY-EIGHT PAGES of LETTERPRESS, splendidly Illustrated with OVER ONE HUNDRED ENGRAVINGS of the Latest Fashions from Paris, and New Serial Story, "Miss Hyde's Matchmaking."
A REVIEW OF THE FASHIONS.
STAGE TOILETTES in "L'Amour."
FURNITURE and Hangings for a Dressing-Room.
FASHIONABLE Hair Dressing.
CHILDREN'S DRESS in London and Paris.
THE COIFFURE OF WOMEN IN FRANCE.
NOTES OF THE MONTH.
A GLANCE AT THE THEATRES.
FASHIONABLE FINE-ART NEEDLEWORK.
Can be had of all Booksellers; but should any difficulty arise, send direct to the Publishers,
MYRA and Son (late Goubaud and Son), 39 and 40, Bedford-street, Covent-garden, London.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

Part I. ready Jan. 25, price 7d., of
The NEW SERIAL ISSUE of

CASSELL'S HISTORY OF THE WAR BETWEEN RUSSIA AND TURKEY, with about 400 Illustrations. With Part I. is issued a Large Presentation Plate of "The Storming of Kars."
"The author of 'Cassell's History of the Russo-Turkish War' has," says the Illustrated London News, "far surpassed all the ordinary compilers of contemporary political and military history."
Prospectuses at all Booksellers', or post-free from CASSELL and COMPANY, Limited, Ludgate-hill, London.

"Those who are ignorant of the beauties of their native land could not go to a better source to have the defect in their education supplied than 'Our Own Country.'"—The Times.
Part I. ready Jan. 28, price 7d., of
The NEW SERIAL ISSUE of

OUR OWN COUNTRY. An Illustrated Historical and Geographical Description of the Chief Places of Interest in Great Britain and Ireland.
With about 1200 Original Illustrations.
With Part I. is issued, as a Frontispiece, a beautiful Steel Engraving,
Prospectuses at all Booksellers', or post-free from CASSELL and COMPANY, Limited, Ludgate-hill, London.

Part I. now ready, price 6d., of
The POPULAR EDITION of

FARRAR'S LIFE AND WORK OF ST. PAUL (Cassell's Illustrated Edition in Eleven Parts.)
"Not only the author's literary chef-d'œuvre, but is also out of sight the best English work of its class."—British Quarterly Review.
Prospectuses at all Bookse'ers', or post-free from CASSELL and COMPANY, Limited, Ludgate-hill, London.

THE FIRST PRINTED BIBLE. With an Illustration of Fust and Gutenberg examining the proof-sheets. See the LADIES' TREASURY for FEBRUARY, price 7d.; containing also "In All Time of Our Wealth," by the Rev. E. J. Hardy, M.A., &c.

THE KEMBLE FAMILY. With Portraits. See LADIES' TREASURY for FEBRUARY; containing also "Living in a Flat: A Catastrophe," &c. Price 7d.

MUSIC: HINTS ON TEACHING IT TO CHILDREN, By a Teacher of Music. See the LADIES' TREASURY for FEBRUARY, price 7d.; containing also "The Colonel," a completed story.

ON THE TRAINING OF SERVANTS. By Mrs. Warren. See the LADIES' TREASURY for FEBRUARY, price 7d.; containing also "Hints upon Gardening," Cookery, Notes on Dressmaking, Parisian Gossip.

PRIZE COMPETITION QUESTIONS. A money prize is awarded every month for the best answers to the questions in the LADIES' TREASURY, 7d., monthly; contains also Chess, On Dits, Answers to Correspondents, &c.

JAPANESE DESIGN, Printed in Colours, for a Hand-Screen, Box, or Table Tops, also suitable for Embroidering a Sofa Cushion, with instructions for treatment, is given with the LADIES' TREASURY for FEBRUARY, price 7d.

THE FASHIONS. The Newest Styles Illustrated with a Large Coloured Plate and nine pages of Engravings, with descriptions. See LADIES' TREASURY for FEBRUARY, price 7d.

THE LADIES' TREASURY, A Household Magazine of Literature, Education, Fashion, Decorative Art, Needlework, Cookery, &c.; 7d., monthly; post-free, 8d.
The JANUARY PART (beginning the New Volume) is still in Sale. The two Parts post-free for 1s. 2d.
London: BEEMROSE and SONS, 23, Old Bailey; and Derby.

PLEYEL, WOLFF, and CO.'S PIANOS were CHOPIN'S favourite instruments. The most perfect in touch and tone of any introduced, whether English or Foreign. For SALE or HIRE, or on the THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM, of the Sole Agents,
I. BERROW and CO., 170, New Bond-street, London, W.

ARTISTS' SKETCHES.

FOR PANEL PAINTING, Terra Cotta, &c., for SALE and on HIRE. Priced List post-free.
WM. BARNARD, 119, Edgware-road, London, W.

ELKINGTON and CO.
ELECTRO and SILVER PLATE.
CLOCKS and BRONZES.
DIRECT FROM THE MANUFACTURERS.

ELKINGTON and CO.
TABLE and TESTIMONIAL PLATE.
DESIGNS and PHOTOGRAPHS,
SUPPLIED TO COMMITTEES.

ELKINGTON and CO.—CAUTION.
SEE ALL GOODS MARKED,
"E and CO." IN SHIELD.
ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST-FREE.

ELKINGTON and CO.,
MANUFACTURING SILVERSMITHS,
22, Regent-st.; and 42, Moorgate-st., City.
Birmingham, Liverpool, and Manchester.

CHUBB'S PATENT LOCKS.
CASH AND DEED BOXES.
TWENTY MEDALS awarded at the various International Exhibitions.
68, ST. JAMES'S-STREET, PALL-MALL.
128, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, E.C.
Price-Lists Post-free.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S (BREAKFAST) COCOA.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.
Made simply with boiling water or milk.
Sold in Packets, labelled
JAMES EPPS and CO., HOMŒOPATHIC CHEMISTS.
Also Makers of EPPS'S CHOCOLATE ESSENCE.

TRELOAR'S
BRUSSELS CARPETS.

2s. 3d. per yard.	4s. 3d. per yard.
2s. 6d. " "	4s. 6d. " "
3s. 9d. " "	5s. 6d. " "
4s. 6d. " "	5s. 9d. " "

Exclusive in design. Special in quality.
TRELOAR and SONS, LUDGATE-HILL.

JOHN BROGDEN, deceased.
The VALUABLE STOCK of ART-JEWELLERY is NOW FOR SALE, at a REASONABLE REDUCTION, for a LIMITED TIME,
by order of the Executors.
6, GRAND HOTEL-BUILDINGS, CHARING-CROSS.

WALKER'S CRYSTAL CASE WATCHES are superseding all others. Prize Medals—London, 1862; Paris, 1867. Silver Watches, from £4 4s.; Gold, from £6 6s. Price-Lists sent free.—77, Cornhill; and 220, Regent-street.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT. The Pills purify the blood, correct all disorders of the liver, stomach, kidneys, and bowels. The Ointment is unrivalled in the cure of bad legs, old wounds, gout, and rheumatism.

WEDDING and BIRTHDAY PRESENTS at RODRIGUES', 42, PICCADILLY.

SETS FOR THE WRITING-TABLE AND BOUDOIR, IN POLISHED BRASS, OXIDIZED SILVER, and CHINA.

DRESSING CASES from 21s. to £50
JEWEL CASES	15s. to £10
CASES OF IVORY BRUSHES	63s. to £10
DESPATCH BOXES	21s. to £10
WRITING CASES	12s. to £5
ENVELOPE CASES AND BLOTTERS ..	16s. 6d. to £5
STATIONERY CASES AND CABINETS ..	21s. to £5
INKSTANDS	7s. 6d. to £5
CIGAR AND CIGARETTE CABINETS ..	42s. to £10
LIQUEUR CASES	50s. to £10

CLOCKS, SCENT BOTTLES, OPERA GLASSES, FANS.
And a large and choice assortment of ENGLISH, VIENNESE, and PARISIAN NOVELTIES, from 5s. to £5.

TRAVELLING DRESSING BAGS, Morocco, with Hall-marked Silver Fittings, £5 5s., £10 10s., £15, £20, £30 to £50.

PORTRAIT ALBUMS at RODRIGUES' for Cartes-de-Visite and Cabinet Portraits, 10s. 6d. to £5.
PHOTOGRAPH SCREENS, Leather and Plush, with gilt reversible hinges, to hold from 2 to 24 Portraits.

RODRIGUES' MONOGRAMS, ARMS, CORONET, CREST, and ADDRESS DIES Engraved as Gems from Original and Artistic Designs.
NOTE-PAPER and ENVELOPES, brilliantly Illuminated by hand in Gold, Silver, Bronze, and Colours.
BEST RELIEF STAMPING, any colour, 5s. per 100.
HERALDIC ENGRAVING, PAINTING, and ILLUMINATING.
All the New and Fashionable Note-Papers.
RODRIGUES, 42, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

MODELLING in Clay and Wax.—A Guide, by MORTON EDWARDS. Post-free. 1s. 1d. Clay, wax, stands, &c., at LECHERTIER, BARBE, and CO., 60, Regent-street, W.

FOR FAMILY ARMS (Lincoln's-inn Heraldic Office) send Name and County. Sketch, 3s. 6d.; in colours, 7s. 6d. Arms Painted and Engraved on Seals, Dies, &c. PUGH BROTHERS, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn, W.C.; and 76, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. Pretested Medal, Paris, 1878.

SEEDS! SEEDS! SEEDS!
Before purchasing your Spring Supply, send for DANIELS'
ILLUSTRATED GUIDE for AMATEUR GARDENERS.
Magnificent Coloured Illustrations of
FLOWERS, FRUITS, AND VEGETABLES,
104 pages beautifully Illustrated Letterpress.
This Catalogue may justly be termed the
GEM OF THE SEASON.
Price 1s., post-free.
Gratis to Customers.
DANIELS BROS., Seed Merchants, Norwich.

INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION,
South Kensington.—London, 1884.
GOLD MEDAL AWARDED for EXCELLENCE of QUALITY to
SALT and CO.,
EAST INDIA PALE and BURTON ALE BREWERS.
Stores and Offices—21 to 31, Farcross-road, London.
LIST of Prices to be obtained of all the principal Dealers.

WHAT IS YOUR CREST and WHAT IS YOUR MOTTO? Send name and county to CULLETON'S Heraldic Office. Plain sketch, 3s. 6d.; colours, 7s. The arms of man and wife blended. Crest engraved on seals, rings, books, and steel dies, 7s. 6d. Gold seal, with crest, 25s. Solid Gold Ring, 18-carat, Hall-marked, with crest, 42s. Manual of Heraldry, 400 Engravings, 3s. 6d.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX of STATIONERY contains a Ream of the very best Paper and 500 Envelopes, all stamped in the most elegant way with Crest and Motto, Monogram, or Address, and the engraving of steel Die included. Sent to any part for P.O. order.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

VISITING CARDS by CULLETON. Fifty best quality, 2s. 6d., post-free, including the Engraving of Copper-plate. Wedding Cards, 50 for 30s., 50 Embossed Envelopes, with Maiden Name, 15s. 6d.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

BINDING the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.—Half-yearly Volumes bound in the new appropriate Covers, with gilt edges, at 2s. 3d. each, if sent carriage free to LEIGHTON, SON, and HODGE, 16, New-street-square, Fleet-street. The only Binders authorised by the Proprietors.

IMPROVED POSTAGE-STAMP ALBUM FOR 18s6. Systematically arranged, and all the most modern improvements. Superior, 22s. page, post-free, 3s. 6d. Circulars free.—STANLEY GIBBONS and CO., 8, Gower-st., London.

COLDS CURED BY
DR. DUNBAR'S ALKARAM, or Anti-Catarrh Smelling-Bottle.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
If inhaled on the first symptoms, ALKARAM will at once arrest them, and cure severe cases in half an hour. Sold by all Chemists, 2s. 9d. a Bottle. Address, Dr. Dunbar, care of Messrs. F. Newbery and Sons, 1, King Edward st., E.C.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY for the HAIR. If your hair is turning grey, or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. "The Mexican Hair Renewer" is sold by Chemists and Perfumers every where, at 3s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE. For the Teeth and Breath. Is the best Liquid Dentifrice in the world; it thoroughly cleanses partially-decayed teeth from all parasites or living "animalcule," leaving them pearly white, imparting a delightful fragrance to the breath. The Fragrant Floriline removes instantly all odours arising from a foul stomach or tobacco smoke; being partly composed of honey, soda, and extracts of sweet herbs and plants, it is perfectly delicious to the taste, and as harmless as sherry. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 2s. 6d. per Bottle.

GOUT and RHEUMATISM
Cured by the use of
DR. LAVILLE'S LIQUOR and PILLS.
Approved of by Dr. Oustan Henry, Analytical Chemist of the Académie de Médecine of Paris.
The Liquor to be used in acute state of gout or rheumatism; the Pills in chronical state.
Wholesale: COMAR, 39, Rue St. Claude, Paris.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists.

MALE and FEMALE AGENTS.—Any man or woman can make a GUINEA A DAY at home. If you are engaged during the day, you can add to your income by evening work.
Full particulars FREE. Address:
A. M. RICHARDSON, 134, Regent-street, London, W.

TOWLE'S PENNYROYAL and STEEL PILLS for FEMALES. Sold in Boxes, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d., of all Chemists. Sent anywhere on receipt of 15 or 34 stamps by the maker, E. T. TOWLE, Chemist, Nottingham.

JAY'S HALF-YEARLY SALE.

BLACK SILKS, warranted to be made by Bonnet, of Lyons, 3s. 6d. per yard.

RICH FIGURED VELVETS, 6s. 9d. per yard.

BLACK SILKS of every kind proportionately cheap, but there will be no reduction on the Satin Duchesse, as sold by Messrs. JAY at 3s. per yard.

COSTUMES.—An elegant and rich variety of BLACK SILK, Velvet, and other Costumes, the product more or less of this season, marked in plain figures, and showing the reduction in the prices. But the 5 and 7½ guinea Silk Costumes (including sufficient materials for unmade bodice) lately sold by Messrs. JAY will not be altered in price.

MANTLES.—A large and costly collection of FRENCH MODEL MANTLES, by Worth, Pingat, and other artistes, at common prices.

FASHIONABLE BONNETS, HATS, and other incidental MILLINERY, COLLARS, CUFFS, &c., generally REDUCED IN PRICES, and among these odds and ends many will be found worth inspection.

BLACK STUFFS.—In the Black Stuff Department the prices are generally lowered, and some fine Cashmeres and other good Woollen Manufactures are very cheap; but the All-Wool Foule, as usually sold by Messrs. JAY at 1s. per yard, will remain at the same cost.

FURS.—Owing to the mild weather, the Stock of superior Sealskin and rich Fur-trimmed Mantles have not been so freely sold as was anticipated; therefore these luxuries are reduced to every-day prices.

HOSIERY.—There is no reduction in the French Gloves sold at 2s. 6d. per pair, but sundry Lisle Thread Hose, 1s. 11d. per pair; Cashmere, ribbed and plain, at 1s. 3½d.; pure Silk, ladies' small size, 9s. 6d. per pair; and Cotton Jerseys, braided, from 1s. 6d., worth notice, and very cheap.

THE CRÊPE IMPÉRIAL, specialty in the Black Department, remains at the same price.

THE SALE does not in any way affect the execution of Mourning orders, a special staff being retained for that purpose.

JAY'S,

THE LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE,
REGENT-STREET.

TO TAILORS and WOOLLEN BUYERS.
We are selling all classes of Woollen Goods and Tailors' Trimmings at Lower Prices than ever. Before buying your Spring parcels, inspect our Stock, or write for patterns, stating class of Goods required.
ALFRED BROWN and SONS, 8, Holborn-circus, London, E.C.

LEFT-OFF CLOTHES, the oldest and best buyers in the kingdom for cash. Parcels sent, appointments attended to.—Mr. and Mrs. PHILLIPS, Old Curiosity Shop, 31, Thayer-street, Manchester-square, London, W.

MARSEILLES.—Grand Hôtel Louvre, and Paix. Largest in Marseilles; universal reputation for modern comforts; moderate charges. Lift, table d'hôte, billiards, baths, omnibus.—PAUL NEUSCHWANDER and Co., Propts.

NAPLES.—Hôtel Métropole (Cook's special house). Pension from 8f., with wine. Restaurant, café, English bar. Grand establishment of baths, Hammam and others, sea and fresh water. Omnibus; tram passes door.

NICE.—COSMOPOLITAN HOTEL.—HOTEL DE LA GRANDE BRETAGNE.
These two very superior grand hotels excel any on the Riviera. South aspect. Cabriolets and Accumulator at each.
J. LAVIT, Director.

NICE.—Hôtel de France.—First-class, south aspect, Quai Masséna, near Promenade des Anglais. Every comfort for English travellers. Omnibus and lift.
A. BERTHELMANN, Director.

NICE.—TERMINUS HOTEL.
facing the station.
Splendid south position.
Hydraulic Ascenseur and Baths.
180 Chambers and Salons.

PEGLI.—Grand Hôtel Pegli (formerly De la Méditerranée). Facing the sea. South aspect, surrounded by gardens and mountains. Climate unsurpassed. Sanitary arrangements; satisfactory charges. BUCHER-DURRER, Prop.

VERMOUTH.—Francesco Cinzano and Co., Vermouth, combination Asti Wine and Alpine herbs, with quinine. Refreshing, tonic and digestive. Oi Wine Merchants, and F. CINZANO and CO., Corso Re Umberto, 10, Turin.

COCKLE'S
ANTIBILIOUS
PILLS.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR LIVER.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR BILE.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR INDIGESTION.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR HEARTBURN.

UNIVERSALLY PRESCRIBED BY THE FACULTY.

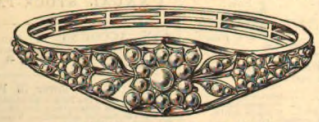
TAMAR — A laxative and refreshing Fruit Lozenge. For CONSTIPATION, Hæmorrhoids, Bile, Headache, Loss of Appetite, Cerebral Congestion.

INDIEN — Prepared by E. GRILLON, Chemist of the Paris Faculty, 63, Queen-street, City, London.

GRILLON. — Tamar, unlike Pills and the usual Purgatives, is agreeable to take, and never produces irritation, nor interferes with business or pleasure.

Sold by all Chemists and Druggists, 2s. 6d. a Box. Stamp included.

SANJANA ESSENCE. The Greatest Nerve Restorer ever known.
SANJANA ESSENCE enriches the Blood, and removes all Blood Poisons.
SANJANA ESSENCE cures Dyspepsia, Liver and Kidney Complaints. 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s.
SANJANA PILLS, for Constipation, Biliousness, Flatulency, Indigestion, &c.
SANJANA PILLS, for Constipation, Biliousness, Flatulency, Indigestion, &c.
SANJANA PILLS. A single dose guaranteed effective. 9d., 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d.
SANJANA ESSENCE and PILLS. Order from your Chemist, or post-free direct from the SANJANA Company, Egham.
Gratis and Post-free. The instructive and highly interesting Treatise on the Self-Treatment of Diseases of the Nervous System, the Blood, and Digestive Organs, by Dr. Chas. Thomas, Ph.D.
SANJANA ESSENCE AND PILLS.
Twenty-eight years' success on the Continent! The most effective remedies for Self-Treatment ever introduced!
London Depôt—WILCOX and CO., 239, Oxford-street, W.; or through any Chemist.



HOOPING COUGH.
ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION.
The celebrated effectual cure without internal medicine. Sole Wholesale Agents, W. EDWARDS and SON, 157, Queen Victoria-street (formerly of 67, St. Paul's-churchyard), London, whose names are engraved on the Government stamp.
Sold by most Chemists. Price 4s. per Bottle

FINE GOLD JEWELLERY

at Manufacturers' Wholesale Prices, saving from 25 to 50 per cent.

DIAMOND RINGS.
£10 to £100.

FINE ORIENTAL PEARL BRACELET,
in best Morocco Case, £12.

DIAMOND RINGS.
£10 to £50.

The Stock of Rings, Brooches, Bracelets, Necklets, Earrings, &c., is the largest and choicest in London, and contains new and artistic designs not to be obtained elsewhere, an inspection of which is politely invited. Plain figures. Cash prices. Goods forwarded for selection and competition. Awarded Six First-Class Medals and the Cross of the Legion of Honour. Illustrated Catalogue Post-Free to all Parts of the World.

THE MANUFACTURING

GOLDSMITHS' & SILVERSMITHS' COMPY.

Show-Rooms:

112, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, W.

MANUFACTORY: CLERKENWELL.

THE CENTURY DRESS FABRICS

Direct from the Loom to the Consumer.

GREAT SAVING TO EVERY PURCHASER!!

Patterns sent post-free to any Address. Any length cut at MILL PRICES. All parcels over £1 value carriage paid.

Registered Trade Mark.

THE CENTURY CASHMERES,

Which received the highest awards (Silver Medals) at the International Health and Crystal Palace Exhibitions, have now a world-wide reputation.

THE CENTURY

SERGES, COATINGS, TWEEDS, AND ULSTERINGS,

For Ladies', Boys', and Gentlemen's Wear, cannot be equalled for Value and Quality.

DRESS FABRICS,

To suit every Climate and every Fashion, at prices from 4½d. to 5s. per yard.

Write at once to the

BRADFORD MANUFACTURING COMPANY,

BRADFORD,

YORKSHIRE.

And mention this Paper.

Allen & Hanburys' "Perfected" COD-LIVER OIL.

"Is as nearly tasteless as Cod-Liver Oil can be."—Lancet.

"Has almost the delicacy of salad oil."—Brit. Med. Journal.

"No nauseous eructations follow after it is swallowed."—Medical Press.

It can be borne and digested by the most delicate; is the only oil which does not "repeat"; and for these reasons the most delicious kind in use. In capsuled Bottles only, at 1s. 4d., 2s. 6d., 4s. 9d., and 9s.

Sold Everywhere.

ALLEN & HANBURYS' MALT EXTRACT

Forms a valuable adjunct to Cod-Liver Oil, being not only a highly concentrated and nutritious food, but a powerful aid to the digestion of all starchy and farinaceous matters, rendering them easy of assimilation by the most enfeebled invalid. It is thus utilised in the manufacture of ALLEN and HANBURYS' Malted Farinaceous Food for Infants. Both it and the Food can be obtained through any Chemist. The Malt, in Bottles, 2s. and 3s. 6d.; the Food, in Tins, at 6d., 1s., 2s., 5s., and 10s.

"CARNRICK'S"

PEPTONISED (Digested)

COD-LIVER OIL AND MILK.

Sold by all Chemists, in 16 oz. Amber Bottles, at 4s. 6d., or sent direct, carriage paid, on receipt of price.

It contains 52 per cent of pure Norwegian Cod-Liver Oil combined with 48 per cent of evaporated Milk reduced to the consistency of the Oil, both digested. The best, cheapest, and most nourishing emulsion, ever made. Sweet as cream. Never separates. The taste of the Oil WHOLLY DISGUISED by the addition of the digested Milk. Can be taken by the most delicate person WITH A RELISH. Keeps in any climate. Most emulsions contain 50 to 70 per cent of water, and 30 to 50 per cent of oil. By using evaporated digested Milk instead of water, this preparation is WHOLLY NUTRITIOUS, and therefore the CHEAPEST. A trial of Peptonised Cod-Liver Oil and Milk will produce an IMMEDIATE GAIN in FLESH and STRENGTH. Delicate persons and children who have heretofore been unable to take Cod-Liver Oil in any form will find the Digested Cod-Liver Oil and Milk in this preparation MOST PALATABLE. We also manufacture the above preparation, combined with HYPOPHOSPHITES of LIME and SODA.

THE MALTINE MANUFACTURING COMPANY, LTD.,

24 AND 25, HART-STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON, W.C.

The ONLY GOLD MEDAL awarded at the International Health Exhibition for Malt Extracts was given for MALTINE, the only Malt Extract made from Wheat, Oats, and Barley; also a GOLD MEDAL for "CARNRICK'S BEEF PEPTONOIDS."

£10.

In return for a £10 Note, free and safe by post, one of BENNETT'S

LADIES' GOLD WATCHES,

perfect for time, beauty, and workmanship. With Keyless Action. Air-tight, damp-tight, and dust-tight.

Bennett's WATCHES 65, Cheapside

£15.

In return for Post-office Order free and safe by post, one of BENNETT'S

GENTLEMEN'S GOLD KEYLESS WATCHES,

perfect for time, beauty, and workmanship. With Keyless Action. Air-tight, damp-tight, and dust-tight.

SIR JOHN BENNETT'S WATCHES and CLOCKS.

£10 LADY'S GOLD KEYLESS. Elegant and accurate.
£15 GENTLEMAN'S STRONG GOLD KEYLESS.
20 GUINEA GOLD HALF CHRONOMETER for all Climates.
£25 MEDICAL and SCIENTIFIC CENTRE SECONDS.
£20, £30, £40 PRESENTATION WATCHES, Arms, and Inscription emblazoned for Noblemen, Gentlemen, and others.
£25 HALL CLOCK to CHIME on 8 Bells, in oak or mahogany with bracket and shield 3 Guinea extra.
18 Carat GOLD CHAINS and JEWELLERY.

65 and 64, CHEAPSIDE, E.C.

HEN BREEDING, ST. ILGEN, BADEN.

Largest Establishment of Germany, delivers the approved GRUNHALDT'S BREED APPARATUS, Small and Large Dimensions, and also Utensils for Races and Fattening. Installation of every disposition, Instructions, Expedition of Chickens. Sale of Race Birds and Finest Dish Poultry. Prospectus on application.

The Direction, O. GRUNHALDT, A. WESTPHALINGER.

SILVER MEDAL, INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION, 1884.
HIGHEST AWARD, International Medical and Sanitary Exhibition, 1881.
SILVER MEDAL (Highest Award), National Health Society, 1882.

A TURKISH BATH IN YOUR OWN ROOM

WITH PERFECT SAFETY.

TO THE STALWART, A LUXURY
AFTER HUNTING,
DRIVING, SHOOTING,
FISHING, RIDING,
OR ANY EXCESSIVE FATIGUE.
Can be used for Hot Air or Vapour.
Apparatus for use under Chair, with best Cigar Tinned Iron Supports, in Box, 50s.

TO THE INVALID,
A NECESSITY

For Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Eczema, and Skin, Liver, and Kidney Affections.

Apparatus for Bed in Box, with Pair of Wicker Frames, 45s.

The Bath combined, for Bed and Chair, 70s.

"Will be found a luxury as well as a valuable remedial resource."—Sanitary Record.

The Lancet says:—"This instrument is very complete and portable: it is cheap, and it acts promptly."

SOLE INVENTORS AND MANUFACTURERS,

JAMES ALLEN & SON,
20 and 21, Marylebone-lane, London, W.

Also makers of Bronchitis Kettles, Invalids' Baths, Bed-Baths, Bed-Pans, Nursery Baths, Infants' and Invalids' Food Warmers, &c.

Illustrated Catalogue post-free for three stamps.

ANY DOCTOR WILL TELL YOU there is no better Cough Medicine than KEATING'S LOZENGES. One gives relief; if you suffer from Cough try them but once; they will cure, and they will not injure your health. Sold everywhere, in 1½d. Tins.

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA.
The best remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and safest aperient for delicate constitutions, ladies, and children. Of all Chemists.

CIRIO & CO.,

SPECIALLY APPOINTED AGENTS
TO THE PRINCIPAL WINE-GROWERS OF ITALY.

EQUAL TO BEST CHAMPAGNE. 30s. to 36s. per D.z.

DRY and OLD. Best Marks. From 21s. per Doz.

24s. per Doz.

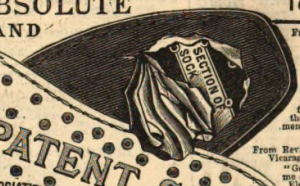
Two Gallons.

20 PRIZE MEDALS.
Best Tinned Peas, Haricots, Tomatoes, Peaches, &c.
11 and 13, SOUTHWARK-ST. London; and Turin.

CHOICE RED and WHITE. 25s. per Doz.

EQUAL to BURGUNDY, Special. 21s. to 24s.

"THE ELECTROPATENT SOCKS."



For creating a constant Electric Current and producing a high degree of warmth.

Testimonials.

AN ABSOLUTE AND

Testimonials.

NEVER WEAR OUT

ELECTROPATENT SOCK

PROPRIETORS THE PALL MALL ELECTRIC ASSOCIATION LIMITED 21 HOLBORN VIADUCT LONDON E.C.

FOR GOUT SCIATICA & RHEUMATISM

POSITIVE REMEDY

From Miss Elam, Thorne' Hall, Sedbergh, Yorks, October 15th, 1883.

"Miss Elam encloses a Post Office Order for 12s 6d, and will thank Mr. Harness to send her a pair of the Electric Socks for a friend, size No. 3. Since Miss Elam has been wearing those sent, she finds the feet are wonderfully warm and comfortable. She had previously suffered much from cold feet."

From T. L. Selling, Esq. Royal Hotel, Ross, Herefordshire, Sept. 11th, 1883.

"I have had one of your Galvanic Generators, and a pair of your Electric Socks, from which I have experienced very great relief."

From Dr. C. Lemprière, D.C.L., &c., January 20th, 1883.

"Your Electropathic Socks are indeed a wonder and a solace to those suffering from Gout, and another proof of the great future which is open to the scientific development of Electricity."

From Rev. P. Taylor, Twyford Vicarage, Melton Mowbray.

"Gentlemen,—Please send me circular of Dr. Scott's Electric Flesh Brush and appliances for the arms when affected with shaking or tremulousness. I recommended your Socks to a lady, who has found great benefit in them.

Yours truly,
P. Taylor."

FOR CHILBLAINS AND COLD FEET.

The SOCKS are simply put inside the shoes or boots, and after wearing them a short time a continued and most beneficial warmth penetrates the body.

These ELECTRIC SOCKS prove the best means for keeping the feet warm, for creating bodily comfort, and preventing illness; they are preventives against Rheumatism, Sciatica, and Gout. Chilblains, &c., and also are very beneficial in the first stages of spinal affections, &c. Although the Medical Faculty may disagree upon the true nature of Rheumatic Gout it is beyond doubt that in most cases the most effective remedy is electricity, which can best be conveyed into the system by the use of these Socks worn in boots.

The ELECTRIC SOCKS produce a current acting congenially on the body, and is far superior to th prickling and disagreeable influence of an induction coil. Against spinal complaints, the first symptoms of which are numbness of the feet and pricking sensation (so-called "Pins and Needles"), they act very effectively, the electric current influencing the spine through the peripheric ends of the nerves.

ELECTRIC SOCKS should be worn by those who have Rheumatic or Gouty Affections in the Feet, or are liable to coldness or chilblains in those parts. The circulation is at once stimulated, and an agreeable warmth diffused. The heat of the body causes Thermo-Electricity, the perspiration of the body evolves a galvanic current, and the Electric power is always in force.

IMPORTANCE OF WEARING ELECTRIC SOCKS.—Few are conscious of the very great advantage of wearing under the feet a medium that will not only prevent the abstraction of electricity by cold earth, but will at the same time generate in the feet those electric currents on which warmth depends.

Please forward Exact Size of Feet when ordering these Socks. All Chemists keep the Electropatent Socks.

CAUTION.—Beware of the rubbishy, so called magnetic socks that are sometimes stocked by Chemists on account of their low price—they cannot generate Electricity and are dear at any price. The Electropatent Socks are only sold IN BOXES.

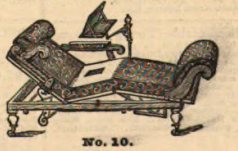
Pair of Socks forwarded, post free, on receipt of Post Office Order or Cheque for 12s. 6d., to be made payable to C. B. HARNESS, Managing Director, PALL MALL ELECTRIC ASSOCIATION, LTD. 21, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON, E.C.

JOHN WARD 246 & 247, TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD

(LATE OF SAVILLE HOUSE, LEICESTER-SQUARE), LONDON.

INVALID CHAIR MANUFACTURER TO THE QUEEN AND ROYAL FAMILY.

The largest assortment in the world of INVALID CHAIRS, SPINAL COUCHES, BATH CHAIRS, BED TABLES, and INVALID FURNITURE, &c., for Sale or Hire.



Prize Medals—London, 1851 and 1862; Paris, 1855, 1867, and 1878 (3 Medals); Vienna, 1873 (2 Medals); Dublin, 1865.

Established 150 years.

Price Catalogues, Post-free.

No. 19.

No. 10.

No. 1.

No. 14.

NEW MUSIC.

TRIAL BY JURY. By W. S. Gilbert and ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Now performing at the Savoy Theatre. Complete words and music, 3s. net; pianoforte solo, 2s. 6d. net.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S LATEST SUCCESSES:

BID ME GOOD-BYE. Music by TOSTI.

BID ME GOOD-BYE. Words by Weatherly.

BID ME GOOD-BYE. "A tuneful ditty in valse rhythm; is certain to acquire vast popularity."—Times, Jan. 9.

BID ME GOOD-BYE. "A most exquisite song."

BID ME GOOD-BYE VALSE. By H. W. DE CAMORS. On the melody of Tosti's newest and most successful song.

BID ME GOOD-BYE VALSE. Played with immense success by Liddell's Band, Coote's Band, and the Bijou Orchestra; also at the Strand and Adelphi Theatres every night.
Price 2s. net.

P. BUCALOSSI.

PHYLLIS WALTZ.

MERRY FOOTSTEPS POLKA. Both played nightly at the Haymarket Theatre with great success. Price 2s. each net.

CAROLINE LOWTHIAN.

BLACK AND TAN POLKA. This will be the polka of the season.

FAHRWOHL WALTZ. Price 2s. each net.

LUKE WHEELER.

TOI SEULE WALTZ.

LOYAUTÉ WALTZ.

CHIC POLKA.

SEA BREEZE POLKA. "The Sea Breeze Polka is one of the best and most spirited polkas which has been published for a long time."—Morning Post. Price 2s. each net.

CLAIRE WALTZ. By LEONARD GAUTIER. Illustrated with a beautiful photo of Mrs. Kendal. Price 2s. net.

CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street, London. City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ALEXANDRE HARMONIUMS, for Church, School, or Drawing-Room, from 6 to 150 guineas; or, on the Three-Years' System, from £1 5s. per quarter.—50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S PET ORGAN, Seven Stops, including Sub-bass and Sub and Super Octave Coupler. Elegant Carved Walnut Case. 16 guineas. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S CENTENNIAL GRAND ORGAN, 15 Stops, 9 Sets of Reeds, and Combination Tubes, 85 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S PIPE and REED COMBINATION ORGANS. With one manual, from 60 guineas. With two manuals and pedals, from 120 guineas. Hydraulic motors, for blowing, from 8 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S ORGANS have been pronounced by the most eminent musicians in England to be superior to all others in pipe-like quality of tone.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S AMERICAN ORGANS. A combination of pipes and reeds, which do not go out of tune by the most severe changes of temperature. Easy of manipulation, handsome in design, and of great durability.

From 18 to 225 guineas. Second-hand from 12 guineas. Testimonials and Descriptive Lists free by post. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry.

TO LADIES.—SALE of NEW MUSIC at a large reduction and post-free. All new Songs, Pieces, &c., of all publishers in stock. New copies, best editions. Prices commence 1d., 6d., 9d. Catalogues sent post-free. J. W. MOFFATT, 3, Barnabury-street, London, N. Established 1827.

BROADWOOD'S PIANOFORTES. CRAMER'S SUPPLY every size of these INSTRUMENTS on their Three-Years' System of Hire. 207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

ERARD'S PIANOFORTES.—CRAMER'S SUPPLY every size of these INSTRUMENTS on their Three-Years' System of Hire.—207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

COLLARD'S PIANOFORTES. CRAMER'S SUPPLY every size of these INSTRUMENTS on their Three-Years' System of Hire. 207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

GRAND PIANOFORTES.—CRAMER'S SUPPLY GRAND PIANOFORTES by all the great makers, £7 7s. to £32 10s. per quarter. Full Price-Lists post-free.—207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

D'ALMAINE'S PIANOS Half Price, from £10. D'ALMAINE'S AMERICAN ORGANS from £5. All full compass, warranted for ten years; carriage free, and all risk taken. Easiest terms arranged. Established 100 years. 91, Finsbury-pavement, City, E.C.

MOORE and MOORE'S Iron Pianofortes, from 36 guineas, on Three-Years' System, carriage free. Liberal discount for cash. Illustrated Price-Lists post-free. Pianofortes from 14 guineas.—104 and 105, Bishopsgate Within.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—Messrs. ERARD, of 18, Great Marlborough-street, London, and 13, Rue de Mail, Paris, Makers to her Majesty and the Prince and Princess of Wales, CAUTION the Public that the Pianofortes are being sold bearing the name of "Erard" which are not of their manufacture. For information as to authenticity apply at 18, Great Marlborough-st., where new Pianos can be obtained from 30 guineas.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—COTTAGES, from 50 guineas. OBLIQUES, from 85 guineas. GRANDS, from 125 guineas.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE or for SALE, from 2½ guineas upwards.—JOHN BROADWOOD and SONS, 33, Great Pulteney-street, Golden-square, W. Manufactory, 45, Horseferry-road, Westminster.

KIRKMAN and SON, MAKERS of GRAND and COTTAGE PIANOS, 3 and 9, SOHO-SQUARE, LONDON, W.

KIRKMAN and SON'S STEEL GRANDS (horizontal and upright) are constructed with their patent wrought-steel frame and wrest-plank, securing a pure tone as well as the utmost durability. They also make an overstrung iron grand, only 5 ft. 9 in. long, at a lower price.

KIRKMAN and SON'S IRON-FRAMED COTTAGE PIANOS range from 4 ft. in height, are full trichord, and are fitted with the best repetition check-actions. They can be obtained in solid wood cases, and specially prepared for extreme climates. A new model has just been introduced for yachts, boudoirs, school-rooms, &c., only pianette size (3 ft. 9 in. high by 2 ft. wide), but full trichord, and with check action.
All their Pianos are for sale, hire, or on the three-years' system.

NEW MUSIC.

BOOSEY and CO.'S NEW SONGS 2s. each,

OUR LAST WALTZ. New Romantic Song. By MOLLOY.

OUR LAST WALTZ. Words by Weatherly.

OUR LAST WALTZ. Sung by Miss Agnes Larkcom.

OUR LAST WALTZ. Sung by Miss Damian.

OUR LAST WALTZ. Sung by Madame De Fonblanque.

OUR LAST WALTZ. Arranged also as a Dance. By LAMOTHE.

OUR LAST WALTZ. Both Editions are illustrated with a beautiful Vignette.

LADY ARTHUR HILL'S NEW SONG.

TWO THOUGHTS. By the Composer of "In the Gloaming."

A PENNY FOR YOUR THOUGHTS. By the Composer of "Swinging."

A PENNY FOR YOUR THOUGHTS. Sung by Miss Mary Davies. 2s.

MOIR.—ONLY ONCE MORE.

MOIR.—THE LAST REGRET.

MOIR.—GOOD-BYE, SWEET ROSE.

MARZIALS' NEW SONG.

MAY MARGARET. Sung by Miss Mary Davies at the Ballad Concerts.

MARZIALS' FAVOURITE SONGS.
Never to Know. | The River of Years.
Leaving yet Loving. | Ask Nothing More.

MARZIALS' POPULAR BALLADS.
The Miller and the Maid. | Just as Well.
A Sunrise Shower. | Tresham Ferry.
The Three Sailor Boys. | In the North Countree.

AN INIMITABLE SONG. By MOLLOY.

TO-MORROW WILL BE FRIDAY. Sung by Mr. Barrington Foote at the Ballad Concerts.

ANTOINETTE STERLING'S NEW SONG.

LOVE'S OLD SWEET SONG. By MOLLOY. Sung by Madame Antoinette Sterling at the Ballad Concerts four times.

STEPHEN ADAMS' NEW SONGS.

THE MAID OF THE MILL.

SHIPWRECKED. Also new editions of "The Owl" and "The Little Hero." BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

NEW SONGS IN THE CAVENDISH MUSIC BOOKS. Price 1s. each.
77. EIGHTEEN SONGS FOR YOUNG GIRLS.
78. TEN SONGS OF THE DAY, including "When the Heart is Young," "Mignonette," and "Do not forget."
46. TEN SONGS OF THE DAY, including "Twickenham Ferry" and "Olivia."
68. TEN SONGS OF THE DAY, including "She wandered down" and "It was a Dream."
47. EIGHT SONGS by ARTHUR SULLIVAN, including "Looking Back."
65. TEN NEW BARITONE SONGS, sung by Santley and Maybrick.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

THE DIAMOND MUSIC BOOKS, 32 and 40 pages, price 6d. each.
1. The Singing Master.
2. The Music Master (Piano).
3. The Violin Master.
4. Family Glee Book (40 Glees and Part-Songs).
5. Harmonium Voluntary Book (50 pieces).
6. Select Piano Pieces (6).
7. Ditto (10).
8. Gavottes and Minuets (12).
9. Marches (18).
10. Sacred Songs (46).
11. Popular Songs (30).
12. Irish Songs (30).
13. Old English Songs (30).
14. Modern Songs (10). Book 1.
15. Ditto (10). Book 2.
16. New American songs (12).
17. Songs of the Sea (13).
18. Country Dances, &c. (73).
19. Juvenile Pianoforte Book.
20. Juvenile Song Book (41).
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

NEW AND SUCCESSFUL SONGS.

PEGGY O' YARMOUTH TOWN. By FREDERICK BEVAN.
PEGGY O'YARMOUTH TOWN. By FREDERICK BEVAN.
PEGGY O'YARMOUTH TOWN. By FREDERICK BEVAN.
Sung by Mr. Franklin Clive, Mr. Fredk Bevan, Mr. Theodore Distin, Mr. James Budd, Mr. Horncroft, &c.
2s. net.

TWO BELLS. By MICHAEL WATSON. Sung by Mr. Barrington Foote. Words by Knight Summers. 2s. net.

GOOD-NIGHT, ROBIN. By J. L. ROECKEL. Sung by Madame Patey. Words by Fred E. Weatherly. 2s. net.

NEW DANCE MUSIC FOR THE SEASON.

L'AMOUR IMMORTEL VALSE. Par FABIAN ROSE. Best Waltz of the Season. L'AMOUR IMMORTEL. L'AMOUR IMMORTEL. L'AMOUR IMMORTEL. 2s. net.

LA COQUETTE VALSE. Par TITO MATTEI. 2s. net.

MADAME DU BARRY VALSE. Par EDOUARD AMILLON. 2s. net.

OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE QUADRILLES. By ETTORE PANIZZA. 2s. net.
PATEY and WILLIS, 44, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

TO MANITOBA. The Completion of THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY (which is the ONLY DIRECT ROUTE to the Canadian North-West) to the summit of the Rocky Mountains has thrown open to settlement some of the finest Agricultural Lands in Manitoba and the North-West, of which the Dominion Government offer ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES FREE. For further information apply to any Steam-ship Agent; and for new maps, pamphlets, and the fullest particulars about the country (free of charge), as well as the new tourist guide, "From Quebec to the Rocky Mountains," when published, apply either personally or by letter to ALEXANDER BEGG, Canadian Pacific Railway Offices, 88, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

WANTED, Respectable Young Women, as DOMESTIC SERVANTS, to proceed to NEW SOUTH WALES. Passages, including Provisions, Bedding, &c., will be granted by the Agent-General in first-class steamers by approved applicants, upon payment of £2 each. An experienced Surgeon and Matron accompany each ship. Single Females are quickly engaged at good wages on their arrival in Sydney; but, if desired, the Government will provide them with free accommodation for ten days. The next steamer will be dispatched about Feb. 25. Further information may be obtained at the EMIGRATION DEPARTMENT, New South Wales Government Offices, 5, Westminster-chambers, Victoria-street, Westminster, S.W.

NEW MUSIC.

EDWIN ASHDOWN'S POPULAR SONGS.
I AM WAITING. Four keys .. .. F. Birch.
ANSWERED! Harmonium ad lib. .. .. Boyton Smith.
DEAR BIRD OF WINTER. Three keys .. Wilhelm Ganz.
UNDER THE SHADOW OF ST. PAUL'S.. Seymour Smith.
A LITTLE BIRD TOLD ME .. .. Charles Tirbutt.
Price 2s. each net, postage free.

EDWIN ASHDOWN'S POPULAR PIANOFORTE PIECES.
PAROLES DU CŒUR .. .. Victor Delacour.
DIAVOLINA .. .. .. Gustav Lange.
ROMEO AND JULIET .. .. Seymour Smith.
MARCHE DES MENESTRELS .. Seymour Smith.
Price 1s. 6d. each net, postage free.

EDWIN ASHDOWN'S POPULAR PIANOFORTE PIECES.
MARITANA (Wallace) .. .. Sydney Smith.
CARNAVAL GALOP .. .. .. Paul Beaumont.
BOUTON DE ROSE .. .. .. Victor Delacour.
VALSE CHAMPETRE .. .. .. Gustav Lange.
Price 2s. each net, postage free.

EDWIN ASHDOWN'S POPULAR PIANOFORTE DUETS.
PSYCHE (Gavotta) .. .. .. Tito Mattei. 4s.
MARITANA (Wallace) .. .. Sydney Smith. 6s.
THE BOHEMIAN GIRL (Balfe) Sydney Smith. 6s.
Half price, postage free.

SYDNEY SMITH'S METHOD. "The method of methods." Price 2s. 6d. net; postage free. EDWIN ASHDOWN, Hanover-square.

CHARMING NEW SONGS. 24 stamps each.
HEART TO HEART. By BEHREND. "A pretty and most effective song." A, B flat (C to E), C, and D.
SURELY. New Song. By A. H. BEHREND. 15,000 copies sold first month of issue. 15,000 copies sold first month of issue. 15,000 copies sold first month of issue. E flat, F, G (compass D to E), A flat, B flat, and C.
GOING HOME. New Song. By COTSFORD DICK. "Will take high rank in the musical world." G, A flat, A (compass F to F), and B flat.
TILL THE BREAKING OF THE DAY. By CIRO PINSUTI. "A splendid song, one of uncommon merit; the music is rich and full, and contains a most charming melody. Certainly Signor Pinsuti's prettiest and most beautiful song." F, G, A flat, A (E to F), and B flat. "The successes of the season." 24 stamps each.

W. MORLEY and CO., 269, Regent-street, W.; and 70, Upper-street, N.

EDITH COOKE'S NEW SONG.

LOVED VOICES. (In F, E flat, and G.) Is sung everywhere, with enormous success.

LOVED VOICES, as a Vocal Duet, is a charming arrangement. Each 2s. net.

MY HEART'S MESSAGE.

BEHREND'S NEW SONG. In keys to suit all voices. 2s. net.
ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street, London.

CHARLES HALLÉ'S PRACTICAL PIANOFORTE SCHOOL. New and Enlarged Edition. Charles Hallé's New Pianoforte Tutor. The best and most useful Tutor ever published. Charles Hallé's Musical Library. Entirely remodelled and enlarged. Catalogues post-free on application. FORSYTH BROTHERS, London and Manchester.

THREE NEW PIECES FOR THE PIANOFORTE. By STEPHEN HELLER. FABLIAU. Op. 153. CAPRICIETTO. Op. 156. TROIS FEUILLES D'ALBUM. Op. 167. Price 2s. each, net. FORSYTH BROTHERS, London and Manchester.

DOMINION ORGANS. A Large Stock of these celebrated Organs always on view. Considered the finest-toned American Organs yet produced. A New two-manual pedal Organ just introduced, style 32. Catalogues post-free. FORSYTH BROTHERS, 272a, Regent-circus, Oxford-street, London; and 122 and 124, Deansgate, Manchester.

CHOCOLAT MENIER. AMSTERDAM EXHIBITION, 1883. Awarded the GRAND DIPLOMA OF HONOUR.

CHOCOLAT MENIER, in ¼ lb. and ½ lb. PACKETS. For BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, and SUPPER.

CHOCOLAT MENIER.—Awarded Twenty-Eight PRIZE MEDALS. Consumption annually exceeds 15,000,000 lb.

CHOCOLAT MENIER. Paris, London, New York. Sold Everywhere.

FRY'S COCOA. GOLD MEDAL, Calcutta Exhibition, 1884. FRY'S CARACAS COCOA. "A most delicious and valuable article."—Standard. PURE COCOA ONLY. FRY'S COCOA EXTRACT. "Strictly pure, easily assimilated."—W. W. STODDART, Analyst for Bristol. NINETEEN PRIZE MEDALS.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA. Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder. Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa, with excess of Fat extracted. Four times the strength of Cocoa Thickened yet Weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c., and in reality cheaper. The faculty pronounce it the most nutritious, perfectly digestive Beverage for "BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, or SUPPER." Keeps for years in all Climates. Requires no Cooking. A teaspoonful to Breakfast-Cup costing less than a halfpenny. In Air-Tight Tins, 1s 6d., 3s., &c., by Chemists and Grocers. H. SCHWEITZER and CO., 10, Adam-street, Strand, W.C.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR IS A WORLD-WIDE NECESSARY.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR FOR THE NURSERY.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR FOR THE FAMILY TABLE.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR FOR THE SICK-ROOM.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR HAS A WORLD-WIDE REPUTATION.

£105,000 ACCIDENTS, for which TWO MILLIONS have been paid as COMPENSATION by the RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE COMPANY, 64, Cornhill. Accidents of all kinds. Paid-up and Invested Funds, £240,000. Premium Income, £235,000. Chairman, Harvie M. Farquhar, Esq. Apply at the Railway Stations, Local Agents, or West-End Office—8, Grand Hotel-buildings, Charing-cross; or at the Head Office, 64, Cornhill, London, E.C.—WM. J. VIAN, Sec.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET.

ANNUAL STOCK-TAKING SALE.

ON ACCOUNT of the RE-BUILDING of a portion of the Oxford-street Premises, all SURPLUS STOCK will be RE-MARKED at GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

SILK is now lower in Price than at any period since the French Revolution, 1848. Per yard.
One thousand Pieces of new Brocaded Satins, combining all the Fashionable colourings. These are the Cheapest Silks ever submitted .. .. .. 2s. 6d. to 5 6
500 Pieces of Rich Brocaded Velvets in all the new coloured mixtures .. .. 6s. 6d. to 9 11

BLACK SATIN STRIPES, 2s. to 2s. 6d.
200 Pieces Coloured Satin Stripes.. .. .. .. 2 6
800 Pieces of Fancy Silks and Satins in different designs, specially made for Costumes 2 11

BLACK BROCADED VELVETS, SATIN GROUND, from 4 11
2000 Pieces of Plain Silks, Satins, and Merveilleux to match the brocades, from 2 6
Coloured Twill-faced All-Silk Satins, usually sold at 4s. 6d. 2 6
Patterns post-free.
PETER ROBINSON'S.

NEW WINTER DRESSES. Per yard. s. d.
Devonshire, Witney, Scotch, and other SERGES, in various shades of Navy, Cream, Black, Bronze, &c.; all Wool; very wide .. .. .. 9d. to 1 6
Homespun Cashmere Jugs, mixed colours 1 0

NEW WINTER DRESSES. Per yard. s. d.
All the usual and several distinctly New Shades of Colour in Ottoman Cashmir Angola Poules 1 2
Cashmere d'Italie; all wool, very durable 2 0
French Merinos, very wide .. .. .. 1s. 11d. to 2 9
Very Fine French Cashmeres .. .. 2s. 3d. to 2 9
Velvet Velveteens, much improved in make, colour, and price .. .. 2s. 3d. to 3 3
A Black Velveteen, specially cheap 1 11
Patterns post-free.
PETER ROBINSON'S.

DRESS MATERIALS. £ s. d.
Cream-coloured Richly-embroidered Alsatian Lawn Robes, double quantity of wide embroidery, each 14s. 9d., 16s. 9d., and 18s. 9d. 18 9
Finely-worked Cashmere Robes in Black and all the new shades of Brown, Bronze, Grey, Dark Green, Navy, Drab, &c., extra quantity of embroidery, each 1 18 6
COMPOSITE ROBES, 20 yards in each; a great novelty, in every combination of style and colour, all Wool .. .. each 1 1 0

FOR PALETOTS, JACKETS, &c.,
ARCTIC SEAL CLOTH. The highest perfection of make and wear. 52 in. wide, superior in effect to sealskin. Also every kind of Polarian, Beaver, Poil de Chameau, Peau de Mouton, &c., in Black, White, Brown, Drab, &c.

CLEARANCE SALE of SURPLUS STOCK.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET AND REGENT-STREET.

GREAT SALE at REDUCED PRICES at PETER ROBINSON'S MOURNING WAREHOUSE, REGENT-STREET.

THE ANNUAL JANUARY SALE will COMMENCE on MONDAY, JAN. 5, and continue for One Month.

GENUINE BARGAINS will be offered in each Department. Amongst them may be mentioned Silk Costumes, reduced from 6½ to 4½ guineas, from 8½ to 6, from 10 to 7½, from 14 to 10 gns.

BALL, DINNER, and EVENING DRESSES. Reduced from 3 to 2 guineas, from 4 to 3, from 5 to 3½, from 8 to 6 guineas.

MATERIAL COSTUMES in Black and Greys, beautifully fashioned and designed, in various New Textures and Combinations, reduced from 3 to 2 guineas, from 4 to 3, from 6 to 4, from 8 to 6 guineas.

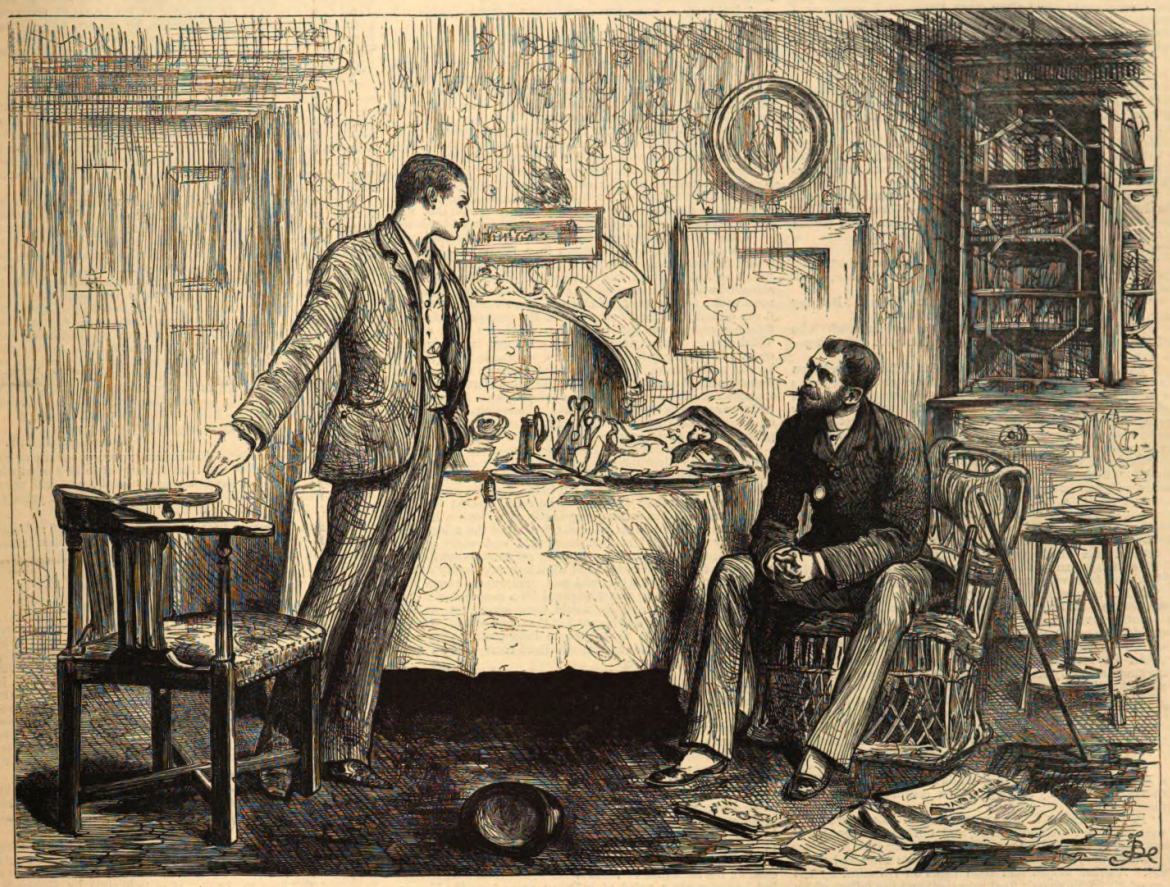
THE MAGNIFICENT STOCK of CLOAKS, MANTLES, JACKETS, and OPERAS are all very considerably reduced.

BLACK SILKS and VELVETS.—Very handsome Brocaded Velvets, Plain Black Silks, Ottomans, Merveilleux, and Satins, are all marked down to very low prices.

FANCY SILKS and REMNANTS. Many reduced to One Half.

ALSO SHAWLS, Operas, Evening Fichus, Fans, Hosiery, Gloves, Collars. The beautiful Stock of French Millinery Materials, by the yard. Crapes, &c., have all undergone the same reduction.

MOURNING ORDERS during the SALE will be supplied at the same cheap rates, best care and prompt attention will be given to all orders, large or small. Travelling assistants fully competent to take measures and instructions will be sent at once to any part of the country, free of any extra expense whatever to the customer, immediately ON RECEIPT OF LETTER OR TELEGRAM ADDRESSED TO PETER ROBINSON, MOURNING WAREHOUSE, REGENT-STREET, LONDON.



PLATT'S SPECIALITIES.
CAMBRIC POCKET-HANDKERCHIEFS, Linen Cambric, hemmed and washed, ready for use. The So-called Five-eighths (18-inch).
4s., 4s. 9d., 5s. 6d., 6s. 6d., 7s. 9d., 9s., 10s. 6d., 12s. 6d. per dozen.
The So-called Three-quarter (22-inch).
5s. 3d., 6s., 6s. 10½., 7s. 9d., 8s. 9d., 10s., 12s., 14s. 9d. per dozen.
The So-called Seven-eighths (25-inch).
6s. 6d., 7s. 3d., 8s., 8s. 9d., 10s., 11s. 6d., 13s. 9d., 16s. 9d. per dozen.
PLATT and CO., 77, St. Martin's-lane, London, W.C., will send free to any part of England, Ireland, or Scotland, on receipt of cash with order, not less than 1 doz., at the doz. prices.
N.B.—If not satisfactory, the handkerchiefs can be sent back, and others had or money returned.

DRESS SHIRTS.—FORD'S EUREKA DRESS SHIRTS.—A large stock ready made in eight different sizes and three different qualities, of the very finest Linen, as well as the fashionable Ribbed Pique, to wear with one stud or three, 5s. 9d., 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., 9s. 6d. each. In single boxes, ready for use, by parcels post free.
R. FORD and CO., 41, Poultry, London.

ÆGIDIUS.—The only Flannel Shirts that Never Shrink in Washing. Three for 29s. 6d.
R. FORD and CO., 41, Poultry, London.

ÆGIDIUS.—Three for 39s. 6d. Soft as Silk, and very Elastic. Free by parcels post.
R. FORD and CO., 41, Poultry, London.

DRIVING BY NIGHT. The LIGHT from a PAIR of WESTAWAY'S PATENT LAMPS is equal to that from SIX ORDINARY CARRIAGE LAMPS. These LAMPS are STRONGLY MADE and PERFECTLY VENTILATED. A pair will be SENT on APPROVAL, CARRIAGE PAID, and a FAIR TRIAL ALLOWED, on receipt of a remittance. SOLD by all CARRIAGE-BUILDERS. PARSONS and CHAPMAN, TAVISTOCK.

DRAWN BY F. BARNARD.

The young man was silent for a minute, and then said with sudden vehemence: "Heriot, I want to see her!"

ADRIAN VIDAL.

BY W. E. NORRIS,

AUTHOR OF "MDLLE. DE MERSAC," "MATRIMONY," "THIRLBY HALL," &C.

CHAPTER VII.

A LITTLE DISCOURAGEMENT.

One fine hot morning in the beginning of July Mr. Heriot left his house and walked slowly down Brook-street, carrying his stick under his arm and stooping slightly, as his habit was. The fashionable world was hardly out of bed yet, for the clocks had only just struck ten; but many of Heriot's acquaintances were already up and abroad, and he had not proceeded far on his way before he was accosted by some of these. A curate, hurrying along with shuffling, ecclesiastical gait, caught sight of him and crossed the road, exclaiming, "You 're the very man I wanted to meet!" After which there was a brief colloquy, and Heriot's finger and thumb went into his waistcoat pocket, and a transfer of coin took place. In Bond-street, further on, some of the trades-people, who were standing in their doorways, wished him good morning, and hoped he was keeping pretty well this beautiful weather. For London is not quite the unneighbourly city that it is often represented as being, and those who spend a little money and take a little interest in the parishes wherein they dwell soon discover that the metropolis is rather a collection of small towns than one immense one. Heriot had plenty of money, which he distributed freely and unostentatiously among those who had none; so that his kindly, ugly face was tolerably well known in the streets which lay between his house and his club.

"Mornin', Sir. Aint seen you this three weeks," said the crossing-sweeper in Piccadilly. "Bin porely agin, Sir?"

But Heriot, as he produced the expected sixpence, said No, he had only been down in the country; and so passed on to Duke-street, where he was informed that Mr. Vidal was at home and at breakfast.

Vidal greeted his friend with even more warmth than usual. "My dear old chap, how delighted I am to see you! What the deuce do you mean by going out of town the very day that I return? Sit down, and they 'll bring you some hot coffee in a minute."

"Thanks, I have breakfasted," answered Heriot; "but I 'll smoke a cigarette with you if you 'll allow me. Well; and what is your news?"

Vidal made a gesture of profound discouragement. "My news! Why, you must know already what my news is likely to be. I suppose you have seen the papers?"

"I have been staying in a house where they don't take in many papers," answered Heriot, conscious of an unflattering ignorance upon a subject which ought to have engrossed him more deeply; "but I saw some very favourable notices of your book before I left London."

"Oh, some of them were civil enough; some of them always are, I take it. But the people whose praise is worth having won't hear of me at any price. They 've found me out, my dear fellow; they 've discovered the nakedness of the land, as I knew they would. Just look at that!"

And he tossed a copy of the Monday Review across the table to Heriot, who began to read aloud the article to which his attention was directed.

"It is not as often as we could wish that we are able to congratulate the writers of novels upon having selected a thoroughly appropriate title for their works, and we are the more ready to accord this praise to the author of 'Satiety,' since it is very nearly the only word of praise that we have it in our power to bestow upon him. If ever three volumes were calculated to produce upon the mind of the reader that sensation of which the heading of each page appears to be intended as a dismal warning"——

At this point Heriot thought he wouldn't read aloud any more, and finished the article in silence, while Vidal, who had thrown himself into an arm-chair, smoked and stared up at the ceiling.

After a longish pause, the younger man said: "There are lots of others there at your elbow. You had better look through them, and then tell me honestly whether you still think I have a chance of doing any good at this trade."

Heriot obeyed, and, after perusing a dozen or so of critiques, long and short, exclaimed: "Why, my dear boy, nearly all of them are complimentary, and some are positively fulsome. Here 's the Society Newsman says"——

"I don't care two straws what the Society Newsman says," interrupted Vidal; "and it doesn't give me the smallest satisfaction to be praised for qualities which I don't possess."

"The Discriminator, then—since you won't be contented with anything less than a high-class journal. The Discriminator pats you on the back in the most friendly way, and thinks that 'this is in many respects the most remarkable novel of the year . . . . The characters are not only drawn with rare skill—that of Lady Tatterville, the selfish and cynical old woman of the world, would have done no discredit to Thackeray—but behave themselves under all circumstances as such characters would behave themselves in real life. Mr. Vidal knows what he is writing about, and gives us a sketch of modern society, in certain of its developments, which we must admit to be substantially accurate; although we may doubt whether he is justified in his conclusion that the men and women of our day are less capable of being roused to enthusiasm than their predecessors. We wonder, for instance, what he would say to the crowds of fashionable ladies who thronged to hear Messrs. Moody and Sankey not many years ago, or to the considerable number of men who brave ridicule at the present time by wearing a scrap of blue ribbon in their buttonholes. We should like Mr. Vidal to think out these and similar manifestations before he writes his next novel . . . . The story upon which he hangs his brilliant digressions is, it is true, of the slenderest kind, and seems to us to be wanting in movement throughout; but'"——

"Ah, there it is, you see," interpolated Vidal.

"Well; but he goes on to say that, if the story lacks this, it has abundance of that and t'other, and winds up by prophesying that you will leave your mark upon the literature of the era. Isn't that good enough for you?"

"I must say," remarked Vidal, after smoking for some minutes in silence, "that I like the Discriminator. I think it 's honest, you know. One may not always agree with its views; but one feels that it is written by men who are doing their best to be fair, and who don't scamp their work. When they review a novel they read it, and read it carefully too—which is more than can be said for some of their contemporaries."

"It is, no doubt, an excellent paper," agreed Heriot, without the shadow of a smile. "The Monday Review has also its merits; but it is too superficial, and it labours under the disadvantage of being somewhat celebrated for its smart writing. Imagine the position of an unlucky paper which has to keep up that reputation when opportunities for smartness are so often wanting. I think you ought to be more sorry for the poor Monday Reviewer than angry with him. What could be more pathetic than this? 'If "Satiety" were as preposterous in plot, as silly in dialogue, or as ungrammatical in style as many of the novels which our duty compels us to peruse, we could feel relatively grateful to Mr. Vidal, since it is just possible that our labours might then have been lightened by an occasional laugh. But it is none of these things. It is only dull; only vapid; only wanting in every single quality that goes to make a readable novel.' Can't you see the wretched man rubbing his head in despair? 'Hang it all! I must be smart; I must maintain the character of the paper; I must amuse the public; and here 's this pestilent fellow won't give one half a chance! No words used out of their proper sense—no confused metaphors—no pea-green sunsets—no nothing!' And then he very naturally turns upon you in his exasperation and declares that 'it is not too much to say that in the course of a very long experience of novels we have come across none so uninterruptedly tedious as "Satiety."' 'A very long experience,' too, poor fellow! Don't you see that if he has been doing nothing but review novels all his life, he can't be capable of any very ambitious literary work? And why should you allow yourself to be cast down because a man of such low intellectual calibre fails to appreciate you?"

"I am quite well aware that you are laughing at me, Heriot," said Vidal; "but there is some truth in what you say, for all that. The unfortunate part of it is that critics influence the public—at least, I suppose they do. I wish you would tell me what you yourself thought of the book."

Heriot hesitated for a moment. "I read it with a great deal of pleasure," he said, at length; "but I can't honestly say that it struck me as being a good novel. You know as well as I do what its defects are; and I should say that you could very easily avoid them next time. If I were you, I wouldn't be above learning by experience; and I think I should be very well satisfied with such success as the book has had."

"It has had no success," answered Vidal, gloomily. "It doesn't sell."

"H'm! That is a good deal worse than adverse criticism."

"Well, yes, I am afraid it is. I hoped to make a living by my pen; but now—I don't know. Do you think I have it in me, Heriot?"

Heriot looked distressed. "I think you have it in you to write a much better novel than 'Satiety,'" he answered. "More than that I can't venture to say. I can only repeat what I told you at Lucerne."

"Ah, yes!" sighed the young man. "Sometimes I wish I had never gone to Lucerne; and yet —— Come, Heriot, put me out of my pain, and let us get it over. You know what I have been dying to ask you all this time."

"I hoped you had got over that," Heriot said.

"Well, I haven't got over it. I shall never get over it," returned the other, impatiently. "For Heaven's sake, speak out, man. She has accepted him, I suppose?"

"No; she has refused him, I am sorry to say. But, my dear Adrian, what difference does that make?"

Vidal's reply was to start out of the arm-chair in which he had been reclining and to fling Heriot's hat up to the ceiling—his own not being available.

"Difference!" he exclaimed. "The difference between life and death, that 's all! So long as I have something to live for and ever so small a particle of hope to cling to, I can work and do my best. I don't think I could have begun all over again, and changed my style of writing, only to get a little praise from the Monday Review. So she refused him, eh? Did she give any reason?"

"Really I don't know," answered Heriot, with a vexed laugh. "I presume she did, but I don't think it likely that she named your existence as the reason. All that I have heard about it was in a letter from Mrs. Irvine, who is already resigned to the loss of Wilbraham, and feels confident that somebody equally eligible will turn up. You are not equally eligible, and I do hope and trust that you will have the decency to refrain from turning up."

The young man was silent for a minute or two, and then said with sudden vehemence: "Heriot, I want to see her!"

"I dare say you do; but it is your duty to put a curb upon your desires. At least, don't go down to Polruth this summer. In another twelvemonth you will probably know something more definite as to your future income."

"And in the meantime?"

"In the meantime, there is of course the chance of her marrying somebody else. It seems to me that you will have to risk that."

"Well—I 'll try," said Vidal, with something of an effort. "I won't make any promise, because I might not be able to keep it; but I admit that I should have no right to propose to her now; and so, no doubt, the most prudent course is to avoid her. You are horridly unsympathetic, do you know, Heriot."

"No; only I have a difficulty in believing that a man can lose his heart irrecoverably in these days. However, you shall have all my sympathy so long as you continue to exercise a little self-denial."

"It isn't a little; it's a very great deal. You must write to me, when you are down there, and tell me all about her—everything, mind, whether you think I shall like it or not."

Vidal's buoyant spirits began to rise as soon as he was alone. A great weight had been lifted off his mind by the news of Mr. Wilbraham's final rejection, and the failure of his book no longer seemed to him an irretrievable calamity. Remembering how many famous authors have had to force their way through preliminary neglect and ridicule, he felt a little ashamed of his faintheartedness. After all, as Heriot had said, it would be easy—possible, at all events—to correct in a second work the mistakes which had proved fatal to the first. The essential thing was to find out what the public really liked; a point upon which he had hitherto hardly bestowed enough attention, perhaps.

That same evening he happened to be at a large dinner party in company with a journalist of repute and a popular novelist. To them he determined to address himself for the required information, and, after the ladies had left the dining-room, he sat down beside the journalist and put the question to him point-blank. "What do you think that the novel-reading public really likes?"

The journalist, who was a big, burly man, with blunt manners, replied, "That 's rather a puzzler. Incident—humour—pathos—development of character—I can't say exactly. What 's one man's meat is another man's poison, you know. But I can tell you what nobody likes, and that 's being preached at. Take my advice, Mr. Vidal, and leave sermons to the parsons, whose business it is to produce them. What you want to do is to amuse people, and you 'll never do that by tying a string of essays together and calling it a novel."

"I dare say you are quite right," said Vidal, meekly; "but I didn't so much want to be told what to avoid as what to seek."

"Well, if you ask me, I should recommend you to write a sensation novel. In fashion or out of fashion, they always pay and always go down with the public. Give it 'em hot and strong, Mr. Vidal—battle, murder, and sudden death—and see if they don't swallow it as I swallow this glass of claret. Devilish good claret it is, too!"

Apparently this was not a person of refined taste. Vidal now betook himself to the author, who at once began to talk to him about "Satiety," and was exceedingly polite and encouraging, as men who have reached the top of the hill commonly are to those who are still struggling up the ascent. On being inquired of as to what the novel-reading public really liked, he answered, confidentially: "Well, between you and me, the novel-reading public means the women. If we don't succeed in pleasing them, we are nowhere."

"And what do they like?" Vidal pursued.

"Ask them," replied the other, with a laugh, and turned away to speak to someone else.

Vidal thought he might do worse than act upon this hint. In the drawing-room he approached his hostess, a lively little old lady who had once been a beauty, and begged her to tell him who was her favourite novelist. Without any hesitation, she named the one who was present, thereby surprising her questioner a little.

"I admire his writing immensely," said the latter. "His descriptions of scenery are inimitable, and he is never tedious: but"——

"Ah," interrupted the old lady, "that isn't what I mean. His books charm me because there is so much love-making in them. There is nothing so delightful to read about as love-making—of course I mean the English variety, not the French. Love is the one subject that interests us all. Some of us like to read about it because we know nothing of it at first hand; others because it brings back to us the happiest days of our lives. If any woman is bored by love-scenes, so much the worse for her!"

"But there is some love-making in all novels," objected Vidal.

"I prefer the novels in which there is very little else," said the old lady.

The next person to whom the inquirer applied was a young married woman. Her reply to his first question was identical with that of her senior; but she was rather more concise and explicit in her reasons. "He understands us," she said; "he knows how we feel. Most of you don't."

After this, Vidal met with various responses, none of which helped him very much towards a conclusion. One lady, rather maliciously, gave her verdict in favour of Mr. So-and-so, "because his novels are always in such nice big print"; another declared for a writer of her own sex, "because she is so delightfully improper"; not one of them had the presence of mind to answer boldly "You." But perhaps that was partly because not one of them had been able to read his book.

When Vidal went away, he betook himself to the smoking-room of his club, and sitting down in a corner, tried to sift something serviceable out of the mass of advice and information which he had received during the day. The effort was not attended with much more success than such efforts generally meet with; for though teachableness is an excellent quality, it can do but little for its possessor in the absence of adequate teachers, and no one had taken the trouble to point out to Vidal exactly in what way he was to set about improving his style. The whole, when summed up, seemed to mean that, if he wanted his books to sell, he must give them a little more of human interest; which, to be sure, he might have discovered without consulting such a number of persons. However, he had unconsciously made one valuable acquisition, in the shape of a considerable increase of humility; so that his investigations had not been quite so fruitless as he supposed.

That month of July remained long memorable to Vidal as having brought him the first persistent attack of low spirits with which he had been afflicted in his life. He employed the customary remedies in vain. Of balls, dinners, and other entertainments he had as many as he could desire; for if he had not succeeded in earning popularity as a writer, he had long since achieved it as an individual; but the relaxations of society only left him dull, dissatisfied and weary of life. These alarming symptoms he naturally set down to grief at his separation from Clare Irvine; but what he was in reality suffering from was a loss of self-confidence. He was no longer able to write with ease; he was hampered by a constant dread of boring his readers, and he would have given up writing altogether for a time, had he not felt that time was of so much importance. Once he went down to Brighton for a few days on a dutiful visit to his mother, who lived there, and returned more depressed than ever.

Mrs. Vidal, a well-preserved widow, whose tastes were more expensive than her means were large, had a standing grievance against her two children in that they had been left independent of her, and had thus deprived her of an income to which she considered herself to be entitled. Her son had never lived with her since he had attained his majority, and her daughter was in the habit of seeking solace for an adventurous spirit in distant travel; so that she would perhaps have had some right to esteem herself neglected by them, had she not, as a fact, found her own society and that of her friends in Brighton a great deal more congenial than theirs. Adrian, who was of an affectionate nature, had been repelled in his earliest boyhood by her icy coldness, and now always treated her with the distant courtesy which she preferred.

"People tell me that you have written a clever novel," she said, on the afternoon of his arrival. "I seldom read novels; but I have made a point of ordering yours from the library. Have you made much money by it?"

"Not very much," Adrian confessed.

"No; I should not think that you would ever earn much money at anything," his mother observed, dispassionately. "And yet you must be in need of money, I suppose. If I were in your place, I should think seriously of making a good marriage. No doubt you meet many rich people in London—City people, perhaps, with daughters. It is a pity not to take advantage of opportunities, when they present themselves."

"I don't think I should care about going in for that sort of thing," said Adrian, in a tone which implied that he did not wish to discuss the question further.

"What sort of thing? Marriage in general?"

"No; only marriage as a financial speculation. Rather than come to that, I would"——

"Marry somebody's lady's-maid?" suggested Mrs. Vidal, who had never forgotten the unfortunate episode in her son's past life which has already been alluded to. "Well, there is no accounting for tastes, and you are not likely to be influenced by mine. I only hope you may find your literary earnings sufficient to support you and your wife, when you decide upon taking one—as of course you will, one of these days."

It may have been accident or it may have been the dawning of a suspicion that caused Mrs. Vidal to recur more than once during Adrian's visit to the topic of his possible marriage. "You will never be much better off than you are now," she said; "for the little that I have will be divided between you and Georgina, and even that little may not come to you for a considerable number of years. By far your best plan would be to marry money while you still have good looks and a certain vague reputation for talent. Heiresses, I suppose, expect some equivalent for their fortunes, and perhaps it would hardly be wise to count upon either of your special advantages increasing with age."

Such speeches as this did not tend to raise poor Vidal's drooping spirits. His mother's bland malignity would have affected him less at any other time; but just now it came upon him like the proverbial last straw. Neither she nor anyone else seemed to have the smallest belief in his future; and the worst of it was that that future could never, in the nature of things, be anything but uncertain. Even supposing that his next novel should have the good fortune to please the world, would that bring him any nearer to the settled income which fathers-in-law usually make a sine quâ non?

He went back to London and allowed despair to get the upper hand of him. By degrees he began to admit that Clare Irvine was not for him; for patient waiting was not among his capacities. Yet, the more he became convinced that his dream must be abandoned, the more he longed to break his half-promise to Heriot and run down to Polruth for a day or two. He dallied with this temptation until it assumed a definite shape. It would be so easy and so innocent to make Cornwall the scene of his summer holiday! He would scrupulously avoid lingering on the north coast; but from Falmouth or Penzance he might slip over to Polruth, put up at the village inn, and let nobody know that he was there. Only to see her would be enough. And if he did call once, utter a few commonplaces and bid her a silent farewell, who could possibly be the worse for it? Heriot's objections were grounded upon a supposition which only the most outrageous vanity could accept, and Heriot himself could hardly have the cruelty to forbid one brief afternoon call.

And while he was thus educating his conscience, a letter reached him which silenced that troublesome inner voice in a most effectual and satisfactory manner. The moment that Vidal caught sight of the envelope on his breakfast-table and noted its hurriedly scrawled address, he guessed who his correspondent must be, and when he tore it open and saw that it was dated "Cardrew, Polruth," he invoked a fervent blessing upon the head of Mrs. Irvine.

That impulsive lady wrote very much as she spoke.

"Dear Mr. Vidal,—

"I told you I would let you know about Mrs. Treweeke's lodgings, and you see I have not forgotten, although I have been very busy ever since our return, so many things requiring attention, and the boys being all at home, which always keeps one in a state of bustle, besides other matters which have worried me a good deal; but of course one must expect worries in this world.

"About Mrs. Treweeke. I was only waiting until we got Mr. Heriot down here—and now he has been with us three days and is looking so much better that it is quite a pleasure—so I went at once to see her, and she says she is sure she can make you comfortable. Two sitting-rooms and bed-room, two guineas a week—more than she ought to ask, I think; still one must not be hard upon them, poor souls, with such a short season and all the trouble that there has been about the fishing this year, and I am sorry I said that to you about the wine, because I am certain she is as honest as the day, and her feelings might be hurt, so perhaps after all you had better not.

"Now do, pray, think of it. We should all be so very glad to see you again, and Mr. Irvine wishes me particularly to say how sorry he is that we have no spare room just now. Most lovely scenery and plenty of fishing and lawn-tennis, and of course, if you stay long enough, there will be the shooting. Please excuse haste, and with our kindest regards,

"Believe me, very sincerely yours,

"ELIZABETH IRVINE.

"I forgot to say about that Italian governess—don't on any account recommend her. She has turned out to be a most disreputable person, and the ten pounds that I lent her I never expect to see again. Such a mercy that nobody had engaged her before I discovered the truth!"

There was no holding out against that. Vidal did not even attempt to do so, but dispatched a grateful reply to Mrs. Irvine, and hurried off to buy a Bradshaw forthwith.

(To be continued.)

MUSICAL PUBLICATIONS.

Among the music recently issued by Messrs. J. B. Cramer and Co. are some pleasing songs: "The Shilling" and "The Beauteous Song," both by O. Barri; "Jerusalem" and "The Golden Path," by H. Parker; and "Love's Legacy," by J. S. Crook, may all be recommended as melodious, and each, in its respective style—serious or sentimental—expressive of the purport of the words. Some bright dance music, appropriate to the season, has also been issued by the same firm. This includes the following waltzes:—"Maiden Dreams," by E. Bucalossi; "Ethel Valse," by E. De Valmency; "Cerise Waltz," by C. Deacon; and "Coryphée Waltz," by C. R. Duggan; all sprightly pieces.

"Love's Legacy" is the title of a very graceful song, by Charles Salaman, a setting of some expressive lines by his son, M. C. Salaman. It is published by Stanley Lucas, Weber, and Co.

"Loved Voices," by Edith Cooke, is a song with a flowing melody—simple yet expressive—that may be rendered very effective by any intelligent singer, although possessing but a moderate compass of voice. It is published by Messrs. R. Cocks and Co., as is a "Bourrée" for the pianoforte, by Charles Gardiner, a bright piece in the quaint old dance form implied by the title.

"Autumn Serenade" and "To Columbine" are two charming songs by M. Massenet, the French composer, who has lately gained a special success by his opera "Manon," an English version of which will be given by Mr. Carl Rosa's company during the approaching season at Drury Lane Theatre. The songs just named have a distinct touch of national character in their combination of piquancy and grace. They are issued with both French and English text, the latter being by the late H. S. Leigh. Mr. J. Williams is the publisher, as also of a collection of twelve "Merry Little Songs for Merry Little Folk," the music arranged by Mr. A. Randegger to words by L. H. F. Du Terreaux. The songs are bright and pleasing, and varied in character, and are well calculated to interest juvenile musicians. From the same publisher we have a melodious "Slumber-Song," composed by Mr. H. Weist Hill, the eminent violinist, for his instrument, with pianoforte accompaniment. It is also arranged for viola or violoncello, and will prove acceptable in any of these forms.

"Can You Forget," by J. Roeckel; "We've Said Farewell," by Tito Mattei; "Bright Days of My Childhood," by J. Thomas; and "In After Years," by Cotsford Dick, are songs in each of which there is much genuine sentiment expressed in very melodious strains. They are published by Keppel and Co.

"Ransford's Collection of Baritone and Bass Songs" published by Ransford and Son) now comprises a very large number of vocal pieces by eminent composers of various periods.

"The Organists' Quarterly Journal" (Novello, Ewer, and Co.) has entered its ninth volume with the sixty-fifth part. Its editor, Dr. Spark, organist of the Leeds Townhall—who is also a frequent contributor to the contents—maintains the interest and value of the work, which consists entirely of original pieces, composed expressly for it. The current number contains five contributions by well-known English and foreign organists.

Messrs. W. and A. K. Johnston, of Edinburgh and London, have issued on one sheet three excellent maps to illustrate Sir Charles Warren's mission to South Africa; and Messrs. G. Philip and Son, 32, Fleet-street, have published a special large map of the approaches to Khartoum, on which the reader of the events of the present Nile Expedition will find it easy to follow the course of our troops from day to day.

"Webster's Royal Red-Book," which includes a Court guide, Peerage, Baronetage, guide to the House of Commons, embassies and consulates, Ministers and officers of State, law courts, Government offices, clubs and their secretaries, bankers, army and navy agents, Royal households, and Privy Councillors, is published for 1885. Its condensation does not detract from the practical value of its information.

The number of new admissions into the London Hospital in 1884 amounted to 8015, by far the largest ever admitted into any hospital in England. The total number of patients treated was 8565. The largest number of patients at any one time in the wards was 659. The number of accidents treated in the wards was 2480. The children received and treated under the age of twelve years amounted to 1545.

OLD MASTERS AT BURLINGTON HOUSE.

THE FOREIGN SCHOOLS.

The Dutch pictures, in Gallery No. II., and the Italian, in Gallery No. IV., need not detain us for any length of time. The former are not less interesting, nor the latter less curious, than similar works of the previous years. But our own national collection is so rich in specimens of Dutch and Flemish masters that, unless private collectors have something of rare excellence to display, they run the risk of provoking disparaging criticism. On the present occasion, the bright and brilliant "Landscape," by Cuyp (101), lent by her Majesty the Queen, is one of the gems of the room—a woodland scene suffused by the golden light of the setting sun; whilst his "River Scene" (114), lent by Mr. David Sellar, a perfect harmony of silvery grey, shows the wide sympathies of the same artist. The other works lent by her Majesty are a small cabinet picture, by Paul Potter, of exquisite finish, "Sportsmen" (119), but more popularly known by the title of "The Shooting Ponies." It tells with minute distinctness its little story of the halt of two brother sportsmen at a village inn. One is talking to the hostess, whilst the other, on the grey pony, is having the girth tightened previous to setting off on their homeward journey. When one recollects that the artist scarcely outlived his twenty-eighth birthday, and that there are in existence upwards of three hundred of his pictures known to collectors, the delicate finish displayed in such a work as this is little short of marvellous. "Le Corset Bleu" (109) is the third contribution from that scarcely known treasure-house of Dutch works—Buckingham Palace—and is one of the most refined specimens of Gabriel Metzu's work. Although a homely Dutchman, with apparently few inducements to take a different path to that followed by his constant companion, Jan Steen, Metzu soon forsook the scenes of cottage and cabaret life, in which the former delighted to show his knowledge of the people, and sought in a higher rank subjects for his brush. The quaint home scene, in which the lady in her blue pelisse, trimmed with ermine, plays the principal part, is painted with great refinement, and shows Metzu—as he not unfrequently was—a successful rival of Terburg. Two pictures by Franz Hals show this gifted artist in two very different moods. The "Portrait of a Dutch Lady" (105), in a black dress and white ruff, unites dignity with homeliness, and is perhaps the most perfect realistic portrait in the whole exhibition. "The Fiddler" (94), on the other hand, is full of colour and movement—is almost what our neighbours would call "tapageur" in its effect and result, and shows more life than even that curious and much admired work in the Trippenhuis, at Amsterdam, "The Jester," with which it has something in common. The "Portrait of Admiral De Hochepied" (96), which hangs close by, is chiefly noticeable for the marvellous harmony of its colouring, a yellow doublet, over which a gold embroidered belt is crossed. As in most of Van der Helst's pictures, his excessive care of details and his correctness, exaggerated almost to a fault, are fatal to enthusiasm, and the present work is not one of his exceptional ones, wherein his pedantry is pushed out of sight. "The Conversation Piece" (136), attributed to Dirk Hals, the younger and erratic brother of Franz Hals, is worthy of some notice, in spite of its obvious shortcomings. So rare are his works, that "The Spinnet" in the Van der Hoop collection at Amsterdam was at one time his only recognised work; but Stuttgart, Hanover, and our own National Gallery, now claim to possess each a specimen. The picture here exhibited represents a group of men and women, in the costume of the time, assembled for a bridal feast, or some such family ceremony. Although the drawing is not always anatomically correct, the arrangement of the drapery and the harmonious colouring of the silk dresses of the ladies and velvet cloaks of the men are very striking. The river scenes of Van Goyen (72 and 73), the three almost identical subjects—Gerard Dow's "Water Doctor" (76), Jan Steen's "Sick Lady" (140), and the "Sick Lady and the Doctor" (75), should be compared. A forest scene by Aart Van der Neer (89) is extraordinary in its rendering of space and distance, and Terburg's "Lady at her Toilet" (121) is a minute and perfect rendering of a lady's dress and dressing-room.

The Italian pictures, which occupy the greater part of the last room, are more interesting to the antiquarian than to the ordinary picture-seeker. Interminable portraits of Virgins and Saints, by unknown artists of the Siennese, Florentine, and Milanese schools, may even possess attractions for the ecclesiologist; but it is difficult for the ordinary secular mind to find helps to either awe or admiration in such works. It is interesting, however, to find that an English church (St. Mary's, Nottingham) possesses so charming a work as the "Virgin and Child" (225), by Fra Bartolommeo; but one cannot help thinking that it would be more fully appreciated if transferred to the rising Nottingham Museum. Carlo Crivelli's "St. Catherine" (216) has a face full of pathos; and even a sadder chord is touched by B. Vivarini's "Death of the Virgin" (206); but the two most important works in the room are attributed to painters who came from north of the Alps. "The Marriage of the Virgin" (215), which is boldly credited to Van Eyck, is so important a work that it is strange that the history of the picture has not survived, at least partially, as well as its colour. It is scarcely possible that some notice of a work on which the artist must have spent many months, if not years, cannot be found amongst Van Eyck's biographers. In internal evidence, the picture looks rather German than Flemish; but at what date it left the easel is difficult to determine. "The Adoration of the Magi" (230), from Castle Howard, stands upon very much surer ground; and although but little is know of Jean Gossaert (or Mabuse, as he is more generally known, after the name of his native town, Maubeuge), the history of this magnificent work can be traced for centuries. It has gone through many vicissitudes, and has had many escapes from destruction; it has adorned, by turn, the walls of monasteries, palaces, churches, and private galleries, and at length came into the possession of the last Duke of Lorraine, and, after a short halt in the Orleans Gallery, passed on to Castle Howard. It is unnecessary to give a detailed description of the wonderful group assembled round the Mother and Child, who in their simplicity outshine the gorgeousness of their surroundings. In the crowns and emblems of the Magi, archæologists will find an inexhaustible mine; and the freshness with which the minutest details are preserved enables all to profit by the lesson to be learnt. The only contemporary work at all comparable to the Castle Howard Mabuse is Bellegambe's "Adoration of the Trinity," to be seen in the Cathedral of Douai. The two painters, who lived almost at the same time, were born within a few miles of one another, and the resemblance between their works is therefore most interesting. Mabuse, having left behind him more specimens of his skill, is consequently the better known; but, as Douai lies so very little off the route to Paris or Brussels, perhaps some may be tempted to make acquaintance with his less known but not unworthy rival, Jean Bellegambe.

Next Monday has been appointed for the reception of works of art intended for the spring exhibition of the Nineteenth Century Art Society, at the Conduit-street Galleries.

OUR LADY BOUNTIFUL.

Our Lady Bountiful resembles nothing so much as a fairy godmother. Neat, small, elegant, and charming, with her soft white hair arranged in curls round her pretty pink and white old face, and dressed invariably in plain black dresses, she sets an example to all those who impatiently refuse to grow old, and, accepting her years gracefully, never looks like anything save what she is—a cheery old lady, with a soul as young as ever it was.

Fortunately for those around her, our Lady Bountiful is not well off: were she so, she would pauperise half the parish: but, with "economy" for her watchword, she wages such war in her kitchen and drawing-room against waste that, at the risk of being called cheese-paring and mean, she has always something to give away, some trifle or other that she can hand over to the thousand protégés that are always within her gates, and has invariably some superfluity that she can go without should some particularly urgent case appear to her to require immediate attention or relief.

Passing over the squalid poor as looked after sufficiently by the parish priest and the district-visitors, she turns her whole attention to succouring the genteelly indigent, and to caring for those whose antecedents forbid them from asking for relief. It is sufficient to name such a one before her, and immediately our Lady Bountiful sets her brain in motion, and, by hook or by crook, arranges some manner of assisting or alleviating the distress that magnifies immensely the moment her eyes fall upon it.

True, she never waits for details: these she would scorn as cruel and unnecessary, inquisitorial and absurd. That Lorenzo comes of a good family, is clever, and in want, is enough for her; and though there are to be found some who would insinuate that "serve him right" is the verdict in his case undoubtedly, she wears alpaca instead of silk for a while, and hands her protégé the difference; or gives herself acute bronchitis for a whole winter by stinting her fires that Lorenzo may be warm, regardless that he may come to call on her in what other people would call a state of intoxication, but what appears to her excitement only; or that he disappears suddenly from her list of visitors, and is never heard of any more.

At first, his disappearance is undoubtedly a blow: she had grown fond of her scapegrace. But very soon her spirits revive: she believes Lorenzo has gone off once more to fight the world, for which she has armed him again, and that some day he will return, "bringing his sheaves with him" to lay at her feet, as a token that he acknowledges the debt he undoubtedly owes her—and she looks out for another case, consoling herself until the return of the prodigal with doing the same kindly task over again for someone else.

Then, too, she has a perfect mania for discovering geniuses, all more or less under a cloud. One of her tiny, beautifully-written invitations to have tea with her, or to come in after dinner, strikes awe into all her friends' hearts; for do they not know that this means nothing more or less than a couple of hours spent in listening to her last "find" recite, or play, or sing, well enough maybe, but not in a manner that should authorise her to take the biggest theatre or opera-house in London, as she would do, had she the money, to bring out her protégé properly, and break through the powerful cabal that keeps him or her from shining as they undoubtedly were born to shine? For our Lady Bountiful is a firm believer in those mysterious powers that band themselves together to keep obscure authors and actors down. She verily is convinced that "influence" is the key to success; and nothing would make her acknowledge that the voice of the people, considered by most individuals as the voice of the gods, is aught save the claque judiciously arranged about the house, and as judiciously paid by the one who has the wherewithal, and who therefore succeeds.

While owning candidly that Irving is a genius, she cannot help thinking that Jones could do equally well had he only his chance: while Juliet Tracey is so immeasurably superior to Ellen Terry, that nothing save prejudice and lack of proper raiment keep Juliet from the great and immediate success that is waiting for her as soon as her wardrobe is renovated from our Lady Bountiful's little store, and prejudice is removed by a cautious manipulation of the daily press. And it is sufficient for anyone to be mentioned as likely to give a party, for our Lady Bountiful to post off immediately, armed with a long list of "Berti families," or "Smithjii families," or Juliets, Romeos, and singers male or female, the engagement of any of whom will ensure a success for the party immediately; and all are to be had for a consideration, which is always small, but invariably less to anyone who is a friend of our Lady Bountiful.

When the little ménage next door to her tiny house put down the second nurse because rice was low in the market, our Lady Bountiful ate nothing else, and entreated her friends to do the same, because in no other way could the price be made to rise once more. She positively waged war violently against beet-root sugar, because it edged Barbadoes out of the market, and in consequence caused another neighbour some other loss of temporary comfort; and she angrily boycotted every lawyer in the place when other acquaintance were in trouble over the loss of a chancery suit; and, in fact, always suffers so much in others' sufferings that all her neighbours conceal from her if possible that anything is amiss in their households, lest their troubles should be made double by the manner in which our Lady Bountiful would insist on all and everyone doing their utmost to set them on their legs again.

Her house, too, is a monument to her unselfish care of others. On her walls hang pictures by men who would have been P.R.A.'s long ago were it not for the "cabal"; her chairs are made by deserving people born for anything rather than cabinet-making, judging from the specimens of their art put for our accommodation; the tea is from another protégé, who, we believe, grows it in a small greenhouse at Camberwell, erected by our Lady Bountiful to give him a start; her curtains are washed and ironed by lady amateurs; and her black silk dresses are purchased from another friend, who buys about fifty yards at a time, and endeavours to make a living on the cent per cent profits he charges on the very small amount he disposes of to our Lady Bountiful and such of her acquaintance who are too weak-minded to refuse her what gives her so much pleasure; for, can she only obtain such an order, she is happier than most of us would be were we left a fortune this moment that would make us independent for the rest of our lives. True, we get just a little bit tired of her enthusiasm, that is never damped, no matter how many or severe are her failures: still, it does us all good in this self-seeking world to see or hear of anyone so purely unselfish, so generous, and so undaunted by reverses as is our Lady Bountiful. J. E. PANTON.

As a memorial to the late Dr. Angus Smith, his library, consisting of 3500 volumes, has been bought by subscription, and presented to Owens College, Manchester.

A sum of £2000 has been presented to the Rev. Francis Tucker on his resigning the pastorate of Camden-road Baptist chapel, Holloway, of which he has been the minister for twenty-seven years.

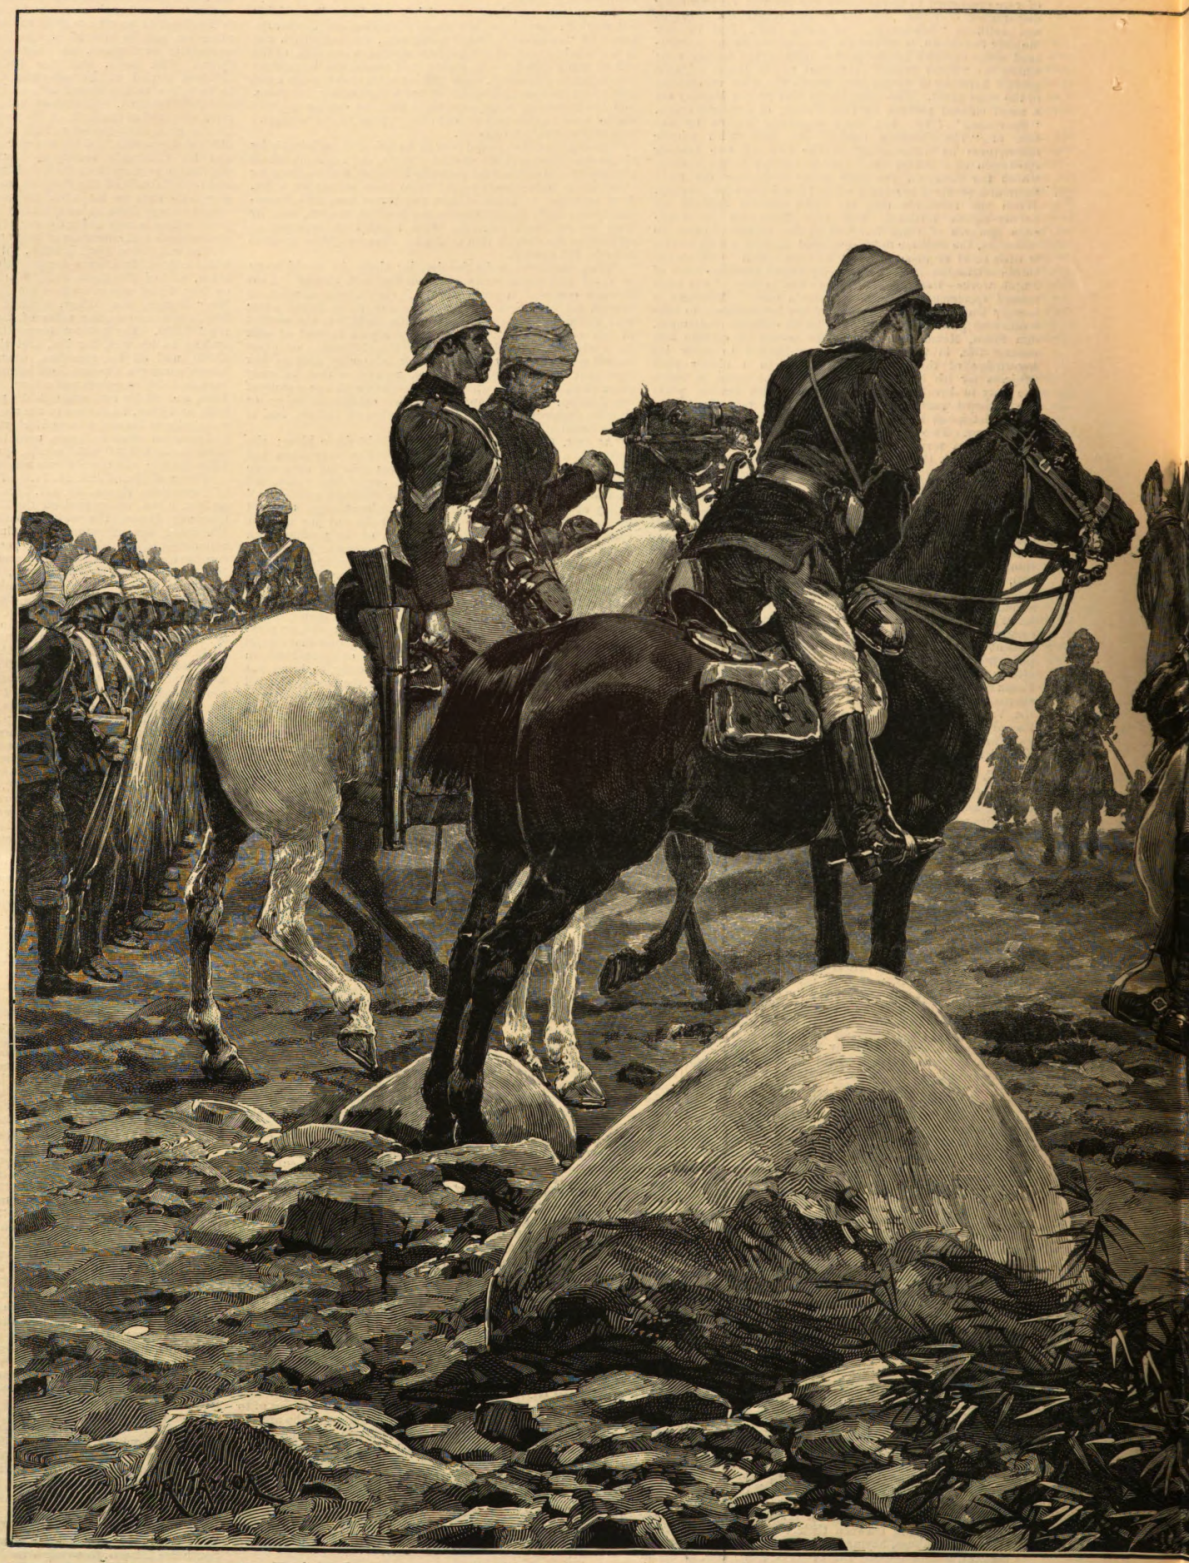
WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will (dated April 2, 1884) of Mootizum ool Moolk Mohsenood Dowlah Fureedoon Jah Synd Munsoor Ulee Khan Bahadoor Nusrut Jung, Nawab Nuzim of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa, late of The Palace, Moorshedabad, Bengal, who died on Nov. 4 last, was proved in London on the 6th inst. by James Lyster O'Beirne, the acting executor, the value of the personal estate amounting to £3700. The testator directs that his non-Nizamut children shall be brought up in the Mohammedan faith, and such as are males, at the age of ten, be sent to England to receive a good and suitable European secular education, and be trained for the legal, medical, military, or mercantile professions, as they shall show aptitude or choice. His body, and the bodies of his predeceased children buried at Kensal-green Cemetery, England, are to be taken to the sacred city of Kerbela, Turkish Arabia, and there interred. He states that he has, by settlements and gifts, disposed of the bulk of his property in his lifetime, and he now gives the remainder of his property, after payment of debts and expenses, and the expense of the removal of his own and his children's bodies to Kerbela, and of having a pilgrimage performed on his behalf to the Holy City of Mecca and to the Tombs of the Apostles, as to £3000 for such of his grown-up sons as his wife, Mohammadee Begum, and his executors may deem to have usually resided with him; and as to the ultimate residue for the use of his said wife, and for the maintenance and education of his non-Nizamut children.

The will (dated April 7, 1884), with a codicil (dated May 29 following), of Mr. George Burges, late of No. 9, Lincoln's-inn-fields, and of Hawthorn Dale, Warfield, Berkshire, who died on Nov. 9 last, was proved on the 20th ult. by Mrs. Susanna Mary Burges, the widow, Charles Woollam, and Thomas Hay, the executors, the value of the personal estate exceeding £87,000. The testator bequeaths all his plate and plated articles to his wife, for life, and then to his two children; £1000, and all his furniture, linen, china, books, effects, horses, carriages, live and dead farming stock, to his wife; and legacies to his executors and others. His residence, Hawthorn Dale, and all his real estate in the parishes of Warfield, Binfield, and Bray, he devises to the use of his wife, for life, with remainder to his son, George Herbert. The residue of his real and personal estate he leaves, upon trust, for his wife, for life; at her death £25,000 is to be held, upon trust, for his daughter, Ellen Mabel; and the ultimate residue for his said son.

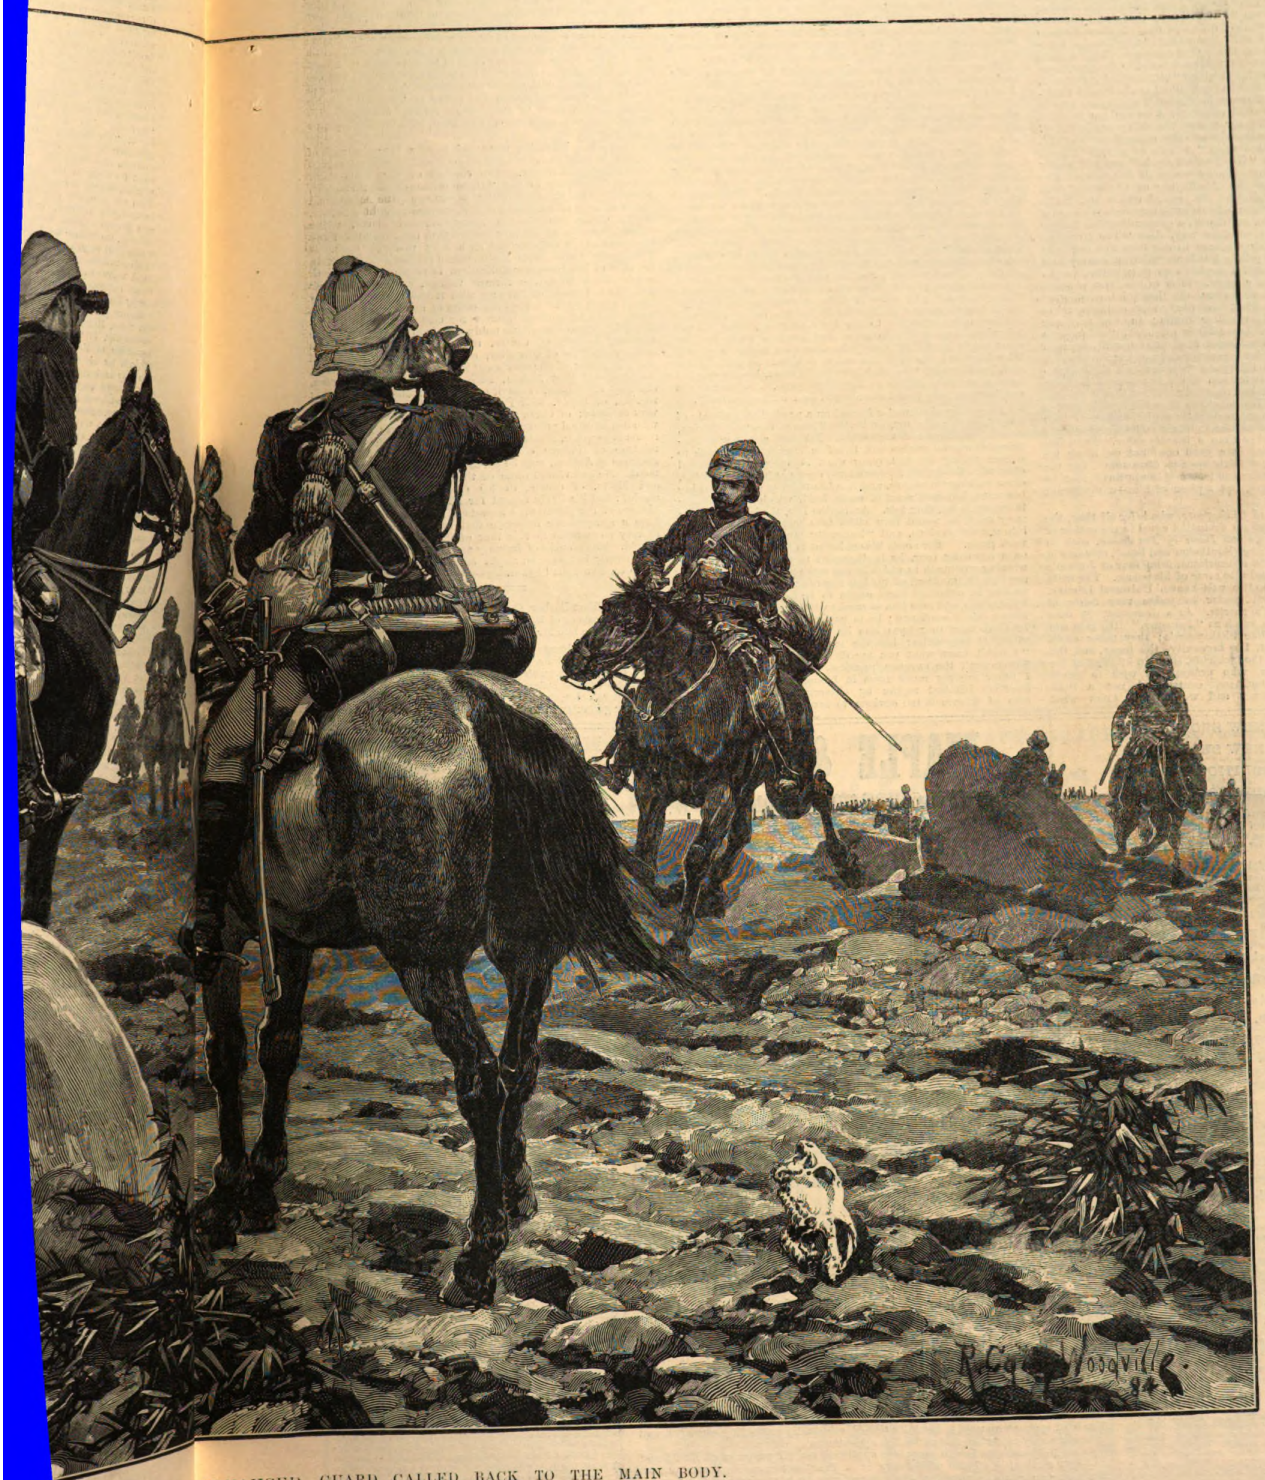
The will (dated Jan. 21, 1879) of Mr. William Bangs, late of Devonshire House, No. 221, Bow-road, builder, who died on Nov. 6 last, was proved on the 23rd ult. by Mrs. Elizabeth Charlotte Bangs, the widow, Walter Hunter, and Edwin Wendover, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £70,000. The testator gives his household furniture and effects to his wife; and legacies to his executors, Mr. Hunter and Mr. Wendover, for their trouble. The residue of his real and personal estate he leaves, upon trust, for his wife, for life, and then for his children in equal shares.

The will (dated May 28, 1884) of Mr. Robert Field, late of Grimsbury, Northamptonshire, who died on Oct. 23 last, at St. Leonards, was proved on the 20th ult. by Alfred Benjamin Field, the son, Timothy Edward Cobb, and Donald Nicol, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £51,000. The testator bequeaths £6000, upon trust, for his son Robert Henry, and a further sum of £6000 to him absolutely; £6000 each to his daughters, Mary Breedin, Catherine Louisa Field, and Elizabeth Field; £6000, upon trust, for his daughter Ellen French Perry; there are also some additional gifts to his unmarried daughters, and legacies to his executors, a grandson, and to servants. The residue of the personalty and all his real estate he gives to his son Alfred Benjamin.



The will (dated June 15, 1878), with a codicil (dated the following day), of Miss Fanny Bouwens, formerly of No. 7, Bouverie-place, Folkestone, but late of No. 22, West Southernhay, Exeter, who died on Nov. 10 last, was proved on the 18th ult. by Major Lambert Henry Bouwens, R.A., and Theodore Edward Bouwens, the nephews, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to upwards of £45,000. The testatrix, after making some specific bequests to her said nephews, leaves the residue of her personalty to them, and to her nieces, Marian Honora Delves Broughton, and Emmeline Bouwens.

The will (dated Nov. 4, 1879) of Mrs. Louisa Fisher, late of No. 3, Stanhope-street, Hyde Park, who died on Nov. 19 last, was proved on the 20th ult. by Bertram Wodehouse Currie, the nephew, the sole executor, the value of the personal estate amounting to upwards of £36,000. The testatrix bequeaths certain Government stocks, amounting together to over £30,000, upon trust, to pay £100 per annum to each of three nieces, and the remainder of the income to her sister Georgina Currie, for life; and, subject thereto, she gives the said trust funds to the children of her brother Raikes Currie, and of her sister Marianne Raikes. There are legacies to godchildren, late and present servants, and others; and the residue of her estate and effects she leaves to the children of her brother the Rev. Francis Raikes.



The will (dated Sept. 10, 1884) of Admiral Thomas Chaloner, C.B., late of Gisborough, Yorkshire, who died on Oct. 20 last, was proved at the York district registry on the 17th ult. by Alfred Walker Simpson, Robert Charles Yeoman, and William Henry Anthony Wharton, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £23,000. The testator leaves to his wife, Mrs. Amelia Chaloner, in addition to the provision made for her by settlement, £1000 per annum; but, if he does not leave any children, he leaves her his mansion house, Longhull, with a farm, and £2200 per annum, to be increased according to the amount of the tonnage rents of his estate, for life; and he bequeaths legacies to his executors and to servants. The residue of his property, subject to a provision for his younger children (if any), he settles on his eldest son. If he leaves no children, he gives his sister, Charlotte, £500 per annum, and the remainder of the income of his property is to accumulate during the lifetime of his wife; at her death he settles all the residue of his property on his said sister, for life, with remainder to Richard Godolphin Walmesley Long, the second son of his niece, Charlotte Amelia Long. The furniture and effects at Longhull are to go with the mansion and estate.

The will (dated July 18, 1884) of Mr. Henry Wyndham, late of Norrington, Bournemouth, who died on Nov. 11 last, was proved on the 20th ult. by Henry Hungerford Ludlow-Bruges, one of the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £16,000. The testator gives, devises, appoints, and bequeaths all his property, whether real or personal, to his wife, Mrs. Agnes Ludlow Wyndham, for her own use absolutely.

Owing to the success which attended the two excursions to South Sea Islands, dispatched in June and July last, it is the intention of the Union Steam-Ship Company of New Zealand to repeat the same. The steamer Wairarapa (1786 tons) will leave Auckland, New Zealand, in July next; and, during a cruise of four weeks, will visit Fiji, Samoa, Tonga, and other of the beautiful islands of the South Pacific. A second excursion is premeditated immediately upon the return of Wairarapa to Auckland.

THE NILE EXPEDITION.—AN ALARM IN THE DESERT :

ALARM IN THE DESERT: ADVANCED GUARD CALLED BACK TO THE MAIN BODY.

NEW BOOKS.

It is the familiar custom of the day, and one by no means unacceptable to the public, to present the great standard authors of the country in selections. We like our literary food served up in small and dainty portions, and have seldom an appetite strong enough for the solid and varied dishes that agreed so well with our forefathers. If our appetite is less, our taste is probably more refined; and few readers familiar with the writings of Dean Swift will deny that a half is sometimes better than the whole. Selections from the Prose Writings of Jonathan Swift, with a Preface and Notes by Stanley Lane-Poole (Kegan Paul), is an attempt to compress within a small volume the quintessence of nineteen octavos. Of course, none of the unwholesome matter in which Swift revelled is retained, and the book can therefore be read aloud in the family circle. The greatest master of irony in the language is seen here in some of his most powerful efforts; yet we venture to think that the general reader, for whom the editor has laboured, will not find these selections especially attractive. Already, probably, he is acquainted with "A Tale of a Tub"; he is certainly familiar with "Gulliver's Travels," and will hardly care to read these extraordinary works in fragments. The famous "Argument on the Abolishing of Christianity in England," and the "Modest Proposal," which Mr. Leslie Stephen justly styles "one of the most tremendous pieces of satire in existence," give, no doubt, a proper Swiftian flavour to the book; and so, in another way, does "The Drapier's Fourth Letter." Yet, we venture to say that this carefully edited and beautifully printed volume will not convey to a reader, previously ignorant, a correct impression of Swift as an author, and much less as a man. It is in his least laboured writings—or what seem to be the least laboured—that the Dean of St. Patrick is the most attractive: in his Letters; in his Journal to Stella; in his nonsense verses. Truly does Mr. Lane-Poole say that, "to enjoy a great writer fully, you must read him through and then read him again." If the reader has not the interest or the patience to do this, the next best thing is a volume which shall represent the writer in all his moods. This is not done in these "Selections," and doubtless the editor will say that it was not his intention to do it. He considers that the introduction of verse would have led to an inadequate representation of both prose and verse, and that the journals and correspondence have a biographical rather than a literary value. From this point of view, his choice is a good one; but we think his judgment in the matter is fairly open to discussion. Let the reader, at all events, understand that it is not Swift that he meets with in these pages, but a piece of him—a significant piece, no doubt.

With the exception of Shakspeare, who is for all time, the Elizabethan age produced no dramatist equal to the author of "The Alchemist." Plays and Poems by Ben Jonson, with an Introduction by Henry Morley (Routledge and Sons), contains in a purified, and therefore abbreviated, form four of Jonson's most significant plays, and also some of his poems. The little volume, which belongs to the well-known Universal Library, will enable the general reader to judge very fairly of this distinguished poet's merits. As a dramatist, he does not depict characters so much as "humours." His men and women are not alive, like Shakspeare's; they never could have lived—but the wit, the ingenuity, the fancy, and the artful representation of the incidents, show an intellect of the subtlest order. Jonson, who professed a wish to purge the stage from its foulness, contributed not a little to its moral degradation; and we do not know what Professor Morley means by saying that "at his merriest he spurns low thought." As a lyric and ethical poet, Ben Jonson is far less known than he deserves to be. One or two of his songs, indeed, are still popular, but his "Forest" and "Underwoods," so rich in imaginative thought, are comparatively unread. We wish that Mr. Morley had inserted the epistle to Sir Robert Wroth, and the lines on Penshurst, two of the most significant of his poems. They show that this dear lover of taverns and of London life had a deep feeling also for the purer and more satisfying enjoyments of the country. But the poems selected for this volume are all worthy of "rare Ben," and characteristic of him.

Readers who like above all things to be amused in idle moments will find much to gratify their taste in Parodies of the Works of English and American Authors, Collected and Annotated by Walter Hamilton, Vol. I. (Reeves and Turner). The volume, which contains parodies of the poems of Lord Tennyson, Longfellow, Bret Harte, Wolfe, and Hood, is the first instalment of a collection which the editor hopes to make as complete as possible. "When the older masters of our literature are reached," he writes, "a great deal of curious and amusing information will be given; and it is intended to conclude with a complete bibliographical account of parody." It is possible that in his zeal Mr. Hamilton may give the public too much of a kind of humour in itself of the lowest order, and attractive to cultivated minds only when, as in the case of "Rejected Addresses," of the "Ben Gaultier Ballads," and of some of Mr. Calverley's efforts, it is of the finest quality. Here, for instance, are about thirty parodies of Hood's "Song of the Shirt," several of them dismally weak parodies; and there are thirty also of various degrees of excellence or no excellence of Tennyson's "May Queen." Of some of these, it may be said that the art of the rhymester could scarcely descend lower. There is nothing more irritating to the lover of poetry than to have ridiculous but not humorous lines recalled when reading some lovely lyric. It is only humour that makes a parody tolerable; and the true humourist is almost as rare in this world as the poet. Mr. Hamilton would seem, by-the-way, to have a personal dislike to Lord Tennyson, which we doubt not, however, the Poet Laureate will bear with equanimity.

As a study of character formed on a pessimistic estimate of life, Ichabod, a Portrait, by Bertha Thomas, two vols. (Fisher, Unwin), is clever and suggestive. Ichabod, a man with considerable mental powers and belief in himself, undertakes to reform society by destroying what he calls the emotional element. He detests all sentiment, does not believe in virtue, cares nothing for nature, and in a beautiful park sees nothing but seven hundred acres of waste land, which he would like to cut up in building lots. As Ianthe Lee, the heroine of the story says, he would turn cities into factories, the country into market gardens, and "humanity into an automaton to work them." For music his contempt is ineffable; and when on a lecturing tour, he is disgusted to find a violin-player winning a triumph to which he can make no pretension. Finding that the landlord of the inn regards music and all art as useless, he considers there ought to be freemasonry between Utilitarians, and asks him to smoke with him. Alas! the innkeeper has a sentiment; he is passionately fond of flowers. Ichabod tries to reform him by pointing out the superior utility of vegetables; but the man will not be persuaded. "I don't know what you are driving at," he says; "but if flowers arn't the sweetest, prettiest, purest things alive, may I never see my musk roses in bloom again." To which assertion Ichabod replies by observing that the uselessness of flowers is too obvious to need comment. Ichabod undertakes to convert to his opinions a young man, Tony Sebright by name, whose natural character is entirely opposed to that of his friend. He is passionate, enthusiastic, full of sentiment and intellect; and, to the disgust of Ichabod, falls in love with a beautiful actress. Of this complaint he is cured by the far from praiseworthy efforts of his mentor, only to fall far more deeply in love with Ianthe Lee, whose charms have even moved the cold heart of Ichabod. When Tony and Ianthe marry, as of course, after some prettily described courting, they are bound to do, Ichabod grows more and more hopeless and discontented, and finally commits suicide. As a story, there is comparatively little in these volumes to attract the novel reader; as a study, it has many clever points, and the description of an enthusiastic entomologist who thinks little of his life in comparison with the safety of "sixteen valuable beetles, and a moth of unspeakable rarity," contrasted with the cold-blooded indifference of Ichabod, has a touch of genuine humour.

The sea is becoming more and more a favourite path of tourists in quest of health and pleasure and of the gratification of intelligent curiosity. The voyages of the steam-yacht Ceylon, belonging to the "Ocean Steam-Yacht Company, Limited," have attracted many passengers of this class; and one of them, a twelvemonth ago, was Surgeon-General Munro, M.D., C.B., the veteran Army Medical officer, whose "Reminiscences of Military Service with the 93rd Sutherland Highlanders" was accepted as a very pleasant book. A Two Months' Cruise in the Mediterranean (Hurst and Blackett), the title of his present publication, is recommended by our acquaintance with the former volume, as the author has proved his faculty of treating with freshness and originality topics which do not possess the claim of absolute novelty, but which have an abiding interest for congenial readers. Dr. Munro's impressions of the nobly situated city of Lisbon, the romantic scenery of Cintra, the mighty Rock and British military fortress of Gibraltar, and of Malaga, Granada, and the Alhambra; of the shores and islands of the Mediterranean, Minorca and Port Mahon, Nice and the Riviera, Corsica, the Bay of Naples, Vesuvius and the ruins of Pompeii; further, of Sicily, with Palermo, Messina, and the distant view of Etna; of Corfu and the other Ionian Isles, of Athens, with its renowned monuments of classic antiquity; and, on the returning voyage, Malta, Tunis, the site of Carthage, and the mixture of French colonisation with Arab costumes and manners at Algiers, may be perused with no little entertainment. He had visited some of those places before, Gibraltar and Malta, of course, in his early years of professional service; but his lively regard for historical associations, and his love of the picturesque aspects of Nature and human life, have a sympathetic influence that makes him an agreeable literary companion in this tour of the inland sea of the Old World. The months of January and February, which are apt to be dreary in England, might be worse spent than in such a trip on board the Ceylon.

Mr. William Barber, Q.C., of the Chancery Bar, has been elected a Bencher of the Honourable Society of Lincoln's Inn, in place of the late Mr. Overend, Q.C.

Captain Sir George Strong Nares has been granted by the Lords of the Admiralty a good-service pension of £150 a year; and a distinguished service reward has been conferred on Major-General Dalrymple Prendergast, V.C., Commanding the Hyderabad Subsidiary Force, who gained the Victoria Cross for gallantry in the Indian Mutiny Campaign.

MAPLE and CO. NEW SHOW-ROOMS.

MAPLE and CO. NEW SHOW-ROOMS.

MAPLE and CO. ADDITIONAL ROOMS.

MAPLE and CO. ADDITIONAL ROOMS.

NOTICE.—MAPLE and CO. have OPENED the NEW EXTENSION of their FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT, making an addition of 1¼ acre, including fourteen new Show-Rooms, for the display of High-Class Furniture.

MAPLE and CO.'S FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT, the Largest in the World. ACRES of SHOW-ROOMS, for the display of First-class Furniture, ready for immediate delivery. Novelties every day from all parts of the globe. No family ought to furnish before viewing this collection of household requisites, it being one of the sights in London. To Export Merchants an unusual advantage is offered. Having large space, all goods are packed on the premises by experienced packers.

TURKEY 5000 to select from. CARPETS.

PERSIAN Superior Qualities, CARPETS.

INDIAN in all sizes. CARPETS.

TURKEY CARPETS.

TURKEY CARPETS.—MAPLE and CO. have just received large consignments of fine Turkey Carpets, unique colourings, reproductions of the seventeenth century, being the first delivery of those made from this season's clip.—MAPLE & CO., London; and 17 and 18, Local Baron Aliotti, Smyrna.

ARTISTS and COLLECTORS of ANTIQUES should not fail to see the 500 specimen RUGS and CARPETS collected by Messrs. MAPLE and CO.'S Agent in Persia, and now on view at the Show-Rooms, Tottenham-court-road. A Persian Rug, the most acceptable of all Presents; a Persian Prayer Carpet, a lasting pleasure. Prices from 30s to £100.—MAPLE and CO.

CARPETS, BRUSSELS.

CARPETS.—1000 Pieces of "Manufacturer's Best" five-frame Brussels Carpets, at 2s. 11d. and 3s. 4½d. per yard. These goods are regularly sold at 3s. 9d. and 4s.

NOTICE.—MAPLE and CO. have SPECIAL EXTRA QUALITIES of BRUSSELS as produced thirty years ago, adapted for hardest wear, at a small increased cost. Newest designs and novelties in colouring.—MAPLE and CO.

CARPETS, ready for use, 3000 in Stock. A great variety of patterns to select from, of the best quality, but old patterns. A carpet 15 ft. by 11 ft. 3 in., price 50s., which can be laid same day as ordered.—MAPLE & CO., Tottenham-court-road, London.

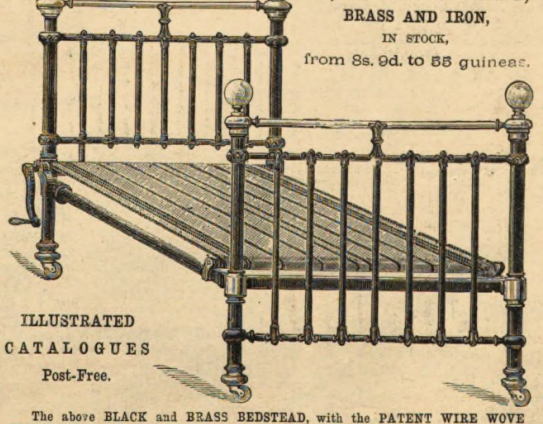
CHINA.

MAPLE and CO. have the largest assortment of Hungarian, Doulton, Doulton Faience, Silicon Doulton, and Doulton Impasto WARE; also in Worcester, Coalport, Dresden, Sèvres, Chinese, Japanese, and Crown Derby China.

NOTICE.—DRAWING-ROOM CLOCKS to go for 400 days with once winding; a handsome present. Price 70s., warranted. MAPLE and CO. have a large and varied assortment suitable for dining and drawing room. Over 500 to select from. Prices from 10s. 9d. Handsome marble clock, with incised lines in gold, and superior eight-day movement, 25s. 6d.; also bronzes in great variety.

ORDERS for EXPORTATION to any part of the World packed carefully on the premises, and forwarded on receipt of a remittance or London reference.

MAPLE & CO.



TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD, LONDON, W.

THE LARGEST AND MOST CONVENIENT

FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT

IN THE WORLD.

CATALOGUES POST-FREE.

10,000 BEDSTEADS,

BRASS AND IRON,

IN STOCK,

from 8s. 9d. to 55 guineas.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES Post-Free.

The above BLACK and BRASS BEDSTEAD, with the PATENT WIRE WOVE MATTRESS, complete:—
3 ft., 50s.; 3 ft. 6 in., 55s.; 4 ft., 63s.; 4 ft. 6 in., 67s. 6d.
Price for the Patent Wire Wove Mattress, without Bedstead:—
3 ft., 15s. 9d.; 3 ft. 6 in., 18s. 9d.; 4 ft., 21s. 6d.; 4 ft. 6 in., 24s. 6d.

"PATENT WOVEN WIRE MATTRESS."

THE WOVEN WIRE MATTRESS is a strong and wonderful fabric of fine wire, so interlocked and woven by a Patented process of diagonal DOUBLE WEAVING that an ELASTIC and PERFECT sleeping arrangement is secured. The hard spring wire used is carefully tinned, effectually preventing corrosion, and presents a very attractive and silver-like appearance.

This Mattress is, in fact, a complete appliance for all purposes of REST and SLEEP, combining all the advantages of a PERFECT SPRING BED, AND CAN BE MADE SOFT OR HARD AT PLEASURE BY USING THE HANDLE AT SIDE OF BEDSTEAD; IT CAN BE TAKEN TO PIECES IN A FEW MOMENTS, AND PACKED IN A VERY SMALL COMPASS.

They are also greatly used in yachts and ships, because of their cleanliness.

MAPLE & CO., Manufacturers of First-class Furniture, London and Paris.

MAPLE and CO. MANUFACTURERS.

MAPLE and CO. ART FURNITURE.

MAPLE and CO. ADAMS' DESIGNS.

MAPLE and CO. LOUIS XVI. Furniture.

MAPLE and CO. have at the present time a most wonderful assortment of new and artistic furniture on show. An Illustrated Catalogue, containing the price of every article required in furnishing, post-free.

MAPLE and CO., 145, Tottenham-court-road, MANUFACTURERS of BED-ROOM SUITES by MACHINERY.

500 BED-ROOM SUITES, from 75s. to 150 guineas.

BED-ROOM SUITE in Solid Walnut, consists of 4 ft. wardrobe, 3 ft. 6 in. chest drawers, marble-top washstand, toilet-table with glass, pedestal cupboard, towel-horse, and three chairs. This suite is manufactured by Maple and Co.'s new machinery, lately erected. Complete suite, £10 15s.

BED-ROOM SUITES, in Solid Ash, plate-glass door to wardrobe, washstand with Minton's tiles, toilet-table with glass fixed, pedestal cupboard, towel-horse, and three chairs, complete, £10 15s.

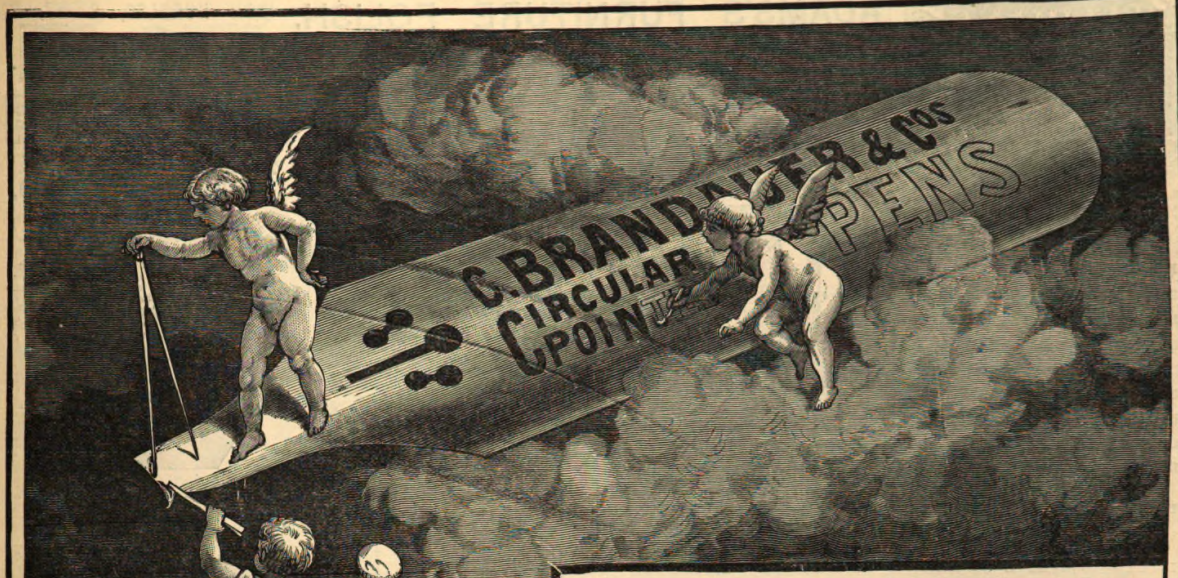
BED-ROOM SUITES, in Solid Walnut, complete, 15 guineas; beautifully inlaid, 20 guineas.

BED-ROOM SUITES, in Solid Ash, with 6 ft. Wardrobe, complete, £22 10s.

BED-ROOM SUITES.—CHIPPENDALE, Adams, Louis XVI., and Sheraton designs; large wardrobes, very handsome, in rosewood, richly inlaid; also satin-wood, inlaid with different woods, 85 to 200 guineas.

MAPLE and CO., Timber Merchants, and direct Importers of the finest Woods to be found in Africa, Asia, and America, and Manufacturers of Cabinet Furniture in various woods by steam power.—Tottenham-court-road, London. Catalogues free.

MAPLE and CO.—BEDSTEADS (IRON).



MAPLE and CO.—BEDSTEADS (BRASS).

MAPLE and CO. have a SPECIAL DEPARTMENT for IRON and BRASS Four-post BEDSTEADS, Cribs, and Cots, specially adapted for mosquito curtains, as used in India, Australia, and the Colonies. Price, for full-sized Bedsteads, varying from 25s. Shippers and colonial visitors are invited to inspect this varied Stock, the largest in England, before deciding elsewhere. 10,000 Bedsteads to select from. MAPLE and CO., London.

MAPLE and CO. have seldom less than 10,000 BEDSTEADS in Stock, comprising some 600 various patterns, in sizes from 2 ft. 6 in. to 5 ft. 6 in. wide, ready for immediate delivery—on the day of purchase, if desired. The disappointment and delay incident to choosing from designs only, where but a limited stock is kept, is thus avoided.

HOUSEHOLD LINENS.—MAPLE and CO. specially commend this department to those commencing housekeeping or replenishing stocks. All goods are carefully selected direct from the manufacturers, thus saving the intermediate profit. An immense assortment to choose from. Price-list, estimates, and patterns free.—MAPLE and CO., London.

POSTAL ORDER DEPARTMENT. Messrs. MAPLE and CO. beg respectfully to state that this Department is now so organised that they are fully prepared to execute and supply any article that can possibly be required in Furnishing at the same price, if not less, than any other house in England. Patterns sent, and quotations given, free of charge.

"The Pen is mightier than the sword."—Lytton.
"True ease in writing."—Pope.
"The great Triumph of the Pen."—Tupper.
"A keener weapon."—Byron.
"Of all those arts in which the wise excel, Nature's chief masterpiece is writing well."—Sheffield, Duke of Buckingham.

"Friends, books, a garden, and perhaps his pen."—Cowper.
"Good bye—my papers out so nearly, I've only room for—yours sincerely."—T. Moore.
"The muse invok'd—sit down to write."—Swift.
"A chiel's amang you takin' notes."—Burns.

"And here let BRANDAUER'S genius find a place
"Where pen, as pencil, yields an equal grace."
BYRON (altered).

FAC-SIMILE AUTOGRAPHS—Authors, Painters, Poets.

George: Augustus: Sala. Anthony Trollope

C.BRANDAUER & Cos
CIRCULAR POINTED PENS

These Pens write as smoothly as a Lead Pencil, and neither Scratch nor Spurt—the points being rounded by a new process, making fine or heavy strokes at will, thus exactly meeting the requirements of the most fastidious writers.

ELLIMAN'S

EMBROCATION

FOR SPRAINS OF ALL KINDS, CURBS, AND SPLINTS
FOR OVER-REACHES, CHAPPED HEELS, WIND GALLS.
FOR RHEUMATISM IN HORSES.
FOR SORE THROATS AND INFLUENZA.
FOR BROKEN KNEES, BRUISES, CAPPED HOCKS.
FOR SORE SHOULDERS, SORE BACKS.

RHEUMATISM.

RHEUMATISM.

ELLIMAN'S Universal EMBROCATION for Rheumatism.
ELLIMAN'S Universal EMBROCATION for Lumbago.
ELLIMAN'S Universal EMBROCATION for Stiffness after severe exercise.
ELLIMAN'S Universal EMBROCATION for Sprains.
ELLIMAN'S Universal EMBROCATION for Chest Colds.
ELLIMAN'S Universal EMBROCATION for Sore Throats.
ELLIMAN'S Universal EMBROCATION as a Substitute for the Mustard Plaister.

SPECIMEN TESTIMONIALS.

ELLIMAN'S ROYAL EMBROCATION. From his Grace the Duke of Rutland, Master of Belvoir Hunt.
"Belvoir, Grantham, Dec. 1, 1879.
"Sirs,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is used in my stables. I think it very useful. RUTLAND."

ELLIMAN'S ROYAL EMBROCATION. From Admiral Parker, Delamere, Ivybridge.
"Sirs,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is used in my stable, and with good results. I think it an invaluable preparation. GEORGE PARKER, Master of the Dartmoor Hounds."

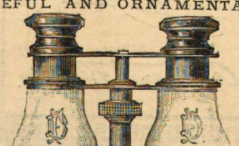
ELLIMAN'S ROYAL EMBROCATION. From Major J. M. Browne, Master of South Staffordshire Hounds.
"Fosseway, Lichfield, Oct. 17, 1879.
"Sirs,—I find Elliman's Embrocation exceedingly good for sprains and cuts in horses, and also for cuts in hounds' feet. I shall strongly recommend it to all my friends.—Yours faithfully, J. M. BROWNE."

ELLIMAN'S ROYAL EMBROCATION. "Castle Weir, Kington, Herefordshire, December, 1878.
"Gentlemen,—I use the Royal Embrocation in the stables and kennels, and have found it very serviceable. I have also used the Universal Embrocation for lumbago and rheumatism for the last two years, and have suffered very little since using it.
"R. H. PRICE, Lieut.-Col.; Master of Radnorshire Hunt."

ELLIMAN'S ROYAL EMBROCATION. From Captain S. G. Butson, J.P., St. Brendon's, Comfort, Eyrecourt, County Galway.
"Dec. 16, 1884.
"Sirs,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is in use in my stables, and I find the results most satisfactory.
"S. G. BUTSON, J.P.,
"Master of the Kilkenny Foxhounds."

ELLIMAN'S Universal EMBROCATION. Sold everywhere in Bottles, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each.
GOLD MEDAL AWARDED, NEW ZEALAND EXHIBITION, 1882.
Of Chemists and Saddlers, in Bottles, 2s., 2s. 6d., and 5s. 6d.
Proprietors—ELLIMAN, SONS, and CO., Slough.



NEW CATALOGUE TO MARCH, 1884, NOW READY.

DIPLOMA and MEDAL, Sydney, 1879-80. This gun, wherever shown, has always taken honours. Why buy from dealers when you can buy at half the price from the maker? Any gun sent on approval on receipt of P.O.O., and remittance returned if on receipt of gun it is not satisfactory. Target trial allowed. A choice of 200 guns, rifles, and revolvers, embracing every novelty in the trade. B.-L. Guns, from 5os. to 50 guineas. E.-L. Rovers, from £6. 6s. to 10os. Send six stamps for Catalogue and Illustrated sheets to G. E. LEWIS, Gun Maker, Birmingham. Established 1850. Largest Stock in the World. Calcutta Exhibition, 1883-4. The Gun of the Period has again taken honours. The exhibit was admittedly the most comprehensive there.

NEGRETTI & ZAMBRA'S NEW-YEAR'S GIFTS.

USEFUL AND ORNAMENTAL.

LADIES' IVORY OPERA GLASS, gilt mounted, with engraved monogram. Prices from £1 12s. 6d.

GENTLEMEN'S LEATHER-COVERED FIELD GLASS, with monogram in pierced silver. Price from £2 15s.

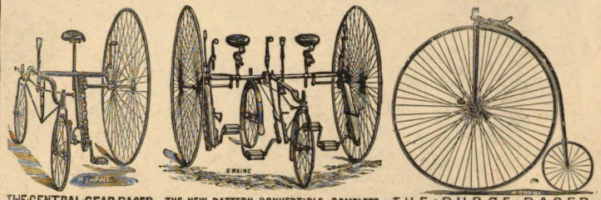
Opera-Glasses mounted in Aluminium, Tortoiseshell, or Pearl. Barometers, Binoculars, Microscopes, Telescopes, Magic Lanterns, &c., of every description.

Illustrated Price-Lists posted free to all parts of the world.

NEGRETTI & ZAMBRA, SCIENTIFIC INSTRUMENT MAKERS AND OPTICIANS TO THE QUEEN,
HOLBORN VIADUCT, E.C.
BRANCHES: 45, Cornhill; 122, Regent-street; Photographic Studio, Crystal Palace.

Negretti and Zambra's Illustrated Catalogue of Meteorological, Optical, Nautical, and Surveying Instruments, 1200 Engravings, price 5s. 6d.

ADAMS'S FURNITURE POLISH.



THE OLDEST AND BEST.—"THE QUEEN" (the Lady's Newspaper) says:—"Having made a fresh trial of its virtues, after considerable experience with other compounds of the same nature, we feel no hesitation in recommending its use to all housewives who are in any difficulty in polishing their furniture."—Dec. 22, 1883.

SOLD BY GROCERS, CHEMISTS IRONMONGERS, CABINET MAKERS, BRUSH DEALERS, OILMEN, &c.
Manufactory: VICTORIA PARK, SHEFFIELD.
CAUTION.—See that the Name is on the Bottle, and Beware of cheap imitations.

IMPORTANT TO INTENDING "CYCLE" PURCHASERS.

D. RUDGE & CO., Show-Rooms and Works, COVENTRY.

THE OLDEST TRICYCLE AND LARGEST CYCLE MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD.

THE CENTRAL GEAR RACER. THE NEW PATTERN CONVERTIBLE. COMPLETE. THE RUDGE RACER.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE-LISTS FREE ON APPLICATION.

DEPOTS:—London, 12, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.; 443, Oxford-street, W.; Manchester, 160-4, Deansgate; Birmingham, 4, Livery-street; Liverpool, 101, Bold-street; Glasgow, 241, Sauchiehall-street; Edinburgh, 29, Hanover-street; Belfast, 40, Royal Avenue.

CHAPMAN and CO.'S FIRST GREAT CLEARANCE SALE.

STOCK VALUED BY CITY ACCOUNTANT AT £100,000.

BLACK SILKS.
WONDERFUL BLACK GROS GRAIN, 1s. 9d. per yard.
RICH LYONS CORD GROS GRAIN, 2s. 6d. per yard.
12 yards BLACK SILK, 35s. 9d. SPECIAL.
12 " " 42s. do.

BLACK GOWN SATINS.
WONDERFUL BLACK GOWN SATIN, 1s. 9d. per yard.
SUPERIOR BLACK GOWN SATIN, 2s. 6d. per yard.
All other qualities greatly reduced.

ALL SHADES IN COLOURED SILKS AND SATINS.
COLOURED SURAH, 13½d. per yard.
COLOURED STRIPED SATINS, 1s. 0½d. per yard.
COLOURED SATINS, 1s. 6d. per yard.
COLOURED OTTOMAN, 1s. 11d. and 2s. 11½d. per yard, half value.
SHOT MERVEILLEUX, 2s. 7½d. per yard.

BLACK AND COLOURED BROCADED SILKS.
HANDSOME BLACK BROCADED SATIN, 1s. per yard.
COLOURED BROCADED SILKS, 1s. per yard.
COLOURED BROCADED SATINS, 1s. 11½d. per yard.
COLOURED FLORAL SILKS, 2s. 11½d. per yard.
All better qualities equally reduced.

COLOURED VELVETS AND PLUSHES.
COLOURED SILK GOWN VELVET, 22 in., 3s. 6d. per yard, Special Half Value.
COLOURED PLUSHES, 4s. 6d. per yard.
BROCADED VELVET, 3s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. per yard.

BLACK SILK VELVET AND PLUSHES.
BLACK SILK VELVET, 1s. 9d., 2s. 3d., 2s. 11d., to 10s. 6d. per yard.
BLACK SILK PLUSH, 4s. 6d. per yard.

BLACK VELVETEENS.
BLACK NONPAREIL.
FAST PILE VELVETEEN, 1s. 0½d., 2s. 4½d., 2s. 9½d., 3s. 4½d., and 3s. 9d. per yard.

COLOURED VELVETEENS.
CHAPMAN'S SPECIAL.
EVERY SHADE, 1s. 9½d. and 2s. 3½d. per yard.

NONPAREIL AND LOUIS.
ALL COLOURS, 2s. 9d. and 3s. 6d. per yard.

DRESS SALE.
Among these Goods may be found Dresses for all occasions, at every conceivable price, from 6d. to 6s. per yard.

10,000	Dresses, 12 yards for	5s. 11d.
10,000	" "	6s. 11d.
15,000	" "	7s. 11d.
5,000	" "	9s. 11d.

All Shades Etoffe de Laine, per yard . 1s. 0½d.
Glencaire Tweeds . 1s. 2½d.
French Cashmeres, all shades, per yard . 1s. 9d.
" Merinos " " . 1s. 7d.
Anglo-Indian Cashmere " " . 2s. 3d.
Grenadines and all Evening Dress Goods greatly reduced; Pompon de Cairo (for Evening Wear), reduced from 2s. 11½d. to 1s. 11½d. per yard, special; also all the Latest Novelties much under price.
BUNDLES OF DRESS REMNANTS, 50 yards for 2s.

WASHING DRESS SALE.
An Assortment much too large to specify, marvellously cheap.

PATTERNS OF ALL GOODS SENT POST-FREE TO ANY PART OF THE WORLD.

CHAPMAN and CO., Notting-hill, W.

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL

PRESERVES THE HAIR, and can be had in a golden colour. Buy only ROWLANDS', of 20, Hatton-garden, London.
Sizes, 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d.

BY SPECIAL ROYAL APPOINTMENT.
Spearman's PURE WOOL DEVON SERGES
No other article woven equals this in general utility.
According to the "Queen," "It has no rival."

For Ladies' wear, beautiful qualities, 1s. 6d. to 4s. 6d. the yard; for Children's wear, capitally strong, 1s. 3d. to 2s. the yard; for Gentlemen's wear, double width, 2s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. the yard. The Navy Blues and the Blacks are fast dyes. On receipt of instructions, samples will be sent Post-Free.—N.B. Any length cut, and Carriage Paid to principal Railway Stations.
Only Address: SPEARMAN and SPEARMAN, Plymouth.
NO AGENTS.

CIGARS DE JOY
ASTHMA, COUGH, BRONCHITIS.
CAUTION.—To guard against fraudulent imitations, see that each Box bears the name of "WILCOX and CO., 239, Oxford-street, London."
One of these Cigarettes gives immediate relief in the worst attack of Asthma, Cough, Bronchitis, and Shortness of Breath. Persons who suffer at night with coughing, phlegm, and short breath find them invaluable, as they instantly check the spasm, promote sleep, and allow the patient to pass a good night. Are perfectly harmless, and may be smoked by ladies, children, and most delicate patients.
Price 2s. 6d. per Box of 35, post-free; and of all Chemists.

SAMPLES AND PRICE-LISTS POST-FREE.
CAMBRIC POCKET HANDKERCHIEFS.
Children's, 1s 1½d. per doz. Hemstitched.
Ladies', 2s 1½d. per doz.
Gents', 3s 6d. per doz.
Ladies' .. 6s 6d. per doz.
Gents' .. 7s 3d. per doz.
All Pure Flax.
By Appointments to the Queen and Crown Princess of Germany.
ROBINSON and CLEAVER, BELFAST.
"The Cambrics of Robinson and Cleaver have a world-wide fame."—Queen.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

MENDS EVERYTHING.
WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, LEATHER, FURNITURE, METALS, &c.
Strongest and Most Elastic Glue on Earth. Absolutely Unbreakable and Insoparable!—No Heating!—No Preparation!—Always Ready!—Always Liquid!!!—Mends China, Glass, Wood, Leather, Patches on Shoes, Rubber, Crockery, Billiard Cue Tips and Cloth, Ornaments, Stone, Furniture, Jewellery, and Book Backs, with Everlasting Tenacity!!—Sold Everywhere. Trial Bottles, 6d. and 1s. RICHARDS, PERRY, and Co., 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C., Sole Agents.

SULPHOLINE LOTION.
The Cure for Skin Diseases.
In a few days Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, entirely fade away.
Beautifully Fragrant. Perfectly Harmless.
Bottles 2s. 9d. Sold Everywhere.

NUDA VERITAS.—GREY HAIR restored by this specific: after which it grows the natural colour, not grey. Unequalled as a dressing. It causes growth, arrests falling, and ITS use defies detection. The most harmless and effectual restorer extant. One trial will convince it has no equal. Price 10s. 6d., of all Chemists and Hairdressers. Testimonials free. Agents, R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

GOLDEN HAIR.—Robare's AUREOLINE produces the beautiful golden colour so much admired. Warranted perfectly harmless. Price 5s. 6d. and 10s. 6d., of all principal Perfumers and Chemists throughout the world. Agents, R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

IRON HURDLES, GATES, &c.

Catalogue of all kinds of Iron and Wire Fence, Hurdles, Gates, Tree-Guards, Poultry, Lawn-Tennis, and Cricket-ground Fence, Wire Netting, Stable Fittings, &c. free on application.
BAYLISS, JONES, & BAYLISS, WOLVERHAMPTON,
And 3, CROOKED-LANE, KING WILLIAM-STREET, E.C.
Please name this Paper.

GET A BOTTLE TO-DAY OF
PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER.
The Oldest, Best, and most widely known Family Medicine in the World.

Get a Bottle to-day of PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER.—It instantly relieves and cures severe scalds, burns, sprains, bruises, toothache, headache, pains in the side, joints, and limbs, all neuralgic and rheumatic pains. Taken internally, cures at once coughs, sudden colds, cramp in the stomach, colic, diarrhœa, and cholera infantum. PAIN KILLER is the greatest household medicine, and affords relief not to be obtained by other remedies. It dispels the agony of pain, gives REST, SLEEP, COMFORT, QUIETUDE. It supersedes the use of dangerous Narcotic and Anodyne Remedies. Any Chemist can supply it, at 1s. 1½d., and 2s. 9d. per Bottle.
Depôt, 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

"ADVICE TO DYSPEPTICS." Symptoms of Dyspepsia and Indigestion, with Special Advice as to Diet.
"This little pamphlet appeals forcibly to those who have allowed the palate to decide everything for them, and have paid the inevitable penalty of their folly."—Globe.
Sent for One Stamp.
J. M. RICHARDS, Publisher, 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

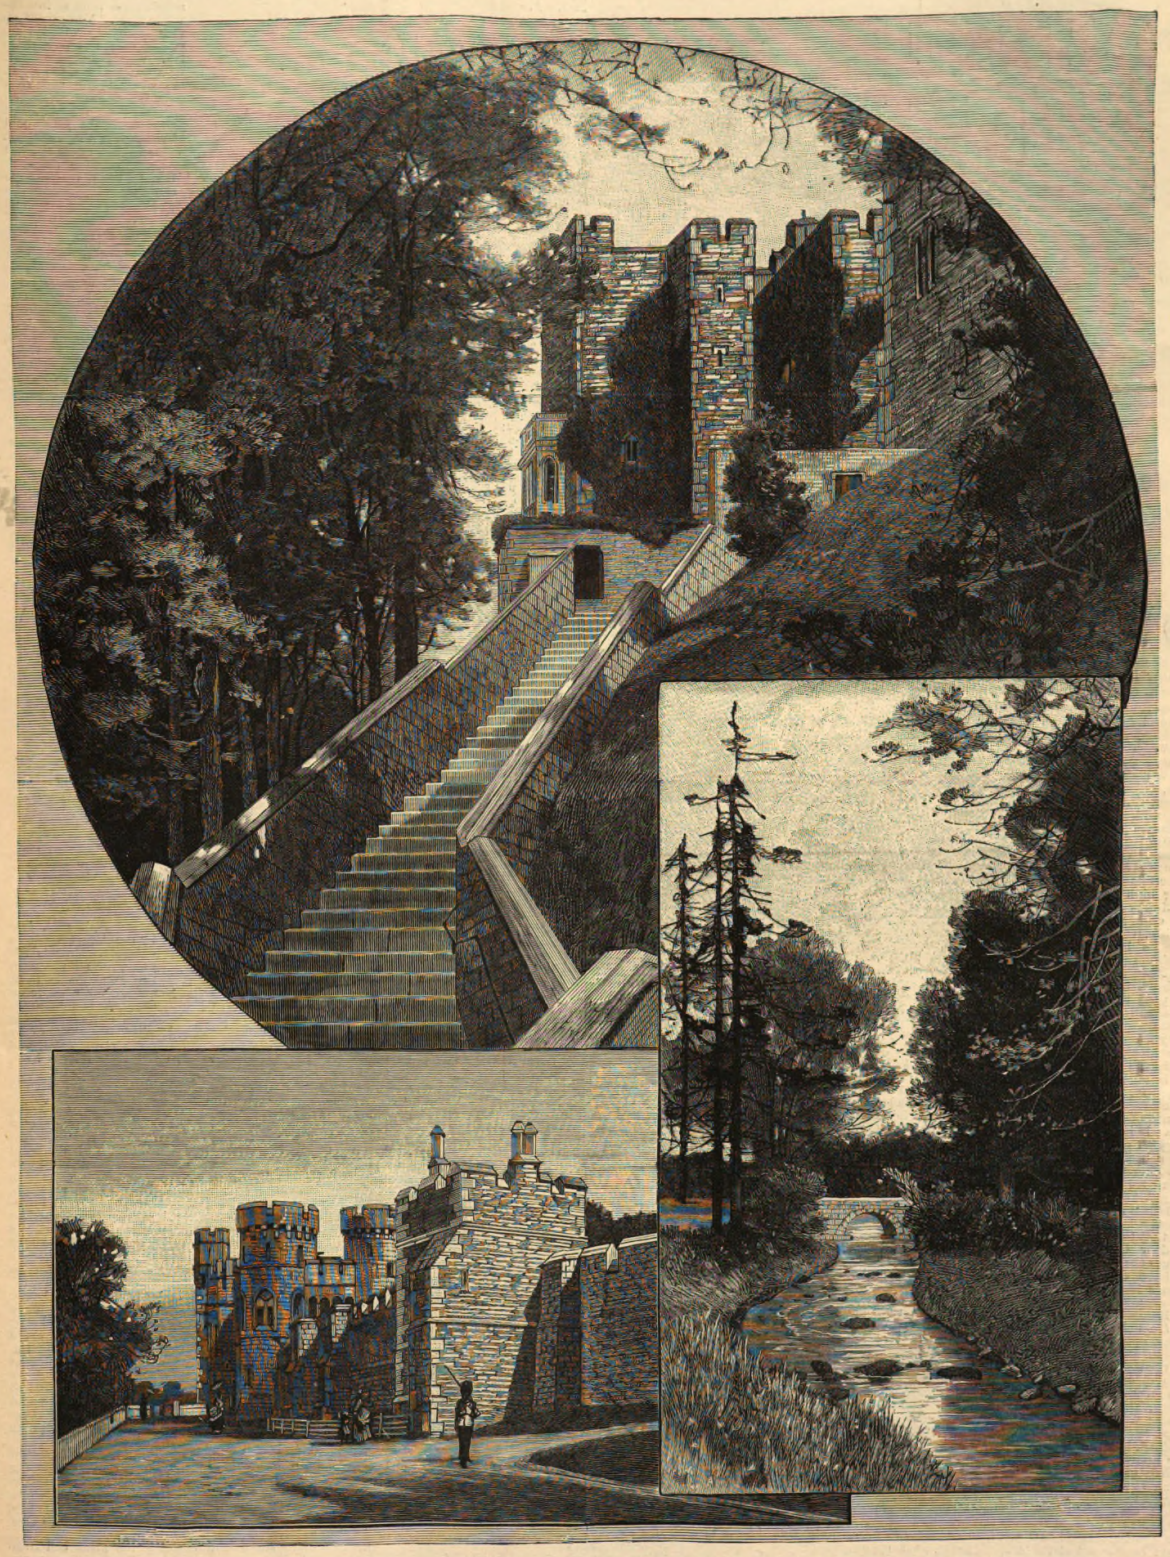
THE OXYGEN-GIVING DISINFECTANT,
HARTIN'S CRIMSON SALT

In addition to this well-known and highly-valued Preparation, a Shilling Bottle of which makes 300 Gallons of Crimson Fluid, the public can now obtain

HARTIN'S CRIMSON SALT DISINFECTING POWDER, a perfectly soluble, non-poisonous, non-corrosive ODOURLESS, and most powerful Disinfectant, Saturator, and Antiseptic, ready for instant use, by sprinkling upon all that is offensive or dangerous.
Geo. R. Tweedie, Esq., F.C.S., says:—"The results of an extended and elaborate series of carefully conducted experiments convince me that Hartin's Patent Crimson Salt Disinfecting Powder is a most reliable, economical, thorough, and safe disinfectant."
Sold by Chemists everywhere in Tins.
Prices, 1s. and 2s.
Wholesale by HARTIN'S CRIMSON SALT Co., Ltd., Worcester.

"IT IS ALMOST HUMAN"
THE NORTON DOOR CHECK AND SPRING.

THE SLAMMING OF DOORS ABSOLUTELY PREVENTED.
The principle upon which these springs are made renders it utterly impossible for the door to Remain Open or to Close with a Slam. They are therefore peculiarly adapted to all kinds of doors, especially those that are framed with handsome STAINED OR ORNAMENTAL GLASS, also that are constantly left open by Careless Servants or otherwise, thereby admitting dust, cold draughts, and odours from the Kitchen or Pantry. In the Nursery, Sick-Room, and Study, or WHERE ABSOLUTE QUIET IS DESIRABLE they are almost indispensable, as they render the closing of the door POSITIVELY NOISELESS, and act with almost "human skill." Send for Illustrated Price-List.
NORTON DOOR-CHECK AND SPRING COMPANY, 46, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON, E.C.

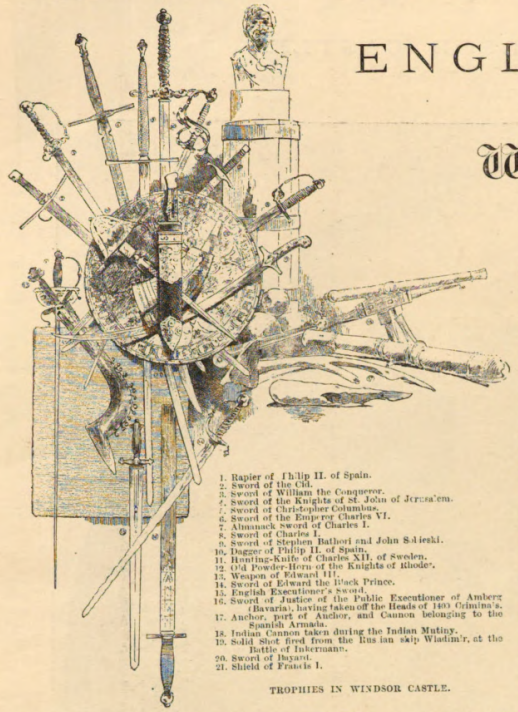


HAGAN'S MAGNOLIA BALM
gives a pure and blooming complexion, restores and preserves youthful beauty. Its effects are gradual, natural, and perfect. It removes redness, blotches, pimples, tan, sunburn, and freckles, and makes a lady of thirty appear but twenty. The Magnolia Balm makes the skin smooth and pearly, and imparts a fresh appearance to the countenance. Hagan's Magnolia Balm has been established nearly forty years. Hagan's Magnolia Balm can be obtained of all Chemists, Perfumers, and stores, or sent to any address on receipt of 3s. 6d.
DEPOT, 7, SNOW-HILL, LONDON, E.C.

THE ART OF PALMISTRY.
To predict to a man the events of his life by the sight of his hand is not more wonderful to him who has received the power of knowing it than to say to a soldier that he will fight; an advocate that he will speak; or a shoemaker that he will make a pair of boots."—Balzac.
This mysterious little work will be sent to any address, on receipt of stamp, by the LYON MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 7, Snow-hill, London, E.C.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by INGRAM BROTHERS, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JANUARY 24, 1885.

ENGLISH HOMES.—No. I. WINDSOR CASTLE.



The North Terrace. The Hundred Steps. In the Private Garden of the Queen.

ENGLISH HOMES.

No. I.

Windsor Castle.

1. Rapier of Philip II. of Spain.
2. Sword of the Cid.
3. Sword of William the Conqueror.
4. Sword of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem.
5. Sword of Christopher Columbus.
6. Sword of the Emperor Charles VI.
7. Almanack Sword of Charles I.
8. Sword of Charles I.
9. Sword of Stephen Bathori and John Sobieski.
10. Dagger of Philip II. of Spain.
11. Hunting-Knife of Charles XII. of Sweden.
12. Old Powder-Horn of the Knights of Rhodes.
13. Weapon of Edward III.
14. Sword of Edward the Black Prince.
15. English Executioner's Sword.
16. Sword of Justice of the Public Executioner of Amberg (Bavaria), having taken off the Heads of 1403 Criminals.
17. Anchor, part of Anchor, and Cannon belonging to the Spanish Armada.
18. Indian Cannon taken during the Indian Mutiny.
19. Solid Shot fired from the Russian ship Wladimir, at the Battle of Inkermann.
20. Sword of Bayard.
21. Shield of Francis I.

TROPHIES IN WINDSOR CASTLE.

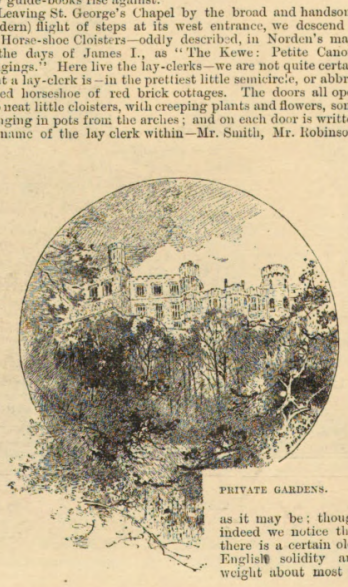
OF ENGLISH HOMES, the first is that at Windsor—that Castle whose home-life has been made so familiar to all of us, by many pleasant revelations from the highest of its inmates. Naturally, then, one begins with Windsor Castle; without apology, one tries to tell in a few words its story, to give some notion of the place, and of all around it and about it.

You have only to go down by rail from Paddington or Waterloo, past the homely old-fashioned villages, Datchet and Wraysbury, an hour takes you to Windsor, and you are climbing the steep street that winds round the Castle. The town is picturesque, with quaintly named streets: Peascod-street, Sheet-street, Bier-street. You leave the bridge, a quarter of a mile across which stands the beautiful college of Eton, with its glorious chapel, grey and yellow with age, amid the dark brick schools. Up the hill, then, to the Castle; passing, if you have come by the London and South-Western, by the Hundred Steps, which wind from the first bend of Thames-street round and about up to the Canons' Cloisters; by the fine Curfew (or, as it was of old called, the Bell) Tower, rising high above you at the midmost point of the street; and finally sharp round by the Salisbury Tower, the south-west corner of the Castle, leaving on your right the comfortable, clean High-street of an English country town—with its large, handsome inns, good townhall, and the invariable pony carriage waiting at a sadler's door. These are fitting surroundings for Windsor Castle; the old houses on the left side of Thames-street, which were not long ago pulled down, completely spoiled and hid the beauty of its walls. There has seldom been a "restoration" so unquestionably right as their removal.

By a very recent and very good change in the regulations, the visitor now gets his tickets (to view the State Apartments, &c.) in the Castle itself, at a little window in the wall, on the left hand, just as you are approaching the Round Tower; though for nearly all that is to be seen no ticket nor formality is necessary. The old plan was to send the tickets for distribution (gratis) to some neighbouring shop, where one always felt as if in getting them one ought to buy something "for the good of the house"—photographic views, probably, if it were a bookseller's.

But now, having got his ticket, the unwary traveller's troubles begin—troubles which Dickens's admirable "Dictionary of the Thames" describes so well that it is expedient to quote the very words. "The arrangement of the hours given to sightseers," says the Dictionary, "is so peculiar as almost to suggest the idea that the Grand Steward of Windsor, or the Constable of Windsor Castle, on whichever of those amiable German Princes the duty of making such arrangements may devolve, has been running a match against the trustees of Sir John Soane's Museum for a puzzle prize. Mark the subtlety of that arrangement by which the public are permitted to view the Round Tower on any day from eleven to three in winter and from eleven to four in summer; while to see the Curfew Tower, application must be made to Mr. Gower, the belfry-keeper; and, to contemplate the Royal Mews, Mr. Moon, at the Castle-hill entrance, must be interviewed between the hours of one and three. Still, these objects of interest are open on any day. Now, the Albert Chapel is open every Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday from twelve to three without tickets; while St. George's Chapel may be viewed every day, except Wednesday, between the hours of 12.30 and four. This is not all, however, for if we go to Windsor we must see the state apartments. These are open to the public, during the absence of the Queen and the Court, on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays, on production of tickets. . . . We struggle to arrange a table of days. The first fact we realise is that we had better not go to Windsor on Saturday. On Wednesday we should "be shut out of St. George's and the State apartments; while if we went on Monday or Tuesday we should be shut out of the Albert Chapel. We therefore fall back upon Thursday or Friday, with the reflection that persons in authority might just as well have said so at once, and saved us the mental agony of working out the puzzle for ourselves."

Starting thus, say on a Thursday, we may as well begin with what lies before us as we enter through the handsome gateway named after Henry VIII. We are in the lowest of the three Wards into which the Castle buildings are divided: the Upper Ward, forming the modern palace, with all its state and private apartments, and looking into the garden and park; the Middle, containing the Round Tower; and the Lower, an irregular oblong, being filled as to its northern side by the splendid buildings of St. George's Chapel and its adjacent cloisters. Splendid, however, as these are—the chapel itself, which Edward IV. raised upon the site of the former chapel built by Edward III., is one of the finest of "perpendicular" buildings—yet the crowning glory of the whole is the exquisite choir, in which are installed the Knights of the Garter. There is beauty in almost the plainest church: the arches, the high windows, the crucial form, the dark wooden pews, are enough in themselves, helped very likely by the beautiful associations which make them dear to us. What words, then, can do justice to the splendour of this chapel, in whose small space are crowded such wonders of exquisite form, of the richest colour, and of historic memories taking bodily form in the rich banners that line the stately building? Along each side are the stalls of the Garter Knights, with, above every one, their swords, crests, and mantles; over these their banners, and underneath brass plates, which record the names and bearings of all past and present Knights. Higher than the stalls, at the west end of the chapel, are the seats of the Sovereign and Princes of the blood Royal; and facing these, over the altar, is the Albert Memorial Window, of rich stained glass. North and south, too, the windows are coloured and blazoned with the cognizances of Knights of the Order.



Henry VIII., Jane Seymour, and Charles I. are buried in the Royal vault beneath the centre of the choir, whose reopening, in 1813, by order of the then Prince Regent, suggested Byron's celebrated and ferocious lines:—

> Famed for contemptuous breach of sacred ties,
> By headless Charles see heartless Henry lies.
> Between them stands another sceptred thing:
> It moves, it reigns—in all but name a king.
> Charles to his people, Henry to his wife,
> In him the double tyrant starts to life.

Here are also buried Edward IV. and his Queen, and Henry VI.—who was to have been canonised, it is said, only "the demands of the Pope were too exorbitant"; a fact which throws a quaint little side-light upon the calendar of saints. And there is an irony in the remembrance of Henry VIII.'s elaborate directions for a magnificent monument to himself, to be 28 ft. high, with 134 statues and twenty-four bas-reliefs: all which was "to show that famous princes leaving behind great fame do never die"—and was never carried out.

Outside the choir, there will perhaps be nothing more interesting for the moment than the marble effigy of the Prince Imperial—immediately on the right as you enter the chapel—erected by his mother, and bearing those sad and almost prophetic words written by the young man as he started on his unhappy expedition. Out of place as a monument would doubtless have been in Westminster Abbey, there seems no reason why the Queen should not in her own residence thus honour a personal friend of Imperial birth. And the plain recumbent statue is a great relief to the eye after that wonderful cenotaph of Princess Charlotte—a thing that the very guide-books rise against.

Leaving St. George's Chapel by the broad and handsome (modern) flight of steps at its west entrance, we descend to the Horse-shoe Cloisters—oddly described, in Norden's map, in the days of James I., as "The Kewe: Petite Canons Lodgings." Here live the lay-clerks—we are not quite certain what a lay-clerk is—in the prettiest little semicircle, or abbreviated horseshoe of red brick cottages. The doors all open into neat little cloisters, with creeping plants and flowers, some swinging in pots from the arches; and on each door is written the name of the lay clerk within—Mr. Smith, Mr. Robinson, as it may be: though indeed we notice that there is a certain old-English solidity and weight about most of the names, which seems entirely in keeping. They are generally in two syllables, with plenty of consonants, and an air of fourteenth-century spelling about them.

PRIVATE GARDENS.

In colour, these Horseshoe Cloisters are among the most satisfactory things in the whole place. You cannot go very far wrong with bricks, new or old; but new stone is a very different matter. In the time of George IV. the whole Castle was thoroughly renovated, very much rebuilt, and a good deal pulled down. A great deal of restoration was no doubt necessary, and much of what was done was in excellent taste—above all, the architect (Sir Jeffry Wyatville) made it his first object to preserve the Castle as it stood under Edward III.; while the heightening the Round Tower—by 50 ft. we believe—was an improvement of incalculable value, a true stroke of genius. Yet it is unquestionable that in the Windsor Castle of to-day, with its towers of (comparatively) small white stones, in unimpeachable repair and of the most uniform colour and surface, there is a neatness as of new pins, an air of respectability which is entirely unhistorical—for indeed nothing is less respectable than history. Now, observe how fine are the three western towers—called Salisbury, Garter, and Curfew—all built by Henry III. Their best aspect is perhaps that of which we have already spoken—from Thames-street, as one ascends from the station; but the views from their summits are also extremely fine. And a little bit further on, from a platform north-west of the Curfew Tower (whence one is straitly enjoined to throw no stones into the street below), there is quite another view, very homely, and very interesting and pleasant: one sees the red houses, the pretty country beyond, and then just under one's nose the commonplace serviceable thoroughfare to the river, known as Bier-street. After castles and cenotaphs and banners, there is something very human in this common bit of street.

Now let us leave it (casting no stones below), and, passing quickly by the houses of the Canons, and leaving to our left their cloisters and the Winchester Tower and the top of the Hundred Steps, get us back to the Albert Memorial Chapel, where indeed we ought to have been this long while—yet not neglecting on our way the Dean's Cloister, a very sweet and sacred little spot, just by the Albert Chapel's entrance. Here is the place, of all places in this great Castle, to sit quietly for a while on one of the stone benches by the wall, reading perhaps the quaint epitaphs of old valiant knights, or only looking at the little square of sunlight on the grass, and thinking of the deaths of kings, or of their famous lives, according to one's nature.

THE CLOCK TOWER.

Sir Gilbert Scott was the architect chosen by the Queen to restore and beautify the building anciently known as Wolsey's Tomb House, in honour of the Prince Consort; and the work has been done with an effect, as the "Dictionary" already quoted well says, of "almost overpowering" richness. "The roof literally blazes with the Salviati mosaics, and the light entering through the stained-glass windows is enriched with gorgeous dyes." One of the most interesting objects in this small chapel—it is only 68 ft. long—is the cenotaph, of black and gold marble, with the recumbent statue of Prince Albert, in armour of the fourteenth century (why, does not exactly appear), executed in Carrara marble. One is reminded a little of the Albert Memorial in Hyde Park, with its gold and marble, by the style of splendour of this chapel; but here the evil influences of English weather and London smoke are happily avoided.

Facing the Albert and St. George's Chapels are the houses of the "Military Knights"—old gentlemen whose declining days are made comfortable (and very comfortable, we are happy to think) on tenure, apparently, by a service which would seem to consist of occasionally wearing a rather odd uniform. Beyond the Military Knights, we do not think that anything of very great interest—except, it may be, Henry III.'s Tower on our right—remains to be looked at in the Lower Ward: so we go to the next, or Middle Ward, in which stands the Round Tower, surrounded by an ancient fosse, now partly filled up and ornamented with particularly quaint and appropriate flower-beds.

To the Round Tower we pass under a very beautiful Norman gateway—massive, simple, and grand—a fitting entry for a palace. Immediately on the right, when this is passed, begin the innumerable steps—though, by-the-way, the children coming down always count them and always disagree as to their number—which do in the end lead to the summit of the Round Tower.

Coming down stairs—and noticing the great bell from Moscow, which children (some of them rather large) can never resist sounding—a picturesque gateway with steps leads down to the northern terrace, while a sharp turn to the right brings us facing the entrance to the state apartments, with, still on our right, the irregular quadrangle of the Upper Ward. Here, at the western end, is the statue of Charles II.; on the south, the great gateway of George IV., and the visitors' apartments of the palace, with, at the extreme end, the Victoria Tower; eastward lie the private apartments of the Queen, and northward the state apartments, into which we will now go.

MONTMARTRE

It is a public day, and a little group of the public is waiting in the ante-room at the top of the staircase for the guide who, every quarter of an hour, "personally conducts" a party through the rooms. They are oddly made up, these parties; fortunately for the guide, they usually include several British workmen, or very small tradesmen, and their wives—an infinitely better audience for little jokes or impressive statements than haughty members of the educated middle class, who are always on their dignity in public. On the day of our visit there was an old fellow, the most perfect reproduction of one of the coachmen in "Pickwick," who persisted in waiting in every room till he was actually forced by the guide to move into the next, but who displayed great inarticulate joy at hearing the price of various articles of virtù. He had a particular snort of triumph for any sum over ten thousand pounds, which pleased our guide exceedingly; for this guide was a nice old gentleman, who thoroughly enjoyed his work, and who, having loudly made a statement for the benefit of the entire assembly, was wont, out of pure kind-heartedness, to repeat it sotto voce in the ear of some favoured individual.

First he took us to the Audience, then to the Presence Chamber; in both of which the ceiling is covered with the "sprawling goddesses" of Verrio—in each room the central figure is Catherine of Braganza, behaving allegorically—and the walls are covered with the story of Esther, told in Gobelin tapestry, really wonderful in its perfect preservation and vivid colour. The carved work of Grinling Gibbons in the Presence Chamber is extremely fine.

Next to these comes the Guard Chamber, one of the most interesting in the palace. It is stored with arms, picturesque in their evident readiness for use; and contains many trophies of unequalled interest. Among these are a part of the foremast of the Victory, with a colossal bust of Nelson, by Chantrey, and a shot fired from the Santissima Trinidad. There are also busts of Wellington and Marlborough, with banners above them: the estates of Strathfieldsaye and Blenheim are held upon the tenure of an annual presentation—on the 18th of June and the 2nd of August—of these flags. Then there are the complete suits of armour of many princes; a beautiful silver shield by Benvenuto Cellini (this name was a great triumph to our guide), given by Francis to Henry on the Field of the Cloth of Gold; a trophy from Zululand; King Koffee's umbrella; and—of all things—a chair called Burns's, made of oak from the roof of Alloway Kirk. Que fait il dans cette galère?

St. George's Hall, the grand banqueting-room, which comes next, first strikes one as much too long for its width; and, indeed, these are not its original proportions—it looks far better as one stands some 40 ft. from the door. Still, it is a fine room, and particularly well suited for its purpose. On its ceiling are painted the arms of all the Knights of the Garter, and their names are on the walls—almost last is that of Lord Beaconsfield, a self-made man among the countless emperors and kings. The last banquet in this hall was given when the late Czar was here; and the value of the service of gold then used delighted beyond measure our old gentleman from Dickens.

The Waterloo Chamber is said, by the guide-book of to-day, to be "in the style of architecture which flourished in the time of Elizabeth"; yet, when it was built by our "Sailor King," the irreverent compared it to the cabin of a ship. It contains the portraits of nearly every eminent man connected with the Battle of Waterloo—excepting one, Napoleon, who it is said was there. The chandeliers in this room are magnificent, and the tapestry very fine.

After these are the Grand Reception-Room, all in gold, with the story of Jason in tapestry on its walls, and the Throne-Room—along which the Siamese Ambassadors crawled on their stomachs to the further end, where her Majesty was sitting to receive them. The prevailing colour in this room is the rich Garter-blue.

The Rubens Room is of an ugly red, but the pictures are very fine—some of them are splendid examples of the dashing, exuberant strength of the master. Further on are a Zuccarelli Room—with some beautiful things—and a Vandyke Room, formerly called the Ball-Room, in which are twenty-seven portraits by Vandyke, almost all of very great historical interest: three of Charles I. (one from three points of view, painted for Bernini, who was to execute his bust), four of Charles II. as a boy, and three of James, with five of Henrietta Maria.

In the State Ante-Room (the "King's Public Dining-Room" of Charles II.) are some fine carving by Grinling Gibbons and a curious transparency of George III., doubly reflected by mirrors, and painted on glass from a portrait by Reynolds.

Into the private apartments one can only go with a special order from the Lord Chamberlain, and this is very seldom given. Their principal interest lies in the marvellous collection of what our fathers called "curiosities," to be found in the Grand Corridor—520 ft. in length, and extending round the south and east sides of the Quadrangle—and in the drawing-rooms. The porcelain is literally without a rival, and includes the most famous set of Sèvres in existence—the service made for Louis XIV., and afterwards acquired by George IV. The extraordinary Oriental trophies, too, and the wonderful pictures, must be "seen to be believed"—only, unfortunately, by the outer world they must not be seen.

From the windows of all these rooms, except those which look into the Quadrangle, one sees the splendid terrace upon which, whatever the weather, Elizabeth used to "take exercise" with a vigour worthy of a Virgin Queen. Everyone has admired this terrace, with its lovely views over town, woodland, and meadows: Miss Burney gives us a charming picture of the little Princess walking gravely there, and Pepys says, prettily, "It is the most romantique castle that is in the world. But Lord! the prospect that is in the balcone in the Queen's lodgings, the terrace and the walk, are strange things to consider, being the best in the world, sure."

This, leaving for the moment the Park and Virginia Water, is a brief catalogue of what is best worth seeing in Windsor Castle: now let us fulfil our promise of sketching, as shortly as may be, what most notable things have happened there—who built, besieged, and defended it.

It is a far cry from Queen Victoria of to-day to the mythical Arthur; yet Froissart says that he held his Round Table at Windsor—a statement which cuts both ways, proving both the age of the Castle and the existence of the King. A story told by William of Malmesbury about a miracle—the cure of a blind man by Edward the Confessor, after which the healed one was placed in charge of "the Royal palace at Windsor"—though it be not conclusive as to the saintly miracle, proves less doubtfully that in Edward's day the Royal palace was there to be taken charge of.

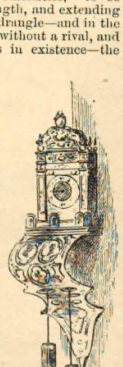
LEADING TO THE CLOISTERS.

A strict regard for truth compels us to add that this prototype of the Windsor Castle of to-day was probably at Old Windsor, some five miles nearer London than the comparatively modern buildings; but even were this fact more certain than it is, the first Royal residence deserves at least a mention in any account of the present.

We are treading on surer ground, however, when we come to the date at which—until Freeman and his disciples—the English history of schools practically began. William I.—conqueror of our, by hypothesis, unconquerable Fatherland—undoubtedly built a Castle on the brow of the hill two miles north-west of Old Windsor: it is quite possible that, if we only knew it, some of the bricks are there "at this day to testify it." We also know that he sometimes lived at Windsor; but here again the doubt as to whether it was Old or New steps in. Probably it was Old Windsor; that grim Norman castle was most likely at the first little more than a stronghold built on the strongest military point of those parts, and designed rather to keep enemies out and prisoners in than to add very much of sweetness or light to the lives of its occupants.

Soon enough, indeed, is it mentioned as a State prison: first in 1095, in the reign of William's red-haired son. The Earl of Northumberland did not pay his respects at the Court of this monarch, having very reasonable fears as to what might be his treatment there: and William straightway attacked him at his fortress of Bamborough Castle. Thence the Earl escaped; but was captured, and became the first of a long line of illustrious prisoners at Windsor. From his time onwards, in fact, the history of the Castle is but a chronicle of fightings and captivities, mixed with constant builders' accounts and varied by an occasional marriage.

Next to William Rufus came, the earliest to give something of their present shape to the buildings of the Castle, Henry I. He greatly enlarged the place, and made it more of a home in which a king could live; his buildings would seem to have occupied, roughly speaking, what are now the Middle and Lower Wards. Even of his work, however, nothing remains but the Keep, and that rather in form and position than in actual stone and iron. "Time is an eater of things:" a maxim which only the Romans who invented it seem to have been able to disprove—Roman roads and Roman walls alone stand the wear and tear of the ages.



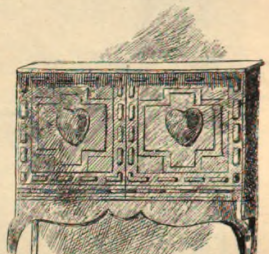
Henry also added the chapel named after Edward the Confessor, and in it was married and re-crowned—a ceremony then generally performed at the marriage of the King. At this second coronation a scene occurred only possible in the roughest of those rough times. William, Archbishop of Canterbury, was to have crowned the King, but his fierce rival, Thurstan, Archbishop of York, tried to secure for himself the performance of the ceremony. His cross-bearer actually carried the sacred emblem into the chapel—and had to be turned out therefrom, "neck and crop." We cannot conceive the possibility of such a scene nowadays.

Through the wars of Maud and Stephen the Castle seems to have passed untroubled; but special mention is made of it in a charter supplementary to the treaty of Wallingford, by which the English throne was given to Stephen for life, then to Henry, Duke of Normandy (afterwards Henry II.), and his heirs. "By the consent of Holy Church," said Stephen in this charter, "I have made unto the Duke such assurance of my castles and fortresses that at my death the Duke may not suffer any damage or delay in acquiring possession of the kingdom. The Tower of London and the Fortress of Windsor, with the consent of Holy Church, are delivered to Richard de Lacy, safely to be kept; and Richard de Lacy has sworn, and has delivered his son in pledge, to remain in the hands and custody of the Archbishop of Canterbury, that after my decease he shall deliver the Castle to the Duke." The pledge seems odd to us nowadays: one wonders how the poor boy passed his time, "in the custody of the Archbishop of Canterbury"—whether it was a sort of honourable captivity, or was only like being at boarding-school: though, by-the-by, Richard de Lacy's son was possibly a full-grown man.

This trusteeship of Windsor Castle seems to have passed off satisfactorily; a good deal, as money went in those days, was spent in works about the Castle—£135 16s. 8d. in one year, £188 4s. 6d. in three others, of which £20 were for repairs to the walls. But the next guardian had by no means such an easy time of it.

This was Hugh Pudsey, Bishop of Durham and Chief Justiciar of England, to whom Richard Cœur de Lion, on his departure for the Crusades, granted his custody, with the forest, and the shrievalty of the county of Berks. But the famous William Longchamp, Pudsey's great rival, managed to decoy him to a meeting in the Castle of Tickhill—where he was seized and detained until he had surrendered Castle, forest, and shrievalty, as well as the earldom of Northumberland!

This was pretty well, even for those days; but Longchamp was not the only one who could play at that game. The Castle passed to and from his keeping more than once, John (nicknamed Lackland) doing what he could to outshine the churchman in violence and contempt for ordinary scruples. At last William Longchamp was deposed, and compelled to surrender the Tower and Windsor to the Archbishop of Rouen, who—it seems odd in these more English days—was made Chancellor in his place.



CLOCK PRESENTED BY HENRY VIII. TO ANNE BOLEYN.

The struggle was now between the French Archbishop, with the Barons—not yet English—of England, on his side; and Prince John on the other. In 1193 John, with no great difficulty, took the Castle; but the Barons, rising to oppose his army of Welshmen and foreigners, at once besieged it. The operations were under the command of the Archbishop—evidently of the Church militant—and the Castle held out a long time. At last the garrison lost heart and fled; but were caught, and, as Holinshed says, "put to worthy execution." In these confused and ignoble struggles it is often difficult to say which side was worthier to be punished; but it is perhaps fair to assume that John would always contrive to be in the wrong.

It was in his days, when he became King, that occurred one of the most famous or infamous tragedies which are connected with the name of Windsor; though whether it really took place here is by no means a certain thing—there is some evidence that Corfe Castle was its scene. William de Braose was a knight from whom the King had a good deal of difficulty in getting the rent he claimed in respect of certain lands in Ireland (history, by-the-way, certainly does repeat itself). The Knight resisted, vi et armis; but John—according to the Annals of Margam—crossed to Ireland and captured William's wife, Maud de Braose, and his son, whom he imprisoned, first at Bristol, then at Windsor. Their ransom was fixed at 50,000 marks; but William fled to France instead of paying it. Then the King, says another chronicler (the one who gives Corfe as their place of imprisonment), ordered mother and son to be inclosed in a room with a sheaf of wheat and a piece of raw bacon. On the eleventh day their prison was opened, and they were found both dead; the mother was sitting upright between her son's legs, with her head leaning back on his breast, whilst he was also in a sitting posture, with his face turned towards the ground. Maud de Braose, in her last pangs of hunger, had gnawed the cheeks of her son, then probably dead.

Part of John's punishment, and perhaps the bitterest part, took place not long after this, within a mile or two of Windsor, at Runnymede, the old "field of the council," as its name denotes, now the field of that council of Barons which wrung from him his consent to the great Charter. Next year Windsor Castle was besieged, while the King was ravaging Norfolk and Suffolk; but the Barons soon raised the siege, and marched to attack John himself.

The long reign of his successor was, perhaps, as important as any in the annals of the Castle. Henry III. built a new great hall in the Lower Ward, and the three towers already mentioned as his work, continued the wall on the south side of the same ward, and added the tower now known by his name; and, chief perhaps of all, the chapel whose place was first filled by Henry VII.'s Tomb House, which, again, was greatly reconstructed by Wolsey, and which was finally converted into the Albert Chapel of to-day. It is probable, too, that he built the Norman Tower, which now forms a gateway between the Upper and Middle Wards.

MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS' CABINET.

In 1264, during the Barons' War, Prince Edward carried off by a surprise the military chest of the City of London, and defended its treasures in Windsor Castle—which he lost and recovered a good many times during the war. However, in 1265, he had the pleasure of imprisoning the chief citizens of London there, till they paid a heavy fine for their adherence to Simon de Montfort.

The next great "Windsor King" was Edward III., born there, to whose Order of the Garter the Castle owes so much of its fame. There is really no need to repeat again that little scandal about Lady Salisbury, but I may say that, however it originated, the creation of the Order was a brilliant stroke of policy. The Garter is unquestionably the most famous of all chivalric orders, and there is no doubt that it completely served the turn of the ambitious Prince who founded it. The first installation took place on St. George's Day, 1349, with magnificent ceremonies and jousts—in which latter the King's ringing and characteristic motto was

Hay hay, the wythe swan
By God's soul I am thy man!

But even these festivities were outdone by the tournament and rejoicing held in honour of his prisoner, King John of France, taken at Poitiers in 1357. Edward seems to have been a little surprised that his captive did not enjoy himself more; but the French King was quite shrewd enough to see that feasts "in honour of" a prisoner, were yet more "in honour of" his conqueror. In 1356 Edward intrusted the works of rebuilding and improvement to the famous William of Wykeham, who built the Winchester Tower, and became Bishop of Winchester.

Shakspeare has described for us the next great historical scene here acted: the combat, before Richard II., between Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk, and Henry of Lancaster. How both the combatants were banished, and how one returned, everyone knows—even that "merest schoolboy" of fiction. And then, close after our mention of Shakspeare, two other poets' names rise to greet us—Chaucer, clerk of the works of St. George's Chapel at two shillings a day (it was a good deal then), and James, afterwards the First of Scotland, prisoner for eighteen years in the Round Tower. Here he saw and loved Jane of Beaufort, grand-daughter of John of Gaunt; and—which really is odd—they were actually married, and became King and Queen of Scotland, and lived happily ever afterwards.

Another poet was imprisoned in the Round Tower a century later—the Earl of Surrey, one of the band of courtly versifiers who surrounded that "bright occidental star," Elizabeth, in the days when, as would seem, every gentleman could not only write his sonnet but could put classic and genuine poetry into it. This prisoner, too, had his lady-love, the fair Geraldine, and they were married—but, alas! they married other persons: yet also, very possibly, lived happily ever after.

EDWARD ROSE.

ENGLISH HOMES.—No. I. WINDSOR CASTLE.

1. Favourite Walk of the Queen on the East Terrace.
2. The Norman Tower.
3. Entrance to the Private Gardens.
4. Cavaliers' Room in the Norman Tower. (Second Room.)
5. Cavaliers' Room in the Norman Tower. (First Room.)

NAVY DEPARTMENT
RECEIVED
FEB 13 1885
LIBRARY.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 2389.—VOL. LXXXVI. SATURDAY, JANUARY 31, 1885. TWO WHOLE SHEETS | SIXPENCE. By Post, 6½d.

THE LATE COLONEL FREDERICK BURNABY, ROYAL HORSE GUARDS, KILLED IN THE SOUDAN.—SEE PAGE 132.

OUR NOTE-BOOK

The public anxiety as to the safety of Major-General Sir Herbert Stewart's force after the engagement at Abou Klea was allayed by the publication of the War Office despatch on Wednesday (General Gordon's birthday, aptly). We give in another column the official telegram, which tersely tells how the first stage of the task intrusted by Lord Wolseley to Sir Herbert Stewart was accomplished with remarkable celerity. Metammeh was captured by the gallant troops under that distinguished General, though at a deplorable cost in killed and wounded; and Sir Charles Wilson forthwith left for Khartoum on board a steamer. The nation learnt with deep regret that to the lamentable roll-call of dead at Abou Klea, which contained the name of none more sincerely mourned than that of Colonel F. Burnaby, has been added a sadly large list of brave officers and men. Sir Herbert Stewart himself was severely wounded. The brilliant band of Special Correspondents suffered a grievous loss by the death of the able representative of the Standard, Mr. Cameron, and of Mr. St. Leger Herbert, of the Morning Post; while Mr. Bennett Burleigh, of the Daily Telegraph, was wounded.

Apropos of the enterprise of the London daily press in dispatching skilful writers to the Soudan, a due measure of praise should be awarded to Mr. Henry S. Pearse, who, after a fight for life in the British square at the Battle of Abou Klea, wrote as the Special Correspondent of the Daily News the lucid and admirable description of the engagement which appeared in that Journal on the 22nd inst. Mr. Pearse, who had his horse shot under him in the heat of the combat, is an enthusiastic hunting man, well known at Dulverton and with the Queen's Buckhounds. We have had the pleasure of inserting the picturesque report of more than one good run from the animated pen of Mr. Pearse; and since he joined Lord Wolseley's Expedition up the Nile Mr. Pearse has favoured The Illustrated London News with sketches in addition to the drawings we have received from Mr. Melton Prior, our Special Artist with Sir Herbert Stewart in the march from Korti to Metammeh.

The serious Dynamite Explosions of Saturday last, though causing great havoc at the Tower, in Westminster Hall, and in the House of Commons, had one satisfactory result. The fiendish outrages roused the American people to a feeling of natural indignation against the despicable outlaws who have hitherto abused the hospitality of the United States by conspiring to organise these attacks on humanity. Her Majesty's Government will, no doubt, cordially thank the President for the prompt expression of sympathy on the part of the Washington Senate, at the instigation of Mr. Bayard.

The system of extra embellishing recognised editions of books is no older than this century; but, judging from the prices realised at Mr. Herman's sale of his library last week, the practice is well worth adopting. Any cheap or ordinary book can be taken and despoiled of its binding. A collection is then made of autographs, engravings, newspaper cuttings, advertisements, or playbills having any bearing on the subject of the book. These are then all bound up together, an index is made, a fresh titlepage printed, and an insignificant octavo volume is metamorphosed into two or more folios. With the lives of great men this appears quite fashionable, and certainly has the distinct advantage of placing at once before the student details which he could not obtain otherwise but by protracted research. Of course everything depends on the nature and rarity of the interleaved documents; and so dexterously had Mr. Herman done his work that in several instances books worth only a few shillings by themselves realised sums varying from fifty to a hundred and fifteen pounds. Notably, the life of Edmund Kean had been extended to four large volumes by the additions of autograph letters of Kemble, Elliston, Braham, Burns, and others; tickets for the Princess's Theatre, signed by Charles Kean; fine engravings of contemporary actors and actresses, and no less than 304 playbills. This was purchased on behalf of Mr. Henry Irving, who was so anxious to secure the collection (it can hardly be called a book) that he cabled his commission from America.

A small, and apparently insignificant, pamphlet, consisting of only a few pages, realised, in proportion, the highest price of the day. This was an original edition of Shelley's "Adonais," which was bought by an American collector for fifty-two pounds. The reason of its value is that only a few copies were printed, and were intended for private circulation. Shelley was in Italy at the time he wrote this elegy on the death of John Keats, and the titlepage bears the notification that it was printed at Pisa in 1821. The copy sold had been presented by the author to Leigh Hunt, and by his son to Thomas Love Peacock. The edition is extremely rare, and apparently eagerly sought after by bibliophiles.

The Queen has always been very fond of Irish poplin, and it was said when the "sea king's daughter from over the sea" came to England, before her marriage with the Prince of Wales, that she wore a grey Dublin poplin, which was her Majesty's choice and gift. Whether this were so or no, Queen Victoria has taken every opportunity of showing her preference for these beautiful fabrics, and has now ordered from Messrs. Atkinson and Co., of College-green, Dublin, some exquisite pieces for the trousseau of Princess Beatrice. One has an ivory-white ground interwoven with gold threads, which form a rich Oriental pattern; another is of deep cardinal hue, and the very finest quality; and the third is sky-blue, strewn with sprays of forget-me-not.

The late Colonel Fred Burnaby, like the majority of practical men who have seen much of the world, had but little faith in thought-reading, and managed to mystify one of its earliest professors with complete success. The task of hiding the pin being confided to this son of Mars, he adroitly stuck it into the tail of the operator's dress coat, and then stood by, smiling all over his face, while the thought-reader spun round and round, made knowing dashes at such likely places as curtains and table-covers, and finally gave up the search and declared himself foiled.

Another well-authenticated story of this adventure-loving hero is that after the publication of his "Ride to Khiva" he was honoured by her Majesty's command to dine with her at Windsor Castle that she might hear some of his experiences from his own mouth. Colonel Burnaby accordingly deposited himself in the train at Waterloo, and went to sleep so soundly that he did not change at Weybridge, and, in fact, slept till he reached Basingstoke. The station master at that important junction helped him out of his dilemma by making up a special train and dispatching him in it direct to Windsor, where he arrived just in time to dress and appear in the Royal presence before dinner was announced.

Great artists have to a considerable extent abandoned the inconvenient old-fashioned practice of producing replicas of their favourite works. Sir Joshua Reynolds, and masters much more ancient than himself, made a habit of this system, not for fraudulent purposes of course, but to suit the demands of their patrons. The result is that posterity has been over and over again confused. One of the most charming productions of Sir Joshua is "Penelope Boothby," and "Penelope Boothby," by Sir Joshua Reynolds, is now on view at the Exhibition of Old Masters at Burlington House. But this is not the great original picture. It is a replica, probably painted and certainly touched up and adopted by the painter whose name is identified with it. The "Penelope Boothby," of which the engraving is so popular, is in the collection of the Earl of Dudley, and has not been shown in public for many years.

Like the poet, the cavalry leader seems to be "nascitur non fit." Sir Herbert Stewart, whose brilliant exploits in the Soudan are in every Englishman's mind at the present time, commenced his military career in a foot regiment, and two other prominent horse-soldiers of the present period, Colonel Valentine Baker and Sir Redvers Buller, were also formerly officers of infantry. But their inborn talent has found them out, and they have taken the posts for which their inspiration, not their education or the branch of the service they originally adopted, fitted them.

The very latest style of coiffure in Paris is à la Récamier, and probably the recently published memoirs of that celebrated beauty have had something to do with the revival of the fashion which so well became her. One modification has been introduced, and that is the insertion of a comb at the back. This is good news for ladies who are fortunate enough to possess fine old tortoise-shell or jewelled combs that belonged to their great-grandmothers.

Many anecdotes are told of the late Edmond About; but one of the most touching relates to the ex-Empress Eugénie. About's well-known romance, "Germaine," was appearing en feuilleton, and the interesting heroine was a consumptive girl, very deeply in love. When the dénoûment appeared imminent, the Empress wrote to the author, "I beg that you will not let her die"; and, like a gallant man, he saved Germaine's life in the very next number. A similar story is told of "Amaury," by Alexandre Dumas; but in that case it was a father who observed that the symptoms of the heroine resembled those of a beloved daughter, who was fading away. Dumas at once wrote a happy ending to the story, and sent it to the young lady; but the original one was published immediately after her early death.

Kings have been winning golden opinions lately from their subjects, and winning them pretty easily. The King of Italy behaved well in the dark days of cholera, and a grateful people gave him their blessing; and now the King of Spain has been visiting the scenes of earthquake and finding an enthusiastic reception. Neither King can be said, perhaps, to have done anything very extraordinary, though the King of Italy certainly ran some risk, as one of his race would always be ready to do. Still, the spectacle in either case is a prettier one than that of the old French King and his Pompadour looking callously on at the miseries of the people and murmuring, "Après nous le déluge." It was Belzunce, the "good Bishop," not the young King Louis XV., too young at the time for spontaneous action, who was the hero of the "Plague of Marseilles."

The German Reichstag is just now much occupied with considering how the employment of married women in factories can be regulated so as to give them the opportunity of fulfilling their home duties as well as adding to the family income. The deputies most prominent on this subject are Herr Kropatscheck, Herr Von Hertling, and Count Galen, and the amendments they wish to introduce into the existing laws will provide that no married woman be employed on a Sunday or fête day, or between 8.30 p.m. and 5.30 on the following morning. Another point is that these women should be free to go home for a full half hour before the interval for dinner, thus having an hour and a half to themselves in the middle of the day, and still another stipulates that on Saturdays and the eves of fête days they should return home three hours before the end of the ordinary day's work, or in no case later than half-past five in the evening; and by these means it is hoped that the homes and families of working men will be comfortable and well cared for. German legislation never seems to lose sight of the fact that the home is the true fount of social well-being, and the strong point of the Fatherland.

Here is a curious question, which it appears that Mr. Justice Denman cannot decide by himself alone. Mr. Thomas Ashwell asked for the loan of a shilling from Mr. Edward Keogh; and the latter, consenting to lend it, handed the former a sovereign by mistake. Mr. Ashwell stuck to the whole sovereign, and was consequently charged with stealing it; but it was pleaded on his behalf that he did not "take" it, he "kept" it. Then, if property comes accidentally into your hands and you only keep it, you do not steal it. Perhaps, if Mr. Ashwell had been charged with stealing nineteen twentieths of the sovereign, the case might have been a little plainer. A man who borrows a shilling is certainly not likely to be in a position to give nineteen shillings change out of a sovereign; but, if he does not, he evidently "takes" nineteen twentieths of the lender's sovereign. Mr. Ashwell is clearly a person who, if an inch were given him, would "take" an ell.

Billiards is going on merrily, and Mr. W. J. Peall has been making some wonderful practice at the "spot." But that the champion, Mr. John Roberts, jun., playing "all round," should have beaten Mr. F. Bennett, playing "all in," by more than 3000 points out of 10,000, is something more marvellous still. It will be a pity if the new example set at the Aquarium, when there was an exchange of "chaff" between Mr. W. Mitchell and a spectator, should be commonly followed: such beginnings generally lead to a bear-garden scene in the end, and that would be a consummation devoutly to be deprecated.

By-the-way, Messrs. Burroughes and Watts, the eminent manufacturers in Soho-square, have published a unique and instructive little work called "Billiards Simplified; or, How to Make a Break." The work is unique, insomuch as it gives examples not of how Mr. John Roberts, sen., or Mr. W. Cook, or Mr. J. Bennett, or Mr. W. Mitchell, or Mr. W. J. Peall might be expected to make a break under certain circumstances, but of how they really did it, the score having been taken down stroke by stroke from actual play in four cases out of the five. There are very good likenesses of the five players, and there are some very useful remarks about "the natural angle," with a diagram which deserves to be carefully studied. There is certainly no other book, so far as a pretty wide experience can be depended upon, which gives so much sound and sensible advice within so small a compass not only to students of billiards but also to proprietors of billiard-tables. That there should be no example of the play exhibited by Mr. John Roberts, jun., the Champion, who excels all other players in style and in "all round" play, if not in "spot" play also, is a matter for regret; but Messrs. Burroughes and Watts probably had good reasons for the omission.

One of M. Millais' pictures for the forthcoming Royal Academy Exhibition is now complete. It is called "Orphans," and depicts a lovely little pensive child, in a white frock and a yellow sash, playing with a baby rabbit. Both of them are supposed to have lost parents, and to entertain, therefore, a mute, unexplained sympathy for each other. The expression of the faces of the girl and the animal certainly carries out the intentions of the painter. "Little Miss Muffit," another picture by this artist, which was on view at McLean's Gallery, has been sold to Mr. Keiller, of Dundee, for five thousand pounds.

Is waltzing to be dignified by the name of a fine art? or relegated to the realm of heartless frivolity? According to Mr. Edward Scott, who has published a dainty little manual on the subject, it is not only high art, but high breeding and polished manners into the bargain. He points out that a lady in a ball-room may make a friend for life of the timid partner who is nervous and inexperienced, if she will but exercise a little kindly tact in putting him at his ease, and he analyses the construction of the waltz with the zeal of a lover. At the same time, Mr. Scott deprecates the selfishness of filling up ball programmes entirely with waltzes, and makes some very sensible remarks on "treading time to graceful measures" versus the romping, into which round dances sometimes degenerate. Quadrilles, lancers, the Highland schottische, polo, Caledonians, cotillons, and other modern dances, come in for their share of notice, and the "New Ball-room Guide," though small enough to go into a waistcoat pocket, is a perfect compendium of all that a novice can require when seeking to thread successfully the mazes of an evening devoted to terpsichorean exercise.

Horse-racing and betting at Newmarket are known to be of great antiquity, but scarcely of such antiquity as is apparently intended to be inferred from the following statement:—"An interesting discovery has been made on the Newmarket Heath. In levelling a mound, the workmen discovered in a concrete grave the skeletons of a male and a female, and, not far from them, a horse. In the grave were a number of flint arrow-heads, and some bits of metal were found in an urn, but no coins." We are clearly to infer that in the "flint age" that "male" and that "female" lost all their "coins" in betting about that "horse."

To see ourselves as others see us is proverbially instructive; and so it may be instructive, from an orthographical point of view, to note that the Mahdi regards us as "Inglis," and our Premier as "Klastun." But "what 's in a name"?

Apropos of the Mahdi, our victory at Abou Klea has met with scanty appreciation in French and German newspapers. That looks well for us; as there is nothing like success to excite envy, jealousy, and the spirit of depreciation. If we could only suffer some terrible disaster, our French and German neighbours would gladly sympathise with us (on paper). Let us hope that we may continue to be the object of their carping criticism; with their sympathy we can cheerfully dispense, when we reflect that there would be something not altogether displeasing to them in the misfortunes of even their best friends.

THE PLAYHOUSES.

Presumably, it is entirely in accordance with the spirit of the age that modern representations of Shakspeare's plays should appeal so much more to the head than to the heart. But so it is. So long as the eye is satisfied, the intellect may well look after itself. Now, "As You Like It," with all its poetical glamour and romantic charm, its chances for appealing to the imagination, and taking us to an ideal world, is perhaps the very last Shakspearean play that might have been expected at the St. James's Theatre. It does not follow because Mr. and Mrs. Kendal have occasionally played Orlando and Rosalind that therefore a modern comedy company, modern by tradition, modern by taste, modern by election, should be found capable of interpreting one of the most fanciful of the idyllic Shakspearean plays. Training, habit, manner, and disposition are all required before a company, selected and educated for one purpose, can be found identified with another. The spirit of "The Squire" or "The Ironmaster" is as different from "As You Like It" as light from darkness. The plays are as wide apart as the poles. They are modern prose contrasted with old poetry. Now, it is impossible to conceive that anything could possibly be badly done at the St. James's Theatre. There is no more careful direction in London. The stage is, perhaps, over-small and cramped for such a play as this; but it was quite certain that nothing would be left undone. And so it turned out. Mr. Lewis Wingfield, a learned and able authority, was asked to put a romantic play that has no period into some fantastic age. He went to the illuminated pages of Froissart, and gave himself up to the study of charming head-dresses and parti-coloured hose; he dressed and decked up his crowds in mediæval costumes; he made a pageant out of the old wrestling scene; he filled the Forest of Arden with courtiers and ducal nobles so smart and fine that they looked as if they were all off to a fancy ball; there was a hawk fluttering on a noble's wrists—a poor frightened creature, flapping his wings so distractingly that he interrupted the dialogue; there were lurchers and deer-hounds, and a real fallow deer on huntsmen's shoulders; there were choristers and choir-boys appointed to sing new music composed for this occasion by Mr. Alfred Cellier, as, of course, Dr. Arne and Henry Bishop were too old-fashioned and obsolete for a modern revival. In fact, everything was done apparently to show that our ancestors were either all wrong or strangely unambitious, and that "As You Like It" was to be seen in appropriate costume for the first time. There can be no question about the intention, but how about the result? I cannot, of course, pretend to say how it appeals to others; I can only place on record how this new-fashioned method of treating Shakspeare strikes me. I have seen the play under its old shabby surroundings at the Haymarket, when Helen Faucit and Adelaide Neilson were Rosalinds; I have seen it at the Imperial Theatre, under Miss Lytton's management, when the exact spirit of Shakspeare appeared to have been caught, and when the poem was put in an enchanting frame; I have now seen it at the St. James's Theatre, where probably more care and pains have been devoted to the play than ever, and I am bound to confess that it never interested me so little, or shut out my imagination so curiously against it. We were all dazzled with the beautiful and costly dresses; the pageants and processions passed before our eyes; the elaborate detail was not lost on us. I am silly enough perhaps to prefer the old music to the new, but that does not so much matter. I was enchanted with Mr. Harford's flower-starred wood, the glistening waterfall, the leafy glade, and the truly English forest; but somehow or other the whole poetic sense seemed to have evaporated from the play. The binding was there, but the book was gone. We had plenty of scenery, but very little Shakspeare. The melody of the master was no longer heard. The whole thing was costly and beautiful, but unmelodious and expressionless.

I attribute the difficulty to the fact that the majority of the performers are apparently utterly unable to understand or appreciate the rhythm, the charm, or the deeper meaning of Shakspearean verse. They are as much at sea with Shakspeare as if they were engaged on a Sanscrit poem. They speak the words, but do not convey to their hearers the slightest sense from them. Passage after passage of exquisite beauty falls flat on account of an almost universal ignorance of the first principles of stage elocution. With the principals no fault could be found. We may think what we please about Mrs. Kendal's conception of Rosalind, and her idea of this charming creation; but her cleverness would carry her through a far more formidable task than this, and her elocution is beyond reproach. How the company, hearing her speak her speeches, assisting in the dialogue, and delivering the epilogue, fail to profit by her example must ever remain a mystery. Again, when Mr. Hermann Vezin as Jaques or Mr. Maclean as Old Adam have the ear of the house, we feel at once that they understand Shakspeare, and can convey their understanding. Mr. John Hare as Touchstone has clearly got the right view of the character; he appreciates it and understands it, and I should not be surprised to find that this turned out to be a remarkably clever performance. At the outset, the method was at fault, because the actor was hindered by a sudden fit of nervousness, natural enough after the anxiety of such an important occasion. But what can be said of the estimable gentlemen who mumble the First Lord's description of the wounded deer, who murder the passage illustrative of the attack of the lioness on Orlando, who make of the banished Duke a worthy but utterly prosy and uninteresting old gentleman, and who, by their combined efforts, succeed in robbing the play of its chief grace and beauty? I can conceive that many a one in the audience—loving Shakspeare—would have willingly sacrificed a hawk or a hound, a girdle or a head-dress, for one speech more of Shakspeare properly understood and intelligently delivered. The company does not lack intelligence, but they are not trained to Shakspeare, and they all want as much training and drilling as the children who have just astonished London at the Savoy Theatre. Much of the money expended on the showy spectacle might well have been devoted to teaching an Audrey how to act and a Sylvius how to speak. Such performances as these are unworthy of a first-class theatre. If nothing better can be found, why attempt Shakspeare? By far the most promising of the younger members of the company was Miss Webster, who played Phebe with intelligence, and spoke her lines excellently, and of course Miss Linda Dietz made a charming Celia. Mr. Kendal is too steady and well disciplined an actor to go far wrong with a character outside his style and temperament. He looked Orlando, if he did not always feel the part; and Mrs. Kendal is so bright and clever that her Rosalind becomes a pleasant thing to look upon and to hear. It is not a Rosalind of the study, but of the stage. It is modern and un-Shakspearean, but it is unquestionably attractive. And that is, after all, the great point in these days. Now, as ever, "the drama's laws the drama's patrons give." It is quite possible that the majority present at a play prefer to see Mr. Wingfield's pretty dresses, the carefully arranged managerial detail, to see dogs on the stage, to behold hawks on wrists, and to hear the song of birds and clang of sheep-bells, and all such demonstrative realism, to any acting, good or bad; but I confess that I should have thought, in these days of elocution classes, Shakspearean readings, higher education, and extreme culture, that the first thing that would have been required in a Shakspearean play would be the spirit of Shakspeare, and the intelligent interpretation of the poet's text.

The happy return of Miss Ada Cavendish to convalescence has enabled Mr. Edgar Bruce—who is now the manager of the Olympic Theatre to secure the services of this popular actress, who brings with her a successful new play. Rumours have been blown to London of a certain Mr. Mark Quinton, who had convinced provincial audiences of his skill as a dramatist in a new play, called "In His Power," and evidently written to bring out all the emotional strength of which Miss Cavendish is capable. A woman who, married to a good husband, is suddenly confronted with the dark secret of her life, and threatened by the villain who can either ruin or rob her, is just the character that would suit the fair creator of the New Magdalen, Miss Gwilt, and Lady Clancarty. It cannot be said that the material used in the play is very new, but it is employed in a workman-like and effective manner, and two scenes out of many effective ones are particularly striking and weirdly melodramatic. The first is the scene where the frightened and guileless wife administers a narcotic to her husband in order that a secret despatch confided to him may be copied by the villain Scara; and the second is the search for the hidden wife by the suspicious husband. This last is a singular instance of vigorous stage management, and creates breathless excitement. A wild denunciation of a cowardly spy to a maddened Parisian mob concludes a series of striking adventures, all depicted without crowds, scenery, or a gigantic stage. The play is, in fact, like "Forget Me Not," a mélodrame de salon, and ought to be very valuable for starring purposes in the country. It is unquestionably effective; but I should conceive it had been hastily written and prepared for the stage in hot haste. As a first dramatic exercise, it is extremely creditable, and much more will be expected from the young and lucky author. He has been very lucky in the cast awarded to him; for, in addition to Miss Cavendish, who has returned to the stage even a better actress than she left it, and with a character that suits her style in every turn, we have that capital actor, Mr. Kyrle Bellew, as a romantic lover; Mr. Cartwright, with a new and excellent rendering of the fiend-spy and arch villain; and a very natural and admirable performance of a new "Charles, his friend," in Mr. J. G. Grahame, who has recently distinguished himself very much in the country, and won golden opinions as a kind of dashing Don Bazan in the new Spanish drama called "The Passion Flower; or, Woman and the Law": a play that will, doubtless, soon be presented in London with the original cast.

One of the most interesting events of a very busy theatrical week, and certainly the one most appreciated in art circles, has been the appearance of Jane Hading as Frou-Frou at the French plays. A more sympathetic and charming actress has not been seen in London for many years, and she has held her own against vivid memories of Desclée and Bernhardt in the same character. She has everything in her favour: youth, good looks, a high intelligence, and an intensely sympathetic manner. London will be loth to part with her. It is not at all improbable before the French play season closes that we shall all have the pleasure of seeing M. Achard, of the Gymnase, in one of his favourite characters. This young actor speaks English as well as Fechter did, and it is his intention to play in English afterwards, and possibly make London his home.

Mrs. Langtry has borne her defeat as the Princess George with graciousness and entire good humour. The play did not suit her public, and the public will be delighted to see Mrs. Langtry make a new start, when she will certainly receive the sympathy and consideration of playgoers who admire her invincible determination. On Saturday week Mrs. Langtry proposes to appear as Lady Teazle, a performance that has been highly praised in the provinces, particularly in critical Manchester. The cast of "The School for Scandal" is one of remarkable strength. Mr. William Farren as Sir Peter, Mr. Charles Coghlan as Charles Surface, Mr. Beerbohm Tree as Joseph Surface, Mrs. Vezin as Mrs. Candour, Mr. Everell as Sir Oliver, Miss Eva Sothern as Marie, &c., in conjunction with Mrs. Langtry as Lady Teazle, ought to delight playgoing London. This play, like "Hamlet," is immortal. Someone always wants to see "The School for Scandal." C. S.

Mr. Ellaby gave one of his pleasant recitals last Saturday afternoon at St. James's Hall new room, the first part being a selection from Shakspeare's "Taming of the Shrew," and the second part of a miscellaneous nature.

Sir Samuel Rowe, who is going to administer the Government of the British Sierra Leone Settlement, left on board the steam-ship Nubia, which sailed from the Mersey last Saturday for the West Coast of Africa.

At five o'clock on Sunday evening, while from 150 to 200 persons were skating on the second of the seven ponds at Highgate, the ice gave way, several men being immersed in the water. One died upon being drawn on shore.

An important sale of hunters, the property of Mr. Logan, of East Langton Grange, took place last Saturday at Messrs. Warner, Sheppard, and Wade's Repository, Leicester, and attracted one of the largest companies ever seen in the yard of this noted establishment. Of the twelve horses described on the catalogue one, Ward Union, was not brought for sale, but the eleven disposed of caused very spirited bidding, realising the high average of £359 16s.

The third annual meeting of the Westminster Sanitary Aid Association—of which the objects are to prevent the spread of infection, to show the poor how this is to be done, to assist them to carry out the necessary precautions, and to promote sanitary measures in general—was held on Tuesday in the National Society's room, the Sanctuary, Westminster. Cardinal Manning, who is joint vice-president with the Dean of Westminster, took the chair. The acting-treasurer, the Rev. J. F. Green, read the report, which showed that in the nine district parishes of Westminster, the sanitary visitors of the association had attended 233 cases within the past year.

The first meeting of the newly formed Manchester Geographical Society was held on Tuesday evening. Mr. Jacob Bright, M.P., spoke of the importance of establishing the society at a time when a universal scramble was taking place among the nations for the possession of distant islands. Lord Aberdare, president of the Royal Geographical Society, moved a complimentary resolution expressing the heartiest good wishes of the Royal Society for the success of provincial efforts. He urged upon the commercial community the value and importance of a knowledge of foreign countries, in the interests of our ever-extending commerce all over the world. Continental nations were, beyond all thinking, in advance of us in this respect, and Englishmen employed German travellers in preference to their own countrymen, a reproach which must be humiliating to the national feeling. Mr. Arthur Arnold, M.P., pointed out that geographical knowledge was the pioneer of civilisation, and the country which took the lead in knowledge would take the lead amongst the nations.

MUSIC.

The fourth concert of the Sacred Harmonic Society's new season occurred too late last week (on the Friday evening) to allow of comment until now. The specialty of the programme was the performance of the English version of Berlioz's trilogy, "L'Enfance du Christ." This remarkable work of a remarkable composer had already been heard in England, having been given by Mr. Charles Hallé at one of his Manchester concerts, and again at one of his series of concerts at St. James's Hall in 1881. Like all Berlioz's ambitious works, "The Childhood of Christ" contains much that is original and striking, together with some instances of forced effort, this last feature being, however, less apparent in the instance now referred to than in some of his productions. The original text was compiled from Scriptural sources by the composer, who (like Wagner) was distinguished for his literary as well as for his musical powers. Last week's performance of "The Childhood of Christ" was generally a very efficient one, alike in its solo, choral, and orchestral details. The music for Mary, the Narrator, and Joseph was especially well rendered, respectively, by Miss Carlotta Elliot, Mr. E. Lloyd, and Mr. Santley; among the principal effects in this respect having been the charming duet for Mary and Joseph, "O, darling child," and the Narrator's solos, "So through the desert" and "For three long days." The music for Herod and the Father of the Family was well declaimed by Mr. Hilton. The choruses of Magicians, of Shepherds, of Ishmaelites, and of Unseen Angels were all highly effective. Prominent features were the several distinct orchestral movements in which Berlioz's consummate mastery over all the varieties of instrumental colouring are so admirably manifested. The impressive "Night March" and "Incantation Music," the pastoral introduction to the second part, "The Flight into Egypt," and the elaborate "Serenade" in the third part, are instances of the composer's power. "The Childhood of Christ" was followed by Goetz's psalm, "By the Waters of Babylon" (solos by Miss C. Elliot and Mr. Santley), and Bach's cantata, "God's Time is the Best" (solos by Miss McKenzie, Mr. Lloyd, and Mr. Santley). Mr. Charles Hallé conducted with his usual care and efficiency. At the next performance of the society (on Feb. 27), Handel's "Belshazzar" will be given, in commemoration of the bi-centenary of the composer's birth.

The Popular Concert of last Saturday afternoon included the last appearance there this season of Madame Essipoff. The eminent Russian pianist played as her solo Beethoven's "Sonata Appassionata," with fine effect, especially in the impassioned first and last movements. Other features of the concert require no specific mention beyond the fact that Mr. Maas was replaced, in consequence of his hoarseness, by Mr. Thorndike, who contributed vocal pieces with good effect.

Musical tributes were rendered to Burns at St. James's Hall last Saturday evening, and at one of Mr. Carter's National Concerts at the Royal Albert Hall on Monday evening. On the former occasion, Mr. Sims Reeves appeared. The other principal solo vocalists were Mesdames Patey and A. Ross, Mr. W. Clifford, and Mr. Santley. Mr. Reeves was in good voice, and was enthusiastically applauded in his delivery of popular Scottish songs. A specialty of the programme was the late Sir H. R. Bishop's cantata "The Jolly Beggars," in which is some very characteristic and genial music. The solos were sung by members of the Select Glasgow Choir, the performance of the choristers in this and in other instances throughout the evening having been notable features. The recitations in the cantata were effectively rendered by Mr. W. S. Vallance, who also recited "Tam o' Shanter" and "Man was made to mourn." At the Albert Hall, as at the concert of Saturday evening, Mr. Sims Reeves contributed to the attractions of the evening, and was again in good voice, his songs on this occasion having been "The Land o' the Leal" and "Auld Lang Syne," the latter with the co-operation of the male choristers of Mr. Carter's excellent choir. Other effective vocal performances were given by eminent artists and by the choir, interspersed with violin solos, skilfully executed by Herr Poznanski, pieces rendered by the band of the Scots Guards, and a pianoforte and organ duet played by Mr. Carter and Mr. Bending.

Another of Mr. John Boosey's London Ballad Concerts took place at St. James's Hall this week, with a programme of the usual strong and varied interest.

The American concert given by Mr. L. Melbourne at Prince's Hall last Saturday evening included some excellent vocal performances by himself, Miss Griswold, Miss Lena Little, and other artists. Special features were Miss Griswold's fine delivery of the Jewel song from "Faust," and the refined singing of herself and Miss L. Little in the graceful duet from M. Délibes' "Lakmé." The first part of the programme was miscellaneous, the remaining portion having been entirely American.

Signorina Gemma Luziana gave a concert at Steinway Hall last Saturday, when her programme comprised her own pianoforte performances and other features, vocal and instrumental.

The annual day and night musical and dramatic fête with which Mr. Frederick Burgess has for the last twenty years identified his name took place on Tuesday, when an unusually attractive programme caused the St. James's Grand Hall to be filled successively by two more numerous audiences than had ever assembled, perhaps, on any similar occasion.

Next week's music will comprise a grand performance of Mr. Mackenzie's oratorio, "The Rose of Sharon," by the Royal Albert Hall Choral Society, on Wednesday evening; and Mr. Walter Bache's concert, at St. James's Hall, on the following evening, when the programme will include some important compositions by Liszt, with the co-operation of an orchestra and chorus of about 180 performers.

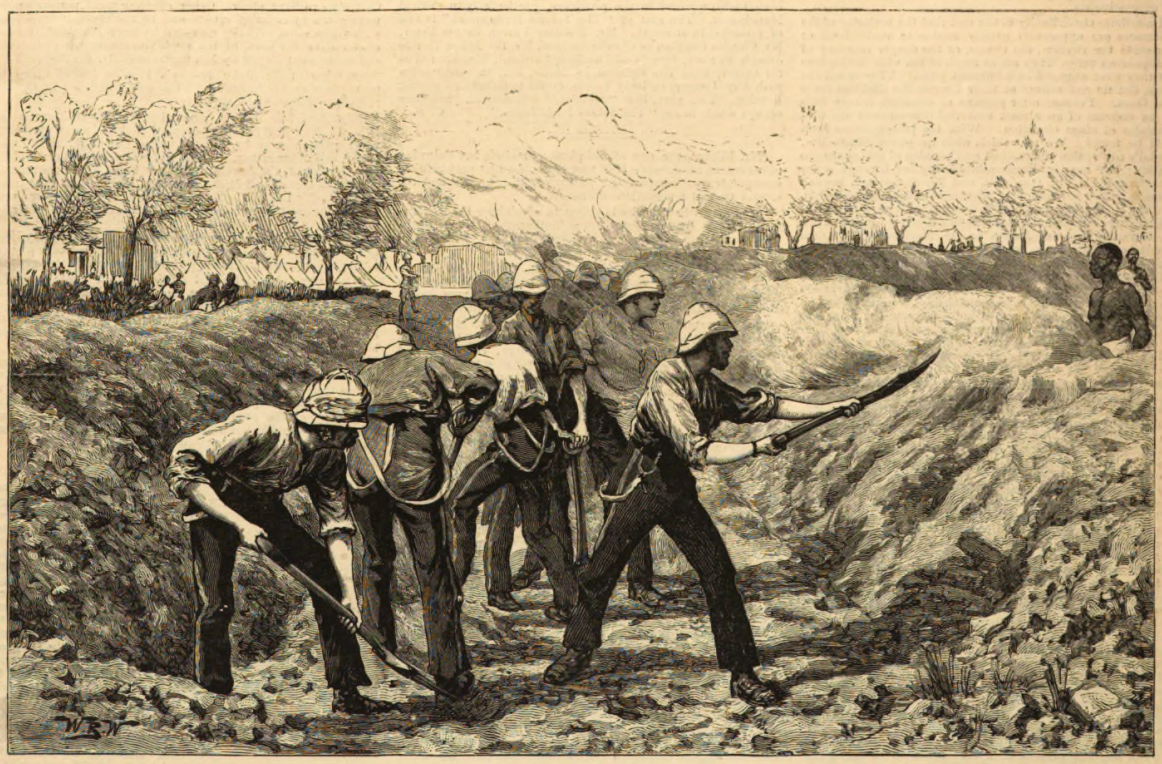
INCREASE OF THE VOLUNTEER FORCE.

The full returns of the Volunteer organisation have been prepared; and though it was generally understood that large additions had been made in the numerical strength and efficiency during the past year, few persons had any conception that the grand total of all arms would have reached such extraordinary and gratifying dimensions as the statistics now show. A quarter of a century since, the enrolled strength of all arms was set down at a little over 119,000. How the force expanded for many succeeding years is matter of history, and so also will be the extraordinary record now shown of 214,000 men forming the Volunteer force of Great Britain, a total unprecedented in the annals of the organisation. There has been no extra incentive to account for the advance of 5000 in the number of citizen soldiers, and the only apparent explanation for the increase is the fact that the force is gradually but surely becoming more recognised. Of this total, in round numbers of 214,000, nearly 208,000 are returned as efficient, the percentage of efficients going up from 96·69 to 97·01. There are, as nearly as can be ascertained, about 6000 officers who have earned the extra capitation grant for proficiency, and the number of sergeants similarly qualified amounts to the large total of 12,300, an increase of 200. The non-efficient return, which has exhibited a steady decrease for many years, is still further reduced, the number of men who through various causes did not carry out the Government requirements being brought down to a trifle over 6400.

THE LATE COMMANDER ALFRED PIGOTT, R.N.,
KILLED IN THE SOUDAN.

THE LATE MAJOR W. H. ATHERTON,
5TH DRAGOON GUARDS, KILLED IN THE SOUDAN.

THE LATE LIEUT. RUDOLPH DE LISLE, R.N.,
KILLED IN THE SOUDAN.



THE LATE LIEUTENANT RUDOLPH DE LISLE, R.N.

Among the officers accompanying Brigadier-General Sir Herbert Stewart's force across the Desert, in the advance from Korti to Metammeh, who fell in the battle of Abou Klea, on Saturday, the 17th inst., we regret to learn the death of Lieutenant Rudolph De Lisle, to whose pencil this Journal was indebted for some excellent Sketches of the cataracts of the Upper Nile, and of the difficult operations performed in getting the steam-boats and rowing-boats to pass up from Wady Halfa to Dongola. Lieutenant Rudolph Edward Lisle March-Phillipps De Lisle was the eighth son of the late Ambrose March-Phillipps De Lisle, of Garendon Park and Gracedieu Manor, Leicestershire, and of his wife, Laura Clifford, eldest daughter of Thomas, the fourth son of Hugh, fourth Lord Clifford, of Chudleigh. He was born at Gracedieu Manor on Nov. 23, 1854. After a year at Oscott College, he went to Gosport, to the late Mr. Burney, to be prepared for the naval cadets' training-ship, Britannia. He there took a first class on leaving. In May, 1869, he joined H.M.S. Cadmus for his first voyage. He was in H.M.S. Liverpool when the first flying squadron went round the world, returning to England in 1871. He was in H.M.S. Cameleon at the time of the war between Peru and Chili, and, for his gallant conduct at the time of the burning of Lima, he was made an honorary member of the Fire Brigade. He was promoted to be Sub-Lieutenant in March, 1873, and Lieutenant in May, 1877. He left H.M.S. Alexandra, in August last year, to join Commodore Hammill for the Nile Expedition, where he distinguished himself by his great energy and activity; and he was regarded as an officer of high promise, whose death is a loss to the naval service.

The Freemason states that the Prince of Wales has appointed Brother T. W. Tew, Provincial Grand Master of West Yorkshire, and Brother Sir Hedworth Williamson, Provincial Grand Master for Durham.

THE LATE COMMANDER A. PIGOTT, R.N.

One of the naval officers engaged in the Nile Expedition, whose services were of great value in managing the ascent of the rapids or cataracts by the flotilla of whale-boats and other vessels, conveying soldiers and stores, was Commander Alfred Pigott, previously in command of the store-ship Humber, in the Red Sea. This able and gallant officer led the First Division of the Naval Brigade, under Lord Charles Beresford, attached to General Sir Herbert Stewart's advanced force in its march across the Desert from Korti, and we regret to find his name among those killed on the 17th inst., in the conflict at the Wells of Abou Klea. He entered the Royal Navy in 1861, and served in her Majesty's ships Queen, Marlborough, Mutine, Inconstant, Lord Warden, and Hercules. He became Sub-Lieutenant in December, 1867, and Lieutenant in February, 1872. In June, 1877, he was selected to be Second Lieutenant on board H.M.S. Britannia, naval cadets' training-ship, during the training of Prince Albert Victor Edward of Wales and Prince George of Wales.

THE NILE EXPEDITION: ROYAL ENGINEERS BUILDING A FORT AT KORTI.
SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, MR. MELTON PRIOR.

THE LATE COLONEL BURNABY IN HIS "RIDE TO KHIVA."

In 1881, he was appointed to H.M.S. Briton, and was employed in active service up the River Niger, where he was wounded by a shot in the thigh, and another bullet passed through his helmet. He was appointed First Lieutenant of H.M.S. Alexandra in 1882, and took part in the bombardment of Alexandria and the operations on the coast of Egypt. In March of last year, he was sent, with others, to make a reconnaissance of a section of the Nile. In June, he was appointed acting Commander of H.M.S. Humber, with which he proceeded to Souakim, but was again sent up the Nile in August, under Commander Hammill, to render assistance to the present military expedition. Our readers will recollect that the figure of Lieutenant or Commander A. Pigott was introduced in one of Lieutenant Rudolph De Lisle's sketches of their experiences on the river, published in this Journal about two months ago. Alfred Pigott, thirty-seven years of age, was eldest surviving son of Colonel Arthur Pigott, of Bath, formerly of the 89th Regiment.

THE LATE MAJOR ATHERTON.

The cavalry officers and soldiers enrolled in the Camel Corps for the Soudan Expedition seem to have borne the brunt of the fierce fighting, under Sir Herbert Stewart, at the Wells of Abou Klea, on the 17th inst. In Lord Wolseley's list of those killed is the name of Major W. H. Atherton, of the 5th (Princess Charlotte of Wales's) Dragoon Guards. We give the Portrait of this officer, who had not, so far as we know, previously seen any active service in war. The date of his commission as Lieutenant in that regiment is 1874, and he was promoted to the rank of Captain in August, 1879. He was senior of the five Captains of his regiment, and had recently attained the rank of Major. The regiment to which he belonged is now stationed at Manchester.

CITY ECHOES.

Wednesday, Jan. 28.

The tendency of the Money Market has not materially altered during the week. Rates continue much below the official minimum, but they may be expected to approach it more closely during the course of next month, in response to the diminution in the supply of cash. With regard to the Bank of England, a further addition has taken place in the reserve of notes and coin, and superficially the position appears stronger than a year ago, when 3 per cent was the rate of discount. There is, however, this difference, that whereas in January last year no uneasiness prevailed respecting any large withdrawals for abroad, the same cannot be now said. The New York banks have certainly made their resources remarkably strong, and the exchange on London has risen; but in other directions much uncertainty exists as to whether a demand may not be made upon us, and it should not be forgotten that the outside market is much less able to part with gold than was the case twelve months back. To begin, there is the monetary crisis in Buenos Ayres; then there is the impending French loan and also fresh Colonial borrowings to be faced. Russia also is said to be preparing to come into the market as a borrower. The expenses of the Soudan Expedition is another reason for the maintenance of the official minimum. It is argued that trade would be benefited by a lower bank rate; but it most certainly would not be in the interests of trade to have an inflation made now, to be followed perhaps, a little later on, by successive advances. Considerable difficulty is experienced in attracting gold from other centres, and when the opportunity is favourable, as at present, it should be taken advantage of.

Influenced by the cheapness of money, the English Funds and other high-class investment stocks have been in good demand; but, taken as a whole, there has been no appreciable increase in the volume of Stock Exchange business. Foreign bonds have risen in the majority of cases, and in Egyptian stocks dealings have been fairly active. The depression in Argentine loans continues, and the premium on gold has further risen. Home railways have fluctuated very little, and the chief incident has been the Metropolitan Company's meeting, at which some hopeful statements were made. Affairs at New York do not improve, the cutting of rates having been pushed a step further, while reports concerning the iron trade have been discouraging. A general fall in American railways has been the natural consequence.

As regards Canadian railway investments, the adverse experience in the States has been against them; but, at the moment, their condition is improving in connection with purely local circumstances. The Canadian Pacific dividend is announced at the rate of 5 per cent per annum, and this has caused a rebound in the price of the company's shares, while Grand Trunk stocks have benefited from a scarcity of stock. Hudson's Bay shares have gone back upon a decline in the value of furs, it being feared that the dividend will materially suffer on that account. A call of £1 per share by the Vancouver Coal Company has been followed by a sharp fall in the price of the shares.

Proprietors of North-Eastern Railway ordinary stock are to receive 7 per cent per annum for the half-year, compared with 8½ for the second half of 1883; while the Lancashire and Yorkshire Company pay 4½ as against 4¾, and the London and South-Western 6¾ against 7. These distributions are much the same as had been expected.

A falling off of 2 per cent per annum is shown in the dividend to be paid by the London and County Bank, the rate—viz., 20, comparing with 22 per cent per annum for several previous half-years. The operations of the London Banks during the past half-year have been considerably curtailed, an analysis of the accounts of the London and Westminster showing that the amount of discounts and advances was £1,961,000 less at the end of last year than at the same period the year before, the decrease being equal to over 10 per cent. The discounts and advances by the London Joint-Stock exhibited a decrease of £603,000, or 5 per cent; the Union of London, £1,715,000, or 20 per cent; the City, an increase of £43,000, or 1 per cent; the Alliance, £45,000, or nearly 2 per cent; the Imperial, a decrease of £127,000, or 5 per cent; and the Consolidated, £246,000, or 8 per cent. The reduction on these seven undertakings is £4,570,000, or slightly over 9 per cent.

Portuguese loans have had a marked decline during the present month, the 3 per cents, for example, having fallen over 8 per cent on the market price current at the beginning of the year. The budget for the financial year 1885-6 has been issued, and the ordinary receipts are estimated at £7,093,119, and the ordinary expenditure at £7,512,367, showing an estimated deficit of £419,248. The extraordinary expenditure is reckoned at £1,111,111, exclusive of the outlay on public work already submitted to the Chambers. T. S.

The London School of Medicine for Women has received notice that a legacy amounting to nearly £700 has been bequeathed by Mr. John Byrne, to found a scholarship for the purpose of assisting ladies of limited means in studying medicine at the school.

BRIGHTON. — Frequent Trains from Victoria and London Bridge.
Also Trains in connection from Kensington and Liverpool-street.
Return Tickets, London to Brighton, available for eight days.
Weekly, Fortnightly, and Monthly Tickets, at Cheap Rates. Available to travel by all Trains between London and Brighton.
Cheap First-Class Day Tickets to Brighton every Weekday, from Victoria 10.0 a.m., fare 12s. 6d., including Pullman Car.
Cheap Half-Guinea First-Class Day Tickets to Brighton every Saturday from Victoria and London Bridge, admitting to the Grand Aquarium and Royal Pavilion.
Cheap First-Class Day Tickets to Brighton every Sunday from Victoria at 10.45 a.m. and 12.50 p.m.
Pullman Drawing-room Cars between Victoria and Brighton.
Through Bookings to Brighton from principal Stations on the Railways in the Northern and Midland Districts.

PARIS.—SHORTEST, CHEAPEST ROUTE.
Via NEWHAVEN, DIEPPE, and ROUEN.
Cheap Express Service Week-days and Sundays. From Victoria 7.50 p.m., and London Bridge 8.0 p.m. Fares—Single, 34s., 25s., 16s.; Return, 57s., 41s., 32s.
Powerful Paddle Steamers, with excellent Cabins, &c. Trains run alongside steamers at Newhaven and Dieppe.
SOUTH OF FRANCE, ITALY, SWITZERLAND, &c.—Tourists' Tickets are issued, enabling the holder to visit all the principal places of interest.

TICKETS and every information at the Brighton Company's West-End General Offices, 28, Regent-circus, Piccadilly, and 8, Grand Hotel Buildings; Hay's Agency, Cornhill; Cook's, Ludgate-circus; also at the Victoria and London Bridge Stations. (By order) J. P. KNIGHT, General Manager.

UNDER ROYAL PATRONAGE.

JAPANESE VILLAGE,

ALBERT-GATE, HYDE PARK.

ELEVEN to TEN. ONE SHILLING.

MILITARY BAND.

WEDNESDAYS, HALF-A-CROWN.

THE VALE OF TEARS.—DORÉ'S Last Great PICTURE, completed a few days before he died. NOW on VIEW at the DORÉ GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street, with his other great pictures. Ten to Six Daily. 1s.

ANNO DOMINI, by EDWIN LONG, R.A.—This great Work is NOW ON VIEW, together with other important works, at the GALLERIES, 168, New Bond-street. Ten to Six. Admission, 1s.

PRINCESS'S THEATRE.—MR. WILSON BARRETT, Lessee and Manager.—EVERY EVENING, at 7.45, HAMLET. Messrs. Wilson Barrett, Speakman, Dewhurst, Willard, Clifford Cooper, Frank Cooper, Cranford, &c., and George Barrett; Mesdames Eastlake, Dickens, &c., and M. Leighton. Doors open at 7.15. Box-office, 9.30 to Five. No fees. Matinée, Saturdays, Feb. 7 and 21, at 1.30. Business Manager, J. H. Cobbe.

THE PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Mrs. LANGTRY.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Edgar Bruce. Season under the direction of Mr. Henry E. Abbey. EVERY EVENING, at a Quarter to Nine, will be produced a Drama in Three Acts, adapted from the French of Alexandre Dumas, called PRINCESS GEORGE. Characters by Mr. Coghlan, Mr. Everill, Mr. Carne, Mr. Smedley, Mr. C. W. Somerset, Mr. Crisp, Mr. Dalzell, Mr. Weathersby; Miss Amy Roselle, Miss Kate Pattison, Miss Helen Mathews, Miss Annie Rose, Miss Rosina Filippi, Mrs. John Billington, and MRS. LANGTRY. The Play produced under the direction of Mr. Coghlan. Doors open at half-past Seven; Comedietta TOM NODDY'S SECRET, at Eight. PRINCESS GEORGE at a Quarter to Nine. Carriages at 10.30. Box-Office open daily from Eleven to Five. No fees. Telephone 3700.—THE PRINCE'S THEATRE, Coventry-street, W.

MASKELYNE and COOKE, EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, give their performance EVERY AFTERNOON at Three; and on the Evenings, at Eight, of Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Mr. Maskelyne's New Programme includes a new sketch, entitled THE PARIES OF BENARES AND THEIR BRAZEN ORACLE, introducing many Novel Effects and Startling Illusions, differing entirely in character from any previously witnessed. Stalls, 5s.; Reserved Seats, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Balcony, 1s.

MONTE CARLO.—MUSICAL SEASON (CONCERTS, REPRESENTATIONS).
In addition to the usual Concerts, directed by Monsieur Romeo Accursi, the Société des Bains de Mer de Monaco has authorised M. Paadeloup to arrange a Series of Extraordinary Grand Musical Entertainments (Concerts-Spectaculaires) this Winter.
The services of the following distinguished Artistes have been already retained:—

Mesdames Kreuss,	Messieurs. Faure,
,, Devries,	,, Vergnet,
,, Salla,	,, Capoul,
,, Donadio,	,, Biorkstein,
,, Frank-Duvernoy,	,, Couturier,
,, Belloca,	,, Villaret,
,, Simmonnet.	&c.

Added to which the celebrated Instrumentalists will appear:
VIOLINISTS:
Mons. Sivori, Mons. Marsik, Miss N. Carpenter, American artiste, 1st Conservatoire Prize, 1883.
PIANISTS: Mons. Plante, Mons. Th. Ritter, Madame Essipoff.
HARPIST: Mons. Hasselmans.
These Extraordinary Representations will be given each Wednesday and Saturday, commencing the end of January and terminating the middle of March.
M. Paadeloup has the excellent idea to terminate each concert by fragments of operas, in costume, and scenery—viz.:

1st Concert.	LES HUGUENOTS.	Fourth Act.
2nd ,,	RIGOLETTO.	Fourth Act.
3rd ,,	LUCIA.	Selection.
4th ,,	MANON.	Second Act.
	FAUST.	Prison Scene.
5th ,,	HERODIADE.	Selection.
6th ,,	FAVORITE.	Selection.
	AIDA.	Third Act.
7th ,,	LAKME.	Selection.
8th ,,	LE BARBIER.	Selection.
9th ,,	HAMLET.	Third and Fourth Act.
10th ,,	LA TRAVIATA.	Fourth Act.
11th ,,	FAUST.	Garden Scene.
12th ,,	LE SIGURD.	Brunhilde's Dream.
	LE CHALET.

TIR AUX PIGEONS DE MONACO.
The following is the Programme:—
BI-WEEKLY MATCHES FOR PRIZES.
Feb. 3: Prix Robert. A Purse of 200f. and a Poule of 20f.
Feb. 7: Prix Hopwood. An object of Art and a Poule of 20f.
Feb. 10: Prix Lafond. A Purse of 200f. and a Poule of 20f.
Feb. 12: Prix Esterhazy. An object of Art and a Poule of 20f.
Feb. 16: Prix du Comité. A Purse of 200f. and a Poule of 20f.
Feb. 21: Prix Camanor. An object of Art and a Poule of 20f.
Feb. 24: Prix Dreyon. A Purse of 200f. and a Poule of 20f.
Feb. 28: Prix Dorl. An object of Art and a Poule of 20f.
Mar. 3: Prix de Mars. A Purse of 200f. and a Poule of 20f.
Mar. 7: Prix Patton. An object of Art and a Poule of 20f.
Mar. 10: Prix W. Cull. A Purse of 200f., added to a Poule of 20f.
GRAND CLOSING PRIZES.
March 12 and 13: Grand Prix de Clôture. A Purse of 4000f. added to 100f. entrance; Second Prize, 1000f.; Third Prize, 700f.; Fourth, 200f.
A. BLONDIN, Secretary.

NEWS FROM NICE.—With the exception of a very few cold days, the weather is again splendid. Not a flake of snow has fallen. The sun shines almost perpetually, and the influence of its warm rays makes life enjoyable to all, and more especially to those who have by impaired health sought its influence.
There are no epidemics, and the average mortality of the city in 1881 was less per mille than London and many fashionable towns in England.
The streets, roads, and sewers are constantly cleansed and disinfected, and watered from the mountain stream of the Vesubie. There are three English doctors and physicians in practice here—viz., Messrs. West, Wakefield, and Sturge, and they will be happy to communicate with any intending visitors as to the healthfulness of the town.
The effects of the recent storm (the like of which has been unknown for thirty-five years) were comparatively trifling, and repaired in twenty-four hours. In some few low-lying rooms and cellars, near the Fish Market, the wash from the splash waves had entered, but this was soon pumped out by the firemen and military.
Visitors are beginning in increasing numbers, as is their wont at this season, and the approach of Carnival, which report says will be the best on record. The Municipal Theatre will open immediately, and the Théâtre Français, of which Mr. Cortelazzo continues the able Director, has several Star Artists for the Opera Comique, and an excellent Troupe de Comédie.
The Carnival and Regatta will be fully announced with other fêtes.
Nice, Jan. 30, 1885.

MENTON.—CARNIVAL, FEB. 14 and 16.
GRAND CORSO DE GALA.
Battle of Flowers and Confetti.
Cavalcades, Masquerades, Cars, Decorated Carriages, &c.
FÊTE DE NUIT.
Concert. Moccoletti. Illuminations.
SECOND DAY, FEB. 16.
Grand Corso.
Battle of Flowers.
Proclamation of Prizes, 5600 francs.
Illuminations, Fireworks, and Torchlight Processions.
Burning of the Carnival.
Grand International Regattas will follow.

BIRTH.

On the 21st inst., at Springhill, Coldstream, N.B., Lady Ada Scott, of a daughter.

MARRIAGE.

On Nov. 20 last, at the Cathedral, Goulbourn, N.S.W., by the Right Rev. Dr. Thomas, Lord Bishop of the Diocese, assisted by the Rev. J. Auchinleck Ross, Precentor of the Cathedral, Dr. S. W. Brierley, Beechworth, Victoria, to Mary, eldest daughter of Colonel T. E. Blomfield, of Sydney, N.S.W., late 26th Cameronians.

DEATHS.

On the 20th inst., at 24, Greenhill-gardens, Edinburgh, Lady Steell, wife of Sir John Steell, R.S.A.

On the 18th inst., at Debrett Villa, Hampton, Middlesex, Ann Rogers-Burden, aged 66 years, deeply lamented.

On the 21st inst., at her residence, Lea Castle, Worcestershire, Adelaide, widow of John Constantine, twenty-ninth Lord Kingsale, and only daughter of the late J. P. Brown-Westhead, of Lea Castle.

On the 21st inst., at Arborfield Grange, Reading, Lady Alicia Conroy, younger daughter of Laurence, second Earl of Rosse, and widow of Sir Edward Conroy, Bart., in her 70th year.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, is Five Shillings for each announcement.

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION IN CANADA.

In the rooms of the Society of Arts on Tuesday—General Sir J. H. Lefroy presiding—Mr. Stephen Bourne read a paper entitled "With the British Association to the Canadian North-West." In the course of his paper Mr. Bourne said the visit of the association to Montreal would mark an epoch in the history of the society. It was not likely that for some years to come such meetings would take place out of the United Kingdom, although progress in the arts of locomotion might render a journey of the members of the society to India or Australia easy and agreeable.

Reference was made to the capabilities of the great North-West for occupation by the increasing number of our home population, and their freedom there to develop into a new nation. Starting from a little west of Winnipeg, in the 95th meridian of longitude, onward beyond Calgary to the 115th, and looking downwards to the 49th parallel—which joined the United States—upwards to the 54th, they had a wide expanse of country, 800 by 300 miles, of which one half or three fourths was fitted to be the feeding-ground of as large a resident population as could be employed in its culture and accessory occupations, by whom there could be raised an amount of food more than adequate for an exchange with those in the home and other countries, who might, in turn, manufacture all those other products which the necessities or desires of life might require. Montreal, to which the largest ships now had access, was distant but ten days from London. Thus within a fortnight's they could be transported from the dens of St. Giles's, where scarcely a foot of ground was untenanted, to the plains of Regina, where there were miles wholly uninhabited. Fifty years ago, to become a colonist was to be far away, and possibly for ever, from all one held dear, with but few opportunities of exchanging even letters with those who were left behind. But now a complete change had been wrought in that respect. Men might, and should, perhaps, in many cases go out for one season first, but it was families that were wanted. Home life could never exist without women and children, and in the Dominion, there was plenty of room for them, with work for them as they were able; although not to the undue extent which poverty, sickness, and drink rendered needful here, but in that wholesome measure which contributed to happiness, and fostered growth into true manhood and womanhood.

The paper condemned the protective policy of Canada, by which the produce of the mother country was shut out, as well as that of foreigners. To import raw cotton, for instance, from the United States, steam-engines and mill machinery from England and elsewhere, where skilled and therefore highly paid labour to work and direct their operation, for the purpose of raising up factories, and to maintain those at the cost of enhanced prices to the agriculturist, the fisherman, and the miner, was not, and could not be, a sound policy. The corn-grower and others could not recoup themselves by extra prices for their articles, because they had to compete with protected produce in the markets they sought; and, aided by the present low prices, it could not be long before they saw the folly of supporting monopolies in the benefits of which they themselves had no participation. The true policy would seem to be for each portion of the globe to raise or manufacture that for which it possessed either natural or acquired facilities, and freely to interchange those products between each other.

A discussion ensued, in which Mr. T. Saunders, Mr. Cornelius Walford, Mr. Colmar, Mr. Trueman Wood, Dr. Edmunds, the chairman, and other gentlemen took part.

At the close of the proceedings a vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Bourne for his valuable paper.

The Gentleman's Magazine, founded by Edward Cave under the name of Sylvanus Urban, has a literary and antiquarian interest of no common order. The best writers of the day, including Johnson, contributed to its pages, and in the course of years a fund of most valuable information on a vast variety of subjects was supplied to this periodical. The Gentleman's Magazine Library, Popular Superstitions, Edited by George Laurence Gomme, F.S.A. (Elliot Stock), is one volume of a series intended to represent in a classified collection the chief contents of the Gentleman's Magazine from 1751 to 1868. To students of history and social life the facts thus saved from oblivion are invaluable, and it is fitting that the volume on Manners and Customs should be followed by one illustrating from the same copious source our Popular Superstitions. It will be evident that a work of this character is more likely to be used for reference, and by those wishing for special information, than by the general reader. At the same time, it is scarcely possible to refer to any subject given in the table of contents without gaining some curious knowledge or entertaining anecdote. Under the three headings, Days and Seasons, Superstitious Customs, Beliefs and Witchcraft, the facts stored up are invaluable. Some of the superstitions are familiar enough, such as the use of the divining-rod, the danger of dining thirteen at table, the supposed advantage of nailing horse-shoes on ships, and the King's evil cured by the Royal touch. Others are far less familiar, and probably few of our readers know how to call up a fairy, or what is the special virtue of a Good Friday loaf. The village superstitions of the past were often linked to great cruelty, and it is needless to say that the history of witchcraft forms one of the blackest chapters in the history of the race. Of the horrors called forth by a belief in this black art, England had her full share, and the portion of the story related in this volume displays a credulity wellnigh astounding. Yet we cannot pride ourselves on a freedom from superstition, though of a gentler kind, when we remember that in the present day spiritualism is a popular belief; that, according to the organs of this strange creed, the law of gravitation is frequently set at nought by heavy men floating in the air; and that spirits can be raised in numbers, and sometimes perplex the photographer by impressing their features on his plates. If we are to believe in the doings of these modern spirits, the aerial exploits of witches upon broomsticks are not so very wonderful after all

THE COURT.

The Empress Eugénie, attended by Madame D'Arcos and the Duc de Bassano, arrived at Osborne on Friday, last week, having crossed over from Portsmouth in her Majesty's yacht Alberta, Captain Fullerton. Princess Beatrice, attended by the Dowager Marchioness of Ely, met the Empress on landing at East Cowes; and Captain Bigge attended the Empress to Osborne from Portsmouth. The Queen drove out in the afternoon, attended by Lady Abercromby and the Hon. Evelyn Paget. Madame D'Arcos and the Duc de Bassano had the honour of dining with the Queen and the Royal family. Captain Fisher, C.B., of her Majesty's ship Excellent, arrived at Osborne, and had also the honour of being invited to dinner. Her Majesty went out last Saturday morning with Princess Beatrice. In the afternoon the Queen drove out with the Empress Eugénie and Princess Beatrice. Prince and Princess Louis of Battenberg dined with the Queen in the evening. The Bishop of Ripon arrived at Osborne, and had the honour of dining with the Royal family. On Sunday morning her Majesty and Princess Beatrice and the members of the Royal household attended Divine service. The Bishop of Ripon officiated. The Queen's dinner party included the Empress Eugénie, Princess Beatrice, Prince and Princess Louis of Battenberg, Lady Abercromby, the Dowager Marchioness of Ely, Madame D'Arcos, the Duc de Bassano, Lord Sackville, the Bishop of Ripon, and Captain Bigge. The ladies and gentlemen who had not the honour of dining with the Royal family joined the Royal circle in the drawing-room in the evening. General the Right Hon. Sir Henry Ponsonby, K.C.B., and the Misses Ponsonby and Lady Cowell had the honour of being invited. On Monday morning the Empress Eugénie took leave of the Queen, and left for Farnborough, attended by Madame D'Arcos and the Duc de Bassano. Princess Beatrice, attended by the Dowager Marchioness of Ely, accompanied the Empress to Trinity Pier, where she embarked on board her Majesty's yacht Alberta, Captain Fullerton. Captain Bigge attended the Empress to Portsmouth. The Queen and Princess Beatrice drove out on Monday afternoon, attended by Lady Abercromby. Earl Sydney, G.C.B. (Lord Steward), and Sir William Vernon Harcourt arrived at Osborne, and had the honour of dining with her Majesty. General the Right Hon. Sir Henry Ponsonby, K.C.B., was also invited. On Tuesday the Queen held a Council at which were present Lord Carlingford (President of the Council), the Lord Chancellor, Earl Sydney, G.C.B. (Lord Steward), Sir William Vernon Harcourt (Secretary of State for the Home Department), and General Sir Henry Ponsonby, K.C.B. Sir Robert Morier, K.C.B., was introduced, and sworn in a member of the Privy Council. At the council her Majesty was pleased to declare her consent to the marriage of Princess Beatrice with Prince Henry of Battenberg. Lord Carlingford and Sir William Vernon Harcourt had audiences of her Majesty. After the council the Turkish Ambassador and Hassan Fehmi Pasha (Special Ambassador from the Sultan) were introduced to her Majesty's presence by Sir William Vernon Harcourt, in the absence of the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. The Peruvian Minister, Admiral García-y-Garcia, delivered his letters of recall. Mr. Edwin Corbett kissed hands on his appointment as Minister at Stockholm. Sir Robert Morier, K.C.B., kissed hands on his appointment as Ambassador at St. Petersburg. Princess Beatrice was present.

Upon receiving the news of the British victory at Abou Klea, the Queen instantly telegraphed to Lord Wolseley expressing her pride in the conduct of her troops and deep concern at the loss of so many officers and men. Her Majesty received information from Lord Wolseley to the effect that the wounded were doing well. Her Majesty the Queen, through Sir Henry Ponsonby, has expressed to Mrs. Burnaby her deep regret at the death of the late Colonel of the Royal Horse Guards.

The Prince and Princess of Wales entertained a number of guests at Sandringham during the past week. Among them were the Spanish Minister, the Marquis de Casa Laiglesia, who left Sandringham for London last Saturday afternoon. The Prince and Princess of Wales, with Prince George, Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud, accompanied by the guests staying at Sandringham, and attended by the ladies and gentlemen of the household, were present at Divine service on Sunday morning at the Church of St. Mary Magdalene. The Rev. F. Hervey, M.A., Chaplain to the Queen and Domestic Chaplain to the Prince and Princess of Wales, officiated, assisted by the Rev. T. Teignmouth Shore, Chaplain-in-Ordinary to the Queen, who likewise preached. On Monday morning the Prince attended the funeral, at Sandringham, of Mrs. Stewart, who for twenty-two years was in his Royal Highness's service, and since 1871 was housekeeper at Sandringham. The Princess, accompanied by Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud, was present during the funeral service in the church. The ladies and gentlemen of the household were in attendance. The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Norfolk was held in the evening at Lynn, and the occasion was one of special interest in consequence of the attendance of the Prince of Wales. The meeting took place in the Townhall, which was specially furnished for the occasion, and the adjacent rooms were set apart for the accommodation of the Prince. After the closing of the lodge, the brethren attended a banquet served in the Assembly Rooms to about 200 members of the craft, under the presidency of Lord Suffield. The Prince was present.

Prince Albert Victor has consented to open a new institution for working boys, which has been established under the name of the "Whittington Club and Chambers," at 86, Leman-street, Whitechapel. The ceremony takes place to-day (Saturday), at three o'clock. It is understood that the Prince has been entered as a student at the Honourable Society of the Middle Temple, although it is very probable that he will not commence his term there until the ensuing Easter term in April. It is also understood that the Prince of Wales, who is a Bencher of the Society, will dine with the Benchers on the occasion of Prince Albert Victor eating his first dinner in the hall as a student.

Last Saturday night the Princess Frederica of Hanover distributed the prizes won by members of the 5th Surrey Rifles in the drill-hall at Kingston.

FASHIONABLE MARRIAGES.

There was a large and fashionable assemblage on Tuesday morning at St. Peter's, Eaton-square, to witness the wedding of Lady Emily Boyle, eldest daughter of the Earl and Countess of Cork, with Mr. James Dalison Alexander. Shortly after eleven, the bride, accompanied by her mother, arrived. Lord Cork conducted her to the altar, where she was met by the bridegroom, who was attended by Mr. Higgins, as best man. The bride wore a rich dress of ivory-white satin, trimmed with deep Brussels lace and orange-blossom, and a veil of Brussels lace fastened by a diamond crescent brooch. Her other ornaments consisted of a magnificent diamond necklace and earrings. There were six bridesmaids—Lady Isabel Boyle, sister to the bride, Lady B. Capel, Miss Mabel Alexander, Miss Dalison, Miss Townley, and Miss Stewart Hodgson. They were attired in costumes of ruby velvet and trimmed with cream lace; ruby velvet hats to match, trimmed with sable tail. Master Travers Hodgson attended the bride as a little page, wearing a George II. costume of ruby velvet.

At the early hour of ten on Wednesday morning Mr. W. Jaffray was married, at St. Peter's, Eaton-square, to Mabel, youngest daughter of Lady Scott, of Great Barr Hall, Birmingham. The service was fully choral. The bride, who was given away by her father-in-law, wore a magnificent dress of white satin, and was completely enveloped in a Brussels lace veil. She was attended by two bridesmaids, the Misses Hope and Cox, who wore dresses of oatmeal cream, with bonnets to match, trimmed with blue. The breakfast was at Mr. Hope's house, in Chesterfield-gardens.

The marriage of the Hon. John Gage Prendergast Vereker, eldest son of the Viscount and Viscountess Gort, with Miss Eleanor Surtees, second daughter of the late Mr. Surtees, of Hammersley Hall, Durham, the author of "Sponge's Sporting Tour" and "Ask Mama," was solemnised at St. George's, Hanover-square, on Wednesday morning. The bride wore a dress of white duchesse satin, richly embroidered in seed pearls, trimmed with Brussels point lace, the gift of her sister; her ornaments being diamond sprays, earrings, and brooch, the gift of Viscountess Gort, and she carried a magnificent bouquet of orange-blossoms and other choice flowers, the gift of the bridegroom. The bridesmaids were the Hons. Mabel and Laline Vereker (sisters of the bridegroom), Miss Murray, Miss Cecily Surtees, Miss Sophia Fenwick (cousins of the bride), and Misses Laline and Mabel Craufurd (nieces of the bridegroom). They wore dresses of crême striped satin draped with deep dentelle broderie and trimmed with flots of crême satin ribbon and pearls, and red shoes. Their head-dresses were composed of Marie Stuart veils edged with pearls, and each wore a pearl and cat's-eye bee brooch, and carried a bouquet of choice white and red flowers.

The Chairman of the Finance Committee of the London School Board stated, at a meeting on Tuesday night, that he should at the next meeting of the Board have to ask for a sum little short of eight hundred thousand pounds, and that the expenditure must go on increasing.

A proclamation is published in the Gazette summoning the Peers of Scotland to meet at Holyrood House, at Edinburgh, on Tuesday, Feb. 17 next, between twelve and two p.m., to "nominate and choose two of their number to sit and vote as representative Peers in the House of Lords during the present Parliament, in room of the late Earl of Morton and the late Earl of Dundonald."

Vice-Chancellor Bacon gave judgment, last Tuesday, on the point which has arisen in connection with the will of the late Duke of Buccleuch. The trustees under the will had contracted to enfranchise some of the copyhold lands forming part of the Clitheroe estates, and the questions for decision were whether Lord Henry Scott was a tenant for life, and whether his consent was necessary to the exercise by the trustees of their powers of sale. His Lordship decided both points in the affirmative.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Ripon had a cordial and enthusiastic reception at Ripon last Tuesday on their return from India. The Marquis, in an address at a public luncheon, said the Viceroyalty of India was the most difficult post in the service of the Crown. He had endeavoured to discharge his duty and promote, to the utmost of his power, the well-being of India's teeming populations. The duties England owed to India were pressing and urgent. With regard to his policy, he appealed without fear from the temporary judgment of angry passion to the deliberate sentence of coming time.

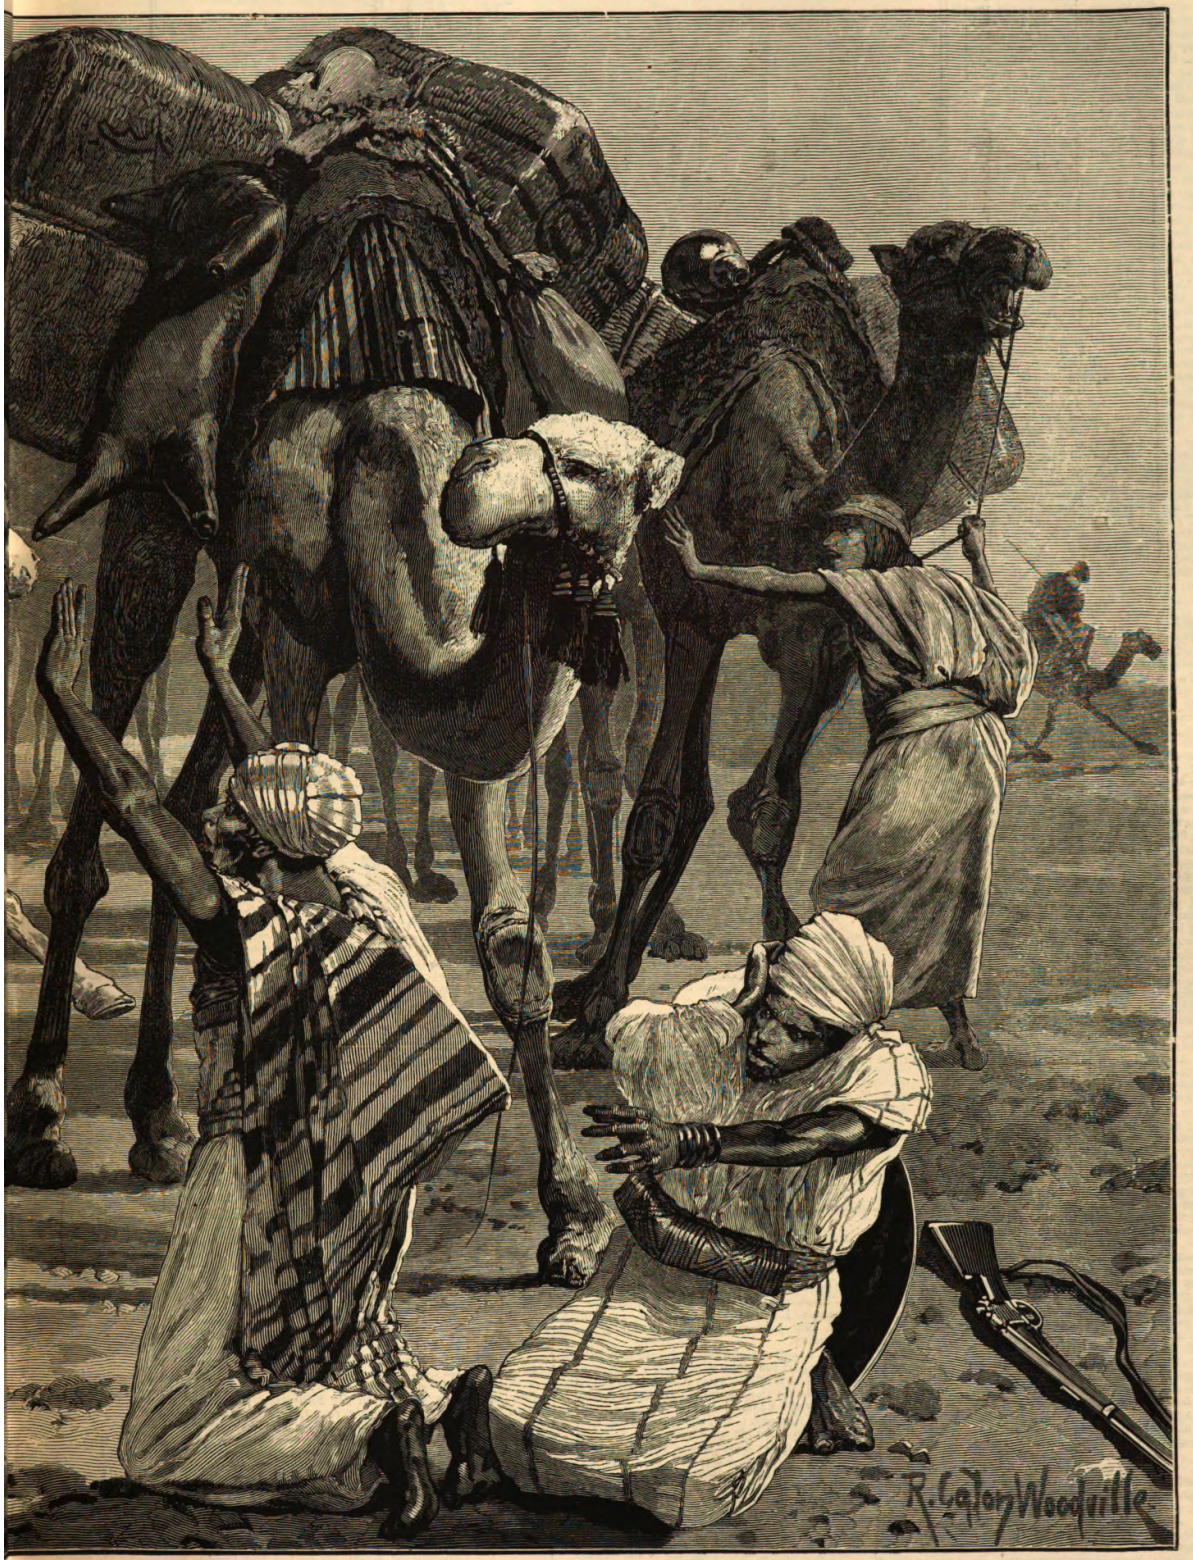
Last week 2803 births and 1807 deaths were registered in London, the former having been 41 and the latter 107 below the average numbers. Forty-three persons died from smallpox, 20 from measles, 18 from scarlet fever, 12 from diphtheria, 49 from whooping-cough, 9 from enteric fever and 8 from dysentery. The fatal cases of smallpox exceeded the corrected weekly average by 19. The deaths referred to diseases of the respiratory organs, which had been 609 and 553 in the two preceding weeks, further declined to 513 last week, and were 24 below the corrected weekly average. Different forms of violence caused 66 deaths: 59 were the result of negligence or accident, among which were 24 from fractures and contusions, 10 from burns and scalds, 2 from drowning, and 16 of infants under one year of age from suffocation. Five cases of suicide were registered. In Greater London 3612 births and 2237 deaths were registered. In the Outer Ring 18 fatal cases of smallpox, 10 of whooping-cough, and 8 from diphtheria were registered.

Artistic Anatomy: by Mathias Duval. Translated by Fred. E. Fenton, M.R.C.P. (Cassell and Co.). In France the traditions of "a school of painting" have upheld more consistently than with us the routine of Academic training. It was not without cause that Haydon protested against the slovenliness which characterised the work of the Academicians of his day. Flaxman was as one crying in the wilderness, and by his contemporaries his teachings were as neglected as were the maxims of Hogarth. Happily, things have altered for the better since the days when Mulready, Dyce, John Philip, and a few others, who had already attained the highest honours of the Academy, met two or three evenings a week to take up the study from the life-figure, which they had up to that time neglected. Art is now taught, even in this country, upon a more scientific system. Although since Flaxman's Treatise appeared there has been no lack of instructors, a translation of M. Duval's estimable work is a welcome addition to every art-student's library. For many years M. Duval had the Professorship of Anatomy at the École des Beaux-Arts at Paris, where his popularity as a lecturer was only second to his reputation as a man of science. His method—as illustrated by his lectures, of which this book is a summary—differs from that of most writers on the subject. He takes the skeleton itself as the starting-point of all study of the movements of the members, of the play of the muscles; and, finally, he shows that the skin is, after all, only a transparent veil through which the action of the body and, in a sense, the thoughts of the mind can be distinguished. Up to this time, teaching by analysis has hitherto been the accepted system of art training. The advantage gained is obvious, if only in time saved to the student—who, in despair at being unable to wade through pages of text, betook himself to the superficial study of an illustrated atlas. In one sense, all works dealing with anatomical details must be dry, and whilst we do not claim for M. Duval's treatise the exciting interest of a novel, we can with truth say that he is never tedious. He describes clearly the respective proportions of the various members of the body, and the part they play in daily life, and then passes on to discuss the action of the muscles with which the human trunk and limbs are covered. In dealing with the muscles of expression, he refers at length to the interesting experiments of Duchenne, of Boulogne, to whom Darwin was so much indebted for the data of his celebrated work; and he leaves to artists themselves to draw the inference of how much they have to gain in expressing light and shadow, as well as emotion, in the faces of their pictures, by a knowledge of what underlies the skin.

MELANCHOLY ENGLAND.

What has become of the Merry England famous in history or legend? We have all heard of it; some of us may have dim recollections of it in our far off youth, when the sky was always blue, the sun always shone, the roses always bloomed, and fair girls' faces filled our small world with beauty. Ah! what laughing, loving eyes there were in that happy time, what red lips to kiss, what waists to clasp, what love whispers in the twilight, what carving of names on trees, what beating of young hearts, what vows of constancy beneath the inconstant moon! Did we ever doubt then whether life were worth living? Did we ever feel then that "monotonous leaden gloom," that "deep dull wretchedness" which, according to a medical journal, is now so prevalent amongst the cultivated classes? Or is it possible, in spite of school and college, that we were not "cultivated" then? For our parts, we were we not merry ourselves?—but a study of history does not make it very evident that mirth was greatly more prevalent in earlier centuries than it is in our own. Long before the age of Elizabeth, Froissart had written that we English took our pleasures sadly; and when we come to Shakspeare's time the fun of the period seems to have become a kind of horse-play, often of drunken play, rather than of genuine mirth. The cruelty and despotism of those times have left a stronger mark than their pomp and pageantry, and one remembers that a monarch's mirthfulness did not always ensure the safety of a courtier. The beheading and disembowelling of traitors, the burning of witches, wholesale executions, and heads kept to rot on London Bridge, must have given rise, one would think, to a very grim kind of merriment. Take up any general history of England, and try to find out, if you can, when this island could be rightfully called "Merry." Was it in the days of the Norman Conqueror, who drove thousands of villagers from their homes to make him a hunting-ground, who ravaged the country with fire and sword, who, if he made peace in the land at last, did so by the sternness of his rule? Was it under John, who, himself a slave, enslaved England; whose "punishments were refinements of cruelty—the starvation of children, the crushing old men under copes of lead"; and who, according to the verdict of his contemporaries, defiled hell itself by his fouler presence? Or was it under the Edwards, a period, no doubt, of greatness and of progress, but one of much disturbance and cruelty, especially to the Jews? That was, indeed, the age of Chaucer, the most cheerful of English poets; and all of that era which is sunny and bright lives in his pages: it was the age of Wyclif, whose trumpet note stirred men's hearts from one end of the country to the other. It was a serious and hopeful time, but not one which can be called merry; and the hope was doomed to be disappointed, for a century of darkness followed. Mirth is not to be looked for, surely, under the eighth Henry; nor under Elizabeth, albeit she raised England to a high place among the nations, and her age holds a deathless place in story; nor under Mary of bloody memory, nor under the Stuarts (that the Puritans abjured it goes without saying); and although the second Charles was called a merry monarch, he did as much to make his country ashamed and sad as a king could well accomplish within a reign of twenty-four years.

We need not pursue the search further. Depend upon it, the merry England of the poets belongs to the poetical dreams of what might have been and what ought to have been, rather than to what actually existed in any historical period. This golden age belongs to youth and to poetry, to the happy illusions of life's happiest period, not to the chronological data of which the historian takes account. We cannot measure happiness; but it is obviously possible for an age to be happier than its successor; and it is possible also to point to causes which, if the close of this nineteenth century in England be distinguished by what we call melancholia, and our ancestors called vapours, may in some degree account for the painful fact. It is a truism to say that a merry heart is neither due to wealth nor affected by comparative poverty. The cottager is often more cheerful than the Prince, and reasonably so, since he has fewer cares. "No man is poor," says Jeremy Taylor, "who does not think himself so"; and the greater our contentment, the more room is there for mirth. Discontent is one of the signs of the times. Universal competition means universal discomfort. The state of life in which we have been placed is the one we strain every nerve to escape from; and the constant effort naturally produces a reaction. What a tension there is upon mind and body in these days! We give ourselves no rest; we make haste to be rich, and, finding the haste vain, or at best unsatisfactory, fall into a despondent state. Then we have enemies to contend against which were unknown, or but partially known, to our forefathers. In an age of telegraphs, telephones, fast steamers, and express-trains, it is almost impossible to take life calmly. We are not allowed to repose, but fume and fret, and rush hither and thither, not because we enjoy noise and confusion, but because they are the order of the day. The hubbub of life in large cities is painful to weak nerves, and weak nerves are due in large measure to our mode of living. Do we not sit too often and too long at good men's feasts? Do we not work brain and stomach beyond their strength? Do we not find it easier to talk about the laws of health than to follow them? If you doubt this, the enormous sale of quack medicines, and the success of enterprising quack doctors, may prove to you that the age is neither wise nor healthy. Cheerfulness is due not only or chiefly to circumstances, but to the interior life. The age is one of doubt, not readily to be solved by magazine articles; one of political, social, and religious difficulties, which make the lives of some men far too serious to allow of merriment. This state of doubt, this pessimistic questioning, is not an indication of mental sanity. The man who "feels the breeze of nature stirring in his soul"; who enjoys the activities of life; who knows how to grapple with its problems; or how, with a calm but not indifferent mind, to leave them unsolved, is at once healthy and happy. Such men can afford to be merry within becoming limits, but such men are and always have been rare. What we want in these days is less excitement and more enjoyment, less fussiness and more composure. But, indeed, we want many things which are far easier to write about than to gain. Discontent is at the root of melancholy, and Wordsworth's description of the age is as true now as when it was written in the early years of the century:



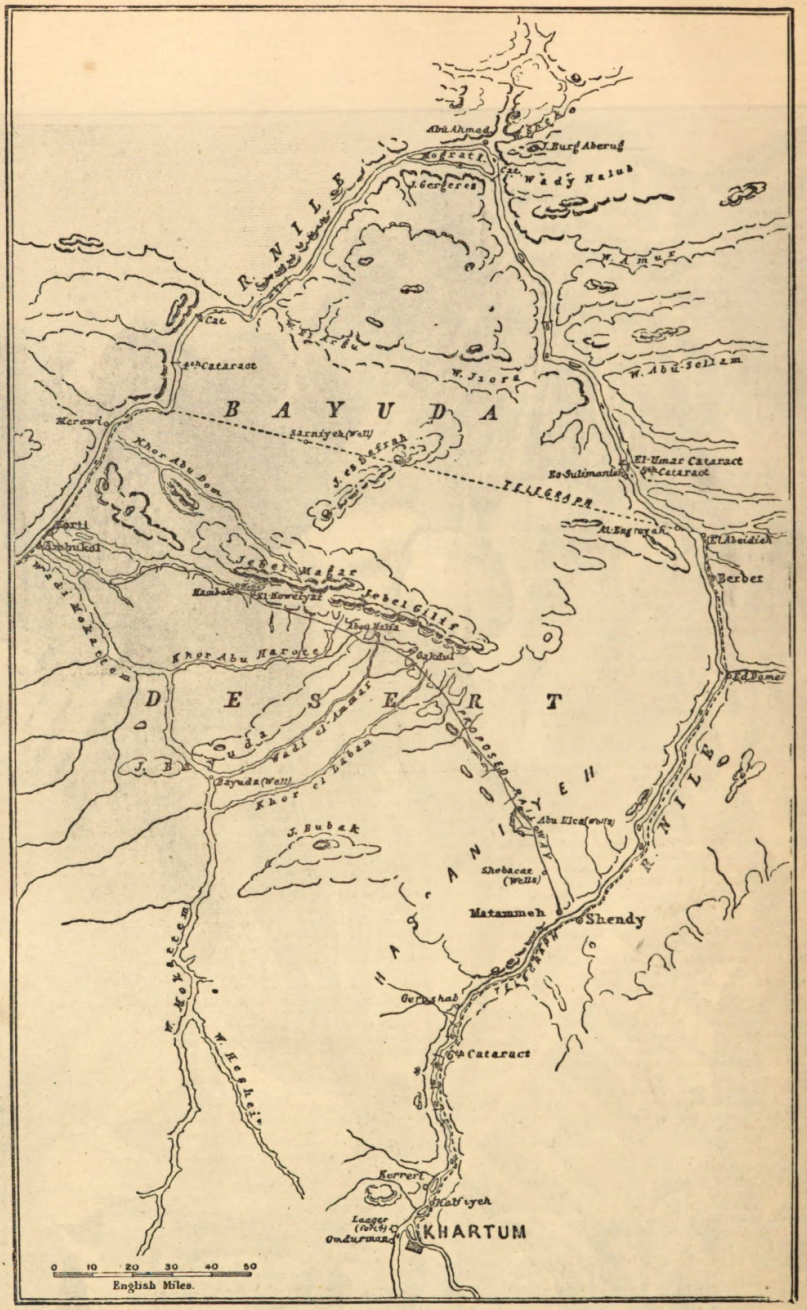
> The world is too much with us, late and soon,
> Getting and spending we lay waste our powers.
> Little we see in Nature that is ours,
> We have given our hearts away, a sordid boon.

And so, being out of tune with Nature, we fix our affections upon money-making when we might raise them to the stars.

The Very Rev. E. H. Bickersteth, the new Dean of Gloucester, was instituted by the Bishop at the cathedral on Tuesday, in the presence of a large number of dignitaries of the Church. He was installed by the Chapter on Wednesday.

THE NILE EXPEDITION.—THE ADVANCE ON KH

HARTOUM: CAPTURING THE ENEMY'S SUPPLIES.



THE NILE EXPEDITION.

The gratification aroused last week by the news published on Thursday morning, that Brigadier-General Sir Herbert Stewart, with about fifteen hundred British soldiers, had defeated an army of eight or ten thousand warriors of the Soudan at the Wells of Abou Klea, was followed during some days by serious anxiety for the subsequent fortunes of the small British force, nothing further being known of it at Korti, the head-quarters of Lord Wolseley, since it moved on from Abou Klea, the day after the battle. We gave the news of that victory in the greater part of our impression last week, but a more complete account is here supplied. It was not till the forenoon of Wednesday in this week that the public mind was relieved from suspense by a despatch from Lord Wolseley, dated the same morning, which states that Sir Herbert Stewart fought a second battle on Monday, the 19th inst., against seven thousand of the enemy, and again defeated them, pursuing his march to the Nile at Metammeh. Twenty of our men were killed, and sixty wounded; Sir Herbert Stewart himself severely wounded. Two special correspondents of London newspapers—Mr. Cameron, of the Standard, and Mr. Herbert, of the Morning Post—were killed, and Mr. Burleigh, of the Daily Telegraph, wounded. Lord St. Vincent has died of his wound received on the 17th. The British force has avoided storming Metammeh, and occupies a position two miles higher up the river. It has opened communications with General Gordon, and Sir Charles Wilson has gone up with two of Gordon's steam-boats to Khartoum. We now proceed to relate the events made known since our last connected narrative of the Expedition, referring to the annexed Map.

Our readers know that the distance across the Desert from Korti to Metammeh, on the Nile between Khartoum and Berber, by the route of Hambok Wells, Abau Halfa, Gakdul, and Abou Klea, is about one hundred and seventy-eight miles; and that Abou Klea, the last of these resting-places, is twenty-three miles from the Nile at Metammeh. Sir Herbert Stewart had with him, at setting forth, a force of about two thousand, comprising ninety of the 19th Hussars, the three divisions of the Camel Corps, in all 1080 men, four hundred Mounted Infantry, a Royal Artillery battery of forty men, thirty Royal Engineers, fifty men of the Naval Brigade, the Royal Sussex Regiment, 320 strong, eighty men of the Essex Regiment, fifty men of the Transport Corps, and as many of the Medical Staff Corps; but he must have left some detachments to guard the wells in his rear. On Friday, the 16th inst., his brigade thus diminished had arrived within a few miles of the Abou Klea Wells, having almost accomplished the long waterless march of forty-three miles from the Wells at El Faar. They were, no doubt, looking forward to a halt and rest at Abou Klea, after which there would be but two short marches to Metammeh. Suddenly the Hussars, who were out scouting ahead, rode in with the news that the enemy in force held possession of the Wells. The whole column, formed now in close fighting order—the Guards Camel Corps on the left, the Heavy Division in the centre, the Mounted Infantry on the right—moved forward until within three miles of the wells; and as the enemy showed no signs either of retiring or of advancing to meet them, the troops were halted. They at once set to work to form an intrenchment, which should serve as a protection in case of a night attack, and as a stronghold where the camels and baggage could be left under a guard, when the main body moved out in the morning to meet the foe. An abattis of felled trees was formed round the camels and baggage, and a stone breastwork thrown up some hundreds of yards in front, where the first rush of the Arabs could be checked. The enemy's camp was in sight at a distance of about four miles; it contained a number of tents, and was fortified. While carrying out their work, our troops were watched by two bodies of the Mahdi's followers from some high hills on the left front. Towards six o'clock in the evening the enemy fired from a distance, but appear to have drawn off upon the Artillery replying with some rounds from the light guns. During the night a few shots were fired at intervals into the camp, but only one slight casualty resulted.

On the morning of Saturday, the 17th inst., the enemy were seen advancing in two divisions. Each numbered some five thousand men, gathered from Berber, Metammeh, and Omdurman; they came on with drums beating and flags flying, halting occasionally to see what course our troops intended to take. Sir Herbert Stewart for a time remained in the position he had intrenched, hoping to induce the enemy to attack him there; but, seeing at last that they were not to be drawn on, he formed his troops into the order in which they were to fight, and advanced to meet them. The British soldiers were all dismounted, and the camels were left in the inclosure, under the protection of a portion of the Sussex Regiment and some Mounted Infantry. The troops advanced in square; the Mounted Infantry, the Artillery, and a portion of the Guards in the front line; another detachment of Guards and a part of the Sussex Regiment on the right flank; some men of the Heavy Camel Corps and some Mounted Infantry on the left. In the rear were the Naval Brigade and the rest of the Heavy Corps, while the Gardner guns were in the centre, in readiness for action on either side face. As the square, which comprised some fifteen hundred men, moved forward against the enemy, the latter appear to have shifted their position until our troops had reached a position which the Arabs deemed favourable for their attack. Then, leaving their standards still waving to deceive the British as to their intentions, they disappeared from view, and, advancing under cover of some depression of the ground, suddenly charged down upon the square. The destructive fire poured in by the front line was too much for the Arabs, and, sweeping round, they flung themselves upon the left rear of the square, where the men of the Heavy Camel Corps were stationed. As at Tamanieb, the troops were for the moment unable to withstand the furious onslaught. They broke their formation, and the enemy poured into the midst of them. The men of the Heavy Cavalry, however, rallied quickly, and a desperate hand-to-hand fight raged in the square. The troops on the other faces kept their formation, and their tremendous fire upon the masses of the enemy around them prevented the latter from following up the advantage they had gained. The Guards, the Mounted Infantry, and the sailors concentrated their fire on the band of Arabs who had broken through, until the survivors fled, and the square again closed up. By this time the enemy were fairly beaten, and were speedily in full retreat, leaving the Wells open to our troops, who at once advanced and occupied the ground.

This battle of Abou Klea was the first actual fighting in the course of the Nile Expedition. The loss of our army was somewhat severe, nine officers and sixty-five non-commissioned officers and privates having been killed, and nine officers and eighty-five men wounded. Among the list of the slain, the officers killed are Colonel Burnaby, Royal Horse Guards; Major Carmichael, 5th Lancers; Major Atherton, 5th Dragoon Guards; Major Gough, 1st Royal Dragoons; Captain Darley, 4th Dragoon Guards; Lieutenant Law, 4th Dragoon Guards; Lieutenant Wolfe, Scots Greys; Lieutenants Pigott and De Lisle, Naval Brigade. The officers severely wounded are Lord St. Vincent, Captain 16th Lancers; Major Dickson, Royals; Lieutenants Lyall and Guthrie, Artillery; and Surgeon Magill. Those slightly wounded are Lord Airlie, Captain 10th Hussars; Lieutenant Beech, Life Guards; Lieutenant Costello, 5th Lancers, contusion; and Major Gough, Mounted Infantry.

THE GREAT BEND OF THE NILE, WITH THE DESERT BETWEEN KORTI (LORD WOLSELEY'S HEAD-QUARTERS) AND SIR HERBERT STEWART'S POSITION ABOVE METAMMEH.

The enemy left not less than eight hundred dead round the square, and prisoners report the number of their wounded to be quite exceptional. The Wells of Abou Klea were occupied by the British force at five in the afternoon, but the necessity of obtaining water delayed for some hours the advance of Sir Herbert Stewart on Metammeh; for which place he was, however, about to push on when his messenger left. A strong post had been established at the Wells, where tents had been pitched for the wounded, who were doing well.

The death of Lord St. Vincent, from his wound in the battle above related, is announced later, with those of Lieutenant Guthrie, R.H.A., Quartermaster A. G. Lima, 19th Hussars, Mr. A. C. Jewell, of the Transport Corps, Mr. Cameron, and Mr. St. Leger Herbert. The officers wounded on the 19th were General Sir Herbert Stewart; Major Lord H. A. G. Somerset, Royal Horse Guards; Lieutenant Crutchley, Scots Guards; Lieutenants T. D. O. Snow and C. P. Livingstone, Mounted Infantry; Captain A. G. Lennard, East Lancashire regiment; Lieutenant Munro, R.N.; and Major W. H. Poe, of the Royal Marines. The wounded left at Abou Klea on the 17th are doing well, and will be brought to Korti very shortly. The following is Lord Wolseley's despatch of last Wednesday, reporting the second battle:—

"Korti, Jan. 28, 1885, five a.m.

"Captain Pigott, of the Mounted Infantry, has just arrived from Gubat, on the Nile, two miles above Metammeh, which he left on the 24th inst. There has been some sharp fighting since the action on the 17th inst., and the men have had extremely hard work, and, until the 23rd inst., little sleep. General Stewart, who, I deeply regret, has been severely wounded, has carried out my instructions; and we have now a strongly fortified post on the Nile, half-way between Berber and Khartoum, and we hold the Desert route between it and this place. On the large island opposite Gubat there is plenty of green forage for horses and camels. Gubat can be held against any force the Mahdi can send to attack it. Four steamers from Khartoum, under Nusri Pasha, arrived at Gubat during the reconnaissance made of Metammeh of 21st inst. The Pasha landed men and guns, and took part in the operations.

"Sir C. Wilson left for Khartoum on the 24th inst. with two steamers and a detachment of the Sussex Regiment. Metammeh is occupied by about 2000 men, half of whom are regulars under Nur Angar, who has three Krupp guns, but very little ammunition for them. None of the shells fired from them exploded. At Shendy there is one Krupp gun and a small garrison. A hospital has been established at Metammeh, where the wounded are well cared for.

"The movements of General Stewart's force, since my last telegram, were as follows:—Having established a strong post at Abou Klea Wells, he left there about four p.m., on the 18th inst. After passing Wells at Shebacat, he moved to their right, as my instructions were that, if Metammeh were held, Stewart should establish himself on the Nile between it and Khartoum. About seven a.m., on the 19th inst., when three or four miles from the river, the enemy showed in force. A halt was made for breakfast in a strong zereba. It was here that General Stewart was wounded, and the heaviest fire was sustained. Colonel Sir C. Wilson, as senior officer, assumed the command. The force, leaving wounded and impedimenta in a work constructed under heavy fire, marched about three p.m. on the 19th inst. in the gravel ridge overlooking the Nile, where a large force of the enemy was established. The enemy charged, led by several Emirs on horseback; but none were able to get nearer our square than about thirty yards. They were repulsed with heavy loss; five Emirs and about 250 dead left on the ground. Their wounded were very numerous.

"Sir C. Wilson in report says:—'Nothing could exceed the coolness of the troops both when exposed to fire of sharp-shooters in morning, and to the charge of spearmen in afternoon.' He speaks highly of Colonel Boscawen, to whom he gave command of the square during these operations. On 21st inst. a reconnaissance in force was made of Metammeh, which had been placed in a state of defence, the walls loop-holed. Although Sir C. Wilson reports he could have carried the village, which is long and straggling, he did not think it worth the loss it would have entailed. On 22nd inst. a reconnaissance made down the river towards Shendy, with three steamers, which returned same day.

"I most deeply deplore the losses we have experienced; but in every other respect the result of these operations, so ably and successfully conducted by Sir Herbert Stewart, is most satisfactory, and cannot fail to have a great effect upon the future of this campaign. I have had no letters of any importance from General Gordon. The most recent, dated Dec. 29, contains merely one line, saying 'Khartoum all right—could hold out for years.'

"Sir R. Buller starts to-morrow to assume the command along the Desert route to Gubat. We have plenty of troops, of ammunition, and of food. The Royal Irish begin their movements across the Desert to-day; the West Kent will follow. Sir Herbert Stewart writes in good spirits from on board one of steamers, and the last report of him says he is doing well; but his wound is very severe; and I cannot expect him to be fit for any more work this campaign. The temporary deprivation of his services at this moment I regard as a national loss. He is one of the ablest soldiers and most dashing commanders I have ever known. I recommend him most strongly to the Queen for her Majesty's most favourable consideration. I append a list of killed and wounded. I regret to say Lord St. Vincent and Lieutenant Guthrie, Horse Artillery, died of their wounds. The only officers killed since the 17th are Quartermaster Lima, 19th Hussars, and Conductor Jewell. The enemy did not fight with the same determination or courage as on the 17th inst."

It is, perhaps, to be regretted that, while Sir Herbert Stewart's brigade was encountering such risks beyond the Desert, and was cut off during ten days, after fighting a severe battle, from all communication with Lord Wolseley, another large portion of the army should have been sent up the Nile in an entirely different direction. The force commanded by General Earle, which numbers 2200 men, consisting of the Staffordshire Regiment, the Black Watch, 42nd Highlanders, the head-quarters and two companies of the Gordon Highlanders, the Duke of Cornwall's regiment, a squadron of the 19th Hussars, and the Egyptian Camel Corps, with the auxiliary native troop of the Mudir of Dongola, has passed above the Fourth Cataract, seventy miles or more to the north-east of Korti, on its way to attack the hostile Monassir and Robatat tribes. It would proceed, afterwards, nearly 150 miles further north to Abou Ahmed, the top of the great bend of the Nile, where the Desert route from Korosko terminates on the right bank of the river. The further ascent of the Nile, from Abou Ahmed to Berber and Khartoum is in a southerly direction; but the river course from Abou Ahmed to Metammeh or Shendy cannot be much less than 300 miles. It is, therefore, plain that, if General Earle's troops go up to Abou Ahmed, not the least direct assistance can be obtained from them to strengthen the position of Sir Herbert Stewart. By the winding river-route General Earle would take six weeks to get there. A glance at our Map, showing the great bend of the Nile, a circuit of nearly six hundred miles, from Khartoum down to Korti or Ambukol, with the intervening space of desert and the route along which Sir Herbert Stewart marched from Korti to Abou Klea, and subsequently to his present position on the river-bank above Metammeh, will help the reader to understand all the recent movements. Referring again to the position of General Earle's column in the north, we are informed that it is making good progress in boats up the river, the stations being at Hannek, Merawi, Hamdab, and Owli Island, above the Gerendid cataract. Colonel Colville, with the Mudir's troops, marched along the right bank of the river, and a detachment of cavalry scouted the country on that side under Colonel W. F. Butler; while Colonel Alleyne, in three boats manned by Canadians, went up in advance to examine the state of the river. It had been thought likely that the Monassir tribe, under the chief of Wady Gamr, the reputed murderer of Colonel J. D. Stewart and Mr. Frank Power, would fight at Birteh, thirty-five miles above Hamdab; but this is now considered to be doubtful. General Earle has issued very strict and precise orders with reference to each day's movements, and every arrangement has been laid down as to the course to be pursued in case of a sudden attack being made by the Arabs. The natives think that no serious opposition will be experienced until the troops approach Abou Ahmed, near the abode of the Robatat tribe, or until they get nearer the Fifth Cataract on the way to Berber. A chief called Nour-ed-deen commands on behalf of the Mahdi at Berber and at Abou Ahmed; at the latter place he has twelve hundred men and at Berber thirteen hundred men, so that together with the Monassir tribes he can dispose of four thousand warriors, half of whom have only spears and swords, the remainder being provided with good firearms. Nour-ed-deen has already left for Abou Ahmed, there to await the arrival of Earle's column. At Abou Ahmed there are several guns and a large quantity of ammunition and rifles belonging to the old Egyptian dépôt there.

The native troops of the Mudir of Dongola muster three hundred, armed with Remington rifles; they are pleased with the treatment they have received since joining our army.

The Sketches by our Special Artist, Mr. Melton Prior, represent Lord Wolseley's head-quarters at Korti, and a party of the Royal Engineers building a fort at that place; there is another scene of unloading boats on the river. Our large Engraving shows an incident of the war, the capturing of intercepted supplies on their way to the enemy.

PARISIAN SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Tuesday, Jan. 27.

On Sunday the Parisians had to elect a Senator. Amongst the candidates was M. Spuller, a born Democrat, an orator and writer of merit, a man who has been usefully concerned in public affairs for fifteen years; but, as if to justify the maxim that democracy demands none but mediocre and obedient representatives, the electors preferred to M. Spuller one Doctor Georges Martin, aged forty, unknown to fame. M. Martin thus becomes the colleague of Victor Hugo as the representative of the Light City, the cynosure of civilisation, the navel of the universe, or, in other words, the capital of France. The programme supported by M. Martin is that of communal autonomy, the extremest form of Radicalism. Utterly vanquished at Paris, the policy of opportunism did not succeed very brilliantly in the provinces. In the departments of the Nord and Pas de Calais the Republicans have lost three seats, and, in spite of the new electoral law specially designed to combat the Conservatives, the latter have been by no means ignominiously defeated. The Duc de Broglie and M. Bocher have lost their seats, it is true; nevertheless, out of eighty-seven seats, the Conservatives have succeeded in keeping twenty. Thus M. Ferry has proved to be a false prophet in his prediction that with the new electoral law the Monarchists would be eliminated in thirty-one out of thirty-seven departments, and the Cabinet has received within the past few days two blows—the opportunist defeat at Paris and the military defeat at Kelung. The Conservatives, therefore, remain hopeful, and expect to obtain important reactionary results with universal suffrage at the time of the general elections. The Senate will resume its sittings on Thursday. The Chamber met this afternoon, and the first business of the Session will be the discussion of the Extraordinary Budget of 1885.

Society is skating and having night fêtes with the electric light on the pond of the Gun Club in the Bois de Boulogne. This is the seventeenth day of safe ice. Since the very hard winter of 1880-1 there has been no skating in Paris, so that the continuance of the frost is quite an event, and the reporters are writing columns about the exploits of exotic and other notabilities of fashionable Paris, who drive up to the Gun Club every afternoon to show off their furs.

Another chapter has begun in the life of that extraordinary genius, Sarah Bernhardt. She has abandoned her house in the Rue Fortuny and all that it contains to her innumerable creditors; and last week her furniture, objects of art, and, in short, all her worldly goods, were sold by auction at the Hôtel Drouot. Oddly enough, the sale attracted little or no attention; very few people took the trouble to go to see, much less to buy; and, with very few exceptions, the purchasers were brokers and dealers. The total of the three days' sale was small, 27,000f. A year or two ago the sale of Sarah Bernhardt's furniture would have been a Parisian event of the first magnitude. But everything has an end, and Sarah has provoked our curiosity in such multifarious ways, and so persistently, that she has finally wearied us. Happily for her, she has talent enough as an actress to force our admiration whether we will or not.

Let me take advantage of the general lull in political and social matters to mention a few notable new books. Awakened at length to the rapid progress made by neighbouring nations in all the branches of art, the French are beginning to feel the necessity of improving and enlarging their systems of artistic education, and, at the same time, of popularising artistic study. M. Quantin is now publishing, with this view, under the patronage of the Fine-Arts Department, an excellent series of manuals, with the general title of the "Library of Fine-Art Teaching." Each volume contains three or four hundred pages of text, and one hundred or one hundred and fifty engravings, and the whole series will form a complete encyclopædia of the Arts, written by the most competent authorities. Amongst the recently published volumes, I notice two of special excellence and interest: a dictionary of Art terms, and a most concise, readable, and complete account of Etruscan and Roman Art, by M. Jules Martha. Thanks to this handy volume, "L'Archéologie Etrusque et Romaine," a promenade in certain galleries of the Louvre which visitors are inclined to neglect becomes amusing as well as instructive. M. Jules Adeline's "Lexique des Termes d'Art," with its hundreds of illustrative little wood-cuts, has the merits of completeness, brevity, and usefulness: every private library and every student's shelves ought to have a copy. I mention these two volumes especially out of a dozen others, all of merit, on mosaic, Byzantine art, music, manuscripts and miniatures, engravings, &c.

The Anarchist leaders who created a disturbance at the Salle Lévis, a few Sundays ago, were tried last week. Five of them were condemned each to two months' imprisonment for inciting their fellow-citizens to murder and pillage, and one was condemned to five years' imprisonment for attempting to kill a policeman. During this trial a curious incident happened. The Judge summoned the reporters who were present at the meeting to give evidence, but they all refused, and were fined accordingly each 100f., according to the law. This is the first time that justice has taken such a measure towards the press, and all the newspapers agree in condemning the mistake of the magistrate in question. Reporters, it is maintained, ought to enjoy the privilege of professional secrecy.

M. Caro, the eminent "Christian philosopher" was hissed during his last lecture at the Sorbonne by the students, who are at the present moment of a Voltairian turn of thinking. Their hisses were meant as a protestation of a declaration of Christian faith made by M. Caro, the other day, at the funeral of Edmond About.

T. C.

The King of Spain returned to Madrid late on the 22nd inst., from his visit to the districts devastated by the earthquakes. He was cordially received by the people. Further slight shocks of earthquakes have been left at Malaga, Loja, Velaz-Malaga, and Almuñecar.

The Emperor William has recovered from his indisposition. The Empress held a reception at the Imperial Palace on the 22nd inst., and was afterwards present at the State concert which followed. The Crown Prince and Princess and the Princes and Princesses of the Imperial family also attended the reception and the concert. Prince Henry of Battenberg was present. The annual Court Ball at the Opera-House, fixed for the 30th inst., has been further postponed until the 3rd prox., owing to the Emperor's express desire to be present. The Emperor has contributed £1000 on behalf of the sufferers by the late earthquakes in Spain.—In the German Parliament a vote of 150,000 marks for explorations in Central Africa was agreed to by a large majority. In the course of the debate, protests were made against the addresses to Prince Bismarck expressing indignation at the recent refusal of the House to grant him another assistant at the Foreign Office.

In last Saturday's sitting of the Hungarian Lower House the proposal of Herr Ugron, of the Extreme Left, to make the Catholic Church independent of the State was rejected by 155 votes against 98. The Croatian members abstained from voting.

The University of Kieff was reopened on Monday. The Curator, in addressing the students, expressed his regret at the incidents which led to the closing of the institution. He hoped that as men of science they would in future devote themselves exclusively to the interests of science, and that the pursuit of these interests would lead to the permanent establishment of order and tranquillity in the University.

In Tuesday's sitting of the Finance Committee of the Danish Folkething, the Left majority reduced the Budget presented by the Government by seven and a half to eight million kroner. The Right had previously intimated their willingness to agree to a reduction of two million kroner. This abatement is spread over all branches of the State expenditure. It is believed that in consequence of this decision the Government will bring in a provisional Finance Bill.

The news of the dynamite explosions in London reached the American cities at noon last Saturday, causing a great sensation. Universal execration of the criminals was expressed. On Monday the Senate of the United States adopted, by 63 votes to 1, Mr. Bayard's resolution (proposed last Saturday) expressing indignation at the explosions in London, and detestation of such crimes. A resolution calling on the Secretary of State for information as to whether any citizen of the United States, or persons domiciled there, had been concerned in these explosions, was referred to the appropriate committee. The New York journals, one and all, denounce Rossa and his associates as enemies of civilisation. But at a meeting of Socialists, held in Chicago, the outrages in London were applauded, and the free use of dynamite against capitalists was recommended. The Daily News correspondent at New York telegraphs that a Dynamite Prohibition Bill has been introduced in the New York Legislature which is more comprehensive and satisfactory than Mr. Edmunds's measure. The Bill makes it a felony to contribute or solicit money for the purpose of manufacturing or using explosives to destroy life or property. The correspondent says that the sentiment in favour of legislation of some kind grows stronger daily. A resolution has been introduced in the Pennsylvania Legislature denouncing the dynamiters, and asking the Senators to support Mr. Edmunds's Bill.

A Reuter despatch from Melbourne states that the City Council has passed a resolution expressing regret that the representations of the Colonies with respect to recent German annexations in New Guinea were not received with due consideration by the British Government, and praying her Majesty to take steps to effectually remedy the evil done.

It is announced from Perth, in West Australia, that the manager and accountant of the Union Bank of Australia's branch in Roeburne have been found tomahawked on the bank's premises. There is no clue to the assassins.

A largely attended bazaar was held at Hastings on Tuesday, in connection with St. Peter's Church, which is being built mainly for the poor, and towards the erection of which the sum of £11,000 was given by an unknown benefactor.

Mr. Parnell, M.P., on the occasion of turning the first turf of a light railway to be constructed in county Clare, under the Tramways Act, delivered an address on Monday glorifying the League agitation, and denouncing landlord "tyranny" and English "misrule." He made no reference to the outrages in London.

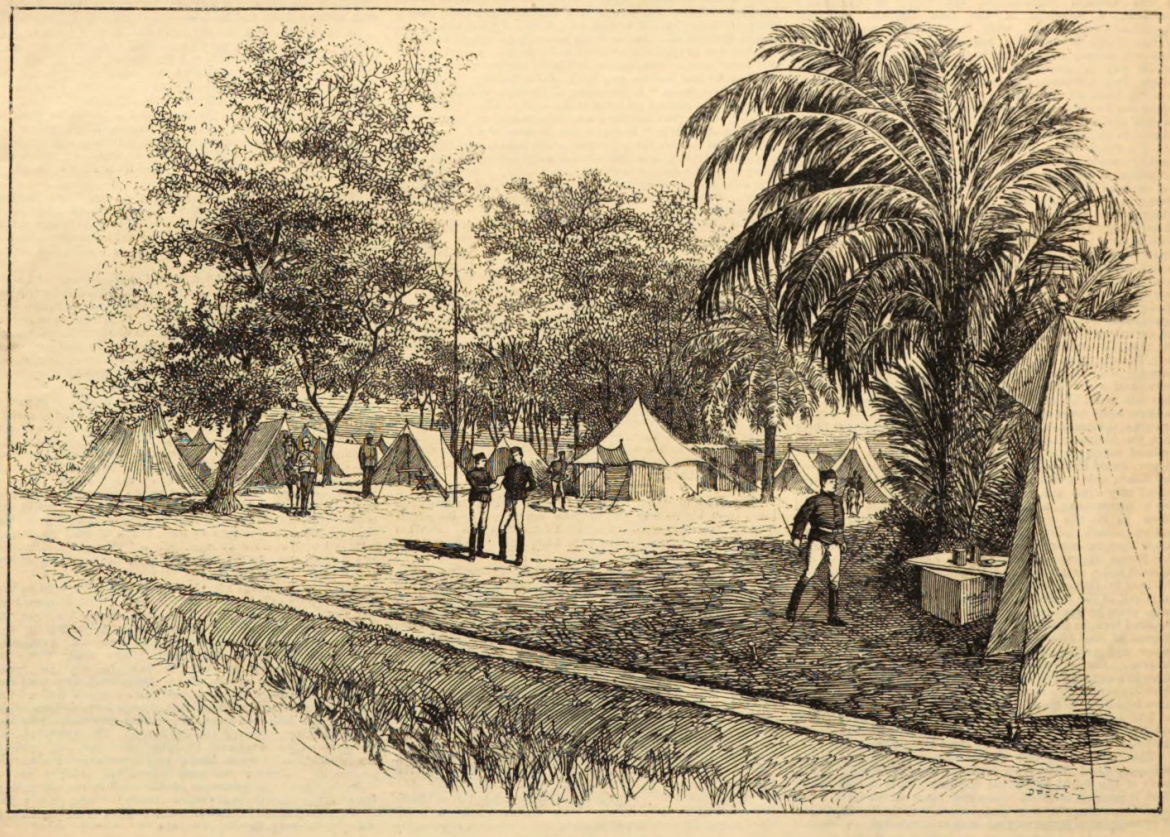
At a public meeting at Ramsgate on Monday night the silver medal of the Royal Humane Society was presented to a Ramsgate fisherman, named Edward Grainger, who gallantly rescued a lad from drowning last November. The lad fell into the sluice water as it was rushing from the inner harbour with so much force that no boat could have gone to the rescue.

In connection with the inquiries set on foot by the Committee on Stamps, appointed by the late Postmaster-General, the Government have instructed Mr. Purcell, the Controller of Stamps, accompanied by two of the superior officers of his department, to visit and report upon the various Government stamp factories in the principal cities of Europe.

The Board of Trade have awarded a binocular glass to Captain Soren Carlsen, of the Norwegian brig Sigrinn, of Christiania, in acknowledgment of his humanity and kindness to the shipwrecked crew of the schooner Dewdrop, which was abandoned at sea, while on a voyage from Turk's Island to Jersey, on Feb. 3, 1884.

The annual Christmas-tree festival of the Royal Normal College and Academy of Music for the Blind took place last Saturday in that institution, at Upper Norwood, when Mr. L. Courtney, M.P., presided. Several letters from former pupils who are earning good salaries as teachers of music were read.

The Peabody trustees have erected another range of buildings for the industrial classes, which are intended to be thrown open for occupation at once. The buildings are situated on the west side of Little Coram-street, and have been erected on the Foundling estate, covering an area of about 15,000 superficial feet. They consist of eight double blocks, and have been built on the east, west, north, and south sides of the site, respectively, around a spacious open area and recreation-ground, about 220 ft. in length and 120 ft. in width.



An interesting little letter appears in the Times from the governor of the Gas Light and Coke Company as to the cost of a London fog. On last Tuesday, the 20th inst., we suffered from a fog of fairly average density, which necessitated the burning of gas nearly the whole day. The result was that this single gas company had to deliver 35,000,000 cubic feet of gas above the corresponding day of the previous year, an increase of 37 per cent. The cost to the public from this one day's darkness in extra gas bills alone was £5250, and the manufacture of the extra supply of gas necessitated the carbonisation of 3500 tons of coal, 1 ton of coal producing 1000 feet of gas on the average. The quantity of gas delivered last Tuesday was 96,000,000 cubic feet, the largest quantity ever sent out in one day.

The eighth annual bicycle and tricycle show, held by the Stanley Cycling Club, was on Wednesday morning opened on the Thames Embankment. The show, which has from its establishment proved popular with a large section of the public, has for several years past been an increasing one. The gallery of the Royal Albert Hall, which in 1883 proved adequate for the exhibits, was last year vacated in favour of the Floral Hall, while this year the directors have been obliged to erect an enormous tent on the waste ground near Blackfriars Bridge, in order to accommodate the 300 and odd machines, comprising 270 distinct types, which have been entered for exhibition. The exhibits comprise every type of bi and tri-cycle, new and old, cycling impedimenta of various kinds, and a number of wheeling accessories. Among the most interesting exhibits are a "dandy horse," the precursor of the modern bicycle, dating from 1819, and an original "bone-shaker." The most practical outcome of the exhibition is the number of adaptations of the cycle to every-day requirements.

THE NILE EXPEDITION: SKETCHES BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, MR. MELTON PRIOR.

UNLOADING BOATS.

LORD WOLSELEY'S HEAD-QUARTERS AT KÔRTI.

THE LATE P. C. ASBJÖRNSEN,
NORWEGIAN TALE-WRITER AND NATURALIST.

THE LATE EDMOND ABOUT,
FRENCH NOVELIST AND JOURNALIST.

THE EARTHQUAKE IN SPAIN.

In addition to our Sketches already published, which showed the tremendous havoc caused by the earthquake on Christmas Eve in the town of Alhama, and the disturbance and distress it occasioned in the cities of Malaga and Granada, we present a Sketch by Mr. Dietrichsen, a German artist, of the ruins of Albunuelas; this is a smaller town, but has suffered almost as severely as Alhama, and more than any other place in the province. Four hundred and fifty-seven houses were destroyed at Albunuelas; a hundred and seventy-three persons were killed, among them the parish priest and many of the principal inhabitants; and two hundred and sixty-six were wounded. Many of these remained for hours buried among the ruins before assistance could be obtained to dig them out. The road to Albunuelas passes through a wild country full of spots celebrated in the history of Spain as being the scene of conflicts with the Moors. Among them are the heights from which Boabdil looked his last upon Granada.

The town of Periana, at the foot of the Sierra Nevada mountains, but in the province of Malaga, was almost totally destroyed, the number of houses thrown down being seven hundred and fifty, while about a hundred persons were killed, and two hundred injured. The church, the townhall, and the convents were all destroyed. Only fifty houses are left standing, and they are in a ruinous state. At Velez Malaga, fifty-three persons were killed and seventy injured; four hundred and fifty houses, a convent, and two churches are in a ruinous state. This was a town of 26,000 inhabitants, near the seacoast, five miles east of the city of Malaga. At Cañillas two hundred and eighty houses were totally destroyed, and two hundred and twenty are in a ruinous condition.

The King of Spain, Alfonso XII., returned last week to Madrid, after a tour in which he visited most of the places which have suffered by the earthquake. His Majesty refused to accept any banquets or other public entertainments during the course of his tour, and requested that funds destined for such purposes should be given to the national subscription for the relief of the sufferers. He took much trouble, personally, in the distribution of the money which he had brought with him for the purpose among the families most in need of assistance, the wants of the widows and orphans being in the first place inquired into and relieved. The King went about among the sufferers and spoke to them with great kindness, and was visibly moved at the spectacle of such wide and deep distress. He was everywhere welcomed by the people with touching demonstrations of gratitude, as well as of loyalty.

Sir Frederick Leighton on the 22nd inst. distributed prizes gained by the Canterbury School of Art, and spoke of the beneficent and refining influences of artistic studies.

Messrs. Spiers and Pond's tender for the refreshment departments at the forthcoming South Kensington International Inventions Exhibition has been accepted by the executive council.

THE EARTHQUAKE IN SPAIN: RUINS OF ALBUNUELAS.

DOING GOOD.

"Doing good!" the reader may exclaim, upon reading the heading of this paper. "What more is there to be said about this terribly trite subject? Every day it is forced upon our attention. The post brings to us appeals of all kinds, the pulpits echo them, the advertisement columns of the daily papers repeat the cry, and every middle-aged woman we meet, who is unburdened with family claims, has at least half a score of charitable projects with which to fill her neighbours' hands as well as her own, or to empty their pockets."

It must be admitted that the reader is right. On all sides of us we see a strenuous, persistent philanthropy—a noble rage for doing good such as the world has never hitherto witnessed. Men and women are loving their fellow-creatures, or pretending to love them—for goodness is always followed by its counterfeit—with an energy resembling that of a mountain stream which the thaw of the snow has swelled into a torrent. Nor are our "fellow-mortals," the lower animals, forgotten in this generous crusade. We labour for their good—blindly perhaps, sometimes, but in a kindly spirit at all times; and though cruelty has by no means died out of the land, it receives from every right-minded person the execration it deserves. A man who beats his horse is liable to be imprisoned for the offence; he is not even allowed to beat his wife. There may be sentimental ladies who will weep over a dying cat, and eat pâté-de-fois-gras; who subscribe to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, while they torture their horses with bearing-reins, and are not ashamed to be seen at Hurlingham. Yet have they been known to give their clothes to the poor when far from being worn out, but only out of fashion; so that it may be supposed they are cruel simply from ignorance and thoughtlessness. They want imagination; they fail to conceive what they do not feel. They hate cruelty in the abstract, but when it comes to them in the form of pleasure they do not see that it is cruelty. However, let us own thankfully that aberrations of this kind are rare, and that doing good is as genuine a characteristic of the age as the passion for getting money. Sometimes the two are curiously linked together, and a man deludes himself by thinking he is working for humanity, when his real aim is to fill his own pocket and the pockets of his fellow-shareholders.

A delusion of another and less selfish kind is often to be seen in the advocates of doing good. With many of them this means doing exactly what they do. Some kinds of generous or useful action they understand fully, for other kinds they have no sympathy whatever. To give away tracts or bibles, blankets or soup, goody books or knitted shawls, and to teach in the Sunday school, is the broadest view they can take of doing good. Excellent souls! Surely they have their reward, although their world of charity is a narrow one. Unfortunately, it never occurs to them that men and women may be working on very different lines, and yet doing as much good, or possibly even more. For instance, the physician who, after years of unwearied toil, has discovered a remedy for some great physical evil, has done a service to mankind which cannot be weighed in any scales. Think what the use of anæsthetics has done for the relief of human suffering and for the progress of what has been justly called conservative surgery. "Past all counting," wrote Sir James Paget in 1879, "is the sense of happiness enjoyed by the millions who in the last thirty-three years have escaped the pains that were inevitable to surgical operations, pains made more terrible by apprehension, more keen by close attention, sometimes awful in a swift agony, sometimes prolonged beyond even the most patient endurance, and then renewed in memory and terrible in dreams. These will never be felt again." We forget our benefactors, but it would be shameless indeed to forget the good done by Dr. Simpson, of Edinburgh, who was the first to apply chloroform as an anæsthetic. And few men in these modern days have done more good to mankind than Mr. Lister, the originator of the antiseptic treatment, by which operations can be safely performed that would not have been attempted twenty years ago. Other illustrations, almost equally pertinent, might be given of what doing good means when the agent is a man of genius and of science. Whatever tends to lengthen human life, to lessen human suffering, to make existence brighter and happier, is a boon which the dullest intellect can appreciate. Other modes of doing good may not be quite so obvious. The poet or novelist, probably, is less esteemed as a benefactor than the distinguished surgeon or physician. Comparisons are difficult—nay, in many cases, impossible; but no reader capable of appreciating the works of Homer, Dante, Shakspeare, and Scott, or who has found, as Lord Holland found, a delight and sedative in Jane Austen's novels even when tortured with the gout, will doubt that they rank with the principal benefactors of mankind. Such writers give us, as a great poet has said, "nobler loves and nobler cures": they widen our intellectual horizon; they touch the heart with sympathy; they make sorrow less oppressive, and give a deeper intensity to joy. Can we doubt, too, that the authors of all really worthy books have done good of the most lasting kind, and that the work of the humblest conscientious writer may be at least as fruitful as the labours—shall we say?—of a district visitor?

There are, in fact, few kinds of human action, save those which are distinctly evil, which may not yield very definite good. Recreation, when wisely conducted, may do this in no mean measure, and yet people are prone to look upon recreation and amusement as having no connection with the duties of life. Art and music, and what is called light literature, may do this, and the good which the sight of Nature does to a weary spirit cannot be uttered in words. Nature, by-the-by, has a silent way of doing good, makes no parade about it, and cures her patients by the gentlest methods. What is needed seems to be that every man should strive to do the kind of good for which he is best fitted, making the action fine, as George Herbert said, by doing it in a right spirit. Do not let us all strive to run in the same groove. Every man has his own calling; and it would be as absurd to grumble that Lord Shaftesbury and Miss Florence Nightingale cannot write poetry like Lord Tennyson, as it would be to regret that he has not devoted his life, as they have done, to organising charitable works and putting down social abuses.

A young man named John Owen was brought before the Lord Mayor at the Mansion House on Wednesday charged with attempting to forge the transfer of £4900 East India Stock, standing on the books of the Bank of England in the name of the Rev. William Forbes Capel, of Frimley, Surrey, with intent to defraud the Bank of England. Mr. Capel, the owner of the stock in question, is at present travelling abroad, and on Jan. 6 a letter was written in his name to Mr. Shaw, a stockbroker, which represented that Mr. Capel was in England unknown to his family, and was desirous of selling £4900 East India Four per Cent Stock standing in his name in the Bank of England, but he wished the matter to be kept private, and this was why he did not employ his own stockbrokers. The writer of the letter also stated that a power of attorney would be required to sell out the stock, and if this was sent to him he would sign it, and appoint Mr. Shaw to act for him. The letter was dated from Studley-street, Hammersmith, which address upon inquiry turned out to be a small barber's shop, and suspicion seems to have been at once created in the mind of Mr. Shaw with regard to the transaction. He therefore communicated with the Bank of England, and the police were set in motion. Various communications passed in writing between Mr. Shaw and his correspondent, the latter on all occasions expressing his wish that for family reasons it should not be known that he was in England, or that he desired to sell the stock in question. The prisoner, it appeared, was in the habit of calling for the letters that were sent to Studley-street addressed to Mr. Capel, and he was apprehended by Sergeant Child on Wednesday morning when applying for them. When told what he was charged with, he appeared quite prepared for the emergency, and said that he was merely employed by a gentleman to fetch any letters that might be addressed to him at Studley-street; and he produced a letter which he had received that day from the gentleman, in which he inclosed him three shillings'-worth of postage stamps for his trouble. Sergeant Child was examined, to prove the circumstances under which he arrested the prisoner, and the case was then adjourned.

THE LATE EDMOND ABOUT.

This clever and witty French writer, who at one period lent his incisive pen to support the foreign policy of Napoleon III., and rendered some service to the liberation of Italy from Austrian and Papal oppression, died two or three weeks ago. He was born in 1828, at Dieuze, and, after a brilliant school course at the Charlemagne Lyceum, carried off, in his twenty-first year, the chief prize in philosophy, and entered the Ecole Normale, from which he passed, in 1851, to the French school at Athens. It was here that his first literary work, an archæological account of the Island of Ægina, was written. Returning to Paris, he wrote, in 1855, "The Greece of To-day," a book which was translated into several foreign languages; and by 1860 he had become famous as a journalist and novel writer. His pamphlet on the Roman Question, advocating the abolition of the Temporal Power of the Pope, made M. About the object of Ultramontane hostility. In the following years his work for the stage met with mingled success and failure. The year 1868 found him a member of the staff of the Gaulois; and when the Franco-German war broke out he was for a few weeks a correspondent at the front, whence he sent a vivacious account of the skirmish in which the Prince Imperial received his baptême de feu. After a brief imprisonment by the enemy, M. About returned to Paris, and became a Republican under M. Thiers, distinguishing himself by attacks in the XIXme Siècle on the Monarchical and Clerical parties. On a visit to Alsace he was again arrested by the German authorities, but the charge of high treason and outrage against the German Emperor was not sustained. He had recently been elected to the French Academy.

THE LATE P. C. ASBJÖRNSEN.

Many readers here are acquainted with the popular Norwegian fairy-tale writer, Asbjörnsen, "the Grimm of Scandinavia," whose death took place at Christiania on the 6th inst. A selection of his tales has been published in English translations. Asbjörnsen was born at Christiania in January, 1812, and took his degree at the University of that city in 1837. He spent much of his life in zoological studies and researches, and thus had frequent opportunities of visiting all parts of the country, and mixing with the people. He began early collecting the weird and wonderful stories which he heard on his wanderings, and, having become intimate with the poet Jörgen Moe, afterwards Bishop of Christiansand, who had a taste for similar pursuits, he published, in 1841, in conjunction with this friend, the first collection of "Norwegian Folk and Fairy Tales," which was followed by his second series, published in 1871. These tales have become a classic in Norwegian literature, and not only have an immense reputation in the Scandinavian countries, but have also gained the author a European fame. Translations of these remarkable specimens of quaint and primitive folklore have appeared in most of the European languages, and in America. In 1845 and 1848 he published his "Huldre Eventyr," a collection of tales about the Huldre, and other fairies of the Norwegian woods, hills, and rivers. Asbjörnsen has also written several scientific and practical works, and has been a constant contributor to the periodical press of his country. His stories have had a profound influence upon the younger poets of Norway of our day, owing no doubt to the elements of national character which he brought to light, and which had previously remained unnoticed and unappreciated. They afford the best opportunity of making foreigners acquainted with the life, the humour, and the temper of the Norwegian people, and with the interesting folklore of the country. Asbjörnsen's name will always occupy an honoured and revered place, not only in the literature of his native land, but also in the hearts of his countrymen.

General Gordon attained on Wednesday his fifty-second birthday.

Our Portrait of the late Colonel Frederick Burnaby is from a photograph by Mr. T. Fall, of Baker-street; that of Commander Alfred Pigott, R.N., from one by Mr. W. G. Lewis, of Bath; that of Major W. H. Atherton, by Messrs. Elliott and Fry, Baker-street; also that of Lieutenant Rudolph De Lisle, R.N.; and that of M. Edmond About, by Emile Tourtin, Boulevard des Italiens, Paris.

GREAT SALE at REDUCED PRICES at PETER ROBINSON'S MOURNING WAREHOUSE, REGENT-STREET.

THE ANNUAL JANUARY SALE will COMMENCE on MONDAY, JAN. 5, and continue for One Month.

GENUINE BARGAINS will be offered in each Department. Amongst them may be mentioned Silk Costumes, reduced from 8½ to 4½ guineas, from 8½ to 6, from 10 to 7½, from 14 to 10½.

BALL, DINNER, and EVENING DRESSES. Reduced from 3 to 2 guineas, from 4 to 3, from 5 to 3½, from 8 to 6 guineas.

MATERIAL COSTUMES in Black and Greys, beautifully fashioned and designed, in various New Textures and Combinations. Reduced from 3 to 2 guineas, from 4 to 3, from 6 to 4, from 8 to 6 guineas.

THE MAGNIFICENT STOCK of CLOAKS, MANTLES, JACKETS, and OPERAS are all very considerably reduced.

BLACK SILKS and VELVETS.—Very handsome Frocaded Velvets, Plain Black Silks, Ottomans, Merveilleux, and Satins, are all marked down to very low prices.

FANCY SILKS and REMNANTS. Many reduced to One Half.

ALSO SHAWLS, Operas, Evening Fichus, Fans, Hosiery, Gloves, Collars. The beautiful Stock of French Millinery Materials, by the yard. Crapes, &c., have all undergone the same reduction.

MOURNING ORDERS during the SALE will be supplied at the same cheap rates, best care and prompt attention will be given to all orders, large or small. Travelling assistants fully competent to take measures and instructions will be sent at once to any part of the country, free of any extra expense whatever to the customer, immediately ON RECEIPT OF LETTER OR TELEGRAM ADDRESSED TO PETER ROBINSON, MOURNING WAREHOUSE, REGENT-STREET, LONDON.

LEFT-OFF CLOTHES, the oldest and best buyers in the kingdom for cash. Parcels sent, appointments attended to.—Mr. and Mrs. PHILLIPS, Old Curiosity Shop, 31, Thayer-street, Manchester-square, London, W.

IMPROVED POSTAGE-STAMP ALBUM FOR 1885. Systematically arranged, and all the most modern improvements. Superior, 224 pages, post-free, 3s. 6d. Circulars free.—STANLEY GIBBONS and Co., 8, Gower-st., London.

NICE.—COSMOPOLITAN HOTEL. HOTEL DE LA GRANDE BRETAGNE. These two very superior grand hotels excel any on the Riviera. South aspect. Calorifère and Ascenseur at each. J. LAVIT, Director.

NICE.—Hôtel de France.—First-class, south aspect, Quai Masena, near Promenade des Anglais. Every comfort for English travellers. Omnibus and lift. A. BERTHELMANN, Director.

NICE.—TERMINUS HOTEL. Facing the station. Splendid south position. Hydraulic Ascenseur and Baths. 180 Chambers and Salons.

PEGLI.—Grand Hôtel Pegli (formerly De la Méditerranée). Facing the sea. South aspect, surrounded by gardens and mountains. Climate unsurpassed. Sanitary arrangements; satisfactory charges. BUCHER-DURRER, Prop.

VERMOUTH.—Francesco Cinzano and Co., Vermouth, combination Asti Wine and Alpine herbs, with quinine. Refreshing, tonic, and digestive. Of Wine Merchants, and F. CINZANO and CO., Corso Re Umberto, 10, Turin.

WHAT IS YOUR CREST and WHAT IS YOUR MOTTO? Send name and county to CULLETON'S Heraldic Office. Plain sketch, 3s 6d.; colours, 7s. The arms of man and wife blended. Crest engraved on seals, rings, books, and steel dies, 8s. 6d. Gold seal, with crest, 9s. Solid Gold Ring, 18-carat, Hall-marked, with crest, 42s. Manual of Heraldry, 600 Engravings, 5s. 6d.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX of STATIONERY contains a Ream of the very best Paper and 500 Envelopes, all stamped in the most elegant way with Crest and Motto, Monogram, or Address, and the engraving of steel Die included. Sent to any part for P.O.O. only.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

VISITING CARDS by CULLETON. Fifty best quality, 2s. 6d., post-free, including the Engraving of Copper-plate. Wedding Cards, 50 each, 50 Embossed Envelopes, with Maiden Name, 12s. 6d.—T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

FOR FAMILY ARMS (Lincoln's-inn Heraldic Office) send Name and County. Sketch, 3s. 6d.; in colours, 7s. 6d. Arms Painted and Engraved on Seals, Dies, &c. PUGH BROTHERS, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn, W.C.; and 76, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. Prize Medal, Paris, 1878.

BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. FOR HOME-MADE BREAD AND PASTRY.

BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. FOR PLUM PUDDINGS AND PLUM CAKE.

BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. FIVE GOLD MEDALS AWARDED.

BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER. 600,000 PACKAGES SOLD WEEKLY.

MR. STANFORD'S OPERAS. Messrs. BOOSEY and CO. beg to announce that they have made arrangements with Messrs. Puttick and Simpson to sell by Auction, on Tuesday, Feb. 24, Dr. J. Collis Browne and Stanford's two Operas. "The Canterbury Pilgrims" and "Savonarola." The former work was performed by the Carl Rosa Company last Easter, and was published at the same time. "Savonarola" was played in German at Covent Garden last summer. Although the Plates were engraved, it has never been published. Each work cost the publishers £1200 for Copyright. Further particulars may be obtained of the Auctioneers, 47, Leicester-square; or BOOSEY and CO., 295, Regent-street.

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, and NEURALGIA.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the inventor of Chlorodyne; that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See the "Times," July 13, 1864.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in cholera was Chlorodyne.—See "Lancet," Dec. 31, 1853.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Extract from the "Medical Times," Jan. 12, 1856:—"Is prescribedby scores of orthodox practitioners. Of course, it would not be so singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

DR J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the best and most certain remedy in Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a certain cure in Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—CAUTION.—None genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each Bottle. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London. Sold in Bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s.

PLATT'S SPECIALITIES.

CHINA TEA IN THREE QUALITIES. PLATT and CO., 77, St. Martin's-lane, London, W.C., will send free to any part of England, Ireland, or Scotland, on receipt of cash with order—
First quality, 1 lb., 3s. 3d.; 2 lbs., 6s. 3d.; 4 lbs., 12s.; and 3s. extra for every further lb.
Second quality, 1 lb., 2s. 9d.; 2 lbs., 5s. 3d.; 4 lbs., 10s.; and 2s. 6d. extra for every further lb.
Third quality, 1 lb., 2s. 3d.; 2 lbs. 4s. 3d.; 4 lbs., 8s.; and 2s. extra for every further lb.
N.B.—If 2 lbs. are ordered, we charge 1d. per lb. less; if 50 lbs., 2d. per lb. less.

SPENCE and CO.—ST. PAUL'S.

SPENCE and CO.—WINTER DRESSES.

SPENCE and CO.—WINTER DRESSES.

SPENCE and CO.—WINTER DRESSES.

SPENCE and CO.—WHOLESALE CITY PRICES.

SPENCE and CO.—PATTERNS POST-FREE.

CELEBRATED OBAN CLOTH, in 100 Colours, made in three qualities, 10½d., 12½d., 1s. 4½d. per yard. Special attention is called to this wonderful Oban Cloth. J. S. and CO. have sold some thousands of pieces of this beautiful All-Wool Cloth during the last four years, and have hundreds of letters expressing entire satisfaction; in fact, it seems to be really a wear-resisting cloth; and the prices are respectively 10½d., 12½d., 1s. 4½d. per yard, (in consequence of the immense contract placed by J. S. and CO.). Ladies should write for patterns of J. S. and CO.'S Oban Cloth: it is manufactured by them in thirty-five Plain Colours, thirty-five Small Checks, and thirty-five Mixture Colours. Per yard.
Price of Plain Colours and Checks .. 10½d., 12½d., 1s. 4½d.
Price of Mixture Colours .. .. .. 1s. 4½d.

EXHIBITION CLOTH (Regd.). In forty Colours, 45 in. wide, 1s. 11½d. per yard. This cloth is one of our latest productions. It has been exhibited by us, and been very highly commended. J. S. and CO. consider this cloth the best they have ever produced for the price (viz., 1s. 11½d. per yard, 45 in. wide), and strongly recommend it to all their patrons. Of the purest and best manufacture, dyed in forty Colours, and Black; also White. Will bear exposure in any climate. Quality guaranteed. Especially suitable for Children's and Girls' hard wear.
Fifty New Colours for Season 1885.

INDIANA CLOTH (Regd.), as supplied to H.R.H. the Princess of Wales; 44 in. wide, 3s. 3d. per yard, or 8 yards for 25s.; invented and made solely by J. S. and CO.
Wholesale City Prices. Patterns post-free.
NEW ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE SENT FREE.
JAS. SPENCE and CO., 76, 77, 78, 79, ST. PAUL'S-CHURCHYARD.

RODRIGUES' MONOGRAMS, ARMS, CORONET, CREST, and ADDRESS DIES Engraved as Gems from Original and Artistic Designs. NOTE-PAPER and ENVELOPES, brilliantly Illuminated by hand in Gold, Silver, Bronze, and Colours. BEST RELIEF STAMPING, any colour, 1s. per 100. HERALDIC ENGRAVING, PAINTING, and ILLUMINATING. All the New and Fashionable Note-Papers. BALL, PROGRAMME, MENU CARDS, GUEST CARDS, WEDDING CARDS, INVITATIONS, and BOOK PLATES.

A VISITING CARD PLATE, elegantly engraved, and 100 CARDS Printed, for 4s. 6d. RODRIGUES, 42, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

MODELLING in Clay and Wax.—A Guide, by MORTON EDWARDS. Post-free, 1s. 1d. Clay, wax, stands, &c., at LECHERTIER, BARBE, and CO., 60, Regent-street, W.

BENTLEY'S FAVOURITE NOVELS.

Each Work can be had separately, price 6s., of all Booksellers, in Town or Country.

Mrs. HENRY WOOD'S
East Lynne.
Anne Hereford.
Bessy Rane.
The Channings.
Court Netherleigh.
Dene Hollow.
Edina.
Elster's Folly.
George Canterbury's Will.
Johnny Ludlow. (First Series.)
Johnny Ludlow. (Second Series.)
Lady Adelaide.
Life's Secret, A.
Lord Oakburn's Daughters.
Master of Greylands.
Mildred Arkell.
Mrs. Halliburton's Troubles.
Orville College.
Oswald Cray.
Parkwater.
Pomeroy Abbey.
Red Court Farm.
Roland Yorke.
Shadow of Ashlydyat.
St. Martin's Eve.
Trevlyn Hold.
Verner's Pride.
Within the Maze.

RHODA BROUGHTON'S
Cometh Up as a Flower.
Good-Bye, Sweetheart!
Joan. | Nancy.
Not Wisely, but too Well.
Red as a Rose is She.
Second Thoughts.
Belinda.

Mrs. ALEXANDER'S
The Admiral's Ward.
Look before you Leap.
Her Dearest Foe.
The Wooing o't.
Which shall it Be?
The Freres.

Mrs. ANNIE EDWARDES'
Leah: A Woman of Fashion.
Ought We to Visit Her?
Steven Lawrence: Yeoman.
A Ball-Room Repentance.

Mrs. RIDDELL'S
The Mystery in Palace Gardens.
Susan Drummond.
Berna Boyle. [In the press.

Mrs. PARR'S
Adam and Eve.
Dorothy Fox.

HAWLEY SMART'S
Breezie Langton.

MARCUS CLARKE'S
For the Term of His Natural Life.

FLORENCE MONTGOMERY'S
Misunderstood.
Thrown Together.
Seaforth.

JESSIE FOTHERGILL'S
The First Violin.
Probation. | Healey.
The Wellfields.
Kith and Kin.

ROSA N. CAREY'S
Wooed and Married.
Nellie's Memories.
Barbara Heathcote's Trial.
Robert Ord's Atonement.

Hon. LEWIS WINGFIELD'S
Lady Grizel.

Baroness TAUTPHŒUS'
The Initials. | Quits.

Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED'S
Policy and Passion.

HELEN MATHERS'
Comin' thro' the Rye.
Sam's Sweetheart.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE'S
The Three Clerks.

J. SHERIDAN LEFANU'S
In a Glass Darkly.

JANE AUSTEN'S
[The only complete Edition, beside the Steventon Edition, at 63s.]
Emma.
Lady Susan and The Watsons.
Mansfield Park.
Northanger Abbey and Persuasion.
Pride and Prejudice.
Sense and Sensibility.

Mrs. NOTLEY'S
Olive Varcoe.

Lady G. FULLERTON'S
Too Strange Not to be True.
Ellen Middleton.

W. CLARK RUSSELL'S
An Ocean Free-Lance.

BENTLEY'S FOREIGN FAVOURITE NOVELS.

HECTOR MALOT'S
No Relations.

Mrs. AUGUSTUS CRAVEN'S
A Sister's Story.

E. WERNER'S
No Surrender.
Success: And How He Won it.
Under a Charm.

RICHARD BENTLEY and SON,
NEW BURLINGTON-STREET, LONDON.
PUBLISHERS IN ORDINARY TO HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

CHATTO and WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.
Full List free by post.

WOMEN OF THE DAY: A Biographical Dictionary of Notable Contemporaries. By FRANCES HAYS. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 5s.

FARNELL'S FOLLY: A Novel. By J. T. TROWBRIDGE. 2 vols., crown 8vo, 12s. At all Libraries.

THE SHADOW OF A CRIME: A Novel. By HALL CAINE. 3 vols., crown 8vo. At all Libraries.

GERALD. By ELEANOR C. PRICE, Author of "Valentina." 3 vols., crown 8vo. At all Libraries.

THE LOVER'S CREED. By Mrs. CASHEL HOEY. 3 vols., crown 8vo. At all Libraries.

"THE WEARING OF THE GREEN." By BAILL, Author of "A Drawn Game," &c. 2 vols., crown 8vo. At all Libraries.

PHILISTIA. A Novel. By CECIL POWER. 3 vols., crown 8vo. At all Libraries.

STRANGE STORIES. By GRANT ALLEN (J. Arbuthnot Wilson). With a Frontispiece by George Du Maurier. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

ON THE FO'K'SLE HEAD: A Collection of Yarns and Sea Descriptions. By W. CLARK RUSSELL, Author of "The Wreck of the Grosvenor," "Round the Galley-Fire," &c. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

PRINCESS NAPRAXINE. By OUIDA. New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo, cloth extra (uniform with the Collected Edition of her Works), 6s.

THE ADVENTURES OF HUCKLEBERRY FINN. By MARK TWAIN. Crown 8vo, with 174 Illustrations by E. W. Kemble, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.

ON A MEXICAN MUSTANG. By ALEX. E. SWEET and J. ARMOY KNOX. Crown 8vo, with 265 Illustrations, cloth extra, 7s. 6d.
London: CHATTO and WINDUS, Piccadilly, W.

WARD and DOWNEY'S NEW BOOKS.
At all Libraries.

I.
LEAVES FROM THE LIFE OF A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.
By JOHN AUGUSTUS O'SHEA. 2 vols.
The "Academy" says:—"His high spirits never flag, and his readers must be singularly phlegmatic and insensitive if they do not become infected with his exuberant gaiety."

II.
THE PRETTIEST WOMAN IN WARSAW. A Novel. By MABEL COLLINS. 3 vols.

III.
NOT EVERY DAY: A Love Octave.
By CONSTANCE MAC EWEN. 2 vols.

NEW EDITIONS OF POPULAR WORKS.

I.
COURT LIFE BELOW STAIRS; or, London under the First Georges. By J. FITZGERALD MOLLOY. 6s.

II.
FOLLY MORRISON: A Novel. By FRANK BANETT, Author of "John Ford," &c. 3s. 6d.

III.
GRIF: A Story of Australian Life. By B. L. FARJEON, Author of "Great Porter-Square," &c. 3s. 6d.
WARD and DOWNEY, 12, York-street, Covent-garden, London.

One Shilling. 160th to 170th Thousand.
DARK DAYS. By HUGH CONWAY, Author of "Called Back." Being Vol. III. Arrowsmith's Bristol Library.
"An excellent story."—Dublin Evening Mail. "Will maintain his reputation and popularity as a writer."—Pall Mall Gazette. "The attention of most readers will be riveted upon this story from the first page to the last."—The Scotsman. "The reader's curiosity on the stretch."—Daily News.
Bristol: J. W. ARROWSMITH, 11, Quay-street.
London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL and Co., and all Railway Bookstalls.

NEW NOVEL BY A NEW NOVELIST.
CURRENT REPENTANCE.
By "A. B. C."
In 3 vols, price 31s. 6d. At all Libraries. [Now ready.

NEW NOVEL BY A NEW AUTHOR.
THE QUEEN OF THE MOOR. By FREDERIC ADYE. [Now ready.
In 3 vols, price 31s. 6d. At all Libraries.

NEW AND ORIGINAL NOVEL, IN ONE VOLUME.
BOULDERSTONE.
By WILLIAM SIME. [Now ready.
Price 2s., boards; 2s. 6d., cloth; 3s. 6d., half morocco (postage 4d.).

CHEAP UNIFORM EDITION OF E. SPENDER'S NOVELS.
RESTORED. By E. SPENDER, Author of "A True Marriage," &c. [Now ready.
Price 2s., boards; 2s. 6d., cloth; 3s. 6d., half morocco (postage 4d.).

CHEAP UNIFORM EDITION OF "RITA'S" NOVELS.
LIKE DIAN'S KISS. By "RITA," Author of "Dame Durden," &c. [Now ready.
Price 2s., boards; 2s. 6d., cloth; 3s. 6d., half morocco (postage 4d.).
J. and R. MAXWELL; and Libraries, Bookstalls, &c.

"Ladies who desire to be well dressed find a most valuable guide and counsellor in MYRA'S JOURNAL,
which is always early in the field with novelties."—Daily Chronicle.

NOVELTIES FOR FEBRUARY.
A COLOURED FASHION PLATE.
FULL-SIZED PAPER PATTERN of the Bolinbroke Casaque.
DIAGRAM SHEET, containing Patterns of—(1) The Vesta Mantle; (2) Lady's Chemise; (3) Corsage Mathilde; (4) Dress for a Girl.
NEW PARIS MODELS of Costumes, Toilettes, Mantles, Chapeaux, Coiffures, and Lingerie for Ladies; Costumes, Chapeaux, and Mantles for Children. Costumes, Mantles, and Chapeaux.
MODES FOR CHILDREN.
SPINNINGS IN TOWN, by the silkworm.
MYRA'S ANSWERS. Latest from Paris Gardening. New Music and Books.
MODELS from Les Grands Magasins du Louvre.
METHOD OF MOUNTING Drawings.
DRESS AND FASHION in Paris.
ANSWERS on Dress, Health and Personal Attention, Etiquette, Miscellaneous, &c.
NEEDLEWORK: Designs for Bolster Cushion, Table Cloth in Rordesley Embroidery and Crochet, Baby's Shoe, Crochet Edgings, &c.
Price Sixpence; by post, 8d.
MYRA and SON (late Goul and and Son), 33 and 40, Bedford-street, Covent-garden.

Now ready, for FEBRUARY, price 6d.,
THE QUIVER, for Sunday Reading, containing:
CHURCH WORK IN SOUTH LONDON. By the Lord Bishop of Rochester.
SOME OF THE KING'S SERVANTS.
SOME SINGULAR STEEPLES.
RESTFUL TALKS IN THE RUSH OF LIFE. By Rev. W. M. Statham.
BOODLE'S DOCTOR. Short Story.
A WORD ABOUT THE AMALEKITES. By Very Rev. Dean Martyn Hart, M.A.
SUNDAY THOUGHTS IN VENICE. By Rev. J. Stoughton.
THE GROWTH OF THE NEW TESTAMENT. By Ven. Archdeacon Lore, M.A.
"O LORD OF ALL CREATION." Original Hymn Tune.
A CHILD'S LEGACY. Short Story.
POPULAR AMERICAN PREACHERS. By Rev. L. D. Bevan, D.D.
THE MARKS OF THE LORD JESUS. By Rev. Horatius Bonar, D.D.
MOLLIE'S MAIDENS. Serial Story.
A POOR MAN'S WIFE. Serial Story, &c.
With numerous original Illustrations.
"The Quiver" is the best of all the magazines devoted to Sunday reading."—Saturday Review.
CASSELL and COMPANY, Limited, Ludgate-hill, London.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

MACMILLAN'S MAGAZINE, No. 304.
For FEBRUARY.
Price 1s.
CONTENTS OF THE NUMBER.
THE LIFE OF GEORGE ELIOT. By John Morley.
ON AN OLD SONG. By W. E. H. Lecky.
A CANADIAN HOLIDAY. By Frederick Pollock.
THE CITY COMPANIES.
VILLAGE LIFE IN SOUTH AFRICA.
LORD TENNYSON'S "BECKET."
A MILLIONAIRE'S COUSIN. Chapters IV.—VI.
REVIEW OF THE MONTH.
MACMILLAN and Co., London.

MR. HUGH CONWAY'S New Story now appearing in THE ENGLISH ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE is described as:—
"A truly admirable creation."—St. James's Gazette.
"A success on entirely different ground from what Mr. Conway has tried before."—Pall Mall Gazette.
"The situations are strong, and characterised by great humorousness."—The Graphic.
"Very well constructed, very entertaining. It does credit to the writer's versatility."—Illustrated London News.
Uniformly illust a ed. Price Sixpence; by post, Eightpence.

THE ENGLISH ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE for FEBRUARY, 1885, contains:—
I. "IN THE NUT-TREE." After a Drawing by Dewey Bates. (Frontispiece.)
II. SHAKSPEARE'S COUNTRY (concluded). By Rose Kingsley. With Illustrations by Alfred Parsons.
III. NAWORTH CASTLE. By M. Creighton. With Illustrations by George Howar
IV. THE DRAMATIC OUTLOOK. By H. A. Jones. With Illustrations by Hugh Thomson.
V. IN A SOUTH ITALIAN TAVERNA. By Charles Grant.
VI. THE GIRL AT THE GATE (concluded). By Wilkie Collins.
VII. A FAMILY AFFAIR. Chapters XIV., XV. (to be continued). By Hugh Conway, Author of "Called Back."
VIII. A CASUAL SONG. By Roden Noel.
MACMILLAN and Co., London.

Now ready.
THIRD EDITION OF MRS. HENRY WOOD'S MAGAZINE,
THE ARGOSY for JANUARY, containing the Opening Chapters of THE MYSTERY OF ALLAN GRALE.

Also ready,
THE ARGOSY for FEBRUARY.
CONTENTS.
1. THE MYSTERY OF ALLAN GRALE. Chaps. V.—VIII. With an Illustration.
2. CARAMEL COTTAGE. By Johnny Ludlow.
3. AMONG THE WELSH. By Charles W. Wood. With Numerous Illustrations.
4. HE-TER.
5. A GLOVE'S EVIDENCE.
6. IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.
Sixpence, Monthly.

"'The Argosy' is literally laden with golden grain."—Daily Telegraph.
"'The Argosy' sails as gally as ever, and the golden grain with which Mrs. Henry Wood loads her vessel shows no sign of diminution. The present number is one of the best ever issued."—Bell's Life.
"Mrs. Henry Wood's 'Argosy' is one of the brightest and most amusing as well as the cheapest amongst the English serials."—Broad Arrow.
"The best and cheapest magazine we have."—Standard.
"Johnny Ludlow's stories are almost perfect."—Spectator.
"The interest arouse d in Johnny Ludlow is considerable."—Saturday Review.
THIRD EDITION for JANUARY now ready.
Sixpence, Monthly.
RICHARD BENTLEY and SON, 8, New Burlington-street, W.

Now ready (Sixpence), New Series, No. 20,
THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE for FEBRUARY.
CONTENTS.
RAINBOW GOLD. By David Christie Murray. Book I.—How Hercule Asmodée Bonaventure enlisted Job Round. Chaps. IV.—VI.
EXPERTS IN HANDWRITING.
THE DAISYCLIFFE MYSTERY. Illustrated by M. Fitzgerald.
DE SANANA.
THE TALK OF THE TOWN. By James Payn. Chap. XXXI.—The Messenger of Disgrace. Chap. XXXII.—The Feet of Clay. Chap. XXXIII.—Breaking it. Chap. XXXIV.—A Comforter. Chap. XXXV.—Farewell. With Illustrations by Harry Furniss.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 15, Waterloo-place.

THIS PART BEGINS A NEW VOLUME.
CHAMBERS'S JOURNAL for FEBRUARY.
PRISON LITERATURE.
MY EXTRAORDINARY FRIEND.
SOME INDIAN HERBS AND POISONS.
CLOUD AND SUNSHINE IN LANCASHIRE.
VICTUALS IN SCOTLAND IN THE OLDEN TIMES.
FINISH.
HOME NURSING: V. By a Lady.
CURIOUS EPITAPHS.
THE MANUFACTURE OF PAPER FROM WOOD.
OUTSIDE LONDON. By Richard Jefferies.
THE BURIED CITIES.
KNOWECROFT. A Cumberland Idyll.
TO THE POINT.
CANINE AFFECTION IN CEYLON.
A NEW EXPLOSIVE.
TO AN ENGLISH GIRL. Poem by Alexander Anderson.
THE STORY OF THE CHANCERY FUNDS.
THE QUANDONG'S SECRET.
ODDITIES OF ANIMAL LIFE IN THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS.
SOME STAGE TRADES.
MY IRISH CORRESPONDENTS.
THE MONTH: SCIENCE AND ARTS.
OIL ON TROUBLED WATERS.
HERM.
OCCASIONAL NOTES.
POETICAL PIECES.
First Instalment of a New Novel,
A HOUSE DIVIDED AGAINST ITSELF.
By Mrs. OLIPHANT. Chaps. I.—V.
Price 6d.
W. and R. CHAMBERS, 47, Paternoster-row, London; and Edinburgh.

New and Enlarged Edition, post-free, 2s. 6d.,
ON PARALYSIS, Loss of Power in the Muscles or Joints, Locomotor Ataxy, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and other Affections of the Brain and Spinal Cord. A Practical Treatise explaining the Causes, Treatment, and Cure of those Diseases; with Directions for Diet. By S. BERRY NIBLETT, Licentiate of the Royal College of Physicians. Published by Mr. WILLIAMS, 10, Oxford-terrace, Hyde Park, London.

UNIVERSALLY PRESCRIBED BY THE FACULTY.
A laxative and Dinner Fruit Lozenge.
TAMAR For CONSTIPATION, Hæmorrhoids, Bile, Headache, Loss of Appetite, Cerebral Congestion.
INDIEN Prepared by E. GRILLON, Chemist of the Paris Faculty, 69, Queen-street, City, London.
GRILLON. Tamar, unlike Pills and the usual Purgatives, is agreeable to take, and never produces irritation, nor interferes with business or pleasure.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists, 2s. 6d. a Box, Stamp included.

DR. LIEB'S EDIBLE FRUIT PILLS may be eaten like a sweetmeat. Renowned for their efficacy in constipation, bile, indigestion, and all ailments of the stomach.

A DELICIOUS MEDICINE, eagerly taken by children and the delicate. Highly recommended by the Faculty. Of all Chemists, at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., per box; or post-free of the consignees, A. POSENER and CO., 61, Mansell-street, London.

IN ONE NIGHT CHILBLAINS, CHAPS, and Light Cutaneous Affections are cured by LA CRÈME SIMON. Recommended by all the celebrated Doctors of Paris, and adopted by every Lady who is anxious to preserve her complexion. Price 4s. and 2s. 6d.
LA POUDRE SIMON and the SAVON A LA CRÈME SIMON have the same perfume as the Crème, and possess the same qualities. These excellent preparations may be obtained from J. SIMON, 36, Rue de Provence, Paris (the Inventor); or G. GIVEN, 38, Cavendish-street, Bond-street, London, W.; and in the principal towns of England and abroad, from Chemists and Perfumers.

SEEDS! SEEDS! SEEDS!
Before purchasing your Spring Supply, send for DANIELS'
ILLUSTRATED GUIDE for AMATEUR GARDENERS.
Magnificent Coloured Illustrations of
FLOWERS, FRUITS, AND VEGETABLES,
104 pages beautifully Illustrated Letterpress.
This Catalogue may justly be termed the
GEM OF THE SEASON.
Price 1s., post-free.
Gratis to Customers.
DANIELS BROS., Seed Merchants, Norwich.

HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN AND THE IRISH POPLIN TRADE.

Within the past few days, Her Majesty has favoured

MESSRS. R. ATKINSON and CO.,
31, COLLEGE-GREEN, DUBLIN,

with an order for several dresses for the Trousseau of

HER ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCESS BEATRICE, comprising an Ivory-White and Gold Poplin, in Oriental design; one of Poppy Red, in the richest quality; and one of Ciel Bleu, closely covered with Forget-me-nots.

HER ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCESS OF WALES

has also been pleased to order some dresses from Messrs. R. ATKINSON and CO., in Cardinal and Olive Green, in the New Makes, so much in public favour.

PATTERNS of this BEAUTIFUL and USEFUL MATERIAL, in Black and Colours, can be had post-free on application to 31, COLLEGE-GREEN, DUBLIN.

JAY'S HALF-YEARLY SALE.

BLACK SILKS, warranted to be made by Bonnet, of Lyons, 3s. 6d. per yard.

RICH FIGURED VELVETS, 6s. 9d. per yard.

BLACK SILKS of every kind proportionately cheap, but there will be no reduction on the Satin Duchesse, as sold by Messrs. JAY at 3s. per yard.

COSTUMES.—An elegant and rich variety of BLACK SILK, Velvet, and other Costumes, the product more or less of this season, marked in plain figures, and showing the reduction in the prices. But the 5 and 6 guinea Silk Costumes (including sufficient materials for mantle bodice) lately sold by Messrs. JAY will not be altered in price.

MANTLES.—A large and costly collection of FRENCH MODEL MANTLES, by Worth, Pinet, and other artistes, at common prices.

FASHIONABLE BONNETS, HATS, and other incidental MILLINERY, COLLARS, CUFFS, &c., generally REDUCED IN PRICES, and among these useful ends many will be found worth inspection.

BLACK STUFFS.—In the Black Stuff Department the prices are generally lowered, and some fine Cashmeres and other good Woollen Manufactures are very cheap; but the All-Wool Foule, as usually sold by Messrs. JAY at 1s. per yard, will remain at the same cost.

FURS.—Owing to the mild weather, the Stock of superior Sealskin and rich Fur-trimmed Mantles has not been so freely sold as was anticipated; therefore these luxuries are reduced to every-day prices.

HOSIERY.—There is no reduction in the French Gloves sold at 2s. 6d. per pair, but sundry Lisle Thread Hose, 1s. 11d. per pair; Cashmere, ribbed and plain, at 1s. 11d.; pure Silk, ladies' small size, 3s. 6d. per pair; and Cashmere Jerseys, braided, from 15s. 6d., worth notice, and very cheap.

THE CRÊPE IMPÉRIAL, specialty in the Black Department, remains at the same price.

THE SALE does not in any way affect the execution of Mourning orders, a special staff being retained for that purpose.

JAY'S,
THE LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE.
REGENT-STREET.

TO TAILORS and WOOLLEN BUYERS.
We are selling all classes of Woollen Goods and Tailors' Trimmings at Lower Prices than ever. Before buying your spring parcels, inspect our Stock, or write for patterns, stating class of Goods required.
ALFRED BROWN and SONS, 8, Holborn-circus, London, E.C.

ÆGIDIUS.—The only Flannel Shirts that Never Shrink in Washing.
Three for 3s. 6d.
R. FORD and CO., 41, Poultry, London.

ÆGIDIUS.—Three for 3s. 6d.
Soft as Silk, and very Elastic.
Free by parcels post.
R. FORD and CO., 41, Poultry, London.

SHEFFIELD CORPORATION THREE-AND-A-HALF PER CENT REDEEMABLE STOCK.
Minimum Price, £20 per cent.
The Corporation of Sheffield are receiving applications for the above stock.
Prospectuses and any further information will be supplied by Bridge-street, Sheffield. BENJAMIN JONES, Registrar.

A SIMPLE FACT ABOUT KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—There is absolutely no remedy that is so speedy in giving relief, so certain to cure, and yet the most delicate can take them. One Lozenge gives ease. Sold in 1½d. Tins.

NEW MUSIC.

TRIAL BY JURY. By W. S. Gilbert and ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Now performing at the Savoy Theatre. Complete words and music, 3s. net; pianoforte solo, 2s. 6d. net.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S LATEST SUCCESSES:

BID ME GOOD-BYE. Music by TOSTI.

BID ME GOOD-BYE. Words by Weatherly.

BID ME GOOD-BYE. "A tuneful ditty in valse rhythm; is certain to acquire vast popularity."—Times, Jan 9.

BID ME GOOD-BYE. "A most exquisite song."

BID ME GOOD-BYE VALSE. By H. W. DE CAMORS. On the melody of Tosti's newest and most successful song.

BID ME GOOD-BYE VALSE. Played with immense success by Liddell's Band, Coote's Band, and the Bijou Orchestra; also at the Strand and Adelphi Theatres every night.

Price 2s. net.

P. BUCALOSSI.

PHYLLIS WALTZ.

MERRY FOOTSTEPS POLKA. Both played nightly at the Haymarket Theatre with great success. Price 2s. each net.

CAROLINE LOWTHIAN.

BLACK AND TAN POLKA. This will be the polka of the season.

FAHRWOHL WALTZ. Price 2s. each net.

LUKE WHEELER.

TOI SEULE WALTZ.

LOYAUTÉ WALTZ.

CHIC POLKA.

SEA BREEZE POLKA. "The Sea Breeze Polka is one of the best and most spirited polkas which has been published for a long time."—Morning Post. Price 2s. each net.

CLAIRE WALTZ. By LEONARD GAUTIER. Illustrated with a beautiful photo of Mrs. Kendal. Price 2s. net.

CHAPPELL and CO. have on view every description of PIANOFORTES by the best makers, returned from hire, to be SOLD at greatly reduced prices for cash, or may be purchased on the Three-Years' System.
CHAPPELL PIANOFORTES, from 15 guineas.
COLLARD PIANOFORTES, from 15 guineas.
ERARD PIANOFORTES, from 35 guineas.
BROADWOOD PIANOFORTES, from 35 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO'S STUDENT'S PIANOFORTES, from 16 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S PIANINOS, with Check Action, from 28 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S IRON-FRAMED OBLIQUE and COTTAGE PIANOFORTES for Ocean Steamers and Extreme Climates, from 35 to 65 guineas.

CHAPPELL and CO. have on View Grand Pianofortes from 50 to 250 guineas.
50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry.

EDWIN ASHDOWN, Hanover-square, forwards Catalogues of his 20,000 MUSICAL WORKS post-free to all parts of the world.

ASHDOWN EDITION of STANDARD PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

	Net, s. d.
1. Chopin's Twenty-seven Studies	2 6
2. Stephen Heller's Album. Op. 13	1 6
3. Henri Roubier's 2r Melodies of Franz Schubert	2 0
4. Stephen Heller's Twenty-four Preludes. Op. 81	1 6
5. Chopin's Eighteen Nocturnes	2 0
6. Czerny's One Hundred and One Exercises	1 0
7. Czerny's Etude de la Velocité	2 0
8. Schumann's Phantasiestücke. Op. 12	1 6
9. Schubert's Eight Impromptus	2 0
10. Liszt's Soirees de Vienne	2 6
11. Clementi's Six Sonatinas. Op. 36	1 0
12. Stephen Heller's Thirty-two Preludes. Op. 119	1 6
13. Reinstein's Soirees à St. Petersbourg. 6 Morceaux	1 0
14. Chopin's Forty-three Mazurkas	3 0
15. Schumann's Album für die Jugend. Op. 68	1 6
16. Rinck's Six Sonatinas. Op. 20	1 0
17. Gottschalk Selection No. 1 (Pasquinade and five others)	1 0
18. Kuhlau's Six Sonatinas. Op. 55	1 0
19. Chopin's Eight Waltzes	1 6
20. Kullak's Youthful Days. 24 Characteristic Pieces	1 6
21. Kessler's Twenty-four Studies	2 6
22. Clementi's Six Sonatinas. Op. 37 and 38	1 6

ASHDOWN EDITION of STANDARD VOCAL MUSIC.

	Net, s. d.
1. Concone. 50 Singing Lessons (pour le médium de la voix)	1 6
2. Comalimo Perugini. Six Lessons for Two Voices	1 0
3. Niels W. Gade. Eight Vocal Duets (English and German)	1 0
4. Franz Abt. 10 Vocal Duets (English and German Words)	2 0
5. Romanini and Nava. 12 Solfeggios for Contralto Voice	2 0
6. Kotter. Eight Vocal Duets (English and German Words)	1 0
7. Panseron. The Elements of singing	1 0
8. W. S. Bennett. Six Songs. (English and German)	1 0

All the above Works sent, post-free, at prices quoted.

TO LADIES.—SALE of NEW MUSIC at a large reduction and post-free. All new Songs, Pieces, &c., of all publishers in stock. New copies, best editions. Prices commence 6d., 8d. Catalogues sent post-free. CATALOGUES sent post-free.
J. W. MOFFATT, 3, Barnsbury-street, London, N. Established 1827.

BROADWOOD'S PIANOFORTES. CRAMER'S SUPPLY every size of these INSTRUMENTS on their Three-Years' System of Hire.
207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

ERARD'S PIANOFORTES.—CRAMER'S SUPPLY every size of these INSTRUMENTS on their Three-Years' System of Hire.—207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

COLLARD'S PIANOFORTES. CRAMER'S SUPPLY every size of these INSTRUMENTS on their Three-Years' System of Hire.
207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

GRAND PIANOFORTES. — CRAMER'S SUPPLY GRAND PIANOFORTES by all the great makers, from £7 7s. to £25 10s. per quarter. Full Price-Lists post-free.—207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—Messrs. ERARD, of 18, Great Marlborough-street, London, and 13, Rue de Mail, Paris, Makers to her Majesty and the Prince and Princess of Wales, CAUTION the Public that Pianofortes are being sold bearing the name of "Erard" which are not of their manufacture. For information as to authenticity apply at 18, Great Marlborough-st., where new Pianos can be obtained from 30 guineas.

ERARDS' PIANOS.—COTTAGES, from 50 guineas.
OBLIQUES, from 85 guineas.
GRANDS, from 125 guineas.

D'ALMAINE'S PIANOS Half Price, from £25. D'ALMAINE'S AMERICAN ORGANS from £5. All full compass, warranted for ten years; carriage free, and all risk taken. Easiest terms arranged. Established 100 years.
91, Finsbury-pavement, City, E.C.

MOORE and MOORE'S Iron Pianofortes, from 36 guineas, on Three-Years' System, carriage free. Liberal discount for cash. Illustrated Price-Lists post-free. Pianofortes from 14 guineas.—104 and 105, Bishopsgate Within.

NEW MUSIC.

BOOSEY and CO.'S NEW SONGS. 2s. each.

OUR LAST WALTZ. New Romantic Song. By MOLLOY.

OUR LAST WALTZ. Words by Weatherly.

OUR LAST WALTZ. Sung by Miss Agnes Larkcom, Miss Damian, and Madame de Fonblanque.

OUR LAST WALTZ. Arranged also as a Dance. By LAMOTHE.

OUR LAST WALTZ. Both Editions are illustrated with a beautiful Vignette.
BOOSEY and Co.

LADY ARTHUR HILL'S NEW SONG.

TWO THOUGHTS. By the Composer of "In the Gloaming."

BY THE COMPOSER OF "SWINGING."

A PENNY FOR YOUR THOUGHTS. Sung by Miss Mary Davies.—BOOSEY and Co.

SATURDAY NIGHT. By MOLLOY.

STEPHEN ADAMS' NEW SONGS.

THE MAID OF THE MILL.

SHIPWRECKED. Also new editions of "The Owl" and "The Little Hero."

MARZIALS' NEW SONGS.

MAY MARGARET. Sung by Miss Mary Davies.

THE RIVER OF YEARS. (Miss Eleanor Rees.)

NEVER TO KNOW. Also new editions of "Leaving yet Loving," and "Ask Nothing More."

MARZIALS' POPULAR BALLADS.
The Miller and the Maid. | Just as Well.
A Summer Shower. | Twickenham Ferry.
The Three Sailor-Boys. | In the North Countree.

BY THE COMPOSER OF "ONLY ONCE MORE."

THE LAST REGRET.

CAN IT BE TRUE?

STEADY AND READY. Soldier's Song. By LOUIS DIEHL.

DADDY. By BEHREND.

DADDY. By KUHE.

SANTLEY'S SUCCESSFUL SONGS.
One Night came on a Hurricane. | Father O'Flynn.
Gipsy John. | The Boatswain's Story.
BOOSEY and Co., London.

POPULAR PIANOFORTE MUSIC IN THE CAVENDISH MUSIC BOOKS.
Full Music size, 1s. each; post-free, 1s. 2d.

80. SELECTION OF STERNDALE BENNETT'S PIECES, including the "Musical Sketches."
57. SELECTION OF PIECES BY GOTTSCHALK (1st Book).
72. Ditto, Ditto, Ditto. (2nd Book).
56. SELECTION OF PIECES BY SCHULOFF.
26. SEVENTEEN CLASSICAL MELODIES.
27. TWENTY-ONE SACRED READINGS.
28. TWENTY-SIX BRILLIANT SELECTIONS OF THE OPERA.
29. ALBUM OF TWELVE GAVOTTES.
34. ALBUM OF EIGHTEEN MINUETS.
42. ALBUM OF EIGHTEEN OLD DANCES.
43. ALBUM OF TWELVE POLONAISES.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

NEW SONGS IN THE CAVENDISH MUSIC BOOKS.
Price 1s. each.

77. EIGHTEEN SONGS FOR YOUNG GIRLS.
78. TEN SONGS OF THE DAY, including "When the Heart is Young," "Mignonette," and "Do not forget."
46. TEN SONGS OF THE DAY, including "Twickenham Ferry" and "Olivia."
68. TEN SONGS OF THE DAY, including "She wandered down" and "It was a Dream."
47. EIGHT SONGS by ARTHUR SULLIVAN, including "Looking Back."
65. TEN NEW BARITONE SONGS, sung by Santley and Maybrick.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

THE DIAMOND MUSIC BOOKS, 32 and 40 pages, price 6d. each.

1. The Singing Master.	10. Sacred Songs (46).
2. The Music Master (Piano).	11. Scotch Songs (30).
3. The Violin Master.	12. Irish Songs (30).
4. Family Glee Book (40 Glees and Part-Songs).	13. Old English Songs (30).
5. Harmonium Voluntary Book (50 pieces).	14. Modern Songs (30), Book 1.
6. Select Piano Pieces (6).	15. Ditto (10), Book 2.
7. Ditto (10).	16. New American Songs (12).
8. Gavottes and Minuets (12).	17. Songs of the Sea (15).
9. Marches (14).	18. Country Dances, &c. (75).
	19. Juvenile Pianoforte Book.
	20. Juvenile Song Book (41).

BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

CHURCH AND TURRET CLOCKS.

J. W. BENSON, maker of many of the best known CHURCH and TURRET CLOCKS. Now making the GREAT ILLUMINATED CLOCK for the HUSAINABAD TOWER, LUCKNOW, to show time on four dials 13 ft. in diameter and quarter on bells of 24 tons. Also the Clock for NEW COLLEGE, OXFORD, &c. Estimates and specifications for all kinds of Church, Turret, Stable, and Factory Clocks, on application to the Steam Factory (the only one in the City of London where Turret Clocks can be seen in process of manufacture).—J. W. BENSON, the Steam Factory, Ludgate-hill and Old Bond-street, W.

ELKINGTON and CO.
ELECTRO and SILVER PLATE.
CLOCKS and BRONZES.
DIRECT FROM THE MANUFACTURERS.

ELKINGTON and CO.
TABLE and TESTIMONIAL PLATE.
DESIGNS and PHOTOGRAPHS SUPPLIED TO COMMITTEES.

ELKINGTON and CO.—CAUTION.
SEE ALL GOODS MARKED, "E and CO." IN SHIELD.
ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST-FREE.

ELKINGTON and CO.,
MANUFACTURING SILVERSMITHS,
22, Regent-street, Moorgate-st., City, Birmingham, Liverpool, and Manchester.

JOHN BROGDEN, deceased.
The VALUABLE STOCK of ART-JEWELLERY is NOW FOR SALE, at a REASONABLE REDUCTION, for a LIMITED TIME, by order of the Executors.
6, GRAND HOTEL-BUILDINGS, CHARING-CROSS.

WALKER'S CRYSTAL CASE WATCHES are superseding all others. Prize Medals—London, 1862; Paris, 1867. Silver Watches, from £4 4s.; Gold, from £6 6s. Price-Lists sent free.—77, Cornhill; and 230, Regent-street.

HOOPING COUGH.
ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION.
The celebrated effectual cure without internal medicine. Sole Wholesale Agents, W. EDWARDS and SON, 157, Queen Victoria-street (formerly of 67, St. Paul's-churchyard), London, whose names are engraved on the Government Stamp.
Sold by most Chemists. Price 4s. per Bottle.

NEW MUSIC.

NEW AND SUCCESSFUL SONGS.

PEGGY O' YARMOUTH TOWN. By FREDERICK BEVAN.
PEGGY O' YARMOUTH TOWN. By FREDERICK BEVAN.
PEGGY O' YARMOUTH TOWN. By FREDERICK BEVAN.
Sung by Mr. Franklin Clive, Mr. Frederick Bevan, Mr. Theodore Distin, Mr. James Budd, Mr. Horscroft, &c.
2s. net.

TWO BELLS. By MICHAEL WATSON.
Sung by Mr. Barrington Foote.
Words by Knight Summers.
2s. net.

GOOD-NIGHT, ROBIN. By J. L. ROECKEL.
Sung by Madame Patey.
Words by Fred E. Weatherly.
2s. net.

NEW DANCE MUSIC FOR THE SEASON.

L'AMOUR IMMORTEL VALSE. Par FABIAN RUSE.
Best Waltz of the season.
L'AMOUR IMMORTEL.
L'AMOUR IMMORTEL.
2s. net.

LA COQUETTE VALSE.
Par TITO MATTEI.
2s. net.

MADAME DU BARRY VALSE.
Par EDOUARD AMILLON.
2s. net.

OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE QUADRILLES.
By ETTORE PANIZZA.
2s. net.
PATEY and WILLIS, 44, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

PRETTY NEW SONGS THAT CAPTIVATE THE WORLD.

HOME DREAMS. By A. H. BEHREND.
"A charming song; will prove a great success."
"A pretty story, clothed in simple music."
"A most effective song, easy and brilliant."
F, G (D to E), A and B flat.

THE LIGHT OF THE LAND. PINSUTI.
"A grand and impressive song."
"A song of uncommon beauty and merit."
"Will maintain its composer's high reputation."
B flat, C (C to E), and F.

JEM. A Merry Song by COTSFORD DICK.
"Replete with dry humour."
"A bright, sparkling, and humorous song."
"The finest song for concerts and penny readings."
D, E flat (E to E), and F.

THE CLANG OF THE HAMMER. BONHEUR.
"A bold, vigorous, and spirited song."
"A dashing and powerful bass or baritone song."
F, G (B to D), and B flat.

SURELY. New Song. By A. H. BEHREND.
15,620 copies sold first month of issue.
"The greatest success of modern times."
E flat, F, G (compass D to E), A flat, B flat, and C.
The above New Songs post-free 24 stamps each.

W. MORLEY and CO.,
269, Regent-street, W.; and 70, Upper-street, N.

LOVED VOICES. LOVED VOICES.

LOVED VOICES.

EDITH COOKE'S CHARMING NEW SONG.
In F, E flat, and G. 2s. net.
Published also as a Vocal Duet. 2s. net.

MY HEART'S MESSAGE.

BEHREND'S LATEST SONG.
Will undoubtedly prove a great success.
In keys to suit all voices.
2s. net.

MY HEART'S MESSAGE.
Of all Musicsellers.
ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street, London.

CHARLES HALLÉ'S PRACTICAL PIANOFORTE SCHOOL.
New and Enlarged Edition.
Charles Hallé's New Pianoforte Tutor.
The best and most popular Tutor ever published.
Charles Hallé's Musical Library.
Entirely remodelled and enlarged.
Catalogues post-free on application.
FORSYTH BROTHERS, London and Manchester.

THREE NEW PIECES FOR THE PIANOFORTE. By STEPHEN HELLER.
FABLIAU. Op. 155.
CAPRICIEUSETTE. Op. 156.
TROIS FEUILLETS D'ALBUM. Op. 157.
Price 2s. each, net.
FORSYTH BROTHERS, London and Manchester.

DOMINION ORGANS.
A Large Stock of these celebrated Organs always on view. Considered the finest-toned American Organs yet produced. A New two-manual pedal Organ just introduced, style 95. Catalogues post-free.
FORSYTH BROTHERS, 272, Regent-circus, Oxford-street, London; and 122 and 124, Deansgate, Manchester.

PLEYEL, WOLFF, and CO.'S PIANOS were

CHOPIN'S favourite instruments. The most perfect in touch and tone of any introduced, whether English or Foreign. For SALE or HIRE, on the THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM, of the Sole Agents,
I. BERROW and CO., 170, New Bond-street, London, W.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR LIVER.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR BILE.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR INDIGESTION.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR HEARTBURN.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY for the HAIR. If your hair is turning grey, or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White Hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. "The Mexican Hair Renewer" is sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 3s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE. For the Teeth and Breath. Is the best Liquid Dentifrice in the world; it thoroughly cleanses partially-decayed teeth from all parasites or living "animalculæ," leaving them pearly white, imparting a delightful fragrance to the breath. The Fragrant Floriline removes instantly all odours arising from a foul stomach or tobacco smoke; being partly composed of honey, soda, and extracts of sweet herbs and plants, it is perfectly delicious to the taste, and as harmless as sherry. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers every where, at 2s. 6d. per Bottle.

GOUT and RHEUMATISM
Cured by the use of
DR. LAVILLE'S LIQUOR and PILLS.
Approved of by Dr. Oscian Henry, Analytical Chemist of the Académie de Médecine of Paris.
The Liquor to be used in acute state of gout or rheumatism; the Pills in chronical state.
Wholesale: COMAR, 38, Rue St. Claude, Paris.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists.

TO MANITOBA.
The Completion of
THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY
(which is the ONLY DIRECT ROUTE to the Canadian North-West) to the summit of the Rocky Mountains has thrown open to settlement some of the finest Agricultural Lands in Manitoba and the North-West, of which the Dominion Government offer ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES FREE.
For further information apply to any Steam-ship Agent; and for new maps, pamphlets, and the fullest particulars about the country (free of charge), as well as the new tourist guide, "From Quebec to the Rocky Mountains," when published, apply either personally or by letter to
ALEXANDER BEGG,
Canadian Pacific Railway Offices,
88, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

WANTED, Respectable Young Women, as DOMESTIC SERVANTS, to proceed to NEW SOUTH WALES. Passages, including Provisions, Bedding, &c., will be granted by the Agent-General in first-class steamers to approved applicants, upon payment of £2 each. An experienced Surgeon and Matron accompany each ship. Single Females are quickly engaged at good wages on their arrival in Sydney; but, if desired, the Government will provide them with free accommodation for ten days. The next steamer will be dispatched about Feb. 25. Further information may be obtained at the EMIGRATION DEPARTMENT, New South Wales Government Offices, 5, Westminster-chambers, Victoria-street, Westminster, S.W.

CHOCOLAT MENIER. Awarded the GRAND DIPLOMA OF HONOUR.
AMSTERDAM EXHIBITION, 1883.

CHOCOLAT MENIER, in ½ lb. and ¼ lb. PACKETS.
For BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, and SUPPER.

CHOCOLAT MENIER.—Awarded Twenty-Eight PRIZE MEDALS.
Consumption annually exceeds 25,000,000 lb.

CHOCOLAT MENIER. Paris, London, New York.
Sold Everywhere.

GOLD MEDAL, Calcutta Exhibition, 1884.

FRY'S COCOA. FRY'S CARACAS COCOA. "A most delicious and valuable article."—Standard.
PURE COCOA ONLY.
FRY'S COCOA EXTRACT. "Strictly pure, easily assimilated."—W. W. STODDART, Analyst for Bristol.
NINETEEN PRIZE MEDALS.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA.
Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder.
Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa, with excess of Fat extracted. Four times the strength of Cocoas Thickened yet Weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c., and in reality cheaper.
The faculty pronounce it the most nutritious, perfectly digestive Beverage for "BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, or SUPPER." Keeps for years in all Climates. Requires no Cooking. A teaspoonful to Breakfast-Cup costing less than a halfpenny.
In Air-Tight Tins, 1s. 6d., 3s., &c., by Chemists and Grocers.
H. SCHWEITZER and CO., 10, Adam-street, Strand, W.C.

TRELOAR'S
BRUSSELS CARPETS.

3s. 3d. per yard.	4s. 3d. per yard.
3s. 6d. " "	4s. 6d. " "
3s. 9d. " "	4s. 9d. " "
4s. 0d. " "	5s. 0d. " "

Exclusive in design. Special in quality.
TRELOAR and SONS, LUDGATE-HILL.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
EPPS'S (BREAKFAST) COCOA.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.
Made simply with boiling water or milk.
Sold in Packets, labelled
JAMES EPPS and CO., HOMŒOPATHIC CHEMISTS.
Also Makers of EPPS'S CHOCOLATE ESSENCE.

CHUBB'S PATENT LOCKS.
CASH AND DEED BOXES.
TWENTY MEDALS awarded at the various International Exhibitions.
68, ST. JAMES'S-STREET, PALL-MALL.
128, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, E.C.
Price-Lists Post-free.

INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION,
South Kensington.—London, 1884.
GOLD MEDAL AWARDED for EXCELLENCE of QUALITY to SALT and CO.,
EAST INDIA PALE and BURTON ALE BREWERS.
Stores and Offices—31 to 37, Pancras-road, London.

LIST of Prices to be obtained of all the principal Dealers.

DRIVING BY NIGHT.
The LIGHT from a PAIR of WESTWAY'S PATENT LAMPS is equal to that from SIX ORDINARY CARRIAGE LAMPS.
These LAMPS are STRONGLY MADE and PERFECTLY VENTILATED.
A pair will be SENT on APPROVAL, CARRIAGE PAID, and a FAIR TRIAL ALLOWED, on receipt of a remittance.
SOLD by all CARRIAGE-BUILDERS.
PARSONS and CHAPMAN, TAVISTOCK.

COLDS CURED BY
DR. DUNBAR'S ALKARAM, or Anti-Catarrh Smelling Bottle.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
IF inhaled on the first symptoms, ALKARAM will at once arrest them, and cure severe cases in half an hour. Sold by all Chemists, 2s. 9d. a Bottle. Address, Dr. Dunbar, care of Messrs F. Newbery and Sons, 1, King Edward-st., E.C.

NUDA VERITAS.—GREY HAIR restored by this specific; after which it grows the natural colour, not grey. Unequalled as a dressing. It causes growth, arrests falling, and ITS use defies detection. The most harmless and effectual restorer extant. One trial will convince it has no equal. Price 10s. 6d., of all Chemists and Hairdressers. Testimonials free. Agents, R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

GOLDEN HAIR.—Robare's AUREOLINE produces the beautiful golden colour so much admired. Warranted perfectly harmless. Price 6s. 6d. and 10s. 6d., of all principal Perfumers and Chemists throughout the world.
Agents, R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

TOWLE'S PENNYROYAL and STEEL PILLS for FEMALES. Sold in Boxes, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d., of all Chemists. Sent anywhere on receipt of 15 or 34 stamps by the maker, E. T. TOWLE, Chemist, Nottingham.

DRAWN BY F. BARNARD.

He could only stand and look at her as she faced him there, with the sinking sun making a blaze of sea and sky behind her and turning her hair into a nimbus.

ADRIAN VIDAL.

BY W. E. NORRIS,

AUTHOR OF "MDLLE. DE MERSAC," "MATRIMONY," "THIRLBY HALL," &C.

CHAPTER VIII.

CARDREW.

Chance, which plays a considerable part in the lives of most people, is responsible for all the works and ways of a few. Chance took Mr. Irvine to Cornwall on his wedding-trip, some five-and-twenty years before the opening of the present narrative; chance led him to Polruth; the chance of his wife's having caught a cold in her head kept him for two days in that unfrequented fishing-hamlet; and chance caused him to walk up to the old grey house called Cardrew, which stands just beneath the brow of the hills above the village. Cardrew had been many years for sale, and its appearance at that time was hardly calculated to attract purchasers, its garden being an overgrown wilderness, its windows for the most part broken, and every fence and gate about it rotting away from neglect and age. But Mr. Irvine, who possessed a comfortable fortune and no home, happened to have his pockets stuffed full of house-agents' lists, and was anticipating, with the misery of an undecided man, a long period of house-hunting. Here was a house to be sold—a solid, well-built, roomy house, with a sufficiency of land about it, a healthy position, and an admirable prospect. What a deal of worry might be saved by securing it and making it habitable! He consulted his wife, and had the happiness to find that her views coincided with his own. There was certainly no reason why they should establish themselves in Cornwall, with which county they had no family connection; but, on the other hand, there was no particular reason why they should not. So the old place was bought for a mere song, and, the necessary repairs having been completed, Mr. and Mrs. Irvine took possession.

There they settled down and multiplied, as the years went on, with satisfaction to themselves and to those who dwelt around them. The neighbours, high and low—there were not a great many of either class—soon became attracted to this simple couple, and freely forgave them for not having been born and bred in the duchy. Mrs. Irvine, active, restless, and profoundly interested in local affairs, while keeping open her many lines of communication with the outer world, was in more ways than one a godsend to the parish. Her blunders, it is true, were many and frequent, but they were very seldom harmful, and though some people might occasionally find her a bore, no one had ever been heard to accuse her of selfishness or ill-nature. As for her husband, he was liked, as most of us learn to like the inanimate objects upon which our eyes rest every day. His long hair, his devious gait, and somewhat vacant smile became familiar to Polruth, and would, if they had disappeared, have been missed almost as much as the yew-tree in the churchyard or Daniel Chenoweth's old grey mare. In due time, his appointment as a magistrate added a touch of dignity to his harmless, desultory existence; but he was seldom seen two miles away from home, except when the news of an impending sale took him up to London, whence he would return laden with spoils in the shape of antiquities or additions to what was fast becoming one of the finest numismatic collections in the west of England.

When six boys and a girl had to be fed, clothed, and educated, the acquisition of these ancient coins entailed a rather larger outlay of modern ones than was quite convenient; but living at Polruth is very cheap, and although the Irvines were sometimes obliged to consider expense, they could not be said to have ever really felt the pinch of poverty. The boys grew up into young men with that amazing rapidity which is common to the human race, but which is perhaps more noticeable in quiet neighbourhoods than in cities. The girl, as we have seen, developed into a singularly beautiful young woman, and was not so conscious of the fact as she might have been if anyone or anything, except her looking-glass, had informed her of it.

But she did not consult her glass more often than was necessary for the purposes of the toilet, and in the immediate vicinity of Polruth there dwelt no young man of her own rank. Her occupations, after she had been released from the authority of her governess, were so few that she would have found time hang heavily on her hands had she not been bred to the enjoyment of still life: her amusements were for the most part such as her brothers could join in, and her knowledge of the world was gleaned solely from what they told her and from books, of which she was an eager and untrammelled devourer.

Thus it came to pass that Anglo-Roman society was astounded, one winter, by the appearance in its midst of that rare phenomenon, a totally unselfconscious beauty. That she did not receive at least a dozen offers during the three months which she spent with her parents on the banks of the Tiber, was probably due to the circumstance that she was at once monopolised by Mr. Wilbraham; to which cause may also be assigned her willingness to leave scenes which, to her inexperienced eyes, far surpassed all that had ever been said or written about them. For she did not wish to marry this man. Nature was beginning to awaken in her; in a vague, dreamy way she realised the possibilities of life and love, and felt within herself a capacity for happiness such as she knew of only by hearsay. Carriages, diamonds, and the other adjuncts of wealth tempted her very little, nor did it occur to her to desire the love of a man who could give her these pleasant things. Yet Mr. Wilbraham, viewed in the abstract, was very desirable. He had large estates, he had powerful connections, and he was more than usually pleasing in person and manners. Such a highly favoured individual is not to be rejected without reasons, and reasons were precisely what Clare could not give for rejecting him. When Mrs. Irvine, with some natural impatience, asked her what she would have, she could only reply that she didn't know; and when her suitor roundly declared that he would not take No for an answer, she thought of all that he could do for the boys, and hesitated. Like many other young persons, she was subject to fits of melancholy which nothing in her circumstances warranted. It seemed to her that hers was a purposeless life, and that if she could promote the happiness of others by marrying a man whom she really did not dislike, it would perhaps be foolish, as well as selfish, to draw back because of some undefined prospect which she feared to lose. Wilbraham's arrival at Lucerne found her still wavering; but no sooner had she reached home than she wrote him a refusal so decisive that he made no further attempt to move her. From this it might seem as though the prospect above referred to had ceased to be undefined; but such was by no means Clare's belief. She was a good deal ashamed of herself, and felt that her eldest brother, Jack, was not far wrong when he called her an "awful duffer" for throwing such a chance away.

"Just think of the sport we might have had!" he exclaimed, regretfully. "Do you know that he has a deer-forest and a three-hundred ton yacht, and that they made bigger bags at his place in Norfolk last winter than on any other estate in England? It strikes me that you are too ambitious, Clare. The last member of the Royal family is disposed of now, you know; and the supply of unmarried Dukes is lamentably deficient."

The girl was really more hurt by this good-humoured chaff than she cared to show. No one treated her with unkindness; but it was clear enough that everyone thought her rather silly, and she was conscious that she had been to blame in taking so long a time to make up her mind. Heriot's arrival was a comfort to her. He and she had always been friends; she knew instinctively that he understood her, and this knowledge was not the less soothing because she had some difficulty in understanding herself. Sometimes she was inclined to ask him whether he thought she had done wrong; but now that the thing was over, and the decision irrevocable, there seemed to be little use in talking about it; so she kept her misgivings to herself, and carried them out to a certain grassy headland overlooking Polruth Bay, where she was wont to dream away some part of the long summer days.

One afternoon in the beginning of August she was sitting there upon the short, sweet-smelling herbage, her hands clasped round her knees, and her eyes fixed upon the golden mists which obscured the horizon. Some three or four hundred feet beneath her the Atlantic rollers woke the echoes of the caves; on her right hand Polruth, a jumble of slate roofs and steep, narrow streets, overtopped its diminutive harbour, and to the right of that again a great semicircle of white sand swept away to the promontory which formed the northern horn of the bay. Clare did not heed this familiar prospect, nor hear the shouts that arose from the returning fishing-boats. For a long time she had remained without changing her attitude, and from the intensity of her gaze it might almost have seemed as though, like Sister Anne, she expected to see somebody coming to her out of that mysterious haze which bounded the world.

Somebody was indeed coming; though from a less improbable direction. A young man, who had just arrived from London, and had taken up his quarters at Mrs. Trewecke's lodgings, had strolled out to get a breath of fresh air before dinner, and when this young man recognised Miss Irvine, his heart leaped up within him. What was he to do? He had come to Polruth with the firm intention of keeping his secret, of speaking to her only when other persons were present, and of avoiding all risk of self-betrayal. Prudence, therefore, counselled a swift and silent retreat, and he actually did turn round and take as many as six steps in the direction of the village before he stopped to see whether prudence might not be open to argument. What happens under such circumstances we all know. Prudence is always vanquished before the argument begins, and in another minute Clare heard a voice behind her saying, "Miss Irvine, how do you do?"

The voice had an odd tremor in it; it said a great deal more than the above meaningless phrase—a great deal more than it had any business to say. And when Clare scrambled to her feet and turned round, she met a pair of liquid grey eyes which spoke so plainly that she somewhat hurriedly dropped her own under their gaze. But it was without any other sign of trouble than this that she held out her hand, saying frankly: "How do you do, Mr. Vidal? So you have really come to Polruth, after all. I am so glad."

"You are very kind to say so," murmured Vidal. He was not accustomed to feel embarrassed in the presence of man or woman, and had perhaps never before in his life been at a loss for words; but now commonplaces seemed to stick in his throat, and he could only stand and look at her as she faced him there, with the sinking sun making a blaze of sea and sky behind her and turning her hair into a nimbus. The moment had come, then! He had hardly known how intensely he had longed for it; he had not expected that it would move him so deeply; he was really afraid to open his lips, lest the thoughts that were in him should escape through them against his will. Oh, miserable pettiness of an artificial state of society, which held him tongue-tied because, forsooth, his income was numbered in three figures instead of four! How was it possible for mortal man, with all his inner being in such a condition of ferment, to begin talking about the weather and the unpunctuality of the trains?

Perhaps it was not possible. At all events, Vidal continued speechless, and it was Miss Irvine who expressed a hope that the heat had not made his journey very disagreeable. "We have been having a most beautiful summer," she said, "and everybody prophesies that it is going to last. I hope it will; because, if so, you will see Polruth at its best, and perhaps, as my brothers are at home, you won't find it so overpoweringly dull. You know that Mr. Heriot is here?"

Vidal said "Yes," and did not add that, all things considered, he would have been just as well pleased if Mr. Heriot had not been there. They were walking back towards the village by this time, and he was wondering whether he would ever be alone with her again. Probably not. He could foresee what was coming. With a host of noisy young men swarming round him, and with Heriot for ever on the watch, it was not likely that such moments as these would recur. Well; perhaps it was best so.

"Do you remember our walk on the Rigi?" he asked, abruptly.

"Oh, yes; how wet and disagreeable it was! You went on to some place in the mountains afterwards, didn't you? Have you been long back in England?"

Wet and disagreeable!—was that the only memory that she had preserved of an afternoon which he had so often lived through again in his thoughts? Vidal's heart sank; he answered her questions mechanically, and scarcely listened to her while she enumerated the various diversions by which the monotony of life at Polruth might be relieved. What were lawn-tennis, and fishing for bass, and picnics to him? Yet, as they walked on, he could not but observe that her manner had lost its accustomed calm, that she was talking more and talking faster than she had ever done at Lucerne, and that all the time she looked straight in front of her, instead of turning sometimes towards her companion, as it would have been more natural to do. Now Vidal, though in love, had not so far parted with his powers of induction as not to know what this meant. His secret was evidently a secret no longer. Whether the discovery of it had been agreeable or disagreeable to Miss Irvine he could not tell; but he saw that she had made the discovery, and that it was agitating her. He did not offer to accompany her beyond the door of his lodgings, and secretly hoped that she might understand and appreciate this act of self-denial. Whether she did so or not, she was unmistakably relieved to be set free.

"Papa or one of the boys will come down and see you after breakfast to-morrow," she said; "and you must not expect to be allowed much time for work while you are here."

She paused and opened her lips, as if she were going to add something, but seemed to change her mind, and only said "Good-night," as she turned away.

Vidal watched her out of sight; then slowly climbed the stairs to his sitting-room. He threw himself down upon the broad window-seat and, with his folded arms resting upon the sill, looked out across the bay. He was two thirds remorseful and one third glad that he had broken down so deplorably at the very outset. That he should have done so did not say much for his self-control; but her knowledge of the truth would make his future part in some ways less difficult to play; "and after all," thought he, "it is not exactly my fault if she has found out to-day what she must have found out sooner or later; I said nothing that I ought not to have said; I didn't stay with her a moment longer than mere civility required. Unless I had gone away without speaking to her at all, I hardly see how I could have behaved with more discretion. And in any case, I must have seen her to-morrow, when she would infallibly have detected me. Don't women always know when a man loves them?"

He got what solace he could out of such sophistries as these, and then, dismissing the question of responsibility from his mind, fell to thinking of how lovely she was, and recalling all her words and movements, while the daylight faded out of the west and the sea changed from blue to grey and the stars came out, one by one.

Early the next morning Mr. Irvine made his appearance, charged by his wife with many messages, the exact wording of which he was compelled to own that he had forgotten on the way. "But I know," he concluded, "that I have strict orders to take you back to Cardrew with me, and I can say on my own account that we shall all be very much disappointed if you do not treat us like friends and lunch and dine with us whenever you are disposed. It doesn't look very friendly to have left you to house yourself in lodgings; but I think Mrs. Irvine explained to you that we are full to the roof just now. We are such a large family," continued the old gentleman, with something of a sigh, "that I often have difficulty in recollecting our exact numbers and names. However, Mrs. Irvine will be able to tell you that—and the more the merrier, you know," he concluded, cheerfully.

Vidal was not quite sure about the universal application of the proverb; but he said what was polite, and signified his willingness to be entertained. He was just then under the full influence of that beatific vision which comes once (let us hope at least once) to all mortals, and which, while it lasts, has power to convert the tamest landscape into a paradise, if only this be connected in some way with one especial person: but even though Cardrew had not been glorified by the presence of Clare Irvine, and though the lanes which led up to the house from Polruth had never received her footprints, Vidal must still have acknowledged that he had seldom seen anything more beautiful in its own way than the view which unfolded itself around him as he was conducted towards his destination. Beauty of scenery, like all other kinds of beauty, is more or less a matter of taste. "Shrubs and lowly tamarisks please not all," as the Latin grammar taught us long ago. In the last century the Alps were more shuddered at than admired; and there are people who find the north coast of Cornwall too wild and forbidding. But these, perhaps, have not had the advantage of studying it in fair weather. When the south wind blows softly, and the slowly heaving ocean is calm; when the flocks of sea-birds that congregate upon the rocks and the dark cliffs can sun themselves in peace; when the gorse and the heather have spread a mantle of purple and gold over the moors; and when the moisture that is always in the air lends a blue softness to all distant outlines, a man need not be so fortunate as to be in love in order to feel the peculiar charm of the region. Trees, it must be owned, are not numerous, and such as there are have been blown out of all symmetry by the furious winter gales; but in sheltered places vegetation is rich, and every whitewashed cottage has its fuchsia-trees and its giant scarlet geraniums.

Cardrew, which stands on the hillside, facing a point or two south of west, was built at a time when architects thought less of shelter from prevailing winds than of solidity of construction; but something has been done in the way of high stone walls and belts of hardy shrubs to protect the garden; so that Vidal was able conscientiously to compliment his host upon the brilliant flower-beds through which he made his way towards the lawn, where four youths in white flannels were playing tennis.

Mrs. Irvine hurried forward to welcome the stranger and to relieve her husband, who promptly disappeared. "How glad I am to see you! I told Clare she ought to have brought you back to dinner last night, but she said she was sure you wouldn't have come without dressing—quite unnecessary! Please understand, once for all, that we are not going to send you formal invitations. You are to come here whenever you like, and dress exactly as you please. What is the use of living in an out-of-the-way place if one can't dispense with formality? Now I must introduce my boys to you. This is Jack, my eldest son, who is still at college. Charley I think I told you about: he is to be a soldier, I hope. Bob is in the Navy; and the one who is trying to get behind the rhododendrons is Dick, who hasn't left school yet. Dick is shy—the only member of our family who was ever known to suffer in that way. Come out, Dick, and shake hands with Mr. Vidal. There are two others, Tommy and Billy, somewhere"——

"In the yard, helping Jonas to cart muck," interpolated the timid Dick, in a deep bass voice.

"You don't mean to say so! Then I trust they will stay where they are; for I know that nothing will induce them to wash their hands before luncheon. Now, boys, go on with your game; I am sure Mr. Vidal will excuse you."

Mr. Vidal would most willingly have excused the absence of every man, woman, and child in the house, except one; but he did not belong to that disagreeable class of lovers who show the depth of their affection for a single individual by assuming a savage demeanour towards all others, and he soon made friends with the rising generation of Irvines, whom he found to be very pleasant young fellows.

They came and sat down beside him presently, Mrs. Irvine having retired into the house, and put themselves and their resources at his disposition as cordially as their parents had done. Did he care about potting rabbits?—and had he brought his gun with him? If not, he could use Jack's whenever he liked, because Jack put on such a lot of side now that he wouldn't condescend to that humble form of sport. If sea-fishing was at all in his line, he could have abundance of that any day. Or, as he had not been in Cornwall before, perhaps he would like to visit some of the lions of the neighbourhood.

"I'll tell you what," cried Bob, excitedly; "I'll drive you over to Tintagel one day in the dog-cart. You ought to see Tintagel, you know, and I can take you by some short cuts that save miles."

"I should rather think he would!" said Jack. "He'd take you over a stone wall or two, most likely, because the horse would be sure to run away with him, and he'd never find it out till he tried to pull up. Don't you let Bob entice you into getting into a wheeled vehicle beside him. He tries it on with every stranger who comes here, because he knows very well that none of us are going to risk our lives for his amusement. Only the other day, in a moment of weakness, I allowed him to take the reins, and he wouldn't give them up again at any price. I don't think I ever was in such a funk in all my life. First we cannoned against a farmer's gig and smashed his shaft; then we ran over a pig"——

"We did no such thing," interrupted Bob, angrily. "We only just grazed the pig, and we should have cleared the other craft, right enough, if she had answered her helm properly. You fellows think nobody, except yourselves, can do the simplest thing."

"No, no, Bob," said his elder brother; "we have implicit confidence in you when you are upon your proper element; but on dry land we prefer to take care of our own necks, and if Mr. Vidal will be advised by me, he won't let you try experiments upon his. Anyhow, I can promise you one thing: you won't drive my mare any more."

"I don't see much fun in driving about the country this hot weather," remarked Charley. "Much better stop at home and play lawn-tennis."

The guest seemed disposed to concur in this view. "Does your sister ever play?" he asked, carelessly; to which Jack replied, "Oh yes, sometimes—when there's another girl here. But women rather spoil the game, don't you think so?"

After a time, Heriot strolled across the grass, with a straw hat on the back of his head and a newspaper under his arm; and Vidal felt himself colouring guiltily as his friend approached. But Heriot's face did not express disapprobation. All he said, on joining the group, was, "Well, Adrian; so you've found your way to Cornwall;" after which he remarked that it must be getting near luncheon-time.

By-and-by the young men went indoors to change their flannels; so that Vidal had an opportunity of saying, penitently, "I couldn't help it, old man—I really couldn't!"

Heriot made no reply; but after a moment he astonished his companion a good deal by exclaiming, abruptly: "I wish I were in your shoes!"

"Wish you were in my shoes!" echoed Vidal. "Why, in the name of all that's unreasonable, should you wish that? If ever there was a miserable man upon the face of the earth"——

"Quite so; but then misery such as yours is worth more than all the contentment that ever I have got out of life, or shall get. Go on!—enjoy yourself—make the most of your time. And when the day of tribulation arrives, come to me and we will mingle our tears. I'm not going to trouble you with any more sage precepts: events must take their course now. You had it open to you to choose whether you would come here or stay away, and you have chosen. Far be it from me to suggest unavailing regrets!"

Vidal glanced at the speaker with a mixture of vexation and amusement. "I can't quite make out whether you blame me or not, Heriot," he said.

"Neither can I," answered Heriot. "Suppose we go in."

Clare only made her appearance when the rest of the party were entering the dining-room. She took a place on the opposite side of the table to Vidal, and although she spoke to him several times, and was as friendly as everybody else, he could not help noticing that she avoided meeting his eyes. "She knows that I love her," thought the young man, with an inward exultation which he did not attempt to repress; "and that is all that I ever dared to hope for. She doesn't care for me—I can see that—and I'm glad she doesn't. Am I glad? Well, no—hardly. And yet I believe old Heriot is right, and pain such as this is better than years of bovine contentment. I wouldn't have it otherwise, if I could. Perhaps I could, if I would; for love begets love, they say. But I won't! I'll keep out of her way; I won't even speak to her, if I can help it; and if I find myself giving way ever so little, I'll be off the next morning!"

While these and other thoughts were passing through his mind, he was conversing cheerily with his entertainers, supported, like the Spartan youth with the fox gnawing him under his garment, by conscious heroism. Probably, other persons in the same room had an equal title to self-approval, from Mr. Irvine, who had Jack's bills to pay, down to Tommy and Billy, who were seldom free from the dread that one of their many delinquencies was on the point of discovery; for in the tragic comedy of life every man and woman has a part to play, and those who act best are deservedly the most liked. But the generality of us wear a mask simply because we must, and cannot, therefore, claim all the credit that belonged to this voluntary victim.

CHAPTER IX.

THE REWARD OF SELF-DENIAL.

During the month of August, with which the present history has to do, two phenomena occurred in the neighbourhood of Polruth. In the first place, no rain fell, except in the shape of an occasional shower, for three consecutive weeks. This, astonishing as it was, was merely a local and meteorological phenomenon: the second, though less remarked, was certainly more remarkable; being, indeed, nothing less than a phenomenon in the working of human nature. For it is a positive fact that, throughout the whole of the above-mentioned time, Vidal saw Miss Irvine every day, and never, by word, deed, or sign, attempted to make love to her. He sought the society of her brothers, who swore by him when they discovered that he knew how to use the graceful limbs with which Nature had provided him, and was a better swimmer and lawn-tennis player than any of them. Mr. Irvine found in him a patient admirer of ancient coins and mediæval art; while Mrs. Irvine, who had liked him from the first, took him up with the ardour which she had ever at the disposal of a fresh protégé, and introduced him to all her neighbours, with whispered assurances that he was a young man of extraordinary talent—the coming novelist of the day. But to Clare he was just civil, and no more. If he saw her—as he often did—walking past his lodgings towards her favourite headland, he watched her from the window until she was out of sight, and then went resolutely back to his writing. At Cardrew he avoided every possibility of being left alone with her, and more than once declined to join a riding party because he foresaw the dangers to which that form of exercise might so easily give rise.

All this self-repression was not accomplished without pain, insomnia, and loss of appetite. If it was absurd—if it was illogical—if it was calculated to produce exactly the opposite effect to that intended, it was nevertheless a victory in its way, and a victory of a kind which is not very often won. For that much Vidal may be allowed to have credit; and in truth he was disposed to take a good deal of credit to himself at this time. He was quite astonished when Heriot said to him, one day: "Merely as a matter of curiosity, I should like very much to know whether you are playing a deep and skilful game, or whether you really have the simplicity to imagine yourself a martyr."

He stared for a moment, and then answered quietly: "That is a hard speech to make about any man, Heriot. I understand what you mean; but I don't know that I have ever given you the right to suspect me of being such a miserable humbug."

Heriot flushed slightly. He was conscious that his irritation had led him into saying more than he ought to have done, and he apologised. "But I can't help thinking it a pity that you should have taken up this particular line of conduct," he added. "It would have been so simple to go away."

"I would have gone away if it had been necessary," Vidal said; "but it is not necessary. I saw plainly enough, the first day, that she didn't care a rush for me. Yes; I know—I remember what you said at Lucerne. It is just possible that she might have come to care for me in the long run, if I had tried to make her. Well; I haven't tried."

"Oh, but, my dear fellow, the passive way of trying is so much worse than the active!" returned Heriot, half laughing.

The young man turned away with a gesture of impatience. "I wish to Heaven you would let me alone!" he exclaimed. "You said you wouldn't lecture me any more. The long and the short of it is that I can't go away yet. You think she may be piqued into loving me because I draw back from her; but you don't understand. I believe she is perfectly well aware of how things are with me. She doesn't care. You can see for yourself that her spirits haven't suffered."

Now, it was precisely because he thought that her spirits had suffered that Heriot had allowed himself to be provoked into breaking his self-imposed silence; but, not choosing to say this, he shrugged his shoulders and walked away.

This colloquy had taken place in the garden at Cardrew; and after his friend had left him, Vidal sat down upon a bench and thought. Hitherto he had tried to steer a course midway between duty and inclination, and, oddly enough, had succeeded after a fashion; but now he began to see that success of that kind could not be permanent. He was young; he was suffering from the torments of unrequited love; he felt the imperious craving for happiness natural to one of his years, and his sanguine nature was for ever whispering to him that happiness was not unattainable. He had a struggle which lasted for five minutes, and left him somewhat pale. Then—"I'll go," he said, softly, and rising up, walked towards the house.

His intention was to burn his ships by giving out forthwith that he was obliged to leave Polruth on the morrow; but when he entered the hall, he found everybody too busy to listen to him. For it had been arranged that a long-deferred visit to Tintagel should take place that day, and just now luncheon-baskets were being packed, and details discussed amidst the clamour which accompanied all movements of the Irvine family. Vidal listlessly looked on their preparations from the background. Clare, looking cool and fresh in a pale-blue print dress, was moving about among her brothers, lending a helping hand here and there, and did not seem to have noticed his arrival. An unreasonable anger took possession of the young man as he watched her. Was she so pitiless, then? Didn't she see how he suffered? Knowing that he loved her, was it nothing to her whether he declared his love or not? There was a good deal of the spoilt child in his composition, and he thought, "Well, perhaps when I am gone she will be sorry—at least, for a time."

Presently the carriages came round to the door, and a dispute arose as to the distribution of the party, from which also Vidal held aloof. Let them settle it among themselves, and put him where they pleased! Upon the whole, he would rather prefer not to be in the same carriage as Miss Irvine. Nevertheless, he was not very sorry when Mr. and Mrs. Irvine, Heriot, and Charley got into the landau and were driven away, followed by a small waggonette containing the younger boys and the luncheon. The only remaining vehicle belonging to the establishment was, as he knew, Jack's dog-cart, which it was evident that Clare, Bob, and himself were to share with its owner.

"I hope you don't mind the back seat, Vidal," said the latter. "Of course, you are very welcome to drive, though, if you'd rather."

"Thanks," answered Vidal, laughing, "but I have made it a rule through life never to drive another man's horses in his presence, and the back seat will do me very well." He was foolish enough to feel a thrill of pleasure at the prospect of passing his last few hours of comparative happiness in such close proximity to the object of his hopeless passion.

The dog-cart was some time in making its appearance, and Jack began at length to grow fidgety. "Bob said he would put the mare in," he remarked; "but I don't believe he has the slightest idea of how to set about it; and there's nobody to help him. Perhaps I had better go and see what he is doing."

However, at this moment Bob, beaming with satisfaction and flourishing his whip, pulled up at the door with a dash. "Now, you needn't look at the gear in that suspicious way," he said, "because it's all right. Do you suppose I never harnessed a horse before in my life?"

"Well, you've done better than I expected," Jack confessed, after making a few alterations and helping his sister into her place. "Now then, Bob, give me the reins and jump down."

"Jump down, indeed!" returned Bob, loftily. "Not exactly! No, my dear boy, you jump up. You are going to have the honour and pleasure of being piloted by me to-day."

"Nonsense, Bob! don't play the fool," said Jack, with some impatience. "We've got a long drive before us, and I don't want to waste time. Come!—hand over the reins."

"Beati possidentes," replied the other, placidly, without moving. "You won't turn me out without a fight for it, I can tell you."

A fight would undoubtedly have ensued then and there if Clare had not intervened. "Let him drive for once, Jack," she pleaded. "He won't be with us much longer, you know, and he will promise to very careful, won't you, Bob?"

"I am always careful," Bob affirmed; "but to-day I shall surpass myself. And look here, Jack; if I damage the beast I'll buy you another as soon as ever I can save up enough money. There! I can't say fairer than that."

"And how about our funeral expenses?" inquired Jack. But as he was a very good-natured young man, he made no further objections, and scrambled up beside Vidal, to whom he remarked, with a sigh, "If I had only foreseen this, I should have insisted upon your driving. But it is just wildly possible that we may pull through without a smash."

This was very consolatory. Vidal, remembering that a life far more precious than his own was being placed in jeopardy, inwardly commended the adventurous Bob to the devil; but it was hardly his part to enter a demurrer, so he smiled, and held his peace.

They were driven at a quiet pace down the park; though, on turning out of the gates, the trap gave a lurch which caused Jack to draw in his breath sharply. "For the love of Heaven, man," he exclaimed, "don't take your corners like that! Try to recollect that we're on two wheels, not four."

"You're only fit to be trundled about upon one," retorted the other. "A wheelbarrow is the conveyance for you. Never saw such a nervous chap as you are in my life."

And with that he gave the mare a cut with the whip which made her throw herself into her collar and accomplish the next quarter of a mile at a speed that called forth some subdued remonstrance from Clare. Then, more by good luck than good guidance, they passed a couple of carts without a collision, and turned off the high-road into a narrow lane.

"Now," said Bob exultantly, "I'll show you the short cuts."

Jack groaned. "It's no use protesting," he said to Vidal. "Sit tight, and let us pray that we may be upset in a soft place."

"Or that we may not be upset at all," suggested Vidal.

"Oh, that's past praying for. And by George! here's a flock of sheep. Now he'll run us up that bank—I know he will!"

The prophecy was hardly uttered before it was fulfilled. The dog-cart swayed, balanced itself for a moment on the off wheel, and then turned over with a crash, sending its occupants flying into the opposite ditch. Fortunately, the fall was so gradual that nothing about them suffered, except their clothes and their dignity. Vidal, after standing on his head for a minute, struggled into an attitude more convenient for making observations, and found that his companions were already erect. Clare was replacing her hat, which had fallen off; the two young men were standing over the ruins of the cart; and up a distant hill the mare, who had kicked herself free, could be seen galloping, with the broken shafts dangling at her sides.

"This," remarked Jack, sadly, "comes of letting a sailor drive."

Bob tilted his hat over his eyes, scratched his head, and looked crestfallen. "I'm awfully sorry," he said; "but it was the sort of thing that might have happened to anybody. I don't suppose I should have done it if you hadn't flurried me so; but I saw we were going to foul the bank, and I believe I made a mistake and took a haul at the port rein instead of the starboard. I'll pay for the damage," he added, ruefully.

"Wait till you know what it is," returned Jack. "I shouldn't wonder if the mare were to kill herself."

Happily, however, this apprehension proved to be unfounded; for Bob had not yet started in pursuit when a labourer appeared leading the runaway animal. He had caught her, as he affirmed, at the risk of his life, and demanded adequate remuneration.

"And now," said Jack, when this business-like person had been dismissed, "the question is, what are we to do?"

"I know what I am going to do," answered Clare, laughing; "I am going to make the best of my way home."

"But we must manage to let the others know what has become of us somehow, or they'll think we've broken our necks. Bob, the least you can do is to follow them and tell them of your success. I suppose you can hire a trap of some kind in Polruth—and somebody to drive it for you. What will you do, Vidal? It's a pity you should miss seeing Tintagel."

But Vidal answered, with perfect truth, that he didn't care very much about Tintagel, and Bob scouted the idea of returning to Polruth and searching about for a conveyance. "I'll foot it," he said. "I can cut across country, and I shall catch them up before they have done half the distance."

And without more ado he set off at a slinging trot, being perhaps not unwilling to testify in some measure to his penitence.

(To be continued.)

The Earl of Zetland has returned 20 per cent of their last half-year's rent to his Yorkshire tenants; and Mr. Wharton has remitted 50 per cent of their rentals to the farmers on the Skelton-in-Cleveland estates.

Notwithstanding that thousands of men engaged in the shipbuilding trades on the Clyde are idle, an offer made last week, on behalf of Messrs. Elder and Co., to build a vessel of 5000 tons on the same rate of wages as was paid in 1879 was rejected by the Trades Union by a majority of 209 to 15.

Lord Ashley took the chair at a meetiug of the Cabdrivers' Benevolent Association, at St. Andrew's Hall, Newman-street, on Friday evening, the 30th inst. Seven aged cabmen were elected to pensions of £20 a year each.—Mr. W. G. Spicer (Messrs. Spicer Brothers) will preside at the annual general meeting of the Newsvendors' Benevolent and Provident Institution, to be held at the offices of the society on Feb. 10.—Sir Farrer Herschell, Q.C., M.P., has consented to preside at the annual dinner on behalf of the Asylum for Idiots, at the Albion Tavern, on March 3.—The Duke of Portland has consented to preside at the anniversary festival, May 15 next, in aid of the building fund of the City Orthopædic Hospital, Hatton-garden.

SUBSCRIPTION TO THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

AT HOME.

Twelve months (including Christmas Number),	£1 9s. 3d.
Six months, 14s.	Christmas Half-Year, 15s. 3d.
Three months, 7s.	Christmas Quarter. 8s. 3d.

Copies will be supplied direct from the Office to any part of the United Kingdom and the Channel Islands, for any period, at the rate of 6½d. for each Number, paid in advance.

ABROAD.

The yearly subscription abroad, including the Christmas Number, is 36s. 4d. (on thin paper, 32s.), with the following exceptions:—

To Abyssinia, Aden, Borneo, Ceylon, India, Java, Labuan, Penang, Philippine Islands, Sarawak, Singapore, and Zanzibar, 41s. (thin paper, 34s.)

To Madagascar (except St. Mary and Tamatave) and the Transvaal, 45s. (on thin paper, 36s. 4d.)

Subscribers are specially advised to order the thick paper edition, the appearance of the engravings on the thin paper copies being greatly injured by the print at the back showing through.

Newspapers for foreign parts must be posted within eight days of the date of publication, irrespective of the departure of the mails.

Subscriptions must be paid in advance, direct to the Publishing Office, 198, Strand, in English money; by cheque crossed the Union Bank of London; or by Post-Office Order, payable at the East Strand Post Office, to Ingram Brothers, of 198, Strand, London.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

All communications relating to this department of the Paper should be addressed to the Editor, and have the word "Chess" written on the envelope.

E J W (Croydon).—A clever problem, and very acceptable.

M (Hampton Court).—You have overlooked that, after the moves 1. B to K B 4th, Kt to R 6th; 2. Kt to Kt 3rd (ch), 3. P to Q 3rd (ch), Black can capture the White Bishop with his King, and so escape the mate on the third move. Try it again.

T (Kingston-on-Thames).—A curious, but, as you say, not as good as the original.

R M (Liverpool).—You are right in your surmise. The colours indicated at the head and foot of the diagram should be reversed. The position then illustrates a well-known principle that the Knight cannot "gain a move."

W B (Stratford).—We must ask you to send an amended diagram.

W A (Old Romney).—Zlata-Praher is an illustrated paper, not a slip. We send you Gazetta del Popolo.

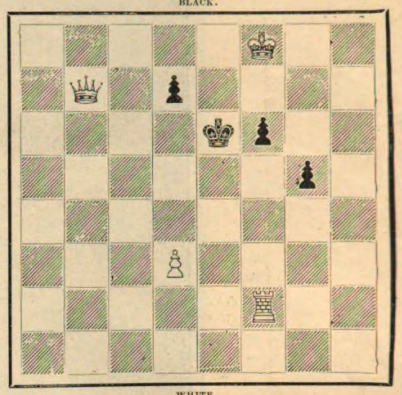
POLYANTHUS (Liverpool).—Solutions are occasionally forwarded by telegram, but usually through the post. Frederick the Great employed special couriers for such a purpose, but it is not recorded that anyone else ever did so. To be sure, there was no penny post in his time.

J S L (Blackburn, Natal).—The slip has come to hand. Thanks.

CORRECT SOLUTIONS of the CHRISTMAS CHESS NUTS have been received as follow:—viz., of L'HERMET'S PROBLEMS from W Risbrigr and Rev. John Wills (Barnstable, U.S.A.); of MCKETRICK'S PROBLEM from J R (Edinburgh); of SHERMAN'S PROBLEM from New Forest and J R (Edinburgh); of JEPPESEN'S SIX-MATE from Jumbo; of Nos. 2118, 2119, 2120 from J S Logan (Blackburn, Natal); of No. 2117 from Alpha, Emile Frau, C Belton (Tiffin), and E E Gibbins (Tiffin); of No. 2128 from T; of No. 2129 from J R (Edinburgh), W J Knight, Alpha, B H C (Salisbury), W F R (Swansea), H C (Harlesden), Carl Stepan, S P Owen, D W (Aberdeenshire), and Emile Frau; of JEPPESEN'S PROBLEM from R H Brooks, C Darragh, T G (Ware), M O Halloran, Dominican, J R (Edinburgh), J T W, Ben Nevis, L Falcon (Antwerp), Hereward, Carl Stepan, C W Milsom, Emmo (Darlington), H Worters (Canterbury), and F and G Howitt (Norwich).

CORRECT SOLUTIONS of PROBLEM No. 2130 received from R H Brooks, C Darragh, B L Dyke, An Old Hand, S Lowndes, T G (Ware), C Oswald, L Sharawood, Ernest Sharawood, M O Halloran, Dominican, W J Rudman, E E H, Alpha, L E G B, F P Potts, A L Ortt, Shadforth, J R (Edinburgh), E Elsbury, K Ingersoll, J T W, Rose, Ben Nevis, D W Kell, L Falcon (Antwerp), R Gray, Hereward, L L Greenaway, R L Southwell, A Wigmore, James Pilkington, G S Oddie, J W Dewe, A C Hunt, W Hillier, A W Scrutton, C W Milsom, W Biddle, G A A, Walker, C B N (H.M.S., Asia), Jupiter Junior, J G Austee, L Wyman, J Hall, H Wardell, G W Law, R J Vinen, Rev. W Anderson (Old Romney), Jumbo, H McCoy, Carl Stepan, R B (Chatteris), B H C (Salisbury), E Casella (Paris), A Karlberg (Hamburg), A M Colborne, Emmo (Darlington), H Worters (Canterbury), E Louden, T S (Brighton), H Lucas, F Ferris, and F and G Howitt (Norwich).

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 2128.



WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Kt to Q B 5th	K takes Kt
2. B to B 8th (ch)	K moves
3. Mates accordingly.

The variations present no difficulty.

PROBLEM No. 2132.

By OTTO MEISLING (Copenhagen).

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in two moves.

As promised last week, we append the individual scores of the competitors in the great match between the St. George's and the City of London chess clubs. As most of our readers are aware, this was a return-match, the first having been played in the spring of 1881, when thirty-two players appeared in the lists, and the West-End club won with a score of twelve games to nine. In the return match some slight alterations in the conditions were agreed to. Honorary members of both clubs were debarred from taking part in the matches, and each pair of competitors were restricted to one game, instead of the "go-as-you-please" terms of the first. As we announced last week, the return-contest resulted in a victory for the City with a score of twelve points to eight. The following are the players and their respective scores, drawn games counting half a point to each side:—

ST. GEORGE'S.		CITY OF LONDON.
Rev. W. Wayte	½	Mr. Potter	½
Dr. Ballard	0	Mr. Gunsberg	1
Rev. A. Skipworth	1	Mr. Block	0
Rev. C. E. Ranken	0	Mr. Lord	1
Mr. Lewis	0	Mr. Heppell	1
Mr. Minchin	½	Mr. Yyse	½
Hon. C. Plunkett	½	Mr. Hooke	½
Mr. Gattie	½	Mr. Frankenstein	½
Mr. Salter	1	Rev. S. Earnshaw	0
Mr. Puller	1	Mr. Cowen	0
Mr. Wyvill	0	Mr. Anger	1
Mr. Warner	0	Mr. Hirsch	1
Mr. Ball	0	Mr. Stevens	1
Mr. Gover	1	Mr. Laws	0
Colonel Dunnan	0	Mr. Wilson	1
Colonel Minchin	0	Mr. Chappel	1
Rev. L. Lewis	½	Mr. Bussey	½
Mr. Burroughs	½	Mr. Leonard	½
Mr. Marett	1	Mr. Watts	0
Mr. Heathcote	0	Mr. Taylor	1
	8		12

The following is one of the Games played on the above occasion between MR. WARNER, of the St. George's Club, and MR. HIRSCH, of the City Club.

(English Opening.)

WHITE (Mr. W.)	BLACK (Mr. H.)	WHITE (Mr. W.)	BLACK (Mr. H.)
1. P to Q B 4th	P to K 3rd	14. B to B 2nd
2. P to K 3rd	P to Q B 4th	White loose time here, and lets the adverse Kt get to K B 2th without opposition.
3. Kt to K B 3rd	Kt to K B 3rd	14.	Kt takes Kt
4. P to Q Kt 3rd	P to Q 4th	15. P takes Kt	Kt to B 5th
5. B to Kt 2nd	Kt to Q B 3rd	16. P to B 3rd	B to B 4th (ch)
6. P to Q 4th	P takes P	17. K to R sq	Q to Kt 4th
7. P to Q R 3rd	B to Kt 2nd	Black has now the attack, and conducts it smartly.
8. B to Q 3rd	B to K 2nd	18. P to Kt 3rd	Kt to R 6th
9. Castles	Castles	19. Q to K 2nd	Q to R 4th
10. Q Kt to Q 2nd	R to Q B sq	20. P to Q Kt 4th	Kt to Kt 4th
11. Kt to K 5th		21. P to K Kt 4th	Q takes P
A premature advance. It seems preferable.	11. R to Q B sq	22. B to K 4th	Kt takes Q, and White resigned.
11.	P takes B P
12. Q Kt takes P	P takes P
13. P takes P	Kt to Q 4th

A meeting of the members of the British Chess Association was held at Simpson's Divan on Tuesday, the 20th inst., the Right Honourable Sir Robert Peel, M.P., presiding on the occasion. A draught constitution prepared by the council of the association was submitted to the members, and was agreed to, with a modification of the rule regulating the amount of subscriptions to be paid by the federated clubs. A draught programme of the future work of the association, prepared by Mr. Thomas Hewitt, was also agreed to, and the elected council as already constituted was confirmed. Mr. H. E. Bird was elected auditor. A vote of thanks to the chairman, proposed by Mr. J. H. Lewis, seconded by Mr. Cubison, and received with acclamation by the members, brought the proceedings to a conclusion.

We found the following problem, by Herr Johann Berger, of Gratz, rather difficult, and shall be glad to hear what our readers think of it:—

White: K at K B 8th, Q at K 7th, Kt at K 5th, B at Q 5th; Pawns at K B 2nd, K 4th, and Q Kt 2nd. (Seven pieces.)

Black: K at Q 5th; Pawns at Q B 2nd, Q Kt 3rd, 5th, and 6th. (Five pieces.)

White to play, and mate in three moves.

AN AVALANCHE IN NORTHERN ITALY.

THE GROSVENOR GALLERY.

CONCLUDING NOTICE.

It only remains to say a few words on the men portraits to which allusion has not yet been made. Foremost amongst these must be placed "Colonel St. Leger" (23), in scarlet coat and white pantaloons, leaning against his charger. In every respect the work is noteworthy; for although it is to be found at Hampton Court, it is so hung that it is impossible to realise its excellence. It may be that its being "gibbeted" there is intended as a punishment inflicted upon Colonel St. Leger, whose influence upon society and the Royal family was most baneful. In this portrait, which was painted in 1782, he is represented as a young man almost the same age as the Prince of Wales (then just twenty-one years old), and it is therefore difficult to identify him with his namesake the President or founder of the Hell-Fire Club, and those of the party who entertained the beautiful Miss Gunnings at their famous introduction to London life, in 1751. As a matter of fact, the Colonel St. Leger who is here represented was not born until after that event, and was only about five years older than the Prince of Wales. The notice, therefore, in the catalogue, in which Horace Walpole, Peter Pindar, and the headless coachman are mixed up, is an extraordinary jumble of stories and myths relating to two totally different people. This portrait was painted as a companion to one of the Prince of Wales, which in 1815 was in the possession of Lord Dundas, and now belongs to Baron Ferdinand De Rothschild. Another portrait, about which there seems scarcely less confusion, is that of "John Skinner, Student of Christ Church" (194), represented in his robes as Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer. There is no dispute that Gainsborough did paint for an Irish brother-Judge, Francis Burton, a portrait of his friend Skynner; but this picture Burton, when he became blind, gave to the Society of Lincoln's Inn, of which he was a Bencher, and it certainly was hanging in their hall a few years ago. The present work is lent by Christ Church, Oxford, of which house Skynner is said to have been a student. This may be so, although the fact has escaped the notice of his previous biographers, who represent him to have belonged to a poor family in Oxfordshire, and that by his own exertions he made his way in his profession. Amongst the other lawyers whose portraits by Gainsborough are to be found in the present exhibition is that of "Lord Camden" (60), in his snuff-coloured daily dress, indicating that it was taken after he had quitted office (1770), for having given such offence to the Court on the subject of Wilkes' election for Middlesex. Of portraits of statesmen, there are no less than four of William Pitt: one, a small oval, lent by Mr. Wells (13), probably that from which Sherwin engraved his plate; another lent by the Honourable Society of Lincoln's Inn (70), representing him leaning against the back of a chair; a small work lent by Lord Amherst (213); and, lastly, the very admirable half-length portrait now in the possession of Earl Stanhope (170), the original of the more familiar prints and engravings. Of the third Earl Stanhope, Pitt's brother-in-law, there is also a portrait (80), painted quite towards the close of Gainsborough's life. In the portrait of "Philip Stanhope, Earl of Chesterfield" (84), he is represented in plain morning dress and buff waistcoat, with ribbon of the Garter across his chest, one hand leaning on Cicero's "De Senectate," as if on its lessons rather than on his son's success in the world, all his thoughts were concentrated. Posterity knows Lord Chesterfield better through Hoare's portrait now at the National Portrait Gallery, but there can be little dispute that Gainsborough gives us the nobler side of his character. Of Fox the only relic is a curious picture filled with figures, entitled "Fox Addressing the House of Commons During Lord North's Ministry" (201). When, and under what circumstances, this picture, so unique amongst all the varied productions of Gainsborough's brush, was painted, it would be interesting to learn. It was never exhibited amongst his works at the Royal Academy during his lifetime, nor was it amongst those shown at Schomberg House after his death—but this does not, of course, exhaust all the possibilities of its authenticity; and General Alexander, the present owner, would be conferring a favour upon the students of Gainsborough if he would throw some light upon the past history of the picture. The only portrait of Canning (100) was taken when the future statesman had just left Eton. He is represented in a blue fancy dress, with rich dark hair falling over his shoulders - a weak, but good-natured face, suggestive rather of the fop than the statesman.

Of members of the aristocracy there was no lack in Gainsborough's studio in Bath, even before Royalty patronised him; but no sooner had he settled himself in Pall-mall (1774) than we find the King sending for him; and in the course of the next few years not less than eight different portraits of George III. and Queen Charlotte were painted by him, as well as three of the Prince of Wales, and at least a dozen of the other Royal children. There is considerable interest attaching to the portrait of "Lord Nugent" (204), on the staircase, as being in all probability the first of Gainsborough's pictures exhibited to the public (1761). It was sent to the Society of Artists, which in those days held their exhibition in Spring-gardens, and was probably one of the first causes of bringing Gainsborough in contact with Mr. Wiltshire, the Bath and London carrier, who showed himself a warm friend of the artist. "John, Viscount Kilmorey" (30) is a typical self-willed old landowner; "Mr. Wm. Poyntz" (55), though not a member of the aristocracy by birth, became so by the marriage of his sister to "John, first Earl Spencer" (16); but his portrait here, one of Gainsborough's earliest works, gives him more the appearance of a gamekeeper than of a county magnate. In addition to these should be noticed "Sir Francis Basset," afterwards "Lord De Dunstanville," who is made the subject of a series of genealogical blunders (56 and 155), "Lord Mulgrave" (181), "Lord Cathcart" (99), and "Edward Clive, Earl of Powis" (50), as a boy, painted in imitation of Velasquez.

To the middle class Gainsborough was indebted for some admirable subjects—notably "Thomas Pennant" (101), the naturalist; "The Rev. James Hingeston" (94), a clergyman near Southwold, who helped and encouraged him before he decided to embark upon life as a painter; and "John Ayton" (199), one of many who in his day bore the name of "Handsome Jack." Allusion has already been made in a previous notice to the admirable portrait of "Parson Bate" (171), and we only return to it in order to correct the statement, to which the catalogue gives support, that he was the originator of the Morning Post. That journal, established in 1772 by Mr. John Bell, had already been in existence three years when Mr. Henry Bate joined it; and he remained connected with it until 1780, when he quarrelled with his colleagues. The Morning Post some time afterwards became the property of Mr. Tattersall, who, however, sold it in 1795 to Mr. Christie, the auctioneer, of whom Gainsborough's excellent portrait (67) is in the adjoining room. At that time the circulation of the Morning Post was only 350 copies daily; and Mr. Tattersall sold the entire copyright, house, and printing materials for £600.

But it was with artists, after all, that Gainsborough was in fullest sympathy; and in painting their portraits he threw his whole soul into his work. "Tenducci" (29), the tenor singer, with parted lips, as if giving out a high note, is not less happily rendered than "Vestris" (11), the "divine dancer," on account of whose benefit the House of Commons postponed the discussion on Burke's Reform Bill, on which Pitt subsequently made his maiden speech. "Felice De Giardini" (156), who gained considerable reputation as a violinist, and lost it as manager of the Italian Opera in this country, was among Gainsborough's favourite associates, though hardly on such intimate terms as "Karl Abel" (46), the player on the viol-di-gamba and chamber musician to Queen Charlotte. The contrast between the two faces—the Italian's keen and mobile, the German's strong but sensitive—is very striking; and it is not difficult to see that Gainsborough has in both cases endeavoured to bring out the music in each man's mind. On his unworthy son-in-law, Johann Fischer (112), the hautbois player, this double care is still more manifest. This picture was, it is said, the cause of Gainsborough's quarrel with Mr. Philip Thicknesse, his first patron at Bath. Gainsborough's excessive love of music and musical instruments had emboldened him to ask Mrs. Thicknesse for her viol-di-gamba—an instrument made in 1612, and of exquisite tone and beauty; and at length it was arranged that he should paint her portrait in exchange. The next morning the first sitting was given, the head was finished, the dead colouring rubbed in, and the Newfoundland dog at her feet sketched. After a considerable delay, Mrs. Thicknesse called to see how her picture was progressing. Gainsborough invited her up, saying "Madam, I have something to show you." Upon reaching the studio, however, she found it was to see Fischer's portrait "painted in full length, completely finished, in scarlet and gold, like a Colonel of the Foot Guards, and mine standing in its tatter-a-rag condition by the side of it!"

Here we conclude, having, it is hoped, said enough to show that there are interests, historical or social, as well as specially artistic, to be found in nearly every picture of this most representative exhibition of Gainsborough's works, and how completely it bears out Reynolds' verdict on his rival, "How various the man is!"

FRENCH EIGHTEENTH-CENTURY ART.

At the Fine-Art Society's Gallery there is on view a small collection of engravings fairly illustrative of French art of the eighteenth century, and rendered doubly interesting by Mr. Wedmore's notes, which precede the catalogue. If we cannot altogether participate in his enthusiasm for the French painters of that period, we are ready to admit to the utmost the excellence of the engravers. The scheme of the exhibition does not include specimens of Morin, Nanteuil, Masson, and the "portraitists" who followed the traditions of the old and more severe teaching of Rigaud; but is limited to the school of Watteau and his imitators, who cared only to render life "pretty and amusing." Amongst these, Laurent Cars, Lebas, Duflos, and Lépicié occupy the first rank. They were ingenious and sympathetic interpreters of the elegant Court life of Versailles and Paris, of which Boucher, Pater, and Lancret were the painters. Opinions may differ as to their place in the history of art; but it must be admitted that they travestied and perverted nature until they only saw her through blue spectacles or as the "setting" of a fairy ballet. Chardin attempted to break away from the insipid accessories of Court life, and to depict more homely scenes, but the artificialness of his efforts are apparent. Nothing, in fact, is more striking in this collection than the absence of anything approaching either humour or pathos. In their place, sentimentalism à la Rousseau, or boudoir intrigue à la Crébillon, are put forward as the highest, or at least as the most desirable adjuncts of life, and prettiness its aim and object. It was no wonder, therefore, that an engraver like Vivares should turn his back upon such a public, and seek in the society of Hogarth and Reynolds subjects worthy of his needle. We have no wish to depreciate the present exhibition, which is excellent in its way, and is, we hope, only the prelude to others more complete; and we believe that through engravings and aquatints the English public will be more easily led to admire the grace and elegance of French eighteenth-century art than by the study of the original pictures.

THE AVALANCHES IN PIEDMONT.

The Subalpine valleys of North-West Italy were visited last week, in many places, by immense falls of accumulated snow from the steep mountain sides, destroying villages and causing much loss of life. Such calamities have often happened in Switzerland and the Tyrol, in Savoy, and in Piedmont; and the scene delineated in our large Engraving does not exaggerate the terrible aspect which they may occasionally present. Huge stones and detached fragments of rock are frequently brought down with the enormous mass of snow, besides quantities of loose earth, shattering as well as covering the houses beneath. On the Piedmontese side of the Alps, especially in the Val di Susa and the Val d'Aosta, west and north of Turin, between the mountain ranges successively marked by Monte Viso, Mont Cenis, the St. Bernard Pass, and Monte Rosa, in the narrow valleys traversed by the upper streams of the Chisone and Dora Riparia, the Stura and the Dora Baltea, which all flow towards the Po, sad havoc is reported from this cause; and likewise in the neighbourhood of Cuneo, some forty miles south of Turin, at the foot of the Maritime Alps. The Val di Susa, that of the Dora Riparia, due west of Turin, is familiar to all travellers by the Mont Cenis Railway; and the Val d'Aosta, opening into the great plain at Ivrea, has been a favourite resort of tourists. The south-western valleys are celebrated in history as the abode of the Protestant Vaudois or Waldenses; and all these provinces are inhabited by a loyal, honest, industrious people, whose sufferings deserve our sympathy on the present occasion. It is officially stated that eighteen lives have been lost in the province of Cuneo and thirty in the province of Ivrea. At Exilles, in the province of Susa, an avalanche swept away sixty-three persons, but twenty of them were rescued alive from beneath the snow. At Frassino, thirty dead bodies were recovered, but many more persons were missing. One avalanche which crushed a whole family measured over 150,000 cubic mètres. Another buried instantaneously twenty-two houses, with their inhabitants. Many entire villages have been destroyed. The troops everywhere are giving admirable service in assisting to disinter those who have been buried by the snow. The Mont Cenis railway traffic was stopped during several days by the avalanches between Bardonecchia and Chiamonte, and most of the dwellings in several townships near Chiamonte and Exilles have been destroyed. The Prefect of Turin has sent troops to the spot to render what aid they can to the stricken population. It is also announced that at Sparone, near Ivrea, fifteen people have perished under an avalanche. At Cuneo it had been snowing steadily there for three days, and the snow was over 6 ft. deep. At the southern opening of the Col di Tende Tunnel two men were killed by an avalanche. The Prime Minister of Italy, Signor Depretis, has announced in the Chamber at Rome the intention of the Government to assist the afflicted localities. The list of disasters occupies columns of the Italian newspapers.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will (dated May 30, 1879), with a codicil (dated Dec. 11 following), of Mr. Thomas Edward Johnston, late of No. 20A, St. James's-place, who died on Nov. 13 last, was proved on the 20th ult. by Major-General John Hall Smyth, R.A., C.B., James Alexander Strachan, and Alfred Trevor Crispin, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to upwards of £251,000. The testator leaves numerous legacies to nephews, nieces, and other relatives, executors, and others; and the residue of his real and personal estate to his niece Emily Johnston, and his nephew the Rev. Charles Johnston, in equal shares.

The will of Mr. Thomas Cope, J.P., tobacco manufacturer, of Liverpool and London, who died at Huyton, near Liverpool, on Sept. 18 last, was proved in the Liverpool district registry on the 10th inst. by Mrs. Sarah Cope, the widow, John Hignett, and John A. Willox, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £182,000. The testator bequeaths to his brother, George, the testimonial clock of the late Robert Cope; to his sister, Sarah Sharpe, an annuity of £100 for life, and to each of the executors a legacy of £500. To the widow, he bequeaths, absolutely, all household furniture, pictures, horses and carriages at Huyton and elsewhere; and, for life, the dwelling-house at Huyton occupied by the testator, and other leasehold property there; also his share of rent or annual value of the factory premises in Lord Nelson-street, Liverpool, and Aldersgate-street, in the city of London. The executors are empowered to make all such arrangements as they may see fit with reference to the testator's share in the business of Cope Brothers and Co., and to stand possessed of the same in trust for his children in equal shares.

The will (dated Feb. 9, 1880), with two codicils (dated Nov. 22, 1880, and May 14, 1881), of Mr. George Edward Hardman, late of Oak Hill, near Rawtenstall, Lancashire, cotton and woollen manufacturer, who died on Oct. 4 last, at Buxton, was proved on the 24th ult. by George Openshaw, George Whitaker, and George Turner Hardman and James Henry Hardman, the sons, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £73,000. The testator bequeaths £20,000, but if the whole of his estate should not amount to £100,000, then only one fifth thereof, upon trust, for his daughter, Mary Ellen, to whom he also makes some specific bequests; and there are legacies to his executors and servants. All his real estate, and the residue of the personalty, he gives to his said two sons.

The will (dated Nov. 14, 1881) of Mr. Charles Allen, formerly of the Hon. East India Company's Service, late of No. 10, Norton Tenby, Pembrokeshire, who died on the 5th ult., was proved on the 24th ult. by Herbert James Allen, Charles Francis Egerton Allen, the Rev. William Osborn Bird Allen, and David Bird Allen, the sons, four of the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £48,000. The testator leaves his dwelling-house at Tenby, with the furniture and effects, and the land contiguous thereto, to his eldest son; £3000 to each of his other sons; and legacies to nephews, nieces, servants, and executors. The residue of his property he gives to his six sons, Herbert James, Charles Francis Egerton, William Osborn Bird, David Bird, Jeffrey Jullian, and Walter Griffith.

The will of Mrs. Elizabeth Lewis, widow, late of Nightingale Villa, Clevedon, who died on Nov. 2 last, at Malvern, was proved on the 16th ult. last by David Harrhy, William Daniell, and Humphrey Thomas Martin Crowther Gwynn, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to upwards of £42,000. The testatrix, after bequeathing annuities to her servants and several legacies to her executors and other persons, bequeaths to the Clevedon Dispensary all her shares and interest in the Clevedon Gas Light Company; and to the Clevedon Cottage Hospital all her shares, stock, and interest in the Clevedon Water Works Company. The residue of her real and personal estate she gives, upon trust, to pay two equal fourth parts of the income to her cousin Anne Mary Harrhy, one equal fourth part to her cousin Frances Harrhy, and the remaining one fourth to the said William Daniell and Mary Daniell and Edward Daniell. After the decease of the survivor of them, the said Anne Mary Harrhy, and Frances Harrhy, the whole of her trust estate is to be equally divided between her cousins Herbert James Daniell, the said William Daniell and Mary Daniell, Hugo Daniell, and the said Edward Daniell.

The will of Lieutenant-Colonel John Joseph Augustine Leonard Creaton, late of No. 7, Sydney-place, Onslow-square, who died on Nov. 27 last, was proved on the 24th ult. by Mrs. Emily Creaton, the widow and sole executrix, the value of the personal estate amounting to upwards of £36,000. The testator gives, devises, and bequeaths all his estate and effects unto his wife, for her own absolute use and benefit.

The will (dated June 17, 1873), with three codicils (dated May 4, 1874; July 14, 1876; and Feb. 24, 1882), of Captain John Halliburton Murray, R.N., formerly of Anfield House, Ardrishaig, in the county of Argyll, N.B., but late of No. 11, Clapton-common, who died on Aug. 5 last, was proved on the 19th ult. by Charles Townshend Ashmore and Miss Frances Mary Ellis, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £25,000. The testator leaves the proceeds of his Scotch property, and the property to which he became entitled in right of his late wife, upon trust, for Mrs. Isabella Katherine Ashmore; and there are bequests to his nephews, Edward Digby Murray and Henry Whalley Murray, and to others. He appoints the said Charles Townshend Ashmore residuary legatee.

The will (dated July 21, 1883), with two codicils (dated Sept. 13 and 16 following), of Mr. Charles Barns Wilkins, J.P., late of No. 20, Royal-crescent, Bath, who died on Nov. 30 last, was proved at the Bristol district registry on the 23rd ult. by Miss Ellen Bisdee Wilkins, the daughter, and Samuel Butler, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £12,000. The testator leaves his High-church estate to his wife, Mrs. Mary Wilkins, for life, and then, upon trust, for the widow and children of his late son, Jacob; the Studley Grange estate, subject to the payment of £50 per annum to his wife, for life, to his said daughter; the Newlands Hall estate upon trust, for his grandson, Walter Hugh Fitzgerald Wilkins; his residence, No. 20, Royal-crescent, with the furniture and effects, to his said daughter; £50 to his wife, and £1000, upon trust, for her, for life; and there are other devises and bequests. The residue of the personalty he bequeaths to his said daughter.

The costume ball of the Royal Institute of Painters in Water Colours, which was postponed last year in consequence of the death of his Royal Highness the Duke of Albany, is to be held next May.

The private view of Messrs. Agnew's annual exhibition of water-colour drawings at Old Bond-street Galleries has been fixed for the 14th of next month. In addition to the works of living artists, it will be strong, as usual, in examples of painters of the old school, such as De Wint, David Cox, Prout, and Turner.

GOLDSMITHS' ALLIANCE
(LIMITED),
WATCH AND CLOCK MAKERS,
11 and 12, CORNHILL, LONDON, E.C.
THE
BEST KEYLESS WATCHES.
A
WRITTEN WARRANTY
IS GIVEN
WITH EACH
WATCH.

Highly-finished Horizontal Watch, in plain gold half-hunting cases (as drawing), with gold or enamel dial .. £10 0 0
Ditto, ditto, in silver cases 3 10 0
Highly-finished Lever Watch, our own make, in plain gold hunting or half-hunting cases, jewelled in ten holes £21 0 0
Ditto, ditto, in silver cases 9 19 6
Illustrated Pamphlet, with Prices of Watches, Chains, Seals, Jewellery, and Clocks, of all the Newest Patterns, forwarded, gratis and post-free, on application.

THE "LOUIS" VELVETEEN.

"Le Follet" says:—The Louis Velveteen has already rejoiced in a longer reign in the world of fashion than that of any material within our recollection; and when we take into consideration that it is equally suitable for all occasions—an advantage no other fabric possesses—and that, whether employed as a complete dress, portions of toilettes, or trimmings, it is as effective as it is serviceable, its favour is not surprising.

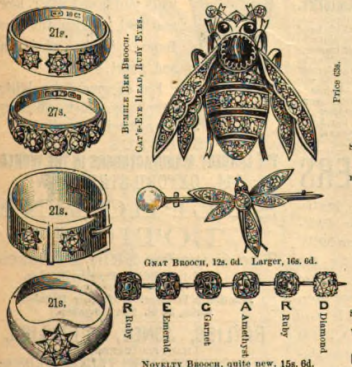
The Louis Velveteen, from its wonderful resemblance to the richest Silk Velvet, is essentially a lady's material; the lights and shadows so thoroughly like those of Genoa and Lyons Velvet, the rich folds and graceful drapery, so soft and silky to the touch, all account easily for its great and permanent vogue among the aristocracy, both here and abroad.

Though very strong, it is so light in wear that even in elaborately made dresses, with long trains, it has no inconvenient weight; while from some peculiar and special arrangement of the pile, no amount of creasing will flatten or rub it; neither rain nor dust alter its rich colourings or dim the silky bloom for which it is so celebrated—advantages that cannot be too highly appreciated.

EVERY YARD OF THE GENUINE BEARS THE NAME "LOUIS."
THE WEAR OF EVERY YARD GUARANTEED.

HEAL·AND·SON.

BEDSTEADS.
3 ft. IRON FRENCH, from 16s. 6d.
3 ft. BRASS FRENCH, from 48s.



BEDDING.
MATTRESSES, 3 ft., from 11s.
A NEW SPRING MATTRESS, warranted good and serviceable, at a very moderate price. 3 ft., 28s.
THIS, WITH A TOP MATTRESS—3 ft., 20s.—makes a most comfortable Bed, and cannot be surpassed at the price.
GOOSE DOWN QUILTS, 1 yard by 1¼ yard, 10s.
BEDDING CLEANED AND RE-MADE.

BED-ROOM FURNITURE.
PLAIN SUITES, from £3.
DECORATED SUITES, from £8 10s.
ASH AND WALNUT Ditto, from £12 12s.
SUITES OF WHITE ENAMEL, similar to that in the Health Exhibition, from £14.

EASY-CHAIRS, from 35s.
COUCHES from 75s.
WRITING-TABLES, from 25s.
OCCASIONAL TABLES, from 10s. 6d.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, WITH PRICE-LIST OF BEDDING, FREE BY POST.
195 TO 198, TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD.

FAULKNER'S CELEBRATED DIAMONDS. SPANISH CRYSTALS.
DETECTION IMPOSSIBLE.
KNOWN all over the WORLD as the FINEST STONES ever Produced.

There Magnificent Stones are set in GOLD, HALL-MARKED, and made by most experienced workmen; detection impossible; and I Defy the BEST JUDGES to tell them from DIAMONDS. The brilliancy and lustre are most marvellous, and equal to BRILLIANTS.

WORTH TWENTY GUINEAS.

The Stones being real Crystals, and splendidly faceted. They will resist acids, alkalies, and intense heat. All stones set by diamond-setters, and beautifully finished.

Single-stone Earrings, from 10s. per pair; Scarf Pins, Shirt Studs, Pendants, Necklets, &c., 20s. to £20. Much worn for Court and other occasions. Testimonials from all parts of the World. These stones are daily gaining great reputation throughout the World, and have been awarded Three Prize Medals from the Great Exhibitions.

The Public are earnestly invited to INSPECT our marvellous selection now ON VIEW, which astonishes all Visitors. Catalogues post-free.

NOTICE.—These stones cannot possibly be had elsewhere, and are only to be obtained of the SOLE IMPORTER and MANUFACTURER,

ARTHUR O. FAULKNER,
174, High-street,
Notting-hill-gate, London, W.
Established 1860.

NEW BRANCH ALSO AT 203, REGENT-ST., W.

Allen & Hanburys' "Perfected" COD-LIVER OIL.

"Is as nearly tasteless as Cod-Liver Oil can be."—Lancet.
"Has almost the delicacy of salad oil."—Brit. Med. Journal.
"No nauseous emulsions follow after it is swallowed."—Medical Press.
It can be borne and digested by the most delicate; is the only oil which does not "repeat"; and for these reasons the most efficacious kind in use. In capsuled Bottles only, at 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 4s. 9d., and 9s.
Sold Everywhere.

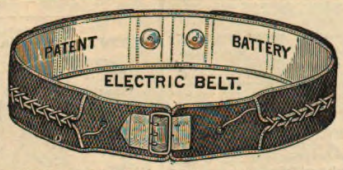
ALLEN & HANBURYS' MALT EXTRACT
Forms a valuable adjunct to Cod-Liver Oil, being not only a highly concentrated and nutritious food, but a powerful aid to the digestion of all starchy and farinaceous matters, rendering them easy of assimilation by the most enfeebled invalid. It is thus utilised in the manufacture of ALLEN and HANBURYS' Malted Farinaceous Food for Infants. Both it and the Food can be obtained through any Chemist. The Malt, in Bottles, 2s. and 3s. 6d.; the Food, in Tins, at 6d., 1s., 2s., 5s., and 10s.

REAL ELECTRICITY FOR CURATIVE PURPOSES.
A Death-Blow to the Impostors who have so long deceived the Public with Belts and Bands falsely styled Electric.

HARNESS' ELECTRIC BATTERY BELT

Is the ONLY Genuine Electric Belt extant. It must NOT be confounded with those Belts in which a few pieces of crinoline steel are sewn, and which are then grandiloquently and falsely dubbed "Magnetic" Belts, but which are utterly and absolutely ineffective and useless for curative purposes. Neither must it be confounded with those Galvanic Chains and Metallic Bands which depend for their action on some extraneous acid, and which are only effective in producing sloughing sores and life-long scars on the bodies of those who wear them, as any medical man will testify.

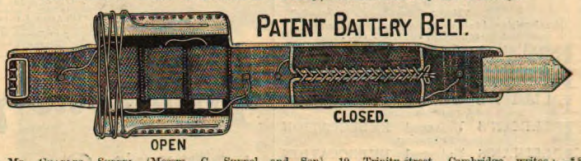
HARNESS' ELECTRIC BELT is at once COMFORTABLE, RELIABLE, and EFFECTUAL. It marks a NEW ERA in the history of Electro-Therapeutics. It is the only ELECTRIC BELT that has won the approval of the Editors of the Medical and Scientific Journals, and it can always be relied on as a safe, certain, and speedy remedy for GOUT, RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, INDIGESTION, CONSTIPATION, NERVOUS DEBILITY, and the many distressing ailments consequent on sluggish circulation or defective organic action.



Price 21s. POST-FREE.

THE ONLY ELECTRIC BELT
that has won the approval of the medical and scientific journals.
READ—
Dr. A. WILSON (the Editor of "Health," June 17) says:—"We have examined the Harness' Medical Battery Belt, to which you have made allusion, and have satisfied ourselves that it is a genuine appliance."

AN INVITATION
that no mere Purveyor of Chains, Bands, or so-called Magnetic Belts dare extend.
PATIENTS are invited to attend at the Consulting-Rooms, 205 Regent-street, London, W., and gratuitously test for themselves the effects of the electric currents produced by these Belts.



Price 21s. POST-FREE.

HARNESS' BATTERY BELT
requires no wetting with vinegar or other extraneous acid, and does not injure the most delicate skin. Need only be worn half an hour per day. Send for testimonials, or consult Mr. Harness personally (free of charge).

AN IMPORTANT FACT, of which intending purchasers of Electric Belts should take note: HARNESS' ELECTRIC BATTERY BELT is the only appliance of its kind that was allowed to be advertised at the recent HEALTH EXHIBITION.

The latest invention in Medical Electricity, recommended by the Faculty.

Mr. CHARLES SUPPEL (Messrs. C. Suppel and Son), 19, Trinity-street, Cambridge, writes:—"I am delighted with Harness' Battery Belt. A week ago I could hardly walk, through a pain in my back, but I am now as well as I was twenty years ago. I inclose a cheque for another Belt. Kindly send me a few books, as I shall do all I can to make the Belts known."

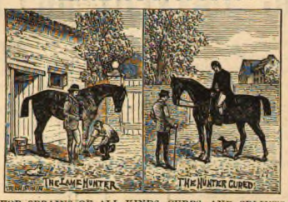
HARNESS' BATTERY BELT forwarded post-free on receipt of P.O.O. for 21s., payable to C. B. HARNESS, 205, Regent-street, London, W. Send Size Round the Waist.
For full particulars send for pamphlet, entitled "Galvanic Electricity, Nature's Remedy for Impaired Vital Energy," post-free from
THE MEDICAL BATTERY COMPANY, 205, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, W.

"CARNRICK'S"
PEPTONISED (Digested)
COD-LIVER OIL AND MILK.

Sold by all Chemists, in 16 oz. Amber Bottles, at 4s. 6d., or sent direct, carriage paid, on receipt of price.

It contains 52 per cent of pure Norwegian Cod-Liver Oil combined with 48 per cent of evaporated Milk reduced to the consistency of the Oil, both digested. The best, cheapest, and most nourishing emulsion ever made. Sweet as cream. Never separates. The taste of the Oil WHOLLY DISGUISED by the addition of the digested Milk. Can be taken by the most delicate person WITH A RELISH. Keeps in any climate. Most emulsions contain 50 to 70 per cent of water, and 30 to 50 per cent of oil. By using evaporated digested Milk instead of water, this preparation is WHOLLY NUTRITIOUS, and therefore the CHEAPEST. A trial of Peptonised Cod-Liver Oil and Milk will produce an IMMEDIATE GAIN in FLESH and STRENGTH. Delicate persons and children who have heretofore been unable to take Cod-Liver Oil in any form will find the Digested Cod-Liver Oil and Milk in this preparation MOST PALATABLE. We also manufacture the above preparation, combined with HYPOPHOSPHITES of LIME and SODA.

THE MALTINE MANUFACTURING COMPANY, LTD.,
24 AND 25, HART-STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON, W.C.



The ONLY GOLD MEDAL awarded at the International Health Exhibition for Malt Extracts was given for MALTINE, the only Malt Extract made from Wheat, Oats, and Barley; also a GOLD MEDAL for "CARNRICK'S BEEF PEPTONOIDS."

MOUSON and CO.'S Toilet Soaps are warranted to be made of the very best and purest materials, not to shrink or vary in shape or weight, even if kept for years.
Improved Toilet Soaps assorted in Honey, Rose, and Windsor.
Cocoa Butter Soap, a veritable medicinal soap for softening the skin.
Spring Violet Soap, of the natural perfume, pronounced, even by rival makers, unequalled.
Aromatic Vegetable Soap, a bijou for the Nursery, pure and uncoloured, with a splendid perfume of herbs.
Handy and Handsome (Registered Mark), a new and most conveniently shaped Toilet Soap.
"The Challenge" Windsor Soap (Regd. Mark), wonderfully mild and of excellent perfume.
J. G. MOUSON and CO., Perfumers, FRANKFORT-ON-MAIN;
and 32 and 33, HAMSELL-STREET, LONDON, E.C.
To be had of the principal Wholesale Perfumers and Druggists throughout the Country.

NO STABLE IS COMPLETE WITHOUT

ELLIMAN'S ROYAL EMBROCATION.

FOR SPRAINS OF ALL KINDS, CURBS, AND SPLINTS.
FOR OVER-REACHES, CHAPPED HEELS, WIND GALLS.
FOR RHEUMATISM IN HORSES.
FOR SORE THROATS AND INFLUENZA.
FOR BROKEN KNEES, BRUISES, CAPPED HOCKS.
FOR SORE SHOULDERS, SORE BACKS.

SPECIMEN TESTIMONIALS.

ELLIMAN'S ROYAL EMBROCATION.
From Major J. M. Browne, Master of South Staffordshire Hounds.
"Fosseway, Lichfield, Oct. 17, 1879.
"Sirs,—I find Elliman's Embrocation exceedingly good for sprains and cuts in horses, and also for cuts in hounds' feet. I shall strongly recommend it to all my friends.—Yours faithfully, J. M. BROWNE."

ELLIMAN'S ROYAL EMBROCATION.
"Castle Weir, Kington, Herefordshire, December, 1878.
"Gentlemen,—I use the Royal Embrocation in the stables and kennels, and have found it very serviceable. I have also used the Universal Embrocation for lumbago and rheumatism for the last two years, and have suffered very little since using it.
"R. H. PRICE, Lieut.-Col., Master of Radnorshire Hunt."

ELLIMAN'S ROYAL EMBROCATION.
From Captain S. G. Butson, J.P., St. Brendon's, Clonfert, Eyrecourt, County Galway.
"Dec. 16, 1884.
"Sirs,—Elliman's Royal Embrocation is in use in my stables, and I find the results most satisfactory.
"S. G. BUTSON, J.P.,
"Master of the Kilkenny Foxhounds."

Of Chemists and Saddlers, in Bottles, 2s., 2s. 6d., and 3s. 6d.
Proprietors—ELLIMAN, SONS, and CO., Slough.

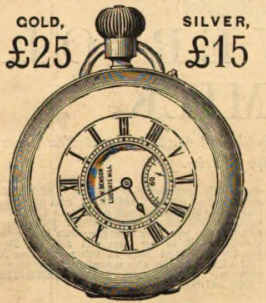
RHEUMATISM.

RHEUMATISM.

ELLIMAN'S Universal EMBROCATION for Rheumatism.

ELLIMAN'S Universal EMBROCATION for Lumbago.

ELLIMAN'S Universal EMBROCATION for Stiffness after severe exercise.



ELLIMAN'S Universal EMBROCATION for Sprains.

ELLIMAN'S Universal EMBROCATION.
Sold everywhere in Bottles, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each.
GOLD MEDAL AWARDED, NEW ZEALAND EXHIBITION, 1882.
Sold everywhere in Bottles, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each.

FOR INDIA AND THE COLONIES OR FOR HUNTING AND ROUGH WEAR.

BENSON'S SPECIALLY-MADE

GOLD, £25 SILVER, £15

GOLD ENGLISH KEYLESS "FIELD" HALF-CHRONOMETER.

CONSTRUCTED WITH PATENT BREGUET SPRING, WHICH ENTIRELY COUNTERACTS THE SUDDEN VARIATION CAUSED IN ORDINARY LEVER WATCHES BY HUNTING, &c.
JEWELLED AND ALL LATEST IMPROVEMENTS.
GUARANTEED ENTIRELY OF MY BEST ENGLISH MAKE, TO KEEP PERFECT TIME UNDER THE MOST TRYING CIRCUMSTANCES, AND TO LAST A LIFETIME. EXACT SIZE OF SKETCH.
HALF-HUNTER,
HUNTER, OR CRYSTAL GLASS.
SENT FREE AND SAFE TO ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD FOR £25 DRAFT WITH ORDER.
SILVER, SAME QUALITY, £15.
PAMPHLETS FREE, GIVING FULL PARTICULARS OF THIS WATCH AND ALL OTHERS MADE AT

BENSON'S, LUDGATE-HILL, AND OLD BOND-STREET, LONDON.

ESTABLISHED 1749.

The Hunting Editor of "The Field," after a trial of one of these watches, extending over four months, says:—
"I have used the watch for four months, and have carried it hunting sometimes five days a week, and never less than three. * * * I can confidently recommend Messrs. Benson's hunting watch as one that can be depended on."—Field, March 22, 1881.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO

Is the best TOOTH POWDER. Whitens the Teeth, prevents decay, and gives a pleasing fragrance to the breath; contains no acid or gritty substances. Ask anywhere for ROWLANDS' ODONTO.

DR. DE JONGH'S

(Knight of the Order of Leopold of Belgium and of the Legion of Honour)

LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL.

Incontestably proved by thirty years' medical experience to be
THE PUREST, THE MOST PALATABLE, THE MOST DIGESTIBLE, AND THE MOST EFFICACIOUS
IN CONSUMPTION, THROAT AFFECTIONS AND DEBILITY OF ADULTS AND CHILDREN.

SELECT MEDICAL OPINIONS.

SIR HENRY MARSH, BART., M.D.,
Physician in Ordinary to the Queen in Ireland.
"I consider Dr. De Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil to be a very pure Oil, not likely to create disgust, and a therapeutic agent of great value."

DR. GRANVILLE, F.R.S.,
Author of "The Spas of Germany."
"Dr. De Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil does not cause the nausea and indigestion too often consequent on the administration of the Pale Oils."

DR. EDGAR SHEPPARD,
Professor of Psychological Medicine, King's College.
"Dr. De Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil has the rare excellence of being well borne and assimilated by stomachs which reject the ordinary Oils."

SIR G. DUNCAN GIBB ART. M.D.,
Physician to the Westminster Hospital.
"The value of Dr. De Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil as a therapeutic agent in a number of diseases, chiefly of an exhaustive character, has been admitted by the world of medicine."

DR. SINCLAIR COGHILL,
Physician to the Hospital for Consumption, Ventnor.
"In Tubercular and the various forms of Strumous Disease, Dr. De Jongh's Oil possesses greater therapeutic efficacy than any other Cod-Liver Oil with which I am acquainted."

DR. HUNTER SEMPLE,
Physician to the Hospital for Diseases of the Throat.
"I have found Dr. De Jongh's Light-Brown Cod-Liver Oil very useful in cases of Chronic Cough, and especially in Laryngeal Disease complicated with Consumption."

Sold ONLY in Capsuled Imperial Half-Pints, 2s. 6d.; Pints, 4s. 9d.; Quarts, 9s.; by all Chemists and Druggists.
Sole Consignees—ANSAR, HARFORD, and CO., 210, High Holborn, London.
CAUTION.—Resist mercenary attempts to recommend or substitute inferior kinds.

"A Perfect Frizette in Ten Minutes."
HINDE'S Hair Curling Pins

Produce charming Ringlets, &c.
USED COLD.
Surer and much more effective than curl papers. Comfortable—Invisible—Simplicity itself.
This is a Patented Article. Every Pin and Label bears the stamp—"HINDE'S Careless Patent."
BEWARE of knavish imitations, which are absolutely useless frauds. Vendors will be rigorously prosecuted.
Sold in 6d. and 1s. Boxes, sample Box, 7 stamps, of Retail Agents, J. CARELESS, Harborne, Birmingham. Wholesale, Messrs. HINDE, Birmingham and London.

THE OXYGEN-GIVING DISINFECTANT,
HARTIN'S CRIMSON SALT

In addition to this well-known and highly-valued Preparation, a Shilling Bottle of which makes 300 Gallons of Crimson Fluid, the public can now obtain
HARTIN'S CRIMSON SALT DISINFECTING POWDER, a perfectly soluble, non-poisonous, non-corrosive, ODOURLESS, and most powerful Disinfectant, Deodoriser, and Antiseptic, ready for instant use, by sprinkling upon all that is offensive or dangerous.
Geo. R. Tweedie, Esq., F.C.S., says:—"The results of an extended and elaborate series of carefully conducted experiments convince me that Hartin's Patent Crimson Salt Disinfecting Powder is a most reliable, economical, thorough, and safe disinfectant."
Sold by Chemists everywhere in Tins.
Prices, 1s. and 2s.
Wholesale by HARTIN'S CRIMSON SALT Co., Ltd., Worcester.

Domestic Water Supply.

RIDER'S Patent HOT-AIR Pumping Engine.
HAYWARD TYLER & Co.

AT WORK DAILY AT 39, QUEEN VICTORIA ST LONDON. E.C.

Will raise 1000 Gallons 80 ft. High FOR ONE PENNY

HACAN'S MAGNOLIA BALM
FOR THE COMPLEXION

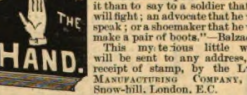
gives a pure and blooming complexion, restores and preserves youthful beauty. Its effects are gradual, natural, and perfect. It removes redness, blotches, pimples, tan, sunburn, and freckles, and makes a lady of thirty appear but twenty. The Magnolia Balm makes the skin smooth and pearly, and imparts a fresh appearance to the countenance. Hagan's Magnolia Balm has been established nearly forty years. Hagan's Magnolia Balm can be obtained of all Chemists, Perfumers, and Stores, or sent to any address on receipt of 3s. 6d.
DEPOT, 7, SNOW-HILL, LONDON, E.C.

"IT IS ALMOST HUMAN"
THE NORTON DOOR CHECK, AND SPRING.

THE SLAMMING OF DOORS ABSOLUTELY PREVENTED.

The principle upon which these springs are made renders it utterly impossible for the door to Remain Open or to Shut with a Slam. They are therefore peculiarly adapted to all kinds of doors, especially those that are framed with handsome STAINED OR ORNAMENTAL GLASS, also that are constantly left open by Careless Servants or otherwise, thereby admitting dust, cold draughts, and odours from the Kitchen or Pantry. In the Nursery, Sick-Room, and Study, or WHERE ABSOLUTE QUIET IS DESIRABLE they are almost indispensable, as they render the closing of the door POSITIVELY NOISELESS, and act with almost "human skill." Send for Illustrated Price-List.
NORTON DOOR-CHECK AND SPRING COMPANY, 46, HOLBORN VIADUCT, LONDON, E.C.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE



MENDS EVERYTHING.
WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, LEATHER, FURNITURE, METALS, &c.
Strongest and Most Elastic Glue on Earth. Absolutely Unbreakable and Inseparable!!—No Heating!—No Preparation!—Always Ready!—Always Liquid!!!—Mends China, Glass, Wood, Leather, Patches on Shoes, Rubber, Crockery, Billiard Cue Tips and Cloth, Ornaments, Stone, Furniture, Jewellery, and Book Backs, with Everlasting Tenacity!!—Sold Everywhere. Trial Bottles, 6d. and 1s. RICHARDS, TERRY, and Co., 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C., Sole Agents.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.
The Pills purify the blood, correct all disorders of the liver, stomach, kidneys, and bowels. The Ointment is unrivalled in the cure of bad legs, old wounds, gout, and rheumatism.

Never buy sham Jewellery. We sell the real article just as cheap.—Vide Press Opinions.
THE GOLDSMITHS' HALL-MARKED JEWELLERY COMPANY, 95, Strand, and at Beaufort-Buildings, London, W.C.

Warranted Real Gold, Hall-marked.	Warranted Real Gold, Hall-marked.
21/	17/6

Warranted Real Diamonds. Warranted Real Diamonds.
No. 5. Lady's solid half-hoop ring, real gold, hall-marked, set with five real diamonds of lovely colour and great purity. Price 21s., registered, post-free.
No. 6. Lady's buckle ring, real gold, hall-marked, set with two real diamonds of singular purity and great lustre. Price 17s. 6d., registered, post-free.
Money returned if goods are not as represented. All kinds of expensive Jewellery kept in stock. Cheques and P.O.O. to be made payable to the Manager, Mr. C. Locket, and, for security, crossed "and Co." Illustrated Catalogues and Press Opinions post-free.

THE ART OF PALMISTRY.

To predict to a man the events of his life by the sight of his hand is not more wonderful to him who has received the power of knowing it than to say to a soldier that he will fight; an advocate that he will speak; or a shoemaker that he will make a pair of boots."—Balzac.
This mystérious little work will be sent to any address, on receipt of stamp, by the LYON MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 7, Snow-hill, London, E.C.

SAMUEL BROTHERS

respectfully invite applications for PATTERNS of their NEW MATERIALS for the Present Season. These are forwarded post-free, together with the ILLUSTRATED PRICE-LIST, containing 250 Engravings, illustrating the most becoming and fashionable styles of Costume for the wear of Gentlemen, Youths, Boys, and Ladies.

"ETON" SUIT.

SAMUEL BROTHERS,
Merchant Tailors, Outfitters, &c.,
65 & 67, Ludgate-hill, London, E.C.

THE
"JAPANESE" CHAMBER SET.

Pompeian Brown on Ivory ground, 7s. 6d. the set.
Other excellent patterns, at 3s. 9d. and 5s. 6d. the set.
If to be sent in the country, 1s. 3d. extra for package.

ALFRED B. PEARCE,
39, LUDGATE-HILL, E.C. (Established 1760.)
Catalogue (with Nine Furnishing Estimates) on application.

GET A BOTTLE TO-DAY OF
PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER.
The Oldest, Best, and most widely known Family Medicine in the World.

Get a Bottle to-day of PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER. It instantly relieves and cures severe scalds, burns, sprains, bruises, toothache, headache, pains in the side, joints, and limbs, all neuralgic and rheumatic pains. Taken internally, cures at once coughs, sudden colds, cramp in the stomach, colic, diarrhœa, and cholera infantum. PAIN KILLER is the greatest household medicine, and affords relief not to be obtained by other remedies. It dispels the agony of pain, gives REST, SLEEP, COMFORT, QUIETUDE. It supersedes the use of dangerous Narcotic and Anodyne Remedies. Any Chemist can supply it, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per Bottle.
Depôt, 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

"ADVICE TO DYSPEPTICS."
Symptoms of Dyspepsia and Indigestion, with Special Advice as to Diet.
"This little pamphlet appeals forcibly to those who have allowed the palate to decide everything for them, and have paid the inevitable penalty of their folly."—Globe.
Sent for One Stamp.
J. M. RICHARDS, Publisher, 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

LAIRITZ'S REMEDIAL PINE WOOL FABRICS AND PREPARATIONS.
Celebrated Anti-Rheumatic and Gout Remedies.
ESTABLISHED 1853.
Awarded 10 Prize Medals

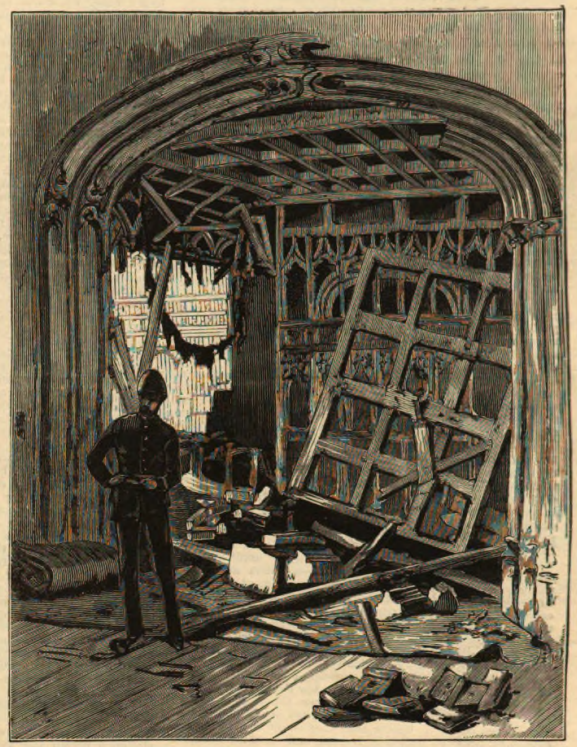
Consisting of Pine Wool Flannels, all Description of Under clothing, Chest Preservers, Knee-Caps, Knitting Yarn, Wadding, Needle Oil, Bath Extract, Soap, &c., FOR PREVENTION, RELIEF, AND CURE of Gout, Rheumatism, Cold, Neuralgia, and all Nervous Disorders. Sold by all Drapers, Hosiers, Chemists, and Druggists. Wholesale of Messrs. WELCH, MARGETSON, and CO., and Druggists' Sundriesmen.
CAUTION.—None Genuine without Trade Mark and Signature Lairitz

LIPSCOMBE & CO.

Celebrated FILTERS effectually purify any water, however foul, making the most Impure Water wholesome and sweet.
For cheapness, durability, simplicity, and efficiency, they stand unrivalled.
PROSPECTUS FREE.
THE LARGEST MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD.
144, OXFORD-STREET, W.

SULPHOLINE LOTION.
The Cure for Skin Diseases.
In a few days Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, entirely fade away.
Beautifully Fragrant. Perfectly Harmless.
Bottles, 2s. 9d. Sold Everywhere.

BAYLISS, JONES, & BAYLISS,
MANUFACTURERS OF
IRON HURDLES, GATES, TREE-GUARDS, &c.



Illustrated Catalogue free. Please name this Paper.
VICTORIA WORKS, WOLVERHAMPTON,
And 3, Crooked-Lane, King William-street, London, E.C.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by INGRAM BROTHERS, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JANUARY 31, 1885.

THE DYNAMITE OUTRAGES.

DIVISION LOBBY OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS,
WHERE THE DYNAMITE WAS PLACED.

EFFECTS OF THE EXPLOSION IN THE DIVISION LOBBY, HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THE SPOT IN WESTMINSTER HALL WHERE THE FIRST PARCEL OF DYNAMITE EXPLODED.

DYNAMITE EXPLOSIONS.

THE TOWER AND THE PALACE OF WESTMINSTER.

The infamous gang connected with the remnant of "Irish Invincibles" from America, who trade upon the excitement caused by murderous outrages to obtain subscriptions from their silly dupes through the agency of O'Donovan Rossa and others at New York, have perpetrated further acts of mischief in London. On Saturday afternoon, at two o'clock, they effected an explosion of dynamite on the middle floor of the White Tower, at the Tower of London, where the store of infantry small-arms is kept; and ten minutes later, at the Houses of Parliament, there was an explosion near the steps between Westminster Hall and St. Stephen's Hall, followed in three minutes by another explosion within the House of Commons, below the Peers' Gallery. In both these noble public buildings, at the time chosen for the explosions, there were, as usual on Saturday afternoon, large numbers of visitors, men, ladies, and children, who came to see the interior; and the dastardly scoundrels who ignited blocks of dynamite in these places, at that hour of the day, must have known that there was great probability of their destroying many innocent lives. The guilt of murder is therefore both morally and legally attached to these villanous acts, if any of the persons who are severely injured should unhappily not recover. At the Tower, two young women and two boys were seriously hurt. At Westminster, a police-constable, named Cole, who bravely carried away the first parcel of dynamite to the entrance of St. Stephen's Crypt, another policeman, Cox, and Mr. Green, a civil engineer, whose wife and his sister-in-law, Miss Davies, had a very narrow escape, suffered injuries which may prove to be worse. The amount of damage to the buildings, in each instance, was such as can easily be repaired, being chiefly in the floors, the woodwork, and the fittings, but the repairs will be at a considerable cost. The effects of these explosions, like those at London Bridge, at the Victoria Railway Station, in St. James's-square, and in Scotland-yard, and at the Local Government Office, Westminster, prove that the force of dynamite acts only within a very small space, and that no large and substantial building can possibly be demolished by one or two charges of it placed in casual situations. This experience is more than enough completely to falsify the boastful predictions of the authors of such futile as well as wicked attempts. They remain unable, while due precautions against ordinary incendiarism are maintained, to destroy any important Government buildings or conspicuous public edifices; and they can only intend to create general alarm by the peril to life necessarily attending these explosions among the people thronging places of much resort in London. It is manifestly, therefore, part of their calculations that a number of deaths may be occasioned by these outrages, and they are justly to be regarded as wanton murderers of the vilest class, speculating on wholesale chances of homicide for the sordid gain of a few hundred dollars extracted from the American Irish—from the most ignorant, reckless, and uncivilised class of the United States' population. There is no reason to believe that they obtain any support or sympathy from the people of Ireland, and certainly not from the Irish dwelling in England; they are mere outlaws and enemies of society, whose foul deeds and cowardly plots deserve universal condemnation and the sternest punishment of the criminal law. We present a variety of Illustrations of the nefarious attempts made on Saturday, which we proceed to narrate, describing their actual results without further commentary, as they took place first at the Tower, secondly at the Houses of Parliament or Palace of Westminster, including Westminster Hall.

AT THE TOWER OF LONDON.

The White Tower, the most conspicuous feature of the collection of buildings called the Tower of London, rising high above the surrounding structures, with its square bulk of solid masonry and its four angle-turrets visible from the Thames and from many parts of east and south-east London, is a grand specimen of Norman architecture. It was constructed for William Rufus by Gundulph, Bishop of Rochester, who also built Rochester Castle. This massive quadrangular structure occupies the central part of the Inner Ward. It measures 116 ft. from north to south, and 96 ft. from east to west. The height is 92 ft. It is embattled, and has watch-towers or turrets at each angle. The roof is covered with lead. It consists of three lofty storeys, besides the spacious vaults in the basement floor. The external walls are 15 ft. in thickness. The communication between the storeys is by a spacious staircase in the north-east extremity of the building. The newel, or circular column, around which the stairs wind, is a curious specimen of ancient masonry. There are also staircases in the north-west and south-west angles, the former of which commences only on the first floor. A wall 7 ft. thick, extending north and south, divides the three storeys from the base to the summit of the building. Another wall, extending east and west, subdivides the easternmost of the former divisions into unequal parts; thus forming in each storey one large apartment and two smaller ones. The smallest division on the first floor is now known as "Queen Elizabeth's Armoury." This room has a vaulted roof, exhibiting a highly interesting specimen of early construction. On the north side of the room is a doorway communicating with a cell, 10 ft. long and 8 ft. wide, formed in the thickness of the wall, and receiving no light but from the entrance. Directly over this apartment, occupying the space from the first floor to the roof, is St. John's Chapel, "one of the finest and most perfect specimens of Norman architecture" to be found in this country. It has a semicircular termination at the eastern end, and the twelve massive pillars which divide the nave from the aisles are also arranged in a semicircle at the eastern end. The pillars are uni ed by arches which admit the light into the nave from the windows in the southern aisle. A gallery with arches corresponding to those below is above the pillars. The larger room on the upper floor was used as the Council Chamber when our Kings held their Court in the Tower. It bears the genuine aspect of antiquity, and its massive timber roof and supporters harmonise with the stately style of other parts of the building. Here it was that the Council assembled when Richard, Duke of Gloucester, ordered Lord Hastings to be beheaded. This room is entirely filled with a collection of Oriental arms and armour, arranged as trophies. The Banqueting-Hall, on the middle floor, adjoining St. John's Chapel, is about 90 ft. long and 60 ft. wide; its roof was pierced by two skylights and by a square opening to the floor of the Council Chamber above, which was protected by a brass railing. The whole floor of the Banqueting-Hall was occupied by standards of Martini-Henry rifles and bayonets, with passages between them, and it was here that the dynamite was exploded, at the south end, close to the dark passage leading into St. John's Chapel.

Saturday being a free day for visitors, there was a good number of applicants for admission, estimated by Mr. Bunyard, the chief warder, at between eighty and one hundred. A party of these, under the charge of the warder-jailer—a sub-officer of that ancient body popularly known as Beefeaters—was mustered at the Bell Tower, and was conducted in the usual way to the White Tower. St. John's Chapel is so notable a feature of the old fortress that visitors always linger here, while the accompanying guide gives a brief description; and the bulk of the warder's party were in the chapel, or on the steps leading up to it from the outside, when the explosion took place. The number who had passed on into the main room may have been twenty or thirty. It seems probable that the scoundrels who perpetrated the outrage had placed the packet of dynamite behind one of the rifle racks, in a position where, from the obscurity of this part of the building, it would be sure not to attract the attention of any casual passer-by. They must have previously reconnoitred the place and settled their plan, and, this being done, carrying it into execution was a very simple business. They had but to form the rear of one of the parties conducted through the place, and on coming out of St. John's Chapel into the Banqueting-Room furtively to drop the packet of dynamite unobserved, the fuse no doubt being so arranged as to give ample time to the perpetrator to put himself beyond the reach of risk. Then was heard a deafening report, with a flash of fire, followed by a hail of broken glass and a dense dust that hid everything for some time as in a fog. Cries of terror arose from the women and children, mingled with those of pain from some who had been injured by the broken glass, and who naturally thought themselves in much worse plight than happily proved to be the case. The chief warder, Mr. Bunyard, who was at his lodgings by the Bell Tower, heard the report and felt the concussion, and ran at once to the scene of the disaster. The yeoman-warder, who was struck by the flying glass without being wounded, nearly losing his balance from the rush of air, exerted himself to get his party together and out of the building. Women and children had been blown against the walls, some being thrown down, and the former, when they reached the open air, had some work in clearing each other's hair and dresses of fine fragments of glass with which they had been covered. In the confusion two or three children got separated from their parents or friends. A warder, whose duty confined him to St. John's Chapel, was blown off the chair on which he was seated; but he, like his colleague, the other warder, assisted in getting out the throng of frightened people, who were not at all reassured by it being discovered that the explosion had set fire to the flooring on which the dynamite had been placed. The flooring is very thick, a mass of solid timber and planking, and, in the interstices of this, fire had been lodged as the powerful explosive reft its way clean through to the lower storey of the building, and a dense smoke both from the upper and lower cavities thus formed showed that a dangerous fire was imminent. It was dealt with, however, promptly and effectively. A battalion of the 2nd Grenadier Guards is stationed in the barracks on the opposite side of the parade-ground, and within a minute of the explosion their bugler sounded the assembly. Officers and men swarmed out on the parade-ground, and were told off to cope with the casualty which had occurred. Three women and a boy who were the worst cut of the dozen or more who were injured were removed to the surgery of the battalion, where their wounds were dressed, and they were placed in safety. The rest of the visitors were handed over to the police stationed within the Tower, by whom they were removed from the Tower-green; their names and addresses were taken, and they were dismissed in batches by the Lion Tower and the Postern Gate to Tower-hill. The Guardsmen were at once formed as a cordon quite round the White Tower, pickets being posted also in the several approaches. A strong force was told off for fire duty, and under the direction of the firemen stationed in the Tower, the manual engines, always in readiness, were got out, and brought to the scene of action and rapidly into work; hose was unrolled, connected with fixed hydrants, and got into both floors of the building, and in a very few minutes good streams of water were being poured into the cavities from which smoke had been rolling out in rapidly-increasing volumes. The promptitude with which these measures were taken in all probability averted the destruction or damage to the 100,000 stand of arms that occupy the two store-rooms. In a little time it became apparent that all fear of a serious fire was at an end, and when in a creditably brief period the first engine of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade galloped on to Tower-green, speedily followed by two more, and by Captain Shaw, all danger was at an end. On examination it was found that the flooring for some distance in the Banqueting-Hall, and the wood lining of the ceiling of the ground floor, were torn into splinters. Rifle racks in the Banqueting-Room were tilted backwards and forwards from the scene of the explosion, and hundreds of the rifles damaged and displaced. In the lower storey, or gun floor, where the effect was very great, racks were smashed, and rifles by hundreds, in all stages of damage, were lying in a heap beneath, saturated with water. Upwards from the Banqueting-Room there were marks of the explosion on the ceiling. The epaulet worn by the Duke of Wellington when Constable of the Tower fell through the hole in the floor, and has since been hung on one of the cords which stretches between two of the arm-racks below. Every window, not only in the Banqueting-Hall and St. John's Chapel, but also in the ground floor and the upper floor or Council Chamber, was more or less wrecked, sash-frames and window curtains being blown across the parade-ground to a building opposite, inhabited by the families of married soldiers, where also some windows were broken.

The persons injured at the Tower were Elizabeth Ballan, twenty years of age, whose face was severely lacerated; Ann Nunn, aged nineteen, much burnt in the face and neck; and two little boys, Herbert George, eleven years old, wounded in the thigh and hands, and Ernest Stratton, about the same age, badly cut on the side of his head.

Colonel Majendie, Inspector of Explosives, made an inspection of the scene, accompanied by Sir F. Abel; Commissary-General Thorne, who has charge of the stores at the Tower, was also present. In the opinion of experts, the quantity of dynamite necessary to produce an explosion of this extent would be four or five pounds, which could be compressed into a space small enough to be carried in a man's hat. It is, however, suspected that the dynamite was conveyed into the Tower concealed in a woman's dress. On Sunday afternoon the Duke of Cambridge, attended by Colonel Lord Algernon Lennox, arrived at the Tower and was conducted through the rooms of the explosion by General Milman, Major of the Tower, the acting officer in charge. The 2nd Grenadiers are on duty there, commanded by Colonel P. Smith, C.B. The total number of arms displaced was found to be 4000 rifles.

Captain Shaw, C.B., in his official report, gives the details as follows:—"Called at 2.5 p.m. to the Tower of London. Name of occupier of premises, business, and name of residence and landlord, Constable and Chief Governor-General Sir Richard James Dacres, G.C.B. Supposed cause of fire, explosion. Where insured, contents and building not. Call, fire alarm and military. How extinguished, military and firemen, with seven private hydrants and three private manuals. Damage—White Tower, south end of first floor (known as Banqueting-Hall, used as stores for service arms), also second floor (known as Council Chamber, used as stores for ancient arms and armour), and contents severely damaged by explosion, fire, and water; rest of White Tower and contents slightly by explosion and water."

AT THE PALACE OF WESTMINSTER.

Westminster Hall, from the raised upper end of which, turning to the left, a flight of steps ascends to St. Stephen's Hall, the vestibule of the Houses of Parliament, is one of the earliest specimens of our Perpendicular Gothic style, and is thought to have been the work of William of Wykeham. This noble Hall was originally added to the ancient Palace of Westminster by William Rufus, who held his first Court here in 1099. Three centuries later Richard II. had its walls heightened two feet, the windows altered, and a new timber roof constructed, from the design of Henry de Yeveley, who was master-mason to three successive Kings and to the Abbey of Westminster. The dimensions of the Hall are 239 ft. long and 68 ft. broad. The roof, 40 ft. above the pavement, is one of the finest examples of ancient carpentry; its timbers spring gracefully upward from the stone string-course, sculptured with the white hart couchant under a tree, and other devices of Richard II. The hammer-beams, stretching out horizontally, are sculptured with angels bearing shields; and these shapes testify to the excellence of wood carving as early as the fourteenth century. From this open roof—on which the dust and soot of years had accumulated, formerly hung standards, guidons, and trophies of victory. In the years 1820 and 1821, forty loads of oak from old ships broken up in Portsmouth Dockyard were used in renewing decayed parts and completing the portion of the north end which had been left unfinished. The roof was also greatly strengthened, in 1851, by tension rods added to the principals. The old English Kings held their Courts, or, as the words ran, "wore their crowns," in Westminster Hall; and the place was also occasionally used as a high court of criminal justice, for the solemn trials of great delinquents, impeached by the House of Commons. Queen Anne Boleyn's trial was in Westminster Hall; and the trial of the Earl of Strafford, in 1640, before Charles I.; the trial of the King himself, nine years afterwards, being also in Westminster Hall. On the Restoration, in 1661, the Act for the King's Trial was burned by the common hangman while the Court was sitting. As early as the year 1248, the thirty-third of King Henry III., Parliaments assembled in this hall; the first representation of the people, as at present formed, being in 1265, the forty-ninth year of the same King's reign.

Anyone is at liberty to enter Westminster Hall and to pass the door of the Crypt, which is situated beneath St. Stephen's Hall. But, in order to arrive at the door of the House of Commons, it would be requisite to obtain an order to view the building, and to traverse a number of apartments and corridors guarded by picked members of the police force. Visitors, having tickets, must, during the Parliamentary recess, enter the Palace by the Norman porch, where the ticket is delivered up to a constable in attendance. The way then leads by the grand staircase, and by a turning to the right into the Queen's Robing-Room, past another constable, and so to the left into the Royal Gallery, containing Maclise's frescoes of the meeting of Blucher and Wellington on the field of Waterloo and of Nelson on board the Victory at Trafalgar. The visitor is next introduced into the Prince's Chamber, likewise under police surveillance, and he passes by the right to the back of the Throne into the House of Lords, also strictly guarded. Crossing the splendid Chamber of the Peers by the Woolsack, skirting the table, either on the Ministerial or Opposition side of the House, the visitor is directed through the brass gates into the Peers' Lobby, and thence into the Peers' Robing-Room. From there the stranger, leaving the Lobby, proceeds through the Peers' Corridor into the Central Hall, and straight across it through the Commons' corridor into the lobby of the Lower Chamber. After inspecting the different features of the House of Commons, his way out leads him into the Commons' Lobby, through St. Stephen's Hall, and down a flight of steps into Westminster Hall. No one, having once entered the Palace by the Norman porch, is suffered to return by that route, but all must make their way through the House of Lords to the Commons and thence to Westminster Hall.

It has been observed that, at the upper end of Westminster Hall, to the left of the grand staircase leading to St. Stephen's Hall, is a small oak door opening upon a short flight of steps, being the entrance to the Crypt; and a little way down those stairs is a narrow paved embrasure, where, a few minutes past two o'clock on Saturday afternoon, Mr. Edwin Green, a civil engineer, residing in London, accompanied by his wife, and his sister-in-law, Miss Davies, observed a parcel about the size of an ordinary brick, which was covered in some dark material resembling cloth, and from which smoke was issuing. Suspecting the parcel to contain dynamite, he shouted to the ladies to go back, at the same time allowing them to pass up the stairs into Westminster Hall, he following. Constable Cole, on duty in the Crypt, hearing Mr. Green's voice, rushed down the steps, and laying hold of the parcel, ran with it towards the Hall. Directly he arrived at the iron gates separating the entrance to the Crypt from the outer space of the Hall, the parcel exploded, wounding him severely, displacing the solid pavement, and making a cavity five feet by four, into which he was violently precipitated. Instantly the entire Hall was enveloped in a dense cloud of dust and falling glass, and all became dark, as if night had suddenly come on. Constable Cox, who was on duty in the Hall, then rushed forward to the place whence the sound of the concussion proceeded, and in the gloom, not being able to see his way, fell bodily into the abyss, where Cole lay insensible, and where Mr. Green was also discovered, the three being huddled together in a confused heap. Mrs. Green and her sister were hurled against the wall close to the gate of the Crypt.

At that moment Mr. Scott, resident superintendent of the Houses of Parliament, was in his apartments, situated within the building. He also hurried to the spot, and in the imperfect light saw Mrs. Green, who had partially recovered from the first shock of the concussion, standing on the steps leading to St. Stephen's Hall, and heard her shrieks of alarm. She cried "Who'll get my husband out? Who will save him?" Mr. Scott next saw Mr. Prim, the resident engineer, carrying Mr. Green from the gateway into the body of the Hall, past the canvas screen erected there, behind which two painters were at work on a large elevation drawing of the proposed restoration of the west side of the structure. Mr. Green was taken first to the quarters of Mr. Erskine, Assistant Serjeant-at-Arms, and afterwards removed to 24, Abingdon-street, close by, the residence of Mr. Liddell, with whom he was acquainted. Realising the frightful situation at a glance, Mr. Scott, without a moment's delay, requested Inspector Denning, who arrived almost simultaneously on the scene, to have the palace forthwith cleared of all strangers, and to stop every means of ingress or egress, further directing that all doors should be locked and closely guarded. Inspector Denning, assisted by a couple of constables, proceeded to institute a most rigorous search, in case any other infernal machines might have been placed in the Hall or in the chamber of the Lords. The confusion at this time was at its height, and the persons who perpetrated the crime appear to have escaped.

IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Three or four minutes after the first explosion, another was heard, which was in the interior of the House of Commons. A corridor to the left, from the Central Hall, beyond St. Stephen's Hall, leads to the proper Lobby of the House of Commons. Every visitor will recollect that the entrance to the House itself from the "Lobby" was guarded by handsome swinging oak doors, with carved and glazed panels, similar to those leading into the House itself, and from which it was divided by a short passage. On either side, right and left, were the doorways of the "Aye" and "No" Division Lobbies, each of them in like character, and built in a screen of similar design. Entering the Division Lobbies, a door led into that portion of the House "under the clock," which, while actually inside the precincts, is, by a Parliamentary fiction, presumed to be outside. On the left hand of entering, or Government side, just opposite to the stairway leading to the Peers' Gallery, in the "Aye" Division Lobby, was a flight of iron steps leading to the ventilating chamber below the House, whence the supply of hot air is regulated, and there is no doubt the charge of dynamite was deposited close to this spot. When parties of visitors are being conducted through the House, there is a barrier across this particular spot, and nobody is supposed to be allowed to go there, but there would be little difficulty in either getting under the barrier and laying a small parcel down, or throwing it round the corner to the place where it undoubtedly exploded. The only persons in the precincts of the House of Commons at the moment were a lady and gentleman, who fortunately escaped unhurt.

The damage effected in the House of Commons was not inconsiderable, but can be repaired before Feb. 19, the day fixed for the opening of Parliament. The left half of the swing door at the entrance to the House is blown completely away, and the short corridor between that and the door leading into the Chamber itself is also destroyed. The blocks of solid stone of which the door-jambs are composed were on the left side dislodged, their inner face being broken and pulverised. The doorkeepers' chairs are also damaged. One other effect of the powerful explosive was to break downward through the floor of the Division Lobby, flinging huge fragments of stone, iron, and wood into the vaults beneath. The cross-benches, where Mr. Bradlaugh usually sits, are completely wrecked; likewise the gallery devoted to the accommodation of Peers and Ambassadors immediately above. In that gallery the seats are torn from their sockets, overturned, and piled upon the railing to the left of the clock; three of the gallery supports, having been forced out, were shot into the body of the Chamber. One of these carved oaken stays, eight inches in diameter, seems to have been carried in a zigzag direction along the Government side of the House, passing by, without materially damaging, the Radical benches, which are strewn with planks and rafters, and fragments of the cloth covering with which the furniture of the apartment is enveloped when Parliament is not in session. This beam appears to have first struck the seat which Mr. Gladstone usually occupies, tearing out a large piece of the green leather, and ripping open the wool and horsehair stuffing. It must then have glanced off to the right, and coming into collision with the despatch-box on the table, opposite the Premier's seat, it broke off one of the two brass octagonal stars with which the box is ornamented, engraved with the initial of the Queen, leaving the other star inscribed with the letter "R" intact. The solid timber must then have hurtled across the table, carrying with it a portion of the brass gallery in front of the chairs allotted to the clerks of the House; thence it seems to have bounded once more upon the Treasury Bench, rending and tearing up part of its cushion, and in the bound hitting the right hand top corner of the Speaker's chair, partially destroying the leather covering, and finally finding a resting-place on the seat allotted by courtesy to Ministers. All the painted glass of the lantern roof by which the House is illuminated at night is smashed to atoms. On the east side half the windows are destroyed, as also are a few of those on the west side, and one of the shields running round the cornice beneath the roof, inscribed with the Irish harp, was flung down from its place and lay upon the short cross-bench in front of the chair of the Serjeant-at-Arms, close to the benches below the gangway on the left of the Speaker, where the Parnellite members rejoice to sit. The coverings of the seats on the floor have been blown from their places, and some of those in the galleries tossed over the rails, where they hang in festoons, particularly above the immediate site of the explosion. Every part of the Chamber is covered with a thick layer of dust, fragments of carved wood and pierced brass being scattered about the floor and seats. The major portion of the actual damage is, however, on the Ministerial side, in a line with the course of the explosion, very little hurt being done to the Opposition benches. The Reporters' and Ladies' Galleries, with the exception of glass destroyed, do not appear to have suffered much injury, and the same may be said of the two extremities of the Members' Galleries nearest the Speaker's chair. Apart from the very serious fracture to the left door-jamb of the entrance to the Chamber, the walls of the House are said to have sustained no displacement.

The Speaker of the House of Commons arrived in town from Bedfordshire on Monday morning, and, after inspecting the Chamber, paid a visit at Westminster Hospital to the two injured policemen, Cox and Cole, who are well known to most of the members of the House. They are under the care of Mr. Cowell, the Senior Surgeon at Westminster Hospital, and are both progressing favourably. Numerous inquiries were made as to their condition, one of the first being a telegraphic message from the Queen at Osborne on Sunday evening. Cole seems to have acted with extraordinary courage and self-devotion, as he knew that the package he picked up contained dynamite, the wrapper of which was apparently burning, and he therefore determined if possible to carry it into the open air before trying to put it out, so as to minimise the danger if it exploded. Mr. Green is also considered to be in a way of recovery, but he has some internal injury, causing hæmorrhage, from a heavy stone falling on his chest.

Mr. William J. Prim, the Resident Engineer at the Houses of Parliament, estimates the damage done in the Hall and the House by the two explosions at from £10,000 to £15,000. It is said that the stained south window in Westminster Hall, which has been riddled, cannot be restored at a cost of less than £1000. It was noticed that of the coloured glass in the ceiling of the House only one pane escaped uninjured. The damage at the Tower is estimated at £1000 only.

A young man who was taken into custody at the Tower on Saturday, on suspicion of being concerned in causing the explosion, was brought before Sir James Ingham at Bow-street Police Court on Monday. He had been living at 32, Scarborough-street, Whitechapel, and said his name was James Gilbert Cunningham. He is a native of county Cork, and has been in New York for four or five years, having returned from there in the autumn. He gave three or four different addresses, but ultimately his correct one, where some very good clothes were found. Although he describes himself as a dock labourer, and admits that he has done no work for a time, he had £7 10s. upon him when arrested.

Any persons who visited Westminster Hall, the Crypt, or Houses of Parliament on Saturday, between ten a.m. and 2.15 p.m., are requested to give information to the police if they observed a man and a woman answering to the following description:—Man: Age, thirty-five to forty; height, 5 ft. 10 in. to 11 in.; complexion, sallow; shaved on chin; fair whiskers and moustache; rather pug nose; long brown overcoat, dark trousers, billycock hat. Woman, age forty, short, complexion sallow, dark clothes, sealskin (or imitation) jacket, hair on forehead turning grey. Both man and woman appeared to be Americans. And if so, what they can state with reference to their movements, and at what time they were seen. All persons who visited Westminster Hall, the Crypt, and Houses of Parliament on Saturday are requested to send their names and addresses to the police.

A strict look out is kept by the police at Liverpool, Dover, Folkestone, and other ports, for suspicious-looking persons leaving the country. The public buildings and the prisons in London are guarded by extra police.

In the United States of America all the organs of public opinion express their horror and detestation of these outrages. The Senate at Washington, on Monday, with one dissentient vote, passed a resolution proposed by Senator Bayard to this effect. A bill has been introduced by Senator Edmunds, enacting severe penalties for manufacturing, keeping, or dealing in dynamite, to injure persons or property in America or abroad. It has been referred to the Foreign Affairs Committee, which may consider that the subject is properly one for the action of the several State Legislatures. But in that case the passing of Federal laws against all such organisations sustained by public subscription may be expected. The feeling against the dynamite outrages is strongly expressed in all the cities of Continental Europe.

THE CHURCH.

A wealthy colonist, Mr. John Campbell, has promised £10,000 towards the endowment of the see of Fiji.

The Duke of Northumberland, Mr. F Seager Hunt, and Mr. R. H. White have each contributed £100 towards the proposed new central premises of the Church of England Young Men's Society.

A meeting was held at the Chapter House, St. Paul's, on the 22nd inst., at which it was resolved to erect in St. Paul's Cathedral, by public subscription, a recumbent effigy of the late Bishop of London.

The Anglican diocese in the Canadian North-West, heretofore known as Assiniboia, under the spiritual care of Bishop Anson, will in future be called the diocese of Qu'Appelle, the the members of the diocesan synod having approved of the change.

At Cumberland Lodge on the 23rd inst., Prince Christian, in the name of a number of distinguished subscribers, presented to the Rev. E. L. Tuson, who has been nominated by the Queen to the living of Kingsthorpe, a handsome silver breakfast service and an illuminated address, on his retirement from the chaplaincy of the Royal Chapel, Windsor Park.

The old and interesting little church of Hampreston, in Dorset, has been much improved in appearance by the completion of the filling in of the five chancel windows with stained glass. The whole work has been carried out by Messrs. Mayer and Co.—The large east window of St. John's Church, Rammoor, Sheffield, is about to be filled with stained glass in memory of the late Dr. Chalmers.—The east window of Ewerby church, Lincolnshire, has been filled with stained glass as a memorial to the late Earl of Winchilsea.—In memory of the late Mr. Townshend Mainwaring, who represented the Denbigh boroughs in Parliament for many years, three stained-glass windows have been erected in the church of Trefnant—one by Mr. Mainwaring's relatives, and the other two by personal friends. The church at Trefnant was built by the Mainwaring family from Sir G. G. Scott's designs.—A new reredos has been placed in Brampton church, Hants; the design is of an elaborate character. The materials are alabaster, mosaics, and encaustic tiles. Mr. A. W. Blomfield was the architect.—A new reredos has been placed in the parish church of Cardington, Salop. It extends the whole width of the chancel, and is principally composed of Minton's encaustic tiles.—The Hon. Mrs. Morewood has presented to the parish church of Alfreton a handsome eagle lectern of brass, in memory of her son, the late Mr. William Palmer-Morewood.—In continuation of the restoration of St. Mary's, Chipping Norton, a marble mosaic pavement has been laid in the chancel, with steps of Irish fossil marble. The aisle passages have also been laid with marble mosaic.—The Dowager Marchioness of Hertford has erected an elaborate reredos of alabaster and marble in Arrow church, near Alcester, in memory of the late Marquis.

STREET'S INDIAN AND COLONIAL MERCANTILE DIRECTORY FOR 1885.

The present is the tenth issue of this most useful work. In addition to the Trade Returns, Tariffs, Populations, &c., the volume contains full particulars of the steam and other communications with the various places treated of, wherever anything like a regular mode of conveyance or correspondence exists. The leading merchants and traders of every class likely to be of any use to manufacturers and all engaged in commerce, are fully enumerated, together with the leading professional men. The usual carefully selected list of the principal merchants and traders in London and the chief towns in the United Kingdom is also given. Concise descriptions of each country and town are furnished, with a view more particularly to show their commercial capabilities and peculiarities. The principal products, and details as to the articles of which the trade returns chiefly consist, will also be found; also tables of the local weights and measures, and the value in English money of foreign coins. All the London agents to each of the banks are named; and wherever possible, the principal Government officials and Consuls in each town are given. Particulars of the various railways in operation, or in course of construction, are also supplied where practicable. The number of towns and cities has again been increased. Maps are given of all the principal countries of which particulars are furnished in the letter-press. These have been specially revised for the work, with the view to show the relative positions of the chief towns, without confusing the maps with names of unimportant villages and stations.

Inspector Simmons, of the Essex Constabulary, who was shot on Tuesday week by a gang of burglars, died about eleven o'clock last Saturday morning. He was thirty-seven years of age, had been in the force about twenty-one years, and had several narrow escapes from injury by armed burglars in the discharge of his duty. A reward of £250 is offered for information leading to the apprehension of the gang.

OBITUARY.

LADY GEORGIANA CHARLOTTE FULLERTON.

Lady Georgiana Fullerton, whose death we briefly mentioned last week, was a lady of great accomplishment and literary ability—the authoress of "Ellen Middleton," "Grantley Manor," and other popular novels. Becoming a member of the Church of Rome, she devoted her latter years to works of piety, and to the production of several religious publications, which were highly esteemed. Her Ladyship was born Sept. 23, 1812, the second daughter of the first Earl Granville, G.C.B., and married, July 13, 1833, Mr. Alexander George Fullerton, of Ballintoy Castle, county Antrim, and Westwood, Hants, by whom she leaves no issue.

MR. MORGAN O'CONNELL.

Mr. Morgan O'Connell, formerly M.P. for Meath, died at 12, Stephen's-green, Dublin, on the 20th inst., aged eighty-one. He was second son of Daniel O'Connell, the celebrated leader of the Irish people, and in early life joined General Devereux's "Irish South American Legion" in aid of Bolivar, and subsequently held a commission in the Austrian army. On his return, he was elected M.P. for Meath, and continued to represent that county until 1840. His Parliamentary career was undistinguished; the principal event for which it is remembered was his duel with Lord Alvanley, which he fought in place of his father. Mr. Morgan O'Connell, some time after his retirement from the House of Commons, was appointed Registrar of Deeds in Ireland, but resigned the office about fourteen or fifteen years ago. He married Kate Mary, daughter of Mr. Michael Balfe, of South Park, in the county of Roscommon, who survives him, but leaves no issue. Of his father's family, the only surviving son is Mr. Daniel O'Connell, formerly M.P. for Tralee.

We have also to record the deaths of—

Lieutenant-Colonel Burnaby, at the Battle of Abu Klea, on the 17th inst., aged forty-three. A portrait and a memoir of this gallant officer are given in this Number.

Mr. Patrick Francis Robertson, late of Halton House, Hastings, J.P. and D.L., on the 20th inst., aged seventy-seven.

The Rev. William Garrett Lewis, a prominent minister of the Baptist denomination, for some time minister of the Westbourne-grove chapel.

Lady Richard Browne (Agnes Elizabeth), wife of Lord Richard Browne, fifth son of the late Marquis of Sligo, and daughter of Mr. J. Amesbury, of Brighton, on the 17th inst.

The Rev. William Hall, Rector of Little Saxham, Bury St. Edmunds, Suffolk, fourth son of the late Mr. John Hall, J.P., of Portslade House, Sussex, on the 14th inst., at his Rectory, in his eighty-ninth year.

The Rev. Charles Rodd, fifty-three years Rector of North Hill, Launceston, Cornwall, on the 16th inst., in his seventy-eighth year. He was second son of the Rev. Edward Rodd, D.D., of Trebartha Hall, Cornwall.

The Rev. John Clutton, Prebendary of Norton, in the cathedral of Hereford, son of the late Rev. John Clutton, Canon of Hereford and Rector of Kinnersley, on the 16th inst., in his eighty-second year.

The Lady Alicia Conroy, widow of Sir Edward Conroy, Bart., and younger daughter of Laurence, second Earl of Rosse, on the 21st inst., at Arborfield Grange, Reading, in her seventieth year. She was married in 1837, and became a widow, with an only son, the present Sir John Conroy, in 1869.

Mr. Robert Barbour, of Bolesworth Castle, Cheshire, J.P. and D.L., High Sheriff 1866, on the 17th inst., aged eighty-seven. He was formerly one of the merchant princes of Manchester, and purchased, in 1857, the fine estate of Bolesworth Castle. He leaves one son, George, J.P., M.A. Trinity College, Cambridge, barrister-at-law; and one daughter.

Mrs. Thistlethwayte (Elizabeth Catharine), wife of Mr. Thomas Thistlethwayte, of Southwick Park, Hants, and second daughter of Lieutenant-General the Hon. Sir Hercules Robert Pakenham, K.C.B., of Langford Lodge, in the county of Antrim, on the 22nd inst. She was born May 19, 1823, and married Aug. 6, 1850.

Major-General George Pope, C.B., late H.E.I.C.S., youngest son of the late Mr. Robert Pope, of Navidale, in the county of Sutherland, on the 20th inst., in his eightieth year. He entered the Bombay Army in 1824, and retired as Major-General in 1861. He served, as Commissariat Officer, in Scinde, under Napier; and, as Chief Commissariat Officer, in Persia, under Outram.

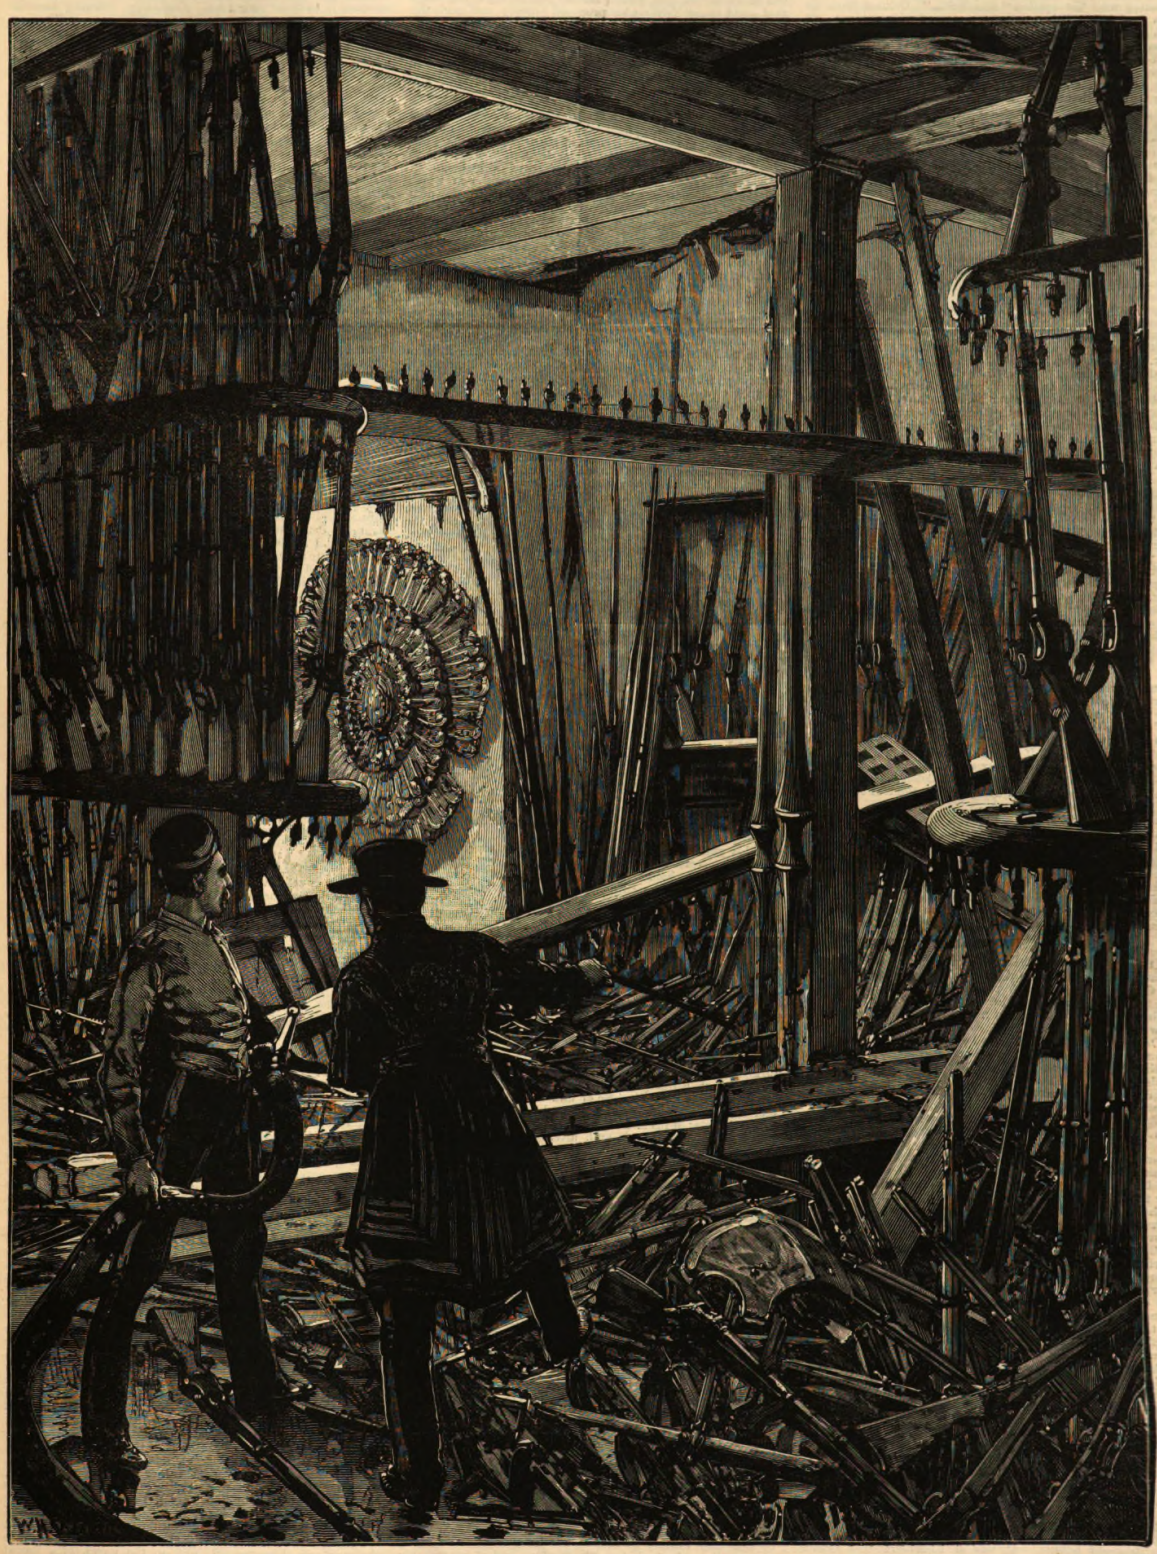
The Emperor of Germany has appointed Sir J. Lister, Professor of Clinical Surgery in King's College, London, a Knight of the Order Pour le Mérite for Science and Arts.

Yesterday week Mr. William Bousfield presided at a public meeting to inaugurate the opening of a new Board school in Sherbrooke-road, Fulham. There was a large attendance, including Mr. W. Hayes Fisher, the selected Conservative candidate. Accommodation has been provided for 360 boys, 360 girls, and 457 infants.

Mr. George Pitt Lewis, of the Inner Temple, has been appointed Recorder of Poole, the office being rendered vacant by the appointment of Mr. Bompas as Recorder of Plymouth and Devonport.—The Queen has approved of the appointment of Mr. R. H. Spearman as Recorder of Bridgnorth, in the place of the late Mr. William Cope.

Robert Charles Hodgson, described as a clerk, twenty-four years of age, was yesterday week charged before the Croydon magistrates with having shot at a young lady named Edith Allen, many years his junior, with a revolver, with intent to murder her. The prosecutrix, who was accustomed to sit near the prisoner in church, had received a note from him, asking her to meet him, which she declined to do. He had fired three shots at her, but according to the medical evidence the injuries were only slight. A remand was ordered.

The Lord Mayor has issued an appeal to the public for funds to enable the Mansion House Council on the Dwellings of the People to continue their useful work. Last year a little over £1000 was contributed. This is now nearly exhausted, but the work is rapidly increasing. Upwards of 2500 cases of insanitary conditions in dwellings were dealt with during the year, and now that the object and methods of the council's operations are becoming better known, fresh cases of urgency are presented to them daily. He says:—"Our workers, all but three or four, are voluntary, and we need extra helpers of the same kind, especially such as will labour in the East-End."



A telescope, with a fine object-glass of 3¼ in. aperture, has been presented by the Duchess of Marlborough to the Radcliffe trustees, for the use of the Radcliffe Observatory. The instrument bears the following inscription:—"This valued instrument, given to John Winston, seventh Duke of Marlborough, by Sir James South, F.R.S., is presented to the Radcliffe Observatory by Frances Anne, Dowager Duchess of Marlborough, to aid those astronomical studies in which her beloved husband took so deep an interest, and to preserve a memory of him in an institution of which he was so long trustee. November, 1884."

THE DYNAMITE OUTRAGES.

THE EFFECTS OF THE EXPLOSION IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS: OUR ARTIST SKETCHING FROM MR. GLADSTONE'S SEAT.

THE DYNAMITE OUTRAGES.

SCENE OF THE EXPLOSION IN THE TOWER OF LONDON.

THE LATE COLONEL BURNABY.

The career of the late Colonel Burnaby, whose fall in the battle of Abu Klea was so widely and deeply regretted, was at once brilliant and unique. He was skilled both in literature and arms; and, in summing up the record of his achievements, one is, in some respects, reminded of that marvel of the sixteenth century, whose name has been handed down to us, associated with the epithet "Admirable." Colonel Burnaby was a most accomplished linguist, a man of wide reading and much culture, a magnificent athlete, a splendid swordsman, a distinguished soldier, a daring balloonist, and a traveller of world-wide reputation. In physique he towered above his fellows. He was six feet four inches in height, and round the chest measured about forty-six inches. His features were finely cut and handsome, and his eyes full of the "native daring," which one might well look for in a hero who could boast of many a soldier among his ancestors of 800 years. But he was not the less a man of kindliest glance and of winning manner and cosmopolitan good humour, and his circle of friends and acquaintances was singularly large and varied.

Frederick Gustavus Burnaby, or "Fred" Burnaby—to give him the name by which he was known among his friends, and which he adopts on the titlepage of his famous "Ride to Khiva"—was the elder son of the late Rev. Gustavus Andrew Burnaby, of Somerby Hall, Leicestershire. The father, who was Canon of Middleham, married the third daughter of Mr. Villebois, of Marham, in Norfolk, and "Fred" was born at Bedford in 1842. In his early training, conducted at home, considerable attention was paid to athletics, in which he always excelled. In due course he was sent to Harrow, where, though he did not do much in Latin or Greek, he was distinguished for his progress in French. We hear, too, of his pluck in a big fight which he had with a schoolfellow older and taller than himself. Something at this period was also done by him in the way of rowing, for he took his little skiff from Windsor to Oxford, passed through the canal into the Severn, and rowed beyond Shrewsbury. The juvenile voyage lasted three weeks. Besides, it occurred to him to enlighten the public on the subject of fagging, through the columns of Punch. The public were amused, it is said, but the masters began to wonder if it would be necessary to expel this energetic youth. From Harrow, he was sent to Germany; and, when seventeen—after passing his examination, the youngest of 150 candidates—he was gazetted Cornet in the Royal Horse Guards (Blue).

At the age of twenty-two, by which time he was a Lieutenant, he made his first essay in ballooning. The story is a curious illustration out of many which his life afforded of that "contradictorious" character which, he tells us, his nurse ascribed to him. It was a hot summer night in July, and he had gone to Cremorne with some brother "subs" to smoke a cigar. Here he happened to meet a Captain, a friend of his, talking "to the manager of the gardens, and to a short, thick-set man, whose dark features, close-shaven face, and moustache, betokened his Gallic nationality." "This," said his friend, whispering impressively, "is Godard. You know, the man who is going up in the fire-balloon to-morrow." "Very good fun, I should think," was the easy reply of Fred. "Fun, indeed!" retorted the Captain—"fun with the chance of being burnt, as well as of being smashed. You would not think it fun, if you went up with him." "I was a little nettled at this," says Colonel Burnaby, in his "Ride Across the Channel," "and without taking time to reflect, said 'I should be delighted to ascend, if Monsieur Godard would take me.'" The story of his ascent next day with the French aeronaut is graphically told in the volume which Colonel Burnaby published in 1882, after he had accomplished the feat of crossing the Channel alone in a balloon.

In 1868 Burnaby, now a Captain, visited Paris and Pau, and thence passed to Bayonne, Biarritz, San Sebastian, Madrid, Seville, Cadiz, and Gibraltar, after which he crossed to Tangiers. 1870 finds him visiting St. Petersburg, Moscow, Odessa, and Constantinople; but this tour is cut short by his father's illness. Three years later he himself is lying prostrate at Naples from typhoid fever. This was the year in which General Kauffmann began his expedition against Khiva, and it was the intention of Captain Burnaby to have gone there and seen the fighting, if his illness had not put him hors de combat.

On his convalescence he again went to Spain, and succeeded, notwithstanding the convulsed state of the country owing to the Carlist rising, in reaching the French frontier by Vittoria, San Sebastian, and Irun. In the following year he returned to the Peninsula, and wrote a narrative for the Times of what he witnessed of the civil war. While he was with the troops of Don Carlos, whose friendship he won, an incident occurred which serves to illustrate the personal fearlessness of the man. While the Carlists were repelling an attack which the Liberals made on them at the church of Di Castello, Burnaby was calmly watching the fighting, when suddenly a body of the enemy appeared within a hundred yards, and delivered a murderous volley, which brought down several men behind him. "The commanding officer gave the order to kneel and fire under cover of the parapet wall. This was obeyed promptly enough, but Burnaby remained still standing on the same spot, until the attack was repulsed. One man was shot dead, and an officer had his ear cut off by a bullet, within a few feet of him." As the author of an appreciative "Special" in the Daily News has said of him with a touch of grim humour:—"Probably no man in the Army or out of it took such infinite pains to get killed as Burnaby did."

The close of this year sees him the guest of "Chinese Gordon," who had succeeded Sir Samuel Baker as head of an expedition sent by the Viceroy for the suppression of the Slave Trade. Captain Burnaby communicated an account of his experiences with Gordon to the Times. Khartoum he describes as "a clean-looking town of 20,000 inhabitants." Of the country through which the White Nile flows after it is joined by the Blue Nile in the neighbourhood of Khartoum, he writes that it is magnificent in the extreme. "Splendid timber on each side, fine and lofty trees, which would have ennobled an English park, were studded here and there in all directions. Every now and then we came to long avenues or vistas of trees, beneath whose shade we could discover quantities of gazelles, tebals, and oriel deer; along the banks swarmed hippopotami and crocodiles, and in the rich grass that grew luxuriantly from the river to the edges of the wood ran thousands of guinea-fowl, so tame that they utterly ignored the presence of our steamer. The country between Khartoum is a veritable sportsman's paradise; every species of deer abounds, while elephants, giraffes, and buffaloes, as well as lions and leopards, are to be met with at two hours' distance from the banks." To General Gordon's successful skill and energy, and to his exceptional disinterestedness, he pays a high and well-deserved tribute. It was at Khartoum that Colonel Burnaby determined upon his famous ride to Khiva, and the immediate occasion of his taking this resolution is told by himself in his introduction to the well-known narrative which he published—a work which, after reaching its eleventh edition, is now before the public in a popular form. He determined to go to Khiva, because, one day when he was chatting with a friend, his eye fell upon a paragraph which stated that the Government at St. Petersburg had closed Russian Asia to foreign travel. Anything difficult had its attractions for him, and he loved well to do what he was dared to do. "You will never get there," said his friend; "they will stop you." But in little more than a year Colonel Burnaby was in Khiva.

Though daring in attempt, Burnaby was not rash or careless in execution, and, before setting out, he read every book that could throw light on his proposed journey, and made the most careful arrangements regarding his outfit. How necessary was the most careful provision against the cold he had to encounter in crossing the "vast snow and salt-covered track" of the Kirghiz steppes may be gathered from the fact that, in crossing this bitter region in an exceptionally severe winter, he nearly lost both his arms through frost-bite. Happening to fall asleep in the sleigh, and to withdraw his hands, which he had neglected to glove, from his fur sleeves, in which he had inserted them crosswise, he awoke in intense pain to find his arms attacked as far as the glands at the arm-pit. It was one of those moments, he tells us, when death seems a relief to man. The frozen limbs, "which were of a blue colour, floated painlessly" in the tub of ice and water in which the Cossacks immersed them when he arrived at the next station. "The arms will drop off," despondingly remarked an attendant, "if we do not restore the circulation"; and it was not until they had been rubbed with naphtha, until the spirit in some places penetrated the raw flesh, that they were saved. It was several weeks before he recovered the effects of this terrible exposure and its necessarily rough cure. On the pretext of buying horses at Kalenderhana, Colonel Burnaby succeeded in inducing his guide to take him to Khiva without passing through the Russian fort of Petro-Alexandrovsk. Had he not made this détour, he would probably never have set foot in the Khan's capital—a view justified by the fact of his being summoned from Khiva to the Russian fort to receive a telegram from the Duke of Cambridge, requiring his immediate return to Europe. The "Ride to Khiva" gave Colonel Burnaby a European reputation, and added considerably to our knowledge of the territory he passed through and its inhabitants.

In the autumn of 1876, the year of his Khiva expedition, Colonel Burnaby discovered that he had not fixed on what to do with himself during his coming winter leave of absence. Most people would have stayed at home, or gone to the Riviera; but Burnaby determined to travel in Asia Minor. There, he argued, I shall be with Turks far removed from any European influence; and the character of the Turk was, in the agitation provoked by the Bulgarian atrocities, the topic of the day. There were two ways of reaching Van, which was to be the turning-point of his tour. The ordinary winter route was by the Black Sea and Erzeroum. Undeterred by the dangers ahead which the ferocious Kurds and the snow presented, he took Kiepert's map and struck a line across country to Erzeroum, reached Van, and returned to Constantinople via Kars, Ardahan, Batoum, and Trebizonde. The two volumes in which he describes this "Ride" are, perhaps, fully as interesting as his "Ride to Khiva," and they are of greater importance from the information which they contain. Our protectorate of Turkey in Asia, though conditional, and though lost sight of in the engrossing interest which Egypt possesses for us at present, is a fact which we cannot afford to ignore; and the undeveloped resources of that region and its military importance to the mistress of India necessarily give importance to any experiences of travel on the part of a close and intelligent observer. The advice of Colonel Burnaby is, therefore, well worth weighing, when he writes:—"Let foreign settlers go to Anatolia. Let them make railways throughout the country; it could supply the whole of Great Britain with corn, and the mines of coal and other minerals would prove a source of immense wealth to the inhabitants." Rich soil left fallow for miles around excited his astonishment. "There are not," said his guide, "enough inhabitants to cultivate the land." As to the character of the "unspeakable Turk," if Burnaby was not a Russophobist he was a Turkophile. The question, however, need not be entered on here. It is enough to add that apparently the Russian Government was Burnaby-phobist, for, on reaching Erzeroum, he found that the Russian Consul had received a telegram from the authorities in the Caucasus, in which it was ordered that the Colonel, described as a desperate enemy (un ennemi acharné) of Russia, should be expelled if he set foot on Russian territory; and for the proper execution of this order it seems photographs of the indomitable "Fred" had been hung up in the Russian frontier stations. They had not forgotten that he reached Khiva.

The succeeding events in the life of Colonel Burnaby are still fresh in the mind of the public. In 1877 we find him in Plevna as agent to the Stafford House Committee; and he was present at the memorable fight of Tashkesan. In 1878 he turned his attention to politics, and was approved by the Conservatives at Birmingham as their candidate at the next election. It is characteristic of him that he chose to attack Radicalism in its stronghold. So, also, is the story that in 1879—the year of his marriage—he defied a stormy meeting of the Birmingham electors, and, after stating he could if he chose walk through the meeting-room, took out his pipe, filled it, and began to smoke on the platform as placidly as if he had been sitting on the sands of Eastbourne. They then allowed him to proceed with his speech. In 1880, at another stormy meeting, he jumped from the platform, and made his way through an excited audience. As a public speaker, he has been described as "remarkable for his excellent delivery, and for a sturdy downright way of hitting the nail on the head, which often proved extraordinarily effective." Although an uncompromising Tory, he was successful in polling no fewer than 15,716 votes. In 1882 he crossed the Channel alone in a balloon, landing in Normandy. He proved that when the wind of a lower altitude is adverse to such an attempt, it is still possible to succeed by throwing out ballast and reaching a higher and favourable current. He had also the interests of his own branch of the service in view, for he thought ballooning should be conducted by the cavalry, and not by the engineers. When the Soudanese war broke out he joined Baker Pasha, and was present at Souakim. Later on he was severely wounded at El Teb. He was the first to mount the parapet, and the Khedive's medal was conferred on him.

In the present campaign, unable to obtain an appointment, he left for Africa, and friends who supposed he had gone to the Transvaal next heard of him at Korti. The rapidity with which he conducted a convoy from Korti to Gakdul, in order to reach General Stewart, is well known. Under General Stewart, in the recent memorable battle of Abu Klea, he met his fate. A lance pierced him in the jugular vein in the fierce fight that took place when our square was forced. We may be sure how bravely he fought, for he was a born soldier, of marvellous physical strength, fearless, and of indomitable energy. Besides,

> No thought was there of dastard flight,
> Groom fought like noble, squire like knight,
> As fearlessly and well;
> Each stepping where his comrade stood
> The instant that he fell.

Of such a man, naturally, there is many a story told which cannot be incorporated in a brief epitome of his life. We are told, for example, how assiduously he nursed the faithful servant Radford who accompanied him through Asia Minor, and who, returning, died at Dover in the state of unconsciousness in which he was landed. A survivor of El Teb writes to a contemporary to tell how, after their return to Trinkitat, Burnaby, seeing several around him parched with thirst, knocked the neck off his last little bottle of Medoc and distributed it to those near him. Noticeably, Burnaby himself was a very temperate man. Most people know how at Windsor he carried out, one under each arm, two small ponies which his fellow-officers had obligingly conducted to his room. His feats with colossal dumb-bells are also well known. It is also recorded of him that one day ascending a ladder—or rather two ladders roped together—sixty feet high, with a view to descending hand over hand by the rungs, he found, on swinging round, his support was tottering, and that he instantly dropped his grasp to catch the ladder some three rungs lower down and threw his weight on one side, thereby averting a probably fatal accident. The wonder is that, with a passionate devotion to athletics which so lowered his vitality when young that foreign travel was recommended as an alterative, Burnaby found either time or inclination to read or write. But he was, as we have said, a man of culture; his pen was rarely idle, and he was, more or less, proficient in nine languages. Perhaps Mr. R. K. Mann, who two years ago wrote a book about Colonel Burnaby, lets us into the secret of this when he says of his hero, then in the happy days of a brilliant career:—"All he does is without hurry or confusion, and as systematically as if he had been trained in a merchant's counting-house. He is most orderly, and has appointed hours of work, and . . . he is an early riser." There is, however, no royal road by early rising, or otherwise, to being what one is not; and comparatively few men are born with the indomitable energy which Burnaby displayed in the brilliant career cut short in the fierce fight of Abu Klea.

NOVELS.

Not a little of the freshness suggested by the title pervades the story of Between the Heather and the Northern Sea: by Mary Linskill (Richard Bentley and Son), which exhibits considerable originality and power of writing. The reader must be prepared to find æsthetics mingled with the romance of the tale and to enjoy (or not) a great deal of "tall talk" concerning art and the gifted beings who devote their lives to it. The novel resolves itself, as is the case with most novels nowadays, into several studies of character, and most prominent among them is a study of the very unlovely character which belongs to a certain Diana Richmond. Externally she is as beautiful and majestic as an incarnate Juno; internally she is of a spirit too mean and too meanly vindictive to inspire the actions of the commonest kitchen-maid of modern times. She is not ashamed to make open love to a painter who will have none of her, and to do all she can to ruin him and his unoffending daughter, when he refuses the offer plainly made to him; and she declines to return the letters of a former lover, whom she never really loved and who gives her distinctly to understand that he loves her no longer, in order that she may have the whip-hand of him and hold within her grasp the means of torturing both him and the poor girl on whom he has bestowed his affections. There is something so fundamentally unwomanly about such a creature as this, that she may be regarded as quite an original conception, more original by far than either agreeable or probable. She, however, gives occasion for the introduction of many picturesque, powerful, passionate scenes; and it would be ungrateful, therefore, to regret that it is necessary to make her acquaintance. Among the other personages of the story, on the contrary, there is scarcely any whom it is not a pleasure to meet, if only in the pages of three volumes; and, though some of them are a little more long-winded than is altogether desirable, there is a remedy, well known to the "general reader," for that by no means uncommon infirmity; a remedy, alas! which it is not possible to apply to the "ancient mariner" or other wordy customer whom we encounter in the flesh. Of the personages with whom it is most gratifying to make acquaintance, none is more charming than Miss Genevieve Bartholomew, daughter of the unappreciated artist already alluded to as a "painter," and none more entertaining and at the same time pathétic in their way than the Cravens and Ishmael Crudas, who are handled in a manner worthy of "George Eliot."

Were it customary to read novels to a musical accompaniment, then The Lover's Creed: by Mrs. Cashel Hoey (Chatto and Windus), should be read to the tune of "The girl I left behind me." For the story is of a young woman who was left behind him in England by a young gentleman, when he went to fight the Russians in the Crimea. And let it not be supposed that young "woman" and young "gentleman" are terms thoughtlessly employed, and used without significance: for the great point of the romance is that the son of the Squire fell in love with the lovely daughter of a tenant and would fain have married her. But we know the little prejudices which even the best of Squires may be expected to display in such cases; and so the hero, whose father is the very best of Squires, and the heroine, who is the most considerate of maidens, agree to keep their engagement secret. This is the only point upon which there is any concealment in the son's dealings with the father; and, oddly enough, the only point upon which there is any concealment in the father's dealings with the son is one of a similar kind. Indeed, the picture of perfect, manly understanding between father and son is chief among the many charms which the novel possesses. It can scarcely be necessary to state that, whilst the hero is absent at the wars, the heroine, whose father is a brute of the lowest type, has a dreadful life of it, and is reduced to the depths of despair by finding her lover's name in the list of killed and wounded. This is sure to occur in a novel, and the experienced reader will take the matter much more philosophically than it is taken by the poor heroine, and will continue to read on in the certainty, rather than the hope, that the report of the hero's death will turn out to have been strictly false. True; but, in the meanwhile, what of the heroine? The report may have been her death-blow, or it may not. She may even have imitated the behaviour of Annie Laurie, in whose case report was more truthful, and may have married that lucky "second string," who figures in romantic narratives under the style and title of "another." However that may have been, the story is likely to excite considerable interest, though, by an exercise of perversity rather than of originality, that interest is excited far less by the young hero and heroine and their affairs than by the elders of the story and their very singular position and proceedings. The heroine's father and step-mother are made to figure with needless frequency and conspicuousness; and this is the more to be regretted, because the spectacle, however well put on the pages, of a brutal husband bullying and even beating a timid and submissive wife is exceedingly painful and repulsive. Some of the best portions of the romance are reserved for the time when the scene shifts from England to Brittany; and they are very good indeed. The book is illustrated, but by whom is not stated: yet the illustrations are not a whit inferior to the current sort.

Murder and mystery have a great attraction for a certain large class of readers, and to them Great Porter-Square: by B. L. Farjeon (Ward and Downey), may be recommended with more than ordinary confidence: for the three volumes are all murder and mystery from beginning to end. And a very fair specimen the novel is of its kind, being much better written than the majority of such works. The author makes unsparing use of a hypothetical evening newspaper called, or supposed to be called, the Evening Moon, from which he pretends to take copious extracts, and so saves himself a vast deal of the trouble which he might otherwise have had to expend upon artistic construction. Upon that hypothetical newspaper, then, it is permissible to draw in order to put readers in the way to understand what it is they must prepare to read about. The aforesaid hypothetical newspaper is supposed to have appeared one evening with a number of "sensational headings," such as "the murder in Great Porter-square," and "a romance in real life," and "a hundred thousand pounds," and "wealth, beauty, and love at first sight"; and then to have commenced a long narrative as follows:—"After a lapse of several weeks, we reopen the subject of the murder in Great Porter-square. Although the murderer is still at large, the affair has advanced another and most important stage, and one element of mystery in connection with it is satisfactorily cleared up. We are about to disclose the name of the murdered man, and at the same time to lay before our readers certain interesting information relating to him which, without doubt, will be eagerly read." The murdered man's name was Holdfast, a gentleman of large fortune, a widower with one son. He married, when his son Frederick was about of age, a second time, a lovely young widow, who tells a story, after the murder, of his having fallen in love with her, and treated her in such a manner that his father kicked him out of the house. The son went to America, and is reported to have died in Minnesota; but is it more than report? The father went to America in search of the son, but could not find him dead or alive: may not the report of the son's death be untrue; may not the son have followed the father home to England, and, being in need of money, have dogged the rich man, who always carried a thousand pounds or so (as rich men so very seldom do) in his pocket, to the mysterious house in Great Porter-square, and then ——? It is a horrible suggestion; and, of course, some reason must be discovered for the fact that a wealthy gentleman, with a good house of his own and a lovely young wife in it, went and took dingy lodgings in a feigned name. Well, it appears that he was visited by a veiled lady, who may or may not have been his wife, but never gave so much as even a feigned name. Enough has now been written to show what kind of literary fare is provided in the novel; but all who like it set to with appetite.

Once more the French marriage-laws, with the "three respectful citations," have been pressed into the novelist's service, and form a fundamental portion of the material out of which the story entitled Ulrica: by Cecil Clarke (Tinsley Brothers), is more or less skilfully elaborated. Ulrica is the lovely daughter and apparently only child of a Parisian silk-merchant and his wife; and they, after the real or supposed fashion of their country, have promised her in all her youth and beauty to a rich but old and hateful silk-merchant of Lyons, to be his wedded wife, without asking the young lady's leave or opinion until after the promise has been made. The young lady herself, being already pre-engaged, as it were, to a young clerk in her father's business, refuses to listen to reason, as is revealed in a very good introductory scene. The parents would, of course, have regretted their charming child's stubborn disobedience far less, if it were not that her father, as so frequently happens to fathers of beautiful, marriageable, but unmanageable girls in novels, is in pecuniary difficulties, which have placed him in the power, as he fears, of the amorous ogre, who is the young lady's abhorrence. There is a great deal of quarrelling and temporising, until Ulrica comes of age; and then, having done what the law requires of her in the matter of the "three respectful citations," she promptly marries the impecunious clerk of her heart. After this comes all manner of trouble, embittered by remembrance of an affectionate mother's curse; and in the end, whether the novel be intended to illustrate the wickedness of the French marriage laws or not, it will probably be a question with the reader whether Ulrica would not have done better for all concerned, herself included perhaps, if she could have swallowed her certainly very natural antipathies, taken the old scoundrel with the money-bags for worse if not for better, and devoted her talents to bamboozling him, twisting him round her little finger, and exerting her talents and her charms to make him her more or less willing slave. It is curious that the writer, who seems to know something about France and French, should persist in writing "chaperone" instead of "chaperon" (possibly meaning to accept an Anglicised form of the word), and should be seduced, by the desire of appearing to make a smart remark, no doubt, into observing, when one personage promises to "let off" another personage, that the expression would be used of a "pop-gun." For the two personages are supposed to be speaking French, not English (which is only employed because the story is written in that language); and, of course, neither of them would have used the term which calls forth the smart remark.

Mr. A. P. Voules has been appointed Head Master of the Chesterfield Grammar School.

A Royal fund for the relief of the orphans of sea fishermen has been founded as an outcome of the late International Fisheries Exhibition, and has received from its surplus funds a grant of £10,000, in accordance with the recommendation of the Prince of Wales. An urgent appeal is made to the public for liberal donations and subscriptions.

The past week's arrivals of live stock and fresh meat at Liverpool, from the United States and Canada, amounted to 1991 cattle, 72 sheep, 11,069 quarters of beef, 980 carcases of mutton, and 70 hogs—which, in comparison with the imports of the preceding week, show a further increase in the shipments of cattle and fresh beef, but a decrease in that of sheep and mutton.

The marriage of Mr. George Earle Buckle, editor of the Times, with Miss Alice Payn, the third daughter of Mr. James Payn, took place on the 22nd inst. at St. Saviour's Church, Warrington-crescent, the officiating clergyman being the Rev. G. Buckle, Weston-super-Mare, father of the bridegroom, assisted by the Rev. Prebendary Harry Jones, of Barton, formerly of St. George's-in-the-East. A large number of friends of Mr. Buckle and of the bride were present.

A high school for girls, called Queen Elizabeth's Girls' Grammar School, was opened at Mansfield on the 20th inst. The original school was for boys only, and was founded in 1561 by Queen Elizabeth. In 1875 premises were built, under Queen Elizabeth's endowment, for a day school for boys, which has greatly prospered; and now, under a portion of the same endowment, a school has been opened for the higher education of girls in Mansfield and neighbourhood.

NEW BOOKS.

A lively, amusing, gossipy book, but at the same time a sad one, has been written by Mr. George Dolby, entitled Charles Dickens as I Knew Him. The Story of the Reading Tours in Great Britain and America (1866—1870), (Fisher Unwin). Mr. Dolby acted as the business manager during the tours, a task of no common difficulty; and it speaks well for him that in those years he exchanged his official position of a financial agent for that of a friend of the great humourist. Very pleasant is the account given of Dickens, in his private character as a travelling companion, and in his public rôle on the platform. Few men have ever gained so much popular applause and excited at the same time so much enthusiasm among the cultivated classes. And Dickens seems to have borne his honours modestly, but not without an excitement which ruined a naturally robust constitution. It is melancholy to hear of the strain caused by these Readings, and at a time, too, when he was as capable as he ever had been of original composition. No doubt the vast sums received were a great temptation to a man with a large family—out of the 242 readings given under Mr. Dolby's management he cleared nearly £33,000; but at the same time his books yielded a fortune. The price agreed to be paid to him for "Edwin Drood" was to be £7500 for the copyright, and a half share of the profits after a sale of 25,000 copies. He was also to receive £1000 for the advance-sheets sent to America; and the writer states that the total sales of the work during the author's lifetime exceeded fifty thousand copies, "though the book was little more than half finished, and only about one third of it in the press." That he should have undertaken to write this book at all, and written what he did write so well, may well surprise anyone endowed with less force of character. In America, he could not give a reading without much suffering; and, after giving one, was sometimes forced to lie down for half an hour in a state of the greatest exhaustion before he could undergo the fatigue of dressing. When, on returning to England, he gave his final course of readings, all the bad symptoms increased in severity. Complete rest was the sole prescription of the doctors, and rest he would not take. Dickens's physical as well as mental energy was tremendous; but it killed him. We do not know that Mr. Dolby's narrative throws much new light on the character of his hero, but it is an affectionate tribute, from one who knew him intimately, to Charles Dickens's many noble qualities of head and heart. Mr. Dolby writes modestly and well.

It is the common habit of small poets and versemen to follow the style in vogue among the greater singers of the day. In his prettily printed little volume, Bramble Cloisters (Elliot Stock), Mr. John Watkins Pitchford throws off this allegiance altogether. There is not a line of his blank verse which will remind the reader of Tennyson or Browning, of Swinburne or Matthew Arnold. Neither does his poetry express the spirit of the age. It carries us back to a period of less struggle and perplexity, and to that homely, simple enjoyment of natural objects which distinguishes the descriptive poetry of Thomson from the more spiritual and subtle fidelity of Wordsworth. Mr. Pitchford has an eye to see and skill to describe; he is as faithful to the common life around him as Cowper, or as the Scottish poet Grahame. His pictures are singularly vivid; unlike Thomson, his style is never turgid, but he resembles that poet—once the most popular in England, and now almost forgotten—in his careful observation of outdoor life. We do not say for a moment that Mr. Pitchford has the weight and significance of Thomson: there are doubtless passages in the "Seasons" far beyond his mark; but he may be called his son. Here is one brief extract from "The Idyll of the Dawn" which, though it cannot express the worth of the book, will illustrate its style:—

Now shoot o'er dewy hedge
Through opening woods, the sun's first rays,
Reddening and warm; and with a thrill of life
All things awake: the hum of bees is heard
About the garden hives, and round the elms
The buzz of daring flies; chirp, twitter, song,
Glad flit of hasty wing, the upward soar
Of joyous-throated lark, the blackbird's song
Warbled in rounded tones, make sweet the hour.
Sparkles the hoary dew upon the grass;
The trailing mists drift from the shining woods,
From out whose dark blue depths come gentle sounds
Of cooing doves, happiest of happy birds.
Cutting and diving through the freshened blue
Of cloudless heaven, the arrowy swallows dart.
Ere pale blue wreaths of climbing smoke arise
Above the garden trees from cottage roofs
The satchelled labourers come, with tools in hand,
Bound for the hayfields or the distant woods.

Our want of space forces us to break off abruptly. Perhaps we have said enough to show the character of Mr. Pitchford's work. It is as true to life as the wonderful prose idylls of Mr. Richard Jefferies.

Dr. Johnson's "Lives of the Poets," in spite of much prejudice and sometimes of what we may venture to call critical incapacity, is so full of weighty thought and of the writer's personality that it must always retain a place in literature. Of the Lives of Famous Poets, by William Michael Rossetti (Ward, Lock, and Co.), it would be hazardous to express the same confident opinion. The author has the qualifications of knowledge and of love, his taste is catholic, and his power of expression for the most part felicitous. If his estimates of poets do not always satisfy the reader—and how is this possible if the reader has a poetical creed of his own?—they are not wanting in force and distinctness. To this we may add that Mr. Rossetti's biographies have the advantage of being brief and eminently readable. Like most critics, his feeling sometimes gets the better of his judgment. We may admire and even love Shelley without regarding his nature as "transcendent" and his art as "unspeakable." It is but fair to note, however, that, with all his enthusiasm for a mystic poet like Shelley, the writer can also, though with certain limitations, admire Scott. Mrs. Hemans, by-the-way, is a voluminous and sometimes a sweet versifier, but it is hard to see why she should be placed among "famous poets." And we observe that Mr. Rossetti still holds to his belief, expressed several years ago, that Walt Whitman is the real American poet, "a man enormously greater than Longfellow or any other of his poetic compatriots." Well, we are all mortal, and even critics make mistakes. The volume is apparently a reprint, with illustrations, of the edition published in 1878. The woodcuts are commonplace, and cannot be said to increase the attractions of the book.

In a tiny volume, consisting of four chapters, entitled Sketches in Holland and Scandinavia (Smith, Elder, and Co.), Mr. Augustus J. C. Hare undertakes to travel through four countries. His written sketches are clever and picturesque, and so also are the little wood-cuts with which the letterpress is studded. Probably the liveliest writer about Holland is De Amicis, but Mr. Hare is an agreeable companion with whom the stay-at-home traveller may spend an hour pleasantly enough. He is struck by the ugliness of the Dutch churches, which are burdened with Calvinism and whitewash, and at the irreverence displayed in them. "All the men smoked in church, and this we saw repeatedly; but it would be difficult to say where we ever saw a Dutchman with a pipe out of his mouth." Dortrecht is praised as a thoroughly charming place; and Rotterdam, on the contrary, is pronounced immense and filthy, and the most odious town the traveller was ever in. The Hague is said to be the most delightful of little capitals; but Mr. Hare is disappointed with Amsterdam, "grievously disappointed" with the far-famed organ at Haarlem, and finds very little remarkable in Brock, "except even a greater sense of dampness and oziness than in the other Dutch villages." Alkmaar struck him as the cleanest place in Holland, and also the most picturesque. Thence he flitted to Zaandam, a pretty village surrounded by windmills, eighty being visible from the station alone. A serious annoyance of Dutch travel is the difficulty of obtaining food. "All the inns," Mr. Hare writes, "are equally inhospitable: 'The table d'hote is at four p.m.; we cannot and will not be bothered with cooking before that, and there is nothing cold in the house.' 'But you have surely bread and cheese?' 'Certainly not. Nothing.'" Before quitting Holland, we may observe that readers interested in the land question and in peasant proprietorship should turn to page 55 for the account of a province which is said to be agriculturally one of the richest in the kingdom. In the capital of Denmark the traveller is struck by the indescribably elastic air, and by the novelty of everything he sees. Copenhagen is indeed a charming city, and the lovely beech woods around form a cool refuge in the hot summer time. Sweden, as far north as Upsala, is, according to Mr. Hare, an exaggerated Surrey—not beautiful, but very pretty. The present King, Oscar II., is styled "the ideal Sovereign of the age—artist, poet, musician, student, equally at home in ancient and modern languages, profoundly versed in all his duties and nobly performing them." Norway was visited under a cloudless sunshine which hatched all the mosquitos; but even those pests are tolerable where there is so much to repay the traveller, where no one is in a hurry, and nature can be enjoyed leisurely. Trondtjem, which boasts the most northern railway-station and the most northern cathedral in Europe, is declared by Mr. Hare to be one of the most beautiful places in the world; indeed, he can scarcely find language to describe its loveliness. But verily Norway is the land of beauty, and people who care about good living will be glad to know that, unlike Holland, it is the land also of good and cheap food.

Good intentions always command respect, but they do not atone for bad verse; and it is, we think, a pity that the friends of the late William Sharp should have been led to publish Euphrenia; or, the Test of Love: A Poem (Kegan Paul). Nothing can be more unexceptionable than the moral of this story in rhyme; and so good were the author's intentions that we regret to say that when the verse is not doggerel it is utterly commonplace. Mr. Sharp does not seem to have had the slightest ear for versification, and no beggar who earns his pence by feigning lameness can limp with more persistent assiduity than he does. Under no conditions of metre can

The recollection of the days when form a line of verse; and if the following medical diagnosis be not doggerel, we know not where to find it—

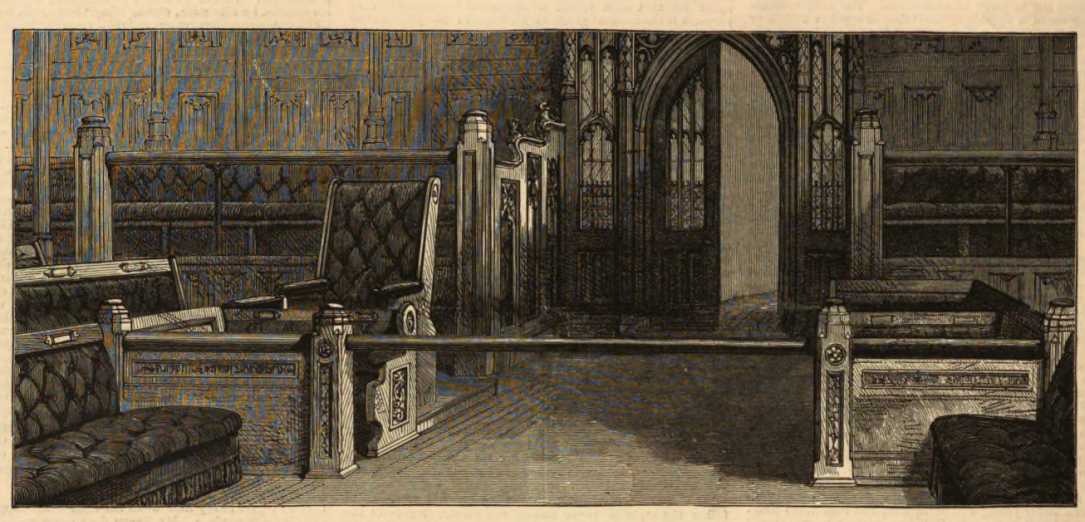
There was cerebral pressure,
The symptoms served to prove it;
But local application
He trusted would remove it.
He could detect no fracture
In his examination,
But greatly dreaded the effects
Of nervous irritation.

There is a stanza describing a wife and her husband after three years' matrimony. The poet observes with what, doubtless, is meant for humour

That though we left them only two,
Somehow we find them three.

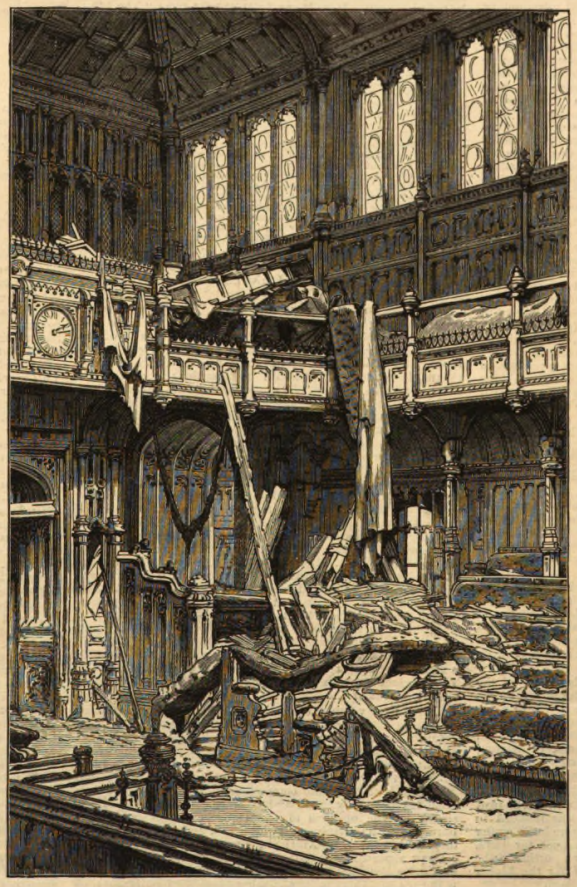
And adds that, although the lady is not quite the sylph she was once, yet

. . . place the gain against the loss,
And you will find the amount
Is more than balanced, when the child
Is carried to account.



That a writer of this easy-going kind should blunder in metaphor will surprise nobody. In the succeeding lines the child is a little casket, containing a jewel pure and bright; but before the stanza closes it is a gentle bud and a frail flower, with a wondrous mystic tie, with a father's heart and a mother's soul within its fastenings. The father of this jewel, or bud, or frail flower had one fault, on which the writer dwells facetiously for some stanzas. He smoked a pipe.

It was the only vice he had—
Indeed 'tis hardly fair
To mention this last article,
But truth compels my pen
To state a fact which proves that he
Had faults like other men.



Truth also compels our pen to say that Mr. William Sharp's lines have faults which are wholly unlike the defects of other poets.

Although, happily for the world, few people are to be treated as insane, the analysis of insanity is of great interest to mankind in general. Dr. G. H. Savage, Physician and Superintendent of the Royal Hospital of Bethlem, tells us much that concerns us all in a most useful little book, Insanity and Allied Neuroses, just published by Messrs. Cassell and Co. This excellent treatise is mainly "practical and clinical," a guide for those of the medical profession, and its students, who may be occupied with the care of the insane, or may be consulted about it. But it contains much wisdom for everyone who has occasion to be anxious concerning the mental soundness of others, or who studies to preserve his own mind in perfect health. The author, who ranks among the most eminent investigators of this subject, and is Lecturer upon it at Guy's Hospital, has a decided view that the causes of insanity are not confined to changes in the brain alone, but often arise from nervous irritation in other organs of the body. This seems conformable with general experience, and it is corroborated by his minute description of the various forms of insanity, the conditions, periods, and modes of their manifestation. His scientific classification, for the purpose of this manual, includes hysteria, with mania; hypochondriasis, with melancholia; dementia (or loss of mental power), general or partial, primary and secondary; certain chronic disorders of the mind and hallucinations, delusions, or moral perversions; general paralysis (of the insane); paralytic and epileptic insanity; puerperal insanity of women; insanity caused by poisoning (including alcoholic); visceral insanity and several other types connected with peculiar organic diseases; besides different forms of idiocy. Even suppressed gout appears to be one of the exciting immediate causes. We are left to conclude that morbid states of the vital functions, where a predisposition to insanity exists, which may be hereditary, can bring it about through the disturbance of the nerve centres and of the brain; and that irregular or excessive emotions, of various kinds, are the immediate cause in very many cases. This general view of insanity seems to be accordant with commonsense; and it is important with reference to health, conduct, and the education of youth. The treatise, in some parts, is scarcely adapted for the perusal of every reader; but it suggests good advice upon matters of extreme moment to those who may apprehend danger to themselves, or to persons belonging to them, from any of the causes here indicated. The greater portion of the volume, however, is specially designed for instruction relative to the diagnosis and treatment

THE DYNAMITE OUTRAGES.

THE BAR OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS BEFORE THE EXPLOSION.

THE BAR OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS AFTER THE EXPLOSION.

of insanity. It is calculated, we should suppose, as well to guide the judgment of medical men who are called upon to sign certificates of insanity, as to supply a text-book for medical students. The high authority of Dr. Savage will be a sufficient recommendation of the work to them; but even the unlearned reader must appreciate the methodical clearness and exactness with which he develops a rather complex subject, the scrupulous moderation of his statements, and the sound inductive reasoning which he applies to every doubtful point. Such a writer, being as little as possible of a dogmatist, is not likely to have much of his treatise corrected or superseded by those who may hereafter deal with the subject, whatever additional light may be thrown, in the progress of science, on questions yet remaining somewhat obscure. The detailed accounts of a number of particular cases, mostly under his own observation, all carefully ascertained, are necessarily painful to read; but it is comforting to see how far this beneficent and enlightened branch of the grand healing art has advanced in our days; how much can be done, under favourable circumstances, to effect a cure when proper treatment is applied at an early stage; and how greatly the malady is alleviated, in its distressing consequences, at the public asylums of England, nowhere more efficiently than at Bethlem Hospital. It is to be noticed that, as idiocy, epilepsy, and chronic mental disorders are not treated in that institution, the chapter of this book on idiocy is contributed by Dr. Fletcher Beach. A serviceable chapter on the legal regulations concerning the insane is furnished by Mr. W. Haigh, with the prescribed forms of orders or requests for admission of private patients, medical certificates, and affidavits, and a list of the public hospitals and licensed private houses, London and provincial, in which such patients are received. Dr. Savage, in a thoughtful and earnest spirit, discusses the question of responsibility for criminal acts under the conditions of insanity. The volume is furnished with about twenty illustrations, mostly from photographs of persons affected with different kinds of insanity, in whose faces their sad life-history is too plainly told. Some original letters from patients, describing their peculiar hallucinations, are extremely curious and probably instructive to the student of psychology.

There is probably no man living who is better acquainted with the Highlands of Scotland than the famous Professor of Greek in the University of Edinburgh. His feelings about the depopulation of the country are strong; but strong also is his honesty, and no one who reads The Scottish Highlanders and the Land Laws; an Historico-Economical Inquiry (Chapman and Hall), will doubt that while Professor Blackie writes warmly he endeavours also to write impartially. A more opportune volume could not be published. How thoroughly the writer has mastered his subject will be evident to readers who give the book the attention it deserves. Some may even think that his treatment is too exhaustive, and that his investigation is carried too far back. We do not think so. It is intolerable that subjects should be docketed as ancient history because they have not happened within the last decade; and, with regard to the treatment of the Highlanders since the exchange of the old clan system for a government of lords and landlords, nothing is more certain than that, without a historical knowledge of the past, we cannot understand the present. If the reader, as is quite possible, objects to some of the author's opinions when he denounces what Dr. Norman Macleod has called the "rash and reckless depopulation of the country" and the "gross misconduct and inhuman policy" of some landlords, while giving warm praise to others, let him at least study the facts which, with elaborate care, Professor Blackie has collected. The strength of a land, he says truly, lies in men, not in money; and while by no means unfavourable to what may be called natural emigration, he deplores the compulsory expatriation, for the sake of deer forests, of men whose love of country is their strongest passion. The greatest of Scotchmen, and a Tory to boot, denounced more than sixty years ago the "selfish and hard-hearted policy of the Highland landlords." No one who reads the account of the Strathnaver Clearance in the early years of the century, and of the Knoydart Clearance in 1853, will think Sir Walter Scott's expression too strong to be applied in both cases. Inhumanity could indeed scarcely have gone further without the actual destruction of its victims. It must not be supposed that the whole history of the Highlands through the present century is a dark one. Such a notion would be neither consonant with truth, nor with Professor Blackie's statements. It is, however, perhaps inevitable in certain cases that the evil which men do should make a stronger impression than the good. The chapter entitled "The Crofters' Commission" deserves especial attention at this time; but, indeed, every chapter bristles with suggestive facts and comments. We cannot praise the form in which the volume appears. It has neither index nor table of contents.

It is scarcely necessary to say to those familiar with the author's earlier researches that readers interested in theories respecting the origin of society will find much food for discussion in The Patriarchal Theory, Based on the Papers of the late John Ferguson McLennan, Edited and Completed by Donald McLennan, M.A. (Macmillan and Co.). "From the time of Plato downwards," writes the editor, alluding to his brother's argument, "theories of human society have been current in which the family living under the headship of a father is accepted as the ultimate social unit. These theories have taken various shapes, but in his opinion the most important as well as the most influential shape to be taken account of is that represented in the works of Sir Henry Maine." "Ancient Law," no doubt, is now a standard work, and one which all students of Jurisprudence are bound to study. Its conclusions are fundamentally at variance with those arrived at by the late John McLennan and by his brother; and in this volume the attempt is made to refute the Patriarchal Theory. It will be seen that the work is not one likely to attract the general reader. The arguments, advanced with great learning in these pages, demand the "fit audience" philosophers as well as poets love; and such an audience they will probably secure.

We are authorised to state that the State Apartments of Windsor Castle are closed until further orders.

RECEIVED
FEB 10 1885
LIBRARY

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

REGISTERED AT THE GENERAL POST-OFFICE FOR TRANSMISSION ABROAD.

No. 2390.—VOL. LXXXVI. SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1885. TWO WHOLE SHEETS | SIXPENCE. By Post, 6½D.

THE RELIEF OF KHARTOUM: MAJOR-GENERAL SIR HERBERT STEWART, K.C.B., LATE COMMANDING THE ADVANCED BRIGADE.
WOUNDED ON JAN. 19.

OUR NOTE-BOOK

Among the many strange instances of literary fraud, the claim of Joseph Liggins to the authorship of George Eliot's works, is assuredly one of the strangest. As an illustration of knavery on the one side and credulity on the other, the imposition deserves more attention than it receives in the life of the novelist. In a letter to the Times, "S. G. O." states that the man had warm supporters, and that one lady declared she had actually seen him at work on the manuscript of one of the books published under the name of George Eliot. A letter to the real George Eliot from an old friend ignorant of her secret, displays an amusing complication. Mrs. Lewes is asked if she has read "Adam Bede" or the "Scenes of Clerical Life," and whether she knows that the author is Mr. Liggins?—a poor man who has no servant, and does everything for himself? The writer adds that "it sounds strange to hear the 'Westminster' doubting whether he is a woman when here he is so well known." A Warwick-shire magistrate espoused the cause of Liggins, and undertook to explain the process by which the books were written. He, however, seems to have been brought to a right mind by the exertions of Mr. Lewes. Nothing beyond this of any significance is related in the biography. Some reasonable curiosity may be felt, however, as to the way in which Liggins began and carried on his imposition, what proofs he offered of the truth of his statements, how long they were credited, and what became of the pretender ultimately.

That Mr. John Roberts, jun., should be able to "allow the spot" and yet beat such a player as Mr. John North at billiards in a game of 12,000 points, as he did last week, is astounding; but it is also comforting to lovers of the "all round" game, to whom the "spot" is generally as a red rag to a bull, or as the famous grapes were to the fox when he could not get at them. It appears that miraculous breaks off the spot, like Mr. Peall's 1989 (nearly all spot strokes), do not come much oftener than Christmas in the course of a year, though Mr. W. Mitchell or another may make a paltry 500 or 700 off the spot now and then, as Mr. Mitchell has lately been doing, just to keep his hand in.

By-the-way, the great interest awakened by billiards at present has led to inquiries as to how matters stand in respect of the various players who have won the championship from time to time. Well, then, it was in 1849 that Mr. John Roberts, senior, became champion by the default of Mr. Kentfield, of Brighton, who is understood to have been the first to hold that title; in February, 1870, Mr. W. Cook became champion by beating Mr. J. Roberts, senior, and since then there have been many matches, but between very few players, for the championship, as the following statement—which contains pretty nearly, if not quite, all the matches hitherto played—will show. In April, 1870, Mr. J. Roberts, junior, avenged his father by beating Mr. W. Cook; in November, 1870, Mr. Joseph Bennett defeated Mr. J. Roberts, junior; in January, 1871, Mr. J. Roberts, junior, defeated Mr. J. Bennett; in May, 1871, Mr. W. Cook defeated Mr. J. Roberts, junior, and, in November, Mr. J. Bennett, who had challenged; in March, 1872, Mr. W. Cook again defeated Mr. J. Roberts, junior; in February, 1874, Mr. W. Cook once more defeated Mr. J. Roberts, junior; in May, and again in December, 1875, Mr. J. Roberts, junior, defeated Mr. W. Cook; in May, 1877, Mr. J. Roberts, junior, once more defeated Mr. W. Cook; after this, if there be no mistake, the championship reverted by unaccepted challenge to Mr. W. Cook, whom Mr. J. Bennett challenged and defeated, making 125, the largest break ever yet made on a championship table, in 1880; and in 1881 Mr. J. Bennett defeated Mr. T. Taylor, who had challenged. Since then, if there be no mistake again, the championship has not been played for, though the title has been assumed by right of unaccepted challenge. Mr. J. Roberts, junior, dubs himself, or is dubbed in advertisements, "champion of the world"; and nobody, apparently, disputes the title. It will be observed that Mr. J. Roberts, junior, has beaten Mr. W. Cook four times, and Mr. W. Cook has beaten Mr. J. Roberts, junior, three times.

Whatever other useful functions the managers of her Majesty's Civil List may perform, they certainly deserve credit for the discovery of literary or scientific distinction in quarters where one would least expect to find it. An inquiry—a real, not a sham one—into the administration of the £1200 per annum provided for her Majesty's Civil List would probably reveal mysteries as great and influences as remote as those which induced Lord Palmerston to pension the Poet Close, the "Laureate" to the King of Bonny.

Invitations are not to be lightly accepted at Sheffield. The other day Mr. Thomas Cranmer, no longer an archbishop but a "table-knife cutler," received an invitation from seven of his "mates" to meet them at a certain tavern; and he, scenting hospitality no doubt, accepted. Fancy his surprise when he was seized, tied hand and foot, wheeled about the streets, pelted with all manner of dirt, and so maltreated that, after four hours' experience with a placard carried in front of him and bearing the words "Tom Cranmer, liar, cur, and sneak," he became insensible. And what had he done? To all appearance, he had merely taken the liberty in this free country of saving or acquiring enough money to set up in business on his own account; a piece of presumption which, of course, is "very tolerable and not to be endured." Mr. Cranmer claimed £50 damages, which does not appear too much; but a jury awarded him only £40, the claim being reduced by £10 for some inexplicable reason, perhaps because he ultimately recovered his senses, the jury assessing the value of senses at ten pounds sterling.

There has just been a great sale of rare books and curios belonging to the Marquis Valerio de Urria, at the Hôtel Drouot, in Paris, at which the highest figure was attained by twenty-four volumes of Madame De Sévigné's Letters, knocked down at £53; while the complete original edition of Molière's works brought £43 5s. Among other items was a very curious sixteenth-century wooden door, which came from an old house in the Rue Croix de Fer at Rouen. A chimney-piece from the same house was purchased for the Hôtel Cluny in 1880.

Although business is at a very low ebb in Paris, and there is a great deal of distress among artisans, the locksmiths are doing well, and driving a thriving trade in door-chains, iron bars, and other means of defence against thieves. Robbery and assassination have become so terribly frequent in the French capital that every householder is taking strenuous measure of protection for life and property, and doors and windows are better barricaded than they have ever been in the past.

Everyone knows how terribly the Burgundian and other vineyards have been devastated by the phylloxera of late years, and most people are aware that a prize of £12,000 was long ago offered to him who could discover a certain and efficacious cure. M. Dodille, a peasant vine-grower, who bought his early experience in Réunion, and spent seven years of his life in the marine infantry of his country, has cultivated two vineyards near Châlons-sur-Saône with more or less success since 1880, and attributes the pest to a great extent to the absence of small birds in France, and declares that the only remedy is to turn large numbers of fowls loose daily among the vines from the middle of June to the end of September. The insect is supposed to swarm about the end of the former month, and M. Dodille, recommends that a little grain should be scattered about on the soil to induce the fowls to scratch and pick it up with their beaks, during which process he declares that they will swallow immense quantities of the phylloxera. His theory is based on experience, is attracting a great deal of local attention, and has been taken up and investigated by the Figaro; but it is to be feared that the Académie will treat it as an old woman's remedy, because it does not savour of science or chemistry.

Mr. Pierre Lorillard, the well-known American racing man, with his wife and a large party of friends, had an almost miraculous escape from a horrible death on Jan. 19. They were travelling through the Southern States in the luxurious railway car originally constructed for Patti when, on rounding a sharp curve on the Great Southern Alabama line, two small boys were seen frantically waving their hats and gesticulating for the train to stop. It was pulled up just in time on the very brink of a chasm, the bridge over which had been carried off by a torrent. The weather was very cold, and the boys had stood there for four hours waiting for the appearance of the train. It is almost needless to add that they were handsomely rewarded.

Field and excursion clubs are delightful institutions, especially in the neighbourhood of great cities, where they offer sensible and interesting inducements for Saturday afternoon and other outings. Sometimes the whole distance can be accomplished in a break, and sometimes it can be managed by a pleasant country walk of three or four miles, and then by taking advantage of the railway. There are hundreds of Essex, Kentish, Surrey, and Middlesex villages, stranded high and dry since the cessation of old coaching times, which contain historic mansions, picturesque cottages, or rustic churches with a few fine old monuments or brasses, or rare specimens of early ecclesiastical architecture. Such excursions are best when "personally conducted" by an archæologist, and should always be accompanied by a botanist and entomologist. Persons of similar tastes are thus drawn together, and in the discussion of their several hobbies and the pleasant interchange of ideas and experiences, all social distinctions disappear. Birmingham, Sheffield, and Derby are admirable centres for such excursions; and those within reach of Gloucester, Hereford, and Worcester embrace some of the loveliest spots to be found within the breadth and length of rural England.

"The Dramatic Review," of which the first number has recently appeared, is evidently a serious attempt to treat the drama as one of the fine arts, and to divorce the stage from its old companions, the licensed victuallers and sport. What the playhouse has to do with the tavern or the racecourse has never been very evident to many of its patrons, who will welcome a critical journal conducted in a friendly tone and gentlemanly spirit. New brooms proverbially sweep clean, and, side by side with such recognised students of the stage as W. G. Wills, W. Archer, and Clement Scott, we find a fiery and impetuous Hotspur in Mr. Harry Quilter, who is as violent against modern newspaper critics as either Lord Lytton or Mrs. Kendal. He thinks that if those "who are empowered to judge and describe a theatrical performance allow their sympathy or their friendship with the actors and actresses to obscure their judgment or to pervert their record, they deserve the condemnation which we assign in all other matters to these who are blinded by prejudice or influenced by partiality." Quite so; but why is Mr. Harry Quilter alone to be permitted to discuss the drama ex cathedrâ, and to be considered free from the ordinary frailties of human nature?

Surely, one of the most curious mistakes ever made in an authoritative tone of correction was the one perpetrated by a theatrical contemporary, who gravely called Mr. Herman to account for not reading the books that formed the celebrated theatrical library recently sold by public auction. The ground of accusing the bibliophile of an assumed indifference to literature was that the majority of his valuable tomes were described in the catalogue as "uncut copies," meaning, of course, that the edges had not been mutilated by the binder. They were, to use a technical phrase, "tall copies" with the proper amount of margin. The notion that an "uncut copy" of a book means one that has not had its pages severed by the paper-cutter could only have occurred to one as ignorant of books as of the art of binding them.

It will be curious to see how far the late Lord Lytton has availed himself of plays already extant before composing his tragedy of "Brutus," now in rehearsal at the Princess's Theatre, under the direction of Wilson Barrett. There are no less than seven plays in existence on the subject of Tarquin's fall. The most celebrated of these are "Lucius Junius Brutus," by Nat Lee (1681); "Lucius Junius Brutus; or, the Expulsion of the Tarquins," by Downman (1779); "The Sibyl; or, the Elder Brutus," by Cumberland, never acted, but published amongst his posthumous works; and "Brutus; or, The Fall of Tarquin," an historical tragedy, in five acts, by John Howard Payne, stolen from the Downman and Cumberland plays, and played by Edmund Kean at Drury-Lane in 1818. But there is yet another source at which the late Lord Lytton may have quenched his dramatic thirst. Voltaire wrote a tragedy called "Brutus," which was produced in Paris in 1730, and dedicated to "Milord Bolingbroke." Says Voltaire to Lord Bolingbroke, "You know that my 'Brutus' was born in England. You remember that, when I lived in retirement at Wandsworth with my friend Mr. Falkener, that worthy and virtuous citizen, I occupied my time at his house in writing in English prose the first act of this play, and it stands almost exactly the same in French verse. I often discussed the subject with you, and we were both surprised that no English author had treated a subject which is of all the most suitable for the theatre." Then follows a foot-note by Voltaire: "There is a 'Brutus' by an author called 'Lée,' but it is a play quite ignored, and is never represented in London."

The system of paying officials by means of perquisites frequently leads to curious and absurd abuses. It is said that the first Napoleon was so overwhelmed by the heat one July night that he rose, unable to sleep, about two o'clock, and wandered along the quays by the river Seine for a couple of hours, and, just as the sun was rising, turned his steps homeward. To his great surprise he beheld several of the chimneys of the Tuileries and the Louvre pouring out such thick volumes of smoke that the palace might have been taken for a huge factory. Of course the Emperor inquired the reason, and elicited the fact that at the Tuileries there was a steward who received no salary, his sole emolument being the right of disposing of the cinders of the establishment. This worthy's income being uncomfortably low during the dog days, he devised the expedient of making roaring fires where they were not likely to be observed during the small hours of the morning, and converting a considerable amount of fuel into cinders.

Now is the season of steeplechasing, and people of a "horsey" turn talk chiefly of the Grand National (which is the Derby of steeplechasing), though it will not be run and jumped for until flat-racing has begun. This is one of the few great public events in which gentlemen nowadays ride their own horses, as when Lord Manners won with Seaman, and when Count Kinsky, who, being a Hungarian, is of course a born horseman, won with Zoedone. The chase is over more than four miles of what is sometimes very "holding" ground, and the weights are far heavier than those of flat-racing; yet the winner, as when Emblem won in 1863 and Emblematic in 1864, is sometimes a "weed" that does not look stout enough to carry a "feather," and has been rejected as useless for the purposes of flat-racing. Herein is a remarkable problem which learned gentlemen who expound the laws of Nature in public lectures could possibly solve to their own satisfaction, but which unlearned observers are wont to give up with the remark already quoted to the effect that "Nature 's a rum un."

Mr. Brudenell Carter complains of the general ignorance that prevails upon the subject of eye-sight; and a thousand other learned gentlemen are constantly complaining of the ignorance that prevails upon a thousand other subjects which are their special "hobbies." Is everybody to know everything? "Nec scire fas est omnia," said, some nineteen hundred or more years ago, the Roman lyric poet, who himself was "short-sighted," or had some complaint of the eyes; and the worst of it is that scientific theories are seldom final, so that you have to go on unlearning as well as learning. The Germans have done very well in war, notwithstanding their spectacles; and Lord Sherbrook, notwithstanding short-sightedness, can see as far as most people into a stone wall. Life is hard enough without having to learn to do our very seeing, and making our children do their seeing, according to the book. Do let us regulate at least the use of our eyes by the light of nature, if we may not regulate the affairs of life by the rule of thumb. It has by no means been proved to everybody's satisfaction that, in proportion to population, we have not now as many individuals with their bodily organs, including the eye, in full perfection as we had before the days of civilisation; only we are now so numerous that it would not be difficult to collect together a sufficiently large array of "shocking examples" to answer the purpose of anybody who has anytheory about the deterioration of civilised humanity in any faculty whatever. Moreover, we know, or ought to know, how shaky a foundation is afforded by statistics.

By-the-way, Mr. Cantlie, F.R.C.S., a gentleman who has hygienic theories, has been alarming us with his picture of the manner in which the true Londoner, born, bred, and immured for ever—bar an occasional bank holiday—in London, degenerates and decays until he disappears altogether, before reaching the fourth generation, like a vanishing fraction of humanity. It may be so; but one would rather take the opinion and believe in the dogma of somebody who has lived through four generations and kept up a continual inspection all the while. Besides, whatever is true of London is true of all great cities, and in some of them is still more noticeable than in London, which, for a great city, is notoriously a healthy place of residence; so that it is a little gratuitous to pick out the Londoner for a specimen of degeneracy. Moreover, "Nature," as the illiterate philosopher sagely remarked,

"is a rum un," insomuch that she enables human beings to live and even to thrive under such circumstances as fully confirm, in a peculiarly striking and illustrative way, the truth of the saying that "what is one man's meat is another man's poison." The fact is, that the fashion of delivering public lectures on all sorts of subjects has spread so much as to have become a little mischievous: clever gentlemen take to public lecturing to push themselves into notice, and to attract attention they must advance some more or less startling proposition. It needed no public lecture to teach us that, all other conditions being the same, it is healthier to live in the country than in a big city, and, therefore, than in London; but to invest so old and so universally accepted a proposition with a certain air of novelty, it was necessary to invent a theory about a natural and inevitable decay and extinction of Londoners in particular before they arrive at the fourth generation. At any rate, they must thus evade a part of the penalty entailed by the sins of forefathers.

From an article contributed some time ago by Lord Cadogan to one of the magazines, a reader would be likely to conclude that the institution of the Jockey Club originated in a desire to purify the Turf, and was invested from the first with some kind of self-conferred legislative authority. The evidence is very much the other way. It is plain that the Jockey Club, at its earliest appearance on the scene at Newmarket, was an exclusive body of gentlemen who wished to have a certain number of races all to themselves, to the extent even of riding their own horses, who cared little or nothing about the morality of the turf in general, and who neither had, nor pretended to have, any sort of jurisdiction, save at Newmarket. Their first acts were to establish two Plates "for horses the property of members of the Jockey Club," and then (in 1768) a Cup "for horses the property of members of the Jockey Club," the public being debarred from competition. And what has been the result? The Plates no longer exist; and the Cup, with modified conditions, is a dead failure, as it was almost from the first. The early "legislation" consisted of a few resolutions (dating from 1758) applicable to Newmarket only, as the Club in its infancy was very careful to state. Moreover, in 1767, Lord Holland wrote to Selwyn: "The Jockey Club is a tribunal I never heard of before"; and in 1785 we read of a practice which, it is said, "ought not to have any weight when it is contrary to so respectable an authority as that of the Jockey Club." From which it is clear that the Jockey Club was not considered to have general jurisdiction; and it is a very interesting study to observe how, by the help of the Calendar, the Club gradually made itself into an absolute power. Perhaps it is desirable that the Club should be lord of all, and perhaps the members have latterly done their best or shown a disposition to do their best to purify the Turf and to put horse-racing on a sound or a little sounder footing; but it is more than probable that the natural reaction which set in after the "Hastings era," and the Act which was passed in 1879, have had far more than the Jockey Club has had to do with that decrease in the number of "places of sport," which Lord Cadogan complacently ascribes to the salutary measures adopted by the Club.

Arsenic is popularly supposed to be good for the complexion; but, even if the supposition be well founded, it can hardly be considered a good reason for what has taken place lately in East Kent, where not only foxes, but pigs and sheep, have been poisoned by arsenic which may, or may not, have been intended for the improvement of the animals' complexions.

The Library of the British Museum is, with the exception of the Paris Library, the largest in the world. To catalogue 1,350,000 printed books is a gigantic undertaking, and has, of course, grown in difficulty with the rapid increase of volumes. In 1878 there were no less than 2000 folio volumes of manuscript catalogue in the reading-room, and it was calculated that in time 9000 such volumes would be required. It became evident, therefore, that a new system of cataloguing must be adopted, and it was resolved to give up the use of manuscript and to print. This reform, which was ably advocated by Mr. Garnett and is now under his supervision, was begun in 1880, and up to the end of last year seventy-four printed volumes have been published, which are said to include the entire contents of 276 of the old manuscript volumes. The saving of space by the new method is indeed extraordinary. The map catalogue has hitherto filled 233 volumes; it will be complete in eight or nine. "Virgil" occupied three manuscript volumes, but now seventy-four columns of print will comprehend all the works under that title. "Bible" takes up at present twenty-one volumes; by the new arrangement it will not occupy more than three or four. It is supposed that the catalogue will be completed with the close of the century. It will form a stupendous monument, truly, of human wisdom and folly. One wonders what the size of our great national library would be if it contained only works of real service to society and to literature. Imagine the relief of Mr. Garnett and his fellow-labourers if, by the exercise of some magic art, all that is weak and worthless on those miles of library shelves in Bloomsbury were suddenly to be swept away!

In a Note last week it was incorrectly stated that "Sir Joshua Reynolds's picture, Penelope Boothby, on view at the Exhibition of Old Masters, Burlington House, is not the original picture, but a replica, probably painted and certainly touched up and adopted by the painter whose name is identified with it. The Penelope Boothby, of which the engraving is so popular, is in the collection of the Earl of Dudley, and has not been shown in public for many years." We are informed on undoubted authority—and we gladly give the correction—that the Penelope Boothby at the Exhibition of the Royal Academy is the Original Picture. It was purchased last year of the Earl of Dudley by Messrs. Thomas Agnew and Sons, and sold by them to Mr. Daniel Thwaites, its present owner.

FALL OF KHARTOUM.

A Third Edition of the Daily Telegraph of Thursday, Feb. 5, issued at Ten o'Clock, a.m., contains the following painful intelligence:—

We deeply regret to announce that despatches have been received at the War Office from Lord Wolseley stating that, upon the arrival of Sir Charles Wilson near Khartoum, he found that, through an act of treachery, the city had been captured by the Mahdi.

At the moment of going to press no details of this deplorable event had been communicated by the War Office.

It is feared that General Gordon is a prisoner in the hands of the Mahdi.

THE NILE EXPEDITION.

The Commander-in-Chief's despatches to the War Office published in our Journal last week gave an account of the battle fought at Abou Klea, twenty-three miles from Metammeh, on Saturday, the 17th ult., by General Sir Herbert Stewart, with fifteen hundred men of his advanced brigade, against nearly ten thousand of the Mahdi's army; and of the battle on Monday, the 19th, between the Wells of Shebacat and Metammeh, within sight of the Nile; when a second attack of the enemy was repulsed, enabling the British force to gain a secure position at Gubat, on the bank of the river two miles above Metammeh; and to meet the armed steamboats which General Gordon had sent down from Khartoum, conveying four hundred black troops of the Khartoum garrison. The latest news from Gubat communicated last week by Lord Wolseley, to the date of Saturday, the 24th, stated that Sir Charles Warren had gone up to Khartoum by steamer, with a small guard of the Sussex Regiment; while, Sir Herbert Stewart having been wounded on the 19th, the command of the troops at Gubat was taken by Colonel the Hon. E. T. Boscawen, of the Coldstream Guards. The lists of officers killed and wounded in the two actions were also given, with the names of two newspaper correspondents, Mr. J. A. Cameron, of the Standard, and Mr. St. Leger Herbert, of the Morning Post, who were killed in the second conflict on the 19th.

The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, Mr. Burleigh, was slightly wounded, having a graze on the neck and his foot struck by a spent bullet. He was able, nevertheless, to send that journal an animated description of the fighting on the 19th; this was published in the Daily Telegraph on Friday of last week. The Daily News had already, on Thursday, the 23rd, published the letter of its correspondent, Mr. H. S. Pearse, giving an account of the first battle on the 17th, this letter being written on the very day of the battle. We now reproduce, with some abridgments, these narratives by eye-witnesses of both engagements; which may be compared with those supplied by the official despatches.

THE BATTLE OF ABOU KLEA, JAN. 17.

Mr. Pearse writes as follows:—"Yesterday morning we had bivouacked and breakfasted at the south-east side of the great plain, with distant hills to the right and left, and a black and rugged ridge in front, over the saddle of which the caravan route leads to Abou Klea. The 19th Hussars had gone on to reconnoitre, and we heard the sound of distant rifle-shots. About noon came news from Major Barrow that the enemy were holding the Wells.

"General Stewart immediately made his dispositions for attack, massing the brigade in line of columns, the Guards on the right, the Heavy Camel Corps in the centre, the Artillery and Engineers in the rear of the Guards forming the right face of the square. Lord Charles Beresford's Naval Brigade was similarly posted behind the Mounted Infantry. The Sussex Regiment, on foot, closed up the rear, and all the baggage was in the centre. In this compact square of column, the brigade moved forward as steadily as if on parade, and halted four hundred yards from the foot of the ridge, while General Stewart and his staff went forward across it to reconnoitre.

"Thinking it too late then to advance and attack without knowing the actual strength of our foes, General Stewart wisely resolved to form a zereba for the night, with flanking squares strongly occupied, and pickets holding posts on the lofty hills on our left. All night long we were harassed by shots from the heights a thousand yards distant. On the opposite flank there was the continuous hissing of bullets overhead. Now and then one fell in the square, but only two men and a camel were hit. Our sleep was not very sound. Thrice the men were called to arms before dawn, when a general attack on our position was expected. This morning all was quiet until after breakfast. Then the fire recommenced from the stone breastworks constructed during the night on the heights on our right and rear. This was only a feint fire, and was soon suppressed by the Mounted Infantry.

"By eight o'clock, the enemy developed considerable strength on the right front, coming over the black stony hills in good order in two long lines, with banners flying bravely. At the same time some force of the rebels began creeping stealthily up the grassy Wady on our left front, the direct road to the Wells. The screw-guns battery made good practice. Two or three shots checked the advance for some time. Our position in the hollow, with lines extended along the ridge, was strong and well covered. Nevertheless, several men were hit. One of the Heavy Camel Corps was killed early in the action. Another of the Mounted Infantry was dangerously wounded within a few yards of where I write. A camel close by was hit by the next shot. The rebels evidently made skilful use of their Remingtons. But our Martinis' fire, hitherto restrained, was now beginning to tell effectively. At half-past nine the enemy's scouts were reported trying to creep round the hills on the left flank. Barrow's Hussars were sent forward to check this. Meanwhile, the fire in the centre of the line was hotter every minute.

"At ten o'clock, General Stewart determined upon a counter-attack, and formed a hollow square, the Guards in front, the Mounted Infantry on the left flank, the Sussex Regiment on the right, the heavy cavalry and Naval Brigade, with a Gardner, in the rear, the camels, with the ammunition and hospital stretchers, in the centre. We advanced two miles exposed to a heavy fire on all sides. We moved out to the attack under a hail of bullets. Men dropped from the ranks right and left, but none of the wounded were left on the field. The medical staff, under Surgeon-Major Ferguson, worked splendidly under the heaviest fire. There were frequent stoppages for these purposes, which made progress slow. It was nearly an hour before we sighted the enemy's main body, and realised that at least 7000 or 8000 men were against us. We halted and closed square; General Stewart took up a good position on the slope where the rebels must advance uphill, across open ground. Skirmishers of the Mounted Infantry were sent forward to force on the attack, while Captain Norton's battery of screw guns planted several shells among the densest mass. The concealed enemy sprang up, twenty banners waving, and came on in a splendid line. The troops on the right were led by Abu Saleh, Emir of Metammeh. On the left they were under Mahommed Khair, Emir of Berber. The latter was wounded, and retired early; but Saleh came desperately on at the head of a hundred fanatics, escaping the withering fire of the Martinis marvellously, until shot down in the square. The rear face, composed of the heavy cavalry, broke forward in the endeavour to fire on the rebels, who swept round the flank and broke into us. Then came the shock of the Arabs' impulsive charge against our square. For a moment, there was much confusion, and the fate of the whole force trembled in the balance, until the steadiness of the Guards, Marines, and Mounted Infantry prevailed. The Sussex Regiment, though taken in rear, rallied and fought desperately. The men fell back, re-formed in good order, and poured volleys into the enemy, every one in the leading division falling dead in our midst. In the temporary confusion, the Gardner gun could not be got into action at the most effective moment. When it opened fire, the rebels were close on it. The Naval Brigade therefore lost very heavily; Pigott and De Lisle were both killed. But the greatest losses fell on the Heavy Camel Corps, of whose officers six were killed and two wounded. The Guards moved not an inch, even when the rear was threatened simultaneously with the front. Among the first of our officers mortally wounded was Colonel Burnaby, who fell gallantly in fight close to his old comrades the Blues.

"When we had time to look, we saw that line after line of the enemy had fallen under the Martini fire as they advanced. There could scarcely have been less than eight hundred or a thousand of dead and wounded Arabs. Others in scattered bands made off in various directions, leaving the ground strewn with dead and wounded, with arms and banners. Major Barrow's Hussars came up soon after, but were too late to strike at the retreating foes, many of whom, however, were shot down while retiring. The enemy had fought with the most reckless and admirable courage, and displayed great tactical skill. They harassed the zereba all the previous night, and endeavoured to lead us into a skilfully-laid trap.

"I escaped unhurt amidst the hand-to-hand mêlée with the loss of my horse. After the fight, in which the enemy brought all their best troops against General Stewart's brigade, we gained the Wells of Abou Klea, and bivouacked there last night."

THE ADVANCE FROM ABOU KLEA.

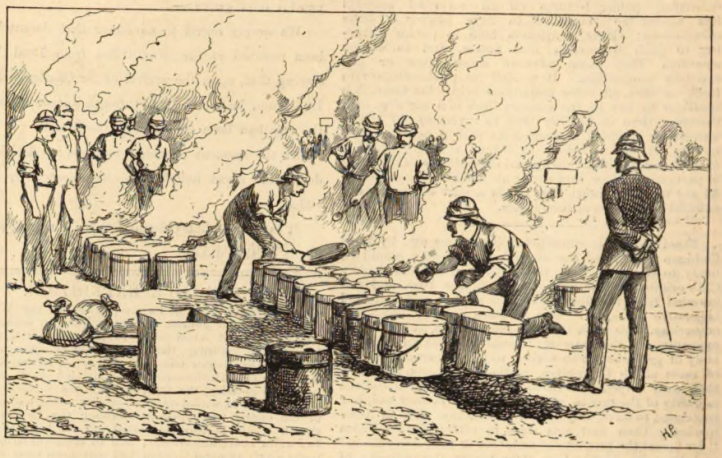
The following is the better part of Mr. Burleigh's letter:—"A fierce battle and hard-won victory had secured to us the Abou Klea Wells, giving the troops an abundant supply of water, with something for the horses and camels. By night-fall, we were collected inside a rather weak, irregular, and incomplete zereba. The front face, instead of being formed of cut brushwood, was protected by low walls of rough stones. An undulation in the ground left an opening in the wall twenty-five yards wide. The wall itself was twenty inches high, and the zereba was nearly 200 yards square. Each man had his pint of water served out—half his day's supply—and on that quantity he had to work, march, and fight in a thirst-provoking country. Lights were all ordered out at dusk, and the troops lay down in square formation, with their arms beside them ready for instant use.

"By dint of hard work and going without sleep, the column was ready to resume its forward march on Sunday at four p.m. The old zereba was emptied, all the supplies having been transported to the Wells by working overnight; and a new small zereba and fort were built at Abou Klea, a detachment of the Sussex Regiment and a few men of the Royal Engineers being left to hold that post.

"It was given out by General Stewart that the force should only go five miles out and encamp till morning. The column got on punctually, tired though the men and animals were. Nearly one hundred camels were taken with the column to carry water, ammunition, and cacolets. These were all inside the square. It was with pleasure that we set our faces to another forced march so that we might get to the river. Instead of making a protracted halt at sunset, the column rested a few minutes only, to allow the darkness to settle down. Then, altering our course so as to avoid Shebacat Wells and the Arabs posted there to intercept or hinder us, we struck due south into the desert, attempting to reach the Nile before daylight, and before the Arabs could stop us. The General sought to avoid another battle until the force should have intrenched itself, or, at any rate, packed its baggage by the water's edge.

"Part of the way, the force moved in columns of regiments, the Mounted Infantry leading, with the Hussars in advance and on the flanks. Although this increased the width of our front, it did not diminish the length of the column. Ali Gobah, the outlaw robber chief, directed our course, which was at times rather circuitous—now south, then south by west, and again south by east. Sir Charles Wilson and Captain Verner of the Rifles looked after Ali, in whose experience as a path-finder they both trusted.

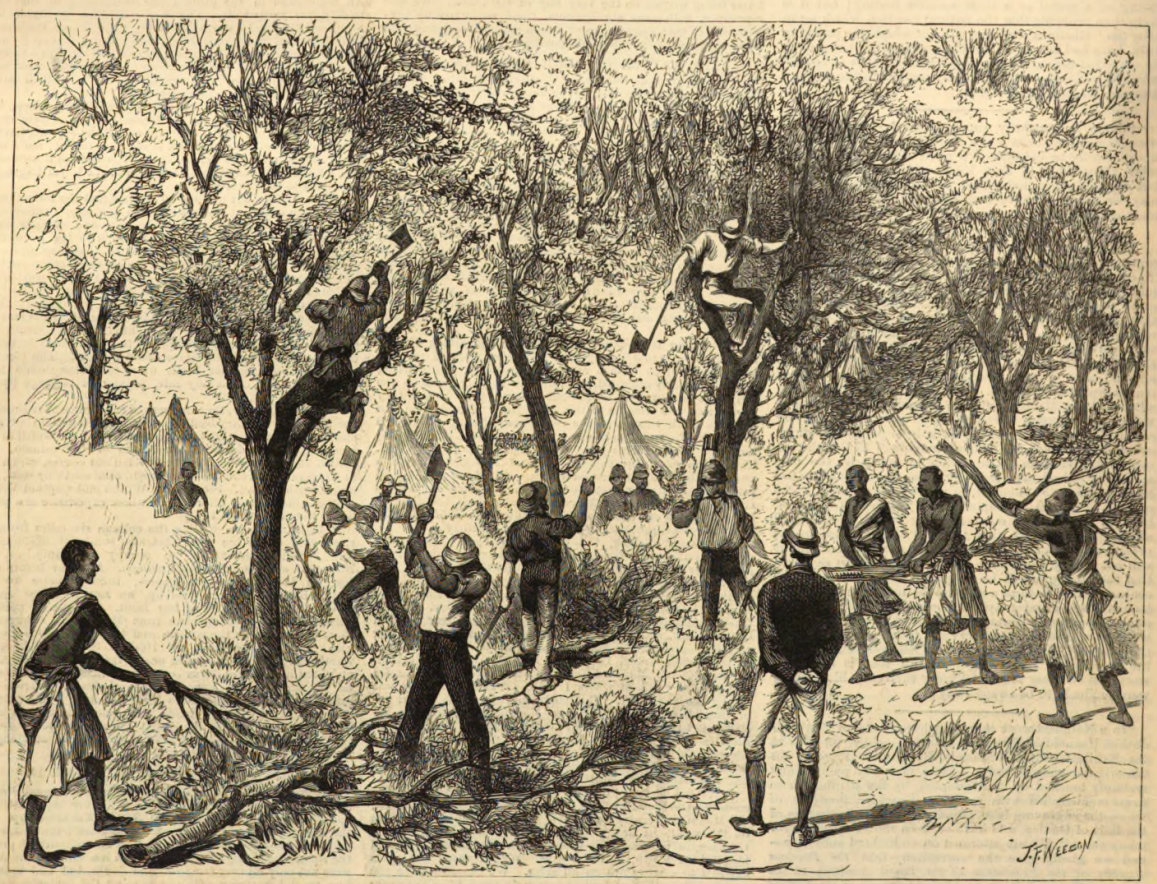
"Daylight broke, finding the column six miles from the river, and about the same distance south of Metammeh. The objective point was to occupy a position on the Nile four miles south of Metammeh. An hour before sunrise we had altered our course, turning more to the east. Before the sun was up, we saw that the enemy was on the alert all along our front. Streams of men on horseback and on foot came from Metammeh, interposing themselves between the column and the water we longed to gain. For a short time, Sir Herbert Stewart deliberated whether to push on two miles nearer the Nile. As the Arabs mustered in sufficient force seriously to threaten our advance, he decided to halt upon a ridge of desert covered with sparkling pebbles, four miles from the river. To our right and rear lay a few low black hills, one mile to two miles distant; on our front, the Desert rolled downward towards the green flats bordering the Nile; for here, as at Dongola, the belt of cultivation is rich and wide."



THE BATTLE OF THE NILE, JAN. 19.

"Turning with a light smile to his staff, General Stewart said, 'Tell the officers and men we will have breakfast first, and then go out and fight.' The column was closed up, with the baggage animals to the centre, as usual; the boxes and pack-saddles being taken off, to make an inclosure to protect the square from rifle fire. In less than ten minutes the Arabs were not only all over our front and flanks, but had drawn a line around our rear. Groups bearing the fantastic Koran-inscribed banners of the False Prophet, similar to those of which we had taken two or three score at Abou Klea, could be seen occupying vantage-points all around. The enemy's fire grew hotter and more deadly every minute. Evidently their Remingtons were in the hands of Kordofan hunters. Mimosa bushes were cut, and breakfast preparations were suspended for an hour, whilst most of the troops lay flat. Fatigue parties strengthened our position. In going towards a low mound, a hundred yards on our right front, where we had a few skirmishers, General Stewart was shot in the groin. The command devolved upon Lord Charles Beresford by seniority, but he, being a naval officer, declined it, and Sir Charles Wilson took it over. One of the most touching incidents in the zereba was the wounded General tended by his friends, two or three of whom wept like men, silently. Poor St. Leger Herbert, the Morning Post correspondent, one of these, was himself shot dead shortly afterwards.

THE KHARTOUM RELIEF EXPEDITION: SKETCHES BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, MR. MELTON PRIOR.



CHRISTMAS EVE AT KORTI: BOILING THE CHRISTMAS PUDDING FOR THE "HEAVIES."

"WHAT A TIME THE PUDDING TAKES TO BOIL!"

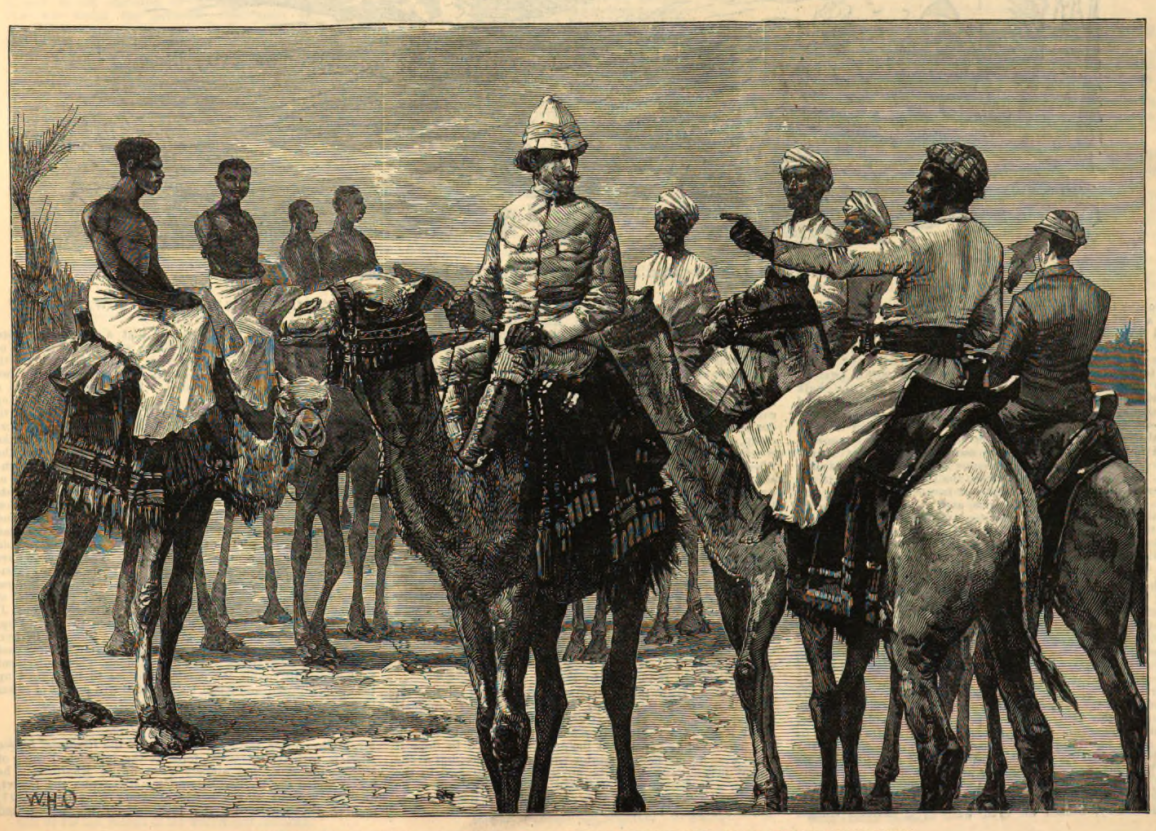
"The mound on our front was quickly turned into a detached work, forty volunteers, carrying boxes and pack-saddles, rushing out, and, in a short space of time, converting it into a strongly defensible post. Gradually, the enemy's riflemen crept nearer, and our skirmishers were sent out to engage them. They were too numerous to drive away; and the nature of the ground, and the high trajectory of their Remingtons, enabled the Arabs to drop their bullets into the square at all points. Soldiers lying behind camels and saddle-packs were shot in the head by dropping bullets. Mr. Cameron, the Standard correspondent, was hit in the back and killed whilst sitting behind a camel, just as he was going to have lunch. The enemy were firing at ranges of from 700 to 2000 yards, and their practice was excellent. The zip, ping, and thud of the leaden hail was continuous; and, while the camels were



CHRISTMAS EVE AT KORTI: CLEARING THE GROUND AND PREPARING FOR THE BONFIRE.

THE KHARTOUM RELIEF EXPEDITION: SKETCHES BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, MR. MELTON PRIOR.

FATIGUE PARTY OF THE BLACK WATCH (42ND HIGHLANDERS).

MAJOR KITCHENER, WITH HIS GUIDES, AT KORTI, JUST BEFORE THE START ACROSS THE DESERT.

killed in numbers, our soldiers did not escape, over forty having to be carried to the hospital, sheltered as well as possible in the centre of the square behind a wall of saddles, bags, and boxes. As a precaution against stampede, the poor camels were tied down, their knees and necks securely bound by ropes to prevent their getting upon their legs. The enemy's fire increased in intensity; and, as stretcher after stretcher with its gory load was taken to the hospital, the space was found too little, and the wounded had to be laid outside. Surgeon-Major Ferguson, Dr. Briggs, and their colleagues had their skill and time taxed to the utmost. Want of water hampered their operations; doctors and patients were alike exposed to the enemy's fire.

"Our situation had become unbearable. We were being fired at without a chance of returning blows with or without interest. The ten thousand warriors whom the Mahdi had sent from Omdurman to annihilate us were blocking our road to the Nile; and over a hundred Baggara, the horsemen of the Soudan, and crowds of villagers, who had joined Mohamed Ahmed's crusade, hung like famished wolves on our rear and flanks, awaiting an opportunity to slay. Apparently, they were emboldened by our defensive preparations.

"There were three courses open to us—to sally forth and fight our way to the Nile; to fight for the river, advancing stage by stage, with the help of zerebas and temporary works; or to strengthen our position, and try to withstand the Arabs and endure the lack of water, till Lord Wolseley should send a force to our assistance; we, meanwhile, sending a messenger or two back to Korti with the news. It was bravely decided to go out and engage the enemy at close quarters. At two p.m. the force was to march out in square, carrying nothing except ammunition and stretchers. Each man was to take a hundred rounds and to have his water-bottle full. Everything was put into thorough readiness for this enterprise. Lord Charles Beresford, with Major Barrow, remained in command of the inclosure, or zereba, containing the animals and stores. They had under them the Naval Contingent, the 19th Hussars, a party of Royal Engineers, and Captain Norton's detachment of Royal Artillery, with three screw-guns, and details from regiments and men of the Commissariat and Transport Corps.

"It was nearly three o'clock before the square started, Sir Charles Wilson in command, and Colonel Boscawen acting as Executive Officer. Lord Airlie, who had been slightly wounded at Abou Klea, and again on the 19th, together with Major Wardroper, served upon Sir Charles's staff, as they had done upon General Stewart's. The square was formed to the east of our inclosed defence, the troops lying down as they were assigned their stations. The Guards formed the front, with the Marines on the right front corner, the Heavies on the right and right rear, the Sussex in the rear, and the Mounted Infantry on the left rear and left flank. Colonel Talbot led the Heavies; Major Barrow, the Hussars; Colonel Rowley, the Guards; Major Poë, the Marines; and Major Sunderland, the Sussex Regiment. Captain Verner, of the Rifle Brigade, was told off to direct the square in its march towards the river. When the order was given for the square to rise and advance, it moved off to the west to clear the outlying work.

"The instant the Arabs detected the forward movement on our part, they opened a terrific rifle-fire upon the square from the scrub on all sides. In the first few minutes many of our men were hit and fell. The wounded were with difficulty picked up and carried. When the square slowly marched, as if upon parade, down into the grass and scrub-covered hollow, intervening between the works we had constructed and the line of bare rising desert that bounded our view towards the south and east—shutting out of sight the river and the fertile border slopes—all felt the critical movement had come.

"Steadily the square descended into the valley. Gaps were made in our force by the enemy's fire. As man after man staggered and fell, these gaps were doggedly closed; and, without quickening the pace by one beat, onward our soldiers went. All were resolved to sell their lives dearly. Every now and again the square would halt, and the men would lie down, firing at their foes hidden in the valley. Those sheltered behind the desert crest were too safely screened to waste ammunition upon at that stage. Wheeling to the right and swinging to the left our men fought like gladiators, without unnecessarily wasting strength or dealing a blow too many. A more glorious spectacle was never seen than this little band in broad daylight, on an open plain, seeking hand-to-hand conflict with the courageous, savage, and fanatical foe, who outnumbered us by twelve to one.

"As the square moved over the rolling ground, keeping its best fighting side—or rather its firing side—towards the great on-rushes of the Arabs, the soldiers swung around, as though the square pivoted on its centre. Once it entered ground too thickly covered by grass and scrub, halted, and coolly swung round and marched out upon the more open ground, with the Arabs to the right front, their 'tom-toms' beating, and their sacred battle-flags of red, white, and green flying in the air.

"Bearing banners lettered with verses from the Koran, a host of fanatic Arabs was the first to hurl its swordsmen and spearsmen upon the square. The column wheeled to receive them, and the men, by their officers' direction, fired volleys by companies, scarcely any independent firing being permitted. The wild dervishes and fanatics who led the charge went down in scores before our fire, which was opened on them at 700 yards, and none of the enemy got within some yards of the square. This checked their ardour, which had been excited by seeing the gaps in our ranks. Three more charges were attempted by the enemy at other points along the line of the square's advance.

"At half-past four, after nearly two hours' incessant fighting, as the column neared the south-easterly edge of the valley to pass out of it, the Arabs made their final grand rush. Nearly 10,000 of them swept down from three sides towards the square, their main body—numbering not fewer than 5000—coming upon our left face. It was a critical moment. Their fire had made fresh gaps in our ranks, and fierce human waves were rolling in upon every side to overwhelm our force. Down the Arabs came from behind the ridge at a trot, and not at the top of their speed, as the Hadendowas charge. Gallant horsemen and wild dervishes led them, and shouted to their followers to rush on in Allah's name and destroy us. Firm as a rock, the square stood steadily, aimed deliberately, and fired. Again and again had volleys to be sent into the yelling hordes as down they poured. The feeling was—Could they be stopped before closing with us? Their fleetest and luckiest, however, did not get within twenty-five yards before death overtook them; while the bulk of the enemy were still a hundred yards away. At last—God be thanked!—they hesitate, stop, turn, and run back. Victory is ours, and the British column is safe! The broken lines of Arabs sullenly retreated towards Metammeh; but our square had to gain the ridge before escaping from their sharp-shooters' fire, or getting a chance of punishing the daring foe. Without further opposition, the British advanced to the river, and encamped in a sheltered ravine for the night; the men lying down with their arms, and strong outposts being on the alert against any surprise. Every man drank freely of the refreshing water, and, exhausted by the hardships endured, slept soundly, grateful that the enemy left them undisturbed for that night."

FACSIMILE OF A SKETCH BY THE LATE LIEUTENANT DE LISLE, R.N.

POSITION OF THE ADVANCED FORCE.

Gubat, on the left bank of the Nile two miles above Metammeh, and ninety-eight miles below Khartoum, is the site of the fortified camp occupied since Jan. 19, by the troops under command of Colonel Boscawen. General Sir Herbert Stewart, with other wounded officers, is in a steam-boat on the river. General Sir Redvers Buller, V.C., when he arrives with the Royal Irish Regiment, will take command of the advanced force; he started from Korti on Thursday week. Colonel Sir Charles Wilson, R.E., with twenty men of the Sussex Regiment, went up to Khartoum by one of the steam-boats on Saturday, the 24th, and it is probable that he has arranged future movements with General Gordon. His return to the camp has been eagerly expected. The safety of the camp at Gubat is not doubtful, or the sufficiency of its provision supplies. Its stores of ammunition are superabundant, and there is not the slightest risk of their being annoyed by the two or three thousand Arabs who are watching them, quite close by, behind the mud walls of Metammeh village. Since the desperate battle of the 19th, the Arabs have once marched out from the fortified village towards Stewart's intrenchments, but when they saw the English come out to meet them, they prudently retired. Provisions must have been sent to Metammeh from Gakdul; a quantity of stores was brought down by Gordon's steamers; and the Nile banks about the intrenchment, with the island in rear of the English lines, contain large supplies of grain and cattle. The advanced brigade may therefore be fairly described as tolerably well off. No sickness has broken out in camp, and the wounded are making satisfactory progress to recovery. The village of Gubat consists of 130 houses, and has 700 inhabitants. It is surrounded by vegetable gardens, which supply the population of Shendy. Here is also a burying-ground containing some graves sacred to the Mohammedan world, those of saints who lived and preached at Shendy, as well as local chieftains and dervishes. The place is visited by all caravan travellers. Under Ismail Pasha a good road was commenced from Metammeh towards Khartoum, but it was completed only as far as El Hadjir; but on the other bank there is an excellent road all the way to Khartoum.

The appearance of General Gordon's steamers was dirty and much battered, though protected by wooden screens. They were, however, full of goats and grain supplies. The crews have their families on board, and all manifested great delight on the arrival of the British troops, by letting off rockets throughout the night and by singing and dancing. The steamers have each a kind of crow's-nest high up on the mast, which is used by the look-out man.

The Royal Irish Regiment started from Korti on foot on Wednesday week, with their baggage and water supplies carried on camels. The next regiment to follow will be the West Kent. On the Desert sands a rate of twenty miles a day would not be considered too great. It could be done if there were urgent need of reinforcements at Gubat; but as the Gubat brigade appears to be anything but harassed by the enemy, a marching rate of fifteen miles is supposed to be sufficient for Sir Redvers Buller's column. The distance from Korti to Gubat is 180 miles.

GENERAL EARLE'S MOVEMENT TOWARDS ABOU AHMED.

Our readers will not have forgotten that a separate advance has been undertaken by General Earle, with a large portion of Lord Wolseley's army, going in boats up the Nile from Korti, north-east to Abou Ahmed, in order to secure the Nubian Desert route from Korosko, and to proceed afterwards in a southerly direction to Berber. It was expected that they would have to fight the hostile Monassir tribe at Birti, above the Fourth Cataract, but this week's news, forwarded by Lord Wolseley from Korti, seems to make it likely that no resistance will be made to the advance so far as Abou Ahmed. On Sunday morning General Earle, with Colonel Butler, a squadron of the 19th Hussars, the Egyptian Camel Corps, and half a battalion of the Black Watch, reconnoitred the enemy's position at Birti. Finding that all was quiet, they pushed on and entered the village, and discovered that the enemy had evacuated the place, leaving behind only some women, old men, and their stores of grain, and cattle. They seem to have been alarmed by the numerous flotilla of boats, and the occupation of both banks of the river by our advancing troops. Several influential sheikhs of the Monassir tribe, and two uncles of Suleiman Wad Gamr, the chieftain who murdered Colonel J. D. Stewart and Mr. Frank Power, have given themselves up. It is stated that the Arabs have retreated direct to Berber. Upon this point all the prisoners speak positively, and say that some of the Berber troops were with Suleiman. Their retirement to Berber will enable the communications to be opened up between Korosko and Abou Hamed, and will permit of stores being sent on to us there across the Desert.

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS.

Mr. Melton Prior, the Special Artist of the Illustrated London News, is with the advanced force at the intrenched camp of Gubat, unless he has already gone up to Khartoum; he accompanied Sir Herbert Stewart's march across the Desert, and was present at the battle of Abou Klea on Jan. 17, and at the battle on the 19th, where his friend and comrade, Mr. Cameron, Special Correspondent of the Standard, was killed. We shall no doubt receive from Mr. Prior, as soon as possible, abundance of Sketches of these incidents of the campaign; but our readers will bear in mind that sketches cannot be sent home so quickly as the verbal narratives of newspaper correspondents, which are telegraphed from Korti to London. The Illustrations presented this week are therefore of a date some few days before the final advance of Sir Herbert Stewart's complete force; and the scene at Gakdul Wells is that of the arrival of the first column of troops. The Guards' division of the Camel Corps is shown on the march in the Desert; and Major Kitchener, with his Guides, preparing to lead the way, and to discover the unknown route. Some of the scenes in the head-quarters' camp at Korti, represented by our Special Artist's Sketches, are highly characteristic of this singular military Expedition. The drilling of the Camel Corps, and especially training those strange beasts to endure the alarm of a cavalry charge passing close to the formed square, was a very curious sight for British soldiers. Lord Wolseley's frequent inspections of each part of the force at Korti; the fatigue party of the Highlanders (42nd Black Watch) who have since followed General Earle up the Nile; the Christmas entertainments heartily enjoyed by all the men, including an amateur concert, at which a sailor gave a song; the lighting of a grand bonfire, and the boiling of the Christmas pudding; the bivouac of the Special Correspondents, not in tents, but with the scanty shelter of a few blankets suspended between the trees—these and other features of campaigning life in the Soudan are cleverly delineated by our Special Artist. The cataracts of the Nile, so far as his present experiences are concerned, seem to be left entirely behind; he is no longer among the boats in their toilsome struggle with the rapid current and the labyrinth of rocks; but we have added two of his Sketches of the river banks, those of the old Fort at Debbeh, and of Hannek, the reputed birth-place of the Mahdi, which is not far above Korti in going up to Merawi.

GENERAL SIR HERBERT STEWART, K.C.B.

The march of the advanced brigade of the British army from Korti, across the Bayuda Desert, to the banks of the Nile near Metammeh, with the hard-fought battles of Jan. 17, at Abou Klea, and Jan. 19, not far from the river, is a brilliant military achievement. Colonel Sir Herbert Stewart, acting as Brigadier-General, has won high renown by this important service, for which he had prepared the way by his former march, with a smaller force, as far as Gakdul Wells, establishing stations and garrisons along the route. Lord Wolseley, in his despatch published last week, expressing his regret that Sir Herbert Stewart was severely wounded on Jan. 19, commended him in very high terms; and a message from the Queen, thanking her brave troops and their commander, while expressing likewise her deep concern for their losses and sufferings, announced that he would be promoted. The War Office has accordingly notified the promotion of "Major and Colonel Sir Herbert Stewart, K.C.B., 3rd Dragoon Guards, Aide-de-Camp to the Queen, now a Brigadier-General on the Staff with the force on the Nile, to be Major-General in the Army, for distinguished service in the field."

Sir Herbert Stewart is forty-two years of age; he is a son of the late Rev. Edward Stewart, an Irish clergyman; his mother being Louisa Anne, daughter of Mr. C. J. Herbert, of Muckross Abbey, county Kerry. He was educated at Winchester College, entered the Army in 1863, and in less than three years was Adjutant of the infantry corps which he had joined. Thence he exchanged into the cavalry, entered the Staff College, and passed with credit and distinction. Stewart was constantly employed in the Zulu War, first as Brigade Major of Cavalry, and then as Chief of the Staff to Baker Russell in the storming of Sekukuni's stronghold. All this was under the personal observation of Wolseley, whose Military Secretary and Chief of the Staff Stewart had become at the conclusion of the Zulu campaign. The brief and disastrous war on the border of the Transvaal, in January, 1881, brought him very different experiences; he was Adjutant and Quartermaster-General with the ill-fated General Colley on Majuba Hill. Another staff appointment was secured for him by Lord Wolseley, who had known him from the earliest stage of his military career. Among the appointments made on the organisation of the army for the Egyptian war in 1882, one of the first was that of Stewart to the staff of Sir Drury-Lowe, who had command of the cavalry division. A romantic incident of the Egyptian campaign was General Drury-Lowe's brilliant ride through the Desert to Cairo, after the battle of Tel-el-Kebir. When the Egyptians sent out a white flag to meet the advancing British force, it was Colonel Stewart who, at the head of a hundred Lancers and Dragoons, demanded and received the surrender of the citadel, and it was to him that Arabi Pasha offered to give up his sword. In Lord Wolseley's despatch, the following passage is not the least memorable:—"Before passing from the cavalry division I must bring prominently to your notice the name of Lieutenant-Colonel H. Stewart, 3rd Dragoon Guards, Assistant Adjutant-General to the Cavalry Division, one of the best staff officers I have ever known, and one whom I feel it will be in the interest of the Army to promote. General Drury-Lowe has written to me about him in the highest terms, especially remarking upon the tact with which he conducted the surrender of Cairo, and of the garrison of that city." Lord Granville, then moving the thanks of the House of Lords to the troops, said: "The cavalry and artillery march to Cairo, which crowned the operations, especially excited the admiration and the curiosity of the German military authorities;" and a similar tribute was paid by Mr. Gladstone, in the House of Commons, to the gallant body of cavalry by which Cairo was seized, on the evening of Sept. 14, 1882, after a march of thirty-nine miles under the burning Egyptian sun. Colonel Stewart was made a Companion of the Bath. When General Graham went to Souakim, in February last year, he was accompanied by Colonel Stewart, who with his horsemen bore a conspicuous part in retrieving the fortunes of the day at Tamasi, when the Arab charge broke the first square. He was most anxious to take the Hussars across the Desert to Berber; but this project was forbidden by the Government. He was raised to the dignity of K.C.B., before accompanying Lord Wolseley on the present expedition up the Nile. Sir Herbert Stewart married, in 1877, Lady Tombs, widow of Major-General Sir Henry Tombs, and daughter of Admiral Sir James Stirling. His wound being likely to prevent him from rendering further active service in this campaign, Major-General Sir Redvers Buller, V.C., K.C.B., has been sent to succeed him in command of the advanced force at Gubat and probably at Khartoum.

Our Portrait of Sir Herbert Stewart is from a photograph by Mr. Chancellor, of Dublin.

In order to commemorate the great public services of the late Sir Alexander Grant, Principal of the University of Edinburgh, his friends have raised by subscription a fund exceeding twelve thousand five hundred pounds. This fund will be for the benefit of his widow and children.

THE PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Mrs. LANGTRY.
Sole Proprietor, Mr. EDGAR BRUCE.
Season under the direction of Mr. HENRY E. ABBEY.
EVERY EVENING, at Eight, Sheridan's Comedy, in five acts, SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL, produced under the direction of Mr. Coghlan. Characters by Mr. W. Farren, Mr. H. Beerbohm Tree, Mr. Everill, Mr. A. Wood, Mr. E. D. Lyons, Mr. Lin Rayne, Mr. Carne, Mr. Smedley, Mr. Crisp, Mr. Thorpe, Mr. Daniell, Mr. Weathersby, and Mr. Coghlan; Mrs. Arthur Stirling, Miss Kate Pattison, Miss Eva Sothern, and MRS. LANGTRY.
Doors open at Half-past Seven; SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL at Eight. Carriages at Eleven. Box-Office open daily from Eleven till Five. No fees. Telephone 3708.—THE PRINCE'S THEATRE, Coventry-street, W.

PRINCESS'S THEATRE.—MR. WILSON BARRETT,
Lessee and Manager.—EVERY EVENING, at 7.45, HAMLET. Messrs. Wilson Barrett, Speakman, Dewhurst, Wiliard, Clifford Cooper, Frank Cooper, Cranford, Beaumont, Lyall, Lewis, Bennett, Lacy, and Mackay; Mesdames Eastlake, Dickens, &c., and Miss Leighton. Doors open at 7.15. Box-office, 9.30 to Five. No fees. Matinees, Saturdays, Feb. 7 and 21, at 1.30. Business Manager, J. H. Cobbe.

MASKELYNE and COOKE, EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, give their performance EVERY AFTERNOON at Three; and on the Evenings, at Eight, of Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Mr. Maskelyne's New Programme includes a new sketch, entitled THE FAKIRS OF HINDOSTAN AND THEIR BRAZEN ORACLE, introducing many Novel Effects and Startling Illusions, differing entirely in character from any previously witnessed. Stalls, 5s.; Reserved Seats, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Balcony, 1s.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY.
EVERY NIGHT AT EIGHT O'CLOCK.
MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and SATURDAY at THREE also.
THE
MOORE and BURGESS MINSTRELS'
TWENTIETH ANNUAL CARNIVAL OF MUSIC AND FUN.
The Monstre Holiday Programme. This also EVERY NIGHT at Eight.
MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and SATURDAY at Three and Eight.
All New and Beautiful Songs.
New Budget of Screamingly Funny Stories. New Comic Sketches.
New and Important Additions to the Great Company.

THE VALE OF TEARS.—DORÉ'S Last Great PICTURE,
completed a few days before he died, NOW on VIEW at the DORÉ GALLERY, 35, New Bond-street, with his other great pictures. Ten to Six Daily. 1s.

ANNO DOMINI, by EDWIN LONG, R.A.—This great Work is NOW ON VIEW, together with other important works, at the GALLERIES, 168, New Bond-street. Ten to Six. Admission, 1s.

JAPANESE VILLAGE.
Under Royal Patronage,
ALBERT-GATE, HYDE PARK (Near Top of Sloane-street).
Eleven a.m. to Ten p.m. One Shilling. Children under Twelve, Sixpence.
WEDNESDAYS, Half-a-Crown. Children under Twelve, One Shilling.
MILITARY BAND.
Performances in the New Annexe at Twelve, Three, and Eight (free).
Managing Director, TANNAKER BURICOSAN.

MONTE CARLO.—MUSICAL SEASON (CONCERTS, REPRESENTATIONS).
In addition to the usual Concerts, directed by Monsieur Romeo Accursi, the Société des Bains de Mer de Monaco has authorised M. Pasdeloup to arrange a series of Extraordinary Grand Musical Entertainments (Concerts, Representations) this Winter.
The services of the following distinguished Artistes have been already retained:—

Mesdames Krauss,	Messieurs Faure,
" Devriès,	" Vergnet,
" Salla,	" Capoul,
" Donadio,	" Bouhy,
" Frank-Duvernoy,	" Castelmary,
" Belloca,	" Villaret,
" Simonnet.	&c.

Added to which the celebrated Instrumentalists will appear:
VIOLINISTS:
Mons. Sivori, Mons. Marsik, Miss N. Carpenter, American artiste, 1st Conservatoire Prize, 1883.
PIANISTS: Mons. Plante, Mons. Th. Ritter, Madame Essipoff.
HARPIST: Mons. Hasselmans.
These Extraordinary Representations will be given each Wednesday and Saturday, commencing the end of January and terminating the middle of March.
M. Pasdeloup has the excellent idea to terminate each concert by fragments of operas, in costume, and scenery—viz.:

1st Concert.	LES HUGUENOTS.	Fourth Act.
2nd "	RIGOLETTO.	Fourth Act.
3rd "	LA DJA.	selection.
4th "	MANON.	Second Act.
	FAUST.	Prison Scene.
5th "	HERODIADE.	selection.
6th "	FAVORITE.	selection.
	AIDA.	Third Act.
7th "	LAKME.	selection.
8th "	LE BARBIER.	selection.
9th "	HAMLET.	Third and Fourth Act.
10th "	LA TRAVIATA.	Fourth Act.
11th "	FAUST.	Garden Scene.
12th "	LE SIGURD.	Brunhilde's Dream.
	LE CHALET.

TIR AUX PIGEONS DE MONACO.
The following is the Programme:—
BI-WEEKLY MATCHES FOR PRIZES.
Feb. 7: Prix Hopwood. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 10: Prix Ladoué. A Purse of 300f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 12: Prix Edershay. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 16: Prix du Comité. A Purse of 300f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 21: Prix Canmore. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 24: Prix Devron. A Purse of 300f. and a Poule of 50f.
Feb. 28: Prix Dori. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Mar. 3: Prix de Mars. A Purse of 300f. and a Poule of 50f.
Mar. 7: Prix Patton. An object of Art and a Poule of 50f.
Mar. 10: Prix W. Cali. A Purse of 300f., added to a Poule of 50f.
GRAND CLOSING PRIZES.
March 12 and 13: Grand Prix de Clôture. A Purse of 4000f. added to 100f. entrance; Second Prize, 1000f.; Third Prize, 700f.; Fourth, 300f.
A. BLONDIN, Secretary.

NEWS FROM NICE.—With the exception of a very few wet and cold days, the weather is again up genial. Not a flake of snow has fallen. The sun shines almost perpetually, and the influence of its warm rays makes life enjoyable to all, and more especially to those who have by impaired health sought its influence.
There are no epidemics, and the average mortality of the city in 1884 was less per mille than London and many fashionable towns in England.
The streets, roads, and sewers are constantly cleansed and disinfected, and watered from the mouth and stream of the Vesubio. There are three English doctors and physicians in practice here—viz., Messrs. West, Wakefield, and Sturge, and they will be happy to communicate with any intending visitors as to the healthfulness of the town.
The effects of the recent storm (the like of which has been unknown for thirty-five years) were comparatively trifling, and repaired in twenty-four hours. In one or two low-lying streets and orchards, near the Fish Market, the wash from the spent waves had entered, but this was soon pumped out by the firemen and military.
Visitors are heralding in increasing numbers, as is their wont at this season, and the approach of Carnival, which report says will be the best on record. The Municipal Theatre will open immediately, and the Théâtre Français, of which Mr. Corbelano continues the able director, has several Star Artists for the Opera Comique, and an excellent Troupe de Comédie.
The Carnival and Regatta will be fully announced with other fêtes.
Nice, Jan. 30, 1885.

NICE CARNIVAL, February 1 to 17.
CORSO CARNIVALESQUE.
Masked Revelries, Promenade of Allegorical Cars,
Cavalcades, Masquerades.
CORSO DE GALA.
Bataille de Fleurs, Bataille de Confetti.
Veglione, Masked and Costume Balls,
Grand Charity Fancy Fair.
Moccoletti, Serenades, Torchlight Parades, Electric Lights,
Fireworks, Illuminations.
Distribution of £2400 in Prizes.
President, Monsieur LE COMTE DE CESOLE.
Secretary, M. A. SAETONE. Treasurer, BARON ROISSARD DU BELLET.

MENTON.—CARNIVAL, FEB. 14 and 16.
GRAND CORSO DE GALA.
Battle of Flowers and Confetti.
Cavalcades, Masquerades, Cars, Decorated Carriages, &c.
FÊTE DE NUIT.
Concert. Moccoletti. Illuminations.
SECOND DAY, FEB. 16.
Grand Corso.
Battle of Flowers.
Proclamation of Prizes, 5600 francs.
Illuminations, Fireworks, and Torchlight Processions.
Burning of the Carnival.
Grand International Regattas will follow.

MARRIAGES.

On the 28th ult., at St. Stephen's Church, South Dulwich, by the Rev. J. Meek Cark, assisted by the Rev. S. F. Bridge, Sydney Cheshyre, second son of Thomas Lynn Bristowe, Esq., of Dulwich Hill House, to Ethel Susan Graham, only daughter of William Paterson, Esq., of Beech Grove, Sydenham-hill.
On the 24th ult., at Rawal Pindi, Punjab, Henry Tanner Ferguson, M.Inst.C.E., to Beatrice Madeline Erskine, eldest daughter of the Rev. Edward Maule Cole, M.A., Vicar of Wetwang, York, and niece of the Earl of Mar.

DEATHS.

On the 28th ult., at Carlton-crescent, Southampton, after a brief illness, Emily Eugenia, Dowager Lady Ramsay, of Bamff, aged 78.
On the 31st ult., at Datchet House, Bucks, in her 87th year, Lady Alicia Mary Bristowe, sixth daughter of Francis Jack, first Earl of Kilmorey, and widow of the late Samuel Edmund Bristowe, Esq., of Beesthorpe, Notts.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, is Five Shillings for each announcement.

POSTAGE FOR FOREIGN PARTS THIS WEEK.
FEBRUARY 7, 1885.

The publication of the Thin Paper Edition of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS being for the present week suspended, subscribers will please to notice that copies of this Number forwarded abroad must be prepaid according to the following rates:—Twopence to Africa (West Coast of), Alexandria, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Cape of Good Hope, China (viâ United States), Constantinople, Denmark, France, Germany, Gibraltar, Greece, Holland, Italy, Jamaica, Mauritius, New Zealand, Norway, Russia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, United States of America; Threepence to China (viâ Brindisi), and India; and Fourpence to the Transvaal.
Newspapers for foreign parts must be posted within eight days of the date of publication, irrespective of the departure of the mails.

Now ready,
VOL. 85, ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS,
most elegantly bound, Cloth gilt, price 20s.; in Paper Covers, 15s.

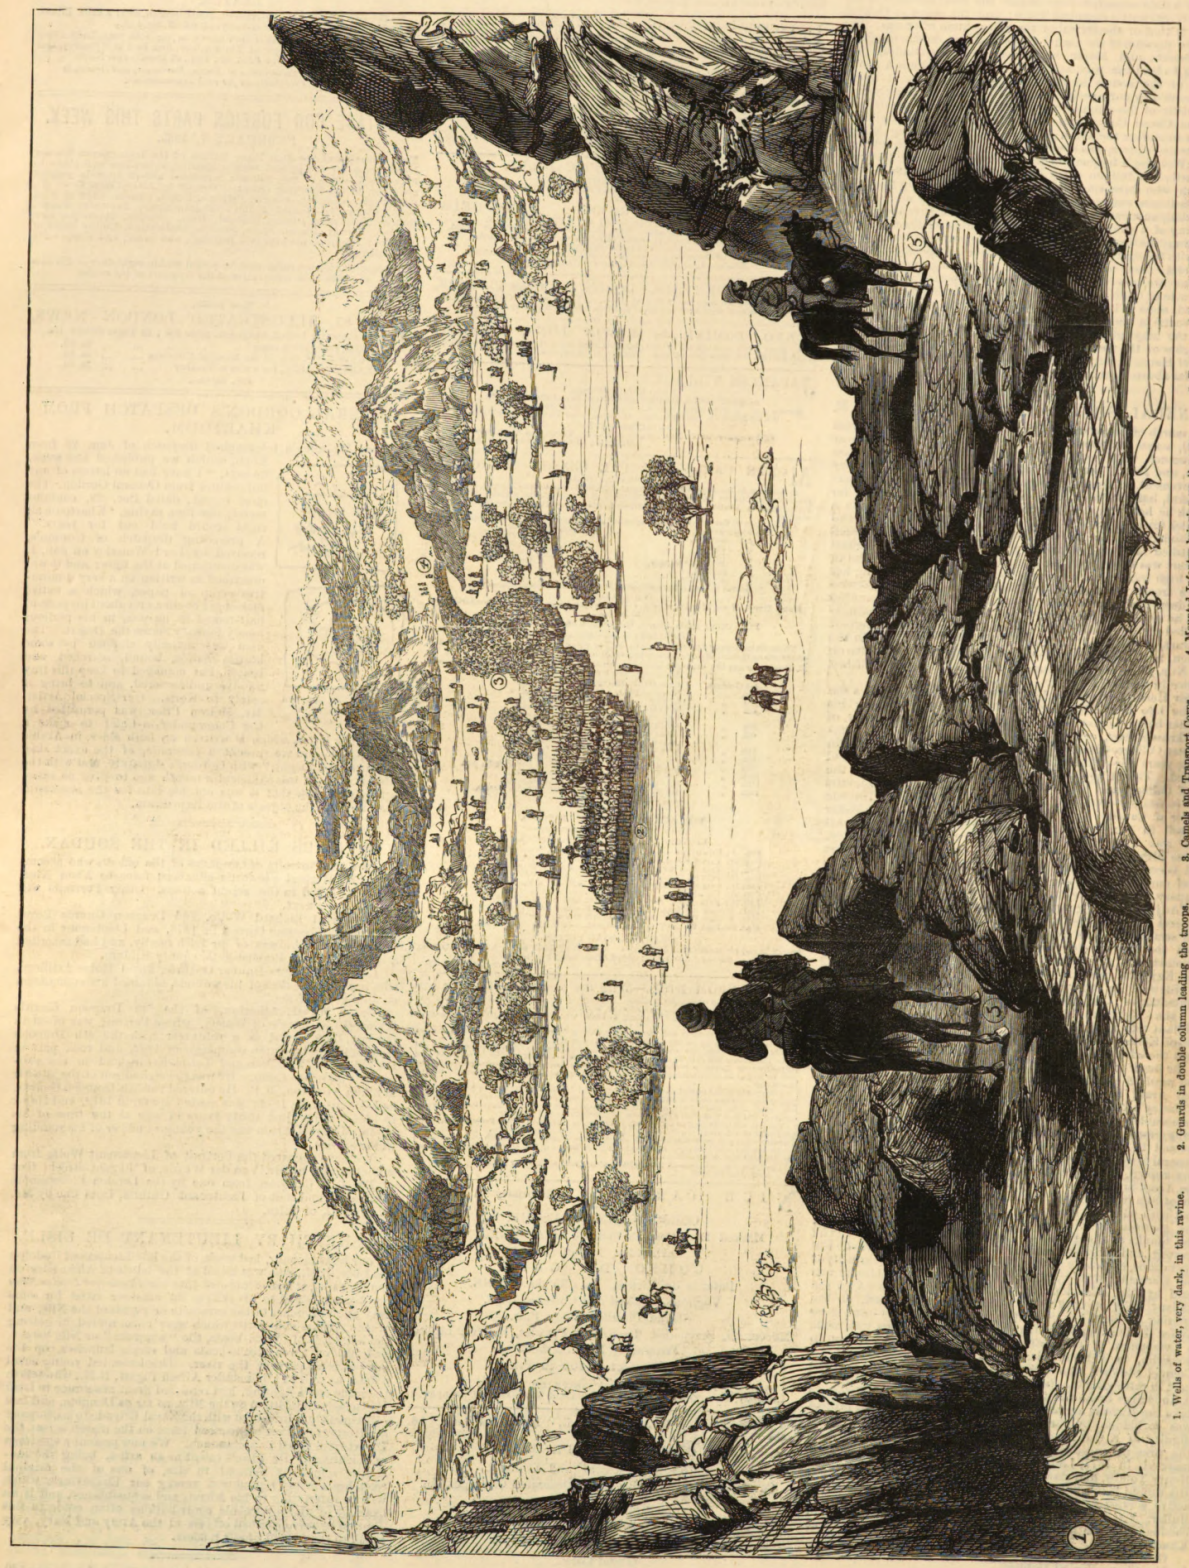
CASES, for binding same	... ...	... 2s. 6d.
PORTFOLIOS, to hold Six Months' Numbers	...	... 4s. 6d.
READING-CASES, for a single Number	...	... 2s. 6d.

198, Strand.

GENERAL GORDON'S DESPATCH FROM KHARTOUM.

In Lord Wolseley's telegraphed despatch of Jan. 28 from Korti, which we published last week, he says, "I have had no letters of any importance from General Gordon. The most recent, dated Dec. 29, contains merely one line, saying, 'Khartoum all right—could hold out for years.'" A preceding despatch of Gordon's, received by Lord Wolseley on Jan. 1, was mentioned at the time; and it was described as written on a very diminutive scrap of paper, which a native messenger could secret about his person, half-naked as he was, in his perilous lonely journey across the Desert. The man was actually stopped by some hostile Arabs, bound, searched, and beaten, but managed to keep this tiny missive undiscovered, and to bring it safely to Korti. Our Special Artist, Mr. Melton Prior, was permitted by the Commander-in-Chief to make a copy of the letter, which is written on both sides, in Arabic and English, and we present a facsimile, of the exact size. "Khartoum all right," with Gordon's signature, and with the date of Dec. 14, was sufficient a month ago to give us satisfactory assurance that it was not too late for the successful attainment of the objects of the Expedition.

FACSIMILE OF LETTER RECEIVED FROM GENERAL GORDON.

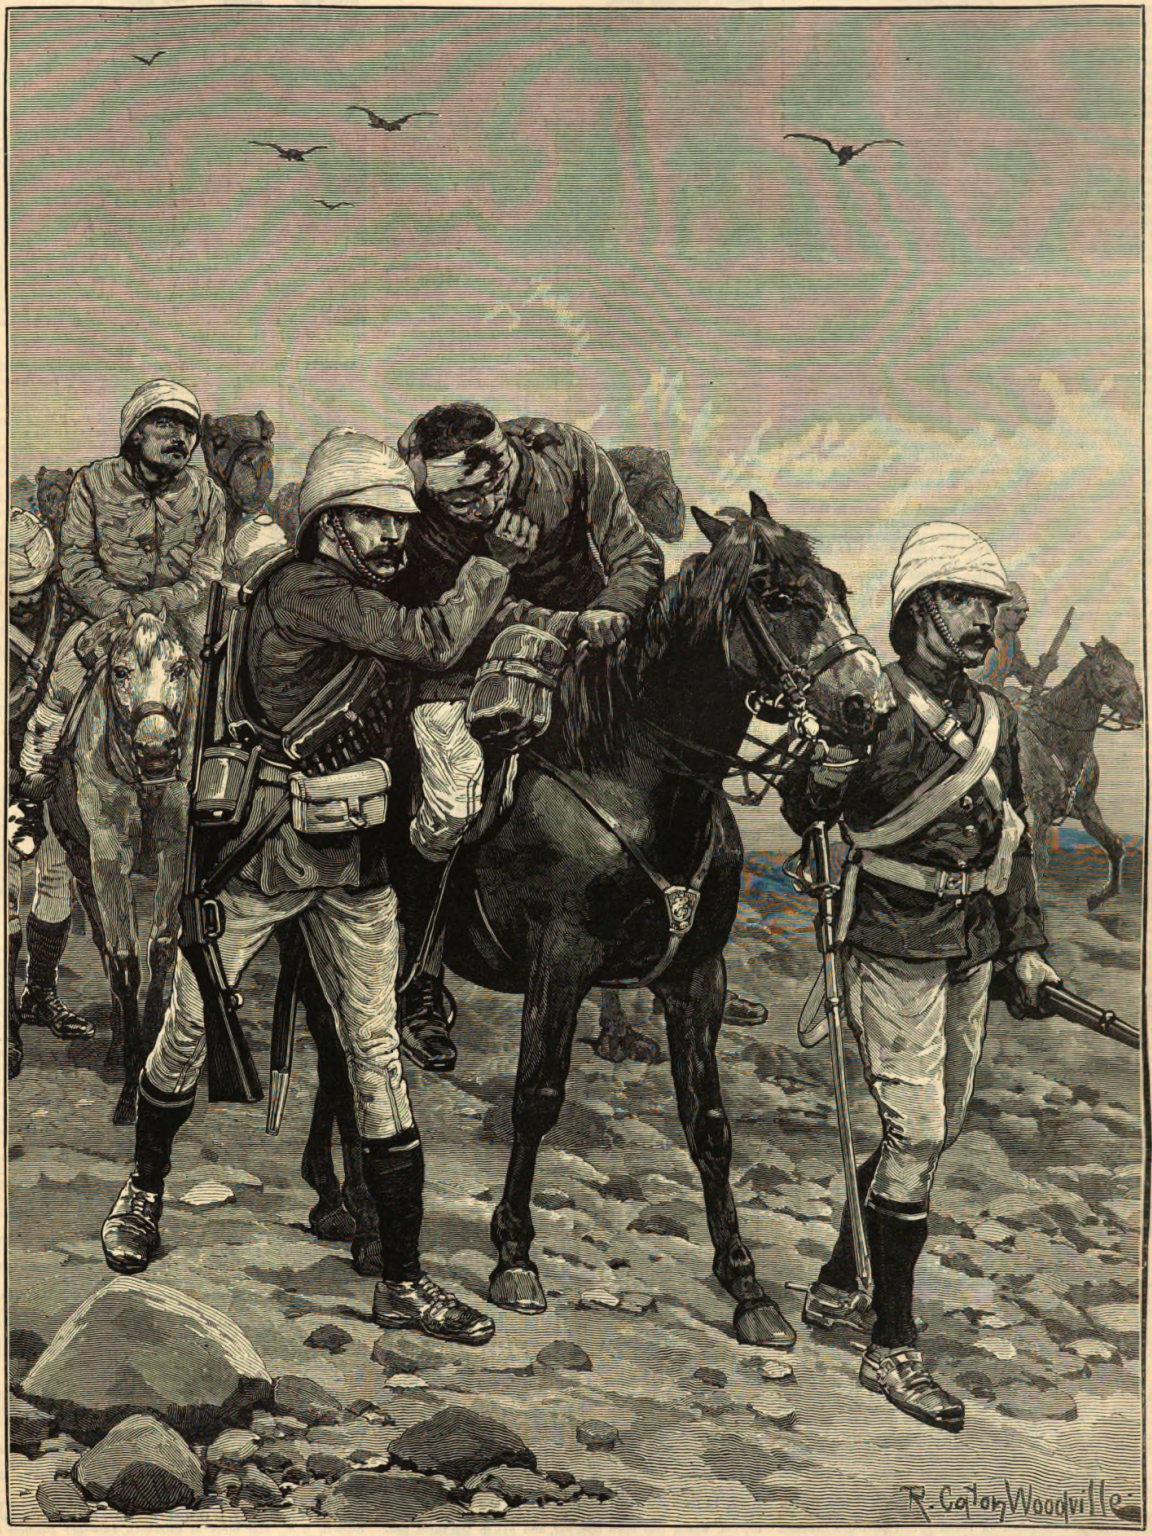


OFFICERS KILLED IN THE SOUDAN.

We give the Portraits of two more of the officers who accompanied Sir Herbert Stewart's advanced force to Abou Klea, and were killed in the recent actions. Other Portraits will appear in our next.
Lieutenant Richard Wolfe, 2nd Dragoon Guards (Royal Scots Greys), became Cornet in 1878, and Lieutenant in the following year; he was of an Irish family, and had inherited a landed estate at Forenaughts, county Kildare.
Lieutenant James Dunbar Guthrie, Royal Horse Artillery, who has likewise died of his wounds, obtained his commission on Jan. 25, 1877.
Major W. H. Atherton, of the 5th Dragoon Guards (Princess Charlotte's of Wales), whose Portrait was given in our last, had served as a volunteer with the 4th Dragoon Guards in the Egyptian campaign of 1882, and took part in the battles of Kassassin and Tel-el-Kebir, and in the subsequent march to Cairo. He was the second son of the late Sir William Atherton, M.P. He entered the 5th Dragoon Guards, as Lieutenant, in 1874; was made Captain in 1879, and Major in 1884. Being just thirty years of age at the time of his death, Major Atherton was the youngest officer of his standing in the service.
We have engraved the Portrait of Lieutenant Wolfe from a photograph by Mr. Van der Weyde, of Regent-street; that of Mr. J. A. Cameron, from one by the London Stereoscopic Company; and that of Lieutenant Guthrie, from one by Mr. O. Schoefft, of Cairo.

A SKETCH BY LIEUTENANT DE LISLE.

In our brief memoir, last week, of the late Lieutenant Rudolph De Lisle, R.N., who was killed at the battle of Abou Klea on the 17th ult., it was mentioned that the Illustrated London News had been indebted to his skill as an amateur artist for some very good Sketches of the cataracts or rapids of the Nile, and of the labours and perils which were encountered in getting the hundreds of whale-boats, the "nuggahs" or Nile barges, and two or three steam-boats and steam-launches, up the most difficult parts of the river. This lamented young naval officer, as well as Commander Alfred Pigott, R.N., who fell in the same day's fighting, had rendered great assistance to Lord Wolseley's Expedition on the Nile, as far as Dongola, and had subsequently volunteered with the Naval Brigade to accompany Sir Herbert Stewart's advanced force on the march across the Desert from Korti to Metammeh. We now present a specimen of Lieutenant De Lisle's talent as an artist, being the facsimile, somewhat reduced in size, of one of the original Sketches already reproduced among our Engravings, which will be interesting to his friends and acquaintance, and is an example of the serviceable contributions often made to this Journal by accomplished officers of the Army and Navy, very much to the benefit of our readers.



Besides the fashionable marriages recorded on page 160, the following have recently taken place:—The marriage of Viscount Torrington with Miss Emmeline St. Maur Seymour, third daughter of the Rev. Henry Seymour, Rector of Holmes Pierrepont; and of Viscount Sackville with Miss Sneyd, of Calderwood House.

1. Wells of water, very dark, in this ravine. 2. Guards in double column leading the troops. 3. Camels and Transport Corps. 4. Mounted Infantry bringing up the rear. 5. Troopers of the 19th Hussars scouting.

THE KHARTOUM RELIEF EXPEDITION: ARRIVAL OF FIRST COLUMN AT THE WELLS OF GAKDUL.
A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, MR. MELTON PRIOR.

THE KHARTOUM RELIEF EXPEDITION.

A CONVOY OF WOUNDED.

PARISIAN SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Tuesday, Feb. 3.

The calendar is, as usual, in contradiction with the weather, and, as if influenced by our nineteenth-century haste to live, February begins with March winds and April showers and soft vernal breezes. In Paris the harbingers of spring are not those celebrated by the poets Virgil and Thomson, but simply a variety of picture exhibitions, minor "Salons" at clubs and elsewhere, where society meets to gossip of an afternoon and to criticise Carolus Duran's portrait of the Comtesse X, or Cabanel's portrait of the Duchesse Z. At the clubs of the Rue Volney and of the Place Vendôme, all the eminent artists, including even the great and greatly over-rated Meissonier, exhibit; but the most important and interesting of all the picture exhibitions now open is that of the Water-Colour Society in the Rue de Sèze. The thirty members of this Society exhibit 176 water colours and fifty-six drawings, not one of which can be said to be mediocre. Detaille's studies of the Russian army and De Neuville's military subjects are full of masterly observation; Madame Madeleine Lemaire's flowers and figure subjects are novel and graceful; MM. Heilbuth, Dubuge, Le Blant, Français, Worms, Harpignies, Delort, have all made a successful effort to get out of the ordinary rut; and the society has made some valuable recruits in MM. Maurice, Courant, Maignan, Gros, Yon, and Adrien Moreau. M. Vibert, the president and founder of this society, which is in the seventh year of its existence, has invented a new water-colour process, which has the advantage of being as imperishable as oil painting; its only disadvantage, and that is a great one, is that it is opaque, whereas the great charm and characteristic of water colour is its transparency.

Politics remain uninteresting for the moment, the Deputies being busy with the Budget, and the Senators with the verification of the powers of new members and the formation of the bureau. In the Chamber an important incident happened yesterday, when, on the proposition of M. Ballue, secret voting was abolished by 418 against 13. The object immediately aimed at is to have an open vote on the forthcoming debate on the scrutin de liste. The probabilities of a dissolution of Parliament at no distant date are increasing.

The Prince of Wales, passing through this city on his way to Cannes, called yesterday upon President Grévy, who shortly afterwards returned His Royal Highness's visit at the Hôtel Bristol. The Prince attended the performance of "Théodora" last night.

The Paris Municipal Council agreed yesterday to the purchase, for 963,000f., of springs in Burgundy, Normandy, and Brie, with a view to the improvement of the water supply. The scheme is estimated to cost 80 millions, and to comprise two aqueducts, of a total length of 120 kilomètres.

The forthcoming exhibition of 1889 is bringing forth all kinds of projects. One of the latest and most novel is the "sun column." A palace 66 mètres high would be constructed in the centre of Paris, and serve at the same time as an engine-house and as a permanent electrical museum. On this foundation would be placed a colossal column with a basement 35 mètres in diameter, and at the summit of the column an electric light surmounted by a statue of the genius of science, whose head would be 360 mètres from the ground, over 1000 ft. high. The column would have a hollow space of 8 mètres diameter in the centre, and at different levels there would be dwellings for aeropathic treatment, so that people would no longer have to go to Switzerland or the Pyrenees. This tower of Babel, besides being a monument of the centenary of the Revolution of 1789, would, according to the projector, M. Bourdais, light all Paris and be a great economy to the city. At present the lighting of Paris costs 120,000f. a day; the electric sun column would cost 4500f. a day. On the other hand, if water-power were used instead of coal and steam-power, the cost would be reduced to the simple keeping up of the machinery and personnel. The project is certainly curious, and, in the present stage of science, there seems to be no reason why it could not be executed.

M. Dupuy De Lôme, the eminent French naval engineer, senator, and member of the Institute, died last week, at the age of sixty-nine. M. Dupuy De Lôme, after studying ship-building in England, constructed, at Toulon, the first rapid screw-steamer, the Napoleon, which rendered eminent service in the Crimean war, and in 1856 the first iron-clad frigate, La Gloire, which ever figured in the navy of any country. La Gloire, it is needless to say, revolutionised the navies of the world. M. Dupuy De Lôme also occupied himself with the problem of aerial navigation, and constructed a balloon with a screw-propeller, which was to have served during the siege of Paris.

The latest novelty in Parisian amusements is a company of Viennese girls who have been trained in all the finesses of fencing by Professor Hartl, of Vienna. The assault given at the Cirque d'Eté last night was a great success, and the exercises of the young Viennese ladies were found to be very graceful. Professor Hartl has set himself the task of proving that fencing is the best and cheapest exercise for women, as it is for men.—The candidates for the seat left vacant in the French Academy by the death of Edmond About are the lawyer M. Allou, the greatest French forensic orator; M. Bardoux, ex-Minister; M. Henri De Bornier, poet and dramatist; M. Gustave Droz, author of "Monsieur, Madame, et Bébe"; M. Ferdinand Fabre, the novelist of French religious and clerical life; M. Eugène Manuel, professor and poet; and M. Léon Say, ex-Minister, friend of the Rothschilds, a formidable economist, and a man who would like not only to be member of the Academy, but also President of the Republic.

T. C.

The Belgian Ministry, with the consent of the Chambers, has re-established the Belgian Embassy to the Vatican.

Princess Mary of Prussia, widow of Prince Henry of Holland, has been betrothed to Prince Albert of Saxe-Altenburg.

The Bulgarian Chamber has voted the bill for the reorganisation of the National Bank. The Government will deposit 10,000,000f. in gold in the bank, which will be authorised to issue notes to the amount of 20,000,000f.

The first State ball of the season was given at Vienna, on Thursday week. It was attended by all the members of the Diplomatic Corps, including the new Chinese Minister. The Emperor and Empress entered the rooms at half-past nine, arm-in-arm, followed by their Imperial relatives. The Crown Prince and Princess were both slightly indisposed, and were unable to attend.—In the Hungarian Diet the Estimates of the Ministry of Justice have been discussed and accepted.

The annual Court Ball at the Royal Opera-House, Berlin, after being twice postponed on account of the Emperor's recent illness, took place on Tuesday, and proved a brilliant success. This festivity, which is the great event of the Berlin season, is always attended by the élite of the aristocracy and the diplomatic, military, and official world, numbering some 3000 persons, who fill all parts of the Opera-House, which presents a dazzling sight. Both the stage and auditorium are combined to form one great ball-room. The Court appeared after nine o'clock, and the ball then opened with the polonaise, in which only the members of the Royal family and Court took part, and during which the opera choir, stationed in the gallery, sung a chorus to the band accompaniment. The Emperor, who looked in excellent health and spirits, led the Crown Princess, followed by the Crown Prince, with Princess William, Prince William, Princess Frederick Charles, Prince Frederick Charles, and Princess Victoria. Many foreign Ambassadors and members of the Conference were present, with their ladies.

The Norwegian Storthing was opened on Tuesday by the Crown Prince, the Crown Princess being also present. The speech from the Throne announces the introduction of several bills, including a measure relating to military service, and one for amending the present system of criminal procedure. The financial condition of the country is described as satisfactory.

President Arthur, in a message sent to Congress, suggests that the Arctic exploring-vessel Alert, presented by the British Government to the United States, shall now be returned with suitable acknowledgments. The President further recommends that he be authorised to return the vessel.—The Nicaraguan Treaty has been defeated in the Senate by 32 to 23 votes.—O'Donovan Rossa and his followers held a meeting on Sunday night, and rejoiced loudly over the London explosions. There is said to be great excitement among the St. Louis dynamiters because of the disclosures about Cunningham. Threats were made to assassinate the Irishman who made those disclosures, if he can be discovered.—Affairs, however, took quite another turn on the following day. An attempt was made to murder O'Donovan Rossa, in Chambers-street, New York, on Monday afternoon, by a young woman who fired at him five times with a revolver, but only one bullet entered his body. She was handed over to the police. She gave the name of Yseult Dudley, and said she was an Englishwoman and a widow. It is announced by the surgeons in attendance on O'Donovan Rossa that the wound he has sustained is not of a dangerous character. At the Tombs Police Court Mrs. Dudley was on Tuesday charged with attempting his life, and was remanded for further inquiries after some formal evidence had been given. O'Donovan Rossa says that she had proposed to subscribe to the dynamite fund, and was walking with him conversing, when she dropped behind and shot him. The excitement caused by the dynamite outrages led to a free fight on Tuesday amongst the Irish agitators in a public hall in New York. The riot lasted two hours, and was eventually quelled with great difficulty by the police, many arrests being made, including that of Herr Schwab, a German Socialist ringleader.

The Dominion Parliament was opened on Thursday week by the Governor-General, who, in his speech on the occasion, announced that several measures of importance would be submitted for consideration. During the past year the revenue of Canada had exceeded the expenditure chargeable to the Consolidated revenues. Lord Lansdowne suggested that the Dominion should be represented at the forthcoming International Exhibitions at Antwerp and London.—The Canadian papers say it is understood that the Dominion and Manitoba Governments have arrived at an agreement relative to the financial arrangements between the two parties, which will go into effect from Jan. 1. It is in substance that, in lieu of her lands, which are held and administered as Dominion lands, the province of Manitoba shall receive an annual grant of 100,000 dols. instead of 45,000 dols., as now; and that this shall be regarded as a final settlement of the land question. The province is also to be put in possession of all the swamp lands within her borders, instead of one half the swamp area, as heretofore. In addition to this, Manitoba already holds one-eighteenth of her area as school lands.

A telegram from Capetown says that Sir Charles Warren and President Kruger have come to an understanding. There is every prospect of peace, but the troops continue to advance.

Mr. Service, the Prime Minister of Victoria, has sent to the Governor a strongly-worded protest against the vacillation of her Majesty's Government in regard to New Guinea.

The Hon. Francis J. Pakenham, Minister Resident in Chili, has been appointed her Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary at Buenos Ayres.

An exhibition of Persian, Damascus, and Rhodian works of art, from various private collections, will be held at the Burlington Fine-Arts Club during March and April.

General Sir J. Henry Lefroy has been elected a member of the council of the Royal Colonial Institute, in the room of Sir George MacLeay, who has retired.

On Tuesday the first Levée given this season by Earl Spencer was held in Dublin Castle, and was very largely attended. Owing to information received, extraordinary precautions were taken to protect the place.

Messrs. Boosey and Co. announce the sale by auction of the copyright of Mr. Stanford's two operas, "The Canterbury Pilgrims" and "Savonarola." These works cost the publishers £1200 each, and the latter is still unpublished. They will be sold by Messrs. Puttick and Simpson on the 24th inst.

The Brompton Hospital entertainment on Tuesday evening was under the direction of Mr. Walter Clifford. For the first part the popular triumveretta, "Cox and Box," was given—Cox being personated by Mr. Walter Clifford, Box by Mr. Eric Lewis, and Sergeant Bouncer by Mr. Richard Temple, of the Savoy Theatre. The second part consisted of a miscellaneous concert, the artists being Madame Osborne Williams, Mrs. W. Weblyn, Mr. Osborne Williams, Mr. Orlando Harley, Mr. Fred Mervin, and Mr. Walter Clifford.

On Monday, at the Royal Institute of British Architects, a most interesting exhibition was opened, comprising original drawings by Inigo Jones, Sir Christopher Wren, and the Brothers Adam, with many others by Sir Jeffry Wyattville, Nash, Pugin, Barry, Cockerell, Gilbert Scott, G. E. Street (the architect of the New Law Courts), W. Burges, Professor Ruskin, and more also of typical importance. The Queen and the Duke of Devonshire are among the contributors. Mr. Maurice B. Adams, who has brought the collection together, read a paper in the evening on "Architectural Drawings," by invitation of the council, and the exhibition remains open all the week.

Last week 2727 births and 1885 deaths were registered in London. Allowing for increase of population, the births were 107 and the deaths 51 below the average numbers in the corresponding weeks of the last ten years. The deaths included 29 from smallpox, 16 from measles, 19 from scarlet fever, 15 from diphtheria, 60 from whooping-cough, 1 from typhus, 13 from enteric fever, 1 from ill-defined form of continued fever, 12 from diarrhœa and dysentery, and not one from cholera. The deaths referred to diseases of the respiratory organs, which had been 609, 552, and 513 in the three preceding weeks, rose again to 556 last week, and exceeded the corrected average by 18. Different forms of violence caused 53 deaths: 50 were the result of negligence or accident, among which were 18 from fractures and contusions, 6 from burns and scalds, 6 from drowning, 2 of labourers at leadworks from lead poisoning, and 16 of infants under one year of age from suffocation. Two cases of suicide were registered.

OBITUARY.

VISCOUNT ST. VINCENT.

The Right Hon. John Edward Leveson Jervis, fourth Viscount St. Vincent, of Meaford, in the county of Stafford, died of the wounds he received at Abou Klea on the 17th ult. He was born April 3, 1850, the eldest son of Carnegie Robert John, third Viscount, by Lucy Charlotte, his wife, youngest daughter of Mr. John Baskervyle Glegg, of Withington Hall, Cheshire. He was educated at Harrow, and entered the Army, in the 7th Hussars, in 1871. He afterwards changed into the 16th Lancers, and became Captain in 1881. This gallant and promising officer served in the Zulu war of 1879, and was present in the engagements at the Zuingiun Mountain and Ulundi, for which he had the medal and clasp. In 1880 he was in the expedition against the Marrees, in Afghan; in 1881, in the Boer war; and in 1882, in the Egyptian campaign. He was a fearless soldier, an amiable, genial friend, and a popular sportsman. He was not married, and consequently his next brother, Carnegie Parker, becomes fifth Viscount St. Vincent. The title was originally granted in 1801, with a special limitation to the famous Admiral Sir John Jervis, who had previously been given an earldom in requital of his brilliant victory off Cape St. Vincent.

LORD O'HAGAN, K.P.

The Right Hon. Thomas, Lord O'Hagan, of Tullahogue, in the county of Tyrone, in the Peerage of the United Kingdom, K.P., P.C., a Commissioner of National Education, and Vice-Chancellor of the Royal University of Ireland, died on the 1st inst. He was born May 29, 1812, and claimed descent from the ancient Irish Sept of O'Hagan, of Tullahogue. Called to the Bar in 1836, he became soon distinguished for his eloquence, and was made a Queen's Counsel in 1849. In 1859, he was appointed Queen's Serjeant; from 1860 to 1861, held office as Solicitor-General for Ireland; and from 1861 to 1865, was Attorney-General. He was member for Tralee from 1863 to 1865. In the latter year, he was raised to the Bench as Judge of the Common Pleas, and in 1868 constituted Lord Chancellor of Ireland. He resigned in 1874, and was reappointed in 1880. In 1870, he had been created a Peer. On his final retirement, in January, 1882, he was enrolled a Knight of St. Patrick. He married, first, in 1836, Mary, daughter of Mr. Charles Hamilton Teeling, of Belfast, and by her (who died in 1868) had several children, all now deceased, except the youngest daughter, Frances, wife of the Hon. Mr. Justice O'Hagan. His Lordship married, secondly, in 1871, Alice Mary, youngest daughter and co-heiress of Colonel Towneley, of Towneley, county Lancaster, by Lady Caroline Harriet, his wife, daughter of the second Earl of Sefton, and had by her surviving issue, two sons and two daughters. The elder of the former, Thomas Towneley, now second Lord O'Hagan, was born Dec. 5, 1878. Brilliant as an orator, able and accomplished as a lawyer, and upright and consistent as a politician, Lord O'Hagan leaves behind him an unsullied reputation. In private life, his great personal gifts were enhanced by his warmth of heart, his benevolence, and the kindliness of his nature. A portrait of Lord O'Hagan appeared in our Number for April 6, 1865.

SIR CORNWALLIS RICKETTS, BART.

Admiral Sir Cornwallis Ricketts, second Baronet, of Beaumont Leyes, in the county of Leicester, J.P., High Sheriff 1851, died at Florence on the 30th ult. He was born Feb. 27, 1803, entered the Royal Navy in 1816, and attained the rank of Admiral in 1877. He married, first, May 31, 1834, Henrietta, youngest daughter of Colonel John Tempest, of Tong Hall, county York; and secondly, Jan. 29, 1852, Lady Caroline Augusta Pelham Clinton, third daughter of the fourth Duke of Newcastle, and had issue by each. His eldest son by his first wife (who died Nov. 13, 1838) is now Sir Robert Tempest Tempest, third Baronet, of Tong Hall and Aughton, born Dec. 7, 1836, who assumed by Royal Licence, April 23, 1884, the surname and arms of Tempest in lieu of Ricketts. He married, July 26, 1861, Amelia Helen, eldest surviving daughter of Mr. John Steuart, of Dalguise, Perthshire, and was left a widower in 1869, with one son and one daughter.

We have also to record the deaths of—

Mr. Charles Longuet Higgins, M.A., of Turvey Abbey, Bedfordshire, on the 23rd ult.

Major Ludovick Montefiore Carmichael, 5th Lancers, who fell at Abou Klea. He was forty-nine years of age.

Major James Rutherford Lumley, late Assistant Adjutant-General, Bengal Army, eldest son of General Sir James Rutherford Lumley, K.C.B., on the 24th ult., aged seventy-four.

Elizabeth, Lady Steel, wife of Sir John Steel, Knight, R.S.A., Sculptor to the Queen for Scotland, on the 26th ult., at 24, Greenhill-gardens, Edinburgh. She was daughter of Mr. John Graham, and was married in 1826.

Mary Anne, Viscountess Torrington, widow of George, seventh Viscount, and only daughter of the late W. John Dugdale Astley, Bart., of Eversley. She was married in 1833, but leaves no surviving child.

General Richard Budd, retired list Madras Army, on the 22nd ult., in his ninetieth year. He entered the Army in 1812, and became General in 1874. He served during the Mahratta campaign and in Burmah.

Laura, Marchioness of Normanby, wife of the present Marquis of Normanby, G.C.M.G., daughter of Captain Robert Russell, R.N., and niece of Elizabeth, Dowager Duchess of Cleveland, on the 26th ult., aged sixty-eight. Her Ladyship was married Aug. 17, 1844, and leaves issue.

Lady Alicia Mary Bristowe, at Datchet House, Bucks, on the 31st ult., in her eighty-seventh year. She was sixth daughter of Francis Jack, first Earl of Kilmorey, and married, in July, 1836, Mr. Samuel Ellis Bristowe, of Beesthorpe, Notts, who died in 1855.

MEMBERS OUT OF PARLIAMENT.

With the advent of the month in which birds do mate and St. Valentine's mystic rites are celebrated and Parliamentary duties are resumed, it is characteristic of Sir Stafford Northcote's sweet disposition that he should endeavour to resolve himself into a busy bee, and gather honey all the day from each new opening flower. The right hon. Baronet was, at any rate, not unlike Dr. Watts's industrious insect when he soothingly buzzed about primroses and orchids at an Exeter Conservative soiree on Tuesday. Anyone intimately acquainted with the peculiar genius of the late Lord Beaconsfield might not unnaturally have supposed that to the late acute leader of the Conservative party "a primrose by the river's brim, a yellow primrose was to him, and it was nothing more." But the exigencies of Party have transformed this simple flower into a political badge. Accordingly, Sir Stafford Northcote diligently and discursively sought to make political capital out of the fact that, while Conservatives cling to the primrose as the favourite flower of their departed chief, the apostle of Radicalism flaunts in his button-hole a gaudy exotic, the orchid. For his part, naturally, Sir Stafford Northcote preferred "the Party of the Primroses" to "the Party of the Orchids"—he was not rude enough to stigmatise his opponents as "the Orchid Squad," though it is not improbable that that is the form his idea will eventually shape itself into in a Moonshine cartoon. Seeing how partial Mr. Gladstone is to a flower in his button-hole on the occasion of a set speech, Sir Stafford Northcote might not inaptly have paid the Premier the compliment of calling his adversaries "the Sweet William Party." But the right hon. Baronet contented himself with the remark that Mr. Gladstone "prefers trees to flowers." We cannot follow the Opposition leader further in his floricultural disquisition, agreeably though it heralded the time regarded by poets—and by them alone—as ethereally mild. Yet it may be owned that it is reassuring to find that, when other minds are distracted by reports of exploded buildings in London and by suspenseful tidings from the Upper Nile, Sir Stafford Northcote can philosophically extract comfort from orchids and primroses.

The Prime Minister, it happens, has not altogether been disassociated from flowers on his side of late. The "primrose path of dalliance" has had no seductions for him; but orange-blossoms probably made Mr. Gladstone's eyes glisten on the Twenty-ninth of January, when the right hon. gentleman and Mrs. Gladstone were present at the marriage of the Rev. Stephen Gladstone and Miss Wilson, at Liverpool. Since then Mr. Gladstone has been the guest of the Duke of Devonshire, with the Marquis of Hartington, at Holker Hall, the quiet of which must have been particularly grateful to the Secretary for War after the recent period of excitement and anxiety at the War Offices.

The Marquis of Ripon's home-coming was made the occasion of a grand banquet at Leeds in honour of the ex-Viceroy of India, who justified his administration in a comprehensive and statesman-like speech explanatory of his policy of conciliating native feeling where it was expedient. Mr. Childers was among the distinguished personages present; and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, replying to the toast of Her Majesty's Ministers, had the pleasant duty of reading the gracious message of sympathy her Majesty had sent to Sir Herbert Stewart in the Soudan, with the intimation that the brave and skilful leader had been promoted to be Major-General.

Plain speech always comes from Birmingham. Plenty of it was forthcoming from Mr. Bright and Mr. Chamberlain on the evening of Thursday week, when, strongly and irreconcilably though the senior member differs from the junior member on the singular Egyptian policy of the Government, the veteran "Tribune of the People" was found siding with Mr. Chamberlain and the Ministerial policy generally on the same platform, that of the Birmingham Townhall. In view of the considerably enlarged electorate which will have to elect the next Parliament, Mr. Bright performed a seasonable service in pointing out the errors committed by existing countries in which the democracy is the governing power. Bellicose as ever was Mr. Bright against the wars of the Victorian era: and unduly severe against the growing desire for a closer federation of Great Britain and the Colonies. Mr. Chamberlain, more to the point, had a sympathetic word of regret for the death of Colonel Burnaby at Abou Klea; and was ready with an assurance that after General Gordon had been rescued with the Egyptian garrisons in the Soudan, that country would be left to its own people. He forcibly called upon Mr. Parnell to express his horror at the dynamite outrages. With regard to the future, Mr. Chamberlain re-stated his desire for a redistribution of taxation to make it fall less heavily on the poor; and called such an alteration of the land laws as would re-establish on the land the old class of yeomen who were once the pride and strength of the country. It may be mentioned, in passing, that Mr. Chamberlain, in a letter to Wednesday's Daily News, takes strong exception to the Times' adverse criticism of his suggested plan of a graduated system of taxation. Condemned though this notion is on high authority, it happens that a scheme of graduated Income Tax for small incomes was brought into vogue by no less a Conservative luminary than Sir Stafford Northcote himself.

The only member of the Upper House who has distinguished himself exceptionally this week is Lord Sherbrooke. Bearing his blushing honours meekly, as has been his wont since he left the stormy arena of the Lower Chamber for "another" place, the noble Lord formerly known and feared as Mr. Lowe was on Tuesday married to Miss Sneyd at Torquay, a charming place for a honeymoon. Thus doth love level all.

There are two ex-Cabinet Ministers who occupy corner seats above the Treasury Bench in the Session, whose speeches for or against the Government ever command the earnest attention of Mr. Gladstone. They are evidently uneasy out of office, and would be more comfortable were they again included in the magic circle of the Cabinet Council. Hence the unsparing efforts of Mr. Forster and Mr. Goschen to enlighten the country as to their claims as political guides, philosophers, and friends at this critical juncture. As Lord Randolph Churchill, Mr. Gorst, Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, and Mr. Balfour form the "Fourth Party," so Mr. Forster and Mr. Goschen may be said to form the "Party of Two," in so far as their following in the House goes. Outside the House, the soundness of their views, and particularly the outspokenness of Mr. Forster in favour of Colonial Federation, command so much respect that it should not be long before both return to Downing-street. Especially apt in these times of industrial depression were Mr. Forster's praises of co-operation at Bradford on Saturday; and Mr. Goschen's definition in Edinburgh the same day of what would in his opinion be the chief features of a just measure of land reform proved moderate and reasonable enough to recommend itself to Conservatives and Liberals alike. Mr. Goschen's Imperial speech to the Edinburgh Literary Institute on Tuesday was most noticeable for the implied censure of Earl Granville for "fumbling" in his dealings with Prince Bismarck. The right hon. gentleman's German origin, perhaps, led him into the mistake of exalting the German Chancellor at the expense of the Foreign Secretary of England. Or, was it simply one of those rhetorical digs in the ribs which candid friends—out of office—delight to inflict on their late colleagues in office?

Mr. Parnell, though directly appealed to by Mr. Chamberlain, has not thought fit, to his discredit be it said, to denounce the perpetrators of the dynamite outrages as the worst enemies of Ireland. The golden opportunity was seized, however, by Mr. J. O'Connor Power, on Saturday last, to condemn these agents of violence and treason in the most eloquent terms. Having to deliver a lecture on the poetry of Thomas Moore in the south of London, Mr. O'Connor Power did honour to himself, and to Irishmen generally, by his earnest denunciation of the dynamite criminals, and by his apposite reference to the bravery of Irish soldiers in fighting loyally shoulder to shoulder with Englishmen and Scotsmen in the Soudan deserts. Mr. O'Leary deserves similar credit for inveighing against O'Donovan Rossa's inhuman doctrine of assassination in the presence of somewhat stormy meetings of Irishmen in Manchester and Glasgow on Sunday and Monday. But Mr. Parnell still maintains his frigid silence.

CITY ECHOES.

Wednesday, Feb. 4.

The Bank of England rate of discount is now 4 per cent, and, as the unemployed balance is now little short of fourteen millions, the reduction from 5 per cent is quite justified, more particularly as the accumulation is due largely to the influx of revenue to the Treasury account. It is to be hoped, however, that the imports of gold from abroad, which were at length being attracted by the 5 per cent rate, will not be checked, especially as some gold has been taken out of the Bank in connection with the anticipated inquiry resulting from the Argentine financial crisis. The lowering of the rate has exercised a beneficial effect upon the stock markets, as indicating a belief by the Bank directors that no disturbance of credit is to be feared. Home Government stocks and Colonial issues also have risen, while foreign bonds have had a substantial advance on Continental support, and railways have, as regards several classes, regained some lost ground.

Like most other kindred companies, the Southampton Dock Company are to pay a reduced dividend—namely, 1 per cent per annum, as against 2½ last year; but the extent of the reduction is, in this case, beyond recent experience, the East and West India Dock Company paying 4 against 4½, and the London and St. Katharine Company 2 against 2½. This class of property has been under a cloud for some time now, as the fall in the market prices of the respective stocks in the last few years indicates. The Surrey Commercial Dock Company have had an exceptional experience, and their stock has more than maintained the price of five years ago.

Recent discussions give importance to the reports of the Railway Share and Railway Debenture Trusts. The disparaging circulars recently issued are commented upon, and the directors propose that the condition of the companies should be examined into by committees. The valuation of securities held by the Railway Debenture Trust Company shows a depreciation in market values of £101,902 for the year, against which there is a reserve fund of £90,906. The transactions of the year admit of a dividend at the usual rate of 6 per cent, less the interim payment of 3 per cent. Only 5 per cent per annum, however, is recommended, and the declaration of this is postponed to an adjourned meeting. The valuation of the securities of the Railway Share Trust Company shows a depreciation of £119,986, against which is the reserve fund of £10,934. The working shows a credit balance of £64,332, less £27,813 already paid as interim dividend. There is thus sufficient to distribute a further 2½ per cent, but the result of the proposed investigation by an independent committee is awaited before any dividend will be declared.

Shareholders of the Anglo-American Brush Electric Light Corporation are to be congratulated at the result of the past year's working, which shows a marked improvement compared with that of the previous year, and in fact leads to the hope that the company may now become a dividend-earning undertaking. Deducting the debit balance of £1616 brought forward from 1883, the accounts show a credit balance of £4127, which is equal to slightly over 2 per cent on the reduced capital. The above sum, however, is to be thus distributed—£1000 to the reduction of goodwill and licenses, and £1500 to the reduction of patents account, leaving a surplus of £1627 to be carried forward. From the report, it appears that every effort has been made to economise, and at the same time to improve the position of the concern. With some modification of the Electric Lighting Act, and a reduction in law charges, which were very heavy last year, the shareholders may look to the future with some satisfaction.

It is estimated by the directors of the Anglo-American Telegraph Company that, as a result of the reduction from 2s. to 1s. 8d. per word, a loss of about £170,000 a year will be incurred by the Atlantic Cable companies which are the parties to joint purse agreement, there being no reasonable expectation that this decrease of revenue will be recouped by an equivalent, or even appreciable, augmentation in the number of messages. The total revenue of the Anglo Company for the past half-year was £190,427.

Notice has been given by the Direct United States Cable Company of the interruption of their main cable between Ireland and Nova Scotia, but as the cable will, it is stated, be shortly repaired, the earnings of the company will not be affected, as by the joint-purse arrangement one year is allowed wherein to make good the injury before ceasing to participate as usual in the earnings of the joint concerns. By the agreement above referred to, the Anglo-American Company receives 48·825 per cent, the Direct United States 16·275, the French undertaking 12·400, and the American Telegraph and Cable Company 22·500 per cent of the amount of the combined receipts of the four concerns.

Marine insurance companies have scarcely maintained the position held a year ago. Of the eleven companies which have so far made known the result of the working of 1884, seven pay the same dividend, while two have gone back, and two non-dividend companies are still unable to divide profits. T. S.

The Rev. J. Grey Richardson, late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, Vicar of Monks Kirby, Warwick, has been elected to the Warburton Lectureship, in succession to the Rev. Dr. Edershim. This lecture, which is tenable for four years, is delivered in the chapel of the Society of Lincoln's Inn, and was established, in 1768, by Dr. Warburton, Bishop of Gloucester.

Sir William Thomson presided on Monday at the opening of the new physical and chemical laboratories which have been founded at Bangor, in connection with the University College of North Wales. Mr. Rathbone, M.P., Mr. Richard Davies, M.P., and Mr. John Roberts also took part in the proceedings, which were followed by a conversazione, given by Principal Reichel and the members of the Senate.

THE COURT.

The Queen received the intelligence of the further success of Sir Herbert Stewart's column, and of the engagements on the 19th inst. and following days. While rejoicing at the victory gained by her gallant troops, her Majesty has learned with sincere regret the losses sustained, and laments deeply the wound to Sir Herbert Stewart, which has deprived her Majesty of the services of a most valuable officer. The Prince of Leiningen, G.C.B., visited her Majesty on Wednesday week, and remained to luncheon. The Judge Advocate-General had an audience of the Queen. The Prince of Wales, attended by Colonel Teesdale, C.B., V.C., arrived at Osborne on Thursday week. The Queen and her Royal Highness Princess Beatrice drove out in the afternoon, attended by Lady Waterpark. Prince and Princess Louis of Battenberg dined with her Majesty and the Royal family in the evening. General the Right Hon. Sir Henry Ponsonby, K.C.B., and Colonel Teesdale, C.B., V.C., had the honour of being invited. The Prince of Wales left Osborne yesterday week for London. Her Majesty went out with Princess Beatrice. On Sunday morning the Queen and Princess Beatrice and the members of the Royal household attended Divine service at Osborne. The Dean of Windsor officiated. Prince and Princess Louis of Battenberg, who visited the Queen on Saturday, lunched with her Majesty and Princess Beatrice on Sunday. The Queen has announced to the father of the late Dr. Marshall, her Majesty's Resident Physician, that she has granted him a yearly pension of £150 for life. Mr. Marshall resides at Crieff, Perthshire. Lady Cust has been appointed one of the Women of the Bedchamber in Ordinary to her Majesty, in the room of Lady Codrington, resigned.

The Duke of Edinburgh, Princess Christian (accompanied by Princess Victoria), and the Duchess of Albany visited the Prince and Princess of Wales, at Marlborough House, last Saturday, and remained to luncheon. Prince Albert Victor arrived at Marlborough House, attended by the Rev. J. N. Dalton. Prince George likewise arrived. The Italian Ambassador (Count Nigra), the Spanish Minister (the Marquis de Casa Laiglesia), and the Roumanian Minister (Prince Ghica) presented, in the names of their respective Sovereigns, the insignia of the Annunciata of Italy, of Charles III. of Spain, and of the Star of Roumania to Prince Albert Victor, on the attainment of his majority. The Prince of Wales visited Mr. Boehm's studio in the afternoon to inspect the sketch model of the proposed statue of the Duke of Wellington. Prince Albert Victor opened on Saturday afternoon a new club, which has been established in Whitechapel, chiefly for the boys of the Shoeblack Brigade, and is called the Whittington Club. After the ceremony, the Prince saw the boy members in the gymnasium, and addressed some kind and encouraging words to them. On Sunday the Prince and Princess of Wales, accompanied by Prince Albert Victor and Prince George were present at Divine service. Princess Louise (Marchioness of Lorne), the Duke of Edinburgh, and the Duke of Cambridge, visited the Prince and Princess of Wales, and remained to luncheon. The Prince of Wales has left London for Cannes. Prince Albert Victor and Prince George have returned to Trinity College, Cambridge, and to the Royal Naval College, Greenwich, respectively. The Princess of Wales left Marlborough House on Tuesday afternoon for Sandringham, where her Royal Highness will remain until the return of the Prince of Wales from Cannes.

The Duke of Connaught has accepted the presidency of the City and Port of London District of the St. John Ambulance Association.

Prince and Princess Christian left Cumberland Lodge, Windsor, on Tuesday for the Continent.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

Several meetings were held in London on Saturday last.

At a meeting of Volunteer commanding officers at the Volunteer Service Club, it was resolved to establish a benefit society for Volunteers, and a committee was formed to prepare a scheme for carrying out this object.

Sir F. Leighton, the President of the Royal Academy, presided at the annual meeting and distribution of prizes to the Artists' Rifles at the Criterion. Colonel Edis gave a résumé of the work done during the year, and congratulated the regiment on its general efficiency. Sir F. Leighton presented the prizes, and made a brief address to the regiment.

Mr. Childers was present at the presentation of prizes by Mrs. Childers to the 2nd Tower Hamlets Volunteers, and remarked that there were now 208,000 efficient Volunteers, out of an enrolled strength of 215,000. He spoke of the great advantages of the union and discipline which the system taught them, and expressed the hope that their numbers would increase.

Colonel Croll entertained at dinner at St. James's Hall all the members of the 2nd Tower Hamlets (East London) Engineer Volunteers, on the occasion of his retirement from the honorary colonelcy. Among the guests, who numbered nearly 500, were Mr. J. Holms, M.P., and Baron H. De Worms, M.P.

Sir Andrew Clarke, Inspector-General of Fortifications, distributing the prizes to Engineer Volunteers at Liverpool on Tuesday night, said no one now doubted the success of the Volunteer movement, and what they all desired was to render it perfect, and so organised that it became a thoroughly efficient army. The Volunteer movement had prevented those panics which were so disastrous to commerce, industry, and labour; and it had been of the greatest moral and physical benefit to the people of England. He congratulated the corps upon its position and efficiency.

It is understood that the total number of Martini-Henry Rifles to be issued to the Infantry and Engineers of the Volunteer force will exceed 175,000, the issue being based on the returns of the enrolled strength of each corps at the date of the last returns forwarded to the War Office. The issue is proceeding as rapidly as the new weapons can be stamped with the names of the various regiments, and several thousands of Volunteers are now drilling with them.

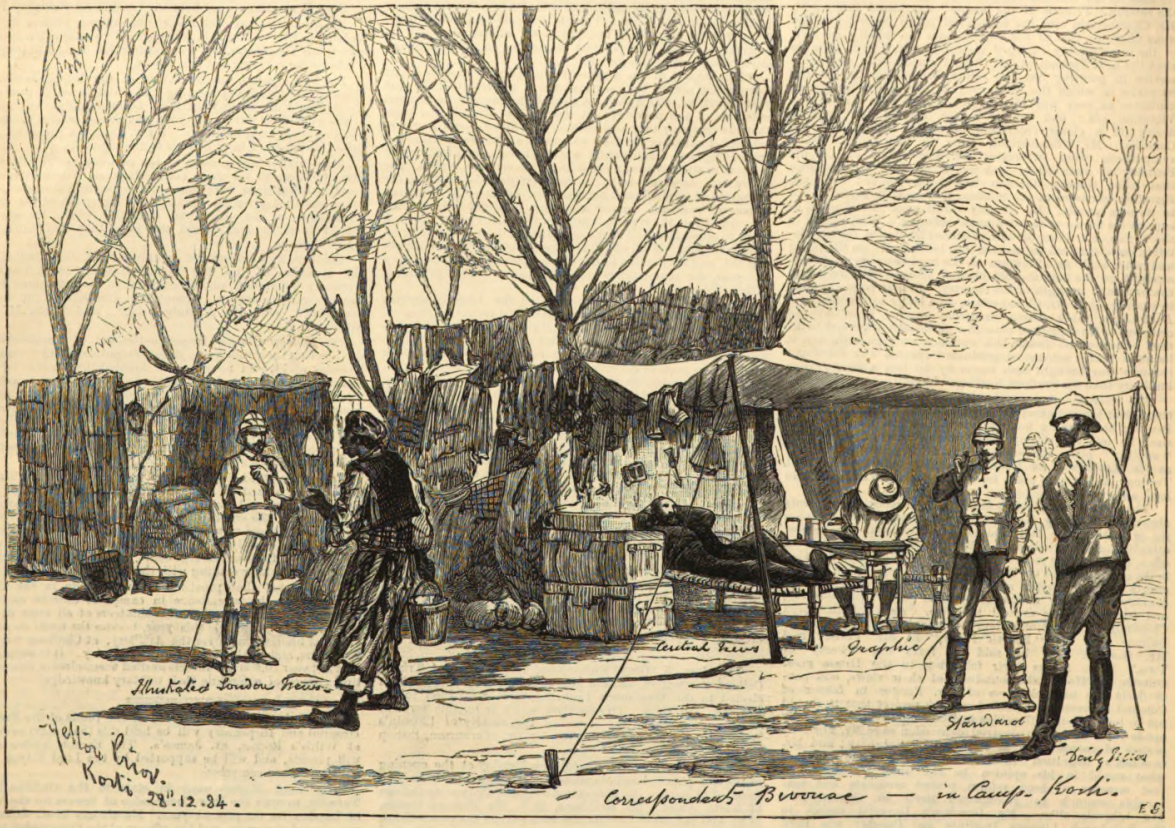
It is stated that provision is to be made in the Army Estimates for the attendance in camps of exercise and instruction of a large number of Volunteers of all arms in the various military districts this year, besides the usual encampments at Shoeburyness for the Artillery, at Chatham for the Engineers, and at Aldershott for the Infantry. It is estimated that last year 80,000 Volunteers availed themselves of this practical method of extending their military knowledge.

The anniversary dinner in aid of the funds of the French Hospital and Dispensary will be held this (Saturday) evening at Willis's Rooms, St. James's. The French Ambassador will preside, and will be supported by the Lord Mayor and a distinguished company.

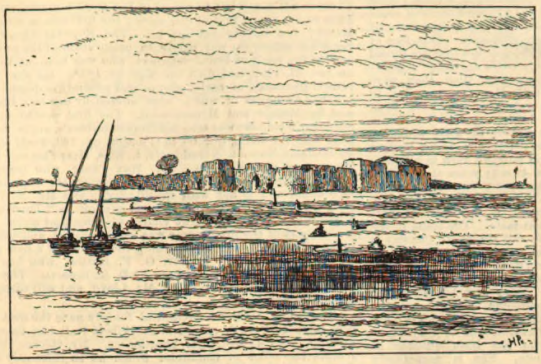
The Lord Mayor went in state to the Guildhall on Tuesday, to open the New Commission of Sewers for the City of London for the present year. Mr. George Noah Johnson was elected chairman, and the officers of the Commission were reappointed.

LATE LIEUT. J. D. GUTHRIE, ROYAL HORSE ARTILLERY, KILLED AT ABOU KLEA.

THE LATE MR. J. A. CAMERON, SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT OF THE "STANDARD," KILLED ON JAN. 19

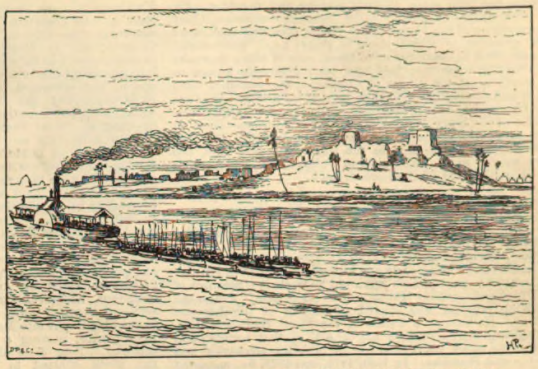


THE LATE LIEUT. RICHARD WOLFE 2ND DRAGOONS, KILLED AT ABOU KLEA.



THE KHARTOUM RELIEF EXPEDITION: OFFICERS KILLED IN FIGHT.

THE LATE MR. J. A. CAMERON.



The death of this gentleman, the Special Correspondent of the Standard, who was shot on the 19th ult., in the Arab attack on Sir Herbert Stewart's advanced brigade, on the march from Abou Klea to the Nile above Metammeh, has called forth many expressions of regret. Mr. ohn Alexander Cameron was a native of Inverness, where he has left a widowed mother and other relatives; he was at first a bank clerk in that city, but went out to India, to be employed in a mercantile house at Bombay. He soon began to contribute occasionally to the Bombay Gazette, and was for a short time acting editor of that paper, when Mr. J. M. M'Lean left for Europe. The Afghan War of 1879 required a Special Correspondent in the field for the Bombay Gazette, and Mr. Cameron gave up his appointment connected with mercantile business to accompany the first campaign in the expedition to Cabul; he was with the division of General Roberts in the advance through the Khurum Pass. His letters attracted great attention; and, in the following year, when the war in Afghanistan was renewed by Ayoub Khan's advance on Candahar, attended by the defeat of a British force at Maiwand, the Standard accepted Mr. Cameron's services to join the column which, under General Phayrer, was preparing to march to the relief of Candahar. Journeying night and day, he reached Quettah in seven days after leaving Bombay, having ridden up the Bolan Pass from Sibi in thirty-six hours. He was the first to ride with the news of the victory of General Roberts to the nearest telegraph post, beating his competitors and the Government couriers by a day and a half. Then, returning with equal rapidity to Candahar, he accompanied the first party who went out to the battle-field of Maiwand, and sent home a description of the scene and of the fighting, which established his reputation as one of the ablest as well as most enterprising of journalists. Soon after his return to Bombay, the Transvaal insurrection broke out. Mr. Cameron at once crossed to Natal, arriving there long before the correspondents dispatched from England could reach the spot. He was present at the battles of Laing's Nek and Ingogo, and at the fatal fight on Majuba Hill, where he was knocked down and taken prisoner by the Boers, but contrived, nevertheless, on the following day to get through his message descriptive

THE SPECIAL CORRESPONDENTS' CAMP AT KORTI.

THE KHARTOUM EXPEDITION: FORT AT DEBBEH, ON THE NILE.

HANNEK, ON THE NILE, THE REPUTED BIRTHPLACE OF THE MAHDI.

of the battle. After peace was concluded in the Transvaal, he returned to England, but upon the news of the first riots in Alexandria, in June, 1882, left for Egypt, and was present on board the Admiral's flag-ship, the Invincible, at the bombardment of Alexandria. He continued with the British forces until their arrival at Cairo, having witnessed and described every engagement which took place. After a short rest at home, he started for Madagascar, and his letters gave the first trustworthy accounts of the state of affairs in the island. As the French delayed their attack, and it was uncertain when hostilities would commence, he crossed the Pacific to Melbourne, and thence made his way to Tonquin, where the fighting between the French and the natives had just begun. He was present at the engagement in which the French, acting in three columns, failed to carry the defences which the Black Flags had erected. English correspondents not being allowed to remain with the French forces, Mr. Cameron was on his way home, towards the end of 1883, when Osman Digna's forces began to threaten Souakim, and no sooner did he reach Suez than he took ship for that port. He was present when Baker Pasha's force was crushed by the Arabs, and narrowly escaped with his life. He remained at Souakim until the British Expeditionary Force arrived, accompanied them in their advance upon Tokar, and was a witness of the battles of El Teb and Tamanieb. His stay in England after his return from this long absence was brief, for in a few weeks he again started for Egypt, and pushed up the Nile with the advanced boats of Lord Wolseley's Expedition. His recent telegrams and letters are fresh in the memory of the public. The personal esteem in which Mr. Cameron was held by his comrades in similar employment, and by the staff and regimental officers in every military expedition that he attended, has been fully testified upon the occasion of his lamented death.

THE DYNAMITE OUTRAGES.

While Jeremiah O'Donovan Rossa, the author, as he boasted, of the dastardly schemes for destroying public buildings in England at the risk of killing many innocent people, has been shot at New York by the hand of an Englishwoman, the police and magistrates of London seem to be not entirely unsuccessful in discovering his agents employed on Saturday, the 24th ult., to cause the explosions at the Tower and the Palace of Westminster. The person who was arrested at the Tower, James Gilbert Cunningham, otherwise calling himself Gilbert and Dalton, a native of Cork, who had been some years in America, and who came from New York to England last November, was again brought up for examination on Monday, before Sir James Ingham, at Bow-street Police Office. He is about twenty-two years of age, and describes himself as a labourer, but there is no proof of his having ever done or sought any honest work. At Christmas, he came from Liverpool to London, and lodged at 30, Great Prescot-street, Whitechapel, the house of Miss Cannon, till Jan. 14, when he removed to other lodgings, those let by Mrs. Moore, at 32, Scarborough-street, Whitechapel. At the first-mentioned lodgings, he called himself Mr. Gilbert, and at the latter place Mr. Dalton. He brought with him from the railway, to the house of Miss Cannon, a large brown box, which he said belonged to a friend, and which mysteriously disappeared a day or two before he quitted the house, being replaced by a smaller black box, in which he afterwards kept a good stock of clothes. He had also a black bag, which contained articles of clothing; but at the bottom was found, when the Detective Police searched his property, a small copper tube containing the detonating mixture of chloride of potassium and fulminate of mercury, which is used for exploding charges of dynamite or gun-cotton. Such a detonator is not used for any other purpose. This man gave false accounts of the place where he had lodged at Liverpool, and of his having been employed at the docks there. He told Mrs. Moore that he was looking for a clerk's situation in London, but that he was not in a hurry, as he had a little money. He is said to have visited the Tower on free days, more than once, and was seen there on the day of the explosion, before and at the time when it happened. After his arrest, the photograph, from which our portrait of him is copied, was taken by order of the Criminal Investigation Department of Detective Police, and we now publish it at their request in the hope that it may assist in his identification. He is prosecuted by Government, Mr. Poland, with the solicitors to the Treasury, conducting the case against him at Bow-street, while Mr. Quilliam, a Liverpool solicitor, appeared for his defence. The prisoner was remanded for further examination, after the evidence of the persons above-named, and of several other witnesses on Monday. The police next day, at a house in Whitechapel, arrested another man, in whose possession was found a heavy brown box, supposed to be the one removed from Cunningham's lodgings in Great Prescot-street. A man has also been arrested on suspicion at the Derby railway station.

THE LATE MR. GWYN JEFFREYS, LL.D., F.R.S.

A young man named Goodman, who had been lodging in North-street, Smith-square, Westminster, was last week arrested on suspicion, but was soon liberated, as he gave sufficient proofs of his respectable antecedents. He is an Englishman, with friends residing in London, and is an artist by profession, who has travelled in America and throughout the Continent of Europe. He raised no objection to his box being examined, and nothing more dangerous than artist's materials, sketches, and clothes was found in it. He was detained at the station but a short time while inquiries were made about him, with a satisfactory result.

The two police-constables of the A Division, Cole and Cox, who were severely burnt and hurt by the explosion of the first parcel of dynamite at Westminster, found by Miss Davis and Mr. Edwin Green on the steps going down to St. Stephen's Crypt, are doing well in Westminster Hospital. Both these men acted very courageously, and it was Cole who lifted the parcel, with its burning envelope, and carried it in his hands up the steps of the crypt and out of the doorway into Westminster Hall, where he was obliged to drop it when it burnt his hands; Cox, who was on duty in the Hall, kept close by him, and fearlessly rendered him assistance. We give the Portrait of William Cole, whose daring act of self-sacrifice probably averted a greater disaster; and we are glad to see an announcement, in the London Gazette of Tuesday, that the Queen has been graciously pleased to confer upon him the Albert Medal of the First Class, "for conspicuous gallantry displayed" on this occasion. The Home Secretary, Sir William Harcourt, by her Majesty's personal command, last

POLICE-CONSTABLE COLE,
WHO CARRIED THE DYNAMITE OUT OF THE CRYPT, WESTMINSTER HALL.

JAMES GILBERT CUNNINGHAM,
TAKEN INTO CUSTODY AT THE TOWER.

THE DYNAMITE OUTRAGES IN LONDON.

week visited Cole and Cox at the Hospital, and communicated to them her high sense of their courage and devotion. He also wrote to the same effect to Sir Edmund Henderson, Chief Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, directing that upon their recovery, of which there is every hope, professional rewards shall be conferred upon them. Sir William Harcourt observes that these men had long been personally known to the members of the House of Commons, who esteemed them and would sympathise with their present sufferings. Cole has four ribs broken on the left side, while Cox has a slight concussion of the brain, and the shock caused injurious effects in both cases, with deafness, which is now passing off. The conduct of these brave men, as the Home Secretary says, has done honour to the Metropolitan Police Force, and has won the approbation of all their countrymen.

THE LATE MR. GWYN JEFFREYS.

Mr. John Gwyn Jeffreys, the well-known conchologist, died suddenly on Saturday last, at his residence, No. 1, The Terrace, Kensington. Mr. Gwyn Jeffreys was born at Swansea in 1809. From an early age he took an interest in science, and when he was nineteen years old he wrote a "Synopsis of the Pulmonobranchous Mollusca of Great Britain," and in the following year he was elected a member of the Linnean Society. He became a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1840, and subsequently served on the council of that society; and he was for many years treasurer of both the Geological and the Linnean Societies. In 1869, 1870, and 1875, he conducted exploring expeditions in H.M. s.s. Porcupine and Valorous in the North Atlantic; and in the years 1871 and 1880 he took part in expeditions fitted out by the Governments of the United States and France. Mr. Gwyn Jeffreys wrote over a hundred papers on scientific subjects, but is best known by his principal work, "British Conchology," in five volumes. Mr. Gwyn Jeffreys was called to the Bar in 1856, and he was J.P. for Glamorganshire and Breconshire, and J.P. and D.L. for Herts, of which county he was High Sheriff in 1877.

THE PLAYHOUSES.

Mr. G. W. Godfrey appears to have been as much fascinated with the dramatic ingenuity and literary charm of one of the lighter comedies of Octave Feuillet as was Mr. Tom Taylor. Over a quarter of a century ago, the best adaptor of that, and perhaps of any other time took Feuillet's "Péril en la Demeure" and turned it into an English play called "The House or the Home." There was nothing particularly new or original in the story. Business men are apt to neglect their wives, and childless women whose husbands are engaged on affairs of State are apt to grizzle, to loll upon sofas reading novels, and to pine for sympathy. Then comes the dangerous moment when the neglected wife "plays with fire," and domestic peace is necessarily endangered. Tom Taylor's play owed most of its success to the excellent acting of the Wigans, for no literary skill could possibly reconcile the incon-istencies and improbabilities of Octave Feuillet's romance of real life. The polished, suave, and natural Alfred Wigan was, of course, at home in the character of an English Under-Secretary of State and Member of Parliament, who, blind to the infatuation of susceptible junior clerks in his office, neglects his "home" and his pretty wife for the business of politics and the "House" at St. Stephen's, Westminster. But even better than Alfred Wigan, Billington, Charles Selby, and Henrietta Simms, was Mrs. Wigan, who had a character after her own heart—a clever, common-sense, shrewd woman, the mother of the love-sick Foreign Office clerk, who is able by her tact and diplomacy to restore order in a disorganised household. Such a play mainly depends upon the skill of the actress who undertakes that character. It is as important as Suzanne in "Les Pattes de Mouche" ("The Scrap of Paper"). All the strings of the delicate intrigue are in her hands, and it depends upon her to move them clumsily or adroitly. It has been rumoured, and it can be very well believed, that the object of writing another version of this old French play was to provide Mrs. Bancroft with a character of high comedy. All who have seen this admirable actress play Mrs. Haygarth in "The Vicarage," an adaptation of Octave Feuillet's "Le Village," will understand how well she interprets a part requiring lightness of touch, finesse, humour, and an occasional touch of pathos. Mrs. Rivers, in Mr. Godfrey's play "The Opal Ring," is all this; but somehow or other there were no opportunities for the play at the Haymarket—a two-act comedy presents an immediate difficulty to the managerial mind—so the new version of an old story was transferred to the Court, where it has been produced with very gratifying success.

In criticising Octave Feuillet's lighter plays, we must never forget the circumstances under which they were written. In point of fact, they were not designed for the stage at all at the outset, but appeared, after a fashion set by Alfred De Musset, in the feuilleton of the "Révue des Deux Mondes." They were plays to be read first, and to be acted, if needs be, afterwards. There was an interregnum in the life of this sentimental dramatist from the time when he was employed as a hack writer by the elder Dumas to his later days of "Le Roman d'un Jeune Homme Pauvre" (the "Romance of a Poor Young Man"), "La Tentation" ("Led Astray"), and the still more notorious "Le Sphinx," memorable in the palmy days of Cadizette and Sara Bernhardt, at the Français. This fact of publication will explain some of the crudenesses that are forced into prominent notice when Feuillet's plays are acted. Nowadays, playgoers are far more exacting than they were in the time of the Wigans, and Mr. Godfrey has to stand a fire of criticism that would never have been directed at Tom Taylor. We hear a great deal from untried journalists and dilettante writers of what dramatic critics ought or ought not to be; but one thing is just certain, that plays are more severely handled now in all parts of the house than they were six-and-twenty years ago. When Playgoers' Clubs hold weekly discussions the critic must necessarily be on the alert, or his influence, whatever it may be, will be gone. "The Opal Ring" is, for the most, part acted with fine finish and in excellent taste. The scene in the first act between Mr. John Clayton and Mr. H. B. Conway is as good and as natural comedy as anyone would desire to see, and surely must delight the oldest and most obstinate of veteran playgoers; whilst Mr. Arthur Cecil, as an old, gouty, cantankerous, and meddlesome Peer, shows that his gallery of senile aristocrats is practically inexhaustible. The best dialogue in the play is put into Mr. Cecil's mouth, and he does it more than justice, making a strong character out of very slight material. Poor Miss Marion Terry has been unlucky in the parts allotted to her of late. She is perpetually suffering from matrimonial neglect, and wringing her hands over the weakness of poor human nature. But she is always sympathetic and charming, and of the greatest value to any cast. Miss Lydia Foote is not exactly the actress in style or temperament that one would have chosen for the astute, worldly, and diplomatic Mrs Rivers; but she is a true artist in whatever situation she finds herself, and is ever welcome in any comedy.

The Saturday afternoon recitals of Mr. Clifford Harrison at the Steinway Hall may well be commended to the earnest attention of all who desire an intellectual treat. Surely, the stage has here lost an actor of remarkable versatility and conspicuous talent. Mr. Harrison has that best of all the actor's gifts—decision and repose, and at will can touch the notes of the gayest comedy and the tenderest emotion. Such contrasted selections as the Waterloo scene from "Vanity Fair," a comic poem, called "The Hat," and recitals from the poems of Dante Rossetti and Adelaide Proctor, accompanied on the piano with excellent effect, show in this young entertainer gifts as remarkable as they are welcome. There is a not a dull instant in the pleasant hour and a half during which Mr. Harrison recites, mimics, acts, dreams, and plays over a choice selection from our best writers of prose and poetry.

Rehearsals are being busily carried on at nearly all the prominent theatres in London, and by Easter time, if not before, nearly every programme will be changed. Mr. Wilson Barrett is hard at work on "Brutus," by the last Lord Lytton; by-the-way, there is a wonderful likeness of Wilson Barrett as Brutus in the steel engraving to Nat Lee's play contained in "Bell's British Theatre." Mr. G. R. Sims is toiling bravely with his new melodrama for the Adelphi, concerning which gossipers have been taken off the scent, for there is as much country life as town sorrow, as much Derbyshire as Docks in the human story to be developed in dramatic action. The Bancrofts are bidding farewell to "Diplomacy," and getting ready "Masks and Faces" in order to play Triplet and Peg Woffington once more to their many friends and admirers. Mr. Thorne is preparing Dr. Westland Marston's new comedy at the Vaudeville, and no doubt there will soon be a change at the Strand and the Court. It is the "Private Secretary" alone that runs on for ever.

Mrs. Langtry once more selects Tuesday for her première. Next week "The School for Scandal" is to be produced with an admirable cast, and everyone will be anxious to see the new Lady Teazle.

C. S.

A notice of the Magazines for February is unavoidably deferred.

Mr. Justice Mathew, in the Queen's Bench Division, has decided that the Ashton-under-Lyne Gas Company had acted beyond their statutory powers in carrying forward a large amount of undivided profits instead of reducing the price of gas, and has ordered the price to be lowered from 2s. 4d. to 2s. per 1000 cubic feet.

Mr. MacHale, who has been favourably received in the north of England, especially in Manchester and Liverpool, made a very successful first appearance in London last week, at St. George's Hall, in a kind of entertainment resembling those with which audiences have been made familiar by Mr. Howard Paul and Mr. Maccabe. Without enumerating the various character sketches that form Mr. MacHale's programme, we may say that he possesses humour, some musical skill, and a considerable command of foreign languages. Mr. MacHale is assisted in his entertainment by Mr. Batchelder, an accomplished pianist.

MUSIC.

There is not much left to record of last week's music, and but little to say about that of this week; the full tide of returning activity not having yet set in. The Popular Concert of Saturday afternoon was partly in celebration of the anniversary of the birth of Franz Schubert, who was born (at Vienna) on Jan. 31, 1797, and died on Nov. 19, 1828. He was one of several instances of early genius and premature death, other notable examples of which were offered by our own Purcell, and by Mozart and Mendelssohn. The first portion only of Saturday's concert was selected from Schubert's works, beginning with the string quintet in C major, op. 163, finely played by Madame Norman-Néruda, Mr. L. Ries, Herr Straus, Signor Pezze, and Signor Piatti. Mr Max Pauer, who made his second appearance at these concerts, played the impromptus in F minor and E flat with much effect; and Mr. E. Lloyd sang the lied known, in the English version, as "Thou whom I vow'd to love," with great charm of voice and style. The second part of the programme was miscellaneous, and calls for no specific notice beyond recording the success of a new song, "For Ever Nearer," by Mr. G. F. Hatton, who has very happily set some expressive lines by D. G. Rossetti. The song was rendered to perfection by Mr. Lloyd, and will doubtless become popular.

The Royal Amateur Orchestral Society gave the first concert of its thirteenth season at the Albert Hall last Saturday evening, with a substantial programme. Mr. George Mount retains the office of conductor which he so efficiently filled during past seasons.

The London Ballad Concerts—so ably directed by Mr. John Boosey—are pursuing a career of continued success at St. James's Hall. The seventh concert of the nineteenth season took place last week, when a programme of the usual varied attractions was prepared. Two new songs, "A penny for your thoughts," by Cecile Hartog, and "The Cumberland" (a naval ditty), by Charles Marshall, were successfully given, respectively, by Miss M. Davies and Mr. Santley; Madame Trebelli made a special impression in Mr. Cowen's song, "Regret," and the "Gavotte" from "Mignon"; and other effective vocal performances were contributed by Madame Antoinette Sterling, Misses Davies and Larkcom, Mr. Maas, Mr. Santley, Mr. B. Foote, Mr. Maybrick, and the members of Mr. Venables' choir, interspersed with violin solos charmingly played by Madame Norman-Neruda. This week's programme included the names of most of the principal singers just specified, together with that of Miss Carlotta Elliot, Madame Neruda having again been the solo violinist.

The sixth concert of the fourteenth season of the Royal Albert Hall Choral Society took place this week, when Mr. Mackenzie's oratorio, "The Rose of Sharon," was performed.

Of Mr. Walter Bache's grand orchestral concert at St. James's Hall, on Thursday evening, we must speak next week. As on former occasions, Mr. Bache's admiration of the works of Liszt was manifested by a selection from his works, rendered with the co-operation of a full band of upwards of eighty performers, and an effective chorus.

The Highbury Philharmonic Society gave the second concert of the new season on Monday evening, when Gade's cantata, "The Crusaders," was the principal work performed, with the co-operation of a complete band and an efficient choir, and of Miss C. Samuell, Mr. E. Lloyd, and Mr. F. Ward as solo vocalists. The remaining portion of the concert was miscellaneous. Dr. Bridge conducted ably.

The Popular Chamber Concerts at the Highgate Literary and Scientific Institution—organised by the esteemed violinist, Mr. G. H. Betjemann—entered on a second series on Thursday evening. Mr. Betjemann is supported by other skilful instrumentalists, and his programmes include selections from the best works of the classical masters interspersed with vocal solos. The concerts cannot fail to be welcome to the neighbourhood where they are given.

A fresh sign of renewed musical activity will be given next week by the resumption of the Crystal Palace Saturday afternoon concerts, after the usual suspension in favour of Christmas and New-Year entertainments.

We have already given the details of the arrangements for the triennial Birmingham Festival, to take place towards the end of August, and of that of Hereford early in September, and have now to speak of the recurrence of the Chester Festival (also triennial), which will precede those just named, the dates being fixed for July 22, 23, and 24. The principal works to be performed, on the respective mornings, are:—Gounod's "Redemption"; Bach's motett, "Blessing, Glory"; one of Handel's organ concertos; "Daniel," a new oratorio by Dr. Bridge; Rossini's "Stabat Mater"; Mendelssohn's "St. Paul"; and Handel's "Messiah"—these in the Cathedral—miscellaneous evening concerts taking place in the Music-Hall.

Next Saturday, Feb. 14, has been appointed for the private view of the Spring Exhibition of the Nineteenth-Century Art Society, at the Conduit-street Galleries, and the exhibition will be open to the public on Monday, the 16th.

WHAT IS YOUR CREST and WHAT IS YOUR MOTTO? Send name and county to CULLETON'S Heraldic Office. Plain sketch, 3s. 6d.; colours, 7s. The arms of man and wife blended. Crest engraved on seals, rings, books, and steel dies, 5s. 6d. Gold seal, with crest, 25s. Solid Gold Ring, 18-carat, Hall-marked, with crest, 42s. Manual of Heraldry, 400 Engravings, 3s. 6d.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX of STATIONERY contains a Ream of the very best Paper and 500 Envelopes, all stamped in the most elegant way with Crest and Motto, Monogram or Address, and the engraving of steel Die included. Sent to any part for P.O. order.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

VISITING CARDS by CULLETON. Fifty best quality, 2s. 6d., post-free, including the Engraving of Copper plate. Wedding Cards, 50 each, 50 fine bonsed Envelopes, with Maiden Name, 12s. 6d.—T. CULLETON, Seal Engraver, 25, Cranbourn-street, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

IMPROVED POSTAGE-STAMP ALBUM FOR 1885. Systematically arranged, and all the most modern improvements. Superior, 224 pages, post-free, 3s. 6d. Cornelius free.—STANLEY GIBBONS and CO., 8, Gower-st., London.

MODELLING in Clay and Wax.—A Guide, by MORTON EDWARDS. Post-free, 1s. 1d. Clay was, tools, &c., at LECHERTIER, BARBE, and CO., 60, Regent-street, W.

PANCAKES.—SHROVE TUESDAY, FEB. 17. If Pancakes are to be the delicious things which they ought to be, the following ingredients must be used in making them:—To half a pound of flour add two large teaspoonfuls of BORWICK'S BAKING POWDER—without this they cannot be well made—seasoned with a little salt. Mix these in a dry state and add an egg beaten up, with three quarters of a pint of milk. Fry at once with butter or lard. N.B.—Tell your grocer you must have BORWICK'S.

"THERE IS UNQUESTIONABLY" no better remedy in the whole world for all cough and throat troubles than KEATING'S LOZENGES—any medical man will assure you of this fact. Sold every where, in 1½d. Tins

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, and NEURALGIA.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. Collis Browne was undoubtedly the inventor of Chlorodyne; that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See the "Times," July 13, 1864.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in cholera was Chlorodyne.—See "Lancet," Dec. 31, 1853.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Extract from the "Medical Times," Jan. 12, 1856:—"Is prescribedby scores of orthodox practitioners. Of course, it would not be thus singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the best and most certain remedy in Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a certain cure in Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—CAUTION.—None genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each Bottle. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London. Sold in Bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s.

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA. The best remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and safest aperient for delicate constitutions, ladies, and children. Of all Chemists.

JAY'S HALF-YEARLY SALE.

BLACK SILKS, warranted to be made by Bonnet, of Lyons, 3s. 6d. per yard.

RICH FIGURED VELVETS, 6s. 9d. Worth from 10s. to 25s. per yard.

BLACK SILKS of every kind very cheap; but there is no reduction on the Satin Duchesse, as sold by Messrs. JAY at 3s. per yard.

COSTUMES.—An elegant and rich variety of BLACK SILK, Velvet, and other Costumes, the product more or less of this season, made in plain figures, and showing the reduction in the prices. But the 5 and 6 guinea Silk Costumes (including sufficient materials for demade bodice) lately sold by Messrs. JAY will not be altered in price.

MANTLES.—A large and costly collection of FRENCH MODEL MANTLES, by Worth, Pingat, and other artistes, at common prices.

FURS.—Owing to the mild weather, the Stock of superior Sealskin and rich Fur-trimmed Mantles has not been so freely sold as was anticipated; therefore these luxuries are reduced to every-day prices.

JAY'S, THE LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE. REGENT-STREET, W.

TO TAILORS and WOOLLEN BUYERS. We are selling all classes of Woollen Goods and Tailors' Trimmings at Lower Prices than ever. Before buying your Spring parcels, inspect our Stock, or write for patterns stating class of Goods required. ALFRED BROWN and SONS, 8, Holborn-circus, London, E.C.

BLAIR'S GOUT PILLS. GOUT, RHEUMATISM, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, AND RHEUMATIC GOUT. These invaluable Pills rapidly cure the most inveterate cases of the above diseases even where the joints are crippled, enabling people to resume their business and walk as well as ever. Sure safe and effectual. Sold by all Chemists at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per box.

CHOCOLAT MENIER. AMSTERDAM EXHIBITION, 1883. Awarded the GRAND DIPLOMA OF HONOUR.

CHOCOLAT MENIER, in ½ lb. and ¼ lb. PACKETS. For BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, and SUPPER.

CHOCOLAT MENIER.—Awarded Twenty-Eight PRIZE MEDALS. Consumption annually exceeds 25,000,000 lb.

CHOCOLAT MENIER. Paris, London, New York. Sold Everywhere.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA. Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder. Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa, with excess of fat extracted. Four times the strength of Cocoa Thickened with Starch, Arrowroot, Sago, &c., and in reality cheaper. The faculty pronounce it the most nutritious, perfectly digestive Beverage for "BREAKFAST, LUNCHEON, or SUPPER." Keeps for years in all Climates. Requires no Cooking. A teaspoonful to Breakfast-Cup costing less than a halfpenny. In Air-Tight Tins, 1s. 6d., 3s., 5s., 10s. Chemists and Grocers. H. SCHWEITZER and CO., 10, Adam-street, Strand, W.C.

PLATT'S SPECIALITIES. CHINA TEA IN THREE QUALITIES. PLATT and CO., 77, St. Martin's-lane, London, W.C., will send free to any part of England, Ireland, or Scotland, on receipt of cash with order—
First quality, 1 lb., 3s. 3d.; 2 lbs., 6s. 3d.; 4 lbs., 12s.; and 3s. extra for every further lb.
Second quality, 1 lb., 2s. 9d.; 2 lbs., 5s. 3d.; 4 lbs., 10s.; and 2s. 6d. extra for every further lb.
Third quality, 1 lb., 2s. 3d.; 2 lbs. 4s. 3d.; 4 lbs., 8s.; and 2s. extra for every further lb.
N.B.—If 20 lbs. are ordered, we charge 1d. per lb. less; if 50 lbs., 2d. per lb. less.

NEW BOOKS AND PUBLICATIONS.

CHAPMAN and HALL'S NEW BOOKS.

ENGLAND: its People, Polity, and Pursuits. By T. H. S. ESCOTT. New and Revised Edition. Demy 8vo. [This day.

CREATURES OF CLAY: A Novel. By Lady VIOLET GREVILLE, Author of "Zoe," "Keith's Wife," &c. 3 vols., crown 8vo.

BEES AND BUTTERFLIES: A Novel. By the Hon. Mrs. HENRY W. CHETWYND, Author of "A March Violet," "Dutch Cousin," &c. 3 vols., crown 8vo.
CHAPMAN and HALL, Limited, Henrietta-street, W.C.

NEW and POPULAR NOVELS.
Now ready, at all the Libraries.
COLVILLE OF THE GUARDS. By JAMES GRANT, Author of "The Romance of War," &c. 3 vols.
ALTHOUGH HE WAS A LORD. By Mrs. FORRESTER. Second Edition. 3 vols.
THE CARDICS. By WILLIAM GEORGE WATERS. 3 vols.
THE WITCH'S HEAD. By H. RIDER HAGGARD, Author of "Dawn." 3 vols.
CYCLAMEN. By Mrs. RANDOLPH, Author of "Gentianella," &c. 3 vols.
IN AND OUT OF FASHION. By RICHARD DAVIS FERRY. 3 vols. [Next week.
HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

Now ready,
FOURTH EDITION OF MRS. HENRY WOOD'S MAGAZINE,
THE ARGOSY for JANUARY,
containing the Opening Chapters of THE MYSTERY OF ALLAN GRALE.

Also ready,
THE ARGOSY for FEBRUARY.
Sixpence, Monthly.

"'The Argosy' is literally laden with golden grain."—Daily Telegraph.
"'The Argosy' sails as gaily as ever, and the golden grain with which Mrs. Henry Wood loads her vessel shows no sign of diminution. The present number is one of the best ever issued."—Bell's Life.
"Mrs. Henry Wood's 'Argosy' is one of the brightest and most amusing as well as the cheapest amongst the English serials."—Broad Arrow.
"The best and cheapest magazine we have."—Standard.
"Johnny Ludlow's stories are almost perfect."—Spectator.
"The interest around Johnny Ludlow is considerable."—Saturday Review.
FOURTH EDITION for JANUARY now ready.
Sixpence, Monthly.
RICHARD BENTLEY and SON, 8, New Burlington-street, W.

MR BUCHANAN'S NEW WORK.
Now ready, in 3 vols., at all Libraries,
STORMY WATERS.
By ROBERT BUCHANAN.
London: J. and R. MAXWELL, Shoe-lane; and at all Libraries.

NEW NOVEL BY A NEW NOVELIST.
Now ready in 3 vols., at all Libraries, price 31s. 6d.,
CURRENT REPENTANCE. By C. A. B. G. S. "A powerful psychical study, dealing largely with modern Anglo-Indian civilian life and giving a fascinating portrait of it."—J. and R. MAXWELL, and at all Libraries.

NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK ON THE VIOLIN.
Just ready, demy 8vo, cloth gilt, price 10s. 6d.,
VIOLIN-MAKING: As it Was and as it Is. An Historical, Practical, and Theoretical Treatise on the Science and Art of Violin-Making. Preceded by an Essay on the Violin, and its position as a Musical Instrument. By EDWARD HERON-ALLEN
WITH PHOTOGRAPHS, FOLDING PLATES, AND 200 ENGRAVINGS.
"The amateur violin-maker will find no book hitherto published in the English language which contains such minute and exhaustive instructions in the art which he may be supposed to love. It is full to overflowing with practical illustrations, figures, and diagrams."—The Bazaar, Exchange, and Mart.
London: WARD, LOCK, and Co., Salisbury-square, E.C.

New and Enlarged Edition, post-free, 2s. 6d.,
ON PARALYSIS, Loss of Power in the Muscles or Joints. Locomotor Ataxy, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and other Affections of the Brain and Spinal Cord. A Practical Treatise explaining the Causes, Treatment, and Cure of these Diseases; with Directions for Diet. By S. HERBERT NIBLETT, Licentiate of the Royal College of Physicians. Published by Mr. WILLIAMS, 10, Oxford-terrace, Hyde Park, London.

DEAFNESS.—Persons afflicted with Deafness, Noises, or any other Ear Disease, should write for the Rev. E. J. SILVERTON'S work on "Diseases of the Ear and Eye" (270th thousand) post-free 6d., containing valuable information. Address—Rev. E. J. SILVERTON, 16 to 19, Imperial-buildings, Lamgate-circus, London, E.C.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY for the HAIR.
If your hair is turning grey, or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer, for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White Hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. "The Mexican Hair Renewer" is sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere, at 3s. 6d. per Bottle.

FLORILINE. For the Teeth and Breath. Is the best Liquid Dentifrice in the world. It thoroughly cleanses partially decayed teeth from all parasites or living animalculæ, leaving them pearly white, imparting a delightful Fragrance to the breath. Fragrant Floriline removes instantly all odours arising from a foul stomach or tobacco smoke, being partly composed of honey, soda, and extracts of sweet herbs and plants, it is perfectly delicious to the taste, and as harmless as sherry. Sold by Chemists and Perfumers every where, at 2s. 6d. per Bottle.

FOR FAMILY ARMS (Lincoln's-inn Heraldic Office) send Name and County. Sketch 3s. 6d.; in colours, 7s. 6d. Arms Painted and Engraved on Seals, Dies, &c. PUGH BROTHERS, Great Turnstile, Lincoln's-inn, W.C.; and 76, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. Prize Medal, Paris, 1878.

SCRAPS for SCREENS and Scrap-Books, in great variety. Birds, Flowers, Figures, Landscapes, In rolls, 3s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 21s.
WM. BARNARD, 119, Edgware-road, London.

WEDDING and BIRTHDAY PRESENTS at
RODRIGUES', 42, PICCADILLY.

SETS for the WRITING-TABLE and BOUDOIR, IN POLISHED BRASS, OXIDIZED SILVER, and CHINA, from 21s. to £10.

DRESSING CASES	21s. to £50
JEWEL CASES	10s. to £10
CASES OF IVORY BRUSHES	63s. to £10
DESPATCH BOXES	21s. to £10
WRITING CASES	12s. to £5
ENVELOPE CASES AND BLOTTERS	10s. 6d. to £5
STATIONERY CASES AND CABINETS	21s. to £5
INKSTANDS	7s. 6d. to £5
CIGAR AND CIGARETTE CABINETS	42s. to £10
LIQUEUR CASES	50s. to £10

GLOBULAR SCENT BOTTLES, OPERA GLASSES, FANS.
And a large and choice assortment of ENGLISH, VIENNESE, and PARISIAN NOVELTIES, from 2s. to £5.

TRAVELLING DRESSING BAGS,
Morocco, with Hall-marked Silver Fittings,
£5 5s., £10 10s., £15, £20, £30 to £50.

PORTRAIT ALBUMS at RODRIGUES',
for Cartes-de-Visite and Cabinet Portraits, 10s. 6d. to £5.
PHOTOGRAPH SCREENS, Leather and Plush, with gilt reversible hinges, to hold from 2 to 24 Portraits.

RODRIGUES' MONOGRAMS,
ARMS, CORONET, CREST, and ADDRESS DIES
Engraved as Gems from Original and Artistic Designs.
NOTE-PAPER and ENVELOPES, brilliantly Illuminated by hand, in Gold, Silver, Bronze, and Colours.
BEST RELIEF STAMPING, any colour, 1s. per 100.
HERALDIC ENGRAVING, PAINTING, and ILLUMINATING.
All the New and Fashionable Note-Papers.
RODRIGUES, 42, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

£5 BANK OF ENGLAND NOTES!
DIAMOND RINGS!
GOLD AND SILVER!
GIVEN AWAY! GIVEN AWAY!
To everyone who buys one of our
QUEEN STATIONERY PACKETS.
A SPLENDID PRESENT, FROM 3d. TO A £5 NOTE IN EVERY PACKAGE.
BEAUTIFUL LEATHERETTE STATIONERY CASE, with Divisions for Envelopes, Note Paper, &c., furnished with the following Articles:—

12 Sheets Superfine Commercial Note Paper.	1 Extra Telescopic Lead Pencil.
12 Sheets Superfine Tinted Note Paper.	1 Telescopic Pen-holder.
12 Superfine square Envelopes.	1 Golden Pen.
12 Superior Tinted Envelopes.	1 Article of Jewellery.

And also one of the following Articles:—
Solid Gold Diamond Ring, £5 Note, Gold Watch, Silver Watch, £1 Gold Piece, Ten-Shilling Gold Piece, Two-Shilling Silver Piece, One-shilling Silver Piece, Sixpenny Piece, or Threepenny Piece.

READ! READ! READ!
A Diamond Ring guaranteed in every 200 packages. A Bank of England Note in every 500 packages. A Gold Watch in every 333 packages. A Silver Watch in every 250 packages. Besides One-Pound and Ten-shilling Pieces.
A Cash Present of from 3d. to a £5 Note in every package. No one gets a package of our stationery without getting a Cash Present.
NO LOTTERY. This is no Lottery, EVERY ONE GETS A PRESENT. We have now such an enormous sale for the Queen Stationery Package that we are now putting in Diamond Rings and Gold and silver Watches every day, to say nothing of the Cash Presents, ranging in value from 3d. to £5. This offer is made to readers of this publication, and to induce them to buy all their S ationery from us. They can get it cheaper than from anyone else, and at the same time may have a present dropped into their hands at any moment, a Diamond Ring, £5 Note, or a Gold Watch.
Every package contains one article of artistic jewellery sometimes worth much more than you pay for the packages.
HOW CAN WE DO THIS? is a question often asked, and easily answered. We have a regular schedule of presents that we put in every one thousand packages, so many Diamond Rings, so many £5 Notes, Watches, Sovereigns, Ten-shilling Pieces, &c. These are all put in the packages, then they are mixed up and sold promiscuously; the orders come in, the first order received every day in the mail and packed receives the first Stationery Package, the second order receives the next, and so on, until they are all used, when another lot is made up.

TESTIMONIALS.

"Edinburgh.
"Dear Sir,—I beg to acknowledge receipt of Queen's Package, and was highly delighted to find myself the happy possessor of a £5 Note! You may be sure I shall recommend the Queen Package to my friends. Kindly send me another Package, for which I inclose 37 stamps.
"Yours truly, CHARLES H. HAILES.

"To Mr. Sumner."

"Cheshire View, Heaton Mercy.
"Dear Sir,—I write to acknowledge the receipt of Queen's Stationery Package, and £5 Bank of England Note. You will have lots of orders from this neighbourhood, as I consider your Stationery Packets are very good value.
"Yours respectfully, JOSHUA BARBER."

The following are a few of the persons who have received £5 BANK of ENGLAND NOTES, DIAMOND RINGS, GOLD or SILVER WATCHES in the past few days:—
J. B. Yellende, West View Bucknall, Stoke-on-Trent.
E. Seymour, 35, Monbas-street, Reading.
W. R. Maddock, Mesagissey, St. Austell.
Mrs. S. Fox, Hicaclos, by Berrice.
J. W. C. Paul, National School, St. Aubin's, Jersey.
Robert S. Slater, Bank of Whitehaven, Cleator Moor.
John Clark, 15, Alma-place, West Leith-gate, Doncaster.
A. R. Wakefield.
C. E. Compton, National School, Bower Chalke.
J. Marche, Oxford-street, Weston-super-Mare.
M. A. Greene, 15, Surrey-street, Norwich.

NO DISCOUNT.
Our profit is so small that we can give no discount whatever. If we were not selling 100 Packages a day, it would not pay us to bother with them at all. Don't buy any Stationery until you have sent for our Queen Packages, and we know you will always after buy of us.
Remember when you want nice Stationery, order of us, and you will be sure to get value for your money, and probably a great deal more.
A Complete Sample Package, with a CASH PRESENT of from 3d. to £5 in every Package, by Parcel Post to any address in the United Kingdom, for only 3s., or 37 stamps. Address—
R SUMNER,
145, FLEET-STREET, LONDON, E.C.

SANJANA ESSENCE. The Greatest Nerve Restorer ever known.
SANJANA ESSENCE enriches the Blood, and removes all Blood Poisons.
SANJANA ESSENCE cures Dyspepsia, Liver and Kidney Complaints. 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s.
SANJANA PILLS, for Constipation, Biliousness, Flatulency, Indigestion, &c.
SANJANA PILLS, for Constipation, Biliousness, Flatulency, Indigestion, &c.
SANJANA PILLS. A single dose guaranteed effective. 9d., 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d.
SANJANA ESSENCE and PILLS. Order from your Chemist, or post-free direct from the SANJANA Company, Exham.
Grath and Post-free. The instructive and highly interesting Treatise on the Self-Treatment of Diseases of the Nervous System, the Blood, and Digestive Organs, by Dr. Chas. Thomas, Ph.D.
SANJANA ESSENCE AND PILLS.
Twenty-eight years' success on the Continent! The most effective remedies for self-Treatment ever Introduced!
London Depôt—WILCOX and CO., 239, Oxford-street, W.; or through any Chemist.

COCKLE'S
ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR LIVER.
COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR BILE.
COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR INDIGESTION.
COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, FOR HEARTBURN.

COLDS CURED BY
DR. DUNBAR'S ALKARAM, or Anti-Catarrh Smelling-Bottle.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
ALKARAM. COLDS.
IF inhaled on the first symptoms, ALKARAM will at once arrest them, and cure severe cases in half an hour. Sold by all Chemists 2s. 9d. a Bottle. Address Dr. Dunbar, care of Messrs F Newbery and Sons, 1, King Edward-st., E.C.

HOOPING COUGH.
ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION.
The celebrated effectual cure without internal medicine. Sole Wholesale Agents, W. EDWARDS and SON, 157, Queen Victoria-street (formerly of 67, St. Paul's-churchyard), Manufacturers. Testimonials free. Agents, R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

NUDA VERITAS.—GREY HAIR restored by this specific, after which it grows the natural colour, and grey Whiskers by dressing. It causes growth, arrests falling, and ITS use defies detection. The most harmless and effectual restorer extant. One trial will convince it has no equal. Price 1s. 6d., of all Chemists and Hairdressers. Testimonials free. Agents, R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

GOLDEN HAIR.—Robare's AUREOLINE produces the beautiful golden colour so much admired. Warranted perfectly harmless. Price 5s. 6d. and 10s. 6d., of all principal Perfumers and Chemists throughout the world.
Agents, R. HOVENDEN and SONS, London.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET.

ON ACCOUNT of the RE-BUILDING of a portion of the Oxford-street Premises, all SURPLUS STOCK will be RE-MARKED at GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.
Lower in Price than at any previous Quotation Yet. Per yard.
Satins, combining s. d. are the Cheapest in all the new
.. 5s. 6d. to 9 11

BLACK SATIN STRIPES, 2s. to 2s. 6d.
200 Pieces Coloured Satin Stripes 2 6
800 Pieces of Fancy Silks and Satins in different designs, specially made for Costumes 3 11

BLACK BROCADED VELVETS,
SATIN GROUND, from 4 11
2000 Pieces of Plain Silks, Satins, and Merveilleux to match the brocades, from 2 6
Coloured Twill-faced Velveteens, usually sold at 4s. 6d. 2 6
Patterns post-free.
PETER ROBINSON'S.

NEW WINTER DRESSES. Per yard. s. d.
Devonshire, Witney, Scotch, and other SERGES, in various shades of Navy, Cream, Black, Bronze, &c., all-Wool, very wide 1 6
Homespun Cashmere Bege, mixed colours 1 0

NEW WINTER DRESSES. Per yard. s. d.
All the usual and several distinctly New Shades of Colour in Ottoman Cashmir Angola Foules 1 2
Cashmere d'Italie, all wool, very durable 2 0
French Merinos, very wide .. .. .. 1s. 11d. to 2 9
Very Fine French Cashmeres .. .. .. 2s. 3d. to 2 9
Velvet Velveteens, much improved in make, colour, and price .. .. 2s. 3d. to 3 3
A Black Velveteen, specially cheap 1 11
Patterns post-free.
PETER ROBINSON'S.

FOR PALETOTS, JACKETS, &c.,
ARCTIC SEAL CLOTH.
The highest perfection of make and wear.
52 in. wide, superior in effect to sealskin.
Also every kind of Polarian, Beaver, Poil de Chameau, Peau de Mouton, &c., in Black, White, Brown, Drab, &c.

PETER ROBINSON, OXFORD-STREET
AND REGENT-STREET.

GREAT SALE at REDUCED PRICES
at
PETER ROBINSON'S
MOURNING WAREHOUSE,
REGENT-STREET.

GENUINE BARGAINS will be offered in each Department.
Amongst them may be mentioned Silk Costumes, reduced from 8½ to 4½ guineas, from 8½ to 4, from 10½ to 7½, from 14 to 10 gns.

BALL, DINNER, and EVENING DRESSES. Reduced from 3 to 2 guineas, from 4 to 3, from 5 to 3½, from 8 to 6 guineas.

MATERIAL COSTUMES in Black and Greys, beautifully fashioned and designed, in various New Textures and Combinations. Reduced from 3 to 2 guineas, from 4 to 3, from 6 to 4, from 8 to 6 guineas.

THE MAGNIFICENT STOCK of CLOAKS, MANTLES, JACKETS, and OPERAS are all very considerably reduced.

BLACK SILKS and VELVETS.—Very handsome Figured Velvets, Plain Black Silks, Ottomans, Merveilleux, and Satins, are all marked down to very low prices.

FANCY SILKS and REMNANTS. Many reduced to One Half.

ALSO SHAWLS, Operas, Evening Fichus, Fans, Hosiery, Gloves, Collars.
The beautiful Stock of French Millinery Materials, by the yard. Crapes, &c., have all undergone the same reduction.

MOURNING ORDERS during the SALE will be supplied at the same cheap rates, best care and prompt attention will be given to all orders. Ladies or small Travelling Assistants fully competent to take measures and instructions will be sent at once to any part of the country, free of any extra expense whatever to the customer, immediately
ON RECEIPT OF LETTER OR TELEGRAM
ADDRESSED TO
PETER ROBINSON,
MOURNING WAREHOUSE,
REGENT-STREET, LONDON.

ÆGIDIUS.—The only Flannel Shirts that Never shrink in Washing.
Three for 39s. 6d.
R. FORD and CO., 41, Poultry, London.

ÆGIDIUS.—Three for 39s. 6d.
Soft as Silk, and very Elastic.
Free by parcels post.
R. FORD and CO., 41, Poultry, London.

LEFT-OFF CLOTHES, the oldest and best buyers in the kingdom for cash. Parcels sent appointments attended to. Mr and Mrs. PHILLIPS, Old Curiosity Shop, 41, Thayer-street, Manchester-square, London, W.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR
IS A WORLD-WIDE NECESSARY.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR
FOR THE NURSERY.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR
FOR THE FAMILY TABLE.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR
FOR THE SICK-ROOM.

BROWN & POLSON'S CORN FLOUR
HAS A WORLD-WIDE REPUTATION.

INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION,
South Kensington.—London, 1884.
GOLD MEDAL AWARDED for EXCELLENCE of QUALITY to
SALT and CO.,
EAST INDIA PALE and BURTON ALE BREWERS.
Stores and Offices—2 to 8, Pancras-road, London.

LIST of Prices to be obtained of all the principal Dealers.

SEEDS! SEEDS! SEEDS!
Before purchasing your Spring Supply, send for DANIELS'
ILLUSTRATED GUIDE for AMATEUR GARDENERS.
Magnificent Coloured Illustrations of
FLOWERS, FRUITS, AND VEGETABLES,
104 pages beautifully Illustrated Letterpress.
This Catalogue may justly be termed the
GEM OF THE SEASON.
Price 1s., post-free.
Gratis to Customers.
DANIELS BROS., Seed Merchants, Norwich.

AIX-LES-BAINS, SAVOY.—Most important of Continental Sulphurous Spas. Eleven hours from Paris. Rheumatism, sciatica, gout, and catarrh of the pharynx, larynx, and nasal passages efficaciously treated.

BÂLE.—Hôtel National, opposite Central Railway. Modern comforts moderate prices. Best in Bâle. Dinners, Breakfasts, and Refreshments at Buffet prices. Break your journey here. English spoken.—Proprietor, H. MAIRTSS.

CASTELLAMARE - STABIA, ITALY.
Grand Hôtel Quisisana. Central, elevated, and most Frequented; on the road to Sorrento, Amalfi, and Capri. One hour from Naples. Healthy, comfortable hotel.—N. SOLDINI, Proprietor.

LUCERNE.—Hôtels Schweitzerhof and Lucernerhof. Maintain high reputation, and worthily recommended. Open all the year. Facing steam-boat pier, close to Station, Gothard Railway.—HAUSER FRERES, Proprietors.

MARSEILLES.—Grand Hôtel Louvre, and Paix. Largest in Marseilles; universal reputation for modern comforts; moderate charges. Lift, table d'hôte, billiards, baths, omnibus.—PAUL NEUSCHWANDER and Co., Props.

MILAN.—Hôtel Grande Bretagne, and Reichmann. First-class Hotel; most central of the town. Entirely renovated, very comfortable house. The English Consul is resident here. ROSSI and AMBROSETTI, Proprietors.

NAPLES.—Grand Hôtel, Naples. Opened January, 1882. Managed by A. HAUSER (a member of the Hauser family of the Schweitzerhof and Lucernerhof, Hôte Giessbach, &c., in Switzerland).

NAPLES.—Royal Hotel maintains its reputation as a superior first-class house, under the personal supervision of its founder and owner, Mr. Caprani, as English resident for several years.

NAPLES.—Hôtel Tramontano, on the Corso V. Emanuele. Highest and healthiest part; magnificent view of the bay and islands. Desirable homely family hotel. Kept by an English Lady.

NAPLES.—Hôtel Métropole (Cook's special house). Pension from 8f., with wine. Restaurant, café, English bar. Grand establishment of baths. Hammam and others, sea and fresh water. Omnibus; tram passes door.

NICE.—COSMOPOLITAN HOTEL.
HÔTEL DE LA GRANDE BRETAGNE.
This famous two very superior hotels stand any on the Riviera. South aspect. Calorifère and Ascen-seur at each.
J. LAVIT, Director.

NICE.—Hôtel de France.—First-class, south aspect, Quai Masséna, near Promenade des Anglais. Every comfort for English travellers. Omnibus and lift.
A. BERTRAND, Director.

NICE.—TERMINUS HOTEL.
Facing the station.
Splendid south position.
Hydraulic Ascenseur and Baths.
180 Chambers and Salons.

OUCHY, Lausanne.—Hôtel Beau Rivage. First-class extra. Grand Lake and Alps. Soirées dansantes. Concerts. Satisfactory arrangements. Winter pension. Apply for Tariff to MARTIN RUFENACHT, Director.

ROME.—Grand Hôtel de Russie. First class, beautiful; near English and American churches; apartments facing south. Hotel warmed by calorifère arrangements; moderate prices. Lift.—G. MAZZONI, Proprietor.

ROME.
HOTEL DU QUIRINAL.
B. GOGGENBUHL and Co.

PEGLI.—Grand Hôtel Pegli (formerly Di la Mediterranee). Facing the sea, south aspect, surrounded by gardens and mountains. Ultimate unsurpassed, sanitary arrangements; satisfactory charges. BUCHER-DURRER, Prop.

VENICE.—Grand Hôtel d'Italie.—On the Grand Canal, close to the Square of St. Marc. Renowned restaurant and brasserie adjoining the hotel. Substantial and generous fare. BAUER-GRUNWALD, Proprietor.

ZURICH.—Hôtel Habis, First Class, opposite Railway Station. Modern comfort with moderate charges. Recommended to English and American travellers; arrangements for a stay. Address, HABIS-RECTTINGER, Proprietor.

PULLNA BITTERWATER, BOHEMIA.
THE OLDEST AND MOST VALUABLE SPRING.
THE BEST STOMACHIC APERIENT.
ANTON ULBRICH, Son of the Founder.

VERMOUTH.—Francesco Cinzano and Co., Vermouth combination Arb Wine and Alpine herbs, with quinine. Refreshing, tonic and digestive. Of Wine Merchants, and F. CINZANO and CO., Corso Re Umberto, 10, Turin.

TO MANITOBA.
The Completion of
THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY
(which is the ONLY DIRECT ROUTE to the Canadian North-West) to the summit of the Rocky Mountains has thrown open to settlement some of the most Agricultural Lands in Manitoba and the North-West, of which the Dominion Government offer ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES FREE.
For further information apply to any Steam-ship Agent; and for new maps, pamphlets, and the last official reports about the country (free of charge), as well as the new tourist guide, "From Quebec to the Rocky Mountains," when published, apply either personally or by letter to
ALEXANDER BEGG,
Canadian Pacific Railway Offices,
88, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

WANTED, Respectable Young Women, as DOMESTIC SERVANTS, to proceed to NEW SOUTH WALES. Passages including Provisions, Bedding, &c., will be granted by the Agent-General in first-class steamers to approved applicants, upon payment of £3 each. An experienced Surgeon and Matron accompany each ship. Single Females are quickly engaged at good wages on their arrival in Sydney; but, if desired, the Government will provide them with free accommodation for ten days. The next steamer will be despatched about Feb 25. Further information may be obtained at the EMIGRATION DEPARTMENT, New South Wales Government Offices, 5, Westminster-chambers, Victoria-street, Westminster, S.W.

105,000 ACCIDENTS, for which TWO MILLIONS have been paid as COMPENSATION by the RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE COMPANY, 64 Cornhill. Accidents of all kinds. Paid-up and Invested Funds, £260,000. Premium Income, £256,000. Chairman, Harvie M. Farquhar, Esq. Apply at the Railway Stations, Local Agencies, or West-End Office,—3, Grand Hotel-buildings, Charing-cross, or at the Head Office, 64, Cornhill, London, E.C.—WM. J. VIAN, Sec.

UNIVERSALLY PRESCRIBED BY THE FACULTY.
A laxative and refreshing Fruit Lozenge.
TAMAR for CONSTIPATION, Hemorrhoids, Bile, Headache, Loss of Appetite, Cascara Concretion.
INDIEN Prepared by E. GRILLON, Chemist of the Paris Faculty, 59, Queen-street, City, London.
GRILLON. Tamar, unlike Pills and the usual Purgatives, is agreeable to take, and never produces irritation, nor interferes with business or pleasure.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists, 2s. 6d. a Box, Stamp included.

GOUT and RHEUMATISM
Cured by the use of
DR. LAVILLE'S LIQUOR and PILLS.
Approved of by Dr. Ossian Henry, Analytical Chemist of the Academie de Medecine of Paris.
The Liquor to be used in acute state of gout or rheumatism; the Pills in chronical state.
Wholesale, COMAR, 28, Rue St. Claude, Paris.
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists.

A DELICIOUS MEDICINE.—DR. LIEB'S EDIBLE FRUIT PILLS may be eaten like a sweetmeat. Renowned for their efficacy in constipation, bile, indigestion, and all ailments of the stomach. Expertly taken by children, and the delicate. Highly recommended by the Faculty. Of all Chemists, at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d. per box; or post-free of the consignees, A. POSENER and CO., 61, Mansell-street, London.

NEW MUSIC.

TRIAL BY JURY. By W. S. GILBERT and ARTHUR SULLIVAN. Now performing at the Savoy Theatre. Complete words and music, 3s. net; pianoforte solo, 2s. 6d. net.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S LATEST SUCCESSES:
LORD HENRY SOMERSET'S NEW SONG.
A SONG OF NIGHT. Words and Music by Lord HENRY SOMERSET. Price 2s. net.
BID ME GOOD-BYE. Music by TOSTI.
BID ME GOOD-BYE. Words by Weatherly.
BID ME GOOD-BYE. "A tuneful ditty in waise rhythm; is certain to acquire vast popularity."—Times, Jan. 5.
BID ME GOOD-BYE. "A most exquisite song."
BID ME GOOD-BYE WALSE. By H. W. DE CAMORS. On the melody of Tosti's newest and most successful song.
BID ME GOOD-BYE VALSE. Played with immense success by Liddell's Band, Coote's Band, and the Bijou Orchestra; also at the Strand and Adelphi Theatres every night.
Price 2s. net.

P. BUCALOSSI.
PHYLLIS WALTZ.
MERRY FOOTSTEPS POLKA.
This valse and polka will rival in popularity any of Bucalossi's most successful dance music.
Both played nightly at the Haymarket Theatre with great success. Price 2s. each net.

CAROLINE LOWTHIAN.
BLACK AND TAN POLKA.
This will be the polka of the season.
FAHRWOHL WALTZ.
Price 2s. each net.

LUKE WHEELER.
TOI SEULE WALTZ.
CHIC POLKA.
SEA BREEZE POLKA.
"The 'Sea Breeze Polka' is one of the best and most spirited polkas which has been published for a long time."—Morning Post.
Price 2s. each net.

CLAIRE WALTZ. By LEONARD GAUTIER. Illustrated with a beautiful photo of Mrs. Kendal. Price 2s. net.

CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street, London. City Branch, 15, Poultry, E.C.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ALEXANDRE HARMONIUMS, for Church, School, or Drawing-Room, from 6 to 150 guineas; or, on the Three-Years' System, from £1 5s. per quarter.—50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S PET ORGAN, Seven Stops, including Sub-bass and Sub and Super Octave Coupler. Elegant Carved Walnut Case. 18 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S CENTENNIAL GRAND ORGAN, 15 Stops, 9 Sets of Reeds, and Combination Tubes, 85 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S
PIPE and REED COMBINATION ORGANS
With one manual, from 60 guineas.
With two manuals and pedals, from 120 guineas.
Hydraulic motors, for blowing, from 8 guineas.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S ORGANS have been pronounced by the most eminent musicians in England to be superior to all others in pipe-like quality of tone.

CLOUGH and WARREN'S AMERICAN ORGANS. A combination of pipes and reeds, which do not go out of tune by the most severe changes of temperature. Easy of manipulation, handsome in design, and of great durability.
From 18 to 225 guineas.
Second-hand from 12 guineas.
Testimonials and Descriptive Lists free by post.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street; and 15, Poultry.

EDWIN ASHDOWN'S POPULAR SONGS.
I AM WAITING. Four keys .. .. F. Birch.
ANSWERED! Harmonium ad lib. .. .. Boyton Smith.
DEAR BIRD OF WINTER. Three keys .. Wilhelm Ganz.
UNDER THE SHADOW OF ST. PAUL'S.. Seymour Smith.
A LITTLE BIRD TOLD ME .. .. .. Charles Tirbutt.
Price 2s. each net, postage free.

EDWIN ASHDOWN'S POPULAR PIANOFORTE PIECES.
PAROLES DU CŒUR .. .. Victor Delacour.
DIAVOLINA .. .. Gustav Lange.
ROMEO AND JULIET .. .. Seymour Smith.
MARCHE DES MENESTRELS .. Seymour Smith.
Price 1s. 6d. each net, postage free.

EDWIN ASHDOWN'S POPULAR PIANOFORTE PIECES.
MARITANA (Wallace) .. .. Sydney Smith.
CARNAVAL GALOP .. .. Paul Beaumont.
BOUTON DE ROSE .. .. Victor Delacour.
VALSE CHAMPETRE .. .. Gustav Lange.
Price 2s. each net, postage free.

EDWIN ASHDOWN'S POPULAR PIANOFORTE DUETS.
PSYCHE (Gavotte) .. .. Tito Mattei. 4s.
MARITANA (Wallace) .. .. Sydney Smith. 6s.
THE BOHEMIAN GIRL (Balfe) Sydney Smith. 6s.
Half price, postage free.

SYDNEY SMITH'S METHOD.
"The method of methods."
Price 2s. 6d. net, postage free.
EDWIN ASHDOWN, Hanover-square.

NEW AND SUCCESSFUL SONGS.
PEGGY O' YARMOUTH TOWN. By FREDERICK BEVAN.
Sung by Mr. Franklin Clive, Mr. Frederick Bevan, Mr. Theodore Distin, Mr. James Budd, Mr. Horscroft, &c. 2s. net.
TWO BELLS. By MICHAEL WATSON.
Sung by Mr. Barrington Foote.
Words by Knight Summers. 2s. net.
GOOD-NIGHT, ROBIN. By J. L. ROECKEL.
Sung by Madame Patey. Words by Fred E. Weatherly. 2s. net.

NEW DANCE MUSIC FOR THE SEASON.
L'AMOUR IMMORTEL VALSE. Par FABIAN ROSE. Best Waltz of the Season. 2s. net.
LA COQUETTE VALSE.
Par TITO MATTEI. 2s. net.
MADAME DU BARRY VALSE.
Par EDOUARD AMILLON. 2s. net.
OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE QUADRILLES. By ETTORE PANIZZA. 2s. net.
PATEY and WILLIS, 44, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

TO LADIES.—SALE of NEW MUSIC at a large reduction and post-free. All new Songs, Pieces, &c., of all publishers in stock. New copies, best editions. Prices commence 6d., 6d., 8d. Catalogues sent post-free.
J. W. MOFFATT, 3, Barnsbury-street, London, N. Established 1827.

MOORE and MOORE'S Iron Pianofortes, from 35 guineas, on Three-Years' System, carriage free. Liberal discount for cash. Illustrated Price-Lists post-free. Pianofortes from 15 guineas.—104 and 105, Bishopsgate Within.

NEW MUSIC.

BOOSEY and CO.'S NEW SONGS. 2s. each.
OUR LAST WALTZ. New Romantic Song. By MOLLOY.
OUR LAST WALTZ. [illegible] some of their [illegible] We [illegible] excellent notice when Fenil[illegible]
OUR LAST [illegible] playgoers are far [illegible] Agnes Leaumont and the time of the Wise.
OUR LAST [illegible] stand a fire of [illegible] also as directed at Tor[illegible]
OUR LAST [illegible] untried journ[illegible]oth Editions are illustrate[illegible] with [illegible]ginal Vignette.
Boosey [illegible]n, 24.

OUR LAST WALTZ.—Notice.—Madame Trebelli will sing Molloy's New Song, at the Ballad Concert, Feb. 11.

THE SAILOR'S KNOT. By STANLEY CLEVE. Sung by Madame Valleria.

LADY ARTHUR HILL [illegible] NEW SONG. [illegible] must do [illegible] Composer of "In the Gloaming."

TWO THOUGHTS.

SATURDAY NIGHT. By MOLLOY.

STEPHEN ADAMS' NEW SONGS.
THE MAID OF THE MILL.
SHIPWRECKED.
Also new editions of "The Owl" and "The Little Hero."

MARZIALS' NEW SONGS.
THE RIVER OF YEARS.
NEVER TO KNOW.
Also new editions of "Leaving yet Loving," and "Ask Nothing More."

MARZIALS' POPULAR BALLADS.
The Miller and the Maid. | Last as Well.
A Summer Shower. | Twickenham Ferry.
The Three Sailor Boys. | In the North Countree.

BY THE COMPOSER OF "ONLY ONCE MORE."
THE LAST REGRET.
CAN IT BE TRUE?

STEADY AND READY. Soldier's Song. By LOUIS DIEHL.

SANTLEY'S NEW SONG, THE CUMBERLAND. By CHARLES MARSHALL.

SANTLEY'S SUCCESSFUL SONGS.
One Night came on a Hurricane. | Father O'Flynn.
Gipsy John. | The Boatswain's Story.
BOOSEY and Co., London.

POPULAR PIANOFORTE MUSIC IN THE CAVENDISH MUSIC BOOKS.
Full Music size, 1s. each; post-free, 1s. 2d.
80. SELECTION OF STERNDALE BENNETT'S PIECES, including the "Three Musical Sketches."
57. SELECTION OF PIECES BY GOTTSCHALK (1st Book).
72. Ditto. Ditto. (2nd Book).
56. SELECTION OF PIECES BY SCHULOFF.
29. SEVENTEEN CLASSICAL READINGS.
27. TWENTY-ONE SACRED READINGS.
28. TWENTY-SIX RECOLLECTIONS OF THE OPERA.
29. ALBUM OF TWELVE GAVOTTES.
34. ALBUM OF EIGHTEEN MINUETS.
42. ALBUM OF EIGHTEEN OLD DANCES.
43. ALBUM OF TWELVE POLONAISES.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

NEW SONGS IN THE CAVENDISH MUSIC BOOKS.
Price 1s. each.
77. EIGHTEEN SONGS FOR YOUNG GIRLS.
78. TEN SONGS OF THE DAY, including "When the Heart is Young." "Mignonette." "Do not forget."
46. TEN SONGS OF THE DAY, including "Twickenham Ferry" and "Olivia."
68. TEN SONGS OF THE DAY, including "she wandered down" and "It was a Dream."
47. EIGHT SONGS by ARTHUR SULLIVAN, including "Looking back."
65. TEN NEW BARITONE SONGS, sung by Santley and Maybrick.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

THE DIAMOND MUSIC BOOKS, 32 and 40 pages, price 6d. each.
1. The Singing Master.
2. The Music Master (Piano).
3. The Violin Master.
4. Family Glee Book (40 Glees and Part-Songs).
5. Harmonium Voluntary Book (50 pieces).
6. Select Piano Pieces (6).
7. Ditto (10).
8. Gavottes and Minuets (12).
9. Marches (14).
10. Sacred Songs (46).
11. Scotch Songs (30).
12. Irish Songs (30).
13. Old English Songs (30).
14. Modern Songs (50). Book 1.
15. Ditto (30). Book 2.
16. New American Songs (12).
17. Songs of the Sea (13).
18. Country Dances, &c. (75).
19. Juvenile Pianoforte Book.
20. Juvenile Song Book (41).
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

LOVED VOICES.
EDITH COOKE'S LOVED VOICES.
In F, E flat, and G.
Is now sung by Madame A. H. Watson, Madame Nellie Cave, Madame Agnes de Valleria, Miss Helen Ornery, Miss Rhoda West, Mrs. Alfred Morris, Miss Rhoda Hart, Miss May Hughes, Miss Violet Cummings, Miss Alice Fowler, Miss Inez Macrae, Miss Annie Stewart, Miss Ada South, Miss Florence Barker, Miss Fonnie Lee; Mr. E. Williams, Mr. St. Montague Shepherd, Mr. Joseph Heald, Mr. F. E. Cheveaux, Mr. H. A. Brinton, Mr. H. L. Moncrieff, Mr. Leyton Barker, Mr. Joseph Hall, Mr. Stanley Norris, and many others.
WITH GREAT SUCCESS.
2s. net.
Also published as a Vocal Duet. 2s. net.

TIP-TOE. A Fairy Dance.
By HENRI LOGE.
2s. net.
"As striking as Delibe's well-known 'Sylvia.'"

BEHREND'S LATEST SONG.

MY HEART'S MESSAGE.
Is now ready in keys to suit all voices.
2s. net.
ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street, London.

THE KING OF LOVE MY SHEPHERD IS. New Song by C. H. GOUNOD, 3rd Verse.—Perverse and foolish, oft I strayed,
Yet in His love He sought me,
And on His shoulder gently laid,
And home rejoicing brought me.
"The marvellously original yet sweetly melodious changes in the third verse will ever be considered one of the brightest illustrations of Gounod's genius. . . . This is a song, not for a season, but for a century!" Four keys, 2s. net.
PHILLIPS and PAGE, 63, Kilburn High-road, N.W.

PLEYEL, WOLFF, and CO.'S PIANOS were CHOPIN'S favourite instruments. The most perfect in touch and tone of any introduced, whether English or Foreign. For SALE or HIRE, or on the THREE-YEARS' SYSTEM, of the Sole Agents,
I. BERROW and CO., 170, New Bond-street, London, W.

D'ALMAINE'S PIANOS Half Price, from £10. D'ALMAINE'S AMERICAN ORGANS from £5. All full compass, warranted for ten years; carriage free, and all risk taken. Easiest terms arranged. Established 100 years.
91, Finsbury-pavement, City, E.C.

MAPLE and CO.,
TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD, LONDON.
UPHOLSTERERS by Appointment to HER MAJESTY.

MAPLE and CO.'S FURNISHING ESTABLISHMENT, the largest in the World. Acres of Show-Rooms for the display of first-class Furniture, ready for immediate delivery. Novelties every day from all parts of the globe. No family ought to furnish before viewing this collection of household requisites, it being one of the sights in London. To export merchants an unusual advantage is offered. Having large space, all goods are packed on the premises by experienced packers.—MAPLE and CO., Tottenham-court-road, London, and 64, Boulevard de Strasbourg, Paris.

MAPLE and CO. BEDSTEADS.
MAPLE and CO. BEDSTEADS.

MAPLE and CO. have a SPECIAL DEPARTMENT for IRON and BRASS Four-post BEDSTEADS, Chintz, and COTS, specially adapted for Mosquito Curtains, used in India, Australia, and the Colonies. Price for Full-size Bedsteads varying from 25s. Shippers and Colonial visitors are invited to inspect this varied Stock, the largest in England, before deciding elsewhere. Ten Thousand Bedsteads to select from.—MAPLE and CO., Export Furnishing Warehouses, Tottenham-court-road, London.

MAPLE and CO. BEDSTEADS.
MAPLE and CO. BEDSTEADS.

MAPLE and CO.—SPRING MATTRESSES.—The Patent Wire-Woven Spring Mattress.—We have made such advantageous arrangements that we are enabled to forward the above much-admired Spring Mattresses at the following low prices:—3 ft., 17s. 9d.; 3 ft. 6 in., 21s. 6d.; 4 ft., 25s. 9d.; 4 ft. 6 in., 29s. 9d.; 5 ft., 40s.
MAPLE and CO., London; 64, Boulevard de Strasbourg, Paris.

MAPLE and CO. MATTRESSES.
MAPLE and CO. MATTRESSES.

MAPLE and CO.—BEDDING.—Special extra soft Spring and French Mattresses. Having large space, all bedding is manufactured on the Premises, and warranted pure. Established forty-four years.
MAPLE and CO., Tottenham-court-road, London.

MAPLE and CO. FURNITURE.
MAPLE and CO. FURNITURE.

MAPLE and CO.—Base Wood FURNITURE is one of the novelties particularly recommended, being much harder than pine, and a prettier wood, although costing no more. 500 Bed-room Suites, finished in various woods, to select from. Prices, 4l to 20l guineas. Many of these are quite novelties in shape and finish.—Tottenham-court-road, London.

MAPLE and CO. FURNITURE.
MAPLE and CO. FURNITURE.

MAPLE and CO. Manufacturers of First-class Seasoned FURNITURE for immediate shipment, the largest assortment in the world to select from. Orders for exportation to any part of the globe packed carefully on the premises, and forwarded on receipt of a remittance or London reference. Catalogues free.

MAPLE and CO. CARPETS.
MAPLE and CO. CARPETS.

MAPLE and CO.—The largest assortment of INDIAN, Persian, and Turkey CARPETS always in stock, superior qualities. Purchasers should beware of inferior Turkey carpets, which are now being imported and sold as best quality at so much per square yard.—MAPLE and CO., London.

MAPLE and CO. CARPETS.
MAPLE and CO. CARPETS.

MAPLE and CO.—A Manufacturer's Stock of about BRUSSELS CARPETS, at 2s. 11d. per yard, usually sold at 3s. 9d.; best quality Tapestry Brussels (but old patterns), at 1s. 10d. and 2s. per yard; stout Tapestry Carpet, 1s. 3½d. per yard. 3000 Coils, in a great variety of patterns and sizes, ready made up, in stock, which can be laid same day as ordered.
MAPLE and CO., London.

MAPLE and CO. CARPETS.
MAPLE and CO. CARPETS.

MAPLE and CO. would advise all buyers of CARPETS, &c., especially Americans now visiting London, to call and see for themselves these great novelties, which are not yet to be found on the other side.
MAPLE and CO., Tottenham-court road, London.

MAPLE and CO. CRETONNES.
MAPLE and CO. CRETONNES.

MAPLE and CO.—CRETONNES.—The Blocks for the reprinting of the fine old French Cretonnes having been now re-engraved, MAPLE and CO. are receiving the finest goods ever offered. The cloths upon which these are printed are of superior quality; the colours can also be guaranteed. The designs are exclusive, being engaged by MAPLE and Co., 145, Tottenham-court-road, London; and Paris.

MAPLE and CO. CRETONNES.
MAPLE and CO. CRETONNES.

CRETONNES.—MAPLE and CO. have great pleasure in stating that they have on show the most magnificent selection ever seen of fast-washing CRETONNES, on extra strong and serviceable tissues.—MAPLE and CO., Tottenham-court-road, London. Catalogues Free.

MAPLE and CO. CURTAINS.
MAPLE and CO. CURTAINS.

MAPLE and CO.—CURTAINS.—A large assortment of curtains in every texture, Madras, Guipure, Swiss, Lace, Muslin, at prices from 4s. 11d. to 20 guineas per pair. Some special novelties.
MAPLE and CO., Tottenham-court-road.

MAPLE and CO.—CURTAINS.—The most wonderful improvements have been made within the last few years in the manufacture and colouring of Covering Fabrics. The artistic effects which some of these goods—even at 3s. 2d. per yard, double width—give is extraordinary. The principal factories for the production being in France, MAPLE and CO. have established a house in Paris, whereby they see all the new designs, and are enabled to reserve them exclusively for their customers' selection.

MAPLE and CO. CLOCKS.
MAPLE and CO. CLOCKS.

MAPLE and CO. DRAWING-ROOM CLOCKS to go for 400 days with one winding; a handsome present, 5 ft. high, price 70s. Warranted. MAPLE and CO. have a large and varied assortment suitable for dining and drawing rooms. Over five hundred to select from. Prices 5s. 9d. to 5 guineas. Handsome marble clock, with fadeless lines in gold and superior eight-day movement, 23s. 6d.; also bronzes in great variety.—MAPLE and CO., London.

MAPLE and CO.—CATALOGUES FREE.

POSTAL ORDER DEPARTMENT. Messrs. MAPLE and CO. beg respectfully to state that this department is now so organised that they are fully prepared to execute and supply any article that can possibly be required in furnishing at the same price, if not less than any other house in England. Patterns sent and quotations given free of charge.

MAPLE and CO.—Manufacturers of First-Class Seasoned FURNITURE for immediate shipment. The largest assortment in the world to select from. Orders for exportation to any part of the globe packed carefully on the premises, and forwarded on receipt of a remittance or London reference.

MAPLE and CO., Tottenham-court-road, London; and 64, Boulevard de Strasbourg, Paris.

NEW MUSIC.

J. B. CRAMER and CO.'S POPULAR NEW SONGS.
BY THE RIVER'S SIDE. J. STUART CROOK.
CAUGHT IN THE RAIN. ALFRED S. WALTERS.
GOOD MORROW. L. DENZA.
HOME FAIRIES. MICHAEL WATSON.
LAND OF MY FATHERS. ODOARDO BARRI.
NIGHT AND MORNING. OLIVER KING.
THE SONG AND THE SINGER. HENRY PARKER.
Each Song in several keys, to suit all voices. 2s. net.
J. B. CRAMER and Co., 201, Regent-street, W.

CERISE WALTZ. By CHARLES DEACON.
This charming and popular Waltz has been played nightly, with great success, at the Concerts à la Jullien at Her Majesty's Theatre, under the direction of Signor Odoardo Barri.

CERISE WALTZ. By CHARLES DEACON.
Played also at the Covent-Garden Theatre, the Criterion Theatre, the Grand Theatre, the Haymarket Theatre, the Olympic, the Strand Theatre, Toole's Theatre, &c.

CERISE WALTZ. By CHARLES DEACON.
Played also by Coote and Tinney's Band, Mr. Ed. St. Quentin's Band, Mr. Adam's Band, &c.

CERISE WALTZ. By CHARLES DEACON.
Solo, 4s.; duet, 4s.; septet, 1s. net; full orchestra, 1s. 6d. net; military band, 2s. 6d. net.—London: J. B. CRAMER and Co., 201, Regent-street, W.

PRETTY NEW SONGS THAT CAPTIVATE THE WORLD.
HOME DREAMS. By A. H. BEHREND.
"A charming song; will prove a great success."
"A pretty story, clothed in simple music."
"A most effective song, easy and brilliant."
F, G (D to E), A and B flat.
THE LIGHT OF THE LAND. PINSUTI.
"A grand and impressive song."
"A song of uncommon beauty and merit."
"Will maintain its composer's high reputation."
B flat, C (C to E), and F.
JEM. A Merry Song by COTSFORD DICK.
"Replete with dry humour."
"A bright, sparkling, and humorous song."
"The finest song for concerts and penny readings."
D, E flat (E to E), and F.
THE CLANG OF THE HAMMER. BONHEUR.
"A bold, vigorous, and spirited song."
"A dashing and powerful bass or baritone song."
F, G (B to D), and B flat.

SURELY. New Song. By A. H. BEHREND.
15,620 copies sold first month of issue.
"The greatest success of modern times."
E flat, F, G (compass D to E), A flat, B flat, and C.
The above New Songs post-free 24 stamps each.
W. MORLEY and CO.,
• 269, Regent-street, W.; and 70, Upper-street, N.

CHARLES HALLÉ'S PRACTICAL PIANOFORTE SCHOOL.
New and Enlarged Edition.
Charles Hallé's New Pianoforte Tutor.
The best and most useful Tutor ever published.
Charles Hallé's Musical Library.
Entirely remodelled and enlarged.
Catalogues post-free on application.
FORSYTH BROTHERS, London and Manchester.

THREE NEW PIECES FOR THE PIANOFORTE. By STEPHEN HELLER.
FABLIAU. Op. 135.
CAPRICCIETTO. Op. 156.
TROIS FEUILLETS D'ALBUM. Op. 157.
Price 2s. each, net.
FORSYTH BROTHERS, London and Manchester.

DOMINION ORGANS.
A Large Stock of these celebrated Organs always on view. Considered the finest-toned American Organs yet produced.
A New two-manual pedal Organ just introduced, style 62.
Catalogues post-free.
FORSYTH BROTHERS, 272a, Regent-circus, Oxford-street, London; and 122 and 124, Deansgate, Manchester.

BROADWOOD'S PIANOFORTES.
CRAMER'S SUPPLY every size of these INSTRUMENTS on their Three-Years' System of Hire.
207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

ERARD'S PIANOFORTES.—CRAMER'S SUPPLY every size of these INSTRUMENTS on their Three-Years' System of Hire.—207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

COLLARD'S PIANOFORTES.
CRAMER'S SUPPLY every size of these INSTRUMENTS on their Three-Years' System of Hire.
207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

GRAND PIANOFORTES. — CRAMER'S SUPPLY GRAND PIANOFORTES by all the great makers, from £7 7s. to £31 10s. per quarter. Full Price-Lists post-free.—207 and 209, Regent-street, W.

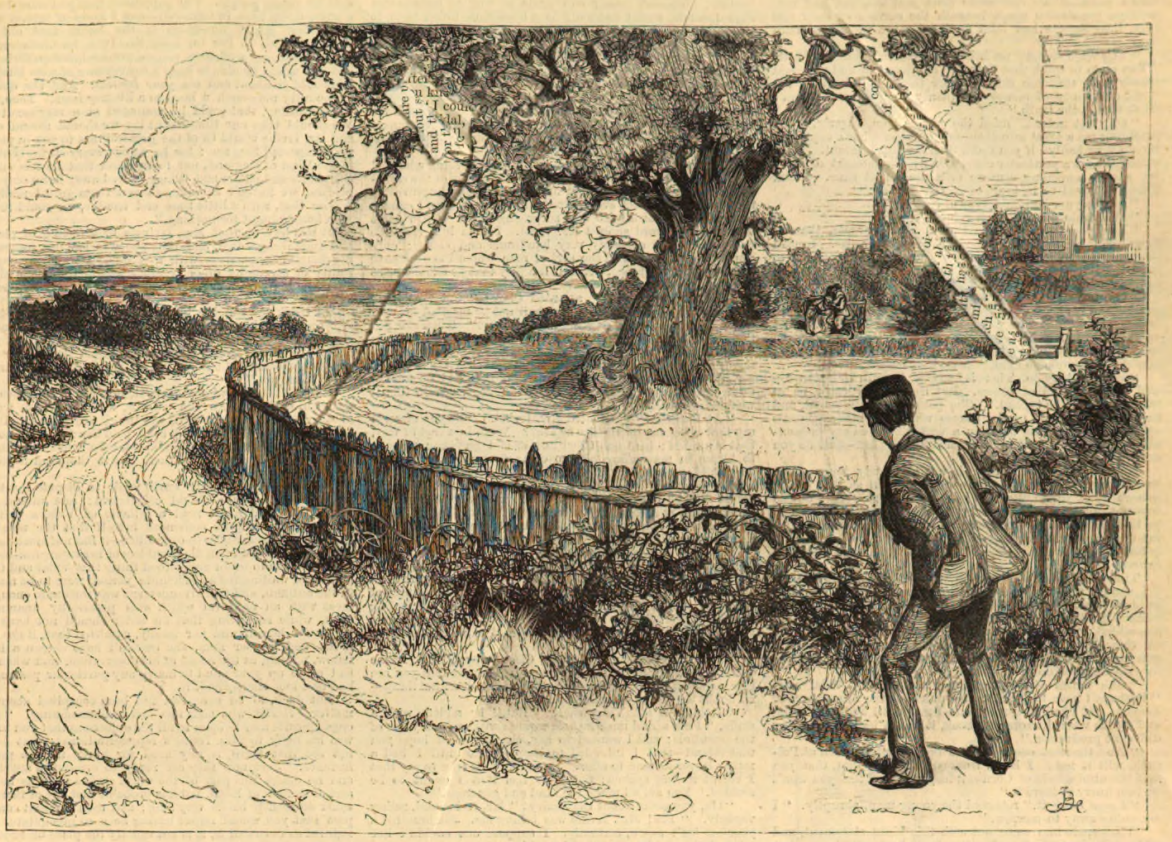
KIRKMAN and SON,
MAKERS of GRAND and COTTAGE PIANOS,
8 and 9, SOHO-SQUARE, LONDON, W.

KIRKMAN and SON'S STEEL GRANDS (horizontal and upright) are constructed with their patent wrought-steel frame and resonant plank, securing a pure tone as well as the utmost durability. They also make an overstrung iron grand, only 5 ft. 9 in. long, at a lower price.

KIRKMAN and SON'S IRON-FRAMED COTTAGE PIANOS range from 4 ft. in height, are full trichord, and are fitted with the best repetition check-actions. They can be obtained in solid wood cases, and specially prepared for extreme climates. A new model has just been introduced for yachts, boudoirs, school-rooms, &c., only pianette size (3 ft. 9 in. high by 2 ft. wide), but full trichord, and with check action.
All their Pianos are for sale, hire, or on the three-years' system.

PIANOFORTES for HIRE or for SALE, from 2½ guineas upwards.—JOHN BROADWOOD and SONS, 33, Great Pulteney-street, Golden-square, W. Manufactory, 45, Horseferry-road, Westminster.

ELKINGTON and CO.
ELECTRO and SILVER PLATE.
CLOCKS and BRONZES.
DIRECT FROM THE MANUFACTURERS.



ELKINGTON and CO.
TABLE and TESTIMONIAL PLATE.
DESIGNS and PHOTOGRAPHS, SUPPLIED TO COMMITTEES.

ELKINGTON and CO.—CAUTION.
SEE ALL GOODS MARKED, "E and CO." IN SHIELD.
ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUES POST-FREE.

ELKINGTON and CO.,
MANUFACTURING SILVERSMITHS,
22, Regent-st.; and 42, Moorgate-st., City.
Birmingham, Liverpool, and Manchester.

WALKER'S CRYSTAL CASE WATCHES are superseding all others. Prize Medals—London, 1862; Paris, 1867. Silver Watches, from £4 4s.; Gold, from £6 6s. Price-Lists sent free.—77, Cornhill; and 230, Regent-street.

JOHN BROGDEN, deceased.
The VALUABLE STOCK of ART-JEWELLERY is NOW FOR SALE, at a REASONABLE REDUCTION, for a LIMITED TIME,
by order of the Executors.
4, GRAND HOTEL-BUILDINGS, CHARING-CROSS.

DRAWN BY F. BARNARD.

Jack Irvine, sauntering homewards from the village, became aware of two figures seated in the garden above, and was presently astounded to see them draw closer, and lose distinctness of outline in a close embrace.

ADRIAN VIDAL.

BY W. E. NORRIS,

AUTHOR OF "MDLLE. DE MERSAC," "MATRIMONY," "THIRLBY HALL," &C.

CHAPTER X.

A SUMMER AFTERNOON.

Thus it came to pass that circumstances for which he was in no wise responsible placed a conscientious man in a quandary. Jack, who had to see about getting the wreck of his dog-cart transported to Cardrew, evidently took it for granted that Vidal would walk home with his sister; and, indeed, no other arrangement seemed possible. Yet Vidal could not but perceive that such a proceeding would be fraught with the gravest danger. What he feared just now was not so much that the impassioned utterance in words might call forth some response [illegible] hopes which he still cherished might be [illegible] a point-blank refusal. Indeed, he felt himself well enough to be aware that [illegible] difficult as to be wellnigh impossible. [illegible] dangers that threatened him, he must inevitably befall him if he [illegible] her as far as the lodge, and there bid [illegible] necessity of packing up for an early start [illegible] they would give him a sufficient excuse for returning to his lodgings.

But Vidal, like the rest of the world, was a better hand at forming resolutions than at carrying them into effect; and when Clare and he had reached the entrance to Cardrew, he had not yet so much as announced his impending departure. Up to this point, the walk had not been exactly an enjoyable one. There had been an uncomfortable feeling of restraint on both sides which had made the way seem long; yet, although the young people had kept up conversation with some difficulty, and had said nothing that was not absolutely flat and commonplace, they had been exchanging thoughts through some more subtle medium than that of speech, and Vidal was no longer able to take a dispassionate view of the situation. He understood that Clare had been asking him the whole time what was the matter with him, and he had answered, "The matter is that I adore you, and that I must not say so." Now, while he held the gate open for her to pass through, she said, after a momentary hesitation, "Will you not come up to the house? Jack will be back soon, and we can give you a luncheon of some sort." And Vidal, feeling that all strength of purpose had gone out of him, let the gate swing back, murmuring, rather foolishly, "Oh, thanks—if I shan't be in the way."

Every now and then—not often, of course; still, every now and then—it happens to most of us to make up our minds that we will do the things that we ought not to do; and on those rare and delightful occasions such of us as are wise at once kick conscience overboard. For if one cannot do wrong without suffering from pangs of remorse the whole time, it is surely better to stick to the dull path of duty and preserve at least one's self-respect. A certain merry Cardinal, now no more, once found himself at a great dinner in Rome during Lent. There was fish for him, and there were vegetables, and of these he partook freely, getting what comfort he could out of them, and maintaining a cheerful countenance. But when a haunch of venison made its appearance, his brow became clouded with care; for his soul, like the soul of Isaac, loved venison, and he could not bring himself either to let the dish pass or to indulge his appetite. If he had only neglected the fish he might have stretched a point and allowed himself a little meat for his stomach's sake; but to eat both fish and flesh at one and the same meal was what no ecclesiastic could do without falling into sin. For some moments the conflict which was raging within him was visible by outward signs to his neighbours; then, breaking into a jolly laugh, "Basta!" he exclaimed, "Mi confessero!" So he swallowed the venison and enjoyed it, and, let us hope, duly performed penance the next day. Vidal had this in common with his Eminence, that he neither deceived himself nor repented at the wrong moment. As soon as he had yielded to temptation, his heart grew lighter, and he thought, "Well, since this is to be my last day with her, it shall be as happy a one as I can make it." He let himself go; he began to talk, without first thinking of every word that he said; and Clare's spirits also seemed to rise in sympathy with his; so that, before long, the cloud which had arisen between them of late was all but dispelled.

In due course they discovered that they were hungry; and then they had luncheon together in the dining-room, which seemed strangely silent and empty with only two people seated at the long table. One of them, at all events, desired no addition to their number, and longed only for time to stand still.

"Do you know, I am very glad you let Bob drive," he could not help saying; and Clare did not ask him why he was glad, but only laughed, and blushed ever so slightly.

They had finished their meal before Jack came in, apologizing quite needlessly for having been so long, and explaining that he had had a great deal of trouble in finding somebody to bring the cart home. When he had stayed a vigorous appetite, he proposed a cigar and a game of billiards to his guest, who replied that he didn't want to smoke, and that it would be a sin to stay indoors on such a fine afternoon.

"We might have a knock-up at lawn-tennis, then," suggested the innocent Jack.

"All right; if you like," answered Vidal; "but don't you think it's too hot to run about?"

"But we can't lie on our backs in the garden till dinner-time," remonstrated the other.

"Oh, I don't know," said Vidal; "I think I could. What shall you do, Miss Irvine?"

Clare replied that she meant to sit out in the shade somewhere; and then, to Vidal's great relief, Jack said, "Well, if you don't mind, I think I'll just stroll down to Polruth and see if I can't find out something about the otter-hounds. I heard they were to meet near this next week, and I should like to show you an otter-hunt, Vidal, if you've never seen one."

In this way Vidal's destiny led him into pleasant places. Sitting on a bench in the shade, with the object of his adoration beside him, with the slumberous murmur of insects in his ears, and with all the sunny landscape stretched out before him till it dropped abruptly to meet the blue Atlantic far beneath, he surrendered himself to the bliss of the passing moments, and began to realise what is so seldom realised by mortals, the delight of living in the present. Only to watch Clare, to listen to her, to meet her eyes every now and again, was enough, and he almost forgot that a morrow was coming which would find him journeying towards London and duty. At any rate, if some suppressed consciousness of this sad fact was in his mind, he would not suffer any hint of it to pass his lips, thinking, very sensibly, that it would be time enough to say what must be said when the others returned from Tintagel.

But, considering the condition of mind that he was in, this and all other matters that he might desire to conceal were evidently at the mercy of hazard. His colloquy with Clare was not continuous, but was broken by irregular intervals of silence more dangerous than speech. During one of these, Vidal glanced at his neighbour, whose hands were lying idly in her lap, and who was, to all appearance, plunged in profound meditation. She remained so long without stirring that at last he could not refrain from asking, softly, "What are you thinking about, Miss Irvine?"

She started, smiled, and made the reply which is usually made to that absurd question—"Oh, about nothing particular."

If she had answered quite truthfully, she would have had to say, "About you;" but not being disposed to submit to further cross-examination, she uttered the meaningless phrase above recorded; and, by way of changing the subject, followed it up with a question on her own score—"Are you writing another book?"

"Oh, yes," answered Vidal; "that is my trade, you know." He had wondered more than once why, during the whole time that he had been in Cornwall, Clare had never said a word to him about his literary pursuits; but, to be sure, he had given her little opportunity for doing so.

There was another short pause before she resumed: "Is it to be like the last?"

"I hope not," answered Vidal, with a laugh. "The last didn't give universal satisfaction, as I dare say you are aware."

"Didn't it?" said Clare; and then, rather hesitatingly, "Do you mind my saying that I didn't like it very much."

"I don't mind in the least," replied Vidal, who, however, minded a good deal. "No one knows better than I do that it was a dull book."

"Oh, it was not that: it was extremely clever, I thought—only of course I am no judge. But—but is it quite true? Do you think people are really as bad as you make them out?"

"I should say they were—quite," answered Vidal. "The fact is, that I didn't know I had painted humanity at all particularly black."

"You painted London society very black, at all events. And there were no nice people in the book—at least, no nice women."

"I thought some of them were rather nice in their way," said Vidal.

In truth, he had tried to make them so; but as he had drawn most of his characters from real life, and had not, perhaps, penetrated much beneath the surface of their real lives, their defects had been rendered more prominent than their virtues.

"You seem to have no belief in women," pursued Clare. "You seem to think that they are all deceitful and vain and greedy, and that the things which they covet most in the world are plenty of money and plenty of admirers. I don't think that is the truth."

"Oh, but indeed," cried the young man, eagerly, "you are doing me a great injustice—or else I must have expressed myself very badly—if you think that is what I meant. I was writing about a particular class, and I never thought of passing such a sweeping censure even upon that class. I took what I believed to be types of it, that was all."

"And is your heroine a type of it?"

"Which do you call the heroine?"

"I supposed she was the heroine: at all events, there is more about her in the book than about anybody else. I mean the wretch who is in love with the hero, and who refuses to leave her husband, whom she hates, because she can't bear to lose her money and her position."

Vidal felt a little uncomfortable. He remembered certain passages in his book which he would just as soon that Miss Irvine should not have read, and he understood that what appeared to him to be a temperate enough picture of modern society might easily strike her as an abominable libel. "I am afraid such people do exist," he said, at length.

"Perhaps they do. There is Lady St. Anstell, for instance—and I have heard of others. But surely they can't be so numerous as to be typical." She paused for a moment, and then gave utterance to the phrase which has made domestic criticism so appalling to many a writer. "You say fashionable women are like that," she remarked; "but—how do you know they are?"

Now, Vidal's past career, if not absolutely immaculate, would have borne looking into quite as well as that of the generality of young men who have lived in the world; but he was not prepared to tell Miss Irvine the exact means by which he had arrived at his knowledge of a certain variety of feminine character. So he answered: "Oh, well, a good deal of it is hearsay, of course. One must be guided in some degree by hearsay."

The effect of this admission was eminently satisfactory. "I should not have thought that hearsay was a very safe guide," Clare rejoined; but it was plain that the writer's chief offence in her eyes had now been removed. By-and-by, she added, "You will think me very presumptuous for saying all this; but I have wanted for such a long time to ask you whether you really meant what I fancied you did; and I am so glad that you don't."

"One writes of what one sees and hears," Vidal said. "Perhaps I have had rather too much of the atmosphere of London. If I had been near you—I mean, if I had been living at Polruth when I wrote that book, it would have been a very different production."

"And the next one will have been partly written at Polruth, will it not? I hope, from your saying that, that you find the atmosphere of Cornwall inspiring, and that you won't be in a hurry to leave it."

"I must leave it," returned the young man, abruptly. "I am going away to-morrow."

What made him come out with this blunt statement, and add no single word of explanation to it he hardly knew; but it may be that he was not wholly innocent of a dramatic intention. He was looking down when he spoke; but presently he stole a glance out of the corner of his eye and saw that Clare appeared not only startled but displeased.

"We shall all be very sorry to lose you," she said, rather coldly; "but it is natural that you should be bored here."

"Bored!" exclaimed Vidal. "But you can't think that. I have never been so happy in my life as during these last three weeks—yes; in spite of everything, I have never been so happy; and perhaps I shall never be so happy again. I would give ten of the years that I may still have before me to stay another month at Polruth—if I dared."

"If you dared?" repeated Clare, with raised eyebrows.

"Yes—if I dared. Don't you understand? I know you understand. I have been here too long, as it is. Heriot said I ought never to have come; and perhaps he was right. I didn't mean to tell you this; but you 'll forgive it, I hope, now that I am going away so soon."

"Why must you go?" asked Clare, in a low voice.

He broke into a short laugh. "Why? Because I have only six hundred a year in the world, and because if I had six thousand you wouldn't care for me."

Clare made no answer; but she looked at him, and her eyes spoke a language which could not be misinterpreted.

Lector dilectissime, you have been young; possibly you are young still. It may be that you are yet conjugating the verb amare in the present tense, indicative mood, active and passive voices, whereas some of us have have long since got on to the past tenses, and even to the conjunctive moods of these. But to whichever category you may belong, you must be aware that there are circumstances under which prudence ceases to be either possible or desirable, and you will therefore readily understand how it came to pass that Jack Irvine, sauntering homewards from the village, became aware of two figures seated in the garden above him, and was presently astounded to see them draw closer together and lose distinctness of outline in a close embrace. Jack was a young man who possessed some clearness of mental, as well as of physical vision, and his comments upon what he had witnessed were brief and to the purpose.

"By George!" he exclaimed aloud, after a protracted whistle; "there 'll be a row in the house this journey, and no mistake! I don't believe the fellow has got enough to keep himself; and who the deuce was to suspect what he was after all this time? Why, he has hardly spoken a dozen words to her since he has been down here! Pretty bad form, I must say, keeping things dark like that."

Then, as he did not wish to play the spy any longer, he turned away and marched off in the opposite direction, with his hands in his pockets, meditating mournfully.

CHAPTER XI.

DREAMS.

Possibly, Jack Irvine, whose notion of a desirable brother-in-law was that such a person should be the owner, at the very least, of a country house and good shooting, may have been over ready to assume that the requirements of his parents must necessarily be the same as his own, and that they would at once refuse to listen to any suitor in Vidal's circumstances. Be that as it may, the "row" which he had foretold never came off. Poor Mrs. Irvine could not pretend to be very much pleased when Clare followed her into her bed-room that night and there made confession of what had occurred during the afternoon; but she neither reproached her daughter nor forbade the engagement. She had always been too kind-hearted to cherish schemes which were not compatible with the happiness of others, and although a son-in-law who, like Mr. Wilbraham, possessed money and lands, as well as influence in high quarters, would naturally have been more to her taste, it was not in her to reject Vidal merely on account of his poverty. So she only sighed, and said: "I think he might have spoken to your father first. It would have shown better feeling, if he had."

"But he did not mean to speak to anybody," Clare urged. "He meant to go away to-morrow morning without saying a word; and I suppose he would have gone away and never would have been any explanation at all but for that fortunate accident. I shall always feel grateful to Bob for upsetting us out of the dog-cart."

"He must never be allowed to do such a thing again!" cried Mrs. Irvine, quickly—as though a repetition of the catastrophe might be expected to bring about a second improvident marriage. "How Jack ever twisted him with the reins, I cannot understand! But it is all very surprising to me. Oh, I don't mean to say a word against Mr. Vidal. I liked him from the first; and he is certainly very handsome and clever; only somehow he is not at all the sort of man whom I should have expected you to choose. And it is a pity that he should be so badly off; isn't it?"

"Yes, I suppose so," assented Clare; "but that is no fault of his; and, you know, we shall not be married for ever so long—not until he is making more money." Then she put her arms round her mother's neck and kissed her. "I am sorry, mamma," she whispered. "I know it is a disappointment, and you are very good about it. I did try to accept Mr. Wilbraham, and I thought perhaps I should be able to do it, until—until that time at Lucerne. Then I knew that it was not possible."

"At Lucerne!" ejaculated Mrs. Irvine. "Do you mean to say that it began so long ago as that? Well, in a sort of way, that is a relief; for I don't feel now as if I had been so much to blame in persuading him to come down here. Now, my dear child, you need not pull my cap off, because I really am quite fond of Mr. Vidal, and from what you tell me, I have no doubt that he tried to do what was right—only these things will happen, in spite of all precautions. I will talk to your father about it, and we shall see what he says. I can't promise that he will give his consent, you know."

But Clare knew very well that Mr. Irvine's consent was precisely what her mother could safely answer for at all times, and she had no fears as to the result of a formal appeal to the head of the family. It seemed almost unfair to take advantage of such simplicity; and, indeed, this was very much the feeling that Vidal had when he was summoned to the old gentleman's study the next morning, and was received as affectionately as if he had been a millionaire.

"I am sure that you will make Clare happy," Mr. Irvine was kind enough to say; "and my wife tells me that you are sincerely attached to one another. That is the essential thing—no doubt that is the essential thing."

"I think it is," Vidal said. "But," he added, with a smile, "I am afraid most fathers would consider it only one of the essentials; and I wanted to say, Mr. Irvine—I hope you understand—that I intended to keep silence until I had a rather larger income to offer. It wouldn't be true to say that I regret having spoken; but I do feel that I ought to be scolded. You are all much too kind and generous."

"Oh, you mean about the money?" Mr. Irvine said, rather vaguely. "Yes; Mrs. Irvine was telling me. Six hundred a year—it isn't much, certainly. I suppose one couldn't live upon six hundred a year, could one?"

The question was so evidently asked in perfect good faith that Vidal laughed outright. "I believe people do live upon even less than that," he replied; "but a very small income entails sacrifices which perhaps you would hardly like your daughter to put up with. I hope to be better off before long, and even now I make from about a hundred to a hundred and fifty more than the fixed sum that I have named; still it would unquestionably be more prudent for us to wait awhile before thinking of marriage."

Then he laughed again; for he could not help being a little tickled by the whimsicality of his preaching prudence to his prospective father-in-law.

Mr. Irvine remained grave, and rubbed his head with an air of perplexity. "The question of money," he observed confidentially, "is always a troublesome one. I used to think that I was pretty well off; but nowadays, what with education and allowances, and one thing and another, there are so many payments that I am apt to forget how I stand—at least, until I get my pass-book from the bank. But certainly we ought to help—oh, yes; we shall be able to help, to some extent; and although it may not be as much as we could wish"—— He broke off, and then asked, almost apologetically, "Upon how little, now, do you think it could be done?"

Vidal hesitated; and indeed the question was not a very easy one to answer.

"Well," resumed Mr. Irvine, "I suppose a thousand a year would be the least. As you say, people do, no doubt, marry upon less; but we should not like to think of Clare being in difficulties. Let me see; six and four make ten—four hundred, h'm!" He pinched his lower lip between his finger and thumb and looked up with an appealing expression of helplessness. "Well, I'm sure I don't know," he said. "Possibly some means might be devised—— But perhaps," suddenly brightening up—"perhaps you had better consult Mrs. Irvine."

All this was by no means what Vidal had anticipated, and it affected him with a mixture of gratitude and compunction. Who would ever have supposed that there were such disinterested people in the world? He felt almost inclined to say, "But, my dear, good Sir, you don't know the rules of the game. It is only when your daughter marries a rich man that you are required to make handsome settlements. If she takes a fancy to a pauper, your course is to point out that you can't afford to allow her anything: and then the match is broken off. You will be behaving very magnanimously by merely giving a conditional assent to our engagement."

He did not make this speech at the time; but he did afterwards say something of the kind to Mrs. Irvine, who laughed at him. Did he flatter himself, she asked, that it was for love of him that they wished to make their daughter comfortable? And if they could spare a few hundreds a year (it would not be four hundred, she was afraid, but it might be three; and surely the harvest of Mr. Vidal's pen would suffice to make up the deficiency)—if they could spare this money, how could it be better spent than in averting the ordeal of a long engagement?

"I abhor long engagements!" the good lady went on. "For the man it is all very well, because being engaged doesn't interfere with any of his amusements; but the poor girl is in a wretched position. Young men fight shy of her, and the other girls generally laugh at her in their sleeves, and declare that it will never come to anything. And most frequently it does not come to anything, as I could prove to you by many instances in my own experience. But now, what I was thinking was this. In London, a thousand a year doesn't go far. You would be just able to keep your heads above water, no doubt, and you would have enough to eat and drink; but you couldn't attempt to go into society—and that makes life so dull for young people. But supposing that you were to take a house down here in Cornwall—and I know of several within reach that might do—there is the house that old Mrs. Tregenna used to live in, near St. Ives, for instance, and plenty of others—well, then, you see, you could live quite cheaply, and you would be able to keep a conveyance of some kind, and you could go about and see your friends. And the quiet of the country too—such a boon to a literary man! Then, as to the furnishing, that could be managed at a very small cost. We should take our time about it; we should attend sales; and Mr. Irvine would be of the greatest use to you in picking up unexpected bargains; for he knows every curiosity-dealer in the West of England, not to mention that he has endless oak chests and chairs and things stowed away in an outhouse, because we haven't a corner to put them in. I really do believe that, with a little time and trouble, we could furnish your house almost for nothing."

It will be seen that Mrs. Irvine's first feeling of chagrin had quite disappeared, and that she was looking forward to her daughter's marriage with that delight which an opportunity of arranging other people's affairs for them always afforded her. "What do you think?" she concluded, anxiously.

"I think you are the kindest people I ever met or heard of," answered the young man. "Of course there is no necessity for our living in London, and I am sure you are right about the money going further here than there. My only doubt is whether I should be at all justified in accepting so much from you."

"But it is Clare who accepts it, not you; and when you are rich, as I am sure you will be, after you have written another book or two, she need not take it any longer. Didn't I hear of somebody who had been paid five thousand pounds for a novel? And a novel could not take much more than a year to write, I suppose; so there is five thousand a year at once."

Perhaps it was hardly worth while to dispute the trustworthiness of this off-hand calculation; and indeed Mrs. Irvine (who had never read a syllable of Vidal's writings) had by this time quite convinced herself that the mantle of Dickens or Thackeray or George Eliot—it did not much matter which—had fallen upon the shoulders of her future son-in-law.

So it came to be an understood thing that Vidal and Clare, instead of waiting for an indefinite period, were to be married in the autumn, and this arrangement was fortunate enough to meet with an approval which was practically unanimous. Jack, while regretting that his sister should not have done better for herself and her family, admitted that, if she must needs wed a poor man, she couldn't have chosen a better fellow, adding, as the result of his observation, that when you had made up your mind to marry any particular person, you had best look sharp about it.

But Jack, to be sure, had not been consulted about the matter. Heriot, who had, was less accommodating. "Long engagements may be open to all the objections that you urge," was his reply to Mrs. Irvine's representations; "but I cannot see that there is any need for hurry in the present instance. Just now they are ready to consent to anything; and no doubt this part of the world strikes them as being a sort of Garden of Eden, but it is probable that one of them will think differently before very long; and then it might come to pass that you would regret having been so precipitate. Delightful as Cornwall is, it is not exactly the place of residence for a man who proposes to make his living by studies of modern life and character. Besides, they are both young, and they have known each other only a very short time. I really don't think that waiting a year or so would do either of them much harm."

"It seems to me that you want the engagement to be broken off," cried Mrs. Irvine, irritably; for what she had applied for was approval, not advice.

"Adrian Vidal is about the most intimate friend I have in the world," answered Heriot, "and I hope you know how I feel towards all of you. I have no more sincere wish than that both Clare and he should be happy."

This somewhat ambiguous response satisfied Mrs. Irvine, who returned, in a tone calculated to silence further opposition, "Then let them be happy in their own way."

For the time being, at all events, their happiness was complete. Their movements and their meetings were free from restriction of any kind, and, except in the shape of some derisive raillery on the part of the boys, they incurred no penalty for withdrawing themselves from the daily amusements of those about them. Whether, in the course of their protracted rambles, they learnt to know one another better, may be doubted, since they were both under the glamour of love; but their mutual admiration increased—which was perhaps a more desirable thing. As for Vidal, he could hardly believe in his good fortune, and told Clare as much, one day.

"It seems too good to be true," he said. "To think of it! Only a few days ago I was keeping myself alive upon a vestige—a mere vestige—of hope; just a little peradventure which I wouldn't allow common-sense to rob me of, though it tried hard. And now!—it is like a dream."

She gave his arm a slight pressure, by way of proving that she was a substantial reality; and presently, looking up into his face, she said, "Adrian, if I ask you a question, will you answer me?"

"Of course I will."

"But truly, I mean—as you would answer if anybody else asked you."

"Certainly; if I can."

She paused for a moment, drawing some wild flowers, which she had gathered, through his button-hole and then pulling them out again and throwing them away.

"Well?" said Vidal, smiling down upon her.

"Well, then—do you think that love lasts for ever?"

He answered "Yes." Perhaps no one, situated as he was, would or could have made any other reply; but it must be said for him that he believed himself to be speaking the truth. Love of the kind about which she was inquiring is a passion which may, in extreme cases, survive marriage by as much as a couple of years, but which far more frequently begins to fade after a few months of conjugal felicity; and of this abstract circumstance Vidal was just as well aware as the rest of the world. But then he knew that to every rule there are a few exceptions; and how could he doubt that their love for each other was of an exceptional kind? Had any two people ever loved so devotedly since the world began? It did not seem likely. So he said "Yes" with a quiet mind, and emphasized his assertion in the customary manner.

But she drew a little away from him. "You said just now that it was like a dream; and I am afraid it is a dream—it must be! Life can't really be so beautiful. And don't you think—don't you think that some day you may wake up?" She went on, without giving him time to reply, "It is so with other people: one can't help seeing it. Men have a sort of affection for their wives—something like friendship, if they happen to get on well together. But I don't want that—I wouldn't have it—I would almost as soon that you hated me! Oh, Adrian, if you ever cared for anyone else as you care for me now, I think I should die!"

There was such a strange look upon her face, and she spoke with so much vehemence, that the young man was startled. "Why, Clare," he said, "what has put such notions into your head? Care for anyone else as I care for you! Don't you know that that is utterly impossible?"

"All sorts of impossible things happen," she answered, more quietly, and with a certain shamefacedness, "and all sorts of horrid thoughts come into one's mind. But one ought not to speak them out. Please, forget that I said that, Adrian."

But he did not forget it. He remembered the speech afterwards, when he was alone, and the look that had come over the girl's face as she uttered it, and he said to himself—not without reason, it may be—that he was unworthy of such love. Those few words were in some sort a revelation to him; for he was quick at interpreting signs of character, and he perceived what he had hitherto only half suspected, that Clare's was one of those deep and strong natures which surrender themselves wholly when they surrender at all, and which will be satisfied with nothing short of complete surrender in return. Well, if it were so, there was no need for disquietude. "Love is not love Which alters when it alteration finds, Or bends with the remover to remove;" nor would Clare ever have reason to complain that she did not hold the first place in his thoughts. She was not one of those unreasonable women who will quarrel even with that measure of allegiance which an artist owes to his art.

CHAPTER XII.

HERIOT'S WEDDING PRESENT.

The happy summer time stole on with scarcely [illegible] material or metaphorical, to dim its brightness. Every now and again a heavy shower would sweep [illegible]m from the westward, converting the steep streets of Polru[illegible]h into running watercourses for half an hour or so; but [illegible] this year the elements seemed to have entered into a conspi[illegible]cy to make two lovers happy; and day after day the sky and [illegible] the sea were blue, and the rocks and islets of the coast slept i[illegible]n a golden haze, while Clare and Adrian wandered about toge[illegible]ther, repeating the old phrases which never suffer by repe[illegible]tition, while the boys, giving up this couple as hopeless, re[illegible]verted to their ordinary pastimes, and while Mrs. Irvine sco[illegible]red the county in search of eligible residences.

If there was a gloomy face in t[illegible]he household, it was that which rose above Heriot's bowed s[illegible]houlders. He had congratulated his friend and had said [illegible]all that was pretty and appropriate to Miss Irvine; but h[illegible] had not managed to conceal from either of them the misgi[illegible]vings which he felt with regard to this marriage, and it was [illegible]but natural that they should resent his unspoken disapprov[illegible]l. Therefore the news of his approaching departure was not greeted with that general chorus of protest which he was accustomed to hear annually from his hospitable friends at Cardrew. Mrs. Irvine, however, was loud in her reproaches.

"You have never given us less than a month before," she exclaimed, "and it is too bad of you to run away like this, just when I am in need of somebody to consult with. I know you think me a silly old woman for wanting to keep Clare near us; but that is no reason why you should deprive me of the benefit of your advice now that the thing is decided upon; and I am sure no one who has not had to look about for houses can have any idea of how difficult it is to find what you want. As for those two, I can't move them to take the slightest interest in the matter. They say that anything with four walls and a roof will do, and that they are quite content to leave it to me—which is so absurd; because it is they, not I, who will have to live in the house. Well, I must do the best I can. I suppose we shall see no more of you now until next summer."

"Oh, you haven't quite seen the last of me yet," answered Heriot, with a laugh. "I have been asked to stay with the St. Austells, and I dare say we can contrive one or two meetings before I leave Cornwall. So that the blow will be softened."

He did not add that the spare room at Cardrew might very possibly be coveted by one who had a better right than he to occupy it; although this was one of the reasons which had led him to hasten his leave-taking.

Adrian made no comment upon the subject, one way or the other; but that evening, when he had bidden the family goodnight and was setting off for his lodgings, Heriot surprised him a little by saying, "I think I'll just walk down with you, Adrian, and smoke a pipe before I go to bed."

"All right," answered the young man. "Come along, and I'll give you a whisky-and-soda, or whatever it is that your doctor allows you to drink." But he was not very much delighted; for he thought, "Now I'm in for another lecture;" and it seemed to him that it was rather too late in the day to deliver or listen to lectures.

However, Heriot did not seem to have very much to say, after all. He walked almost in silence from the house to the village, and afterwards, at Vidal's lodgings, sat smoking for half an hour with a preoccupied air and replying in monosyllables to the remarks addressed to him. It was only when he had risen to go that he came to the point.

"You are to be married some time in the autumn, I suppose," he said, somewhat brusquely.

"I believe so. Nothing is absolutely settled yet."

"Yes;—well, I wanted to say that I'm afraid I shan't be able to come to the wedding."

"Why, my dear fellow," exclaimed Adrian, "I was counting upon you to do best man."

"Ah, I had the vanity to imagine that perhaps you might honour me so far; and that is why I thought I had better beg you at once to ask somebody else. I am sure you won't accuse me of unfriendliness: but you see, my health is so uncertain—and in the autumn I generally have to move south—and—and altogether, I am afraid I shall have to content myself with being with you in the spirit when the day comes."

He spoke with some hesitation and embarrassment; and Vidal, perceiving that these excuses were not genuine, was the least bit in the world offended. But he answered good-humouredly enough: "Just as you think best, old chap. We shall all miss you, of course; but if you're in Egypt, you can't be in Cornwall, that's certain."

"No; just so—that's it, you see," said Heriot; "and if I am not quite as far off as Egypt, I may very likely be on my way there; so that it would be best not to reckon upon me. And, Adrian," he added, producing an envelope from his pocket, and still speaking in the same flurried, uncertain manner, "I thought I would take this opportunity of giving you my wedding present. I have ventured to put it in the coarse and practical form of a cheque; because one wishes one's friends to buy what they will like, and how am I to know what would please a young lady?"

Adrian took the envelope, and mumbled his thanks after the usual fashion. But it appeared that Heriot had still something to add. "It's—it's for a rather larger amount than one generally gives as a wedding present," he said; "but I hope you won't mind that, and that you'll take it as it is meant. You know, I have more money than I can spend, and it occurred to me that furnishing and setting up house and all that——Besides which, I have my doubts about this Cornish establishment. I think it will have to be London, most likely, after all; and then, perhaps, a few extra tables and chairs, you know, might come in useful."

"I couldn't accept more than a certain amount, Heriot," said Vidal, somewhat alarmed by this incoherent explanation.

"Well, it isn't more than a certain amount," returned Heriot, sharply. "Don't be silly; I'm not offering you a fortune. Now, good-night; and may you never need a friend to help you out of trouble to the end of your days. But if you ever should, you know where to apply."

So the two men [illegible] hands, and Heriot made for the door. But on the three[illegible] halted again irresolutely. "Look here, Adrian," h[illegible] don't want to preach; but the old Adam is stron[illegible] I must say one word. You are going to mar[illegible]s had no experience of life whatsoever. Sh[illegible]—literally nothing, about it, and when she [illegible] will hear and see many things which s[illegible] you are prepared for that, no doubt [illegible]a impatient at the time. Don't be in[illegible] don't let her lose faith in you. Bec[illegible]ily be made happy, she can also be [illegible] don't think she can very easily f[illegible]

The advice might be a little [illegible] was well meant. After Heriot [illegible]ope and found that it contained

(To be continued.)

[illegible].M.G., has been elected treasurer [illegible] of Gray's Inn for the ensuing year.

[illegible]e Midland Circuit, has been elected a Be[illegible]her o[illegible]rable Society of the Inner Temple, in succession to the [illegible] Mr. Deedes; and Mr. G. F. Speke, of [illegible]e Western Circuit, and Recorder of Helston, has been elected a Bencher of this honourable society, in succession to the late Mr. Cole, Q.C.

Lieutenant-General Sir Archibald Alison will hold the chief command on the occasion of the volunteer field-day at Brighton on Easter Monday. At an influential public meeting held at Brighton, presided over by the Mayor, the Town Council was requested to invite the Prince and Princess of Wales and Prince Albert Victor to honour the review with their presence.

In a letter to Sir E. Henderson, Commissioner of Police, Sir W. V. Harcourt states that, by the personal command of the Queen, he has conveyed to Constables Cole and Cox her Majesty's high sense of the courage and devotion which they displayed on the occasion of the outrage at Westminster. The Albert Medal will be conferred on former, and both will receive promotion in the force.

The valuable collection of books in the health section of the Exhibition Library, consisting of about 1500 volumes, has been presented to the Parkes Museum, Margaret-street. The library of this museum already contains a large collection of standard works on sanitary science, and a complete collection of reports of medical officers of health over the whole country. The council have made special arrangements for the admission of students to the library and reading-room.

The Royal Agricultural Society of Ireland has fixed July 1, 2, and 3 as the days for holding the annual show, to be held this year at Londonderry. The Marquis of Hamilton has consented to become president of the society for the year. It was stated that the Irish Society has contributed £50 towards the prize list. Major Barrowes complained of the wealthy London Companies having estates in the north of Ireland not coming forward liberally in aid of the society.

Earl and Lady Spencer left the Viceregal Lodge, Dublin, yesterday week, and took up their abode at Dublin Castle for the usual seven weeks' season. During the stay of his Excellency at the Castle, the utmost precautions will be taken. No one will, after nightfall, be permitted to pass the gates, which are guarded both by policemen and military sentries, without producing a written permit containing the name, abode, and occupation of the holder, who, in addition, must state to what department he is going, and what is his business. Constables will be scattered through the courtyards, and there will be two special constables guarding the gateway which communicates between the lower Castle yard and the upper yard, in which the state apartments are situated.

The prizes and certificates awarded to the students at the West London School of Art during the past year were distributed to the successful competitors yesterday week at the Steinway Hall. Mr. G. A. Thrupp presided, and Mr. Owen Roberts gave away the prizes. After an introductory address from the chairman, Mr. J. I. Rawle, head master, read his special report, which showed that 420 students had attended the school, and the Government grant had amounted to £472. No less than 5766 works had been sent to South Kensington for examination as the result of the twelve months' work; and the school obtained nearly 26 per cent of the entire number of national awards gained by the nineteen metropolitan district schools of art. Several works were sent up to the Health Exhibition, and a silver medal was awarded to the collective exhibit. The first of the three prizes offered by the Goldsmiths' Company for the best design for a toilet set, open to the whole kingdom, had been won by Mr. W. H. Woodall, a student at the school, and a travelling studentship, offered through the Painters' Company, had fallen to Mr. A. C. Weatherstone, who also took a gold medal in the national art competition at South Kensington, and other distinctions.

A special general meeting of the members and friends of the Cabdrivers' Benevolent Association, for the purpose of electing seven annuitants to the benevolent fund, was held yesterday week at St. Andrew's Hall, Newman-street, Oxford-street. The Society, which was founded in 1870, has a fourfold object—namely, to give annuities of £20 to aged cabdrivers unable by infirmity to earn their living; to grant loans and temporary assistance to members; to give legal assistance to members unjustly summoned to the police courts; and to assist the widows and orphans of members. Besides the annuitants then elected, there are twenty-three now receiving the pension. About thirty other deserving cases urgently demand relief, but lack of funds alone prevents the committee from extending to them the benefits of the institution. The candidates for the pension must be aged and incapacitated cabdrivers who for not less than three years have subscribed 5s. a year to the society. There are at present about 1000 benefit members, many of whom, with their wives and daughters, were present at the ballot, and remained for a concert given under the direction of Herr Lehmeyer, in which Mr. Howard Paul, Mr. F. Williams, Mr. Henry, Mrs. Chatteris, Miss Clara Myers, and other ladies and gentlemen took part. During an interval in the concert, Lord Ashley took the chair, and the result of the election of annuitants of the association was announced.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

R M.—Your description of the position is accurate. The key-move of the solution is 1. P to K 3rd, followed, if Black discovers check, by 2. K to R 3rd, and mating next move.

G W A (City Club).—Please accept our cordial thanks for your unfailing courtesy, and our congratulations on the result of the match.

W A (Old Romney).—There is no Pawn wanted in No. 2131. Look at it again.

J G (Kensington).—In No. 2123, after White's move 1. Q to K 6th, should Black play 1. P to R 3rd, the continuation is 2. R to Q B 4th, &c.

Tom (Manchester).—We think your solution of No. 2123 was acknowledged, but have not had time to verify our impression. The theme of No. 2129 is not absolutely new; but, as the theatrical manager observed, "revivals are often more successful than new plays." Thanks for good wishes.

Emmo (Darlington).—We are always glad to hear from you, and shall be pleased to examine and report on the problem referred to.

F H (Munich).—Thanks for the Semaine. You have, of course, seen our No. 2127.

A T L (Ellangowan).—We believe Mr. W. Morgan, Caledonian-road, supplies india-rubber stamps of the chess-board and pieces.

L K H (Pisa).—We cannot afford space to answer your question fully, but you can apply for particulars to the editor of the English Mechanic, York-street, Covent-garden, London. Your problem is still under examination.

Correct Solutions of Problem No. 2128 received from Fluela; of Nos. 2128 and 2129 from Ivan Severjco (Klagenfurt); of No. 2129 from E L G; F J Whitehouse, William Davis; of No. 2130 from Columbus, L K Hirsch (Pisa), Josiah Dupsont, J Veale, George, D W (Aberdeenshire), L Desanges, W F R (Swansea), E L G; of J Jespersen's Problem from Jumbo, D W (Aberdeenshire), Rev W Anderson (Old Romney), H F C (Salisbury), E L G, William Davis; of Lloyd's Problem from S Lowndes, C S Cole, J G Jumbo, L Sharswood, Ernest Sharswood, L L Greenaway, G S Oldfield, E Casella (Paris), W Dewse, R Robinson, N S Harris, W Hillier, R J Vines, H Ward (Norwich), Jupiter Junior, James Pilkington, Ben Nevis, E Elsbury, F Ferris, Jupiter Junior, Carl Stepan, Emmo (Darlington), R Worters (Canterbury), B H C (Salisbury), Rev W Anderson (Old Romney), E L G, and H Blacklock.

Correct Solutions of Problem No. 2131 received from F F Pott, C S Coxe, T S Redmund (Wexford), B R Wood, Otto Fulder (Ghent), L Sharswood, Ernest Sharswood, C Oswald, L L Greenaway, G Fenbrooke, Julia Short, G S Oldfield, A C Hunt, R Jesson, Jupiter Junior, C Darragh, E Casella (Paris), Aaron Harper, R Tweddell, H R C Holdron, W Dewse, Joseph Ainsworth, L Falcon (Antwerp), C W Milsom, N S Harris, J Coad, R Worters (Canterbury), D W Keil, Ben Nevis, A Wigmore, E Louden, E Elsbury, R Ingersoll, W J Knight, F Ferris, F and G Howitt (Norwich), Jupiter Junior, James Pilkington, E L Southwell, E Featherstone, G Huskisson, Carl Stepan, Shadforth, J Alois, Schmucke, Rev. W Anderson (Old Romney), and E L G.

Note.—This problem appears to have proved a hard nut to some of our regular solvers, if we may infer so from the diminished proportions of our list of correct solutions received. One correspondent, only one, states that it is inaccurate, but on re-examination of the position we could discover no error in the construction to warrant the suggestion.

Solution of Problem No. 2129.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Kt to K 2nd	P moves
2. Kt to Kt sq	K takes P
3. R to K Kt 5th (ch)	K moves

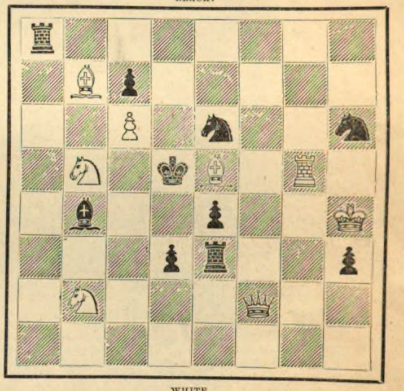
4. K5 mates accordingly.

Solution of Problem No. 2130.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. R to B 6th	B takes R *
2. Kt to B 2nd (ch)	Any move

3. Pawn mates.

* If Black play 1. Kt takes P, White continues with 2. Kt to B 2nd (ch), and 3. R to K 6th, mate. If 1. Kt to R 6th, then 2. Kt to Kt 3rd (ch), and 3. R to K 6th, mate. If 1. K to K 5th, then 2. R to K 6th (ch), and 3. Kt to Kt 3rd, mate. If any other move, then 2. Kt to B 2nd (ch), and 3. P to Q 3rd, mate.



M. Jespersen's Problem.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Kt to R 5th	K takes Kt
2. Kt to B 4th (ch)	K moves
3. Q mates.

Variations obvious.

PROBLEM No. 2133.
By A. E. Studd.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

An interesting Game in which the veteran "Delta" yields the odds of K Kt to another Amateur.

(Remove White's K Kt from the board.)—(King's Bishop's Opening.)

WHITE ("Delta").	BLACK (Mr. J.)	WHITE ("Delta").	BLACK (Mr. J.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	Weak. We should have preferred 12. P to K B 4th.
2. B to B 4th	B to B 4th
3. P to Q Kt 4th		13. P to B 5th	Kt to Kt 4th
In giving large odds something must be risked, but an Evans' Gambit without the King's Knight does not look "good business."		14. P to B 6th	P to K Kt 3rd
		15. P to K 6th	Kt takes P
		16. K to R sq	P to Q 4th
3.	B takes P	17. Kt to R 3rd	B to B 2nd
4. P to Q B 3rd	B to B 4th	18. Q to Q 2nd	P to K R 4th
5. Castles	Kt to K B 3rd	19. Kt to Q B 2nd	Q to Q 3rd
6. P to Q 4th	P takes P	20. P to Kt 3rd	P to R 5th
"Delta" here suggests 6. P to Q 4th for Black, and we agree with him that it would be better than the move in text.		21. B to R 3rd
		Black's short-lived attack is now at an end.
7. P takes P	B to Kt 3rd	21.	P to B 4th
8. P to K 6th	Kt to K 5th	22. P takes P	Kt takes P
9. B to Q 5th	Kt to Kt 4th	23. Q R to K sq (ch)	B to K 3rd
10. P to K B 4th	Kt to K 3rd	24. R takes B (ch)
The movements of this Knight materially assist the development of White's game.		The coup de grâce.
		24.	P takes R
11. B to Kt 2nd	P to Q B 3rd	25. P to B 7th (ch)	K to B sq
12. B to Kt 3rd	P to Q 3rd	26. Q to Q 4th, and Black resigned.

The following two-move problem comes from the Baltimore Sunday News, via the Nationaltidende of Copenhagen. It is the composition of Mr. C. E. Dennis, of Thurlow, Pennsylvania.

White: K at K Kt 6th, Q at K R 7th, R's at Q 6th and Q Kt 8th; B's at Q R 6th and 4th, Kts at K B 7th and K 6th. (Eight pieces.)
Black: K at K 2nd, R at Q Kt 5th, Kt at Q sq, Pawn at Q 2nd. (Four pieces.)

White to play, and mate in two moves.

At the monthly supper of the City of London Chess Club, held on the 20th ult., Dr. Pilkington presided, and was supported by a large gathering of members. Among the toasts of the evening were the health of Dr. Zukertort, the umpire in the late match with the St. George's Chess Club; the health of Mr. H. F. Gastineau, the vice-president; Mr. George Adamson, the honorary secretary; and the chairman. A smoking concert followed the toasts, and the meeting did not break up until close upon midnight.

A match between the Athenæum and North London Clubs was played on the 21st ult., thirteen competitors on each side. It was won by the last-named club with a score of eight games to five.

The handicap tournament of one hundred members of the City of London Chess Club is now over in all the sections except one. The winners are Mr. W. E. Vyse (second class), Mr. B. G. Laws (third class), Mr. J. H. Taylor (third class), Mr. J. H. Clark (sixth class), Mr. L. Stiebel (third class), Mr. M. Klemantaski (fourth class), Mr. H. D. Woolley (fourth class), Mr. G. A. Hooke (second class), Mr. C. P. Griffiths (third class). In the case which is not yet decided, Mr. W. C. Coupland (third class) and Mr. Thomas Durrant (fourth class) have tied for first place.

The annual general meeting of the City of London Chess Club will be held on Wednesday, the 25th inst., when officials for the coming year will be elected.

WAR IN THE DESERT:

A RUNNING FIGHT.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will (dated May 30, 1884) of the Right Hon. Richard George, Earl of Scarborough, late of Sandbeck Park, Tickhill, Yorkshire, who died on Dec. 5 last, was proved on the 24th ult. by the Right Hon. Alfred Frederick George Beresford, Earl of Scarborough, the son, the sole executor, the value of the personal estate amounting to upwards of £90,000. The testator bequeaths to his wife, Frederica Mary Adelisa, Countess of Scarborough, £2000, a carriage and a pair of horses, with the harness and appendages as she may select. All his real and personal estate, subject to the said legacies and charged with the payment of his debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, he gives to his said son.

The will (dated May 7, 1874) of Mr. Edward Carter, late of Thames Bank, Westminster, and of Upton, near Ryde, who died on Nov. 12 last, was proved on Dec. 30 by George Carter Evelegh, Thomas Valentine Smith, and Edward Carter, the son, the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £82,000. The testator bequeaths £500, all his furniture, plate, pictures, linen, books, effects, horses, carriages, live and dead stock, and an annuity of £1200, to his wife, Mrs. Martha Carter; he also gives her a right of residing during widowhood at Upton; legacies amounting to £20,000 each, upon trust, for his daughters, Mary Jouana and Georgina; and £100 each to his executors, Mr. Evelegh and Mr. Smith. The residue of his real and personal estate he leaves, upon trust, for his said son, Edward Carter.

The will (dated Sept. 7, 1881), with four codicils (dated Oct. 3, 1881; Sept. 3, 1882; and Feb. 20 and April 4, 1883), of Mr. George Atty, late of the Middle Temple, and of Redfields, Crondale, in the county of Southampton, who died on March 14 last, was proved on the 3rd ult. by the Rev. Abraham Adlard Welby and Henry Potter, two of the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £57,000. The testator bequeaths £2000 to Eleanor Mary Welby; £3000, upon trust, for Catherine Adeline Atty, for life, and then for Mrs. Harriot Kerr; and some other legacies. His freehold estate, Redfields, he settles on Adlard Welby for life, then on Abraham Adlard Welby for life, and then on Adeline Bertha Welby. The residue of his real and personal estate he leaves, upon trust, for the said Rev. Abraham Adlard Welby and his children.

The will (dated April 15, 1874), with two codicils (both executed in May, 1879), of Mr. James Bischoff, formerly of No. 73, Kensington Gardens-square, but late of No. 44, Sonnenberger Strasse, Wiesbaden, who died on Nov. 21 last, was proved on the 6th ult. by Thomas Wolryche Stansfield and August Gottlieb Meissner, the nephew, two of the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £43,000. The testator leaves £10,000 and all his furniture, plate, jewellery, books, effects, horses and carriages, to his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Bischoff; some shares in the Van Diemen's Land Company, and £4000, to his said nephew, subject to his paying thereout £200 per annum to his wife, for life; and some other legacies. The residue of his real and personal estate is to be held, upon trust, for his wife, for life; and at her death, as to one moiety for the children of his sister Sarah Towgood, and as to the other moiety for the children of his sister Margaret Meissner.

The will (dated Aug. 10, 1882), with a codicil (dated Oct. 15, 1884), of Mr. Joseph Chatto Lamb, late of Ryton House, in the county of Durham, who died on Nov. 6 last, was proved at the district registry, Durham, on Dec. 29 by William Rutherfurd Lamb, the son, one of the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to upwards of £37,000. The testator leaves to his wife, Mrs. Isabella Anderson Lamb, his carriages, carriage horses, wines and consumable stores, and an annuity of £300 (subject to reduction in the event of her marriage again) in addition to the annuity secured to her by their marriage settlement; and to his son, Joseph Chatto Lamb, £4000 and a share in a steam-vessel, also a further sum of £4000 if alive on the death of testator's wife. All his real estate and the residue of the personalty he gives to his said son, William Rutherfurd Lamb.

The will (dated Sept. 14, 1880), with two codicils (dated June 18 and Dec. 18, 1883), of Mr. William Peere Williams-Freeman, formerly of her Majesty's Diplomatic Service, but late of Clapton, Northamptonshire, who died on Sept. 18 last, was proved on Dec. 27 by the Rev. Ernest Pearce Williams-Freeman, the brother, the acting executor, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £35,000. The testator gives to his wife his furniture, linen, china, wines, consumable stores, horses and carriages, £300, and an annuity of £400 during life or widowhood, in addition to the provision made for her by settlement; his diamonds to his wife, for life or widowhood, and then to his son who shall first attain twenty-one; his plate to his son who shall first attain twenty-one; to his sons, Lionel and Ralph, to his daughters, Agnes Caroline and Violet Mary, and also to any after-born children, such sum as with the sums they will receive under settlement will make up their portions to £9000 each; and legacies to executors and others. All his real estate and the residue of the personalty he leaves to his son who shall first attain twenty-one.

The will (dated Oct. 24, 1884) of Mr. Brooke James Greville, late of No. 17, Stanhope-gardens, Cromwell-road, South Kensington, who died on Nov. 22 last, has been proved by Oscar Leslie Stephens, junior, the sole executor, the value of the personal estate amounting to upwards of £34,000. The testator bequeaths £10,000 and all the silver plate bearing his arms, upon trust, for his son, Harry Fulke Greville; and a few other legacies. The residue of his real and personal estate he leaves, upon trust, for his daughter, Catherine Caroline Greville, for life, and then as she shall by will appoint.

The will (dated Feb. 7, 1880) of Mr. John Fisher, late of Dudley, Worcestershire, iron merchant, who died on May 21 last, was proved on the 2nd ult. by Henry Starkey Coldicott, one of the executors, the value of the personal estate amounting to over £24,000. The testator leaves £150 and his residence, with the furniture and effects, and £600 per annum for life, to his wife, Mrs. Catherine Fisher; and an annuity to his sister. There are some specific gifts to his son, Wiliam Fellowes, but no further provision is made for him, he being already amply provided for. The residue of his real and personal estate he gives to his sons Walter Penson and John Herbert, and to his daughters, Elenor Gertrude and Jessie Catherine Louise.

CANDIDATES FOR SCHOLARSHIPS.

The Examiner for the London School Board Scholarships sends to the Journal of Education the following notes of answers:—

1. By what right does the Queen sit on the throne? (a) Because Prince Albert married her, and she was the daughter of the late King, and grand-daughter of Rollo, the Sea King; (b) she was the only daughter of Edward VI., who was her father, son of Edward V.; (c) she won a great battle.

2. Explain the meaning of the Executive, manhood suffrage, and protective duties.—The Executive was the man who was appointed to the duty of hanging a person, or otherwise executing him. Manhood suffrage is the state of suffering to which all mankind are born. The protective duty was the duty of a man to protect another person from receiving harm of any kind.

3. Cromwell was the brother of Lord Wolseley. Prince Rupert was a celebrated experimental chemist. Thomas Wyatt was the man who helped to invent locomotive engines. Washington invented steam-engines; he was a great phylosipher. Warren Hastings was a Viking; he landed in England and tried to take it, but was defeated. Lord Nelson was a brave man who fought in the Battle of Waterloo. Washington fought with Nelson in the Battle of Waterloo, and took his place when he was killed. Nelson's last words were, "Do not throw me overboard unless the King wishes to." Lord Palmerston lived in the reign of William I., and was the chief of the feudal system.

4. An alderman is (a) a man who keeps turtles; (b) a man who cuts down alders; (c) a man who feeds on the people. (N.B.—The above is a Radical answer.) A Conservative is a man who looks down on Liberals; a Liberal is a man who spends the people's money freely. Mr. Gladstone is a Liberal and head of the House of Commons; Lord Beaconsfield is a Conservative and head of the House of Lords. An antiquary is an enemy of fishes (Latin anti, against, and aqua, water).

5. Explain "All the world's a stage."—The world is a flat surface, like a stage for people to walk on. The seasons are caused by the sun going round the moon.

6. Explain "The child is father of the man."—(a) The law is such that the father can't do nothing to his own boy; (b) everyone knows, or nearly everyone, that Adam is our common parent, but he couldn't have been such if he had not been a child first, though we're not told so in the Bible.

7. An essay on "Your favourite author."—I cannot say which I like best out of Shakspeare or Longfellow; "As You Like It" enchants me, but "Excelsior" is supreme.

At the eleventh annual meeting of the Hospital Saturday Fund, held in the Memorial Hall, Farringdon-street—Mr. S. Morley, M.P., in the chair—the chairman remarked that there was a debt of £2000 on St. Margaret's Home, and if £1600 were raised within the year he would add £400 to pay it off. It was stated that the awards from the fund had been £9000 last year, and it was agreed that the collection in the streets ought to be on the third Saturday in July.

Yesterday week the annual meeting of the Association for the Better Endowment of the University of Edinburgh was held in the Physicians' Hall, Edinburgh—the Lord Provost presiding. The report stated that there was a balance of the ordinary funds of the association applicable to permanent foundations amounting to £1553. Since the last annual report, various new foundations in the University had been intimated. The report gave a statement of the income and expenditure of the General University Fund for the last year for which such information was available, 1882-3, from which it appeared that the income from matriculation and graduation fees was £8749 14s. 6d., and from other sources £4242 14s. 1d., making a total of £12,992 8s. 7d. The ordinary expenditure amounted to £11,052, but, with an additional contribution of £2000 towards the cost of the new buildings, there was a surplus expenditure of £59 14s. The Lord Provost moved the adoption of the report. The Rev. Dr. Phin seconded the motion, and, referring to the appointment of Sir William Muir to the Principalship, said he had no doubt that under the new Principal the University would go on increasing in prosperity and popularity. The report was adopted.

THROUGH MASAI LAND.

The recent achievements of Mr. Joseph Thomson in exploring that part of East Africa between Mombasa, on the seacoast north of Zanzibar, and Lake Victoria Nyanza, are in some degree known to our readers. We published, not long since, a few Illustrations, from photographs, with which Mr. Thomson had furnished us, of Mount Kilimanjaro in the south of that region, Mount Kenia in the north, and the habitations and personal appearance of the Masai people. A volume full of interesting narrative and description, entitled Through Masai Land, is now produced by Messrs. Sampson Low and Co., in which Mr. Thomson conducts us over the whole of that new ground, and makes a valuable addition to geographical knowledge. The fatigues and perils he endured in this expedition, from March, 1883, to the end of May, 1884, were as severe as those experienced by travellers of great renown in Central Africa. He is still a comparatively young man, having been scarcely of age in 1877, when he accompanied the late Mr. Keith Johnston to the Lake Nyassa region, and soon took command of the expedition upon the lamented death of its first leader. The Royal Geographical Society may expect much good future work from Mr. Thomson; and we hope for some more books, equal in value to those he has given us on the "Central African Lakes," and on "Masai Land." The country north-west of Mombasa, which lies four degrees south of the Equator, had been entered by Dr. Krapf and his colleague Rebmann, German missionaries, by the Baron von der Decken and the Rev. C. New, but they had not gone much farther than Mount Kilimanjaro, which is certainly a magnificent feature of Eastern Africa. The great obstacle to getting northward seems to have been the savage and inhospitable temper of the Masai, who occupy a strip of inland country three or four hundred miles long and ninety miles wide, its southern portion consisting of desert plains, with many volcanic peaks of great altitude; its northern part, a beautiful plateau, 6000 ft. high, inclosed between two parallel mountain ranges, copiously watered and richly wooded, especially on the east side beneath the Aberdare range, while Lakes Naivasho, Nakura, and Baringo, lie in the trough below the great western escarpment. Mr. Thomson is the actual discoverer of these places; and his explorations were thence directed westward, through Masawa, to the north-west corner of the great Equatorial Lake Victoria Nyanza, the probable source of the Nile, among the Kavirondo tribes; and eastward into Lykipia, between the Aberdare range and Mount Kenia, a country of forests and swamps, and of natives whose disposition is extremely "nasty" to deal with. He had difficulty enough in getting out of that country, and the patience, tact, and discretion with which he managed to escape any violent conflict, and to guard against murderous treachery, deserve much commendation. His stores of goods for the purchase of food and accommodation became exhausted; and in December, when he turned back from the shores of Victoria Nyanza, he was attacked by fever, which was aggravated by exposure and fatigue in the homeward journey, and complicated with dysentery, till it brought him very near death. His only European companion, an intelligent Maltese sailor named James Martin, rendered all possible help and comfort; he had ten guards from Zanzibar, and a hundred luggage-porters or general servants, with two donkeys for riding, but travelled mostly on foot. Hunting adventures, including such large game as the elephant and the buffalo, were tolerably frequent, and Mr. Thomson was once tossed by a buffalo, whose horn inflicted a big wound in his thigh. The variety and exciting character of his personal experiences have much romantic interest; but his clear and vivid descriptions of the physical geography of a region previously quite unknown, and of savage tribes differing in many of their customs from other East African nations, are of greater importance. The volume is furnished with a route map, a geological map, and numerous illustrations, from photographs and sketches, well engraved on wood.

At a meeting of the London School Board recently held the Finance Committee reported that £1,160,138 would be required to meet estimated liabilities to March next year. This requires a rate of a little over ninepence in the pound.

The new artisans' and labourers' dwellings erected on the Petticoat-square site, near East Aldgate station, were opened last week by Mr. George R. Innes, chairman of the Commissioners of Sewers. The new buildings will afford a large amount of accommodation for artisans, &c., and the rents are to be fixed at as low rates as possible.

Miss Rye's next party of children for Canada will leave England in March; and she has room in her training-home for a few little destitute girls, between the ages of eight and thirteen, whose friends are willing for them to emigrate. Applications to be made at once to Miss Lizzie Still, Avenue House, High-street, Peckham, London.

The City Corporation have voted £525 for the relief of the sufferers by the earthquakes in Spain; £105 for the widows and families of the crew of the steam-ship Pochard, lately wrecked off Holyhead; and granted a superannuation allowance of £450 a year to Lieutenant-Colonel H. S. Bowman, Chief Superintendent of the City Police, who retired after fifteen years' service.

FINE GOLD JEWELLERY

at Manufacturers' Wholesale Prices, saving from 25 to 50 per cent.

DIAMOND RINGS.
£10 to £100.

FINE ORIENTAL PEARL BRACELET,
in best Morocco Case, £12.

DIAMOND RINGS.
£10 to £50.

The Stock of Rings, Brooches, Bracelets, Necklets, Earrings, &c., is the largest and choicest in London, and contains new and artistic designs not to be obtained elsewhere, an inspection of which is politely invited. Plain figures. Cash prices. Goods forwarded for selection and competition. Awarded Six First-Class Medals and the Cross of the Legion of Honour. ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE Post-Free to all Parts of the World.

THE MANUFACTURING

GOLDSMITHS' & SILVERSMITHS' COMPY.

SHOW-ROOMS:

112, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, W.

MANUFACTORY: CLERKENWELL.

Accommodates 500 Guests.

THE LANGHAM

PORTLAND-PLACE, W.

This cosmopolitan HOTEL has been thoroughly redecorated, and combines every improvement and luxury. Sumptuous Apartments for Private Dinners and Wedding Breakfasts. Recherché Table-d'hôte (open to non-residents) from 6.30 to 8 p.m.

Bird's Custard Powder

Richest Custard! Without Eggs!! Half the Cost and Trouble!!! Choice—Delicious—a Great Luxury. See that you get BIRD'S.

6d. BOXES. 1s. BOXES.

POST-FREE.
"PASTRY & SWEETS,"
Containing Practical Hints and Recipes for Tasty Dishes for the Dinner and Supper Table.

Address—ALFRED BIRD & SONS, DEVONSHIRE WORKS, BIRMINGHAM.

SPENCE & CO.,

HAVE THE 76, 77, 78, 79, St. Paul's-churchyard, London, E.C.

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK OF EVENING AND BALL DRESSES,

at Wholesale City Prices.

ILLUSTRATIONS SENT POST-FREE.

N.B.—Orders Executed in Three Days.

SPENCE and CO. have received the LATEST NOVELTIES from Paris and Berlin in MANTLES, WALKING, EVENING, and DINNER COSTUMES. Copies made at Wholesale City Prices.

SPENCE and CO. have prepared an Illustrated Cash Price-List for the Season, which they trust Ladies will send for. Sent Post-Free.

In ordering, please state length of skirt and size of waist.

THE BELLE COSTUME.

Fully Trimmed Chantilly or Spanish Lace. Skirt from Stock or to order in Cream, White, or Black, with Lace to trim Bodice. Price 2 guineas.

Parcels over £1 Value sent Carriage Paid throughout the United Kingdom.

JAS. SPENCE & CO.,

ST. PAUL'S-CHURCHYARD, E.C.

CHAPMAN and CO.'S

FIRST GREAT CLEARANCE SALE.

STOCK VALUED BY CITY ACCOUNTANT AT £100,000.

BLACK SILKS.

WONDERFUL BLACK GROS GRAIN, 1s. 9d. per yard.
RICH LYONS CORD GROS GRAIN, 2s. 6d. per yard.
12 yards BLACK SILK, 35s. 9d. SPECIAL.
12 " " " 42s. do.

BLACK GOWN SATINS.

WONDERFUL BLACK GOWN SATIN, 1s. 9d. per yard.
SUPERIOR BLACK GOWN SATIN, 2s. 6d. per yard.
All other qualities greatly reduced.

ALL SHADES IN COLOURED SILKS AND SATINS.

COLOURED SURAH, 13½d. per yard.
COLOURED STRIPED SATINS, 1s. 0½d. per yard.
COLOURED SATINS, 1s. 6d. per yard.
COLOURED OTTOMAN, 1s. 11d. and 2s. 11½d. per yard, half value.
SHOT MERVEILLEUX, 2s. 7½d. per yard.

BLACK AND COLOURED BROCADED SILKS.

HANDSOME BLACK BROCADED SATIN, 1s. per yard.
COLOURED BROCADED SILKS, 1s. per yard.
COLOURED BROCADED SATINS, 1s. 11½d per yard.
COLOURED FLORAL SILKS, 2s. 11½d. per yard.
All better qualities equally reduced.

COLOURED VELVETS AND PLUSHES.

COLOURED SILK GOWN VELVET, 22 in., 3s. 6d. per yard, Special Half Value.
COLOURED PLUSHES, 4s. 6d. per yard.
BROCADED VELVET, 3s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. per yard.

BLACK SILK VELVET AND PLUSHES.

BLACK SILK VELVET, 1s. 9d., 2s. 3d., 2s. 11d., to 10s. 6d. per yard.
BLACK SILK PLUSH, 4s. 6d. per yard.

BLACK VELVETEENS.

BLACK NONPAREIL.

FAST PILE VELVETEEN, 1s. 9½d., 2s. 4½d., 2s. 9½d., 3s. 4½d., and 3s. 9d. per yard.

COLOURED VELVETEENS.

CHAPMAN'S SPECIAL.

EVERY SHADE, 1s. 9½d. and 2s. 3½d. per yard.

NONPAREIL AND LOUIS.

ALL COLOURS, 2s. 9d. and 3s. 6d. per yard.

DRESS SALE.

Among these Goods may be found Dresses for all occasions, at every conceivable price, from 6d. to 6s. per yard.

10,000 Dresses, 12 yards for . . . 5s. 11d.
10,000 " " . . . 6s. 11d.
15,000 " " . . . 7s. 11d.
5,000 " " . . . 9s. 11d.
All Shades Etoffe de Laine, per yard . 1s. 0½d.
" Glencarse Tweeds . . 1s. 2½d.
French Cashmeres, all shades, per yard . 1s. 9d.
" Merinos " " . . 1s. 9d.
Anglo-Indian Cashmere " " . . 2s. 3d.
Grenadines and all Evening Dress Goods greatly reduced; Pompon de Cairo (for Evening Wear), reduced from 2s. 11½d. to 1s. 11½d. per yard, special; also all the Latest Novelties much under price.
BUNDLES OF DRESS REMNANTS, 50 yards for 25s.

WASHING DRESS SALE.

An Assortment much too large to specify, marvellously cheap.

PATTERNS OF ALL GOODS SENT POST-FREE TO ANY PART OF THE WORLD.

CHAPMAN and CO., Notting-hill, W.

HAGAN'S MAGNOLIA BALM

FOR THE COMPLEXION

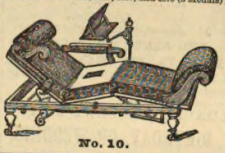
gives a pure and blooming complexion, restores and preserves youthful beauty. Its effects are gradual, natural, and perfect. It removes redness, blotches, pimples, tan, sunburn, and freckles, and makes a lady of thirty appear but twenty. The Magnolia Balm makes the skin smooth and pearly, and imparts a fresh appearance to the countenance. Hagan's Magnolia Balm has been established nearly forty years. Hagan's Magnolia Balm can be obtained of all Chemists, Perfumers, and stores, or sent to any address on receipt of 3s. 6d.

DEPOT, 7, SNOW-HILL, LONDON, E.C.

JOHN WARD {246 & 247, TOTTENHAM-COURT-ROAD (LATE OF SAVILLE HOUSE, LEICESTER-SQUARE), LONDON.

INVALID CHAIR MANUFACTURER TO THE QUEEN AND ROYAL FAMILY.

The largest assortment in the world of INVALID CHAIRS, SPINAL COUCHES, BATH CHAIRS, BED TABLES, and INVALID FURNITURE, &c., for Sale or Hire.



Prize Medals—London, 1851 and 1862; Paris, 1855, 1867, and 1878 (3 Medals); Vienna, 1873 (2 Medals); Dublin, 1865.

Established 150 years.

Price Catalogues, Post-free.

No. 12.

No. 10.

No. 1.

No. 14.

PURE CALICO!!!

In Lengths of 12, 24, 36, or 48 yards AT MILL PRICES.
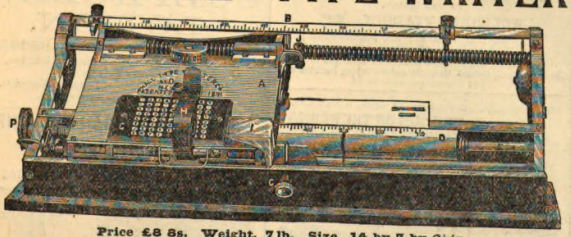
The Best and Cheapest in the World.
Entirely Free from Adulteration!
Only the Purest and Best Class of Cotton used in the Manufacture! A perfectly Pure Bleach.

A PLEASURE TO SEW! A LUXURY TO WEAR! EASY TO WASH!

Copy of Analysis of the Cloths by the eminent Analytical Chemists, Crace-Calvert and Thomson, Royal Institution, Manchester, printed on each Pattern Book.
Qualities to suit every use for Ladies' or Gentlemen's Wear.
Prices from 4½d. to 10½d. per yard of 36 inches wide.
Patterns and Price-List sent post-free to any address.
Write at once to the



REGISTERED TRADE MARK.

BRADFORD MANUFACTURING COMPANY, BRADFORD,

Please mention this Paper. YORKSHIRE.

THE "HALL" TYPE-WRITER.

Price £8 8s. Weight, 7 lb. Size, 14 by 7 by 2½ in.

The only portable and complete machine extant. Unique in its simplicity.

The "Times" referred to this Machine on March 11, 1881, as follows:—"A new TYPE-WRITER, both cheap and portable. . . . A beautiful little machine. . . . Fitted with capital and small letters, stops, numerals, &c. . . . . The manner in which the machine is finished seems to leave nothing to be desired."

The following Testimonials, amongst many others, have been received:—

From W. H. GLENNY, Esq., Madras:—"I have much pleasure in authorising the publication of my testimony to the excellence of the 'HALL' TYPE-WRITER. . . . . Of such thoroughly honest workmanship that the dry heat of the Deccan hot weather, and the dampness of the rainy season, have not had the slightest effect on itself or its working. I have carried mine about without special precautions, and have used it in tents in all weathers. . . . . I would not be without my Type-Writer for three times its cost."

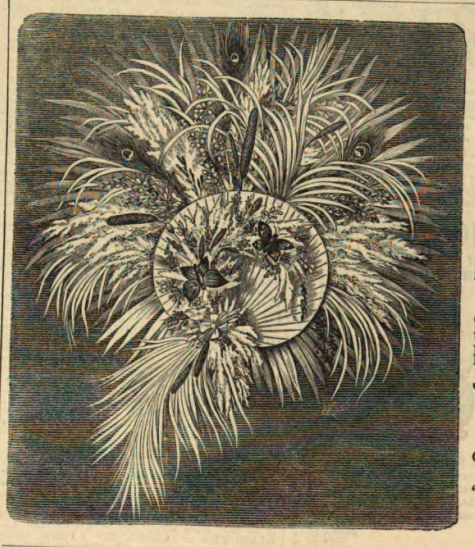
From EDWARD YOUNG, Esq., Hounslow:—"I have now been using the 'HALL' TYPE-WRITER for several months, frequently writing with it for several hours a day. To say that its value and usefulness equal my expectations, is to say little, for it far exceeds them."

From the Hon. F. L. WOOD, Burton-on-Trent:—"I am very much pleased with the machine, which fully bears out all that was said of it in the prospectus."

PROSPECTUSES, TESTIMONIALS, AND ALL PARTICULARS POST-FREE FROM

WITHERBY and CO., 74, Cornhill; and 325A, High Holborn, London.

THE GOLD MEDAL OF THE INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION, LONDON, 1884, HAS BEEN AWARDED FOR



Benger's Self-Digestive Food

For INFANTS, CHILDREN, and INVALIDS.

This delicious and highly nutritive Food is distinguished from all others by the ease with which it can be digested and assimilated. Having once tried it, parents will never return to the cheap and inferior foods, which, by irritating the digestive organs, often produce convulsions and other serious maladies.

Reports by the "Lancet" and other leading Medical Journals accompany each Tin.

BENGER'S FOOD is sold by leading Chemists, &c., in Tins, at 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., & 5s., or may be had direct from the Manufacturers, MOTTERSHEAD and CO. (S. PAINE and F. B. BENGER), MANCHESTER.

MAKART'S WALL DECORATION, made of white Palm-Leaves and Tropical Grasses, natural colour, better for ornament than pictures.

Easily fixed.

Sizes:

1. 26 in. each 12s. 6d.
2. 33 in. " 20s. 0d.
3. 46 in. " 25s. 0d.

Freight and package free.

The measurement is taken from point to point of the Latania leaf.

J. C. SCHMIDT,
FLORIST,
AT ERFURT,
GERMANY.
Cable Address:
"FLOWERSMITH."
To dealers, Special Prices.

LADY'S PICTORIAL.

AN ILLUSTRATED RECORD OF ALL NEWS INTERESTING TO LADIES.
SIXPENCE, EVERY THURSDAY.
Offices: 172, Strand, W.C.

AVERY & CO.

ARTISTIC WINDOW-BLINDS.

SHOW-ROOMS:

81, GREAT PORTLAND-STREET, W.

Where may be seen a splendid assortment of Blinds of every description, including the much admired

NEW EMPIRE BLINDS,

As supplied to Her Majesty.

Plain or Decorated,

NEW AND BEAUTIFUL DESIGNS.

FESTOON BLINDS,

In Silk and Sateen, &c.

ART PRINT BLINDS,
LEADED GLASS BLINDS,
NIPON DWARF BLINDS,
OUTSIDE SUN-BLINDS,
BALCONY AWNINGS, &c.

LARGEST SHOW IN LONDON.

SAMPLES AND PRICE-LISTS POST-FREE.

THE OXYGEN-GIVING DISINFECTANT,

HARTIN'S CRIMSON SALT

In addition to this well-known and highly-valued Preparation, a Shilling Bottle of which makes 200 Gallons of Crimson Fluid, the public can now obtain

HARTIN'S CRIMSON SALT DISINFECTING POWDER, a perfectly soluble, non-poisonous, non-corrosive, ODOURLESS, and most powerful Disinfectant, Deodoriser, and Antiseptic, ready for instant use, by sprinkling, upon all that is offensive or dangerous.

Geo. R. Tweedie, Esq., F.C.S., says:—"The results of an extended and elaborate series of carefully conducted experiments convince me that Hartin's Patent Crimson Salt Disinfecting Powder is a most reliable, economical, thorough, and safe disinfectant."

Sold by Chemists everywhere in Tins.

Prices, 1s. and 2s.

Wholesale by HARTIN'S CRIMSON SALT Co., Ltd., Worcester.

ROWLANDS'

MACASSAR OIL

PRESERVES THE HAIR, and can be had in a golden colour. Buy only ROWLANDS', of 20, Hatton-garden, London.

Sizes, 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d.

SILVER MEDAL, INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION, 1884.

HIGHEST AWARD, International Medical and Sanitary Exhibition, 1881.

SILVER MEDAL (Highest Award), National Health Society, 1883.

A TURKISH BATH IN YOUR OWN ROOM

WITH PERFECT SAFETY.

TO THE STALWART, A LUXURY

AFTER HUNTING,
DRIVING, SHOOTING,
FISHING, RIDING,

OR ANY EXCESSIVE FATIGUE.

Can be used for Hot Air or Vapour.

APPARATUS FOR USE UNDER CHAIR, WITH BEST CHAIR TINNED IRON SUPPORTS, IN BOX, 30s.

TO THE INVALID, A NECESSITY

FOR Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Eczema, and Skin, Liver, and Kidney Affections.

Apparatus for Bed in Box, with Pair of Wicker Frames, 45s.

The Bath combined, for Bed and Chair, 70s.

"Will be found a luxury as well as a valuable remedial resource."—Sanitary Record.

The Lancet says:—"This instrument is very complete and portable; it is cheap, and it acts promptly."

SOLE INVENTORS AND MANUFACTURERS,

JAMES ALLEN & SON,

20 and 21, Marylebone-lane, London, W.

Also makers of Bronchitis Kettles, Invalids' Baths, Bed-Baths, Bed-Pans, Nursery Baths, Infants' and Invalids' Food Warmers.

Illustrated Catalogue post-free for three stamps.

CIRIO & CO.,

SPECIALLY APPOINTED AGENTS TO THE PRINCIPAL WINE-GROWERS OF ITALY.

EQUAL TO BEST CHAMPAGNE. 30s. to 36s. per Doz.

DRY and OLD. Best Marks. From 21s. per Doz.

24s per Doz.

Two Gallons.

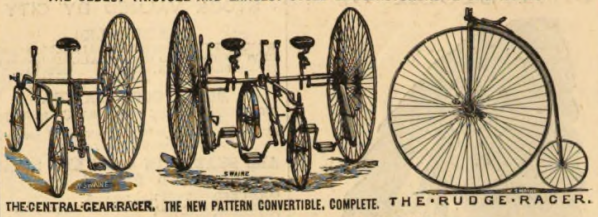
20 PRIZE MEDALS.

Best Tinned Peas, Haricots, Tomatoes, Peaches, &c.

11 and 13, SOUTHWARK-ST. London; and Turin.

CHOICE RED and WHITE. 25s. per Doz.

EQUAL to BURGUNDY, Special. 21s. to 24s.



TOWLE'S PENNYROYAL and STEEL PILLS for FEMALES. Sold in Boxes, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d., of all Chemists. Sent anywhere on receipt of 15 or 34 stamps by the maker, E. T. TOWLE, Chemist, Nottingham.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT. The Pills purify the blood, correct all disorders of the liver, stomach, kidneys, and bowels. The Ointment is unrivalled in the cure of bad legs, old wounds, gout, and rheumatism.

IMPORTANT TO INTENDING "CYCLE" PURCHASERS.

D. RUDGE & CO., Show-Rooms and Works, COVENTRY.

THE OLDEST TRICYCLE AND LARGEST CYCLE MANUFACTURERS IN THE WORLD.

THE CENTRAL GEAR RACER. THE NEW PATTERN CONVERTIBLE. COMPLETE. THE RUDGE RACER.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE-LISTS FREE ON APPLICATION.

DEPOTS:—London, 12, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.; 443, Oxford-street, W.; Manchester, 160-4, Deansgate; Birmingham, 4, Livery-street; Liverpool, 101, Bold-street; Glasgow, 241, Sauchiehall-street; Edinburgh, 20, Hanover-street; Belfast, 49, Royal Avenue.

ADAMS'S FURNITURE POLISH.

THE OLDEST AND BEST.—"THE QUEEN"

(the Lady's Newspaper) says:—"Having made a fresh trial of its virtues, after considerable experience with other compounds of the same nature, we feel no hesitation in recommending its use to all housewives who are in any difficulty in polishing their furniture."—Dec. 22, 1883.

SOLD BY GROCERS, CHEMISTS IRONMONGERS, CABINET MAKERS, BRUSH DEALERS, OILMEN, &c.

Manufactory: VICTORIA PARK, SHEFFIELD.

CAUTION.—See that the Name is on the Bottle, and Beware of cheap imitations.

IZOD'S CORSETS

ARE THE BEST.

TRADE MARK

Suited to all Figures.
Worn in all Climates.

The Largest Manufacturers in the World.

Ask for Izod's make, take no other; to be had of all Drapers and Ladies' Outfitters.

Trade Mark,

Anchor, on every Corset and Box.

WRITE FOR OUR SHEET OF DRAWINGS.

E. IZOD & SON,

Patentees and Manufacturers, 30, Milk-street, London.

Manufactory: Landport, Hants.

A VALUABLE PRESENT FOR HOLIDAY, BIRTHDAY, OR WEDDING.

GOOD LUCK RING

RUBY
EMERALD
GARNET
AMETHYST
RUBY DIAMOND
SAPPHIRE

REGISTERED.

These handsome SOLID RINGS are made of 18-CARAT ROLLED GOLD, and will make BEAUTIFUL and VALUABLE gifts to a Lady or Gentleman. In order to secure NEW CUSTOMERS for our old and reliable firm, we will forward, post-paid, to any address in the United Kingdom, one of our HEAVY 18-CARAT ROLLED GOLD RINGS, mounted with PRECIOUS STONES, on receipt of ONLY 4s. each, post-free, providing YOU CUT THIS ADVERTISEMENT OUT, and post it to us with your order. We have named this Beautiful Ring the HORSE-SHOE or GOOD LUCK RING. Each ring is set with one each of the following precious stones, set in the order named:

1st R UBY.
2nd E MERALD,
3rd G ARNET,
4th A METHYST,
5th R UBY,
6th D IAMOND,
7th S APPHIRE.

And you will notice that, by taking the first letter to spell each of the stones, you make an ACROSTIC, spelling the word REGARDS. The stones we use are so perfect that they will deceive any one but an expert, and they will pronounce them genuine in many cases. We also mount the Good Luck and Jewel Cluster Rings with seven of our justly celebrated Brazilian Diamonds, which are the best imitation of the REAL DIAMONDS ever discovered. We thus offer you two of the handsomest rings ever made to choose from. At the same time we send your ring, we will post you a bundle of our Catalogues. We feel sure that you will be so highly pleased with the ring, and that it will give such entire satisfaction, that you will become a regular customer of our house, and will oblige us by distributing the Catalogues sent you among your friends, at the same time showing them the beautiful ring you have obtained from us. You can in this way assist us in selling other goods of STANDARD QUALITY, which we manufacture from new and original designs, and guarantee to give satisfaction. ON OUR FUTURE SALES WE MAKE OUR PROFIT. Remember, the ring we send you will be HEAVY 18-CARAT ROLLED GOLD, and this unprecedented offer is made only to introduce our Goods and Catalogues in your neighbourhood. Our firm is OLD ESTABLISHED AND RELIABLE, manufacturing FIRST-CLASS GOODS from the PRECIOUS METALS. We can only send out a LIMITED NUMBER of rings at price named, and, to protect ourselves from jewellers and speculators ordering in large quantities, require you to cut this out and send to us, that we may know you are ENTITLED TO THE BENEFITS OF THIS OFFER. Under no circumstances will we send MORE THAN TWO RINGS to any person sending 4s. for each, with this Advertisement; and should you order more than that number, all your money will be returned, and we will hold the advertisement. But after you order, and other rings are desired, we will furnish them at our regular price. If you wish one ring, send this advertisement and 4s. If you wish two rings, send this advertisement and 8s. If more than two are desired you must pay full prices. To ascertain the size ring you wear, cut a piece of string so it will just meet around your finger, and send it to us. State which ring is wanted, the ALL DIAMONDS or ASSORTED STONE setting. Should you not wish either the above described rings, we will furnish the same set with either Coral, Pearls, or Turquoise, at same prices. CUT THIS ADVERTISEMENT OUT and send to us with amount. Illustrated Catalogues post-free. This advertisement will not appear again. Satisfaction guaranteed. Remit by Registered Letter, P.O.O., or stamps. Address—

H. C. WILKINSON & CO., Limited,

135, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, W.

NICHOLSON'S.

PATTERNS FREE.

THE DUCIE COSTUME.

THE RAMPOOR CASHMERE.

A charming Fabric in 40 new shades, 14 yards for 1 guinea, or 1s. 6d. per yard.

The Rampoor Chuddah Cashmere wool has a world-wide reputation for its exquisite softness and delicacy of texture.

Messrs. NICHOLSON have succeeded in producing a most beautiful dress fabric from this choice material, which surpasses all others for the present season. For further particulars see the principal Fashion Journals.

Patterns of all the Newest Dress Productions, and Illustrated Sheets of Newest Paris and Berlin Fashions in Mantles, Jerseys, and Costumes, post-free.

Prettily braided, with four yards for bodice, in Black, Brown, Grenat, Elephant, Myrtle, and Navy Foule Serges, or in Mixed Tweeds and Beiges, 18s. 9d. same, with bodice made as per illustration, 25s. 6d. Sucona Hat, to match costume, 6s. 11d.

D. NICHOLSON & CO.,

50 to 53, ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD, LONDON, E.C.

NEGRETTI & ZAMBRA'S NEW-YEAR'S GIFTS.

USEFUL AND ORNAMENTAL.

LADIES' IVORY OPERA GLASS,

gilt mounted, with engraved monogram. Prices from £1 12s. 6d.

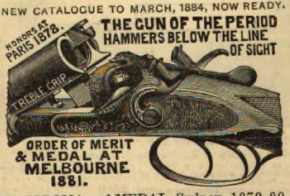
GENTLEMEN'S LEATHER-COVERED FIELD GLASS,

with monogram in pierced silver. Price from £2 15s.

Opera-Glasses mounted in Aluminium, Tortoise-shell, or Pearl. Barometers, Binoculars, Microscopes, Telescopes, Magic Lanterns, &c., of every description.

Illustrated Price-Lists posted free to all parts of the world.

NEGRETTI & ZAMBRA,



SCIENTIFIC INSTRUMENT MAKERS AND OPTICIANS TO THE QUEEN,

HOLBORN VIADUCT, E.C.

BRANCHES: 45, Cornhill; 122, Regent-street; Photographic Studio, Crystal Palace.

Negretti and Zambra's Illustrated Catalogue of Meteorological, Optical, Nautical, and Surveying Instruments, 1200 Engravings, price 5s. 6d.

NEW CATALOGUE TO MARCH, 1884, NOW READY.

DIPLOMA and MEDAL, Sydney, 1879-80.

This gun, wherever shown, has always taken honours. Why buy from Dealers when you can buy at half the price from the maker? Any gun sent on approval on receipt of P.O.O., and remittance returned if on receipt of gun it is not satisfactory. Target trial allowed. A choice of 2000 guns, rifles, and revolvers, embracing every novelty in the trade. B.-L. Guns, from 50s. to 50 guineas; B.-L. Revolvers, from 6s. 6d. to 100s. Send six stamps for Catalogue and Illustrated Sheets to G. E. LEWIS, Gun Maker, Birmingham. Established 1850. Largest Stock in the World. Calcutta Exhibition, 1883-4. The Gun of the Period has again taken honours. The exhibit was admittedly the most comprehensive there.

THE "CITY" DINNER SERVICE.

(Dark Nocturne—shades of black.)

Cottage Set, pattern as above (50 pieces), 13s. 6d.

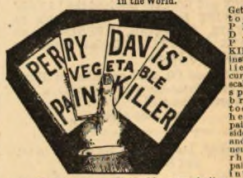
Full Set, for Twelve persons (108 pieces), 35s.

If for the country, 1s. 3d. and 2s. 6d. extra for package.

Other patterns in the best taste and in various colours, at

16s. 6d. ... 21s. 0d. ... 25s. ... (50 pieces).
42s. 0d. ... 52s. 6d. ... 63s. ... (108 pieces).

ALFRED B. PEARCE,



39, LUDGATE-HILL, E.C. (Established 1760.)

Catalogue (with Nine Furnishing Estimates) on application.

GET A BOTTLE TO-DAY OF

PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER.

The Oldest, Best, and most widely known Family Medicine in the World.

Get a Bottle to-day of PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER.—It instantly relieves and cures severe scalds, burns, sprains, bruises, toothache, headache, pains in the side, joints, and limbs, all neuralgic and rheumatic pains. Taken internally, cures at once coughs, sudden colds, cramp in the stomach, colic, diarrhœa, and cholera infantum. PAIN KILLER is the greatest household medicine, and affords relief not to be obtained by other remedies. It dispels the agony of pain, gives REST, SLEEP, COMFORT, QUIETUDE. It supersedes the use of dangerous Narcotic and Anodyne Remedies. Any Chemist can supply it, at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. per Bottle.

Depôt, 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

"ADVICE TO DYSPEPTICS."

Symptoms of Dyspepsia and Indigestion, with Special Advice as to Diet.

"This little pamphlet appeals forcibly to those who have allowed the palate to decide everything for them, and have paid the inevitable penalty of their folly."—Globe.

Sent for One Stamp.

J. M. RICHARDS, Publisher, 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.

SAMPLES AND PRICE-LISTS POST-FREE.

CAMBRIC By Appointments to the Queen and Crown Princess of Germany.

Children's, 1/8 } per
Ladies', 2/11 } doz.
Gents', 3/11 }

Hemstitched.
Ladies' .. 6/6 per
Gents' .. 7/6 doz.
All Pure Flax.

ROBINSON and CLEAVER, BELFAST.

POCKET HANDKERCHIEFS.

"The Cambrics of Robinson and Cleaver have a world-wide fame."—Queen.

CIGARS DE JOY

ASTHMA, COUGH, BRONCHITIS

CAUTION.—To guard against fraudulent imitations, see that each Box bears the name of "WILCOX and CO., 239, Oxford-street, London."

One of these Cigarettes gives immediate relief in the worst attack of Asthma, Cough, Bronchitis, and Shortness of Breath. Persons who suffer at night with coughing, phlegm, and short breath find them invaluable, as they instantly check the spasm, promote sleep, and allow the patient to pass a good night. Are perfectly harmless, and may be smoked by ladies, children, and most delicate patients.

Price 2s. 6d. per Box of 35, post-free; and of all Chemists.

LE PAGE'S LIQUID GLUE

MENDS EVERYTHING.

WOOD, GLASS, CHINA, LEATHER, FURNITURE, METALS, &c.

Strongest and Most Elastic Glue on Earth. Absolutely Unbreakable and Inseparable!!—No Heating!—No Preparation!—Always Ready!—Always Liquid!!!—Mends China, Glass, Wood, Leather, Patches on Shoes, Rubber, Crockery, Billiard Cue Tips and Cloth, Ornaments, Stone, Furniture, Jewellery, and Book Backs, with Everlasting Tenacity!!—Sold Everywhere. Trial Bottles, 6d. and 1s. RICHARDS, TERRY, and Co., 46, Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C., Sole Agents.

SULPHOLINE LOTION.

The Cure for Skin Diseases.

In a few days Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, entirely fade away.

Beautifully Fragrant. Perfectly Harmless.

Bottles, 2s. 9d. Sold Everywhere.

DOG KENNEL RAILING, WIRE NETTING, &c.

TREE-GUARDS.

Catalogues free. Please name this Paper.

BAYLISS, JONES, & BAYLISS,

WOLVERHAMPTON,

And 3, CROOKED-LANE, KING WILLIAM-STREET, E.C.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by INGRAM BROTHERS, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1885.

THE RELIEF OF KHARTOUM: TESTING THE STEADINESS OF CAMELS—19th HUSSARS CHARGING BY A CORNER OF THE CAMEL SQUARE.
SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST, MR. MELTON PRIOR.

GEORGE ELIOT.*

It is evident that George Eliot, modest and diffident though she was, anticipated for her novels a permanent place in literature; and no critic capable of forming a judgment can doubt that she was justified in doing so. Her heart is in her books, and the "precious life-blood" that flows through them gives a fresh and larger life to the reader. It has been said that the author's personal character may be read in such tales as "Adam Bede" and "The Mill on the Floss," and to some extent this is true; but a womanly nature like that of George Eliot is not to be read alone in works of imagination, and there is a reasonable curiosity to know how she lived her own life, what she thought, what she did, what she suffered, how she took her part in the common affairs of every day, and whether there was a harmony between the imaginative life of the novelist and the prosaic life of the woman.

We may say at once that this curiosity is not satisfied by Mr. Cross. Interesting as the three volumes of George Eliot's biography are, the reader is conscious that this is far from being a full representation of character and circumstances. Perhaps it could not have been otherwise, considering the peculiar domestic relations of George Eliot and the situation of Mr. Cross. His position was one of great delicacy, and he shows no little tact and good taste in leaving the union between Mary Ann Evans and George Henry Lewes to be explained and justified by his late wife. Of the pain that it cost her thus to oppose the moral judgment of society, and of the comparative isolation that ensued from it, we hear nothing; and of Lewes himself the portrait drawn is not from the hand of a faithful artist, but from that of an affectionate, loving woman. Then it is impossible to doubt that the struggle of a nature like George Eliot's, in passing through so many phases of faith, must have been far more severe than it appears to be in these volumes. To judge from them, apart from other sources of knowledge, it would seem as if these spiritual changes were due even more to a sympathetic, responsive nature than to mental conviction; for, with all her genius, the heart in George Eliot held a more potent sway than the intellect.

It is the aim of Mr. Cross that his wife should as far as possible tell her own story, which is done by means of letters and journals; and he observes that each letter has been pruned of everything that he thought George Eliot would have wished to be omitted. By such a process, something is gained, since, from first to last, no unkindly word is uttered of the living and no bitter feeling roused; but much also is lost, for the woman, as she appeared to others, is scarcely seen at all. Still, if the book does not satisfy the admirer and lover of this fine writer, if it wants the "special touches" which Lewes thought so necessary in biography, its attraction will be felt by every reader. Without attempting, therefore, to give anything like an abstract of a biography which, if the subject be a guarantee, should be the most popular of the season, we shall be content to note a few points of interest suggested by these volumes.

Creative genius and an ardent desire for acquirement do not always go hand-in-hand, but with George Eliot the love of learning was an enduring passion. It began when she was a child, and up to the day of her death she was still "climbing after knowledge infinite." "I enjoy all subjects, all study," she writes in mature age, "more than I ever did in my life before. . . . Science, history, poetry—I don't know which draws me most, I could enjoy everything, from arithmetic to antiquarianism." And we believe George Eliot could master any subject with the single exception of mechanics, in which she found it impossible to take an interest. Her love of books and their authors is warmly and frequently expressed in these letters, and occasionally, too, we find a strong utterance of dislike. Lamb and Scott were her friends in youth, and her love for them never changed. She thought the life of Scott a perfect biography, and, after reading it aloud, felt, on closing the book, a personal sorrow. In earlier days, Sir Charles Grandison was read, and the morality pronounced to be perfect; but Byron, so popular in her youth, is styled the most vulgar-minded genius that ever produced a great effect in literature. Of contemporary writers, Hawthorne was a great favourite, while Thackeray's "Esmond" is "the most uncomfortable book you can imagine." To talk to Dickens was a great pleasure—"there is a strain of real seriousness" she writes, "a'ong with his keenness and humour"; "Aurora Leigh" was read for the third time with more enjoyment than ever; Darwin's famous book is tabled as not impressive from want of orderly presentation; and Buckle, as a writer, inspired her with a personal dislike. Enough of books, perhaps; but, before passing to another subject, the following short passage must be quoted:—"If my book-marker were just a little longer, I should keep it in my beautiful Bible in large print, which Mr. Lewes bought for me in prevision for my old age. He is not fond of reading the Bible himself, but 'sees no harm' in my reading it."

George Eliot had a high sense of the dignity of literature. For her it was no idle trade, and large as were the sums she received for her novels, it was in no mercenary spirit that she wrote them. "Do you see," she writes, "how the publishing world is going mad on periodicals? If I could be seduced by such offers, I might have written three poor novels and made my fortune in one year. Happily, I have no need to exert myself when I say, 'Avaunt thee, Satan!' Satan, in the form of bad writing and good pay, is not seductive to me." And when composing the "Spanish Gypsy," she says, "Don't you imagine how the people who consider writing simply as a money-getting profession will despise me for choosing a work by which I could only get hundreds, where for a novel I could get thousands?" Her literary conscience was always highly sensitive; and, tolerant as she was in her estimate of all sincere work, she had no tolerance for writers whose chief object is to make a sensation and to put money in the purse. "Is it not odious that as soon as a man is dead his desk is raked, and every insignificant memorandum, which he never meant for the public, is printed for the gossiping amusement of people too idle to re-read his books? I think this fashion is a disgrace to us all. It is something like the uncovering of the dead Byron's club-foot."

Like her great sister-novelist, Jane Austen, George Eliot has few signs of humour in her correspondence. A spirit of intense earnestness pervades it, and only here and there do we find faint indications of the genius that created Mrs. Poyser and Dolly Winthrop, Mr. Brooke and Mrs. Cadwallader. The shortness of life and the length of art, the little genuine sincere worth in the world, and the mass of frivolity, seem to have constantly impressed her. Passages illustrating these feelings might be quoted in large numbers, but one or two must suffice. "There comes a season," she writes on one occasion, "when we cease to look round and say, 'How shall I enjoy?' but, as in a country which has been visited by the sword, pestilence, and famine, think only how we shall help the wounded, and how find seed for the next harvest—how till the earth and make a little time of gladness for those who are being born without their own asking." And here are words that might have been uttered by Dorothea Brooke, whose nature was much akin to that of George Eliot. "People talk of the feelings dying out as one gets older; but at present my experience is just the contrary. All the serious relations of life become so much more real to me—pleasure seems so slight a thing, and sorrow and duty and endurance so great; I find the least bit of real human life touch me in a way it never did when I was younger."

One of the few pages, written by Mr. Cross in propriâ personâ, pictures with great felicity George Eliot's receptions at the Priory. In the common talk of society she was not gifted; and he describes how, when engaged in conversation, her body was usually bent forward with eager, anxious desire to get as close as possible to the person with whom she talked. "Playing around many disconnected subjects, in talk, neither interested her nor amused her much. She took things too seriously, and seldom found the effort of entertaining compensated by the gain. Fortunately, Mr. Lewes supplied any qualities lacking in the hostess. A brilliant talker, a delightful raconteur, versatile, full of resource in the difficulties of amalgamating diverse groups and bridging over awkward pauses, he managed to secure for these gatherings most of the social success which they obtained." Mr. Cross alludes also to the charming little dinners, never exceeding six persons; and that one of them, at least, was charming the writer of this article can testify.

Our space is exhausted. There is sadness in this self-told story of George Eliot's life, as there is profound sadness in her novels; but it is impossible to put down one or the other without feeling the presence of a great spirit lingering with you still.

* "George Eliot's Life, as Related in her Letters and Journals." Arranged and Edited by her Husband, J. W. Cross. Three vols. (Blackwood).

THE NEW TILBURY DOCKS.

At the invitation of the chairman and directors of the East and West India Dock Company, a numerous party, including many representatives of the leading railways, visited Tilbury yesterday week to see the progress already made on the works for the new docks.

A special train from Fenchurch-street conveyed the visitors to Tilbury in about thirty-five minutes; and, under the guidance of Mr. Dobree, the chairman of the dock company, Colonel Du Plat Taylor, the secretary, Mr. A. Manning, the engineer in charge, and Mr. Colson, of the firm of Messrs. Lucas and Aird, the contractors who are carrying out the works, they were conducted, in the first place, to the river bank, where the entrance to the great tidal basin will be cut when the excavations have been completed. Descending next into the deep hollow made by digging out the earth over an area of more than nineteen acres to form the tidal basin, the party inspected the nearly completed structural portions of the lock through which ships will pass into the main and branch docks. The great lock, which is 700 ft. in length and 80 ft. in width, and which will have a depth of water above the sill at low water during spring tides of 36 ft., is divided by middle gates into two lengths of 550 ft. and 150 ft. respectively. Near to and parallel with this lock, and also opening directly into the main dock, are two graving docks, so spacious and deep that the largest steamer at present afloat or likely to be built might enter when loaded, and so constructed that by the use of four powerful steam centrifugal pumps, made by Messrs. Simpson, of Pimlico, it will be possible to empty the dock in two hours for the thorough examination or repair of the ship. So much progress has been made with the great excavation for the main dock that, with the exception of about 400 ft. of the side of one of the branch docks, the foundations of the 4½ miles of quay are all laid. The dock lines of railway, it may be added, comprising some fifty or sixty miles of sidings, will be in connection, at Bow, Bromley, and Barking Junctions, with all the trunk lines north of the Thames; and for communication with the Continent and with the south of England there will be access to the South-Eastern Company's wharf and to the new waterside premises of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway. The company are confident that the docks will be completed by the end of this year.

After the visit to the dock works, the inspecting party crossed the river in a special steam-boat, and had lunch at the Falcon Hotel. Mr. H. H. Dobree, chairman of the East and West India Dock Company, presided.

MODERN PIANOFORTE COMPOSERS.

Professor Ernst Pauer addressed the members of the Royal Institution in Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, yesterday week, on the works of living composers for the pianoforte. He confined his attention to a period of about twenty-five years, and included only composers who were still in the prime of life and who expressed in their works the spirit of the present age. The spirit which distinguished our present pianoforte music from that of the earlier times was that of elegance, more cleverness than feeling, and carefully considered refinement. None of the composers introduced could boast of the genius of Mozart, Beethoven, or Schubert, but they might lay claim to talent of a high order, and they had, by earnest, steady, undaunted perseverance and accomplishment, certainly attained a high degree of very artistic excellence. All the present composers had been influenced by Mendelssohn, Chopin, Schumann, and Wagner. Each of the pieces to be performed was full of piquancy and elegance; every point was polished and finished with the greatest care, even to the minutest detail. Of the composers included in his programme, two, Brahms and Rheinberger, might be called scholastics. Rubinstein, a Russian, showed in his work not only great impulsiveness and fire, but also a certain wildness—qualities belonging to his compatriots. Ischaikowski seemed to possess a much milder and less impulsive feeling than his older countrymen, but in his compositions he gave them most effective characteristic pictures of the Russian people. The Norwegian, Greig, was a national composer par excellence. He never could divest himself of certain crude and harsh harmonies, which resulted from the imperfect state of the Norwegian peasants and shepherds. At the same time, his pieces possessed an undeniable charm by their quaintness and interest. Scharwenka, in his Polish dances, had given them specimens which deserved to be compared with the beautiful mazurkas of Chopin. Nicodé, a German, possessed great refinement, and succeeded in portraying in the most delightful manner the Italian character in the canzonetta and tarentella. Moszkowski was also very successful in his characteristic pieces. Professor Pauer gave short biographical sketches of the composers he had mentioned, and his son, Mr. Max Pauer, rendered on the pianoforte works in which their style was strongly exemplified.

An exhibition of the water-colour drawings of the late Frederick Walker, A.R.A., will be held towards the end of February, at the rooms of Mr. Dunthorne, in Vigo-street, in aid of the Artists' Benevolent Fund.

The managers of the Gaiety Theatre have placed their theatre at the disposal of the Council of the Royal Hospital for Diseases of the Chest in the City-road for a matinée performance, to be given on Thursday, Feb. 12, in aid of the building fund of the new wing.

FASHIONABLE MARRIAGES.

Rarely has any church been more crowded than was that of Christ Church, Hunter-street, Liverpool, on Thursday morning, last week, on the occasion of the marriage of the Rev. Stephen Gladstone, Rector of Hawarden, with Miss Annie Crosthwaite Wilson, third daughter of Mr. C. B. Wilson, of Abercromby-square. The church was tastefully decorated, and the bride was met at the west end of the edifice by the choir, the Rev. J. W. B. Sproule, and the officiating clergy, who were the Rev. Malcolm McColl, Rector of St. George's, Botolph-lane, and Canon of Ripon, and the Rev. Robertson Bardell, Vicar of the parish. As the bridal procession passed up the central aisle, the hymn "How welcome was the call" was sung; and after the Benediction, and before the address, another hymn, "O Holy Spirit, Lord of Grace," was sung. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a handsome dress of ivory Sicilienne silk with square drapery, trimmed with real lace and festoons of orange-blossoms, tulle veil, and wreath of real orange-blossoms. Her bridesmaids were Miss Wilson, Miss Maud Wilson, Miss Agnes Wilson, Miss Gladstone, Miss Bower, and Miss Dumaresq. They wore dresses of crème nun's veiling, trimmed with gold braid and massive bands made in the Grecian style; fine crème Dunstable straw bonnets, trimmed with crème velvet, and crème aigrettes with crème and gold osprey. The two younger bridesmaids wore crème Dunstable straw Marguerita hats. Mrs. Wilson wore a rich reseda silk dress petticoat of plush basque and train of silk, trimmed with real lace, and a bonnet to match, trimmed with plush of the same hue, with reseda and crimson-shaded ostrich-plumes. The guests included only members and relations of both families. The Premier was heartily cheered on arriving and leaving the church. The bride and bridegroom left for Halkin Castle, Flintshire, kindly lent by the Duke of Westminster, the bride's going-away dress being of bronze cashmere, trimmed with plush, and bonnet and muff to match trimmed with humming birds. The wedding presents were about two hundred in number, and were of a costly and beautiful nature; they included a diamond cross and a dressing-case from Mrs. Gladstone, and a diamond ring from the Prime Minister. The Duke of Westminster and Sir Andrew Clark each sent a cheque for £100, and presents were likewise received from the parishioners of Hawarden and the household at the castle.

There was a large gathering of Herefordshire and Shropshire notables on the same morning at St. Peter's, Eaton-square, to witness the marriage of Sir Offley Wakeman, Bart., with Miss Rouse-Boughton, daughter of Sir Charles and Lady Boughton. The officiating clergy were the Dean of Hereford and the Rev. C. W. H. Kenrick. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a magnificent dress of white satin duchesse, draped in front with white satin and trimmed with point de gaze lace, and bouquets of orange-blossoms. Her corsage was en suite, the train being very long. She wore a Brussels veil and a wreath of orange-blossoms, fastened with diamond stars. The bridesmaids—Miss Boughton Knight, Miss Florence Boughton Knight, the Hon. Gertrude Hanbury, Miss Mary Herbert, Miss Adlington, Miss Thompson, Miss Meyrick and Miss Marion Cartwright—wore dresses of cream satin merveilleux, trimmed with coffee-coloured lace and Neapolitan velvet ribbon, bronze shoes, and brown silk stockings, straw bonnets trimmed with cream velvet and Neapolitan violets, of which their bouquets were also composed. The best man was Mr. H. O. Wakeman, of All Souls' College, Oxford. The bride and bridegroom left in the afternoon for the south of England, the bride's going-away dress being of sapphire blue velvet, draped with cashmere, and jacket and bonnet en suite. Among the many presents received by the bride was a beautiful necklace of pearls from the inhabitants of Ludlow, and an inkstand and candelabra from the Freemasons, while Sir Offley Wakeman received a splendid clock from the Shropshire Freemasons, of which he is Deputy Grand Master.

St. Michael's, Chester-square, was crowded the same morning on the occasion of the marriage of the Rev. William Charles Gib, Junior Chaplain Madras Establishment, and eldest son of Brigadier-General W. A. Gib, C.B., with Miss Fannie Fleming, youngest daughter of the Rev. James Fleming, Vicar of the parish and one of the Canons of York. The service was semi-choral. The officiating clergymen were the Rev. H. N. Purcell, M.A., Vicar of Fowey, Cornwall, uncle of the bride; Rev. E. S. Carter, M.A., Minor Canon of York; and Canon Stevenson, D.D. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a dress of striped white satin with pearl tablier in front, and net veil. The bridesmaids were Miss Fleming, Miss Minnie Fleming (sisters of the bride), Miss Gib (sister of the bridegroom), and Miss Clerke, daughter of Lady Clerke. They wore dresses of light brown cashmere, trimmed with dark brown velvet, dark brown velvet hats, trimmed with light brown feathers and osprey, their ornaments being gold brooches in the shape of a fan, the gift of the bridegroom. The best man was Mr. J. M. Paterson, of Corpus Christi, Cambridge.

Gadesbridge, Hertfordshire, was en fête the same morning on the occasion of the marriage of Major Bathurst with the youngest daughter of Sir Astley Cooper, at the parish church. The bride wore a dress of rich white broché silk, trimmed with point de gaze lace, and Brussels lace veil, and a wreath of orange-blossoms. She was attended by six bridesmaids, the Misses Cooper (two), Wharton, Newton, Cochrane, and Phipps, who wore pink Surah dresses trimmed with ruby velvet, and on their heads tulle veils with pink aigrettes and ostrich feathers, the two children wearing Gainsborough caps. The bride's going-away dress was of sapphire blue velvet, with a coat of the same material trimmed with sable tails.

The marriage between Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. Robert Napier, eldest son of Lord Napier of Magdala, to the Hon. Mrs. Langham, eldest daughter of Godfrey, fourth Lord Macdonald, took place last week at St. Columba's Church, Portree, Isle of Skye.

The marriage of the Hon. Cecil Saumarez Irby, of The Grange, Taplow, second son of the late Lord Boston, and brother of the present Peer, with Florence Augusta, second daughter of the late Mr. Clement Upton Cottrell Dormer, of Rousham, Oxfordshire, was celebrated in St. Peter's Church, Eaton-square, on Saturday last.

The marriage of the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos and Miss Graham Montgomery, eldest daughter of Sir Graham Montgomery, Bart., of Stobo Castle, Peebles, is fixed to take place on Tuesday, the 17th of next month, in London.

The Concert Season at the Royal Victoria Hall and Coffee Tavern (long known as the Victoria Theatre), Waterloo-road, under the immediate patronage of Princess Christian and the Duke and Duchess of Westminster, began on Jan. 22 with a miscellaneous concert and the Band of the Coldstream Guards, conducted by Mr. C. Thomas, and will continue every week until Easter. The announcements for the following Thursdays are equally promising. The science lectures are becoming more and more appreciated, and have latterly been received with perfect ovations. The variety entertainments are continued on Saturdays and other days.

THE CHURCH.

Mr. John Walter, M.P., has promised £25 towards the proposed new central premises of the Church of England Young Men's Society.

The Rev. Isaac Taylor, LL.D., Rector of Settcrington, and formerly Vicar of Twickenham, has been appointed to the Canonry and Prebend of Fenton, in York Minster.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, while approving the proposal to create a Bishopric in Fiji, disclaims any intention to interfere with the Wesleyan mission, or to proselytise natives who are already converted to Christianity.

The parish church of St. Marylebone was consecrated last Saturday by the Bishop of Bedford. The church has undergone extensive alterations, principally in the interior, the massive front of the exterior remaining unaltered. The alterations, together with the cost of the new organ and the stained windows, have involved an expenditure of £24,000, most of which has been subscribed.

